The town is just 12 miles from Carrizozo; a good road has already been built; buildings are ready for you and the slogan of the people of Lincoln County is, "Bring your folks and come on." CHRISTMAS—An International Holiday

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

IDURING all the centuries that have elapsed since the birth of Christ gave to what are now known as the Christian nations of the world the occasion for celebrating one day in each year in honor of Him, there have become associated with that day a host of symbols, traditions and customs, contributed by the various countries, which have made it, more perhaps than any other red letter day on our calendars, an international holiday. We Americans are somewhat prone to place Christmas in the same category with the distinctive American holidays of Fourth of July, Memorial day, and Thanksgiving day, without always realizing that we are only one of the many peoples who are celebrating it.

It is a curious fact, too, that associated with this "Christian holiday" are many symbols and traditions of pagan origin. The date itself, December 25 (which is now universally accepted as the birthday of Christ, although there is no exact historical record to establish that birthday), is derived from many sources, all antedating the Christian era by many centuries. In fact the historic background for that date is the earliest period in the history of mankind, dating as it does from the time when primitive man first began to recognize the phenomena of the changing seasons in relation to his own life.

One of these was the winter solstice on December 21 which was observed with festivity in Persia, China and Egypt in ancient times. In some parts of China they still hold a thanksgiving feast on December 21 without knowing the reason for it. The ancient Egyptians ate goose (the historical precedent for the Christmas goose or turkey of the present day) for dinner in honor of the winter solstice. It is a curious coincidence that the symbol for goose in the Egyptian hieroglyphics is the same as the symbol for child, so that there is something of an analogy in the Egyptian celebration of the winter solstice and the Christian celebration of Christmas in honor of the Christ child.

In ancient Rome the winter solstice was also celebrated, because when the shortest day of the year was over and the December sun began to climb its upward course, the Romans thrilled to the promise of coming spring. The festival they held was in honor of their god Saturn and at that time they prepared a feast which they called the Saturnalia. There were gifts and merry-making and banquets of great Roman magnificence and their temples were decorated with flowers and green branches. Under the reign of the Caesars slaves were liberated and were licensed to dine with their masters; prisoners were not punished for their misdeeds and war never was declared. Truly it was a time of "peace on earth, good will to men."

When the Romans invaded Britain they brought with them their customs and found that the celebration of the Saturnalia was somewhat similar to a celebration held at approximately the same time by the pagan Britons, especially those of the Druid priesthood. In these rites the mistletoe, which was held sacred by the Druids was cut from the sacred oak with a golden sickle by the prince of the Druids. Later when the mistletoe was hung in the farmhouse the young men had the privilege of kissing the girls under it, plucking, at each kiss, a berry from the spray. When the berries were all plucked, kissing time was over.

So it was from these pagan Druids that we received the mistletoe as a symbol of Christmas, as we did also the custom of burning the Yule log. The Scandinavians, from whom we get some of our Christmas customs, also had the Yule log and burned Yule fires in the night in honor of Thor, the thunder god. The Yule log has survived as one of the principal features of the modern English observance of Christmas and around it has grown up a number of traditions or superstitions of its own. In northern England it is believed that if a quarrelsome person or a bare-footed person comes into the house while the log is burning, it is an omen of bad luck. They also put away the bread made from the Yule log very carefully for use

In lighting the Yule log on next year's Christmas Eve.

Just how all of these customs came to be associated with the Christian holiday, celebrated in honor of the birth of Christ, cannot be definitely determined, for the merging of customs of different races and nations is such a gradual one that it is impossible to assign definite dates for the origin of many traditions. The early Christians frowned upon the pagan ceremonies held at the time of the winter solstice, yet they could not prevent their invasion of their own holy days. In the earliest days of the Christian era Epiphany, January 6, the day Christ was supposed to have been baptized, was observed by the followers of the new religion and eventually the observance of December 25 as Christmas grew out of a sort of compromise between Epiphany, January 6, and December 21, the day of the winter solstice and the high holiday of the pagans. Gradually the Christian Christmas began to replace the pagan festivals and the principal holiday of the winter season began to be observed on December 25. However, a part of the Greek church still observes January 6, ignoring December 25, while the Russians, because of their adherence to the Julian calendar observe Christmas some 13 days later than do other peoples.

Although the first observance of December 25 as Christmas has been lost in obscurity, it is said that Julian I, bishop of Rome from 337 to 352 A. D., established the festival at Rome some time between those two dates and it is probable that by the fifth century the date was pretty well established throughout the Christian world. King Arthur is believed to have held the first Christmas day festival in Britain in the city of York in 521 A. D. This festival lasted for several days and so appealed to his people that it became an annual custom. It was about this time, too, that the association of the mixture of Druid and Roman symbols and traditions began to appear in the Christmas celebrations. The Christians saw with alarm the association of what they considered heathenish rites with their own ceremonies, but they were powerless to check the growth of the alien influences and the importance of the festival gradually grew until there occurred an event which seemed to the Christians a just rebuke for the increasing importance of the pagan traditions. In 878 King Alfred was holding high revelry on Christmas day when he was surprised by the Danes, his army cut to pieces and he himself became a fugitive.

In 1223 there was an important Christmas celebration staged by St. Francis of Assisi in a grotto near Greccio in the Abruzzi mountains of Italy. There was a pageant at midnight, portraying the Nativity, and Thomas of Celano, who was among the worshippers, writes that they saw a smiling babe appear in the arms of St. Francis as he bent over the manger. The report of this miracle spread over the land and a convent was built there to commemorate it. Giotto painted a picture of the incident and this celebration and this picture did much to give us our present-day ideas of the Nativity of Christ.

By the early Middle Ages, Christmas had become the greatest of the annual festivals and, although in some countries, notably England, the pagan elements of the celebration still existed, for the most part the Christian element was emphasized. Churches were decorated and plays concerning the Nativity were given. Carols were sung in the streets and lingers of the Virgin and Christ were carried about from house to house. There was feasting and merry-making, too, as well as religious ceremonies.

In the England of Shakespeare's time the Christmas festivities were very elaborate, lasting until Twelfth day, or Epiphany and during this time there was no work of any kind. So the "Merry Christmas" of Old England became established. This came the period of the Puritans whose straight-laced ideas gave them a keen distaste for Christmas festivities, especially those in which the pagan elements were most evident. So they prevailed upon parliament to prohibit such celebrations and Christmas was made a day of fasting and prayer instead of a day of feasting and fun. But after the Restoration the old celebrations came back, somewhat subdued for awhile, but eventually rather similar to what they had been before.

If the "Merry Christmas" of Old England with its Yule logs, mistletoe, holly, cheery Christmas carols, Christmas cards, plum puddings and mince pies and all of the other elements which combine to make it a season of gaiety, have served to change the original character of the holiday, it is equally true that other countries have contributed other traditions which help make it a joyous season. Germany has contributed the Christmas tree and Martin Luther is said to have been the first to set up a Christmas tree in that country. Holland has contributed the jolly old Santa Claus as the symbol of cheerful giving and the custom of hanging up Christmas stockings in which he is to put his gifts. The latter is an outgrowth of the custom of the Dutch children of placing their wooden shoes in the chimney corner on St. Nicholas eve (December 6) when the spirit of the good St. Nicholas (they called him Sinterklaas, which later became Santa Claus) made his rounds and left his gifts for them. This custom of hanging up stockings is also said to have originated in Russia from two customs. In east Russia, among the peasantry, there was a custom whereby a young girl discovered through divination whom she would have for her husband and the traditional formula in this divination was "Come and take my stockings off." Among the professional classes parents placed money in the stockings of their children at marriage as a gift for the other partner.

Although Holland is usually credited with being the contributor of Santa Claus, as a matter of fact, this symbol of Christmas is a composite character and under a variety of names he is a legacy from a number of nations. In Holland he is Sinterklaas, or San Nicolaas; in Germany he is Kris Kringle, a derivation from Krist Kindl, the Christ Child; and in France he is Bonhomme Noel or Pere Noel, Father Christmas. And in Italy, the children believe that he has a companion on his annual trip, a sort of Mrs. Santa Claus whom they know as La Befana, probably a modification of the Italian word for Epiphany.

But it must not be supposed that any one of the Christmas customs has been contributed by any one country exclusively. In nearly all of the Christmas traditions there are contributions from several nations and every country claims a share in most of them. America, the youngest of all nations, has inherited its Christmas customs from all of them, but it has, as we believe, improved upon many and contributed one or two of its own. The principal one, of course, is the Christmas turkey, for the turkey is "all-American." But as evidence of the fact that Christmas is truly an international holiday, consider these words of one writer on the history of Christmas: "We eat the Egyptian's goose—it may have changed to a turkey in America—as a sacrifice to the sun, they tell us. We hang the mistletoe of the Druids, burn the Yule log of the Nordic pagans. Holly, some authorities say, is our own, symbolizing the crowns of thorns the Christ wore in Golgotha. The red berries are drops of blood. We drink the wasabi bowl, some of us, handed to our lips by the Vikings. We decorate the sacred oak which, by the grace of St. Boniface, is an evergreen. We await the coming of the Germanic Santa Claus for our gifts. And we chant 'peace on earth, good will to all men,' which, after all, is the most important."

Tides in Earth's Surface

Like the seas, the earth's crust rises and falls in tides as a result of the attraction of the sun and moon. Dr. Walter D. Lambert, scientist of the coast and geodetic survey, asserts. These movements have never been measured, says Popular Mechanics Magazine, because instruments for the task have not yet been devised and complicated computations are involved, but scholars have established the existence of such movements beyond all reasonable doubt, he declares.

The Dolly Santa Brought

Joe's Christmas Jobmas

By H. Lucius Cook

TWO weeks before Christmas, Joe was elected to be offered a new job, a real position this time. For five years, since he was thirteen, he had worked for a photographer and was earning only sixteen dollars a week. It seemed to him that he would remain at that humble wage the rest of his life if he did not get out and do something right away. At eighteen a boy should be making good if he is ever going to—at least so Joe thought—and with a sick father and two younger brothers to help support, he really needed more. So when a competitive firm offered him twenty-five dollars a week, he jumped at the bigger opportunity and resigned his old place.

But Joe was no slacker and although he was "getting through" on Saturday night, the Saturday before Christmas, and though he had to be at his new place bright and early Monday morning, he stuck by his post with his former employer until all the "proofs" were out. That meant hours of slavery, for in the photographic world, practically the whole year's business is done between Thanksgiving and Christmas, and every one connected with it has to buckle down to work, nights as well as days. Thursday, Friday and Saturday nights, most of the men went to bed at all. At five in the morning they would skip over to a Turkish bath for a plunge, and recline on the divans for an hour. But seven o'clock found them back at the studio, developing, drying and retouching negatives, making proofs, and getting them mailed to customers. There can be no loafing on such a job as all the work must be done to order in a short time, and cannot be stocked up.

Joe showed his pluck in sticking with the gang, for the work was hard and no extra recompense went with it. He knew the extra work his pals would have to do if he should quit, and so for them he stuck it out. Such is the Christmas spirit in the shops, behind the scenes, where Christmas joy is made for others overnight, and tired comrades stand in line, too courageous, proud, and loving to desert each other though muscles ache and home lies call. Joe did not have to stay, but did—and got no extra pay except the satisfaction of it all when at ten o'clock Sunday morning the work was finished.

At lunch time Monday noon Miss Meechem of the studio found Joe standing on a street corner and stopped to talk with him. "How do you like your new place?" she asked. "I haven't one," he said. And then

The First Christmas

By H. Lucius Cook

In David's town of Bethlehem, Lamb of God, for many, His stable in the old town, Was born our Lord, that Christmas Day.

For all town of Bethlehem, With ridge of hills and cliffs so white, He strongly labored when the came, He sought, heralded, at night.

For Mary Mary, girl so fair, Among all other women blest, Who there, where animals were housed, Was born our Lord, that Christmas Day.

Beyond the gates of Bethlehem, Where green pastures Syrian sheep, Were watched by shepherds, lowly men, Whom angels awakened from their sleep.

They came not from proud Herod's court, Who heard the news on that great day, But lowly shepherds watching flocks, Who saw the great star point the way.

To preach the gospel to the poor, We came our Savior, Christ our Lord, Then let us, humbly, voices raise, And sing His praise with one accord. —St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

In answer to her further queries, for Joe was never over-talkative, he added, "The beasts! They said another boy had come last Monday just after I left there, and as he could begin at once they took him on, and had no place for me. I've been to every studio in town, and no one wants me now. It is too late, for after Christmas they have no more work. I don't know what I'll do."

"Do!" exclaimed Miss Meechem. "Do? Why, come right back to the old studio with me where you belong. They need you there. We miss you terribly. They can't pay you twenty-five, but sixteen and a sure thing is better than this treachery. They ARE beasts!"

"No one but Miss Meechem could have ever dragged poor Joe back to his old job, but false pride could never withstand her arguments, and a few minutes later Joe was in the office of his former employer.

Mr. Bangs was infuriated at the abuse the boy had had, and called his competitor on the phone to tell him what he thought. But first he sent Joe out to work, so that the boy would not hear the complimentary things he had to say, nor the abusive language that he used to his competitor. Then he slipped out of the studio for a few minutes and later that day there was delivered at Joe's door a large, mysterious package, plainly marked "Not to be opened until Christmas."

Joe did not have an increase then, but his job was permanent, and Santa Claus had delivered at his door much better things than he could have bought himself even with the extra pay that he had hoped to have. —St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Frankness, With Adequate Military Preparedness, Better Than Peace Treaties

By EDWARD E. SPAFFORD, Commander American Legion.

PEOPLE of this country more and more are coming to a realization that the last war did not end war. They realize that as a matter of fact only an armistice was signed. With the exception of a very few in this nation—the people are determined that when another war comes all of the resources of this nation shall be completely mobilized at the beginning of the war.

We should be warned by past experience and realize that the words of those who sit at the council tables only have such weight as is given by the power or force of arms which they represent. In 1922 we gave up 800,000 tons of new capital ships. Great Britain gave up 600,000 tons of old ships and Japan 325,000 tons of similar old junk. Today we stand probably third in naval values, but thanks is fervently given that the Geneva conference last summer opened the eyes of many thinking Americans, and we may look forward to this next congress to answer our prayers for adequate military preparedness.

Frankness and meeting people of other nations face to face does more to bring about a friendly feeling than all the peace treaties in the world. Contact breeds understanding. We have all seen war and we do not want to see another.

Instructors of youth of this nation must be filled with fervid patriotism, but textbooks must not breed hatred of other nations, although they must at the same time tell the story of sacrifices which have been made in the past in order that the present shall hold the most bountiful fullness for all our people.

Military Training in Schools Should Not Be on a Compulsory Basis

By REV. DR. REIDENBACH, Kansas City (Congregationalist).

I belong to the groups seeking peace, but I know the big-army-and-navy people are not all criminals. They believe that America must do as they teach, to preserve our national security. On the other hand, the peace people are not "Reds." They, too, are patriots. They believe their method will save our country and civilization.

One fact we must be clear-headed about is the drift toward imperialism. America is, at this time, exercising overlordship toward all the small Latin-American countries, including islands like Cuba, between ourselves and the Panama canal, with the single exception of Mexico.

I cannot rest easy about military training in our schools. I do not object to citizens' military camps, on a voluntary basis. I do object to it in the school system, and particularly to making it compulsory.

Europe has universal compulsory military service. We do not. Why not propose to Europe that all military service in peace times be on a volunteer basis? We have to build up bigger military forces because European nations have them. If they do not come to our standards, how would they justify their stand?

Old-Fashioned Virtues Continue to Have Definite Value in Business

By ERNEST ELMO CALKINS, Advertising Expert.

Profit is a by-product of doing right and the universal acceptance of this fact will relieve business from the necessity of laws, restrictions, commissions and regulation. Business will be intelligent enough to apply its own discipline from within, without "cares" or outside pressure, as soon as its true character is really understood—that of rendering a real service and filling a real need.

Before business can have a code, it must have conviction, and that conviction is: That altruism, unselfishness, generosity, honesty, sincerity, frankness—all that list of old-fashioned copy-book virtues—have a definite dollar and cents value in business.

We must learn—we are learning—that the confidence of the public is weakened if it is abused, that no immediate profit can compensate for the ultimate loss of confidence. This applies all along the line—what you say to your consumers, what you say to your distributors and what we, as advertising men, say to you.

Every Man's Faculties and Possessions Merely Things to Be Held in Trust

By ANGUS WATSON, English Capitalist.

A business man can be a Christian—not only a nominal Christian, but with a real effort to apply the principles laid down by Christ. The temptation of the employer is in times of depression to attempt to secure his profits by cutting down his labor costs. His other temptation is to provide for himself the largest income that his enterprise will stand, and with this gradually to cultivate a spirit of vulgar and unnecessary display. Christianity will teach him that all that he has and all that he is he holds in trust.

To have suggested a few years ago that a business man was engaged in industry with any motive other than the making of money would have invited a charge of insincerity; but today there are thousands of business men who realize that they should be rendering through their work, service to their fellows and to the community—the only justification for their existence.

Pronouncement of War as International Crime the Duty of the World

By REV. DR. MERRILL, New York (Episcopalian).

Men are severely condemned and punished if they talk peace in wartime. In my opinion, they ought to be more severely punished if they talk war in peace time. The most urgent thing confronting humanity is the problem of how to get rid of war.

The outlawry of war is a noble ideal. The pronouncement of war an international crime seems to be the ultimate to be done, just as dueling, slavery and piracy have been outlawed. Drake is a romantic figure to read about, but if anyone did today what he did in his age he would be clapped into jail.

We have to see more than the goal, however. We have to form our tactics in making a frontal attack against war. War is no monster we can slay. We can't do it that way. The best we can do is to build up the conditions of peace.

Improved Uniform International Sunday School Lesson

(By REV. P. B. FITZWATER, D.D., Dean Moody Bible Institute of Chicago.) (©, 1927, Western Newspaper Union.)

Lesson for December 25 CHRISTMAS LESSON.

LESSON TEXT—Luke 2:1-20. GOLDEN TEXT—Thou shalt call His name Jesus, for He shall save His people from their sins.

PRIMARY TOPIC—The Coming of the Christ Child. JUNIOR TOPIC—God Sends His Son to Earth. INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—The Prince of Peace. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Promised Era of Peace.

1. The Birth of Jesus (vv. 1-7). 1. Jesus' birth foretold (Mic. 5:2). Only a little while before the fulfillment of this prophecy which was made some seven hundred years before, there seemed little likelihood that Micah's words would come true. Jesus' mother was miles away from Bethlehem in Galilee. God moved the emperor to enforce the decree of taxation which brought Mary to the village at the proper time.

2. Jesus' birth announced to Mary and Joseph (Luke 1:26-39). Gabriel, the archangel, sent by God to the little town of Nazareth to Mary, a Jewish maiden who was betrothed to a carpenter in the village by the name of Joseph, solemnly announced that she should give birth to the Messiah and that this son should "be called Joseph's, but the child of the Holy Ghost (Matt. 1:18-21). Later the angel of the Lord appeared to Joseph also, making to him the same announcement and added that the child should be called Jesus, which means that Jehovah will save His people from their sins (Matt. 1:21).

3. The prediction fulfilled (v. 7). This took place at a most opportune time. It occurred when all systems of religion and immoral worship were tottering upon their foundations, therefore most suitable for the introduction of the gospel. The whole world being under the power of the Romans who then ruled it, made it possible for Christ's ministers to go from city to city and country to country unmolested. We can be assured that the Almighty rules in the whole universe and is never tardy in His administration.

11. Jesus Birth Announced to the Shepherds (vv. 8-14). 1. To whom (v. 8). Jesus' birth was announced to the shepherds who were keeping watch over their flocks by night. The fact that the glorious message was first sounded forth to them shows that poverty is no barrier to its reception. Their humble station in life and their being busy with common duties did not prevent them from hearing this glorious message from God Himself, Gleason, Ames and Elsham were all called of God from the activities of life. He never calls lazy people.

2. By whom (v. 9). The first gospel sermon was preached by an angel of the Lord. We thus see their interest in men and having part in the announcement of God's plan for their salvation. No doubt the angels beings earnestly sympathized with fallen, sin-cursed man.

3. The nature of the message (vv. 10, 11). It was good tidings of great joy. It was good tidings because the darkness of heathendom, which had so long covered the earth, was beginning to vanish. The casting out of Satan the prince of this world, was about to take place. Liberty was soon to be proclaimed to those who were in bondage. The way of salvation was to be open to all. No longer was the knowledge of God to be confined to the Jews, but offered to the whole world. Truly this was glorious news; so glorious that a multitude of the heavenly host accompanied this announcement with their song of praise.

111. The Shepherds Investigating (vv. 15-19). They did not stop to argue or raise questions, though these things were, no doubt, passing strange to them. They went immediately to Bethlehem, where they found everything just as represented. They had the privilege of first gazing upon the world's Savior, the very Lord of Glory. They returned with gratitude in their hearts, praising God for all these wonderful things which He had revealed unto them.

1V. The Shepherds' Witnessing (vv. 17-20). They found things as announced by the angels. When they beheld the Lord of Glory they could not remain silent, therefore went back praising God. Those who really hear the gospel message cannot be silent. Those who really hear the gospel must tell it out to others.

Trials That Never Come For every trial that God sends, He gives sufficient grace to bear it, but He promises no grace to bear anticipation with, and we little know how large a portion of our mental suffering arises from trials that never come.—Evangelical Tidings.

Gas Plant Planned for Laramie Laramie, Wyo.—The City Council has granted a twenty-five-year franchise to R. Y. Lisco, Jr., of Scottsbluff, Neb., for the erection and operation of an artificial or natural gas plant in this city. Lisco is to have the plant in operation by Dec. 1, 1928, and to lay eight miles of pipe. He deposited $10,000 for the carrying out of the undertaking. Laramie at present has no gas.

Congress Bore Eccentric Dress Washington.—Eccentric dress of the sort ascribed to congressmen by political cartoonists has all but disappeared. Conventional business and formal day attire is overwhelmingly the rule today. Except for the double-breasted white vest; wide black tie, long coat and broad-brimmed hat of Senator Heflin, Democrat, Alabama, the classic congressional costume was not in evidence for the opening days of the Seventieth Congress.

Boundary Lines Should Be Inspected Denver.—Periodical inspection of state boundary lines, as practiced in some eastern states, should be adopted throughout the country and rigidly enforced under engineering direction, Frank M. Johnson, United States supervisor of surveys, Denver, declares in a paper on boundary surveys, prepared for the American Society of Civil Engineers and recently published in their bulletin. Mr. Johnson says that sections of boundary lines crossing isolated stretches of desert and mountainous regions have become practically obliterated.

Famous Mission Closes Doors Denver.—The Sunning mission, a haven of shelter for unfortunates for the last twenty years, closed its doors last week. Wilho ragged, unshaven, "floaters" stood shivering around the entrance, wondering why workmen were carrying out their "favorite" chairs, it was rumored that Jim Goodheart, who has been superintendent of the mission for twenty years, has closed the place for good. Jim refused to make a statement, but according to his assistants, Jim is "broken" and funds for operation of the mission are depleted.

Kansas City Chosen by G. O. P. Washington.—The Republican national committee voted to hold the Republican national convention in Kansas City, Mo. The decision came after a bitter fight which ran through twenty ballots, the longest deadlock over a convention city in the history of the party. By voting for Kansas City, the delegates gave recognition to the political desirability of holding their convention in the heart of the farm belt, passing up the enticing appeals of San Francisco, which laid heavy emphasis upon its climate, scenic beauties, and the warm hospitality awaiting the delegates.

Harvard-Michigan Game Scheduled Ann Arbor, Mich.—Football relations between Harvard and Michigan, occasional rivals since 1871, will be resumed on a home-and-home basis in 1928 and 1929. Director of Athletics Fielding H. Yost announced here. The Wolverines will entertain the Crimson at Ann Arbor next year and travel to Cambridge in 1929. The Crimson's trip here will be the second in history that a Harvard football eleven has made west of the Allegheny mountains.

The Magic Ambassador

Santa Fe New Mexican:

In the twinkling of an eye, when a multitude of Mexicans gives hysterical acclaim to Chas. Lindbergh, when the president of Mexico hugs him, the feeling of the people of the United States toward Mexico is transformed instantly decades of enmity and forgotten, when friendliness arises, we have found the common point. They give a magnificent demonstration of affection for the personification of what we like to think is the real spirit and genius of America, the best of all that we have; and two national viewpoints are changed.

It is incredible that one boy should become a greater factor for peace in the world than all the leagues of nations and disarmament conferences, all the national and international organizations, all the propaganda of peoples.

In five minutes on Bourget field he wiped out a baseless bitterness between America and France.

In the space of time it took him to land on Valbuena Field he turned international misunderstanding into friendship.

If the тура Central and South America he can revolutionize the entire relation between the United States and the Latins.

Lindbergh will become a legend.

No Time for Doubtful Experiments

With a presidential election less than a year off it becomes more and more important that the voting public understand the basic ideals and principles that have made America's great prosperity and world leadership.

There will be the usual number of arguments advanced by vote-seeking politicians and radicals. Government ownership and free-trade advocates will have their say. Framers of harmful and foolish bills will attempt to gain a following for their vague theories.

It is the duty of every citizen to investigate and support measures that will insure a continuation of our business and industry. We are on the eve of a greater age than the world has ever seen. Great projects are being executed. The next president will have to consider such ever-growing problems as the tariff and taxation—both corporation and personal. He will have to stand as a rock against public ownership of industry if our constitutional rights are to be preserved. It is no time for doubtful experiments.

Fortunately, the American people can usually be counted upon to support principles that have been proven practical. Their votes have always been cast overwhelmingly in favor of conservative but progressive government.—The Manufacturer.

GENUINE NAVAJO INDIAN RUGS
 AN UNUSUAL GIFT WHICH WILL LAST A LIFETIME

The Rugs of the Navajo Indians are unlike any other rugs ever produced as art of weaving has been brought to a perfection with the tribe of the Southwest. The designs are of their own figures and symbols and are seen nowhere else. These Rugs are of a texture and quality that will outlast Oriental Rugs. The wool used is sheared from live sheep which insure strength and firmness. They will wear a lifetime and become heir looms. The time is not far distant when genuine Navajo Rugs will no longer be woven, as the old Squaws who do this work are getting fewer and the present generation does not take up the work. For this reason the rugs now on the market are much sought after by lovers of Indian Rugs.

Hickman Captured

Yesterday afternoon at 5:30, announcement was made over the radio of the capture of Ed Hickman, kidnapper and alleged slayer of little Marian Parker, aged 12, in Los Angeles last week and Dr. F. H. Johnson phoned the news to this office on its receipt. The message came from Pendleton, Oregon, and was substantially as follows, the same being corroborated by this morning's papers.

Hickman was arrested in Echo, Oregon, about 30 miles from Pendleton, after a spectacular automobile chase along the Columbia river. He had a sawed-off shot gun between his knees, but as he alighted, after the arrest, the gun dropped to the running board. He was taken from Echo to Pendleton, where he was searched, $1400 of the money Mr. Parker had paid him taken from him and a detailed confession obtained.

He stated to the police that the girl was killed last Friday and that it was the work of a fiend, but refused to give the name of the one who did the killing.

He stated that there was no anesthetic used during the dissection of the body, and that the murderer strangled her with a wire.

He said that the murder was not committed in the Bellevue apartment in Los Angeles. After following a news report that Hickman had fled in that direction, officers set out on the trail and had stopped in the road to light their pipes, when chief Gurdane noticed a green car approaching. They gave chase and covered him with their guns. He surrendered without protest.

Hickman, when lodged in jail, at Pendleton, laughed hysterically at the accusation that he was the murderer, but later broke down and confessed his identity, but said that he did not commit the murder.

Trauman J. W. Vickery, who was injured some time ago in Texas, has returned here, but will not be able to enter service for several weeks. Three fingers on his left hand were injured, but are healing rapidly.

The Magic Ambassador

Santa Fe New Mexican:

In the twinkling of an eye, when a multitude of Mexicans gives hysterical acclaim to Chas. Lindbergh, when the president of Mexico hugs him, the feeling of the people of the United States toward Mexico is transformed instantly decades of exasperation are forgotten, warm friendliness arises, we have found the common point. They give a magnificent demonstration of affection for the perpetuation of what we like to think is the real spirit and genius of America, the best of all that we have; and two national points are changed.

It is incredible that one boy should become a greater factor for peace in the world than all the leagues of nations and disarmament conferences, all the national and international organizations, all the propaganda of peoples.

In five minutes on Bourget he will be wiped out a baseless bitterness between America and France.

In the space of time it took him to land on Valbuena Field he turned international misunderstanding into friendship.

If he tours Central and South America he can revolutionize the entire relation between the United States and the Latins.

Lindbergh will become a legend.

No Time for Doubtful Experiments

With a presidential election less than a year off it becomes more and more important that the voting public understand the basic ideals and principles that have made America's great prosperity and world leadership.

There will be the usual number of arguments advanced by vote-seeking politicians and radicals. Government ownership and free-trade advocates will have their say. Framers of harmful and foolish bills will attempt to gain a following for their vague theories.

It is the duty of every citizen to investigate and support measures that will insure a continuation of our business and industry. We are on the eve of a greater age than the world has ever seen. Great projects are being executed. The next president will have to consider such ever-growing problems as the tariff, and taxation--both corporation and personal. He will have to stand as a rock against public ownership of industry if our constitutional rights are to be preserved. It is no time for doubtful experiments.

Fortunately, the American people can usually be counted upon to support principles that have been proven practical. Their votes have always been cast overwhelmingly in favor of conservative but progressive government.--The Manufacturer.

GENUINE NAVAJO INDIAN RUGS

AN UNUSUAL GIFT WHICH WILL LAST A LIFETIME

The Rugs of the Navajo Indians are unlike any other rugs ever produced as art of weaving has been brought to a perfection with this tribe of the Southwest. The designs are of their own figures and symbols and are seen nowhere else. These Rugs are of a texture and quality that will outlast Oriental Rugs. The wool used is sheared from live sheep which insures strength and durability. They will wear a lifetime and because their looms. The time is not far distant when genuine Navajo Rugs will no longer be woven, as the old Squaws who do this work are getting fewer and the present generation does not take up the work. For this reason the rugs now on the market are much sought after by lovers of Indian Rugs.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Opening of New Congress—Kansas City Wins the G. O. P. Convention.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD
PRIMED for lively fights on various issues, the Seventieth congress began its first session on Monday. The house immediately re-elected Nicholas Longworth, but organization of the senate and committee assignments in both houses was delayed. With the opening of the senate on Tuesday came the first gun in the battle over the seating of Frank L. Smith and W. S. Vard, senators-elect from Illinois and Pennsylvania respectively. Norris of Nebraska led off with a resolution summarily refusing the two membership in the senate. Counter resolutions by their friends, that they be allowed to take the oath of office and that the charges of corrupt election practices be referred to the committee on privileges and elections, were offered. On Wednesday Senator Borah had his say in support of the latter resolutions and the senate, by a vote of 63 to 28, decided that Smith could not take the oath. Later the same action was taken in the case of Vard. Both cases were referred to the Reed committee on campaign expenditures.

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE'S message, read to congress Tuesday, was a straightforward, business-like document, setting forth the needs of the country as he saw them and advising as to the future. He did not withdraw a step in his attitude on controversial questions and consequently the message in its entirety was pleasing only to his thick and thin supporters. The program he recommended for the nation may be summarized thus: Farm relief—creation of a federal farm board to administer a revolving fund to aid co-operatives. Flood control—Construction of dikes, spillways and aids to navigation in the lower Mississippi. Taxation—Moderate reduction as recommended by Secretary Mellon. Merchant marine—stop further building and turn ships over to private ownership. Inland navigation—Projection of the Gulf-to-the-Atlantic waterway through the St. Lawrence. Panama canal—Construction of $12,000,000 dam at Alhajuela for flood protection. National defense—An army large enough for protection of the nation with generous supply of officers; more cruisers, airplane carriers and submarines for the navy but no participation in a navy building race. The President also urged strict enforcement of prohibition and again asked that the Chief Executive be given authority to act during coal strikes. In the matter of foreign relations he recommended understandings with other nations toward outlawing war and negotiations of covenants not out of harmony with the Constitution. The President's farm relief proposition did not at all suit the corn belt men; his recommendations as to taxes was at variance with the ideas of the ways and means committee, which on the same day introduced its bill calling for a tax reduction of $232,736,000, much greater than was favored by Secretary Mellon; the limitation of food control work to the lower Mississippi was contrary to the views of a great many who advocate a much more comprehensive policy; the "big navy" men were not satisfied with his program for fighting ships, and both parties are split on his merchant marine policy.

WEDNESDAY President Coolidge submitted his annual budget message, and again warned congress that taxes should not be reduced, by more than $236,000,000. The budget he offered for the fiscal year 1929 calls for total expenditures, exclusive of those of the postal service, amounting to $3,556,897,081. This is about $64,000,000 less than the estimated expenditures of the current fiscal year of 1928, but represents an increase of about $68,000,000 over actual disbursements of the fiscal year 1927.

On the basis of estimated receipts, for the fiscal year 1929 of $3,320,897,314, President Coolidge predicts a surplus of $232,546,283, assuming no change in the present revenue laws. He estimates the surplus for the current fiscal year at $454,283,800, this figure representing the difference between estimated receipts of $4,075,668,091 and expenditures amounting to $3,621,314,285.

The President allows approximately $645,000,000 for the purely defense needs of the nation during the year ending June 30, 1929, an increase of approximately $20,000,000 over the sum made available for defense last year. According to the President's figures, navy estimates for the next fiscal year are $392,107,020, an increase of $14,293,043 over this year. For the army the budget estimates provide $291,331,833. The navy total, however, contains approximately $3,000,000 for retired pay for officers and enlisted men, an item not included in the army total.

WHEN the Republican national committee got together—with two new anti-La Follette members surprisingly elected in Wisconsin—it first called on the President in the White House, and Mr. Coolidge made quite a long address in which he quite definitely removed himself from consideration for the nomination in 1928. His words were:

"This is naturally the time to be planning for the future. The party will soon place in nomination its candidate to succeed me. To give time for mature deliberation I stated to the country on August 2 that I do not choose to run for President in 1928. My statement stands. No one should be led to suppose that I have modified it. My decision will be respected. After I had been eliminated, the party began and should vigorously continue the serious task of selecting another candidate from among the numbers of distinguished men available."

The committee then took up the question of the convention city, hearing the offers of the several contestants. Chairman Butler aroused a good deal of animosity by declaring his preference for Kansas City, and a hot fight between that city and San Francisco resulted. On the twentieth ballot Kansas City won, and the committee at once issued a call for the convention to meet there on June 12. Mr. Coolidge's "elimination" of himself was followed by a statement by Charles Evans Hughes that he was not to be considered a candidate, and, though Senator Willis announced that he was willing to accept the honor, there were left but three major contenders for the nomination—Frank O. Lowden, Herbert Hoover and Vice President Dawes. The selection of Kansas City was regarded as rather favorable to Lowden and Dawes.

Under the terms of the call for the convention the basis of representation will be the same as in 1924. There will be one delegate for each congressional district and one additional delegate for each district polling 10,000 or more votes for the Republican candidate for President in 1924 or Republican candidate for congress in 1924. Then there will be four delegates at large for each state and three additional delegates for each state carried by the Republican ticket in 1924. There will be 1,099 delegates in the convention, compared with 1,100 in 1924. Kentucky and Texas gain three each, while Arkansas, Oklahoma, and Wisconsin lose three each, Tennessee eight; Georgia, North Carolina, and Virginia two each, and Alabama, Louisiana, and New York one each.

WARNING was issued to the Republican and Democratic parties by the Anti-Saloon league at its meeting in Washington, that the league membership will support only those candidates in state and national elections whose utterances, acts and records prove them to be loyal supporters of the Volstead act. To win the support of the organization the parties must nominate men whose loyalty to the dry act cannot be questioned.

After a bitter fight between the supporters of F. Scott McBride, national superintendent of the Anti-Saloon league, and Ernest H. Cherrington, general manager of the league's publishing activities, over the question of whether force or persuasion should be the major weapon used in the future by the league in its fight against repeal of the Eighteenth amendment.

McBride was re-elected and Cherrington was made director of a new department of education, publicity and research. E. S. Shumaker, Indiana superintendent who is under indictment for contempt of the Indiana Supreme court, was dropped from the executive committee.

MEMBERS of the powerful American Farm Bureau federation, in convention in Chicago, listened to an address by General Pershing on the place of agriculture in a national defense program, and liked his views so well that they told him they would like to vote for him for President of the United States. He smiled, but declined, to comment on this incipient boom. The federation adopted a resolution insisting that legislation which "contains the principles embodied in the McNary-Haugen bill, with such improvements as experience and good judgment may suggest shall again be passed by congress."

Another resolution asked a change in the tariff act so that the United States tariff commission may more efficiently serve agriculture in the cases before it.

SECRETARY MELLON in his annual report says that, notwithstanding a decline in business activity, underlying conditions are sound. "Business activity began in the spring months of this year to fall below the totals of last year," says the report. "As a result of this recession business is now being conducted on a basis that conforms more nearly to the normal expectancy, as judged from the regular rate of growth of the country. While business is not as active as in most of 1928, it can hardly be said to be subnormal, and the underlying fundamentals appear to be sound."

"Another indication of healthy business conditions is the recent recovery in commodity prices, due in the main to the rise in agricultural prices. The growing stability of prices in Europe, moreover, is favorable to our export commodities."

CHARLES MARTINDALE, master in chancery of Indianapolis, filed in the United States District court a report in which the Standard Oil Company of Indiana and fifty other oil concerns are held not guilty of violating the Sherman anti-trust law by a monopoly of trade. Martindale holds that there is no evidence of an existing conspiracy in restraint of trade, maintenance of a monopoly, price fixing or pooling of patent rights. Dismissal for lack of equity of the suit instituted by the government three years ago was recommended.

LITHUANIA and Poland presented their complaints against each other to the council of the League of Nations in Geneva and asked for relief. Premier Waldemaras appeared for Lithuania first before representatives of Great Britain, France, Germany, Italy and Japan, and refused to budge from his position. He said he was ready to give the council every guarantee of Lithuania's pacific intentions and his willingness to set up a neutral zone between Lithuania and Poland, but he could not go into the question of immediately restoring diplomatic relations with Poland or allowing the Poles untrammelled entry into Lithuania.

Next day Waldemaras told the council how Lithuania has been continually menaced by Poland since the establishment of the little republic, and recounted the alleged Polish actions in support of Lithuanian rebellions. Foreign Minister Zaleski of Poland said Waldemaras' charges and fears were based on gossip and that his country extended the fraternal hand of friendship to Lithuania. Finding the whole matter too difficult for immediate decision, the council referred it to Van Blockland of Holland for a report.

JAPAN'S plan to borrow $40,000,000 from J. P. Morgan & Co. for the benefit of the Japanese owners of the South Manchurian railway has been killed. All the Chinese factories had protested against it and the disapproval of the United States was considered certain. Under the American notes of May, 1915, Japan is required to obtain American approval of any Manchurian loan to which the Chinese have not consented. The Japanese are greatly disappointed by this failure.

Light of Scriptures Given to the World

Through the efforts of the American and the British Bible association it would seem that there is no possibility that any human could fail to know of the Book.

The British and Foreign Bible society issued the Scriptures last year in a new language once every 20 days. The list includes the entire Bible in 144 languages, the New Testament in 138 others, and at least one complete book of Scripture in 311 forms of speech.

During 1929 over 1,500,000 copies of the Bible were circulated in continental Europe, 438,000 in Africa, 412,000 in Canada, 150,000 in Australia, 25,700 in New Zealand, 483,000 in South America and the West Indies, 800,000 in India, 64,000 in Ceylon, 104,000 in Malaya, and the East Indies, 230,000 in Japan, 64,000 in Korea, and 4,122,000 in China.

Lamp Rays Employed to Detect Forgeries

A lamp, manufactured by a German, gives out invisible rays that read secret writing, test food, and detect forgeries.

This wonderful lamp is made of quartz, to permit the passage of ultra-violet light, and is equipped with a filter which absorbs all the visible rays of the spectrum. When the powerful "black light" of the lamp falls on any one of a huge class of substances, the substance "tells its story" by giving off a deep purple, green, or brilliant orange light.

Different kinds of papers glow with different colors under ultra-violet rays, depending on how, and of what, they are made. Thus it is easy to detect the genuineness of bank notes or rare postage stamps by comparing under the rays the one in doubt with others known to be authentic.

Both Right

I lately complained of a lady who took the pronunciation "to-may-to" out of my mouth, and called it "to-mah-to."

A gentleman writes we are both right. One of the best modern dictionaries gives "to-may-to" the preference; in fact, says "to-may-to" is the proper pronunciation, in the United States; the English prefer "to-mah-to."

Here it is again; two people on exactly opposite sides of a question, and both right.

I have noticed it in many other things.—How's Monthly.

Golf Playing at Night With Luminous Balls

It looked at first like a jubilee (bratton of some kind, as flare a flare streaked the night horizon Van Cortlandt Park golf course, New York city.

But these rocket-like streaks were nothing other than "luminous" balls being tried out by their inventor M. J. Bloomer, scientist of Colgate university. These luminous balls, like their light for ten minutes after being hit from the tee, and thus, with the aid of electric lights over greens, the night becomes as day the insatiable golfer. Sportsman's picture additional possibilities—night golf with the aid of this ball; illumination of tee flags by employing the piercing rays of the now-popular neon light which can be seen at great distance and through fog, mist or smoke.

In his experiments with the luminous ball, Mr. Bloomer drove off the balls from the first tee and located of them within six minutes. The huge glow worms they nestled among grass, leaf and tree far down the fairways and in the rough.

Romances of Industry

More than 60 subjects involved the romantic task of taking wealth from underground are depicted in series of motion pictures prepared by the bureau of mines, says Popul Mechanics Magazine, and elaborate equipment, including portable lighting facilities that furnish 12,000,000 candle power, has been devised for the task. One of the illuminating units is huge searchlight somewhat like the used on airplane landing fields. Fifty trunks of lighting apparatus are employed. In filming the "Story of Copper" many of the reels were taken 8,000 feet below the surface.

NOT TOO GOOD FOR HER FAMILY

(By D. J. Walsh.)

ELLEN TURNER brushed the cover of the beefsteak pie with milk and smiled at the other woman who stood watching her. "I guess there isn't another thing I can do to it, is there?" she said with a slight expression of satisfaction on her plump, fair face.

Julia Warren's dark eyes rested upon the tempting pie. One could see it coming from the oven, brown, fragrant, delicious, such a rare specimen of culinary skill as only love and careful thought may accomplish.

"That's a perfectly absurd pie to make for three persons," Julia said slowly. "There are materials enough in it for three ordinary pies. I don't see how you can afford to use so much butter at the price it is, either. I am afraid, dear, you are hopelessly extravagant when it comes to preparing food." She turned toward the door. "I am going down to Postwick's to look at a rug. I must have a new one for my living room. The rug I want is expensive, but I tell Bert he should not complain. I've saved nearly enough money to buy it myself."

As Julia went down the back walk Ellen stood looking at her thoughtfully from the window. Julia was slender, gracefully agile and charming in her fur-trimmed coat and bright hat, Ellen, who was a few pounds overweight, sighed. They needed a new living room rug, too. Without doubt she could have one if she saved the way Julia did, but somehow she never could. Her household allowance was gone at the end of the week. It cost a lot to feed the three of them, somehow.

"I suppose I am extravagant, perhaps sinfully so," she said to herself. She was taking the pie from the oven when her twelve-year-old son Donald burst in from school. His eyes fell upon the dish and he paused.

"I say, mother! That's a peach. What's in it? Beefsteak? Hooray! I hope dad won't be late for supper."

Ellen looked at the handsome, healthy boy admiringly. She had no cause to complain of Donald. He came as near being a model son as a woman could wish.

Dad was on time for supper and around the pie the small family sat down in the best of spirits. Donald told of some funny things that had happened to him at school and his father roared. Across the table the parents' eyes met in mutual delight in their offspring. Afterward in the living room while Donald listened in at the small radio set he had bulldozed and had devoured the evening paper Ellen lifted her eyes from her sewing to study the shabby room. It was shabby, but clean and homelike. There were books, comfortable chairs, a lounge to roll upon if one felt weary. A dear, ugly room quite unlike Julia's beautiful living room across the way.

The door opened and a girl came in. She was slender, dark, the picture of Julia.

"Mother's got a headache," she said, "so I've come over to get out of her way. Don, will you help me with my algebra? I'm stuck."

"Did your mother get her rug, Evelyn?" Ellen asked.

"I guess so," Evelyn answered indifferently.

Julia telephoned Ellen to come over and see the rug next day. It was unmistakably beauty.

"I need another lamp, so I'm going to save for that," Julia announced. "Then I shall have things to suit me—very neatly—will you excuse me an instant until I telephone the grocery? There are some things Evelyn and her father talk about eating, but I have them just the same. I will not pamper their appetite when it comes to articles of diet."

Ellen said nothing, whereas she might have said much, but she saw that Julia was in a state of nervous tension.

An hour later Donald came home bringing Evelyn with him. He put his arm about his mother whispering in her ear.

"Mother! Can Evelyn stay to supper? Her father's going to stay down town and there isn't anything but a can of something in sight in their kitchen."

Evelyn stayed, after receiving her mother's permission, of course. Julia, hurrying to get ready for a bridge party, was only too glad to be relieved. There were only pancakes and sirup, but the youngsters didn't complain.

"We never have pancakes," Evelyn said. "Mother says they're smoky and she won't have smoky things in the kitchen now that it's just been done over."

Three days later Ellen was called in haste to Julia's side. Julia had collapsed. Bert Warren dashed home from work; the doctor was summoned.

It was not a case for the hospital, Doctor Jones said gravely. What Mrs. Warren needed was rest, good food, quiet. He would bring a trained nurse.

Ellen saw Julia every day, although she was kept away from everybody else.

"Doctor Jones raves because I am so thin," Julia cried. "But how can I look decent in my clothes otherwise? And food is so expensive. I'm sure I've tried to economize, I've saved and saved. And now this is the pay I get for it, Ellen"—she seized Ellen's hand—"you won't let Mary Peck take cakes in my lovely white-and-blue kitchen, will you?"

"No," Ellen promised.

"And you'll see that Evelyn doesn't put her school books on my jolished table or track mud on the new rug?"

"Oh, my dear," Ellen said, "stop bothering about such things. Just get well."

"I've saved so hard to get my lovely things," Julia mourned. "It will kill me if, when I get up, I find them marred in any way."

"You shall not. I'll see to that," Ellen promised.

She consulted with Mary Peck and Evelyn and her father.

"You'd better come over and get your lessons with Don evenings," she told Evelyn.

"Oh, may I?" Evelyn's eye sparkled.

"I do love your living room, dear Mrs. Turner. It's so cozy and homelike. Ours is too nice to use. When I grow up and—get married—the young girl flushed—"I shall keep house just the way you do. I shall have nothing too good for my family and I shall let them have all the beefsteak pies and pancakes they want." Evidently Don had been boasting. Ellen smiled at the thought.

Julia recovered with the aid of many fresh eggs, much cream and milk. The doctor was stern.

"I wish you'd talk to Mrs. Warren, Ellen," he said. "Tell her she's got to get on a different track—fewer fine rugs and more good food. Make it plain."

Ellen made it plain. It was a hard task, but she accomplished it as only she could.

"You mean I've been starving myself in order to save on my grocery bill?" Julia cried angrily. But her anger soon cooled. After all she had some common sense and her long, expensive illness had taught her many things.

A week later Evelyn came bounding into the kitchen where Ellen was making another beefsteak pie.

"We're going to have beefsteak pie, too, for supper!" the girl cried. "You just ought to see the butter mother used in making it! And, oh, dearest Mrs. Turner, may Don come over and study with me tonight? Mother says we may use the living room all we want. She says," added Evelyn joyously, "there isn't going to be anything in the house too good for her family after this."

"Antibodies" to Blame for Peculiar Dislikes

That one man's meat is another man's poison is more than a proverb. It's an age-old mystery to which medical science is only just finding the key, says Popular Science Monthly. This mystery involves the entire world of idiosyncrasies, in which persons grow violently ill at the passing of a horse, or, as in the case of the late Lord Roberts, become intensely disturbed at the presence of a cat. It is a world in which persons feel positive discomforts at the sight of certain colors or the subtle diffusion of curious smells.

Who of us does not know some one who cannot eat eggs, or crabs, or oysters, lobsters, almonds, onions, tomatoes, cucumbers, strawberries, fish, honey, or milk, without becoming instantly ill? Every doctor knows of patients who have an unconquerable aversion to certain drugs or chemicals, such as quinine, morphine, potassium iodide. Others cannot breathe the wood dust, or pollen from certain flowers and grasses.

Recent investigations have given new insight into these peculiar reactions, and scientists have succeeded in making sufferers temporarily immune to some of them, besides conceiving an amazing theory to account for the phenomena. This theory is as follows:

Little specks of chemical dynamite called "antibodies" are present in the bodies of many people, particularly nervous persons. There are different kinds of antibodies, and each has its specific "antigen," or poison. Fish may be an antigen for one kind of antibody; the smell of horses for another. Whatever the cause, when the antigen is introduced into the body it behaves like a fuse cap and sets off the dynamite-like chemicals in the antibody—and the unfortunate person whose stomach is being made into a chemical laboratory suffers acutely.

At one time scientists imagined that the individuals who were susceptible to certain foods were, perhaps, naturally weak, and the foods poisoned them in some simple, direct way. Then a case occurred that completely upset their beliefs and indicated that one man's pet aversions could be transferred to another.

A cab driver was injured in an accident, and a blood transfusion was necessary to save his life. When he left the hospital and climbed into his old seat on the cab, he discovered to his chagrin that though he had spent all his life driving horses, he could no longer endure being near one. The doctors discovered that the person who gave the blood necessary to save his life had a profound aversion to horses. The obvious conclusion was, the idiosyncrasy had been transferred in the transfusion.

Subsequent experiments have led scientists generally to accept the theory of antibodies.

Shaving Long Practiced

The Romans commenced shaving in the fifth century B. C., and Scipio Africanus is said to have been the first Roman to submit to the daily ministrations of the barber. The Roman emperors shaved until the time of Hadrian, who permitted his beard to grow to conceal a bad scar.

Howe About—By ED HOWE

Ball syndicate. WNU service.

There is scarcely a neighborhood anywhere not disturbed by some one practicing on a musical instrument, but we have almost no musicians, and no music.

Our methods of learning are shiftless. In my neighborhood a boy is trying to learn to play the saxophone. His practicing consists of playing "Old Black Joe" twenty minutes a day and his mother is compelled to drive him to that.

Every day he tries "Star Spangled Banner," but in six months has been unable to "get it."

His mother, his teacher, do not know the boy is not learning music.

When it comes to money, the meanest men seem to have the same habits as capitalists and middle class people. When a pirate becomes powerful, he does not divide equally with his associates; it was Captain Kidd's money that was hidden. Captain Kidd had the same connected with his forays; no one recalls any of the lesser rogues who pillaged with him. Bad men seem to be as stingy as the good.

I lately picked up a book containing the history of a certain philosopher. Where did he get this or that notion, doctrine, or belief? In following the investigation, the writer of the book examined philosophy as far back as history goes, with the final conclusion that the famous man originated nothing at all; he, indeed, confessed hatred of a certain predecessor because he had written everything worth writing. And the philosopher who had written everything worth writing probably gained his wisdom from old men and boys.

If a man is out of a job, it has always been his business to get one. God Almighty made the rule, and weak men cannot change it. The good Lord also says that if a man can't get four dollars a day, he should work for three until he is able to demonstrate that he is worth four, five, ten or fifty. We hear much of the economic question in England. The trouble there is men refuse to accept work at God's scale.

As a race becomes more practical with age, the credits and debits of love are gone over with more candor and wisdom. Some of the debits are very hard on both sides; some say worse with women than with men. Still, love sometimes slaps a man pretty hard, too.

I recently heard a young man say he never had a chance. . . . I have known him all his life; he has never had anything else; chances have come in his way every day, and been neglected by him.

Parents in a little Western town lately held a meeting, and passed resolutions declaring children have too many amusements. "We have no control of our children," the resolutions stated. "Welfare workers are bringing them up, and we can do nothing with them." I'm glad parents are beginning to revolt; they should have done so long ago. Instead of benefiting homes, welfare workers are ruining them.

In a certain town a certain man is president of a certain club which meets weekly for luncheon, and to listen to a prominent speaker. The president conceived the notion of having the club get behind a certain benefit ball. Every member was given a certain number of tickets to sell, and no excuses accepted. The papers were full of the affair for days and weeks. "Let every man do his duty; the good name of the town is at stake"—that sort of thing. Merchants were boycotted unless they took advertising in a benefit ball program; none of the old tricks were neglected. A parade was held to boom the sale of tickets, and everyone in it felt and looked ridiculous. Finally the ball was given and the expenses were so great that the total income did not equal them.

I have been indignant for weeks because a cheap writer referred to manufacturing, commerce and agriculture as "the lower activities."

I read because I occasionally encounter a good thing. Recently I encountered a sentence which made reference to "the indestructible sanity of the self-taught." It is a good line. Another man writing of a dull day, referred to "the gaunt clock gnawing at the long afternoon." Both these authors were dull in spots.

In everything excess is one of our most cruel enemies. We overdo every good thing we discover. Our modern discoveries would be much more useful than they are did we not always overdo them.

A Spaniard says one result of "suffrage" is that men who formerly became bankrupt by spending their money on actresses, go broke by spending their money now on their wives and daughters.

The more women admire a man, the more they peek at and advise him.

Carrizozo and Capitan Split Bill

The H. S. Capers split the two game series with Capitan Saturday night, the boys winning 23-25, while the girls lost 17-13. Both games were just as close as the score indicated. In the girls' game the score was tied 5-5 at the end of the quarter; 10-10 at the half and Carrizozo was ahead 12-10 when Ruby Partella was carried from the floor because of

Old Heads Defeated

Monday night the H. S. boys' team played the town team composed of Jim Kelsey, Walter La Fleur, Marshall Beck, Ernest and Alfredo Lopez and Clint Branum, all of whom have played on the high school team in preceding years and have played some in college. The H. S. boys won 40 to 23. The guards were fast and fairly accurate, playing a clean game, but the superior teamwork of the H. S. boys was readily apparent. The passing of Gallegos, Cooper, Lammon, the floor work of F. Lopez and the close guarding of Chief Lemon gave the little boys a good advantage over the old heads.

To Our Friends And Customers

Two thousand years ago three Wise Men, being to find the fulfillment of a great promise, followed a star across the hills and plains of Palestine. Gifts, rare and beautiful, they laid at the feet of One who was sent that the prophecies of old might come to pass.

Every year for twenty centuries, the Christian world has commemorated this event by the giving of gifts and by the exchange of a simple word of greeting, "Merry Christmas." Though old as Christianity itself, it is always new and each year gives a new significance to the day.

While pausing in our work to wish you the Merriest of Merry Christmases and the Happiest of all New Years, the officers of this bank, add the wish that we may be of help to you during the coming year in bringing about the realization of your hopes and ambitions.

MERRY CHRISTMAS!
