Butte as a Gold and Silver Camp

THE Butte (Mont.) district is known to the present generation as one of the world's richest copper mining regions and probably the most productive mining region in the United States. But it was the lure of gold that first attracted to it that band of hardy and adventurous souls who swept through the American West in search of wealth in its most condensed and glittering form.

Gold deposits of the placer type, dust and nuggets that could be washed from gravel, was discovered at Banock, Alder Gulch and East Chance Gulch, Mont., in 1863, and the usual rush of prospectors and their ilk followed. They searched every gulch and creek bed, located numerous claims, and washed out, all in all, an impressive amount of gold.

The first strike in the actual environs of Butte was made by a passing immigrant in 1864, who staked out a claim on the west side of what became Main street in that city. Other strikes followed in neighboring gulches, but placer mining seemed less remunerative here than in other parts of the state. The gold was inferior and brought only $11 to $14 an ounce. Water was not available. At first the Butte ore was hauled by ox team to Rainbow creek for washing, but ditch lines were built eventually. It is estimated that $1,500,000 worth of gold was washed out at Butte during three years of placer mining.

Butte's copper history will make a separate story. The history of its rich silver mines is part of that of the gold deposits.

Quartz veins rich in silver existed on many of the rocky hillsides around Butte, but the ore was of a type not then recognized, although similar veins in the Comstock lode were soon to prove so valuable that the Butte mines were immediately opened. A number of silver lodes were worked in the middle sixties, and it was the prospect of rich silver mining, rather than gold, that led to the development which resulted in the town's being laid out in 1860.

The climax of Butte's silver period was reached in 1867, when stamp mills grinding silver ore in that city were dropping 200 stamps and the amount of ore worked in the silver stamp mills reached 400 tons a day. In addition to this about 100 tons a day were being shipped out to smelters. All the ore carried a considerable amount of gold as well as the silver and the average yield was placed by geologists at probably $25 a ton in the two precious metals.

The period of active silver mining continued until 1892, when the Butte mines, like others, were almost prostrated by the decline in the price of silver.

Capitan School Notes

Friday, Apr. 27, was class day at the Capitan schools. The high school spent the day picnicking on South Fork. Forest Ranger Beale taught us how to take care of camp fires. We also learned the differences in the several evergreens that grow in this vicinity.

Wednesday, Apr. 25, Mr. Beale visited our school and gave us a lecture on locating forest fires, and their prevention. This is the way we kept fire prevention week.

The upper grades held their picnic Friday, at Monjeau Park. The younger pupils spent their holiday at Double Crossing.

The Juniors will give a dance on May 5. The proceeds are for the Junior-Senior banquet.

The high school boys are working hard preparing themselves for the track meet to be held in Roswell May 5.

The Juniors received their pins Monday morning.

The Seniors are hard at work in preparing their play "Putting One Over" and they expect to put it over in good shape.

The features of Fort Stanton's playing were the pitching by Flores, who allowed only 8 hits and struck out 14 men, also the batting of Mickey, who went to bat 5 times, made 5 hits and fielded in a spectacular manner. Our next game will be with the 8th Cavalry team of Fort Bliss on the Fort Stanton diamond, Saturday, May 5, and promises to be a snappy game.

Score by innings: 1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9

Word from Mrs. Kincheloe

This office is in receipt of word from Mrs. T. B. Kincheloe, who had just joined her husband in El Paso, where he is located as an X-ray expert. Mrs. Kincheloe, it will be remembered, left Fort Stanton for Washington, D. C., about one month ago, where she visited her mother, pending Mr. Kincheloe's locating at the Border City. We are glad they have the intention of making that place their home, and would be glad to have them pay us a visit now and then.

"Am I Intruding?"

THIS YEAR'S Senior Class of the Carrizozo high school is presenting "Am I Intruding?" for their annual class play at the Crystal Theatre, May 15. This play is a thoroughly modern comedy, causing laughter galore, based on a mystery plot that holds the attention from start to finish. There is really no starring part in the play—each individual having unusual opportunity to stand out. Throughout the three acts the rapid action brings about one situation after another in which are mingled thrills and laughs. The Comedy is natural, not being forced as is often the case. The characters have the mannerisms which we see about us in every-day life. The interest is well sustained to the final curtain, and every character in the play is worthy of a star actor.

Rainbow Club

Carrizozo Assembly of Rainbow for Girls met last Friday evening in their first regular meeting with all members present except Miss Edna Varney, who was unable to come on account of being prominently connected with the class play at the Corona School. Prudence, zeal and integrity marked the beginning of the new order in Carrizozo.

Tomorrow Night's The Night

If you have the blues, a grouch, or if you are out-of-sorts in any manner, attend the Ladies' Minstrels at the Crystal Theatre tomorrow night. There will be lots of fun, music, singing, all of which will be new and besides all of this amusement, the picture, "The Harvester" will be shown. Here is a chance for anyone to drive dull care away.

Woman's Club

There were three state officers: Mrs. Geo. D. Ruoff, state president; Mrs. Louise H. Coe, Parliamentarian, and Miss Margaret Reeves, head of the child-welfare department; four district officers; Mrs. Alice Branigan, president; Mrs. J. V. Tully, vice-president; Mrs. R. W. Goddard, secretary; Mrs. H. E. Whitacre, treasurer and twenty-nine delegates present at the Third Annual Convention of the New Mexico Federation of Women's clubs, Fourth district, Las Cruces. The delegates from Carrizozo arrived in Las Cruces at 12:30 Friday in time for a delightful luncheon at the Presbyterian church, Mrs. O. H. Brown, department of literature presiding. Friday afternoon session, the town superintendent, Mr. J. S. Farmer, gave an address of welcome and the State and District officers were presented and each gave a short talk.

Reports from the clubs represented were given. The principal things accomplished by clubs were the building of club houses, libraries and the cleaning up and beautifying of towns, communities, highways and cemeteries. The Carrizozo Woman's club and the Alladin club of Canutillo reported the organization of Junior clubs.

Addresses were given by Mrs. Branigan, Mrs. Ruoff, Mrs. Coe and Miss Reeves; and greetings from Mrs. J. V. Tully and Mrs. Geo Brunner representative of the Texas Federation of Women's Clubs. Both vocal and instrumental selections were given and the Toy Orchestra and rhythmic work demonstrated by the Las Cruces grade school was especially interesting. An art tea at the Amador hotel, Miss Hilda Anderson and Mrs. Numa C. Frenger, presiding was of much interest. An art exhibit from the New York School of Arts and oil paintings of Mr. Thurston from El Paso and the "Assumption," by Martinez, painted in 1722, were on display; the hotel itself is worth making a visit. Delegates were entertained in the homes of the Las Cruces club women. They and visitors were taken to State College Saturday morning and shown all through the buildings and campus.

A reception was given in the Library auditorium Friday night and a concert Saturday night in the Methodist church; one special feature of the program were the numbers on the new pipe organ.

A Friend in Need

A bright light, shining throughout the entire night at the City Service Station on Alamo-gordo avenue, is a welcome sight for late arrivals who are in need of service on their cars and also when in need of accessories of any kind, they can always be found at that place. Tourists who arrive between the midnight hour and morning are nearly always in need of service of some kind, and now that the season for tourist travel is beginning, the station will offer a great convenience for that part of the traveling public.

Miss Earl Bond and father, Robert Bond of Roswell, were guests of Mrs. Erya Claunch, last Sunday.

Caught One S-O B-I-G

A big group of Carrizozo fishing fiends will start for the Elephant Butte Dam tomorrow, and will make the trip with the firm intention of showing us just how many fish they will catch—and just what size they will be.

They will, of course, eat all the of the larger ones, as they will make too much weight to carry home. We know of a few of the bunch; they are: E. H. Sweet, J. B. French, S. W. Kelsey, C. F. Grey, Dr. R. E. Blaney, and Meyer Barnett. More are going we understand, but we cannot place them now. Look out for fish stories when they return boys.

Mrs. T. E. Welch of White Oaks received word last Saturday to the effect that her father, Mr. C. E. Northup, was critically ill at his home in Greensburg, Kansas. She took No. 12 with the hope of reaching home before he passed on, but after her departure a second message was sent, announcing his death at 5 o'clock and she was unaware of his death until she arrived at her home town.

Ed R. Kelley, father of Town Trustee T. E. Kelley and one of our former residents, who for years resided and transacted business here, arrives here from Riverside, Calif., where he has resided since leaving here several years ago. Mr. Kelley will visit with his son's family for a month or so and will be joined soon by Mrs. Kelley. They will spend the time of

We are in receipt of a letter from one of our former Carrizozo boys, Albert Lalone, who now resides with his parents at Sierra Madre, Calif. Albert likes his new home very much, but has not forgotten his old home and says he is always glad to get his Outlook, which reaches him every Monday. He sends best regards to his friends.

More Walks

Several big piles of sand, plenty of argument and considerable activity around the Community Hall, is an evidence that the work of putting in a cement sidewalk is about to begin. This improvement, together with the walk the city is putting in, will add greatly to the beauty as well as to the convenience of both our people and our visitors.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Flood Control Bill Fought by Coolidge and Others as "Extortionate."

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

THAT the flood control bill passed by the senate and, with certain amendments, under debate in the house last week, is the most extortionate measure in the history of the government in the opinion of President Coolidge. His remarkably outspoken view of this bill created something of a sensation in Washington and it encouraged a group of representatives, led by Mr. Frear of Wisconsin, in a determined fight on the measure reported by the house committee. The main issue was the question of local contribution upon which the President had insisted.

"Contribution is a cardinal principle in federal, state, and municipal aid," said Mr. Frear. "This case presents no exception. Thousands of corporations and large individual owners under this bill will enjoy enormous financial benefits through flood protection. They should contribute toward the expense. If we pass this bill and adopt the plan of giving away the taxpayers' money without limit to rehabilitate or benefit great interests that can bring political pressure to bear on congress, a hundred other flood control projects now knocking at committee doors will all demand the same treatment without contribution."

Reid of Illinois, chairman of the flood control committee, said in reply: "There is in the bill no provision for local contribution. There can be none if congress intends to protect the lives and property of its citizens from these destructive floods. No levee system can be effective unless it is unified, co-ordinated, and complete, and should any levee district fail to pay a contribution necessary under the reclamation theory the whole plan would fail. Nearly every levee district is now or will soon be bankrupt. There is no possible way for them to get money, as they are unable to sell any bonds because of the default in the bonds already issued."

There were conferences of house and senate leaders for the purpose of modifying the measure so that the President would sign it. Senators Handoll and Sackett talked with Mr. Coolidge and reported that he would approve a bill similar to the Jones bill originally reported from the senate committee. This draft, while it eliminated local contributions, contained various safeguards which were not in the measure as passed by the senate and approved by the house flood control committee.

BY HOLDING up action on the $364,000,000 naval appropriation bill the radical Republicans forced the senate to adopt the resolution of Blaine of Wisconsin demanding from Secretary Wilbur information as to the cost in lives and money of the operations of the marines in Nicaragua. Mr. Wilbur informed the senate that maintenance of the marine expeditionary force in Nicaragua had resulted in the death of 21 marines and the wounding of 45 others. He set extra cost to the government of marine activities in Nicaragua at $1,530,170. The total cost of maintaining the expeditionary force, Mr. Wilbur fixed at $3,536,000. It was explained, however, that more than $2,000,000 of the total cost would have been expended on the marines even if they had remained in their home stations. The secretary said it was known that 202 Nicaraguans had been killed in fights with the marines.

WASHINGTON, New York and Chicago were making plans to give rousing welcomes to the German-Irish transatlantic aviators, and were assured that the flyers would visit those cities after getting away from desolate Greenly Island in Belle Isle straits. The stories of their flight show that they lost their way because their compass failed in the dark and the snow-storm, and they wandered far to the north of their route. Relief and aid reached them by plane and otherwise and they were busy repairing the Bremen so they could continue their flight to New York. James Fitzmaurice, promoted to major by the Free State government, was taken to Lake St. Agnes, Quebec, by Duke Schiller, Canadian aviator, to get a new propeller with which he intended to fly back to Greenly Island.

Baron von Huenfeld, Koehl and Fitzmaurice will be entertained in New York for five days, and then, proceeding to Washington, will be the guests of President Coolidge, the Irish minister and the German ambassador. The wives of Koehl and Fitzmaurice will soon join them in this country.

GEN. UMBERTO NOBILE and a crew of fifteen left Milan, Italy, in the dirigible Italia on the way to the North pole, and on the first lap of the journey ran into a fierce storm over Germany. Finally the airship, somewhat battered, came down safely at Seddin airfield, near Stolp, Pomerania, where repairs were made and further trial flights begun. Two more hops will take it to King's bay, Spitzbergen, which will be the base of operations. Nobile, who piloted Amundsen over the North pole two years ago in the dirigible Norge, intends to make several flights over the pole, taking scientific observations. He carries a cross given by the pope which will be planted in the ice at the top of the world.

ADMIRAL J. K. ROBISON, former chief of the navy engineering bureau, was a star witness for the defense in the Sinclair Teapot Dome conspiracy trial and he assumed full responsibility for the change in the government's policy from conserving the navy's oil reserves to storing fuel oil in seaboard tanks and that he favored the opening up of the whole reserve. "Sinclair asked me what we wanted if a contract was entered into," declared Robison. "I told him we wanted a pipe line among other things, and such arrangements as would give him the largest possible profits, and give us the largest possible share of his production. The more money he got, the more I got for the navy."

"I wanted to get the absolute maximum for the navy, and I got it," Robison almost shouted at the jury, as he banged the rail of the witness enclosure with his fist.

Under cross-examination Robison was compelled to admit a close friendship for Sinclair. He disclosed that he traveled for a week in Sinclair's private car and was Sinclair's dinner guest at the exclusive Lotus club in New York. He also admitted he had played poker with Sinclair the very night that Sinclair secured three valuable contracts, one of them to supplement the Teapot lease.

The defense sought to show through Former Secretary of the Navy Denby that the scheme to lease the Teapot Dome reserve was conceived in the Navy department, but Denby's testimony was shut out by a government objection.

Before the senate investigating committee G. G. Chase, a son-in-law of Albert B. Fall, made admissions that were considered extremely damaging to Sinclair's cause, and he was summoned by the government as a rebuttal witness in the trial.

Meat. Gov. George R. Lunn, and the legislative resolution was seconded by Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt. Both speakers centered the hopes of their party on the oil scandals. Senator Bleasde of South Carolina, who is strongly against Smith, has put into the Congressional Record his opinion of the situation in his state. Summarized, this is that South Carolina will oppose Smith for the nomination to the last ballot; that if Smith gets the nomination in the regular way by the two-thirds rule, South Carolina will not initiate or join in any rump convention; and finally, that if Smith gets the nomination, some South Carolina Democrats, though not a great many, will vote the Republican ticket, while a considerable number of them will remain away from the polls, but not enough, in any event, to throw South Carolina into the Republican column.

Both Republicans and Democrats of Illinois held their state conventions, the former being strong for Lowden and the latter turning the delegates to Houston over to Smith. Republicans of Colorado refused to instruct their delegates at large for Hoover. Those of Delaware and Connecticut chose un-instructed delegations to the Kansas City convention, and it is expected these delegations will do their best to "draft" Coolidge. Senator Fess of Ohio, temporary chairman of the national convention, says he believes it will be the duty of Mr. Coolidge to accept the nomination if a deadlock, real and not manipulated, develops.

Meanwhile one national ticket already is in the field. The Socialists held their national convention in New York city and nominated Norman M. Thomas of New York for President and James H. Maurer of Reading, Pa., for vice president. Thomas is a minister and lecturer. Maurer is a member of the Reading city council and president of the Pennsylvania State Federation of Labor.

PUBLICATION of the government engineer's allotments for river and harbor work during the fiscal year 1923 discloses that Eastern and Southern waterways, together with the Mississippi, Missouri and Ohio rivers, have the lion's share of the items running over $1,000,000. Of the big allotments $7,225,000 goes to the Mississippi river and between the Missouri river and Minneapolis, $4,630,000 on the Ohio river, $3,620,000 on the Missouri, $1,700,000 on the Hudson river, $1,200,000 on the East river, $2,150,000 on the Delaware river, $1,000,000 on the inland waterway from the Delaware river to Chesapeake bay, $500,000 for the Savannah, Ga., harbor, $900,000 for the waterway from Beaufort to the Cape Fear river, N. C., $650,000 for Miami harbor, and $1,023,000 for the Sabine-Neches waterway, Texas. The Illinois river is allotted $375,000 for improvement work with the development of the Illinois link of the lakes to the gulf route.

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE, in an address at the opening session of the annual convention of the Daughters of the American Revolution in Washington, criticized federal encroachment on the rights of the states and the growing interference of government in business and the life of the individual. He was warmly applauded when he asserted that the American theory of society "rests upon a higher level than communism," and uttered a plea that the nation return to the high ideals for which the American Revolution was fought.

GEN. OSCAR CARMONA, dictator of Portugal, was inaugurated President of the republic, having been elected by regular suffrage without opposition in March.

One hundred acres for tomatoes have been signed up by Mesilla Valley growers for this season, L. W. The canning factory at Mesquite is preparing to enlarge its output this year and approximately 200 acres will be planted to tomatoes there.

With the revival of mining operations at the Warnock lead mines and increasing recreational activities in the Lincoln National Forest, the Alamo Commercial Club is urging the forest service to cooperate in building the uncompleted eight miles of road leading from Dry Canon past the Warnock mines into the timbered area of Alamo Canon east of Alamo-gordo.

The volume of employment materially increased in New Mexico during March and a continued upward trend is expected. Demands are increasing for outdoor seasonal workers and a great many men who winter in the various cities of New Mexico are gradually migrating to the agricultural sections and other localities where outdoor work is being resumed. Soil cultivation and work in connection with the lambing season is affording employment to many workers. Building and municipal improvement work is increasing and quite a number of large projects are under way. A majority of the industrial plants are operating on normal schedules. Lumbering activity is increasing. Additional seasonal workers are employed on highway maintenance and road building, also on railroad maintenance-of-way and construction work. Railroad shop employment is steady. There is a plentiful supply of all classes of labor in this state.

The industrial employment survey report recently issued from the office of the U. S. Employment Service of the U. S. Department of Labor at Denver, states that an upward trend was noted in several industries in Arizona during March, principally in connection with building and general construction, agriculture, horticulture, and highway construction. The surplus of labor heretofore apparent, principally seasonal agricultural workers, will probably be absorbed soon with the increase in farming operations. Many workers are employed in connection with the sheep-shearing and lambing campaigns. A large volume of building is reported in many sections of the state. Resident building labor is well employed and adequate. General construction work under way, or to be started soon, includes the Coolidge Dam; 19 miles of railroad bed and two steel bridges between Globe and Bowie; and the double tracking of 40 miles of railroad between Holbrook, Arizona, and Gallup, New Mexico. The extensive highway program includes 35 miles of road construction from the Coolidge Dam east. While there is an increase in the demand for highway maintenance and construction workers, an ample supply of highway labor is available for all demands. Producing metal mines are operating normally. The supply of skilled and unskilled metal mine labor is slightly in excess of the demand. An active season is indicated in the lumber industry. Labor supply in connection with lumbering, adequate. Railroad labor supply, adequate.

Although Indian pueblos in recent years are found only in the northern part of the state of New Mexico, students of archaeology in Alamo-gordo declare they believe an Indian ruins found near Mesilla dam recently was the site of a pueblo.

Troop A, 11th Cavalry, of New Mexico, has rented the building in Mesquite, N. M., formerly occupied by the Mesquite Exchange, and will remodel it for use as an armory. The plan is to give it a seating capacity of 400, which will provide Estancia a place for public gatherings.

Forty persons were killed in West Plains, Mo., by a mysterious explosion that wrecked a dance hall.

Howe About Lesson

By ED HOWE

Ball Syndicate. WNU Service.

A magazine writer predicts that within a few years women will dominate business, the law, doctoring, preaching, and pretty much everything else. I do not think so. There will be less sentiment toward the sex in future, and more justice. The modest, useful women have been receiving wages too low, and will get an increase. The bold women who make a business of bamboozling men have been overpaid, and must suffer a reduction; the woman who emerges from the chorus to appear in a mansion, will be reduced. It will be a slow process, but that will be the tendency under "suffrage."

The fifty writing the world objects to is no new thing, but a survival from old savage times.

Though the Arabian Nights is a very old book, and the most familiar in English, next to the Bible, it is one of the least known, the reason being that fully one-fifth is entirely unfit for translation, and the most sanguine orientalist would not dare to render literally more than three-fourths of the remainder. A literal translation of the entire book into English was once made (1833), and it was so filthy that not one man in a million has seen a copy, nor is he able to procure one, so well-organized are modern forces of decency. Of sixteen original volumes, all that is safe to place in the hands of children has been easily reduced to one.

An old city called Pompeii was buried in the eruption of a volcano, more than seventeen centuries ago. Pompeii was occupied by the most advanced civilization of its time, yet when the ruins were excavated, much of the art work found was so filthy that women and children are never permitted to see it.

So, had as we are, we are better than our ancestors. Ugly things have been so covered up by modern men that we may almost boast of virtue.

Sister men have too much gallantry and too little courage.

I do not doubt that gallantry has accomplished more harm than good. One definition of the word found in dictionaries is, marked by showiness, ornamentation. Another, excessive attention paid to women without serious purpose, or with evil intent.

The courageous man can heat the gallant man with women, or with anything else.

Sister men, with their gallantry, have encouraged every evil thing from which we suffer; as they are gallant for the favors of women, so they are gallant for trade.

It's a pity old people do not lose their appetite for food as naturally and easily as they lose their appetite for love. I am still very fond of food, and it is a constant battle to keep from eating too much.

I do not object to hypocrisy when it is amiable, reasonably modest and clever. Hypocrisy makes up half our virtue. But when coarse and professional, it becomes harmful, and a bore.

The people are wonderful even if they are foolish. And they might be saved, if the wiser men taught better.

Thomas Edison is a wise man in his business activities; one of a few the millions "look up to."

I often wonder how these few great ones are in their attitude toward the ordinary things of life.

After all, of greatest importance. A certain famous man, several years ago, had a bad stomach. Without the assistance of doctors, he overcame it, and now is living in comfort well above eighty.

There is a real greatness. The amount of comfort one is able to obtain depends largely upon his ability to behave well; his attitude toward his wife, his children, his daily associates in business, and social life.

And most of all, does he feed sensibly? Does a new pill advertisement attract his attention? Is a doctor book an insult to him? Is his conscience as dirty as the garbage can?

I have always admired the gentleman of antiquity known as Pyrrhus, a commander of armies. One day he stalked out between the battle lines, and made a speech to the opposition soldiers.

"Why not come over and fight with a decent crowd?" he said. "We're in the right, and will treat you right." And the soldiers of the opposition joined him. It was a great speech. Still another commander of olden times rode out between the lines, and said to the enemy: "Why should you men in the ranks assume all the danger and privation of war? Why should not the commander share the danger? Send him out, and if I do not whip him, you win, without further bloodshed." The soldiers sent their general out, and the challenger not only whipped him, but carried him a prisoner into his camp. That ended the war, and the soldiers returned to their neglected homes and families.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—How to Be Truly Great.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Jesus' Standard of Greatness.

Jesus with His disciples was on His way to Capernaum for the last time. He was soon to leave for Jerusalem where He was to die "on" the cruel cross for the sins of the world. He sought retirement in order to make clearer to the disciples the meaning of the cross. They were yet unable to understand Him. It was a most pitiable sight to behold the Son of God facing humiliation and death for man's salvation and even the disciples failing to understand the meaning of His suffering.

1. The Disciples Disputing as to Who Should Be the Greatest (Mark 9:33-37).

1. Jesus' searching question (v. 33). His omniscience enabled Him to discern their secret thoughts. The fact that the disciples were wrangling about official position while Jesus was facing humiliation and death shows how completely He was alone in the world.

2. The silent disciples (v. 34). The revelation of the selfishness of their hearts made them ashamed in His presence. The realization that the eye of the omniscient Lord is over us is the sure and only cure for selfish wrangling among Christians.

3. The stinging rebuke (vv. 35-37). (1) "If any man desire to be first the same shall be last of all and servant of all." True greatness expresses itself in being willing to take the last and least place and to be a servant of others.

(2) His teaching illustrated (vv. 36, 37). This He did by an acted parable of placing a little child in their midst. A little child is a symbol of dependence and ignorance. By word and example He showed that true greatness is expressed in willingness to aid the weak, instruct the ignorant, and serve the needy.

11. The Ambitious Request of James and John (Mark 10:35-45).

1. What it was (vv. 35-37). It was for the positions of pre-eminence in the kingdom. Christ had told them of the awful agony of the cross and also of the glory which should follow. While their request reveals pride and selfish ambition, yet faith in their Lord and a right desire were not wholly lacking. It was not entirely for their personal glory that they made this request, but because of their personal desire to be with their Lord.

2. Jesus' reply (vv. 38-45).

(1) To James and John (vv. 38-40). a. Their misconception rebuked. "Ye know not what ye ask."

b. Positions of glory in Christ's kingdom are earned, not obtained through favor or arbitrary assignment. The way to honor is through suffering. The cup which they were to drink was all that was embraced in the agony of the cross. Christ conceded that the positions which they craved were obtainable, but in a different way from what they thought.

The way to places of glory in Christ's kingdom is through lowly, self-forgetful service and suffering.

(2) To the ten disciples (vv. 41-45). a. Their displeasure (v. 41). The ten disciples were displeased with the request of James and John. Their displeasure was because they were not free from the same selfish ambition; their action was not prompted by righteous indignation.

b. True greatness declared (vv. 42-45). To minister to others is greater than to be ministered unto (v. 43). Among the Gentile nations, greatness was conceded to those who exercised authority over others. This is the world's conception today. Among the followers of Christ a different standard prevails. The standard of Christ's kingdom is to forget self in devoted service to others, even to the giving of one's life. The supreme example to be followed by all is Jesus Christ Himself. His whole life was spent in going about doing good, and on the cross of Calvary He made the supreme sacrifice in providing a ransom for many.

CHAPTER X—Continued

We went downstairs and out of the house in silence, and as we moved down the path we were instantly challenged by Malloy, who came running up to us.

"Where's Wilkins," he asked. "What have you done with him?"

"Lost him," said Ashton sourly. "But he can't have got out of the house," protested Malloy. "I'm sure nobody has got out of the house."

"We've lost him, I tell you," said Ashton. "Can't you understand plain English?"

We all halted just then, and started a little excitedly. A man's footsteps were approaching, and the next moment he halted, rather undecidedly, at the front gate. But seeing us, he turned in and came promptly toward us.

"Where's the car, gentleman?" he asked. "What have you done with the car?"

"What's that?" Ashton roared. "The car—the automobile that I drove you out in! Where is it?"

For a moment there was no answer to that but silence. But the silence and the dismayed astonishment on our faces, gave the man his answer.

"So you went to the fire, did you?" said the doctor grimly.

"Not for more than five minutes," the man protested. "I thought I'd see if I could be of any help."

The man's explanation trailed off volubly—protesting, incoherent, but we paid very little attention to it. We knew what had happened, all too well. "Well," said the doctor, "if Wilkins only appreciated the fact, he owes us a large debt of gratitude. We told him about the map; and then we brought the girl out to him, and left her, together with an automobile for him to disappear in."

"He's better not try to thank me," said Ashton grimly, "until the score is settled. I'll get him yet."

"No," said the doctor, "I don't believe you will. Wilkins is playing in luck, perfectly unmerited good luck. And when you combine luck with the more solid and reliable qualities which Wilkins possesses, you get a result that is almost sure to be successful."

Ashton turned away impatiently. "But the car!" the chauffeur cried. "I'm responsible for it. What am I to do?"

Ashton told him what he might do, in three or four short, explosive words.

CHAPTER XI

The doctor's prediction regarding the escape of Wilkins and the girl came true. It was all of twenty-four hours before the wires were working again; and the search, which could not fairly begin until that time, proved absolutely futile. The automobile was found next day, very early in the morning, standing in front of the Western station, the very place where we had started in it on our ride to Oak Ridge. But the oddly assorted pair, who must have driven back to town in it that night, disappeared as completely as if the earth had swallowed them up.

It was a long while before Ashton would admit the probability, or even the possibility, that he had lost them. Their escape must have rankled, for he never, voluntarily, spoke of the Oak Ridge affair, and he treated all reference to it, however indirect, in a manner which did not encourage discussion.

I think that, in his heart, Doctor McAllister found it impossible to be sorry that Wilkins had got off. It is one thing to know, as a matter of fact, that a man is a knave and that he richly deserves to be hung; but it is another thing to wish, devoutly, for such a consummation. We had liked Wilkins, and the strange, uncanny revelations regarding his past, which the doctor's meretricious instruments had betrayed to us, were not strong enough to change that liking.

What we regretted most, in our discussions over the affair, was our fragmentary knowledge of it. One thing certain about it all seemed to be that we should never know.

But in that conclusion, strangely enough we were wrong. Only a few days ago (and it is now more than two years since the events I have here chronicled took place) the doctor came into my office waving a letter.

"Look at the handwriting first," he said, "and see if you can guess who it's from."

I took the thing in my hand, and frowned over it for a moment in complete perplexity. It was familiar, almost as familiar as my own, and yet I could not place it.

But as I gazed, some vague suggestion of delicate French potages and entrees came into my mind. I started, and dropped the letter on my desk. "Not—not Wilkins!" I cried.

The doctor smiled broadly. "Read what he's got to say."

I needed no second invitation.

"Doctor McAllister. "Respected Sir: I have long intended to write to you to tell you how Jane Perkins and I are getting along, thinking you might be interested. I have taken up the white man's burden, as the poet says, and I find that it takes up most of my time, even though this island of mine is small (About ten square miles) and the population not numerous.

"Perkins and I (or Fanenna as she is called by her own people) are married and living very happy. Now that I am, in a sort, king here—trusting that you will pardon the liberty, sir—and obliged to make all the laws as well as enforce them, I am filled with regret for my former irregularities, though I may say that they have turned out well in the end.

"I did not murder Henry Morgan. Fanenna did, although she does not know it, and I would not tell her so for worlds. Perhaps I had better tell my story in order.

"Morgan was a villain and he deserved exactly what he got—if I may be allowed that opinion, sir. Circumstances may have justified him in killing Captain Franklin; indeed, there is no doubt that it had to be one or the other of them; and in robbing him of his money and his map, he only did what others, perhaps, would have done in his place. But he did an inexcusable thing, when he lodged an information with the authorities against the rest of us. The act was not necessary to his escape, for he could have got off scotfree anyway. But he wanted Franklin's treasure all to himself, and he thought if he could get us all hanged there would be none to dispute it with him. I found out in time what he had done, and I escaped; but the other poor fellows were caught and paid the penalty of their faith in a traitor.

"I went to America, but not in pursuit of Morgan. I did not know that he had gone there, and I wanted nothing more to do with him anyway, as I had decided to settle down and lead a respectable life. It pays just as well as the other and it's much more comfortable. This may surprise you, but it's true—I do not refer to the tips I earned as head waiter at The Meredith. That was not my trade so much as it was my recreation. In my youth I made the acquaintance of a palm reader and spiritualist, and this was the profession I took upon coming to your city. It was not long before I was able to organize this industry and to hire others to do the actual work. I supervised it all, and as head waiter at The Meredith, I was able to learn much about our smart people, which could be told to them again by palmists and mediums, with very good effect.

"It was in this connection that I became acquainted with Jane Perkins. A medium I employed, whose apartment was not far from The Meredith, discovered her, and was using her trance states very effectively as a control. I got the greatest surprise of my life the first time I ever heard her talking Maori, a language which I understand and speak, as I suspect that you do also. From her talk I discovered that she was my old captain's daughter, and that she had inherited his secret. This was coming rather too close to home for comfort, as you will well understand, so I took her out of the spiritualist business, much as I regretted to do so, for she was very valuable, and got her employed as chambermaid at The Meredith.

"We were out walking together one day when her subjective state came over her without warning. She darted ahead of me, and I saw that she was tracking some one through the streets, by the scent. I followed her. Luckily it was dark, and we were not molested. She traveled very fast and overtook the person she was following, just as he was entering the Western station. I caught one look at him and saw that he was Henry Morgan.

"I succeeded in rousing her out of her state, for I did not want anything to happen just then and there. But I was determined to find where he lived and to get his map away from him. It did him no good, as there was neither latitude and longitude marked upon it, and this was the secret which Fanenna had told me.

"On the night when the unfortunate incident occurred which caused you and Mr. Ashton to interest yourselves in the case, we had gone out to Oak Ridge to make an attempt to secure the map. Nothing more than that, I assure you, sir. I had hypnotized her in order that she might lead me, by means of her extraordinary sense of smell, to the house where he lived, but she ran on ahead too fast for me to follow her. The crime was already committed, if you can call it a crime, before I reached the house.

"I tried to get her to go home with me, making no attempt to find the map at that time, but she was greatly excited and dangerous. So I was obliged to go away without her. I was unable to find her from that time, until she came back to The Meredith of her own accord, the day after she made her second visit to the Morgan house at the time when you were there.

"It was during my absence from the hotel, and without my knowledge, that she answered the advertisement for the cloak, indeed, I did not know that she had done so, until you spoke to me concerning it that night at dinner. At that time it seemed safer to permit you to make the examination which you wished to make, than to try to prevent the examination from taking place, for she was now Jane Perkins, perfectly ignorant of anything connected with the affair.

"How you found out her true connection with it, as well as mine, I have no idea. I did not know you had done so, until I tore open the envelope in the hall and found it empty. Then I knew that it was time to act.

"There is one thing more, before I close, which you may think wants an explanation. I said just now that Fanenna did not know that she had killed 'old Morgan, and yet she is Fanenna rather than Jane Perkins, although she is not exactly either one of them. She is no longer subject to those trance states of hers, and her character seems to be a mixture of the two distinct persons which she was before that night when you took her out to Oak Ridge with you. Her memories of all her past are, I am thankful to say, extremely vague, though she remembers some things out of both of them. She can talk both Maori and English as well as I, and she says it is because when she was a Maori girl she heard a voice speaking to her in English, and ordering her to understand it. This seems great nonsense to me, but it may be that you will see some meaning in it.

"I will close by saying that the map which I found in old Morgan's house it cost me to get it, for it has made us very comfortable and well-to-do, and has made it possible for me to make many improvements on this island of mine. It is a very beautiful place, and with the comforts of civilization, which I have been able to add to its natural attractions, is a very good place to live.

"Fanenna wishes to be remembered to you and Mr. Phelps, and also to Mr. Ashton, whom she used to admire very greatly when she was chambermaid at The Meredith.

"I should enjoy a visit from you very much, but I fear it will be impossible, for reasons which you will doubtless understand, for no even to suggest such a thing. But please believe me, sir,

"Yours most gratefully and respectfully,

"WILKINS, "Rona Island.

"P. S. You have seen a map of this island, or a part of it, and above is the name I have given it; but I must imitate the wisdom and discretion of my old chief, and omit to mention latitude and longitude."

The doctor met my eye as I laid the paper down. "You don't happen to know the latitude and longitude, do you, Phelps?" he asked, laughing.

"Do you?" I exclaimed, with a rather startled look into his twinkling gray eyes.

"Do you remember those queer syllables that Fanenna repeated to us that night when she told us her story, the syllables that neither she nor I understood?"

Then, mimicking her strange guttural voice (and I will admit that even now the mere sound of it made me shiver a little), he said, "Ouan fee, ti ones. Ten south."

Over and over he repeated them, his smile growing broader and more tantalizing, as I still failed to understand. Then, all at once, I got it.

"One, fifty west. Ten south!" I shouted.

"Not so loud," he said in mock alarm. "Ashton might hear you. And, on the whole," he added, smiling thoughtfully, but still half-seriously, "on the whole, I'd rather Ashton didn't know."

"You can show him the letter, at any rate," said I.

There came a knock at the door just then, a knock we knew.

"Come in," called the doctor. "Come in, Ashton. Here's a letter that may interest you."

"THE END."

EDITORIAL COLUMN

The Model T Ford Car

Detroit, Apr. 30.—The manufacture of replacement parts for the millions of Model T Ford cars still in daily use continues to demand nearly one third the production capacity of Ford plants here.

Ford officials estimate, from reports of dealers all over the country, that there are still approximately 3,000,000 of the Model T cars in constant use in the United States. Some of these cars are many years old. Every now and then there are reports of Ford cars of the old brass-bound radiator types of 12 to 14 years ago, still running after more than 100,000 miles of service.

The newest of the Model T Fords is now nearly a year old, for the production of the assembled Model T cars was suspended in May, 1927, to make way for the new Model "A."

The suspension of the Model T cars did not affect the production schedule of Model T replacement parts. Throughout the past year the manufacture of Model T parts continued to occupy about one-third the production capacity of Ford plants.

A few days ago newspaper correspondents here asked Henry Ford how long he expected to continue making parts for the Model T cars. "Until the last Model T is off the road," Mr. Ford replied. Then he added, "That may be 10 years, but we do not intend to allow any Ford car to become obsolete as long as it may be made useful with reasonable replacements."

Ford engineers, from tests and observations made over a long period of years, have estimated that the average useful life of a Model T Ford car is about seven years.

Suits for Spring Wear

By JULIA BOTTOMLEY

TWO-piece suit versus three or four-piece ensemble, thus stands the case in fashion's court. The jury of women, called upon to pass judgment, are rendering a fifty-fifty verdict.

It is true, in spite of all the fuss and furor created by the many-piece ensemble, the jacket and skirt (tailor's trousers) for this spring are victorious over an over. In fact, a new interest is awakened in suits this season, due to their fascinating versatility, which emphasizes not only the classic man-of-the-type, but includes, as well, diverse and very charming soft suit stylings. It adds zest to the suit vogue for novelty cloth types of soft flattering silhouette and abounding in intriguing detail, to her competing with the stereotyped strictly tailored sort. The picture illustrates the point.

The model to the left is the usual navy twill and it is practical in its every detail of slender fitted skirt, two-button double-breast effect, manly notched collar, braid binding, perfectly fitted sleeve and properly positioned pocket. This style is also very smart developed in black. The spring program places particular stress on suits of this conservative character.

Just as conspicuous in the tailored mode is the Norfolk suit of beige fancy tweed as pictured to the right herewith. The front of the jacket has box plaits, and there is a deep yoke as shown. The skirt is a wrap-around with set-in pockets.

As to softly silhouette suits, Paris is sending over delightful versions. These include such charming ideas as a skirt scalloped around the bottom, the jacket itself adhering to regulation tailored form.

Kitchen Convenience

(Prepared by the Bureau of Home Economics, United States Department of Agriculture.)

One of the easiest things to accomplish in making a kitchen more convenient is to group all equipment, small as well as large pieces, into work centers, says the bureau of home economics. The relation of these centers to one another and to the room as a whole is important. The various activities in the daily routine should follow each other from one center to the next without confusion, so that there is a good light at each, and so that the necessary passing of persons through the kitchen does not interfere with the work. A shelf or table by the back door for incoming supplies will cut down the traffic.

Preparation of raw foods, cooking, serving, and clearing away and dishwashing are the four activities that follow each other every day and several times a day in most kitchens. Compact centers for these jobs should therefore follow the same order around the room from left to right, since for the right-handed person work generally moves conveniently in this direction. The centers for serving and for clearing away and dishwashing should be nearest the dining-room and close together. Dishes and silver can then be washed and put away all within the space of a few square feet and are just where they are wanted for use at the next meal.

Raw food is prepared chiefly at sink and work-table or kitchen cabinet. At the sink, fruits and vegetables are washed and pared, and utensils are filled with water for cooking. Near the sink, then, should be kept brushes, knives, colander, strainers, and similar tools; stewpans, double boilers, and other utensils that are filled with water before they are put on the stove; and a garbage can. Small stores of the less perishable fruits and vegetables may be kept in a cupboard or bin under one of the drainboards. At the work-table are needed sugar, flour, salt, spices, and other dry groceries. It is not necessary to have a kitchen cabinet, but many home-makers find this piece of equipment useful. Mixing bowls and spoons, measuring cups, molding board, rolling pin, food chopper, bread and cake pans, and all such utensils, large and small, needed frequently in mixing and getting food ready to serve, are also kept at the food preparation center.

How Much Water Should Baby Get?

A Famous Authority's Rule
By Ruth Brittain

Baby specialists agree nowadays, that during the first six months, babies must have three ounces of fluid per pound of body weight daily. An eight-pound baby, for instance, needs twenty-four ounces of fluid. Later on the rule is two ounces of fluid per pound of body weight. The amount of fluid absorbed by a breast-fed baby is best determined by weighing him before and after feeding for the whole day; and it is easily calculated for the bottle-fed one. Then make up any deficiency with water.

Giving baby sufficient water often relieves his feverish, crying, upset and restless spells. If it doesn't, give him a few drops of Fletcher's Castoria. For these and other ills of babies and children such as colic, cholera, diarrhea, gas on stomach and bowels, constipation, sour stomach, loss of sleep, underweight, etc., leading physicians say there's nothing so effective. It is purely vegetable—the recipe is on the wrapper—and millions of mothers have depended on it in over thirty years of ever increasing use. It regulates baby's bowels, makes him sleep and eat right, enables him to get full nourishment from his food, so he increases in weight as he should. With each package you get a book on Motherhood worth its weight in gold.

Just a word of caution. Look for the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher on the package so you'll be sure to get the genuine. The forty-cent bottles contain thirty-five doses.

HELPED DURING MIDDLE AGE

Woman Took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Denver, Colo.—"I have taken six bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and will take more. I am taking it as a tonic to help me through the Change of Life and I am telling many of my friends to take it as I found nothing before this to help me. I had so many bad feelings at night that I could not sleep and for two years I could not get down town because I was afraid of falling. My mother took the Vegetable Compound years ago with good results and now I am taking it during the Change of Life and recommending it."—Mrs. T. A. MIZELL, 1611 Adams Street, Denver, Colorado.

Fairy Tale for Children

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

"Little South Wind," said the Fairy Queen, as she waved her wand, and the South Wind paused for a moment, and whispered as it rustled around the Fairy Queen.

"What is it thou wouldst have me do for thee?"

"Will you whisper to all the fairies, elves, goblins, gnomes, bogey family, the birds and Mr. Sun, that we are going to give a welcoming concert to the spring this afternoon?"

"I will do as you ask," said the South Wind, and gently the breezes began to blow, and the Fairy Queen knew that the South Wind was doing as she had asked.

"I must get to work," she said. "So must I," said Willy Witch, "and we shall have the party here, eh?—right in front of this mossy patch."

The Fairy Queen nodded, and Mr. Giant, who had joined them, thought the spot was quite perfect for the concert.

They went off in different directions, full of plans, but the Fairy Queen told Yhab, who led the fairies orchestra, to be sure to get the birds to come, too, for she said the spring wouldn't be the spring without the birds.

It was afternoon, and the Fairy Queen was seated upon a throne made of moss and violets.

She wore a beautiful robe made of violets and her crown was of maiden hair tress with little star flowers decorating it here and there. Her wand was covered with star flowers.

The elves and gnomes and goblins and other fairies and guests all came in new spring frocks of lovely green and delicate pinks, and bright blues and soft, wondrous yellows.

"Ah, how lovely you all are," said the Fairy Queen. "Soon the concert will begin."

No sooner had she said this than

Out From the Woods Came Old Mr. Giant.

from all the trees around up flew many, many birds.

They had been crouching as low as possible so as to escape being seen. They thought this would be such a surprise, and indeed it was!

They sang at once as Fairy Yhab appeared on a mossy mound and waved her little moss covered stick, which she used for keeping time.

All the fairies who were in the orchestra played the different instruments, but the woodpeckers beat the drums, for they liked that best.

The fairies in the orchestra and Yhab wore bright golden robes and crowns of gold. Such songs as the birds sang and how the fairies played!

Soon there came the sound of a trumpet and then another sound of the trumpet.

Everybody listened and looked, when, in a moment, from out of the woods came old Mr. Giant dressed as the spring.

His suit was made of new green grass, his tall hat which made him look more enormous than ever was of green moss, and growing out of the moss were violets and many other wild spring flowers, while growing out of the grass were tulips and even little dandelions!

Behind him came Willy Witch, and what do you suppose she wore?

She was dressed to look like the sun, and she was supposed to be the summer—following the spring.

How they all enjoyed this surprise, and how Mr. Sun beamed and smiled when he saw Willy Witch.

And, as at last he had to go to bed,—he said:

"It has been fine to be a guest at a concert-surprise party like this."

And they all thanked him, and every one agreed that it had been a huge success.

JERUSALEM ARTICHOKE CHIPS

Jerusalem artichoke chips are delicious and easily made. Pare the artichokes, slice very thin, and soak half an hour in cold water. Dry between towels and drop into very hot fat (400 degrees F.). Cottonseed oil is the best fat for this purpose. Skim out the chips when nicely browned and drain and salt in the usual way.

Dried Lima Beans in Tomato

Sauce

(Prepared by the Bureau of Home Economics, United States Department of Agriculture.)

Before the summer when fresh lima beans are available from the garden the nearest approach to their special flavor is in dried limas. These are more starchy than the fresh beans, and not so rich in vitamins, but they are a good food and help to vary the late menu. When served in tomato sauce they are particularly well liked. The recipe is from the bureau of home economics.

- 1 lb dried lima beans
- 1 onion, sliced
- 1 pint thin tomato sauce
- Salt, pepper and sauc.
- 1/2 cup bacon fat

Wash the beans thoroughly and soak them overnight in water to cover. Drain them and cover with fresh water and cook for about one-half hour or until tender but not broken. Brown the onion in the fat and mix with the tomato sauce and the bean liquid. Add the beans and cook until the mixture has thickened.

Tomato Sauce.

- 1 can tomatoes
- 1/2 lb butter
- 1 bay leaf
- 1/2 tsp. flour
- 1/2 onion
- 1 tsp. salt
- 3 cloves
- 1 tsp. sugar

Cook the tomatoes with the seasonings for ten minutes and strain through a fine sieve. Blend the butter and flour, mix with the hot tomato and stir until thickened.

THE IMPORTANT DESSERT.

We all know that a dinner seems unfinished and unsatisfactory without a dessert of some kind, even a handful of raisins will satisfy. From the housewife's point of view a hearty dessert will be found—a real help in round ing out a meal on a cool day. Rice Pudding de Luxe.—Heat one quart of milk in a double boiler and add one-third of a cupful of rice, one-fourth cupful of sugar, one-fourth teaspoonful of salt, and cook at low temperature for two hours or longer; add one-half cupful of raisins added the last of the cooking. Stir frequently; the mixture should be like soft boiled rice. Cool, add one-half teaspoonful of vanilla and fold in, very lightly, one cupful of whipped cream. Put in a shallow serving dish and decorate with halved cherries or shredded almonds. Canned fruit or preserves may be used, or other nuts.

Peach Betty.—Sprinkle a well buttered baking dish with fine bread crumbs, add a layer of half a dozen peaches, sprinkle with a few blanched almonds shredded, then another layer of crumbs, dotted with butter or well-buttered, using the crumbs to finish the top. The amount of material to use depends upon the size of the family and appetite. Pour over the top enough of the canned fruit juice to moisten well, adding a tablespoonful of lemon juice to a cupful of the juice. Bake slowly until well set—one to one and one-half hours.

Marmalade Mousse.—Whip one pint of cream, add three-fourths of a cupful of sugar and one-half cupful of orange marmalade with a pinch of salt. Freeze for three hours.

Pleasures of the Table.

When one is denied the appetite to enjoy the delightful foods that are daily placed upon the table one is cut off from one of the main pleasures of life. The dainty service, the attractive coloring of dishes, as well as the vands and flowers, all add tremendously to our delight.

During the cool months when shut in from inclement weather in the North, is the time to use our most brilliant tableware, the brightest flowers and the most appealing dishes. For those who are much in the open, foods of a much heartier kind may be prepared, but for the inactive, invalid, or aged, foods easy of digestion and appealing to the senses are desirable.

A dessert should be planned as a part of the menu, rather than, as is so often the case, a dish tacked on, as a sweet. Children always enjoy puddings so much that it is a pleasure to serve them. These will be found suitable for either young or old, active or inactive.

Black Betty.—Heat five well stewed prunes, slightly sweetened on rounds of sponge cake which have been soaked in prune juice. Top with whipped cream to which a dash of lemon juice and a bit of grated rind has been added.

Baked Chocolate Pudding.—Beat four eggs slightly, add one-half cupful of sugar, one-fourth teaspoonful of salt, and pour over the mixture one quart of hot milk in which one square of chocolate has been melted; whisk with the egg whip to mix well and pour into a well-buttered baking dish; set into a pan of hot water and bake until well set.

Prune Pudding.—Put one pint of hot milk over one-half cupful of dry bread crumbs and let stand an hour. Add one cupful of prune juice and two slightly beaten eggs, one-fourth teaspoonful of salt, one tablespoonful of melted butter and one-eighth teaspoonful of cinnamon and nutmeg. Stir in one cupful of prunes cut in small pieces after being well stewed. Bake until brown and set. Serve with a hard sauce or cream.

Baked Egg and Cheese

For lunch or supper a dish of baked eggs sprinkled with grated cheese and bread crumbs is always appealing. The bureau of home economics suggests break the desired number of eggs in a shallow greased earthenware or glass baking dish, add a few tablespoonfuls of cream and salt enough to season, and sprinkle over the top grated cheese mixed with fine, dry bread crumbs. Set this dish in a pan containing hot water and bake in a moderate oven until the eggs are set and the crumbs are brown. Just before serving add a few dashes of paprika.

A Savory Pot Roast

(Prepared by the Bureau of Home Economics, United States Department of Agriculture.)

Pot Roast of Beef With Buttered Carrots and Stuffed Onions.

Select a piece from 4 to 6 pounds in weight. Wipe with a damp cloth. Brown the meat well on all sides in a heavy kettle, using a small quantity of beef fat. Slip a low rack under the meat, add one-half cupful water, cover tightly, and simmer until tender. The time required for cooking cannot be definitely stated, but it will probably be about three hours. Turn the roast occasionally. Sprinkle lightly with salt toward the end of the cooking. When the meat is done, remove from the kettle and pour out the liquid, and skim off the excess fat. To each up of meat stock, add 1/2 to 2 tablespoonfuls of flour, mixed until smooth with a small quantity of cold water. Cook the gravy until thickened, add more salt if necessary, and season with pepper and chopped parsley. Serve the meat on a hot platter with buttered carrots and stuffed onions.

The bureau of home economics gives the following directions for preparing a tasty pot roast from such cuts of beef as chuck ribs, cross arms, clod, round or rump.

Bell to Star for Boston Braves

LESTER BELL, regular third baseman of the Cardinals for three years, has been released to the Boston Braves in consideration for infielder Andy High, who is a St. Louisan, and a cash consideration. While the Cardinals obtain in High a player who is capable of playing any infield position with the possible exception of first, Manager McKechnie does not plan to use him as regular third sacker. He said that, according to his present plans, High would be used in a utility role, with Wattie Holm as the hot corner guard.

The trade of Bell was not unexpected: While he was hitting the ball hard in his spring appearances, he was miserable in the field. In nearly every game he appeared his fielding was erratic.

With a change in scenery, and playing with Rogers Hornsby, under whom, in 1923, he had his greatest season, Bell may be able to return as a star. When the Cardinals won the pennant and world series in 1923, Bell was one of the greatest third basemen in the game. He hit .325, being the team's leading hitter that year, and he also fielded well.

Missing the driving influence of Hornsby, Bell proved a "flop" last year. He batted only .259, and as his hitting declined, so did his fielding. He appeared in 115 games. Even in his best years, however, Bell was not a popular player in St. Louis. He was unmercifully "ridden" by fans on numerous occasions.

The passing of Bell ends a six-year term in the Cardinals' organization. Purchased from Lansing from the Central league in 1922 for a small sum, he was "farmed" to Syracuse, and then to Houston in 1923. He was recalled by the Cardinals that year, and played in fifteen games, batting .373.

In 1924 Bell got into seventeen games with the Red Birds, and then was sent to Milwaukee on option. He was recalled at the end of the season. After batting .365 during these few years, Bell was used as a shortstop.

From 1925 to the present, Bell was a regular with the Cardinals, being converted into a third baseman. His first full season he batted .285. As mentioned, he batted .325 in 1926 and .259 last year. His lifetime batting average is .294. Bell is twenty-seven years of age.

Bell took the release nonchalantly. "It's baseball," he commented. "Though I hate to leave the Cardinals, I feel that the trade will benefit me a great deal. I like to play with Hornsby. They may say what they want about him, but he's always treated me royally, and I think I'll find my new surroundings very agreeable."

DIAMOND PICK-UPS

And then we have the Pirates, who lost three straight to the Brisco Seals.

Pitcher Billings of Detroit knows his groceries. His first job was driving a wagon for a grocer.

Danny Clark, Cardinal outfielder, has been released outright to the Houston club of the Texas league.

Charles Barnes, a younger brother of Virgil and Jess Barnes, is trying out with the New York Giants this spring.

Frank (Red) Crist, first baseman of the Fairmont team of the Middle Atlantic league, has decided to quit baseball.

Rabbit Whitman, Montreal outfielder, has hit under .300 only once since he's been in baseball, dropping to .233 five years ago.

Bill Cissell, the costly rookie of the Chicago White Sox baseball club, has been insured for $100,000. Cissell cost the Sox $128,000.

Ben Chapman and Allen Cooke, two youngsters with the New York Yankees, have been released optionally to Asheville of the Sally league.

Outfielder Joe Bonowitz of the Fort Worth Panthers was called away from camp recently by the death of his mother in Columbus, Ohio.

Harry Rice, first outfielder who was acquired from St. Louis during the winter, should make the Detroit outfield one of the best in the majors this season.

Jim Poole, who tried for two seasons to play first base satisfactorily for Connie Mack's Athletics, will play with Atlanta in the Southern league this year.

Danny Taylor, recruit outfielder with the Brooklyn Robins, has been turned over to Memphis of the Southern league. He was not quite what Uncle Robby wanted.

"Shanty" Hogan, the Giants' catcher, celebrated his twenty-second birthday while the Giants were in spring training. In an exhibition game that day he got two hits.

Split seasons have been adopted for the coming year by the Pacific Coast league, Southern association, Western league, Texas league and numerous class C and D organizations.

Old Alex is one of the grand-daddies of the big time now. Grover Alexander of the St. Louis Cardinals is forty-one and, in his seventeenth campaign this season. He started with the Phillies in 1911.

Albert Kritt, a young outfielder from Washington, has been signed by Manager Joe Neptune for his Frederick Hustlers of the Blue Ridge league. He was given an early trial by Atlanta of the Southern league.

Fred G. Somers, former International and Eastern league first sacker, has been appointed manager of the Petersburg club of the revamped Virginia league. Somers had a shot at it in the National league at one time.

Sport Notes

Association football has developed into the most popular sport in Austria since the World war.

Herman Byers was named an honorary captain of Indiana university's football team of last fall by Coach H. O. Page. Byers played at halfback, and is from Evansville.

Mexico will compete in the 1928 Olympic games with a squad of 40 men. This will make the second appearance of Mexico as an Olympic competitor, the first having been in 1924.

A golf team, made up of students from Oxford and Cambridge, is planning to visit the United States during the coming season to engage in matches with Yale, Harvard, Princeton and Cornell.

Aileen Allen, women's coach at the Athletic and Country club of Pasadena, Calif., has been appointed to train the American girl athletes who will be entered in the Olympic games at Amsterdam this summer.

Press Staves Off Deadly Boredom by Giving Suspense to Life

By DR. THADDEUS L. BOLTON, Temple University.

NEWSPAPERS are indispensable to the happiness and well-being of mankind, for they supply the stimulus to animation without which the life of the average citizen would become unbearably monotonous. It is difficult to know how we would get along if murders, disasters, instances of banditry, descriptions of crimes and confagurations were not brought to us.

Suspense—the alternation between hope and depression—is after all something that our natures demand, and here is where the newspaper comes into our routine lives as a saving grace, snatching us from this dreaded, lingering death by boredom.

Shooting the chutes and riding on the scenic railway in the amusement park supply the necessary prods to children. The modern newspaper performs this function for the adult of higher mental level.

What does a horse race in England amount to without its spills? Would boxing bouts be considered worth while by the fans if blood did not flow freely?

What does it matter to the spectator whether a confagration causes $1,000,000 damage, if only the spectacle has been grand and filled with thrills?

We cannot possibly attend all the murders, fires, earthquakes, unsuccessful transatlantic flights and other occurrences of the kind in person.

The modern newspaper does this for us, and thus saves our consciousness from "innocuous desuetude."

Invincible Forces at Work Making for Growth of Internationalism

By DR. JOHN RANDALL, Director World Unity Foundation.

Popular conceptions of nationalism have been so magnified since the World war as to assume the aspect of a great popular myth. The notion attributes to an international boundary line mystical properties far greater than those it actually possesses.

At the beginning of the war the French and the Germans resorted to every subterfuge to make it appear armed forces of the opposing nation had crossed the boundary first, solely to gain popular support by an appeal to this prejudice.

But coincident with the spread of this glorification of nationalism, the world's economic forces have been steadily at work making for internationalism. A hundred years ago most countries might well have styled themselves self-sufficient, but today every nation specializes, each is interdependent with the others in the intricate economic scheme of the world.

Youths' Disregard of Moral Standards Due to New Significance

By DR. MAX C. OTTO, University of Wisconsin.

If modern youth looks lightly upon the moral standards of the older generation, it is because young people suspect their elders of making a failure of life. Interviews with hundreds of high school and college students have revealed the wide prevalence of dishonesty in school work, and that dishonesty was not considered in the moral category of the young people.

While the older generation has accepted science with its mind, but not with its heart, youth has taken the new developments of biology and psychology into the fiber of its being, and is trying to make life insignificant in terms of this new world. Hope for the future lies in helping youth in the search for a new form of human existence that shall bring a sense of achievement rather than frustration.

Good Humor and Joyous Laughter as One of the Articles of a Creed

By REV. CHARLES FRANCIS POTTER, Detroit.

It is high time we abandoned the religion of fear. The New Thought cults have much to teach the churches in the matter of affirmative religion.

Laughter is conducive to health. A hearty laugh will cure a cold. Laughing heartily and frequently will get a person in the habit of breathing correctly, and correct breathing is the first lesson in health. Sometimes a person can get more good out of a stage comedy than out of a doleful sermon by a long-faced parson.

Laughing should be a part of religion. When I marry a couple with a sense of humor, I know that they are likely to weather the storms of matrimony. If I had a creed one of its articles would be, "I believe in salvation by good humor and joyous laughter."

Athletics in Church Needed to Put Backbone Into the Youth of Today

By SIR WILFRED GRENFELL, English Missionary.

Football, baseball and track men are needed in the Christian church if it is to solve the problem of saving the world. The task is not one for half-hearted believers, in an age when theological questions have little attraction for the young men who will be leaders tomorrow. Backbone and faith—the kind of faith that can be described as reason grown courageous—are the properties needed.

Faith is not a fool's credulity. It is the power by which human beings with limited capacities visualize the possibilities they hope for. Charles Lindbergh is a typical example of the man who had faith in the thing he sought to do.

Youth Looks to Older Generations for Example in Standards of Conduct

By REV. HENRY H. LEWIS, Ann Arbor, Mich.

Modern youth puts the burden of proper conduct on the parents. Youth is disgusted with hypocrisy and the habit of older generations to practice things other than they preach. The youth of today believes that what is fair for his parents is fair for him. Youth seeks the correct path, but demands that his leaders be beyond reproach.

Young persons are growing more observing, and it is a difficult matter for older persons to mask the errors of their lives from the searching gaze of the boy or girl of today.

Lizard Scares Foes by Display of Ruff

Out in Australia, the home of the kangaroo and a lot of other curious animals, there is a peculiar lizard, apparently impressed with the truth of the maxim that an enemy scared and chased away is an enemy less to fight today. And there's nothing like a good bluff, anyway—if it works, says the Baltimore Sun. To frighten its foes away this reptile has developed a most remarkable growth of skin on its neck, protruding into a loose fold but capable of being erected into a wide collar or ruff very like those of the days of Good Queen Bess, and it is colored red on the surfaces which show from the front when it is standing out around the head and neck.

As if all this was not enough the lizard also walks or runs on his hind feet, holding his forelegs up in the air. We may hazard a guess that he borrowed the system from the kangaroos, but if he did he forgot to lend them the ruff in return. Just how terrifying all this is to the natural enemies of the frilled lizard we are unable to say, but if we look at his picture in the books we must at least admit that it makes him appear sufficiently unattractive.

Best Fish Story

Probably the year's best fish story comes from an Oklahoma correspondent of the Farm Journal. On a recent fishing trip with two companions, he relates, his attention was distracted from his line for a moment. Suddenly one of his fellows called his attention to a powerful pull at the line and he tugged away enthusiastically—only to find that an old rubber boot had been hitched to his hook by his playful friends.

Teach Children to Save

For the benefit of Swedish school children without money in the bank, the postal savings authorities of Sweden will open 25,000 new accounts, depositing two crowns on each. Permission has been asked from the government to use $13,400 of the postal savings income for 1927 to defray the expenses. Sweden's private savings banks have made similar distributions of money for several years in order to teach the school children how to save.

Cats Before Relatives

When the will of Mrs. Emma P. Bennett of Lindley, N. H., was probated it was found that her eight cats had fared better than her ten relatives. To the animal friends went a total of $7,000, while the ten relatives had only $4,450 to divide among themselves.

The lower the light is turned the brighter it seems for a pair of fond lovers.

To the Citizens of School District No. 7:

You are advised that it will be necessary to hold another election for the issuance of bonds for our new school building and for remodeling the old one. The Attorney General of the State of New Mexico has approved our transcript of proceedings in holding the election but the bond attorneys of Denver have refused on the grounds that the Board of Education in a municipality is without authority to call and hold an election for the voting of school bonds and that this must be done by the City Trustees. This has been in controversy in the State of New Mexico before and the Supreme Court has sustained the opinion.

The matter will now be turned to the city trustees; Benwell and Co., of Denver, who will print our bonds, furnish the legal opinion and refund our $10,000.00 six per cent issue at 5 1/2 per cent, have agreed to draw the necessary papers for the city trustees. We regret the delay in getting started to build but it would be useless to proceed as without the opinion as to the legality of the issue by a reputable firm of bond attorneys, the bonds would not sell.

As the citizens have approved the issue by no uncertain majority at the previous election we will ask that all interested will come out and vote when notified of the date of the next election. The vote cast for and against the issue of bonds must be shown to practically all who bid as most all of them call for it. A good vote in favor of the issue may enable us to get a better price for the bonds.
