

Gran Quivira Echoes

There has been a general rain over this section and the farmers are planting their crops.

J. J. Robison has finished moving his store to the DuBois flats, where he expects to operate a general store.

There will be a special school program at the Fairview school next Saturday night.

Jewel Daugherty visited friends at the Gran Quivira last Sunday and remained over for the Sunday night services at the church.

Charley "Red" Franklin also attended the services last Sunday night, leaving for home Monday morning.

There was a Rodeo held at the Wyatt ranch last Sunday and the boys took advantage of this for the purpose of getting in trim for the coming Rodeo season.

John "Ace" Montgomery was a guest of Reggie Wolfe last Saturday.

Dr. and Mrs. Hamel, accompanied by their daughter, were away on a visit for the weekend.

There has been an increase in the visitors to the Gran Quivira ruins of late. Dr. Smith is expecting many more this summer than for many past years.

A lady came to the Gran Quivira last week and asked to see the "great ruin," whereupon, Ace Montgomery, who was sitting in front of the store, arose, stretched himself and said: "Look me over, lady, look me over."

Several of the Seniors are making plans to attend the Normal University at Las Vegas this coming summer.

Many people from Capitan motored over to the Ruidoso Sunday to the Rodeo, and all reported a good time.

A party of road boosters composed of E. H. Sweet, J. B. French, S. W. Kelsey, Chas. F. Grey, L. A. Whitaker, Meyer Barnett and several Ford dealers from neighboring towns west and south of here, left here yesterday for Roswell to attend a big road meeting which may favorably effect Carrizozo.

Home from Columbia

Mrs. T. A. Spencer, son, A. N. and Miss Sallie Johnson came in the first part of the week from Columbia, Mo., where they had been for the past two months. Mrs. Spencer's daughter, Jane and son, William, who are attending school at that place, will be home after the term ends.

Glencoe Woman's Club

One of the best meetings the club has ever had, was held May 5, at Mesalero, at the beautiful home of Mrs. Oliver Bogges. The president called the meeting to order, but no business was transacted, in order to give the whole afternoon for the program, of which Mrs. Mims was in charge. The subject was "New Mexico Music," which was responded to by Miss Elizabeth Garrett, in songs and explanations of "New Mexico Folk Lore." This number was so very interesting, she responded to encores by singing several of her own compositions. Mrs. Cozser gave a group of vocal solos. Mesdames Haywood and Bogges gave two beautiful vocal duets and Mrs. Mims gave instrumental solos. About forty ladies listened to this splendid program and enjoyed the social hour, during which time tea and cake were served by the charming hostess.

Go to Church Sunday.

Miranda's Minstrels

The Ladies' Minstrels, sponsored by the Carrizozo Woman's Club, appeared before a large audience at the Crystal Theatre last Saturday night and to say that the patrons were more than well pleased, would be putting it lightly, in fact, we have heard more than one say they would have gladly paid an additional price of admission.

Before the show started, the big crowd was in a happy mood, which showed that even the mention of the word, 'minstrels' produced a vein of mirth in anticipation of what was to come.

If space would permit, it would please us to make personal mention of each character in the cast, but collectively, we offer our humble praise to the affair on the whole; it was fine.

The credit for the success of undertaking goes to the committee with Mrs. Albert Ziegler as chairman, assisted by Miss Lois Snyder, Miss Hazel Melans, Mmes. Lemon, Hunt and Burke.

The public, at large, is unaware of the amount of work connected with an undertaking like the above. They spent many nights in rehearsing their parts, besides arranging their up-to-date costumes. The jokes were, for the most part, all new—and the Woman's Club and the ladies of the Minstrels are to be congratulated on the successful outcome of the entire event.

The committee wishes to thank the public for its patronage; also the expressions of approval since the affair was staged.

Hi School Orchestra Leaves for Albuquerque

The High School Orchestra left yesterday afternoon for Albuquerque to enter the State contest of New Mexico High School orchestras. Mrs. R. E. Lemon accompanied the orchestra.

Notice to Taxpayers

The last half of 1927 taxes are now delinquent, 1 per cent having been added. On June 1, a penalty of 5 per cent will be added and an additional 1 per cent, making a total of 7 per cent additional to be paid.

On and after June 1, 1928, 10 per cent of all 1927 taxes collected must be deducted and remitted to the State Treasurer, for credit of the State Tax Commission, for the purpose of paying commissions allowed to the Special Collector.

It will readily be seen that by paying before the delinquent date, the 10 percent will be saved for the County. To date, there has been collected 73.47 per cent of the 1927 taxes—let's make it 90 per cent by June 1. Respectfully, (Signed) M. B. PADEN, County Treasurer

Mother

Next Sunday, Mother's Day, will be observed at the churches with appropriate ceremonies, and will be the most worthy and sacred of any observance the public can perform.

The day, as a whole, should be set aside in her honor, for countless reasons.

From the foundation of the world, Mother has been the first, last, and always, the mainstay of the home and society. Her oft-repeated sacrifices are known over the entire world, for no matter where you go, of what class of people you meet, Mothers are always the same. From the palaces of Kings to the huts of the savage or the Eskimaux, Mother Love is the same.

There is no other name in the human existence so sacred, so much loved, and so much honored and revered, as the name of Mother.

Let our thoughts dwell with fond remembrances of her love, devotion, self-sacrifice, and deeds without the least thought of self-gratification or reward.

Protect Your Investment in Your Model T Ford

THE Ford Motor Company is making a new car, but it is still proud of the Model T. It wants every owner of one of these cars to run it as long as possible at a minimum of expense.

Because of this policy and because of the investment that millions of motorists have in Model T cars, the Ford Motor Company will continue to make parts until, as Henry Ford himself says, "the last Model T is off the road."

More than eight million Model T Fords are still in active service, and many of them can be driven for two, three and five years and even longer.

So that you may get the greatest use over the longest period of time at the lowest cost, we suggest that you take your Model T Ford to the nearest Ford dealer and have him give you an estimate on the cost of any replacement parts that may be necessary.

You will find this the economical thing to do because a small expenditure may enable you to maintain or increase the value of the car and give you thousands of miles of additional service.

No matter where you live you can get these Ford parts at the same low prices as formerly and know they are made in the same way and of the same materials as those from which your car was originally assembled.

Labor cost is reasonable and a standard rate is charged for each operation so that you may know in advance exactly how much the complete job will cost.

Many rugs suggest in their coloring the beauties of flowers or jewels, but it remained for an Indian rajah, the gawker of Haroda, to carry the illusion to reality. This is but one object in the fabulous collection of jewels of this East Indian potentate.

THE RETURN OF ANTHONY TRENT

CHAPTER I

The Purser Who Interested Himself in Crime.

That windy night only one passenger put out from Dover in the little wave-buffed tender to add his name to the many bound for New York in the waiting liner.

As he climbed the swaying ladder to the Brabant's deck, Anthony Trent was glad of this absence of scrutiny. More than three years absent from his native land, he was again about to place himself under her jurisdiction.

Now that the tender had whistled her farewell and was on her way, no escape was possible. For six days he would be as carefully imprisoned as though the walls of an impregnable jail rose around him.

There was not a name on the passenger list which awakened old memories. And there was not a man among the ship's officers he remembered.

Four years. It was as a soldier he had left America. What vivid years they had been since the Leviathan pulled out of her Hoboken dock and took him and her thousands more to France.

On the second evening out came the first disagreeable incident of the voyage. Trent was sitting in a chair before his open door puffing at a big briar pipe.

A little later there was a tap on the panel. Trent knew it was the purser.

"Come in," he shouted. The purser was a man of middle age and of middle stature.

"I was almost sure I smelled Hankey," he said, smiling as he looked at the red-labeled tin on the table.

"Glad to see you," Trent said, and truthfully, "sit down and fill up." His manner was thoroughly amiable.

"Comfortable here, I trust?" asked the purser.

"Not so good as I usually travel on the big boats for the reason one assumes they are more comfortable, but I've evidently been wrong."

"What sort of traveler?"

"Crime is my game," Trent said, glancing interestedly at the purser who was gazing at him.

"Help yourself," Trent said cordially. He seemed unperturbed.

"The trouble with a purser's life is that he often sees just a chapter of crime," the man said.

"Was he drowned?"

"No. He jumped onto the landing stage unhurt. That was a curious case, Mr. Trent. He had engaged one of the best staterooms aboard. It was filled with his baggage, and he had even selected his seat at the table and tipped his stewards. Of course he may have done that to give strength to the theory that his action was unpremeditated. A clever crook would think of such things.

It was characteristic of Trent that he was ready to face danger when he saw it. At all costs he must not evade it now.

"I have almost forgotten the incident," he remarked. "It was three years ago almost."

"I see your point of view," Trent said presently. "Are you working against me?"

"Not for a moment," Warne answered. "If there's one thing that would please me, it would be to see I've been barking up a wrong tree."

"My dear Mr. Warne," he said unobtrusively, "you have been barking up a wrong tree this time, although no doubt as a rule you don't waste your efforts. It amounts to this. You think my knowledge of the embazzler, Captain Sutton, suspicious. Is that all?"

"Well, there was your method of leaving the Poltania," the other man said, almost apologetically.

"Absolutely none." The purser's air was quite apologetic.

believe me, but I wish you had been such a man. I wish you had asked me angrily what the devil your business had to do with me.

Trent still preserved his air of ease. But he was wondering how it was the official had come so close to the truth.

"You have not yet told me all you know."

"I know about Captain Sutton," said the purser gravely.

"Trent's action in stooping to strike a match on his shoe's heel was to gain a momentary respite. He did not know quite what his face revealed to the observer. Captain Sutton was the only man alive—so far as he knew—who had definite knowledge that Anthony Trent had won the title 'master criminal' by a series of crimes so unique and skillful that he had never been in the toils of justice.

"Captain Sutton," he echoed. "Are you talking of my old adjutant?"

Trent was silent for a moment. He knew Sutton was proud of him for the mention in dispatches and the Croix de Guerre he had won to the honor of the regiment.

"Warne," said the purser, "Brunton Warne."

"Then listen to me a moment, Mr. Warne. When I tell you I did not know Captain Sutton was aboard I am speaking the truth. If I had known he was a passenger I should have been delighted to see him.

"Explain why Sutton jumped to your rescue so ardently when your motives were attacked in the smoking-room. I don't mind telling you we all thought you a crook, and said so. Captain Sutton constituted himself your counsel, and actually smashed Collyer, the Troy millionaire, across the mouth because he continued to dwell on the subject."

"Dear old Sutton," Anthony Trent said gratefully, "he has been a good friend to me. Some day I hope I shall be able to repay him."

"When the Poltania reached quarantine, Captain Sutton, your friend, was arrested. He is now in Stag Stag prison. Embezzlement and attempted murder were the charges."

Trent was stricken dumb. Sutton had never been an intimate friend. Rather he recalled him as a benefactor. He had known him as a wealthy man of vast interests secured by position and fortune from the temptations incidental to poverty.

"I see your point of view," Trent said presently. "Are you working against me?"

"Not for a moment," Warne answered. "If there's one thing that would please me, it would be to see I've been barking up a wrong tree."

"Well, there was your method of leaving the Poltania," the other man said, almost apologetically.

"Absolutely none." The purser's air was quite apologetic.

"My dear Mr. Warne," he said unobtrusively, "you have been barking up a wrong tree this time, although no doubt as a rule you don't waste your efforts. It amounts to this. You think my knowledge of the embazzler, Captain Sutton, suspicious. Is that all?"

"Well, there was your method of leaving the Poltania," the other man said, almost apologetically.

Persian City Leads in Production of Henna

An important industry of Yezd, Persia, is the manufacture of henna. This product is used to wash and color the hair and to stain the finger nails red. Yezd, many people here have red finger nails. I saw colored lambs, and several horses whose manes and fetlocks were dyed fox red with henna.

In the late evening a sunset, covered with henna dust, operates the mill, plodding in a circle in the half darkness. A small round basket covers his eyes to prevent him from getting dizzy. One receives an impression of unreality, of something brought from another world.

The mill is very primitive, standing about six feet high, with the millstone and the circular path around it are sunken. Everything is covered with henna dust. From time to time a little boy shovels the powder into heavy jars. Bernhard Kellerborn in Berliner Tagblatt (Living Age).

Budget System Has Resulted in Business Conduct of Government

By GENERAL LORD, Director Federal Budget.

THE United States is not only the biggest business in the world but the best conducted. Yet the people of the country give less attention to it than to any of their holdings...

Effort was made immediately following the World war to get federal business down to something approximating a normal business condition. Congress gave the country a budget system...

For more than a century the business operations had been carried on in a most casual way. Little or no attempt was made to control expenditures. Today under budget procedure good business practices are being installed in the federal service.

In reply to those who question the ability, integrity and patriotism of our lawmakers we can point to the product of their creative legislation—this wonderful country of ours, great in all things which constitute true greatness.

Social Peril Brought About by Increase of Length of Human Life

By DR. C. C. LITTLE, President University of Michigan.

The raising of the average length of life has provided science with a gigantic Augean stable which will become increasingly difficult to clean and sweep.

Because of the benefits of science there is a growing number of the unfit at birth and unfit to rear children, but who live and have families through the devotion of science to saving their lives.

The only control over the birth of the unfit is an economic one. When burdened down by financial cares brought about by the increasing number of unsuited persons, society will automatically "back-fire" and cause those responsible for such persons to assume the burden.

If life is to be considered as something to be made better and fuller our ideas should then include all sides of an individual rather than that of simply extending the period of existence a few more years. While we are extending the average duration of life we should work to the end that these increased years be made to include more beautiful existence.

Tendency of Family Life Is to Destroy the Individuality of Child

By DR. JOHN B. WATSON, Psychologist, New York.

Family life tends to destroy the child's individuality and independence. The best method of training a child would be to take it from its mother at the age of two or three weeks and place it under the supervision of some one capable of training it.

I am arguing for a complete rotation. The youngsters would have to be brought up in groups, with rotation of fathers and mothers, and even nurses.

I don't believe in law, or prohibitions of any kind. A properly behavioristically trained group would not have to be led by any law or state system. I realize that such a social state can be brought about only in the far distant future.

If the family system cannot train the youngsters in this way it will have to be broken up. Under present conditions it is breeding invalidism and lack of behavioristic happiness in the lives of men and women.

Tools of Democracy Inadequate for Use in Modern Order of Things

By NORMAN ANGELL, English Author and Publicist.

The voice of the people is the voice of Satan, not God. When we come to believe that we may manage to save democracy. The commonest mistake of the electorate mind is to disregard facts. Democracy is inevitable. Attempts to escape it, as some European nations have made by establishing dictators, only bring it back.

Elections often have been made comic opera by voters whose minds fall into irrelevant sympathy with candidates with spectacular appeals. The tools of democracy are inadequate for present-day use. Methods of election that were sensible 150 years ago are entirely out of date for the present-day order of society.

Responsibility of School Increased by the Decline of Home Life

By CORNELIA S. ADAIR, President N. E. A.

The decline of the home as an important factor in a child's life places greater responsibility upon the school. In past generations the home largely controlled the conduct of its members. Today that control is waning and the standards of conduct are increasingly set by society or the community.

Today individuals go to the libraries to read or to public lectures and concerts for intellectual inspiration and the youngsters go to school. The stimulus comes from without rather than within the home today.

This gives the school a very great responsibility, which can only be met by the co-operation of parent and teacher.

Spiritual Life of Mankind Would Fade Without Ceremonies and Rites

By PROF. WILLIAM BROWN, Oxford (Eng.) University.

It is doubtful if religion ever will be able to dispense with ceremonies and rites. Though an individual may, at a certain state in his or her mental or spiritual development, feel relatively independent of these rites and ceremonies, yet with a further development of his life he does feel a need of it again. People I have spoken to on the subject say that without their spiritual life tends to fade and lose clearness and precision. Many who think they can do without forms and ceremonies may tend to seek at those who need them, thinking they are in danger of the other extreme of Narcissism.

New Dresses for The School Girl

By MAE MARTIN

Thousands of mothers with daughters of high school or college age, have problems like this Little Rock, Arkansas, mother. She says: "I don't believe I could have put my daughter through the last two years of high school and college without the help of Diamond Dyes. Dresses long out of style and faded were made new with a package or so of Diamond Dyes and the addition of a few dozen buttons and a little braid. Sometimes two dresses were combined and brought up to date in lines that gave no hint of their past. People never knew they were redyed when I used Diamond Dyes. They never take the life out of cloth or make it limp. They always make things fresh, crisp and bright." Diamond Dyes are true dyes, like those used when the cloth was made. Tinting with them is as easy as bluing and dyeing only takes a little more time. Inset on Diamond Dyes and save disappointment. They never streak, spot or run. My handsome new book, "Color Craft," will help you with your clothes and home furnishings problems. Sixty-four pages of dollar-saving suggestions, fully illustrated in colors. It's FREE! Simply write Mae Martin, Home Service Dept., Diamond Dyes, Burlington, Vermont.

Buck Paid Board Bill With Set of Antlers

Superintendent J. R. Eakin of Glacier National park is authority for one of the most striking instances of wild animal gratitude recorded in natural history. He relates: "A buck deer with especially fine antlers has been a great favorite at headquarters this winter, and several people expressed a desire for his horns when they were shed, which invariably happens around January."

"One morning while feeding this buck on her back porch, a woman residing at administrative headquarters was astonished to see him rub his horns on the wall until they fell to the floor. As she fed him more often than any other person, she believes it was his way of showing gratitude."

Race Mingling

In Hawaii, according to the Honolulu Nippu-Jiji, intermarriage between its many races is becoming more and more prevalent. American men in the islands showed the highest percentage of intermarriage in the year ending June 30, 1927, only 152 out of a total of 383 being with women of their own people. Hawaiian women also intermarry frequently, for out of 271 marriages recorded, 156 were with members of other races. The Chinese, in spite of a popular belief that they are inclined toward intermarriage, showed a total of but 42 such weddings out of 173 men who were married. Only 23 out of 788 Japanese men married women of another race, and intermarriages among Japanese women totaled 41 out of 810.

Largest Rose Garden Owned by King Boris

King Boris, the bachelor king of Bulgaria, who has just paid a private visit to King George at Balmora, has royal rights over the biggest rose garden in the world. It is about 40 miles long and 10 broad. The peasants of nearly 200 villages cultivate it. Their women folk get up before dawn to strip it. When a gentle breeze blows they say that its scent penetrates far beyond the Thracian plain in which it is situated.

It is this garden which yields the world-famous attar of roses, that luscious perfume which, in olden times, Persian sheiks commanded should be used exclusively in their harems. It is said that this even today in India is offered to wedding guests on a little twisted cotton at the end of a short stick.

Attar of roses has long been the costliest perfume put on the market. During the war it ran up to $50 per ounce, and at present is round about $15.

The Bulgarian rose grower who does his own distilling does not get anything like such prices.

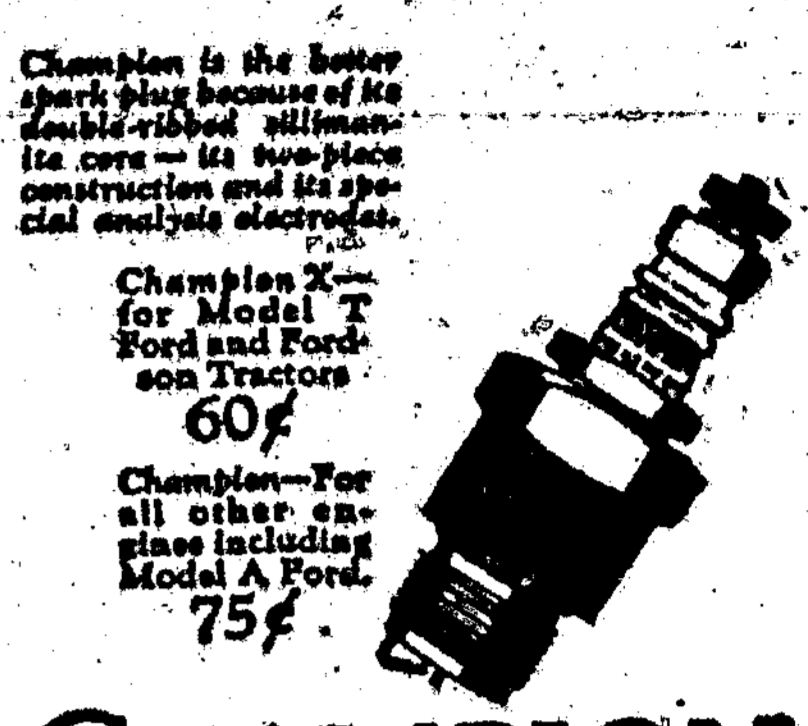

Indian Soldiers

A full-blooded Indian detachment of the United States army, consisting of 16 privates, two corporals and a sergeant, is stationed at Fort Huachuca, Ariz. These Indians lead as far as possible the life as led by their ancestors, living in tents, cooking at campfires and hunting for some of their food instead of drawing it all from the quartermaster. Among the names are Chew Big, Charles Bones and Sinev Riley.

A master virtue is thrift.
