

Famous Mining Strikes

By THOMAS E. STEWARD

WNU Service

Cripple Creek
 ON THE Fourth of July, 1892, a householder named Stratton, who gave odd moments to prospecting, was in Colorado Springs preparing to celebrate. Suddenly something that his mind had been working on seemed to become clear. He got on his horse, rode at headlong speed to Cripple Creek and sank a pick into a granite ledge. A few days later when his samples had been assayed he found himself in possession of a claim running 3890 a ton in gold and silver. And he was discoverer of one of the richest strikes ever made in the history of mining.

Stratton's hunch at Cripple Creek was not mere luck. He was one of many prospectors who had been working the region, hoping to find rich treasure. Every now and then these men picked up a piece of "float," large or carried away from its natural vein by mountain torrents. These pieces of float were of surprising richness, and Stratton was only one of several who had been figuring out which part of the nearby country might be the lode or parent vein. He had gone over the territory as thoroughly as possible and had eliminated in his mind ledge after ledge until he came down to one. That was the one he thought of that morning in Colorado Springs, and it was the right one. Prior to Stratton's historic strike, the Cripple Creek district had endured a bad name. Some placer gold had been washed out, but there had been a number of reported strikes that had been proved false. Miners and prospectors were wary of the district. This may have been one reason why it stood undiscovered until a bare generation ago. For miles around the only building was the old Bennett & Myers Broken Box ranch, whose ranchhouse still stands in the south corner of the town.

Bob Womack had prospected Poverty gulch, famous in Cripple Creek history, before the arrival of Stratton. Through Womack, Stratton had met one Dick Houghton, a veteran mountaineer and prospector, and it was Houghton who put him on the trail of his famous strike.

Meanwhile scores of mines were sunk in the Cripple Creek district. By 1900 the annual output in precious metals was $13,000,000.

Compilations by the United States Geological survey indicate that the Cripple Creek district produced $154,625,805 worth of gold between 1891 and 1905, together with which 737,626 fine ounces of silver were recovered. The survey's figures are those of the director of the United States mint.

Cripple Creek gains added interest from the fact that it was the last of the great bonanza strikes and gold rushes prior to the Klondike rush of 1896.

HOWE ABOUT—

By ED HOWE

(Copyright by The Bell Syndicate, Inc.)

Judges and juries are as liberal toward woman litigants as they are toward farmers who sue the railroads for damages. I know a husband who sued his wife for divorce, claiming she was ruining him with extravagant and unnecessary bills. These amounted to four hundred dollars a month. But the court promptly allowed her $500 temporary alimony. In addition to attorney's fees. The husband was about the maddest man ever seen around the courthouse. He had asked relief from a burden and his burden was increased a hundred dollars a month.

I know a persistent drunkard who quit drinking from becoming disgusted with himself. Also a man who quit smoking for the same reason. The drunkard said quitting was easy; the smoker said it was a terrible task.

The great controversy is, after all, between the workers and the idlers, since it concerns money, social position, food, clothing; all the real things of life. It therefore becomes universal, and brings out all the devilishness there is in human nature.

And the idlers fight the workers with all the enthusiasm applied to a holy war. They are wrong, and must know it, but in their attempts to plunder the worthy, they use more grand terms than the workers use in defense. A majority of books are devoted to attacks on industry; an Englishman who has made a careful study of the subject says the real workers have almost no literature; everything in print is colored with the pot and brush of the loafers.

Every legitimate worker who wrangles in fair competition for the world's dollars probably carries two idlers on his back. Many of them are children, necessarily dependent; many are women who do not do their fair share; many others are able-bodied men who are only schemers.

All these watch and criticize the workers who have the pocketbook, and who, from necessity, must make their money go as far as possible. No idler is fair with thrift, care, sense.

Everything from which we suffer today in a good idea overloaded.

If an individual overloads himself the penalty is personal; but if public men overload a good idea, we all pay a penalty.

Leaders complain that the general idea of people have no sense. It is the business of the real leaders to teach the people better sense, by example. This they failed to do.

Bedtime Story for Kiddies

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER.

Mr. Sun was having hard work on this day to keep it warm for the children who were picking spring flowers...

"They have been thinking lately that they were all through with the cold weather," he said. Now Mr. North Wind was usually called Mr. Wind. He liked that better, because it made it appear that there was only one wind—at least only one wind of any real importance.

"You Mustn't Get Discouraged," said the gold, old, generous soul that I am. "I have always stuck to my friends anyway and blown them about so others could enjoy them."

"Oh," sighed Mr. Sun, "I remember all your visitors. What work I did have to do this winter! Oh dear, oh dear. I almost feel as if I couldn't shine any more, thinking of how tired I sometimes get."

"Dear me," said the little girl. "I am afraid it is going to rain, and I won't be able to get my flowers. But, never mind, I shall go anyway, I think that Mr. Sun looks as if he had only gone behind a cloud for a minute."

"That's the way to talk about me," said Mr. Sun, beaming and shining again with all his might. "I do like to be appreciated. That's what I like. To have the children glad to see me and to have them feel badly when they think I have gone away."

"This is just a little cold snap I am giving you to let you know that I'm still thinking about you!" Mr. Wind laughed one of his chilly laughs.

How to Make Strawberry Sun Preserves

Finest Strawberry Preserves Are Those in Which Sirup is Thickened by Sun's Rays.

(Prepared by the Bureau of Home Economics, United States Department of Agriculture.)

Many people think that the finest strawberry preserves are those in which the sirup is thickened by the sun's rays instead of by cooking over a fire. The flavor is more like that of the fresh berries, and the color is unusually fine.

economies tells how to make these sun preserves:

- 2 cups small berries (about 1 pound)
2 pounds selected berries
2 pounds sugar (granulated)

Select large ripe solid fruit, wash well, and core. Crush and cook three cupfuls of the smaller berries for three minutes, stirring all the time. Then strain. This amount of fruit should yield about one cupful of juice. To this juice add the sugar and heat slowly, until it is entirely dissolved.

parent; if made with apple pectin the color and appearance may not be so attractive, though the flavor and texture should be fairly good. The flavor of old rhubarb is apt to be strong; when it is to be used, the addition of one or two pieces of lemon or orange peel to the stems as they cook is an improvement.

Wash and trim stalks of rhubarb, being careful not to remove the pink skin. Cut into half-inch pieces and place in a granite pan. Add one cupful water for each pound of rhubarb. Cook until tender, then strain through four thicknesses of cheesecloth. There should be about one and one-quarter cupfuls of juice for each pound of rhubarb.

And when we looked at her, even in the dimly lighted interior of the limousine, her appearance was different, too.

We were nearing our journey's end. Our road lay alongside the railroad line, and already we could see the one light in the Oak Ridge station window.

Then the chauffeur spoke to us through the little speaking tube which connected the chauffeur's seat with the interior of the limousine:

"There's a house on fire, up ahead there."

We all looked, and instantly saw a sudden lurid light, which was piling up the sky; saw it pierced the next moment by angry orange-colored flames.

"He's set fire to the house!" the doctor cried; and added, into the speaking tube, "Put on all the speed you can! We've no time to waste!"

The chauffeur obeyed, and within two minutes we were at the scene of the fire. The cold air of the winter night was already resonant with the shouts of the firemen and the excited exclamations of the crowd of half-dressed citizens who had gathered to render what assistance they could, and to enjoy the spectacle at the same time!

Mallory had already swung the door open and was half out of the car, when an exclamation from the doctor stopped him.

"Hold on!" he cried. "This isn't the house. The Morgan house is two blocks further on down the street. Drive on!" he shouted to the chauffeur.

Mallory sprang back to his seat, and once more the car lurched forward. The doctor held the door with one hand and leaned far out, scanning the road ahead with eager eyes.

"Drive slow," he cautioned the chauffeur.

Then he turned and spoke to us inside the car. "I've an idea that we better not drive right up to the house. There's no need of giving any more warning than necessary of the fact that we're coming. Look out ahead here, Phelps. Isn't that white gate half way down the next block the gate to the Morgan yard?"

"I peered out over his shoulder. "Yes. I couldn't mistake that," said I. "Good," said the doctor. "Stop here."

We four men clambered out of the car, the girl still fast asleep, still leaning back against the cushions in the corner, undisturbed by the confusion of our dismounting from the car.

"What shall we do with her?" I inquired. "I suppose she's safe enough where she is. She'll hardly wake up until you tell her to, will she?"

"No. The sleep is hypnotic," said the doctor. "She'll be safe enough here so far as that goes."

"It comes down to this," said Ashton. "If Wilkins is in the house, we shouldn't want the girl. She'd be in the way, for if he's cornered, he'll make a stiff fight. But if he's been to the house and done his work and already got away, and we're too late for him, as I fancy we are, then we'll have to use the girl again to track him. There's no other way."

"Then the thing to do," said the doctor, "is to make a reconnaissance. If he's already been here and searched the house for what he wanted and gone away, that fact will be easily apparent, and, as you say, it's the first thing to find out. Come, we've wasted time enough. The girl will be perfectly safe here."

"Hold on!" said Ashton. "Why should we all go? We might defeat our purpose that way. Send Mallory. He's worth all the rest of us put together at fences and locks, and that sort of thing. He can find out in five minutes whether that house has been entered or not, and he won't attract one-twentieth part of the attention that four of us will."

could have reached the house, we heard, coming toward us, the footsteps of a man running.

The three of us shrank back into the shadows, tensely alert for whatever this unexpected development might mean. But as the approaching figure emerged into the zone of light cut by the great gas lamps of our automobile, we saw that it was Mallory himself, Mallory hurrying toward us in an agony of haste, beckoning frantically, his eyes blazing with excitement.

We sprang forward to meet him. "He's there!" he gasped. "Wilkins, himself! He's up in the study! There's a light, and the blinds are down; but I saw his shadow on the blind."

As we drew nearer the gate, our pace slackened cautiously. Ashton was a little in advance of the rest of us, and was the first to peer around the mass of shrubbery, which screened the house from the view of the street, except at the one point where the gate made an opening. I saw him stop and stiffen, and heard him catch his breath with a gasp.

"That's him," he whispered. "We've got him."

"The next moment I saw it, too—the silhouette upon the blind of a figure in a cap and ulster, bending studiously forward over the desk, in the chair in which Henry Morgan had sat when he met his death."

"Yes," I heard my chief say in a piercing whisper; "yes, we've got him—unless, unless, in some way, he's counted on making us think we had him—when we hadn't."

"Why do you think that?" Ashton demanded under his breath.

"It's—It's a little too obvious," said the doctor in uneasy hesitation. "Why should he court discovery in that way?"

The Three of Us Shrank Back into the Shadows.

Why should he be sitting there with his shadow on the blind, when he knows that half the town has been roused by this fire?"

Ashton started forward impatiently. "This is no time for theories," he muttered.

But the doctor laid a detaining hand upon his arm. "No," he said, "that's a valid question. If there's no trick about it, the man can't get away. If there is a trick, it's success will depend upon our doing the very thing that you propose to do—rushing ahead without stopping to think."

"Listen a minute," said Ashton, still in a whisper, but speaking with fierce impatience. "He must have set fire to that other house himself. He cannot have thought of a better scheme for drawing my men off the job. Once Wilkins saw them out of the house, he knew he had nothing to fear. He could make his search at leisure. And now he's found the things he wants, has found that map that he's been dreaming about for years, he's not thinking about his shadow, nor the blind it falls on."

To me it seemed that the doctor's question had been fairly answered, and I moved forward, as Mallory and Ashton did. My chief hesitated an instant, then gave a nod of assent.

"Mallory pulled open the gate. We all followed through it. Then I glanced up once more at the lighted window blind.

"Look!" I cried. "He's gone!"

One glance was all they needed. The silhouette of that figure had disappeared.

Ashton turned to Mallory and spoke so fast that the words trod on each other's heels.

"You stay outside," he commanded. "He may try the windows if he's cornered. You're the best man we've got on a chase. Don't hesitate to shoot! Come along, the rest of you!"

Together we rushed up the path, Ashton ahead and my chief and I just behind him. But, with all our haste, we ascended the steps and crossed the wooden veranda silently. The front door was not even latched, it swung back with a light push, and we were inside.

"I'll go to the kitchen," Ashton said, "and cover the back stairs, and work up from there. You two, between you, see that he doesn't get down the front stairs, and search the rooms on each floor before you go any higher."

Both of us nodded comprehendingly, and he darted away. I stayed in the hall, while the doctor searched the downstairs rooms which made up the front of the house.

In a minute or two my chief rejoined me in the hall. "He's not here," Ashton whispered. "Come, let's go upstairs. We'll draw this floor next, just as we did the other." You, Phelps, guard the head of the front stairs, I'll guard the back and the doctor can search the rooms."

"Carefully as he searched, we drew blank again.

"All right," Ashton whispered. "He's still in the study, then. It's queer we don't hear him, though."

"Do you think he can have got out by one of the windows?" I questioned. "Not with Mallory on the lookout outside. I told him to shoot, and he would. Come along! Follow me."

The study door was closed, but we could see the light shining out from under it. Ashton flung open the door. But from that silent room there never came a sound.

We waited a moment. Then, breathlessly and cautiously, we entered. The room was empty.

For a moment we stared blankly into each other's faces. Then a grim, full-mouthed laugh from the doctor shattered the strained silence. He clutched Ashton's arm and pointed.

"Look! Look there!"

On the floor, beside the swivel chair, half under the desk, was a great caped-ulster and a hat, a bundle of bed clothes, a bolster and a small pillow.

"There!" cried the doctor; "there lies the shadow of our good friend Wilkins, but it looks as if his substance had escaped us."

"But the thing moved," I cried—"the shadow did, at any rate—moved and disappeared."

The doctor stooped and lifted up the empty sleeve of the big ulster. There was a string tied around the sleeve, a string that led up through an empty stove-pipe hole and out in the corridor. We went out to see what the other end of it was attached to, and found that it was made fast to a bell wire, in such a way as not, probably, to interfere with the ringing of the bell.

We gazed at the thing curiously and, for the moment, without comprehending. Then the doctor hit upon a relation, which we afterward found to be the true one.

It was simple. "Like all great ideas," said he. "The first thing Wilkins did was to make fast a string between the gate and the old-fashioned bell pull in the front doorway. In that way he assured himself of getting a warning when your detectives returned from the fire. It wouldn't allow him much leeway, but he undoubtedly calculated that it would be enough. When this house was in its prime this third floor room served, no doubt, as quarters for a servant, and it was natural that one of the bells should ring up here. The thought of the dummy had probably occurred to him in advance, and it was a good thought. His chance of escaping your two men, when they returned, would be vastly greater if they should rush into the house with no other idea than that an intruder was sitting in Henry Morgan's study, leaning over Henry Morgan's desk."

"But the notion of connecting the dummy with the bell wire, and balancing it so that the slightest pull would cause it to move toward the light, and then disappear, must have been the inspiration of the moment."

"Well, he's gone," said Ashton, "and he's probably got the map, though if you know where you left it, you'd better look and see."

I pulled open the drawer where we had placed it, and glanced inside. One glance was enough. The map was gone.

"He can't have gone very far," said Ashton; "that's a safe surmise; and as long as we've got that girl to track him with, we'll get him yet. Come, there's no use loitering here."

Great Not All From World's High Places

Who would have expected that Goliath's antagonist would emerge from the quiet pastures? "Genius hatches her offspring in strange places." Very humble homes are the birthplaces of mighty emancipations, once said the late Doctor Jowett.

There was a little farm at St. Ives, and the farmer lived a quiet and uneventful life. But the affairs of the nation became more and more confused and threatening. Monarchical power despoiled the people's liberties, and tyranny became rampant. And out from the little farm strode Oliver Cromwell, the ordained of God, to emancipate his country.

There was an obscure rectory at Epworth. The doings in the little rectory were just the quiet practices of simple homes in countless parts of England. And England was becoming brutalized, because its religious life was demoralized. The church was asleep, and the devil was wide awake! And forth from the humble rectory strode John Wesley, the appointed champion of the Lord, to enthrone, to purify, and to sweeten the life of the people.

On what quiet farm is the coming deliverer now laboring? Who knows? —Exchange.

Revealed by Microscopes

It now is possible to identify any piece of timber, however old, by shaving off a slice of minute thickness and studying it under the microscope.

Excavation of the ancient theater at Corinth has shown that these structures were gaily decorated with wall paintings.

THE COST OF DISCIPLESHIP

LESSON TEXT—Mark 10:17-27; 12:41-44.

GOLDEN TEXT—Where your treasure is, there will your heart be also. PRIMARY TOPIC—Loving Jesus Best of All.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Putting Jesus First. INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—The Supreme Choice. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Peril of Riches.

1. The Rich Young Ruler (10:17-27).

"What shall I do that I may inherit eternal life?" This young man was in earnest. He came running and knelt to Jesus. This question reveals a void in his heart. He was a young man with a lovable character. "Jesus beholding him, loved him." He was moral, honest, earnest and courageous, but had a defective theology.

"He thought that eternal life could be obtained by good works. Though he claimed to have kept the law, he was conscious of lacking something. He was willing to do something to fill up that which was lacking, therefore he came to Jesus to make inquiry as to that lack.

2. Jesus' reply (vv. 18, 19). He knew the young man's heart and put his finger on the weak spot in his life. Jesus reiterated the commandments. The young man averred that he had all his life kept these commandments, but when it came to parting with his possessions in order to help his neighbor he parted with the Lord, going away sorrowful.

3. Lacking one thing and yet lost (vv. 21, 22). When the Lord pointed out to him that the defect in his life was the love of money, he was unwilling to pay the price. When the time came in his life to choose between eternal life and riches he chose wealth and parted company with Christ.

4. The peril of riches (vv. 23-27). Jesus said, "How hardly shall they that have riches enter into the kingdom of God." When He discerned the astonishment of the disciples He answered again and said, "How hard is it for them that trust in riches to enter into the kingdom of God. It is easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle, than for a rich man to enter into the kingdom of God."

The difficulty does not lie in the fact that a man possesses riches, for one may possess riches and still be an heir of the kingdom. Wealth is a mighty power. In itself it is good. It will provide bread for the widow and orphans, amelioration for the suffering, and send the gospel of Christ to the ends of the earth. The peril of riches lies in trusting in them. However, the step from possession of riches to trusting in them is a very short one. The tendency of growing wealth is to destroy the noble life of the soul. So long as a man possesses riches he is safe, but as soon as riches possess the man he is in deadly peril.

5. The Widow's Mite (Mark 12:41-44).

Jesus had spent a strenuous day and was now quietly watching the surging throng. Observe: 1. Jesus sitting over against the treasury (v. 41). The treasury was the place where the worshippers deposited their tithes and offerings. Jesus sat where He could see them drop their money into the chests. He saw the poor casting into the treasury their small coins and He also saw the rich bringing larger coins. It is a solemn truth that Jesus' eye always beholds the gifts of the people. We may be able to conceal them from the people, but we cannot conceal them from His eye.

2. A certain poor widow threw into the treasury two-mites (v. 42). The mite was the smallest copper coin made. The mite was worth about one-eighth of a cent, therefore her offering was one-fourth of a cent in value.

3. Jesus said unto His disciples, "Verily I say unto you that this poor widow hath cast more in than all they which have cast into the treasury" (v. 43). The Lord estimates gifts by the motive of the heart, not by their amount.

4. Gifts are measured by what the giver has left, not by what was given (v. 44). This widow cast into the treasury all that she had, even all her living. The rich gave of their abundance. Though their gifts were much more than that of the poor widow, yet they had an abundance left.

This woman's influence goes on. Many devoted Christians have followed her example and have given their all.

Brazilians Have Their Own Idea of Business

That the Brazilian takes his business, and life in general, in a natural easy-going stride, is pointed out by Studyard Kipling, famous English author and poet, in an article (copy right, 1928, by Studyard Kipling in the U. S. A.) in Liberty Magazine.

"The Brazilian has been used to the English trader for generations," explains Kipling, "and he old experienced mercantile firms send out the type of Englishmen most likely to be accepted. For the Brazilian has not yet reached the impersonality of ideal business. If he likes you as an individual, he will do more than anything for you. If he doesn't, he will do less than nothing. If he knows little about you, but perceives that you have manners and a few trifles of that sort, he will wait and see. And he has heaps of leisure."

Kind Husband

Wife—"That's the kind of husband to have! Did you hear Mr. Dike tell his wife to go and look at some twenty-dollar hats?"

Husband—"My dear, have I ever deprived you of the privilege of looking at twenty-dollar hats?"

Snappy Comeback

Harry—"I'm awfully sorry, but I forgot about your party last night. Mine—Oh, weren't you there?"

In most families, long before radio, they had a loud speaker. It was Dad and what he said, went.

EDITORIAL COLUMN

Democratic Women Object to Al Smith

Los Angeles, April 24.—Mrs. Nellie Taylor Ross, former governor of Wyoming, continued her campaign today in southern California in behalf of the presidential candidacy of Gov. Al Smith, despite the objections of three women's organizations.

Speaking to a crowd here last night, the former woman governor made no reference to the protests of the women's organizations, except to say that she thought it would be better if the protesters encouraged one whose record of vigor and resourcefulness promises a correction of the lack of law enforcement.

The Women's Law Enforcement League of southern California yesterday raised its voice against Mrs. Ross' campaign by displaying the stand she had taken to participate in the internal political affairs of California.

Previously, a women's organization of the Democrats and the Los Angeles Federation of W. C. T. U. bodies had protested against her invasion of the state. In her address last night, Mrs. Ross declared Gov. Smith was the only Democrat who has a chance to beat a Republican nominee.

She dismissed Senator James A. Reed and Sen. Thomas J. Walsh as presidential factors, by declaring them too obscure and little thought of by the voters.

Meow! Eff!

From an Exchange—
During the 18 or more years that we have been publishing our paper we have had to publish almost every kind of advertisement, but never until this week have had one in which the advertiser wanted to buy cats. Nevertheless, in this issue will be found an advertisement in which the party wants 25 or more common barn cats and adds "cats you don't want around." This is first ad of this kind ever published in a paper in this or any other country and if the advertiser resided here, we could supply him with several thousand.

—We have had nightly serenades from numerous Malpais, Alloy and Tramp cats this spring—these, with our domestic felines, make life most pleasant. Their catter-wawling is a most euphonious, in sound—come around some night and hear for yourself.

Apologizes for Error

When the Fergus Falls, Minn., paper said, as we printed last week, that no Democrat is "affiliated," it meant "afflicted," as our tormentors well knew. Next time we make a "bull" it won't be a blunder here, but from some other paper, the New York World, Chicago Tribune etc.

HOWE ABOUT—

By ED HOWE

In charges made against me by preachers, women, editorial writers, statesmen, children, the commercial club, the neighbors, solicitors, clerks etc., I am strongly disposed to believe that other half of it is true and that the other half belongs to my critics.

The term "Tired Business Man" has become an epithet, whereas it is a compliment to so refer to a man. He is actually the best type of citizen we have: I know no more complimentary thing that may be said of a citizen than that he is tired from engaging in business, which includes everything worth while in this world of effort. One of our greatest troubles is that we have not more men tired because of honest work in honest callings. The curse of the world is so many men engaged in mischief rather than in business.

You have frequently been entertained at considerable discomfort and expense to yourself. Don't accept other invitation: some of them are worse than worthless. And after you have been bored by accepting a bad invitation, you must pay back, and bother those who failed to entertain you.

I was once walking on a busy street with a very rich woman. The crowd jostled her, not knowing or caring about her distinction. At the crossings she was held up with negroes and Indians, unless she jumped out of the way, passing automobiles threw muddy water on her clothing, a shower having recently fallen.

The rich and great have no special protection from the main difficulties of life. They have headaches, rheumatism, heartache, dyspepsia, like the rest of us. I think the worst case of halitosis I ever knew came to my attention while talking with a great heiress.

People flatter the rich, but I imagine this becomes wearisome to them. Besides, are not we poor flattered, also? Is there a writing or public speaking wherein we are not told how honest and good we are?

It is often said the great need of the world is more Christians. . . .
I think the real need is more gentlemen, since a real gentleman will nearly always discharge whatever duty he owes religion. . . . The truth is the number of gentlemen is small:
I hope I shall never know the real number of such there are: the enormous figures would humiliate me.

WHEN PROMOTERS USE "CHARITY" TO DECOY TRUSTFUL CONTRIBUTORS

Investigations of Various Schemes for Defrauding Public
Out of Money Disclosed by Bankers Association—Many Kinds of Fake Industrial Promotions Used as Bait.

By W. R. MOREHOUSE

Public Relations Commission, American Bankers Association

MILLIONS of dollars raised under the disguise of charity go to line the pockets of promoters. Ticket sales on raffles are commonly used, and while the loss to any one person who buys a ticket is small the aggregate loss for the United States runs into millions of dollars.
Usually the promoters of these schemes first make a contract with some charitable institution to conduct a campaign for funds on behalf of the institution. They are to run the campaign in the name of the institution and share the proceeds. The whole scheme is often one of deception. To those who have been led to believe that their contributions go practically 100 per cent to charity, the following case we investigated should prove illuminating.

W. R. MOREHOUSE

A number of promoters recently contracted with a charitable institution to put on a campaign to raise funds by the raffle of a new automobile. So far as the public could tell from the banners used in displaying the automobile, the full amount of the sale price of the tickets went to the institution. There was nothing to convey any other impression. Apparently it was open and above board and was being conducted by men for whom were contributing their time gratuitously.

For several days a new automobile, mounted on a truck, was driven up and down the streets, with banners telling about the drive for funds for the charitable institution. One day the truck would go by displaying one of the popular makes of automobiles.
A few days later it would parade by displaying some other popular make.
Periodically the truck would pull into the curb where it would park for several hours while the promoters pleaded with passers-by to take tickets on the raffle and thereby help a deserving charitable institution to meet its bills.

Thousands "Touched"

Thousands of people, touched by the appeal for help, bought tickets, the total sale running into the thousands of dollars. Contrary to the belief of the ticket buyers their contributions did not go 100 per cent to charity.
Instead the charitable institution received but 25 cents on the dollar, the promoters getting 53 cents on the dollar as their net profit, or twice the amount received by charity, while the remainder of 22 cents on each dollar represented the amount charged against gross sales by the promoters as expenses.

In other words, every person who bought a 50 cent ticket for the sake of charity, contributed but 13 cents to charity and 37 cents to those promoting the scheme. Whether you give to charity or make an investment it will pay you to get the facts!

Unfortunately there is a general impression abroad that wildcat promotions are confined to oil, mining and new inventions. The truth is, many stock selling promotions are operated under the name of other industries.

False Claims

A certain group of promoters investigated offered for sale stock in a proposed woolen mill. In order to sell the stock they resorted to the use of misrepresentation and false claims.
After renting space on the ground floor of an office building fronting on a busy street they began their campaign. Orally and by printed advertisements extravagant claims were made for the proposed corporation which were grossly false.

The "Charity" Drive

Promoters had not been connected with any mills for over twenty years, and they had attempted at different times to promote mills, all of which had failed. One of the promoters represented that formerly he was president and general manager of one of the largest woolen mills in Canada. The fact was the mill referred to had gone into bankruptcy and he had been caretaker of the plant.

This story of misrepresentation can be duplicated in practically the whole industrial field, and because our industries are being exploited with intent to defraud, it behooves every investor to investigate carefully. He should consult his banker before drawing his savings out and losing them on some wildcat investment.

Why not frankly make success the goal of life? That is what all men and women are working for.

Why not rate men by a sort of Bradstreet? Why continue the old foolish custom of deriding the successful? By success I do not mean accumulation of property alone, but certainly include it. Every man is a success who takes reasonably good care of himself and family, and able to pay the undertaker who finally attends him.

Howe About-

By ED HOWE

I lately read a book giving a summary of the philosophy of the Greeks, wisest of the ancients. This philosophy is poor stuff, it seems to me, compared with what men know today. Are we moderns really doing very well? So far as common sense goes, we surely have more than the Greeks. They knew nothing we do not know, and believed a lot of nonsense we do not believe.

THERE is nothing that has ever taken the place of Bayer Aspirin as an antidote for pain. Safe, or physicians wouldn't use it, and endorse its use by others. Sure, or several million users would have turned to something else. But get real Bayer Aspirin (at any drugstore) with Bayer on the box, and the word genuine printed in red.

World's Deepest Well The deepest well in the world has been sunk in Orange county, California, where a depth of more than 8,000 feet, or 250 feet more than the previous record, has been reached. At 7,000 feet the temperature was found to be above 212 degrees, the melting point of the battery of the photographic machines used in making the depth surveys, and the batteries became thoroughly molten. The shaft is the only well ever drilled by electric power to a depth of more than 6,000 feet. Drilling was in progress continuously for over two years. A 5 1/2-inch bit was used with Westinghouse transformers and a variable-speed motor. The shaft drilled from the vertical up to a deviation of 560 feet at a depth of 5,955 feet, and then drilled back till at 8,000 feet the tilt was only 28 degrees.

Why continue the old foolish custom of deriding the successful?

By success I do not mean accumulation of property alone, but certainly include it.

Every man is a success who takes reasonably good care of himself and family, and able to pay the undertaker who finally attends him.

The great annoyances of life come from the trifles, idle, unsuccessful; those who in one way and another are of no use to their communities.

There is only one way to improve the world, and that is to increase the average respectability, which is becoming alarmingly low.

The worthless now number so great an army that they have combined to boycott the useful and respectable, and are doing fairly well.

I do not like a man who is too free with women in public. If a man is crazy about the women, he should keep it to himself as much as possible.

History is a collection of magic tales, and denial of them.

When a man is a gross feeder, it is said he is an epicure, in memory of Epicurus, an ancient who lived upon bread and water, and upon the simple fruits and vegetables that grew in his own garden.

Capital Punishment the Result of Fear, Hate and Lust in Human Heart

By REV. JOHN HAYNES HOLMES, Community Church, New York.

CAPITAL punishment is the result of fear and hate and lust within the human heart and should be abolished, as some of the world's greatest minds have advocated for centuries. We must banish capital punishment from society as we have banished infanticide and chattel slavery, as we are banishing child labor and the subjection of women, as some day we shall banish war.

Opponents of capital punishment include all the greatest and noblest names from Confucius, Buddha and Jesus to Channing, Abraham Lincoln, Victor Hugo, and Leo Tolstoy. In the course of centuries of discussion every plea against the practice has been vindicated and established. The evidence is all in, the arguments all heard, the case closed, the judgment rendered. There remains now only the task of carrying out the verdict of condemnation, and getting rid of capital punishment forever.

The nine states which have the highest murder rate in this country are all capital punishment states.

But capital punishment at bottom is not supported as a protection against anything. Psychologically the death penalty is an instance of revenge; sociologically it is the institution of blood sacrifice; ethically it is the practice of retribution. In capital punishment we have a survival into modern times of the barbarism of primitive times.

Person Reaching the Age of Sixty Should Be in the Prime of Life

By JAMES J. DAVIS, Secretary of Labor.

A man or woman of fifty or sixty years of age is just as capable a worker as he or she was at thirty, perhaps more capable, even, physically. The reason is that the years have brought the reward of experience and added skill. Instead of becoming a liability at fifty or sixty, the intelligent worker is all the more an asset to his employer.

Many a time, I remember, when I was a boy at work in the iron mills I saw a faithful worker who had rounded out fifty years of life. The custom was to present him with a gold watch, in token for age. But he was also presented with a discharge. It was assumed that at his years a man had outlived his usefulness. A man that old was thought to be old indeed. A man that old thought so himself.

Since then science has added years to the span of human life. Today nobody feels old at any age. We not only have abolished the feeling of old age, but people are healthier. They lead a more active life.

In the face of this tendency of science and our better life to abolish age and keep us young and even more productive, we have a tendency among employers to drop good workers at an ever younger and younger age. I think it is something that is serious and should be watched.

Organized Labor Aims at Establishment of Close Tie to Employers

By WILLIAM GREEN, President A. F. of L.

The organized labor movement urges the establishment of a collective relationship between the management of corporations and their employees. It is only in this way and through such contact that the human problems of industry can be understood, and through such a process the worker will become more than a mere number in the great industrial machine and the corporation more than an agency formed for the purpose of advancing the material interests of its members through the exploitation of the spiritual, physical and human qualities of its employees.

The modern age has seen a great change through which a great many workingmen and their families have shown a lack of interest in developing their spiritual lives. This situation is not due to the lack of any desire or determination on the part of working men and women to elevate their standards of life and living or to develop the spiritual, artistic and cultural side of their lives. Rather it is due to the materialism which seems to pervade and control industrial policies and industrial life, and to the fact that very often poverty forces them to turn their undivided attention toward providing for their families.

Independent Statehood for Large Cities a Vision of the Future

By PROF. CHARLES E. MERRIAM, University of Chicago.

Responsibilities of large metropolitan regions, like New York, Chicago and Philadelphia, for governmental functions might be discharged more efficiently if such regions were granted independent statehood. It is clear that the future United States will be dominantly urban. In 1920 there were 17 regions, each having a population of more than 500,000 and a total population of 26,000,000, while at the same time there were nine states with a population of less than 500,000.

It is obvious that some more compact form of organization is necessary to enable such groups to carry on their governmental functions effectively.

It is probable that in the near future there will be heard a strong plea for the organization of metropolitan regions as independent states. Such an experiment would give adequate scope for development of a public welfare system appropriate to urban communities and for the development of a metropolitan system of jurisprudence, differing from the now dominantly rural type.

Courts Should Be Given Full Authority to Control Capital Cases.

By GOV. ALVAN T. FULLER, Massachusetts.

A plan that will place our courts in the position to take and hold control of capital cases, from their beginning to their ultimate conclusion, and which will make certain that the governor will not be compelled to encounter the difficulties which were forced upon him in the year 1927 by the zealous defenders of persons convicted of first-degree murder, should be formulated and made effective by appropriate legislation.

In this connection I repeat that for the prevention of crime generally we have to rely principally on justice, swift and sure, and that the criminally inclined must be made to understand that it is well-nigh certain that any criminal acts on their parts are sure to be found out and quickly punished, and that no politics, nor money, nor influence, nor organized demonstration can help them to avoid the consequences of their crimes.

Don't Neglect Your Kidneys!

You Can't Be Well When Kidneys Act Sluggishly.

DO you find yourself running down—always tired, nervous and depressed? Are you stiff and aching, subject to nagging backache, drowsy headaches and dizzy spells? Are kidney excretions scanty, too frequent or burning in passage? Too often this indicates sluggish kidneys and shouldn't be neglected. Doan's Pills, a stimulant diuretic, increase the secretion of the kidneys and thus aid in the elimination of waste impurities. Doan's are endorsed everywhere. Ask your neighbor!

50,000 Users Endorse Doan's:
Mrs. Etta Davis, 501 W. Eighth St., Grand Island, Neb., says: "My kidneys acted too freely. I had pains in my back and when doing my housework, sharp twinges took me across my knees. It wasn't easy to straighten. A steady backache wore me down until I was all tired out. Doan's Pills have never failed to relieve the backache and benefit my kidneys."

Of all the different medicines on the market I decided to try Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and I have never regretted my choice. I found it to be exactly what it is claimed to be—a good general tonic and builder.

And I am glad to speak a good word for the 'Golden Medical Discovery' whenever I have an opportunity."
J. H. Kelley, 225 W. Chestnut St., Erie, Pa., says: "I have tried many drugs and ask for Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery in tablets or liquid, or send 10c to Dr. Pierce's Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y., for trial pkg. of tablets and write for free advice."

HER father's eyes were dark with pain as he looked at her in her hospital chair. "But, Jill, couldn't you just want to live—for my sake?" She gazed at him with compassion, but her voice was firm. "Dad, I have suffered so—I just don't care; and you know what Doctor Ferguson told me when I begged him to be honest with me—that I can walk only with crutches—the rest of my days."

He tumbled with his hat. "You know you can have every wish—" "Except what I want the most." When he had left the room, going in what she knew was utter despair that no longer touched her broken spirit, she looked out of the window beside which the nurse had wheeled her. From her room in the private hospital she could see the back of a row of apartment houses and their back porches. Then she saw something that made her raise her head for a better view.

Onto the porch of one of the apartments a man in a chair similar to hers had been wheeled. The distance across the hospital grounds was too far to see his features clearly, but she noted that his hair was dark and his face evenly formed, that they brought books to him, and that a little girl hung about him adoringly.

She watched him with dull attention that afternoon, but after that with interest. The stray cats that walked the fence back of the apartment house were often blown off by the janitor who stole out of the basement with his hose. The young man in the chair, a few days later evidently discovered the situation, for with bits of food cast from his tray he lured the hungry cats within reach of the irate janitor's stream of angry water.

"He has a streak of mischief in him, and how that youngster loves him! Wonder who he is?" she asked herself, and the next day surprised her father by urging him to bring her opera-glasses.

When alone, she used the glasses and smiled to herself. "I just knew that black head of his was curly," she told herself. "He's suffered, too, but he has a fine face just the same!" The next afternoon, as she lay watching him, her glasses in her lap, he suddenly looked up. Her heart quickened a beat. He waved his hand—and she waved hers. Then she saw he was mottooling with his hands—the deaf and dumb alphabet.

"Hello!" he spelled, and she answered with her fingers. Then he sent the youngster for a pair of glasses; and the conversation picked up.

"What is your name?" he asked. "Jill," she answered, using the pet name her father gave her. "And yours?" "Jack," he replied. "I broke my crown, you remember."

"Yes, I tumbled after," she added. It was many minutes later that her nurse came in to spoil the fun, for fun it was. She giggled at his comments, admired through her glasses the play of his capable fingers, and let her eyes linger on his face.

In the precious afternoons that followed they became adept at their silent speech. Her father was puzzled over the change in her, but she kept her secret to herself. She learned more about him. "Staying with my sister—bless her!" he said once. One afternoon while she looked on with a strange breathlessness, she saw him try some crutches and his message struck to her very soul: "Got to walk on these to the end of my days—nobody now will have the nerve to ask me to run errands, anyway!"

That week she asked to try crutches. She laughed as she saw the tears of happiness in her father's eyes, and she made the crutches serve her.

"I'll trim you in a race the next time we meet," he told her. "Pop!" she retorted.

That night she lay awake many hours. Did his crutches mean farewell? Would he go out of her life? "Father," she said the next day "do something for me." She told him of Jack. "I want to go to the court try place. Bring him out if he will come. I—I can't bear to lose him for good."

So it came about that as she waited one gorgeous afternoon on the terrace of the beautiful estate. She heard the sound of crutches, and she turned to see him—

"How tall he was!" was her first thought. His eyes she knew well, but her glasses had not told her how deep and tender they could be. "Hello, Jill!" he greeted her, and his voice was like music to her.

"Hello, Jack!" she answered, struggling to keep her voice above a whisper. He settled himself comfortably beside her. "You must be my good angel. I accepted an offer to manage this estate, and I found the offer came from your father—and now I find you here!"
