

Railroad Rumblings

Fireman Henry Hoffman was a Ruidoso visitor last Tuesday, returning in the evening.

Fireman Frank Abel attended the Cotton Carnival at Roswell this week. Frank was gone but one day and heard the boys say, that he posed as "Jiggs" in the big '49" parade.

Fireman Billy Norman is a firm believer in advertising. He tells of a man who lost a heifer cow and advertised it in his paper, offering a pint of good Scotch whiskey for the cow's return. The next morning after the paper came out, there were 7 heifers brought to the man's house.

Trainman and Mrs. C. N. Lemon, Conductor and Mrs. F. E. Hedrick and many others attended the basketball game at Corona last Saturday night and yelled for the home teams.

Conductor J. R. Green wants to know if all this commotion about Dempsey and Tunney being the best fighter—it could be very easily settled in somebody's cellar—and fight it out.

Signal Serviceman C. W. Wiley spent the week-end in El Paso, attending to some important business matters.

Track foreman S. W. Hale has been transferred to Capitán and left for that place today.

Trainmaster Ben Horton, who has been on his vacation in the east, has returned to duty.

Freight Clerk Juan Martinez at the local station reports that the enchilada and tamale supper given last Saturday night at the Sierra Vista Cafe, for the benefit of the Santa Rita school, was a success and wishes to thank all who patronized the same.

Conductor J. E. Quirk has transferred to El Paso.

Trainman E. L. Clark has returned to this division point from the Tucumcari district.

Trainman Vickory, who had been on a leave-of-absence for the past several weeks, has returned from his home in North Carolina.

Trainman Chas. Terrell has transferred to the Tucumcari district and left on 2 this morning to work between Tucumcari and Duran. Mrs. Terrell and little daughter, Elgiva, are in Nogal, spending the week-end at the Dugger ranch, after which they will return to El Paso, so Elgiva can continue her school studies.

Card of Appreciation

Little Miss Ruth Kelley, mentioned last week as being the victim in an accident while horse-back riding, wishes to express her appreciation of the favors of love and esteem bestowed upon her during her illness, also for words of kindness and encouragement, from her many friends, in which expressions she is joined by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. T. E. Kelley.

Dr. and Mrs. F. H. Johnson attended the Cotton Carnival at Roswell this week.

Stars Hold Big Meeting

Comet Chapter No. 29, O. E. S., held a well attended and interesting meeting last night at Masonic Temple and while there was no initiatory work performed, the meeting was one of the most enthusiastic held for a long time.

The lodge room was beautifully decorated with natural flowers which were sent by the Tularosa Chapter and were roses, zinnias, chrysanthemums, dahlias and after the lodge room was decorated, enough remained for each member present to take home a nice bouquet.

Plans were laid to give a big social at the Temple on the 22nd of Oct., for local and visiting Stars and their families, the particulars of which will appear next week.

Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Lucky, who returned home from the east about 3 weeks ago, have purchased the Chant home in the Highland Addition, and are remodeling the same preparing to move in from their ranch before cold weather sets in.

Home from Chicago

Mr. and Mrs. T. J. James came home yesterday from Chicago. Mrs. James went there some time ago with the Kudner family and Miss Evelyn French, and were afterwards joined by Mr. James, about three weeks ago.

Mr. James says that Mr. Kudner will be here with a party of friends as soon as the hunting season opens and they will come in Mr. Kudner's new airplane.

Mrs. Kudner and Miss Evelyn French will return by railway and not in the plane.

They were all present at the Tunney-Dempsey fight, which T. G. says would have been much more interesting had it lasted longer.

Mrs. B. L. Stimmel is attending as a delegate from the Carrizozo Woman's Club, to the State Federation of Women's Clubs at Las Vegas this week.

Are you preparing to attend the Lincoln County Fair, if not—why not? Are you boosting for Good Roads in Lincoln County—if not, why not? Are you reading "The Bat" running in The Outlook? Read it!

Mr. and Mrs. C. Russell, son, Victor Dugan, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Wheeler and daughter, Vivian of Kansas City, who have been visiting the Joyce and Steinbring families for the past ten days, will leave for home tomorrow. On Wednesday, they made a trip to El Paso, returning by way of the Mesalero Indian Reservation.

Geo. Titworth of the Titworth Co., Inc., J. A. Brubaker of the Liberty Garage, P. G. Peters of the Capitan Mercantile Co., H. Morgan of Capitan, Fred Pfingsten of Lincoln, W. I. Brooke of Alto, T. G. Grafton of Angus and others whose names we failed to get, were here Monday, attending the road meeting.

According to word received in Carrizozo this week, Mrs. Ed Williams has accepted a position with the Corona Trading Company of Corona in the ladies' wearing apparel department.

They're Not All in the Ball Park

Eagle Creek Closes for the Season

Eagle Creek cabins have been closed for the season. During the last week, owners of cabins have turned keys on the same for the winter. The season has been much enjoyed by the patrons of this pleasure resort and the attendance has been better than ever before. The road has been repaired and is now said to be the best Eagle Creek has had. It will not be long now, before snow will descend, the fall rains having stopped. Stockley Ligon, government expert, loaned to New Mexico by the department at Washington, will soon begin the trapping of wild turkeys, which he will take away to stock places where none of these fowls exist.

Glencoe Woman's Club

The club held its second meeting of the year at the Gilliland Tea Room, with Mrs. J. H. Mims as hostess. The year book was completed and accepted. The course of study consists of 12 meetings—with the study of all the departments of the General Federation as subjects. The club paid the full amount to the Endowment Fund, which makes it an "Honor Club." Arrangements were made for Mesdames J. V. Tully and W. F. Coe to attend the State Convention.

The program was led by Mrs. A. F. Roselle and consisted of a reading by each person present, of an article she had prepared on the subject "Country Life." The material was obtained from the Library of the State University. After the lesson, refreshments were served. The next meeting will be at the home of Mrs. J. R. Werner, Oct. 22. The lesson will be led by Mrs. J. V. Tully. Subject—"How Shall I Vote?"

Land Office to Refund $4,500

New Mexican: The State Land Commission was preparing today to refund approximately $4,500 to J. L. Staley, Texas oil operator, on some 90,000 acres of state oil leases in Harding, Quay and Union counties.

The leases were made in 1926 for ten years by the previous administration. Judge H. A. Kiker held in a friendly test suit heard here Saturday that since the leases were granted for a period of 10 years, when the law limits them to five, that they are void and the state will have to refund the leasing fees paid on them.

Miss Mary Fritz, County School Superintendent, is visiting the county schools this week.

Great Skeleton Found at Foot of San Andres

Discovery of a mammoth skeleton at the foot of the San Andres mountains, about 40 miles from here, is attracting many visitors there.

It is regarded as a coincidence that the skeleton was found by grandchildren of the late ex-Gov. W. G. Ritch, who founded the New Mexico Historical society and contributed valuable collections to the State museum. A tooth sent by W. L. Ritch to the Smithsonian Institute was identified as that of a mammoth. Larger bones were uncovered but soon crumbled from exposure.

One of the historical relics the former governor collected and which are now kept by his grandchildren is a flint lock rifle once used by Kit Carson. Ritch, who served as secretary of state and acting governor of the territory from 1873 to 1884, developed, after his retirement, large ranch holdings in the San Andres mountains, which his sons still own and operate.

Girl Scouts at Freeman Home

The Girl Scouts met at the home of Dr. and Mrs. C. E. Freeman Wednesday and the attendance, including the smaller girls, was 31. Mrs. Freeman was hostess to the Scouts and after the meeting, refreshments were served. Ladies present were: Capt. Mrs. W. P. Loughrey, Mesdames W. C. Pittman, R. W. Dozier and C. E. Freeman. Mrs. Pittman and Mrs. Dozier assisted Mrs. Freeman.

For the Love of Mike, Read This!

New York, Oct. 1—For the rest of his life Thomas McCarthy must occupy a cell in Sing Sing prison because he stole 20 cents. He received that sentence under the Baumes law as a fourth offender after a jury had found him guilty of a burglary in Queens which netted him two dimes from the hope chest of Miss Lydia Hobard.

I.O.O.F. Grand Lodge Meets at Albuquerque

The annual Convention of the I. O. O. F. and Rebekah Grand Lodges will convene at Albuquerque next week and a large attendance is expected. S. F. Miller is the delegate from the local lodge and Wm. J. Langston, who is a member of the finance committee will also be there. The convention will assemble next Tuesday and the delegates will return home the latter part of the week.

Last Saturday Night at Corona

Contributed: BOYS' GAME

Corona defeated Carrizozo last Saturday night by a score of 13 to 14.

In the Basketball games at Corona last Saturday night, the Carrizozo boys lost by 1 small point in the last minute of the game to the veteran Corona team. Three men played for Carrizozo who had never been in a matched game before.

Florentino Lopez played a wonderful game, but Cooper was crippled. Carrizozo made more field goals, but lost on free tosses. Carrizozo's defense was impenetrable; Corona had but one set-up through the game. Dow, for Carrizozo, guarded well.

GIRLS' GAME

The game started out like wildfire, with Margie Roland, Vera Richard as forwards, Jessie Rustin and Ruby Parcella in center, and Velma Gage and Hada Corn as guards.

The ball went up in center and came direct to the forwards of the Carrizozo team, Margie shot and made the 1st goal of the game. Again the ball came to our forwards and Vera made the 2nd goal. The ball came to our forwards again, but Corona's guards got it and sent it to our forwards, who scored.

The next shot was a free one for Corona and was made, leaving our score 1 ahead of Corona's at the close of the 1st quarter.

Corona's forwards were larger than our guards, but the guards stayed with them, determined not to let them score any more. In the 2nd quarter, Margie was placed in center with Ida Cleghorn taking her place as forward. Corona made several goals, raising their score above ours. The score at the half was 9 to 16, in Corona's favor.

In the 3rd quarter, Mary Lou Townsend and Helen Sterling were put in center, Margie Roland and Vera Richard forwards, and Jessie Rustin and Velma Gage guarding. All played hard and fast; Carrizozo scored several times, bringing our score almost up to Corona's.

In the last quarter, Jessie Rustin was put back in center and Hada Corn as guard. We made the last 2 goals, showing that our spirit was still there, and the players were determined to do their best, but when time was out Corona was still ahead—the score being 16 to 22.

Our team took the loss of the game as good sports should, and with a firm resolve to beat the Corona team on our court.

Domestic Wool Strong

Boston, Oct. 4—Strength of medium domestic wools continues to be the feature of wool trading. All lines of domestic wools are moderately active but it is the medium quality stock which shows outstanding improvement. With very little unsold spot foreign wool of equivalent grade on the market, domestic wools are steadily working to a stronger position.

Mrs. Zoe Glassmire was a visitor at the home of her father, John Doering at Ruidoso last Tuesday.

Crystal Theatre

J. C. Burkett, Prop.

Friday—Mildred Davis and Lloyd Hughes in "Too Many Crooks" also "Felix, the Kat" Comedy.

Saturday - Monday - Lillian Gish and John Gilbert, with an all-star cast in "La Boheme."

Tuesday-Wednesday - Esther Ralston in "Fashions for Women" and a 2-reel comedy.

Thursday-Friday—Jack Holt, featured in Zane Grey's popular story "The Mysterious Rider;" also "Felix, the Kat" Comedy.

Orchestra music on Friday nights.

Lincoln County Fair Notes

The parade will be entirely motorized. Arrangements will be made to carry all school children in cars and trucks. Those who can make their own arrangements will do so. Formation will be on Alamogordo avenue, the first car between Hedrick's Hardware Store and the First National Bank, facing main street. The children will be picked up on Alamogordo avenue; the parade will not stop on any other street to pick up pedestrians. The procession will start up Alamogordo to Main, south to El Paso, up El Paso avenue to 2nd street, thence down 2nd to Capitán, up Capitán avenue to Main street, down Main to Tularosa, up Tularosa avenue to the Community Hall, where the cars will park around the hall.

The directors of the Carrizozo Chamber of Commerce have decided to allow Mrs. Frances L. Gensler of Fort Stanton to erect a booth and sell articles made by the patients of the hospital; no charge being made for the privilege. Aside from this, no other concessions will be granted and the various committees will handle all booths and take care of all concessions.

Mrs. Louise H. Coe of Hondo, Messrs. Carl Berggren and A. D. (Mickey) McNeff of Fort Stanton have been retained to assist the Carrizozo Orchestra to furnish music for the dances to be given Friday and Saturday nights. The charge for the dance will be $1.00 for those who dance and 50 cents for spectators.

All carnival equipment has been received and is now ready to be transferred to the booths. Hats, canes, whips, and all kinds of lunches may be bought on the grounds.

All places of business will be asked to close from 9:40 to 11 a. m. Friday so that all may see the parade and listen to the Carrizozo Orchestra and Prof. C. V. Koogler as they formally open the two days' entertainment.

Attention, Masons!

There will be a Regular Communication of Carrizozo Lodge No. 41 A. F. & A. M., at Masonic Temple Saturday night, Oct. 8. All Master Masons are invited. G. S. Hoover, W. M., S. F. Miller, Sec.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Reilly are attending the Cotton Carnival at Roswell this week. They were attired in costumes and figured in the "Days of '49" parade.

Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Sowder of Picacho, are at Roswell this week, attending the Cotton Carnival.

1—Start of the air Derby from Roosevelt field, Long Island, to Spokane, Wash. 2—Wanamaker Girl Cadets as color bearers for the Thomas B. Wanamaker Post 413 of New York in the great parade of the American Legion in Paris. 3—Pullman car of Rock Island train that rolled into Missouri river at Centaur, Mo., 24 Colorado excursionists being injured.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Champion Tunney Defeats Dempsey in Lively Ten-Round Battle.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

EVERYTHING else in the world moved back and gave the center of the stage, last week, to the "fight of the century," the battle in Chicago for the heavyweight championship between Gene Tunney, title holder, and Jack Dempsey, former champion. Ad nearly everyone in the country knew within a few moments after the finish, Tunney retained the title by out-punching Dempsey in most of the ten rounds, despite the fact that he was knocked to a sitting position in the seventh, taking the count of nine. In the words of an expert observer, it was simply a case of a boxer who was much faster winning a ten-round decision over a fighter who always commands respect because of his punching power.

Aside from being a good battle, the fight was the most remarkable in the history of the ring in the matter of attendance and receipts. In round figures, there were 145,000 men and women gathered in the Chicago stadium to witness it, and they paid $2,800,000. Tunney's purse was $900,000 and Dempsey received $450,000. The net profit for Tex Rickard's Madison Square Garden corporation was about $718,000.

The contest attracted an extraordinary number of notable persons of both sexes, among them many senators, governors and lesser officials, members of the British nobility, and at least one person of royal blood—the Princess Xenia of Greece, wife of William II, king of Greece. Mr. Leeds, Jr. of New York to Chicago by airplane, as did a good many others. Special trains from every direction carried at least ten thousand to the battle.

Unbiased spectators of the fight, including at least one of the two judges, said the referee, David Barry, was fair throughout, though he might have penalized Dempsey for the use of the rabbit punch on the back of Tunney's head. The Dempsey camp complained that the count was five seconds slow, when Tunney was floored in the seventh round, but this was admittedly due to Jack's slowness in getting to a neutral corner after the knockdown. The extra seconds were of great value to Tunney. Whether he could have recovered without them is a matter of opinion.

ONLY two hours of deliberation were needed by the jury to find John I. Duvall, mayor of Indianapolis, guilty of political corruption. His punishment was fixed at thirty days' imprisonment in the county jail and a fine of $1,000. In addition the jury declared him ineligible to hold any public office or employment for a period of four years from November 2, 1923, the date of the offense. Duvall's attorneys announced they would appeal for a new trial and then take the case to the Supreme court. The verdict does not become effective until the appeals have been decided, and meanwhile Duvall may legally continue in office. The specific charge against Duvall was that he accepted a bribe of $14,500 and political support from William H. Armitage, long the boss of Indianapolis politics, and that in return Duvall pledged that Armitage might name the members and govern the policies of the city board of public works, from which are given many thousands of dollars of public improvement work.

NOTHING quite like the invasion of France by the American Legion—the "second A. E. F."—ever took place before. Despite predictions of disorders and other unpleasantnesses, the second visit of the dough-boys in the land where they fought was an unqualified success, their reception by the people of Paris warm and enthusiastic, and the holding of the convention in the French capital really seemed to strengthen the bonds of amity between France and America, British foreign secreand the United States. Furthermore, the Legionnaires in general managed to enjoy themselves without in any way disgracing themselves, which was to be expected since they are not irresponsible boys.

The spectacular feature of the week was the parade of the Legion immediately after the opening session of the convention. For the second time in history the chains of the Arc de Triomphe were let down, and more than 20,000 members of the Legion passed under that beautiful monument, each pausing to lay a tiny bouquet of pink roses upon the tomb of the Unknown Soldier. That shrine of France was covered with a floral mound twenty feet square and six feet deep before the last man had dropped his tribute. In the ranks of the marchers were the American women's war organizations and many women members of the families of the Legionnaires. Gathered thick along the line of the parade were about all the people of Paris, and in the front ranks of the crowds were the disabled veterans of the French army, overcome with emotion as their old fellow fighters passed by dipping their flags low before the crippled and blinded heroes. General Pershing, Commander Savage, Marshal Foch and other notables led the parade in motor cars, and when it reached the Place de la Concorde they dropped out and occupied places in the reviewing stand.

That evening the largest dinner ever given in Paris was served at the Invalides. Four thousand Legionnaires, including all the official delegates, were the guests, and the food, prepared by 500 chefs, was the best the city could provide. Next day the Legion gave a big banquet in honor of President Doumergue at which General Pershing and Marshal Foch were the chief speakers and Franco-American solidarity was the main subject of the toast. Wednesday many of the visitors, led by General Pershing, went to Fontenay and the desolated slopes around Verdun and there "Black Jack" paid a tribute to Marshal Foch and French soldiers who under him held that position throughout the war and gave their lives by the hundred thousand. The marshal, white haired and with haunted eyes, was a pathetic figure in the ceremonies at the Douaumont ossuary, where all the bones gathered in the Verdun sector are placed.

In the Legion convention sessions the liveliest debate was over Gen. William Mitchell's attempt to win endorsement for his pet plan to have installed immediately a separate air department in the cabinet. A majority of the delegates favored a motion asking for the "organization of national aeronautics into a separate department of national defense, headed by a cabinet secretary," but they added "as soon as warranted."

Edward H. Spafford of New York was unanimously elected national commander of the Legion. Mr. Spafford, a Vermonte by birth, was graduated from the Navy academy in 1901 and served in the navy until 1914, when he resigned to enter business. In 1917, with our entrance into the war, he returned to active duty in the navy. He is forty-seven years of age.

TWENTY-FIVE planes started from New York for Spokane in the national air derby, which was divided into three classes. In classes A and B, for which stops were provided, the respective winners were C. W. Holman of St. Paul and C. W. Meyers of Detroit. In class C, for a nonstop flight, there were but two starters—Eddie Stinson and Duke Schiller. Both were forced to land in Montana.

The first plane off in class A, with R. E. Hudson as pilot and Jay Radtke as mechanic, both of Michigan, crashed at Long Valley, N. J., and both men were killed.

DANIEL R. CHISHOLM, governor of the federal reserve board, having resigned from that body, the president appointed Roy A. Young, for eight years governor of the Federal Reserve bank of Minneapolis, to succeed him. It is understood that after the appointment is confirmed by the senate, Mr. Young will be chosen governor. Meanwhile the duties of that office are being performed by Edmund Platt, vice governor. The selection of Mr. Young is regarded as a victory for the element which opposed the re-appointment of the board in reducing the rediscount rate of the Chicago Federal Reserve bank from 4 to 3 1/2 per cent.

It is understood that President Coolidge and Secretary Mellon in choosing Mr. Young as a member of the board hope that the threatened attack upon the federal reserve board in congress during the coming winter will be averted.

WILLIAM O. McADOO removed himself from the possibilities for the Democratic Presidential nomination, and now the dry element in the party is casting about for a leader to succeed him. Edwin T. Meredith of Iowa, former secretary of agriculture, himself thought to have a fair chance for the nomination, has said the "dry progressive" Democrats must make haste in this or the nomination would go to Gov. Al Smith by default. He said he believed the principal issues in 1929 should be farm relief and prohibition, with a plank calling for strict enforcement of the Volstead act and an attack on the Coolidge administration for failure to enforce it. Depreciating talk of his own possible candidacy, Mr. Meredith named Newton D. Butler of Ohio, former secretary of war; Senator Thomas J. Walsh of Montana; Senator Joe T. Robinson of Arkansas; Representative Cordell Hull of Tennessee; and Daniel C. Roper of Texas as among those whom his wing of the party would support. He declared his group would not support Governor Smith, Senator James A. Reed of Missouri or Gov. Albert C. Ritchie of Maryland for the nomination.

OUR new ambassador to Mexico is to be Dwight Morrow of New Jersey, a member for twelve years of the banking firm of J. P. Morgan & Co. He was a classmate of the President in Amherst and Mr. Coolidge offered him the diplomatic post last summer. He recently accepted and told the President he would at once resign from the Morgan firm.

While administration officials stated that the appointment of Mr. Morrow would not mark any change of policy toward that country in the present oil and land disputes, it is believed that the banker's acceptance means that the chances of clearing up the difficulties between the two countries are brighter than before. It is felt that Mr. Morrow would not have consented to represent this government at Mexico City unless he believed that conditions were such that he had a reasonable chance of settling the present troubles, precipitated by American property confiscations in Mexico.

REPLYING to the French government's note in the tariff controversy, the American government has made an emphatic protest against discriminations against American commerce, such as the recent increases in French tariff duties. While the note did not threaten retaliatory action, it did point out the existence of section 317 of the tariff act, under which it would be possible for the President to assess additional duties or impose embargo on goods coming from nations which discriminate against the commerce of the United States.

FRENCH resentment against the action of Christian Rakovsky, Russian ambassador, in signing a Communist manifesto calling on workers of other countries to rise against their governments, has culminated in an official statement to Moscow that further negotiations with the Russians regarding a pact of nonaggression cannot be conducted until Rakovsky has been recalled.

IT WAS announced in Louisville that a members of the Burley Tobacco Growers' Co-operative association in Kentucky, Ohio, Indiana, West Virginia, Tennessee, Missouri, Virginia, and North Carolina, will, within the next few weeks, receive a total of between $10,000,000 and $15,000,000, the sum representing payments on the 1923, 1924 and 1925 crops, according to information given out.

PRESIDENT COBURN and his government won the Irish Free State election but by only a margin of six votes in the Dail Eireann. It is expected there will be no change in the government for a year, despite the slender majority. A new loan is to be floated in December.

Improve Dairy Herd by Sires

High-Class Bull Is Essential if Improvement Is to Be Made.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.) Every dairy herd needs a high-class bull at its head if the herd is to be improved, says the United States Department of Agriculture. For the dairyman who has a small herd and is short on finances, the cheapest and best way to obtain the use of first-class pure-bred bulls is through the work of a co-operative dairy-bull association.

Purpose of Organization. A bull association is a farmers' organization whose chief purpose is the breeding of better dairy cows through joint ownership, use, and systematic exchange of prepotent dairy bulls of high-producing ancestry. Improvement of the herd that may be expected through membership in such an organization is discussed in Farmers' Bulletin 1532-F, "Dairy-Herd Improvement Through Co-operative Bull Associations," just issued by the bureau of dairy industry, United States Department of Agriculture.

Through the system of transferring bulls from block to block, the bull association makes it impossible to keep the desirable bulls as long as they live or are fit for service. This enables a bull's daughters to come in milk and be tested while he is still owned by the association, and furnishes a means of determining which bulls are siring the high-producing daughters. The bulls that do not get satisfactory daughters are disposed of.

Study of Records. A study of the records of the daughters of bull-association bulls showed an average yearly mature production of 8,071 pounds of milk and 342 pounds of butterfat. In milk production the daughters excelled the dams by 13.5 per cent and in butterfat production by 14.4 per cent. Some of the sires are very outstanding. One sire, for instance, was mated with cows having an average yearly butterfat production of 347 pounds, yet his seven daughters from these cows excelled their dams by 67 per cent in milk production and 44 per cent in production of butterfat.

Much progress has been made by selecting bulls on the records of their dams and granddams. The most rapid progress cannot come until dairy sires are selected on the production records of their daughters.

Farm Horseshoeing Information Given

Using Unshod Animals Will Result in Tender Feet.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

With the passing of the blacksmith shop from every crossroad, hamlet and village, the farmer is experiencing considerable difficulty in getting his horses shod. The solution of the problem in a large measure devolves upon the farmer himself in learning to do the work on his own farm. To assist the farmer in learning to care for the feet of his work stock properly and to shoe his horses, if necessary, the United States Department of Agriculture has prepared an illustrated bulletin on farm horseshoeing, known as Farmers' Bulletin 1535-F.

Using unshod horses and mules for pulling heavy farm machinery wears off the horny wall of the foot at the ground surface more rapidly than growth is supplied from above and will result in tender feet. A well-shod horse not only is kept in service but he is a more efficient worker in that he can better apply his strength because he has a better footing. It is important, however, that shod horses have regular attention—that about every four to six weeks the shoes be removed, the hoofs trimmed, and the shoes refitted. Ready-to-wear shoes of various sizes for horses and mules can now be obtained and greatly simplify the shoeing problem for farmers. A copy of the bulletin may be obtained by writing to the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

American Mule Ousting Horse for Farm Work

Recent statistics show that the long-eared, loud-voiced mule still continues to do a full share of the work of the farm despite the progress of motor-propelled machinery, writes Uthal V. Wilcox in the Dearborn Independent. The mule population of the United States has grown nearly a million head in the eleven years following 1914: It is now estimated at more than 5,411,000.

Government officials note that the growers of cotton, tobacco, rice and sugarcane have swung over almost entirely to the use of mules in preparing their crops. Experience seems to indicate that the mule can do the most work on the cheapest feed and with the lowest grade of driver.

Reports from the leading mule markets of the country, such as St. Louis, Kansas City, Atlanta and other places, show that the demand for mules is today very keen. In fact, one handler of farm animals said that "not since the war, when mules were used for cannon fodder, has the demand been so brisk."

Crude Pine Tar Smears on Husking Mitts Helps

According to the Nebraska Agricultural college authorities, crude pine tar smeared on the husking mittens several times during the day will make them last longer as well as help the husker jerk the shucks. Excepting in wet weather, well tarred mitts should last about twice as long as those without tar. Enough thick tar to cover the thumbs and palms and then a layer of dirt to absorb the stickiness will make a surface on the mitts that will wear well and also be rough enough to pull the shucks quickly. A set of thumb stalls of heavy cotton flannel or light canvas are mighty handy if a mitt should rip or wear out more quickly than usual.

The handiest addition to a husker's wagon is a little box hooked on the rod of the front end gate in which he can keep his tar can, an extra pair of mitts and thumb stalls, and an extra husking hook or peg. Cracked fingers and thumbs and chapped wrists can be healed by soaking them in hot water for about ten minutes and then rubbing them well with glycerin before going to bed each night.

Agricultural Facts

Barley is reasonably good as a cover crop, where a legume is not desired.

Shallow cultivation is best for row crops, as it does not injure their roots so much as deep stirring.

When planting seed potatoes be sure that it is good seed, free from diseases that will ruin crop and profit.

Sugar-peas have edible pods which are broken up, cooked and served like string beans. They make a good addition to the garden.

Hill selection of potatoes is the only rational method of seed improvement, since it is based upon the performance of the individual hill.

If you see smutted plants in the cornfield, pull them out and burn them. This will prevent reinfestation of the following corn crop.

The main purposes of cultivating corn are to kill weeds and to conserve moisture. Deep cultivation is more wasteful of water than shallow plowing.

Whether seed are dead or alive can now be determined within 12 hours by scientific test, so that farmers and nurserymen may no longer lose large sums by planting bad seed.

Improved Uniform International Sunday School Lesson

Lesson for October 9

ELIJAH HEARS GOD'S VOICE

LESSON TEXT—1 Kings 19. GOLDEN TEXT—Wait on the Lord, be of good courage, and He shall strengthen thine heart. PRIMARY TOPIC—Elijah Hears God's Voice. JUNIOR TOPIC—God Encourages Elijah. INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Listening to God's Voice. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—How God Speaks to Men.

1. Elijah's Flight (vv. 1-14). Upon Ahab's return from the excitement on Mount Carmel, he told his wife all that Elijah had done, that even all her prophets had been hewn to pieces by the sword. This so enraged her that she sent a message of death to Elijah, who seems to have been waiting at the gate (vv. 1, 2). Though Elijah had courageously stood before the king and the priests of Baal, he now cowered before this woman, and fled for his life. Let us beware lest when we think we stand, we fall (1 Cor. 10:12).

1. Elijah under the juniper tree (vv. 5-7). The juniper tree was a shrub of the desert which afforded shelter and protection to travelers from the burning sun by day and the cold wind by night.

(1) His request (v. 4): This was that he might die. This was no doubt a foolish thing for him to say, but let us be as considerate toward him as was God. The discouragement, and even despondency, of Elijah, was due to the nervous strain of about four years of unusual service for God, which culminated on Mount Carmel. Such nervous reaction is to be expected, and surely the heart of this lesson will be missed unless we see it in that light, and see God's tenderness toward his overworked servant.

(2) God's tender sleep (v. 5). "He giveth His beloved sleep" (Ps. 127:2). b. He sent an angel to cook Elijah's meal (v. 6, 7). The angel of the Lord is usually understood to be the second member of the Holy Trinity. If this be correct, then we see Jehovah-Jesus preparing food for His servant Elijah, as He afterward did for His discouraged disciples by Galilee.

2. Elijah at Horeb (vv. 8-14). God had kindly ministered to His discouraged prophet so that he would be in a fit condition to receive the needed instruction and correction.

(1) God's interview with Elijah in the cave (vv. 9, 10). a. God's question, "What doest thou here, Elijah?" (v. 9). This was a stinging rebuke, though most kindly given. It implied that his appointed messenger was now far away from the field of duty. How blessed to know that "A God-forsaking saint is not a God-forsaken saint!" b. Elijah's answer (v. 10). Elijah tried to vindicate himself by asserting his jealous loyalty to God—that in spite of all this the people had not only rejected his message and dishonored God, but sought to destroy him.

(2) God's interview with Elijah on the mount (vv. 11-14). While standing before the Lord on the mount, God caused a mighty demonstration of wind, earthquake and fire to pass before him, to show unto him the nature of the work he had been doing for God, and to show him what was lacking in his work for the fullest attainment of success. Elijah had about him much of the whirlwind, earthquake and fire. His work had been terrifying and alarming, but it lacked in gentleness and love. This object lesson in the days of God's working is a needed message for this age, which is so wonderfully characterized by noise and clamor. The world is not "taken for Christ" by the fleshly energy and enthusiasms of conventions and committees, but by the quiet hearts who go forth proclaiming God's Word in the energy of the Holy Spirit.

11. Elijah's Return (vv. 15-18). Though Elijah had erred, God brought him again into His service. How comforting to know that God does not reject His servants because of their failures in times of despondency! He deals with them after the motive of their hearts. Elijah was nourished and instructed by the Lord and then sent on a high mission. God took Elijah out of himself by giving him a new commission. Before God would come in His chariot to take Elijah home, he sent him upon a three-fold ministry.

1. To anoint Hazael king over Syria (v. 15).

2. To anoint Jehu king over Israel (v. 16).

3. To anoint Elisha as his own successor in the prophet's room (vv. 19-21).

"The Bat," copyright, 1920, by Mary Roberts Rinehart and Avery Hopwood.

STORY FROM THE START

Defying all efforts to capture him, after a long series of murders and robberies, a super-crook known only as "The Bat" has brought about a veritable reign of terror. The chief of police assigns his best operative, Anderson, to get on the trail of the Bat. With her niece, Dale Ogden, Miss Cornelia Van Gorder is living in the country home of the late Courtleigh Fleming, who until his recent death had been president of the Union bank, wrecked because of the theft of a large sum of currency. Miss Van Gorder receives a note warning her to vacate the place at once on pain of death. Dale returns from the city where she had been to hire a gardener. The gardener arrives, giving his name as Brooks. He admits he is not a gardener, but needs work. Miss Cornelia tells Doctor Wells of the threatening note. They are interrupted by the smashing of a window in the house. They find another warning note. The detective, Anderson, arrives, is told of the situation, and announces he will stay on watch that night. Miss Van Gorder tells Anderson she has an idea Courtleigh Fleming robbed his own bank and concealed the money in the house.

"Well, I wouldn't struggle like that for a theory," he said, the professional note coming back to his voice. "The cashier's missing—that's the answer."

"Then you don't think there's a chance that the money from the Union bank is in this house?" persisted Miss Cornelia.

"I think it very unlikely."

Miss Cornelia put her knitting away and rose. She still clung tenaciously to her own theories—but her belief in them had been badly shaken.

"If you'll come with me, I'll show you to your room," she said, a little stiffly. The detective stepped back to let her pass.

"Sorry to spoil your little theory," he said, and followed her to the door. If either had noticed the unobtrusive listener to their conversation, neither made a sign.

The moment the door had closed on them, Dale sprang into action. She seemed a different girl from the one who had left the room so inconspicuously such a short time before—there were two bright spots of color in her cheeks and she was obviously laboring under great excitement. She went quickly to the alcove doors—they opened softly—disclosing the young man who had said that he was Brooks the new gardener—and yet not the same young man—for his assumed air of servitude had dropped from him like a cloak, revealing him as a young fellow at least of the same general social class as Dale's if not a fellow-inhabitant of the select circle where Van Gorder revolved about Van Gorder, and a man's great-grandfather was more important than the man himself.

Dale cautioned him with a warning finger as he advanced into the room. "Sh! Sh!" she whispered. "Be careful! That man's a detective!" Brooks gave a hunted glance at the door into the hall.

"Then they've traced me here," he said in a dejected voice.

"I don't think so."

He made a gesture of helplessness. "I couldn't get back to my rooms," he said in a whisper. "If they've searched them," he paused, "as they're sure to—they'll find your letters to me." He paused again.

"Your aunt doesn't suspect anything?"

"No, I told her I'd engaged a gardener—and that's all there was about it."

He came nearer to her. "Dale," he murmured in a tense voice. "You know I didn't take that money," he said, with boyish simplicity.

"All the loyalty of first-love was in her answer."

"Of course! I believe in you absolutely!" she said. He caught her in his arms and kissed her—gratefully—passionately. Then the galling memory of the predicament in which he stood—the hunt already on his trail—came back to him. He released her gently, still holding one of her hands.

"But—the police here!" he stammered, turning away. "What does that mean?"

Dale swiftly informed him of the situation.

"Aunt Cornelia says people have been trying to break into this house for days at night."

Brooks ran his hand through his hair in a gesture of bewilderment. Then he seemed to catch at a hope.

"What sort of people?" he queried sharply.

Dale was puzzled. "She doesn't know."

The excitement in her lover's manner came to a head. "That proves exactly what I've contended right along," he said, thudding one fist softly in the palm of the other. "Through some underneath channel old Fleming has been selling those securities for months, turning them into cash. And somebody knows about it, and knows that that money is hidden here. Don't you see? Your Aunt Cornelia has grabbed the game by coming here."

"Why didn't you tell the police that? Now they think, because you ran away—"

"Run away! The only chance I had was a few hours to myself to see where that actually belonged!"

"Why don't you tell the detective what you think?" said Dale at her wits' end. "That Courtleigh Fleming took the money and that it is still here?"

Her lover's face grew somber. "He'd take me into custody at once—and I'd have no chance to search."

He was searching now—his eyes roved about the living-room—walls—ceiling—hopefully—desperately—looking for a clew—the faintest clew to support his theory.

"Why are you so sure it is here?" queried Dale.

"Brooks explained. 'You must remember—Fleming was no ordinary defaulter—and he had no intention of being exiled to a foreign country. He wanted to come back here and take his place in the community while I was in the pen.'"

"But even then—"

He interrupted her. "Listen, dear—"

He crossed to the billiard room door, closed it firmly, returned.

"The architect that built this house was an old friend of mine," he said in hushed accents. "We were together in France and you know the way fellows get to talking when they're far away and cut off—"

He paused, seeing the cruel gleam of a star-shell—two figures huddled in a trench, whirling away the terrible hours of waiting by muttered talk.

"Just an hour or two before—a shell got this friend of mine," he resumed, "he told me he had built a hidden room in this house."

"Where?" gasped Dale.

Brooks shook his head. "I don't know. We never got to finish that conversation. But I remember what he said. He said, 'You watch old Fleming. If I get mine over here it won't break his heart. He didn't want any living being to know about that room.'"

Now Dale was as excited as he. "Then you think the money is in this hidden room?"

"I do," said Brooks decidedly. "I don't think Fleming took it away with him. He was too shrewd for that. No, he meant to come back all right, the minute he got the word the bank had been looted. And he'd fixed things so I'd be railroaded to prison—you wouldn't understand, but it was pretty neat. And then the fool nephew rents this house the minute he's dead, and whoever knows about the money—"

"Jack! Why isn't it the nephew who is trying to break in?"

"He wouldn't have to break in. He could make an excuse and come in any time."

He clenched his hands despairingly. "If I could only get hold of a blueprint of this place!" he muttered.

Dale's face fell. It was sickening to be so close to the secret—and yet not find it. "Oh, Jack, try, oh, try, so confused and worried!" she confessed, with a little sob.

Brooks put his hands on her shoulders, in an effort to cheer her spirits. "Now, listen, dear," he said firmly, "this isn't as hard as it sounds. I've got a clear night to work in—and as true as I'm standing here, that money's in this house. Listen, honey—it's like this. He pantomimed the old nursery rhyme of the house that Jack built. 'Here's the house that Courtleigh Fleming built—here, somewhere, in the hidden room in the house that Courtleigh Fleming built—and here—somewhere—pray heaven—is the money—in the hidden room—in the house that Courtleigh Fleming built. When you're low in your mind, just say that over!'"

She managed a faint smile. "I've forgotten it already," she said, drooping.

He still strove for an offhand gaiety that he did not feel.

"Why, look here!" and she followed the play of his hands obediently, like a tired child, "it's a sort of game, dearest. 'Money, money—who's got the money? You know!' For the dozenth time he stared at the un-revealing walls of the room. 'For that matter,' he added, 'the hidden room may be behind these very walls.'"

He looked about for a tool—a poker—anything that would sound the walls and test them for hollow spaces. Ah! he had it—that driver in the bag of golf clubs over in the corner. He got the driver and stood wondering where he had best begin. That blank wall above the fireplace looked as promising as any. He tapped it gently with the golf club—afraid to make too much noise and yet anxious to test the wall as thoroughly as possible. A dull, heavy reverberation answered his stroke—nothing hollow there, apparently.

As he tried another spot, again thunder beat the long roll on its drum outside, in the night. The lights blinked—wavered—recovered.

"The lights are going out again!" said Dale dully, her excitement sunk into a stupefied calm.

"Let them go! The less light the better for me. The only thing to do is to go over this house room by room." He pointed to the billiard room door. "What's in there?"

"The billiard room." She was thinking hard. "Jack! Perhaps Courtleigh Fleming's nephew would know where the blue-prints are!"

He looked dubious. "It's a chance, but not a very good one," he said. "Well—"

He led the way into the billiard room—and began to rap at random upon its walls while Dale listened intently for any echo that might betray the presence of a hidden chamber or sliding panel.

Thus it happened that Lizzie received the first real thrill of what was to prove to her—and to others—a sensational and hideous night. For, coming into the living room to lay a cloth for Mr. Anderson's night supper, not only did the lights blink threateningly and the thunder roll, but a series of split raps was certainly to be heard coming from the region of the billiard room.

"Oh, my God!" she wailed, and the next instant the lights went out, leaving her in inky darkness. With a loud shriek she bolted out of the room.

Thunder—lightning—dashing of rain on the streaming glass of the windows—the storm hallowing its howls. Dale huddled close to her lover as they groped their way back to the living room, cautiously, doing their best to keep from stumbling against some heavy piece of furniture whose fall would arouse the house.

"There's a candle on the table, Jack. If I can find the table." Her outstretched hands touched a familiar object. "Here it is." She fumbled for a moment. "Have you any matches?"

"Yes." He struck one—another—lit the candle—set it down on the table. In the weak glow of the little taper, whose tiny flame illuminated but a portion of the living room, his face looked tense and strained.

"It's pretty near hopeless," he said. "If all the walls are paneled like that."

As if in mockery of his words and his quest, a muffled knocking that seemed to come from the ceiling of the very room he stood in answered his despair.

"What's that?" asked Dale.

They listened. The knocking was repeated—knock—knock—knock—knock.

"Some one else is looking for the hidden room!" muttered Brooks, gazing up at the ceiling intently, as if he could tear from it the secret of this new mystery by sheer strength of will.

"It's upstairs!" Dale took a step toward the alcove stairs. Brooks halted her.

"Who's in this house besides ourselves?" he queried.

"Only the detective—Aunt Cornelia—Lizzie—and Billy."

"Billy's the Jap?"

"Yes."

Brooks paused an instant. "Does he belong to your aunt?"

"No. He was Courtleigh Fleming's butler."

Knock—knock—knock—knock—the dull, methodical rapping on the ceiling of the living room began again.

"Courtleigh Fleming's butler, eh?" muttered Brooks. He put down his candle and stole noiselessly into the alcove. "It may be the Jap!" he whispered.

Knock—knock—knock—knock! This time the mysterious rapping seemed to come from the upper hall.

"If it is the Jap, I'll get him!" Brooks' voice was tense with resolution. He hesitated—made for the hall door—dipped out into the darkness around the main staircase, leaving Dale alone in the living room, beset by shadowy terrors.

Utter silence succeeded his noiseless departure. Even the storm lulled for a moment. Dale stood thinking—wondering—searching desperately for some way to help her lover.

At last a resolution formed in her mind. She went to the city telephone.

"Hello," she said in a low voice, glancing over her shoulder now and then to make sure she was not overheard, "1-2-4—please—yes, that's right. Hello—is that the Country

"Mashers" Worsted by Girls' Clever Scheme

Pittsburgh's young women have various ways of dealing with "mashers," "asphalt arabs," or whatever the species may be called. They are not lacking in the art of refusing un-solicited ice cream sodas or buggy rides. But this little tale is handed on for what it may be worth in an emergency.

The two girls had been visiting in a rather lonely neighborhood and were walking to their homes. The street was deserted except for two men behind them. After a time of doubts and apprehensive shivers, the young women realized that they were being followed.

They hastened their steps, but to no avail. Gradually the pursuers gained, and at last were almost within speaking distance. The young women were at a loss as to what to do. Suddenly one raised her hands toward the other and began making strange gestures. The other one did the same.

At this unusual procedure the men stopped in their tracks and stared. Then they turned and retraced their steps. Neither, apparently, knew the sign language of the deaf.

Neither did the young women, who continued in giggling triumph to their homes.—Pittsburgh Post.

Sad Indication

Some one had told the woman that he was a backward boy. But as she watched him playing in the sunny nursery and listened to him chatting he seemed to her quite normal—the usual child of four and one-half years.

It was only later when she accompanied him across the hall into his mother's room that he made a queer remark.

His mother's room was a spacious one done in old style, and as they entered it, like tall, bronze-haired mother was standing before a full-length mirror trying on a chiffon negligee in old gold.

The baby boy looked at the lovely vision in the full-length mirror. "Oh, dear," he sighed. "Two mothers. One's enough."—New York Sun.

club? Is Mr. Richard Fleming there? Yes, I'll hold the wire."

She looked about nervously. Had something moved in that corner of blackness where her candle did not pierce? No! How silly of her!

Buzz-buzz on the telephone. She picked up the receiver again.

"Hello—is this Mr. Fleming? This is Miss Ogden—Dale Ogden. I know it must seem odd my calling you this late, but—I wonder if you could come over here for a few minutes. Yes—tonight." Her voice grew stronger. "I wouldn't trouble you but—it's awfully important. Hold the wire a moment."

She put down the phone and made another swift survey of the room, listened furtively at the door—all clear! She returned to the phone.

"Hello—Mr. Fleming—I'll wait outside the house on the drive. It—it's a confidential matter. Thank you so much."

She hung up the phone, relieved—not an instant too soon, for, as she crossed toward the fireplace to add a new log to the dying glow of the fire, the hall door opened and Anderson, the detective, came softly in with an unlighted candle in his hand.

"Spooky sort of place in the dark, isn't it?" he said casually.

"Yes—rather." If he would only go away before Brooks came back or

"No!" She strove desperately to make the denial convincing but she could not hide the little tremor in her voice.

The detective mused.

"Fellow of good family, I understand," he said, eyeing her. "Very popular. That's what's behind most of these bank embezzlements—men getting into society and spending more than they make."

Dale halted the tinkle of the city telephone with an inward sigh of relief. The detective moved to answer the house phone on the wall by the alcove—mistaking the direction of the ring.

Dale corrected him quickly.

"No, the other one—that's the house phone."

Anderson looked the apparatus over.

"No connection with the outside, eh?"

"No," said Dale, absent-mindedly, "Just from room to room in the house."

He accepted her explanation and answered the other telephone.

"Hello—hello—what the—" He moved the receiver hook up and down, without result, and gave it up. "This line sounds dead," he said.

"It was all right a few minutes ago," said Dale, without thinking.

"You were using it a few minutes ago?"

She hesitated—what use to deny what she had already admitted, for all practical purposes.

"Yes."

The city telephone rang again. The detective pounced upon it.

"Hello—yes—yes—this is Anderson—go ahead." He paused, while the tiny voice in the receiver buzzed for some seconds. Then he interrupted it impatiently.

"You're sure of that, are you? I see. All right. 'By.'"

He hung up the receiver and turned swiftly on Dale.

"That was headquarters, Miss Ogden. They have found some letters in Bailey's room which seem to indicate that you were not telling the entire truth just now."

He paused, waiting for her answer. "What letters?" she said wearily.

"From you to Jack Bailey—showing that you had recently become engaged to him."

Dale decided to make a clean breast of it—or as clean a one as she dared.

"Very well," she said in an uneven voice, "that's true."

"Why didn't you say so before?" There was menace beneath his suavity. He came closer to Dale, fixing her with his eyes. "Do you know where Bailey is now?" He spoke slowly and menacingly.

She did not flinch.

"No."

The detective paused.

"Miss Ogden," he said, still with that hidden threat in his voice, "in the last minute or so the Union bank case and certain things in this house have begun to tie up pretty close together. Bailey disappeared this morning. Have you heard from him since?"

Her eyes met his without weakening—her voice was cool and composed.

"No."

The detective did not comment on her answer—she could not tell from his face whether he thought she had told the truth or lied. He turned away from her brusquely.

"I'll ask you to bring Miss Van Gorder here," he said in his professional voice. "This case is taking on a new phase."

"You don't think I know anything about that money?" she said, a little wildly, hoping that a display of shame might throw him off the trail he seemed to be following.

He seemed to accept her words, cynically, at their face value.

"No," he said, "but you know somebody who does."

Dale hesitated—sought for a biting retort—found none. It did not matter—any reply, no matter how momentary, from these probing questions, would be a relief. She silently took one of the lighted candles and left the living room to search for her aunt.

Left alone, the detective reflected for a moment, then picking up the one lighted candle that remained, commenced a systematic examination of the living room. His methods were thorough, but if, when he came to the end of his quest, he had made any new discoveries, the reticent composure of his face did not betray the fact. When he had finished he turned patiently toward the billiard room—the little flame of his candle was swallowed up in its dark recesses—he closed the door of the living room behind him. The storm was dying away, now, but a few flashes of lightning still flickered, lighting up the darkness of the deserted living room now and then with a harsh, brief glare.

A lightning flash—a shadow cast abruptly on the shade of one of the French windows, to disappear as abruptly as the flash was blotted out—the shadow of a man—a prowler—feeling his way through the lightning-slashed darkness to the terrace door. The detective? Brooks? The Bat? The lightning flash was too brief for any observer to have recognized the stealing shape—if any observer had been there.

But the lack of an observer was promptly remedied. Just as the shadowy shape reached the terrace door and its shadow-fingers closed over the knob, Lizzie entered the deserted living room on stumbling feet. She was carrying a tray of dishes and food—a roll—a butter pat—and she walked slowly, with terror only one step behind her, and blank darkness ahead.

There ought to be two worlds, one for the disabled.

Richard Fleming arrived! But he seemed in a distressingly chatty frame of mind.

"Left me upstairs without a match," continued Anderson. "I found my way down by walking part of the way and falling the rest. Don't suppose I'll ever find the room I left my toothbrush in!" He laughed, lighted the candle in his hand from the candle on the table.

"You're not going to stay up all night, are you?" said Dale, nervously, hoping he would take the hint. But he seemed entirely oblivious of such minor considerations as sleep. He took out a cigar.

"Oh, I may doze a bit," he said. He eyed her with a certain approval. She was a darning pretty girl and she looked intelligent. "I suppose you have a theory of your own about these intrusions you've been having here? Or apparently having?"

"I knew nothing about them until tonight."

"Still," he persisted conversationally, "you know about them now." But when she remained silent, "Is Miss Van Gorder usually—of a nervous temperament? Imagine she sees things, and all that?"

"I don't think so." Dale's voice was strained. Where was Brooks? What had happened to him?

Anderson puffed on his cigar, pondering. "Know the Flemings?" he asked.

"I've met Mr. Richard Fleming—once or twice."

Something in her tone caused him to glance at her. "Nice fellow?"

"I don't know him at all well."

"Know the cashier of the Union bank?" he shot at her suddenly.

She looked about nervously.

With a $4,000 fund made available by the State Finance Board, a specialist will be brought to New Mexico to minister to an estimated 75 persons left crippled by the infantile paralysis epidemic.

George E. Woodin of Boston has bought the Memphis mine at Organ, 18 miles east of Las Cruces, N. M., which since the 80's has produced half a million dollars in copper, lead, zinc and silver.

Approximately $5,000,000 will be realized on the cotton crop under the Elephant Butte project this year than last, provided the favorable market prices continue, according to recent estimates made in Las Cruces, N. M.

The first unit of the new Elks home of Spanish design is nearing completion at Gallup, N. M. Plans have been made for its dedication Oct. 12, in which prominent lodgemen from Arizona and New Mexico will take part.

Luis Hidalgo was found guilty of second degree murder by a jury in district court at Las Cruces, N. M., for killing with an axe his sweetheart, Anita, 13, and her mother, Mrs. Juana Manyanes, near Berino last April.

J. A. Castillo of Gallup, New Mexico, has been appointed assistant state superintendent of public instruction succeeding R. L. Baca who resigned when District Judge Reed Holloman held that as he is a state representative he cannot hold the office.

The chili crop at Vinton and in the lower Mesilla valley is valued at $50,000 for the 100 acres planted, according to estimates made in Las Cruces, N. M. A dehydrating plant under construction at Vinton will take care of the crop after the green shipments are completed.

An educational "roundup" of Navajo Indians is in progress on the reservation in New Mexico. Capt. Horbert Redshaw of the Indian service, with his helpers, is making a thorough canvass of the reservation for students who have been enrolled in government schools.

Lt. Osborne C. Wood, son of the late governor general of the Philippines, and whose Wall Street activities but recently held him in the public eye, is in Santa Fe to work for a mining company. Asked about his financial adventures, Lt. Wood replied with a grin, "We'll just forget all that. I've got a job and I'm going to be busy with it."

The council of all the New Mexico Pueblos, assembled at Santo Domingo recently, adopted resolutions touching on the Middle Rio Grande conservancy project and opposing any condemnation of Pueblo lands for conservancy or the involving of the Pueblos in the conservancy project, in any general appropriation bill and requesting that any legislation contain guarantees against the allotment of Indian lands.

Plans are being made for the commercialization of the great beds of white sands or gypsum west of Alamogordo, New Mexico. Interested in the project are J. W. Ady, Colorado Springs, Colo., and Dr. Charles L. Lindas of Cripple Creek and Denver, Colo. These parties have leased 63,000 acres in the heart of the gypsum deposit and expect to erect a building material factory in the future. The project, if carried through, would mean the extension of railroad facilities.

Catron county, New Mexico, abolished by an act of the last New Mexico legislature, effective June 30, 1928, when it is to be absorbed by Socorro and Grant counties, will still be fighting for existence if the Supreme Court upholds Judge Reed Holloman's recent decision. Judge Holloman ruled that the suit to prevent the enforcement of the legislative act cannot be brought until the act becomes operative, next June. Hence Catron county, which was created in 1921, can wait until next year for legal action, if the Supreme Court upholds Judge Holloman.

After being vacant for more than eight months, the permanent presidency of the University of Arizona has been filled. Dr. Homer Leroy Shantz, head of the department of botany at the University of Illinois, whose work as former member of the government bureau of plant industry has received high praise from William M. Jardine, secretary of agriculture, was named by the board of regents to take over the administration of the University in the fall of 1928.

EDITORIAL COLUMN

Capitan to Have Highway to Angus

A representative delegation from Capitan, Angus and Alto, was here Monday and spent the afternoon in conference with the Board of County Commissioners with regard to a proposed road leading from Angus to the top of Three-Mile Hill at Capitan. The road, as outlined, would give Capitan a direct route to Angus, something its people, and especially its merchants, have long desired.

In conversation with principals in the project, we were informed that the funds for the building of this road would be derived by popular subscriptions, the county of Lincoln and the State funds. As near as can be determined at this time, the cost of the road is in the neighborhood of $6,500, 25 per cent of this amount to be raised by popular subscription, 25 per cent to come from the county, leaving the remaining 50 per cent to be borne by the state. The subscriptions to cover our portion of this fund will come from different localities over the county in which merchants and professional men of Carrizozo, in particular, will render assistance in courtesy to our neighbors' best interests.

Good roads are what we want and need in Lincoln County and wherever needed, combined efforts of all localities should be put into force to accomplish that end. The Outlook was glad to see such a remarkable spirit of co-operation as that displayed at the big meeting Monday and wish our neighbors to understand that we are ready to help in any manner that will serve to accomplish the greatest good for our county interests, as a whole. There is some talk of publishing a list of those who have contributed to the above worthy undertaking and if this is done, your name will appear with others by sending your check to any merchant in Capitan or to the First National Bank, Carrizozo. Will you help?

State Tax Commission Reducing "Spreading Bull's" Deficit

The State Tax Commission has rendered a statement to the effect that the Hannett deficit of $378,748, which the Hannett administration left on the hands of the present administration, has been reduced $137,748, leaving still a deficit of $240,798, which will be entirely wiped out within the next six months, says the Commission.

The Commission figures that the collection of delinquent taxes which is going on at such a rapid rate under the new order of things, will soon overcome the entire deficiency left as a rich legacy to the Republican party by his Honor, "Spreading Bull" when at the head of the retiring Democratic state party and yet he has the nerve to say that the Tax Commission aside from Mr. Joerna, know nothing at all about taxation. It would seem that according to its statement, the Tax Commission has Hannett's measurement and have devised ways and means to correct and overcome some of the many of his blunderings and plunderings. In some counties, there is an increase in taxation to help to make up the Hannett deficiency, but in Lincoln county, there is a decrease in taxes.

Are You Tired of Being Sick?

Then Try CHIROPRACTIC, the Modern Way of getting well without Drugs or Operation.
Did you know that if one or more of the bones in your spine is slightly displaced it is producing pressure on the great trunk nerves, thereby shutting off the proper flow of life force to a dying organ? No medicine or operation can remove it, but the trained Chiropractor can.
Have you spent a Fortune Trying to get Well? Chiropractic is inexpensive and it costs you nothing to investigate.

Evening Gowns are Classy feathers." For the daughter of the household who is "going away" to college or finishing school, the subject of party frocks is a vital one. Selection of an evening dress modeled after the style of the one illustrated will proclaim the discriminating taste of its wearer.

If, not of satin, then choose velvet for the making of this frock, for a "velvet season" is surely upon us. The new velvets are marvelously textured, being supple and almost as sheer as chiffon. In fact they are variously called sheer velvet, transparent velvet, also georgette velvet.

Black velvet fashioned along youthful lines is the mode of the hour for the debutante and her younger sister. However, for those who are inclined to color, the new autumn satins and velvets are a revelation of color-beauty.

There is a whole range of leaf-browns brought out this season which are unusually attractive. There is a tendency toward wine tones, too, and many delightful shades of blue. Beige and green are also included in the list of favored colors.

An exception to the rule of no trimming for the fashionable classic-drape silk and velvet evening frock, is the presence of a sparkling rhinestone buckle or ornament, placed either at the grille or at the hipline.

Sour Cream Will Add to Cooked Dressing

If you have on hand some sour cream, you may prefer to make a cooled dressing. A good method is as follows: Beat an egg very light, and add to it a quarter teaspoonful of mustard, half teaspoonful of salt, quarter teaspoonful of paprika pepper, half teaspoonful of sugar, quarter cupful of vinegar, and one cupful of sour cream. Mix well and cook in a double boiler, stirring constantly, until thick and smooth. If this dressing has any tendency to separate, strain it before cooling.

"We don't become confused. We beam as brightly and smile as happily as we can, and you know the smile of a Jack O'Lantern is a happy one.

"What are you going to do, Jack Frost?"

"Oh, I'm going to do some art work," he said. "I've been neglecting it lately.

"I must keep my frosty hand in, as the saying is. I mustn't forget the good work I can do."

"Dear me, no more time for talking," said Jack O'Lantern. "I hear the children coming along now and it is getting quite dark.

"They will be lighting my candle and will be off. Hello, for a jolly old evening. Good-by, Jack Frost."

"Good-by, Jack O'Lantern. And may your evening be the jolliest one over a Jack O'Lantern hat."

"You couldn't wish me a nicer wish," grinned Jack O'Lantern. (Copyright.)

To Make Tomato Jelly With Celery.—Cook two and one-half cupfuls of tomato, two slices of onion, three sprays of celery, a stalk of celery, three sprays of parsley, a small bit of bay leaf 15 minutes. Strain and add one-fourth of a cupful of water, stir until the gelatin is dissolved, then turn into a herder mold. When ready to serve dip the mold into tepid water, wipe and turn to make sure the jelly is free, then unmold on a chilled dish. Fill the center with tender celery mixed with mayonnaise.

Potato Dumplings.—Sift together one and one-half cupfuls of flour, five teaspoonfuls of baking powder, one-half teaspoonful of salt, three tablespoonfuls of butter, one-half cupful of rice potato, one egg beaten light and three-fourths of a cupful of milk. Mix all the ingredients, roll in a sheet and cut into rounds. Set close in a buttered steamer and cook over hot water for fifteen minutes. Do not uncover while cooking.

Courts Bouillon.—Fry slowly for ten minutes in two tablespoonfuls of butter or cooking oil, one chopped carrot, one chopped onion, two stalks of celery, one chopped green pepper, or several sprigs of parsley. Add three pints of boiling water, one-half cupful of vinegar, one teaspoonful of salt. Tie in a cheesecloth bag three peppercorns, one large bay leaf and three cloves. Put this in the boiling water. Cut two pounds of fish into serving portions and let cook slowly in the bouillon ten minutes at a simmer point. Remove the spices. Serve the fish on a platter, thicken the broth and serve with it; garnish the fish with parsley.

Eggs a la Crois.—Chop two or three tablespoonfuls of dried beef, add a cupful of tomatoes, one-fourth of a cupful of milk, a dash of cinnamon and cayenne and a little onion juice, then grate cheese. Beat two tablespoonfuls of butter, add the mixture and when well heated, pour eggs slightly beaten. Cook until creamy, stirring constantly and scraping down from the sides and bottom of the pan. (© 1927, Western Newspaper Union.)

Casement Windows and Curtains

Casement Curtains Arranged to Draw.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Casement windows, either single or in groups, are picturesque and appropriate in both large and small houses. If well made they are charming and convenient, but they must be certain so as not to interfere with their opening.

The material of which the casement curtains are made is the same as that used for any other windows in the room, unless some special effect is desired. In a hall or alcove a casement may sometimes be treated as an entirely separate decorative feature. If the living room has both casements and double sash windows the material chosen for curtains must be adapted to both types of window, and to the atmosphere of the living room, whether formal and dignified, or informally gay and cheerful. The bureau of home economics suggests that plain fabrics, such as poplin, pongee, habutai silk, rayon, silk and cotton mixtures, monk's cloth, are good. Heavily patterned cretonnes suit some living rooms if the walls are plain. If the casement opens out, there is less chance of the curtains being in the way of the sash. Draw curtains can be pulled back to the extreme edge of the window frame when the casement is opened. If glass curtains must be used they should be hung from the upper casing so that they remain inside the room when the casement is unfastened. Otherwise they would soon be spoiled by rain and outdoor air. Side draperies and draw curtains should end on a line with the apron or sill.

If the casement opens in, glass curtains may be slurred on rods at the top and bottom of the sash, or hung with rings from the top of it, so that they swing with the window. If a valance and side draperies are used with the opening-in casement, the valance must clear the top of the sash as it swings in. On the whole, draw curtains will be found best for casements. They are generally arranged in clusters of plaits on rings to be drawn back and forth on a solid rod by means of double cords passing over small pulleys. The illustration shows casement curtains of plain colored pongee for the living room.

Ingredients Required to Make Tasty Chowchow

A good chowchow is made from the following ingredients, according to the Bureau of home economics. All the vegetables have been brined and must be freshened by standing in cold water overnight or longer. Some salt must always be left in vegetables that are being freshened for pickles. After the vegetables are freshened they are drained, mixed and chopped together. The spices, vinegar and sugar are brought to the boiling point and mixed with the vegetables. Stir until they are well blended and let stand overnight. In the morning stir well and pack into sterilized jars. Seal and store in a cool place. Processing will help to keep the pickles but will soften the texture. The amount given below yields three quart.

- 2 cups small white onions
- 2 cups cauliflower
- 1 small section tart acid
- 4 cups cut string beans
- 12 green peppers, medium size
- 1 red pepper
- 8 teaspoons celery seed
- 4 teaspoons mustard
- 1 cup sugar
- 3 cups cider vinegar

Eating Fruit

At least one fruit in some form, either fresh, canned or dried, should be eaten every day.

Best Way to Market Eggs

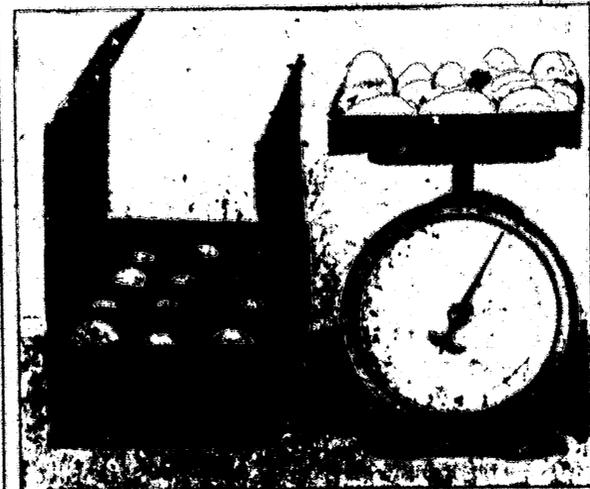

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Apples, potatoes, string beans and other products handled by the green grocer or fruit stand are now usually sold by weight instead of count or measure, but for some reason the habit of handling eggs by the dozen still persists. As every housekeeper knows, there is the greatest difference in the size of eggs, even in the same box; and the most up-to-date book books will call for "a cupful of egg whites" or, even better, so many ounces of egg white, rather than a specific number of eggs.

If women would generally weigh their eggs and persuade dealers that a dozen very small eggs are not worth as much as a dozen big ones, the custom of selling eggs by weight would soon become established. The United States Department of Agriculture favors this system of selling eggs as being fair to both buyer and seller. It would encourage the proper sorting and grading of eggs on the part of the producer, and the consumer who found her family satisfied with the little eggs could get them cheaper and leave the big ones for somebody else.

Hot or Cold Chicken Loaf Is Appetizing

An old chicken may be simmered with seasonings until tender and then prepared in many different appetizing ways. One of the nicest ways to use it is to make a chicken loaf, which can be served hot or cold. The following recipe supplied by the United States Department of Agriculture requires two cupfuls of cooked chicken:

- 2 cupfuls finely cut cooked chicken
- 1 cupful fine bread crumbs
- 1 1/2 tablespoonfuls butter or chicken fat
- 1/2 cupful milk
- 1/2 cupful mashed chicken
- 1/2 cupful peas
- Salt
- Paprika
- Onion and green pepper fried in butter or chicken fat

Heat the milk and moisten the crumbs with it and combine with the other ingredients, adding the beaten eggs last. Place the mixture in a greased baking dish or pan and bake in a modern oven for one hour, or until firm and brown. Turn out on a platter and serve hot or cold. It served cold, garnish with sliced tomatoes.

HELP FOR SICK WOMEN

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Has Restored the Health of Thousands

Brooklyn, New York.—Mrs. G. Hegmann of 228 Schaeffer St., was in a run-down condition and could not do her housework. She could not sleep at night. Her sleep is not an unusual one. Thousands of women find themselves in a similar condition at some time in their lives.

"I found your advertisement in my letter box," wrote Mrs. Hegmann, "and took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and got relief." Mrs. Hegmann also took Lydia E. Pinkham's Herb Medicine and Lydia E. Pinkham's Pills for Constipation, with good results. She says, "I am recommending your medicines to all I know who have symptoms the same as mine, and to others whom I think it will help. You may use my statement as a testimonial, and I will answer any letters sent to me by women who would like information regarding your medicines."

There are women in your state—perhaps in your town—who have written letters similar to this one telling how much Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has helped them. The Pinkham Medicine Company, Lynn, Mass., will gladly furnish other women with these names upon request.

CERTAIN types of evening gowns of present vogue are classics in dress the same as certain books and poems are classics in literature. The prestige of these sartorial "classics" rests solely upon the supremacy of fabric elegance and its artful draping, suggestions of frills or furberlows being strictly taboo.

Such are the lovely gowns which are "poems without words" created of either lustrous crepe satin or of sheer velvet. In their development the stylist concentrates on the theme of the snug hipline, with classic draping which brings the fullness to some strategic point of the side or front, at the same time accomplishing the graceful irregular hemline which Paris decrees.

An exponent of the classic-type is here pictured. It is made of heavy white crepe satin. As will be seen, it has the coveted snug hipline and it glories in the absence of "fuss and

Goodnight Story for Kiddies

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER
The two Jacks were talking.

One of them was Jack Frost. The other was Jack O'Lantern.

"It's a beautiful, clear, still, cold night," said Jack Frost, "just the kind of a night I like."

"I like it myself," said Jack O'Lantern. "I don't feel the cold at all," he added proudly.

"I think that's fine," said Jack Frost, "because of course you're growing during the hot weather, and one might think that you'd complain when it got cold."

"I can understand the people who like the cold and hate the warmth, and I can a little bit understand that there would be people who would like the warmth and hate the cold."

"But I cannot understand those people who complain when it is hot and also complain when it is cold. What in the world do they like, I wonder?"

"I wouldn't be able to tell you that," said Jack O'Lantern. "Of course later in the evening the candle which is now inside me will be lighted and there will be warmth and brightness from that."

"Oh, I'm expecting an exciting evening."

"You're a very handsome Jack O'Lantern," Jack Frost said.

"Thank you, Jack Frost," said Jack O'Lantern, and he seemed to grin more than ever.

"Do you think my mouth is becoming to me?" he asked.

Jack Frost laughed.

"That's a funny way to speak," he said. "Most creatures either like their mouths or they have grown used to them, or they don't like them, but I've never before heard anyone ask if a mouth was becoming."

"Good-by, Jack O'Lantern."

"Ah, but you see," said Jack O'Lantern, "I might have so many different kinds of mouths—not all at the same time."

"But when they were cutting out my mouth they might have made it too small or too wide or too large. I think it's perfect myself."

"Then I was quite right to think so, too," grinned Jack Frost. "And when you were making me if your mouth were becoming you already thought so, but just wanted to know my opinion?"

Coveleskie Man of Honor

The curiously pathetic figure of a worn-out pitcher has walked through the New York Yankee camp. Stanley Coveleskie, who joined the club for a trial, convinced himself that he cannot do the Yankees any good and has gone to his home in Shamokin, Pa., because he is honorable. He did not seek to conceal the fact that his pitching arm is bothering him again. He might have done so and stalled, somehow, for weeks on end, but that isn't his way. He simply told Miller Huggins he was through and went home.

Stanley Coveleskie.

It was only a very few years ago that Coveleskie was one of the best, and certainly one of the smartest, of all the big league pitchers. He was with the Indians then. Tris Speaker thought he was through and traded him to Washington, where he pitched Bucky Harris' team to their second pennant in 1925, winning 20 games and losing only 5. Last year he was not quite so good, yet he managed to turn in 14 victories against 11 defeats. His service with the Washingtons ended recently when, unable to throw a ball more than 15 feet, he drew his unconditional release. His trial with the Yankees was a challenge to that fate he had thwarted three years ago.

Coveleskie, even in appearance, is unmistakably of the older school of professional ball players. It was not in a mood of utter hopelessness that Coveleskie quit the Yankee camp, for hope dies hard with the stout hearted. He thinks that a long rest and careful treatment will rid his system of the infection caused by his teeth—which is the basis of the trouble he has had with his arm—and that next spring he will be able to demonstrate all over again his usefulness to a major league club. The chances, unhappily, are against him for numerous reasons. One is that he is thirty-six years old now. Another is that he has pitched nearly 400 games in the majors.

Individual Liberty Must Be Compatible With the Liberty of All

By WILLIAM G. MADDOO, Ex-Secretary of the Treasury.

LAWSLESS liberty is not freedom, but anarchy. All liberty must be restrained to the point where it is compatible with the liberty of all. There cannot be private rights in any proper sense of the term except as they are defined and determined by the community acting through its appropriate organs.

Whenever a question arises, for example, concerning the relation of public utilities, the prevention of fraudulent securities issues, the protection of the health of women and children, or the control of traffic in habit-forming drugs and beverages, the first and greatest obstacle to be overcome is almost sure to be argument that whatever might otherwise be a valid exercise of the state's police power is a wrongful invasion of private rights.

In the past this argument has been commonly used against constitutional provisions, it being assumed that the scope of private rights could extend no further than the terms of constitutional guarantee. Now it is being contended, under the influence chiefly of a dislike for one of the recent amendments to the Constitution, that there are rights which are sacred from interference by society, even when acting in its Constitution-making capacity.

The strongest, because it is the soundest, argument against government regulation is not the doctrine of natural rights, but the argument that the government is unfit to discharge the duties which it is proposed to confide in it and that private rights are not safe in its hands.

Preaching of Christian Truths Too Often Neglected for Other Topics

By COL. JOHN T. AXTON, Chief of Army Chaplains.

The place and hour for public worship must not become forums for the discussion of every theme under the sun to the exclusion of religion if men are to be kept keenly interested in the church as an organization.

Instead of telling their congregations of the life of Jesus Christ, "who will show them what to become and how to become it," a great many clergymen today devote their entire sermons to discussions of the Chinese question, international relations, troubles between capital and labor and current railroad rates. The church should deal with such questions in the large, but should not place them before the teaching of religion.

Many denominational papers and so-called "journals of religion" may be defeating the purpose for which they are supposed to be circulated, the spread of Christianity, by their discussions of other subjects.

There is no occasion for apprehension in the statistics which show that actual church membership has decreased. Many persons are staying away from church but are still good Christians. Since the World War there has been a steady increase in the percentage of soldiers who attend religious exercises.

Youth Revolt Not New and Old Foundations Have Not Disappeared

By ROBERT E. SPEER, Presbyterian, New York.

A great many people who are watching the swing away from the old landmarks are asking, "What in the world are we going to do?" but if they will look in the Book of Psalms they will find the identical question was asked 3,000 years ago. This is not the first, the last or the worst time in history that the foundations have been destroyed.

The wailing of the elders because of the changing times in Bible days grew out of the youth movement started by the smooth, handsome, perfumery-loving son of David. And it is the youth movement that we blame today. Suppose we admit the worst and recognize the old foundations are gone, what then? There are three things that righteous people can do. One is to take a long look at the history that lies behind us, get the right perspective, keep calm and wait. Another is to go on being righteous, stand firm and wait for the storm to blow over, and the third is to go about your business, doing your daily duty, mind your own fires, and keep friendships warm and true.

The old foundations are not gone, the eternal realities are unalterable still. God is not dead and the Christian church is stronger than it ever was in history.

Credulity or Superstition Has No Connection Whatever With Real Faith

By REV. DR. RAYMOND C. KNOX, Columbia University.

Faith that is real has nothing whatever to do with credulity or superstition. True faith is always to be shown by the decision and determination of the wills.

It is the willingness to venture, to risk, to seek something better and higher than that which can be outwardly seen; to go boldly forth and attempt the task which the timid may say is impossible; to lay hold of the power of the unseen by which we have fellowship with God and so have the ability to create. Faith is, as Aquinas defined it, "Courage of the spirit which projects itself forward, sure of finding the truth." Faith is necessary to understand rightly ourselves and our fellowmen.

The Savior believed in them, not because of what they were, or of what they did, but because of what they might be and of what they could do. Thus He took men who, judged by common standards, were of ordinary rank, but who became, when touched by His Spirit, men who transformed the world.

Philosophy Advocated by Certain Psychologists Potent Cause of Unrest

By REV. DR. SELDEN F. DELANY, New York.

The "Philosophy of Experience," advocated by certain psychologists and magazines, is partly responsible for the confusion and despair in the minds of many young people. This statement appeared recently in a national magazine: "It is our first duty as human beings to find out how to live. It must be done by personal experience in living."

This statement reflects the thinking of a large part of the younger generation and accounts for the restlessness of the modern world. Such a philosophy of personal experience in every phase of life is impossible and impractical. Suppose we wished to experience marriage in all its forms. First we would try to live singly; then several marriages and divorces. By the time we got through with our experimenting, we would be too old to use the fruits of our experience.

Man Gets Cup Won Thirty Years Ago

Thirty years ago Jacob Mazer was the winner of a bicycle race between Cleveland and Pittsburgh. The cup which Mazer and the other members of the leading team won was awarded and put away for future races. None was held, bicycle racing going out of style. The cup was forgotten until the other evening when friends of Mazer, who had obtained it recently from its donors, presented it to the veteran athlete at a banquet given in his honor.

Pipe Organ Strains for Boxing Bout Not Liked

Arcible Bell, the New York bantamweight, and his American seconds were startled by the swelling, melodious strains of a pipe organ when the little party was ushered into Royal Albert hall for the 15-round bout with Teddy Baldock, British fighter, which Bell lost on points. The New Yorkers, especially Bell, looked around amazed, wondering what it was all about.

The organ, often heard by the king and queen, is one of the largest in the world, and is always played at big festive contests. Its base was hidden from the Americans by enormous black and white figures for use in indicating the rounds, but some of its 3,000 odd pipes reach nearly to the ceiling.

Bell says he does not care for organ music in the ring. When the decision was awarded to Baldock, the organ pealed out "For he's a jolly good fellow," but Bell didn't hear this owing to the cheers of the 7,000 or more spectators.

Changes Help Football

Louis Little, Georgetown university director of athletics, believes the changes made in the football rules will help the game. He points out that the sport will be aided as to the offensive department and that the changes are timely, as there has been an inclination for the past several seasons to pay most attention to building the sport from a defensive standpoint. Incidentally, Little has a real job in replacing former stars on his team.

Books in 1925
 In spite of the economic upheaval, 12,700 books—only 403 fewer than in 1923—were published last year in the British Isles. According to the Publishers' Circular, the effect of the general strike was to reduce the number of books issued in May to 460, as compared with 1,302 in May, 1923. But in June a part of the pent-up flood was released. If the last six months of each year are compared, it will be found that 6,700 were issued in 1923, as compared with 6,470 in 1925. "This increase suggests," says the circular, "that, given the economic peace that seems probable, the year 1927 will prove to be a bumper year."

In his own case, every man looks upon cowardice as a discretion.

Chas. LeBaron was in from Nogal Wednesday and spoke of the clipping in last week's Outlook, where we reprinted Mr. F. E. Hedrick's letter to the Highway Commission, concerning the good condition of our roads in Lincoln county. Mr. LeBaron said that in all the time he has resided here, he has never known the roads in general, to be in such good condition, especially the road between here and Nogal, which could not be in better condition than at the present time. He commended Mr. Grey for his good work and said he would back up every word Mr. Hedrick had said in his letter. Mr. LeBaron has just installed a new gasoline pump at his store in Nogal, mention of which is made in another article in this paper.

Nogal Mercantile Co.
Installs Gasoline Pump

The Nogal Mercantile Co. of Nogal, N. M., has just installed a new up-to-date Haynes visible gasoline pump from which they are dispensing gasoline at the very low price of 23c per gallon. They are also handling lubricating and kerosene oil. Lubricating oil, motor oil, A and Arctic sells at 25c a quart and 85c a gallon; kerosene at 19c a gallon, 5 gallons, 90c. Our prices are the lowest in Lincoln County. Twenty cents saved on 10 gallons means from 18 to 20 miles more travel with the average car.—Buy your Gas & Oil from the Nogal Mercantile Co.
