Last Sunday, the Roswell National Guard team came to the Fort to engage the local team in a game of baseball and came out on the big end by the score of 4 to 3, in 12 innings. Flores started to pitch for Stanton but was not properly warmed up enough, for the Roswellites got to him for 2 runs and none out, when he was relieved by Mickey, who retired the side without any further damage. Flores resumed pitching in the second inning and finished the game in good style, striking out 11, allowing as many hits and passing nine. The Stanton team made 12 hits, but could only bucket them in one inning, the 6th, when they made all their runs. The batting of Parker of the Stanton team was a feature, getting two 2 base hits and a single in 6 times up. Hightower made a beautiful running catch in right and with a nice throw doubled up a runner at second.

The pitching of Pirtle of Roswell was very good. He allowed 12 hits, no passes and struck out 16. Roswell made 2 runs in the first, 1 in the second and remained scoreless until they put over the winning run in the 12th inning.

First base on errors, Roswell 2; Stanton 2. Two-base hits, Parker 2, Tesgue, Harris. Three-base hits, Huckaby, Herring. Struck out, Mickey 1; Flores 11; Pirtle 16.

The Rev. Milton J. Swift, Chaplain of Fort Stanton, arrived at the Fort Sunday evening, after having attended the State Public Health and Medical Convention, accompanying the Commanding Officer, the Official Delegate of the U. S. Public Health Service. Rev. Swift received official notice last week of the Right Rev. Frederick B. Howden, of his appointment as a member of the board of directors of St. Ann's Mission of El Paso, this being a clinic for sick Mexican children.

Next Sunday, May 20, the Ruidoso ball club will cross bats here with the local boys. Game called at 2 p. m.

Roadmaster Visits Us

Roadmaster J. B. Dinwiddle was here Sunday morning and attended the Mother's Day services at the Methodist Church, accompanied by two of his old Carrizozo friends, Wm. J. Langston and A. L. Burke. He left in the afternoon on 12, went as far as Santa Rosa, where he met Mrs. Dinwiddle and the children who were on a trip to El Paso. After returning with the folks as far as Alamogordo, he started over the division on an inspection trip. His daughter, Lorena, who attended our school when the family resided here, graduates from the Tucumcari High School and out of a class of 47, she is the Valedictorian, which speaks well for our former home girl.

proud of the successful outcome of "Am I Intruding?" It was one of the best class plays ever seen in Carrizozo — and the remark was heard from every angle that the class plays get better and better every year.

Lorene Stimmel made an ideal housekeeper; Maurice Lemon, an evil - designing adventurer; Frank James made a hit as the secretary adorned with the monocle (single - barreled eye-glass); Lahoma Bigelow, a charming elder daughter; Don Lemmon made a romantic flapper's favorite among the girls; the French maid was ideally portrayed by Mary Elma Ludlow; Bill Lumpkins made a grand old Sugar Daddy; Vera Richard was at home in the role of loving her Pete; George Cooper assumed the role of Peter in a splendid manner; Mary Lou Townsend made an admirable Dora; Ella Bell, with her journalistic propensities, made an ideal Jane Vane's niece — and last, but not least, Raymond Lackland was a scream in the disguise of Jerry, from Sage Creek.

The Eighth Grade Exercises took place Wednesday evening and was one of the leading events of the week. Mrs. Blaney, the teacher, is to be congratulated on the affair. Her painstaking methods, careful training and proper arrangement of her program, met with the admiration of the big audience which filled the Crystal Theatre.

Much to the added credit of our High School Orchestra, it carried away second honors at the state contest at Albuquerque last week, in which we congratulate Director Burkett and every member of the organization. Raymond Lackland carried away first honors as a vocal soloist. What more do we want?

Judge Hulbert Visits

Judge E. W. Hulbert arrived here Wednesday from Las Vegas, where he went Monday from Tucumcari to transact some business. While there, he met his former deputy county treasurer, Mrs. Sall, at that time the Miss Dessie McDaniel of Nogal. Mrs. Sall was on the eve of coming to visit relatives here and accepted a proffered seat in the Judge's car. The Judge will remain in this locality for the remainder of the week and attend the big Masonic Special Saturday night.

Loughrey, Frank Elliot, C. A. McCammon, Smith, O. C. Snow, Oscar Clouse, Zoe Glassmire, Misses Hazel Melas, Ella Brickley, Avela Young.

Mr. Cree was greatly enjoyed and deserves a vote of thanks to all as each did well. We express our appreciation to Mr. J. C. Burkett for assisting by granting us a liberal portion of the proceeds.

Former Carrizozo Resident In Advanced Position

C. C. Stadtman, brother of our Town Clerk, W. W. Stadtman, who has superintended the Granite City, Ill. high school for the past 6 years, has signed a contract with the Wood-River, Mo. Institution to fill a like position in the high school at that place. Since assuming leadership of the Granite City school, he increased the enrollment from 250 to 850. That increase together with reviving the educational interests in general, led to his receiving the above position of advanced importance ahead of 100 other applicants from over the state. Mr. Stadtman will be remembered by many of our residents as being connected with the Carrizozo Trading Company, some 10 years ago.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Smith's Victory in California Seems to Make Nomination Certain.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

UNLESS most of the political prophets are sadly fooled, California last week settled the Democratic national convention at Houston, so far as the Presidential nomination is concerned. Few of them now venture any other prediction than that Al Smith has the prize all wrapped up, and it is generally believed that the rush to get into the band wagon will result in the nomination of the New York governor on the first ballot, probably by acclamation. The California primary was admittedly a test for Smith, for McAdoo strove to lead the dry Democrats of his state into the Walsh camp, and Senator Reed also was a live contender for the preference vote. But McAdoo fell down so badly that the Montana senator ran third, Reed standing in second place. Smith's victory was decisive, his vote being greater than the combined votes of the other two. With most of the precincts heard from, the result in round numbers was: Smith, 153,000; Reed, 58,000; Walsh, 45,000. Of the 58 counties, all but one were won by Smith. Imperial county was claimed for Reed. Former Senator James H. Pugh, head of the Smith delegation, has displaced McAdoo as the Democratic leader of California. The wet rejoiced in the apparent fact that the state had joined the wet column, but Dr. Arthur H. Briggs, head of the California Anti-Saloon league, asserted the wet and dry issue was not a determining factor in the fight. Smith's delegates to Houston total number 497, this total including 157 unattached but known to favor him. He is expected to garner about 140 more in the next few weeks and to go into the convention with at least 635 votes. His managers believe the Ohio and Maryland delegations will be quick to shift to Smith, and that many of the Reed delegates also will climb into the band wagon promptly.

Wilbur Leggett of California, state manager for Reed, asked Josephus Daniels by wire if he would run for vice president on a third party ticket headed by Senator Reed or Senator Borah. Mr. Daniels replied that he would not accept a nomination on any third party ticket, and declared the only hope of wresting the government from the hands of "privilege and corruption" lies in a victory by the Democratic party. He said he intended to support the nominees of the Houston convention and believed enough dry Democrats would be elected to congress to guarantee no weakening of the prohibition laws.

Claude G. Bowers, an editorial writer of the New York Evening World and a political historian of note, was selected by the Democratic convention arrangements committee to be temporary chairman at Houston and to deliver the keynote speech. This choice had been expected.

HERBERT HOOVER was unopposed in the California Republican primary, but the Republicans flocked to the polls to vote for him in surprising numbers. The total G. O. P. vote cast was more than twice as large as the Democratic vote. The Golden state delegation of 29 gives Hoover an estimated total of 500 delegates to date, though 211 of these are unattached. His supporters now claim he will enter the convention with 630 votes, only 10 short of the necessary 645 majority. Last week the Tennessee Republican convention endorsed Hoover and also instructed the state's delegates at large to vote for Congressman J. Q. Tilson of Connecticut for vice president.

PROBABLY it will not cost as much to nominate and elect a President this year as it has sometimes in the past, for the senate has adopted a resolution for an inquiry into the campaign contributions and expenditures of both parties. The special committee named by Vice President Dawes included Senator of Oregon, chairman;

Dale of Vermont, McMaster of South Dakota, Barkley of Kentucky and Bratton of New Mexico. Senator Robinson, the minority leader, who presented the resolution, made no charges of improper methods in the present pre-convention campaign, but said it was considered desirable to have a committee go into the matter just as the Borah committee did in 1924 and the Kenyon committee in 1920.

BY A vote of 204 to 121 the house passed the Haugen farm relief bill, which is almost identical with the McNary measure passed by the senate. Both contain the equalization fee feature which is especially objectionable to the President, and it was taken for granted that he would veto the bill that comes out of conference. Nearly all the western and southern representatives voted for the Haugen bill. The eastern Republicans voted against it, but it was supported by a considerable number of Tammany Democrats.

Veto by President Coolidge also is expected for the flood relief measure which was reported to the house by the conference committee, since the conferees insisted on retaining the flowage rights feature to which he objects.

PARTY lines were drawn quite sharply when the senate began debating the tax reduction bill. Republicans on the finance committee had cut down the total reduction of the house bill from $290,000,000 to about $200,000,000, which is the limit placed by the Treasury department. The Democrats still insisted on a total reduction of $325,000,000. The fight was mainly over the corporation tax, the Republicans wishing this cut from 13 1/2 to 12 1/2 per cent and the Democrats arguing for a cut to 11 or at most 11 1/2 per cent. The Democrats also would retain the graduated scale of rates for corporations with incomes of $15,000 or less as voted by the house. Senator Smoot expected the debate in the senate would last over a week.

HARRY SINCLAIR appeared before the senate's Teapot Dome committee and told something of the Continental Trading company deal, but not near enough to satisfy the investigators. He fenced skillfully with Chairman Nye and the others and made few admissions except that he had received $757,000 of the Continental's profits, which sum, with interest, he said he had recently turned over to the Sinclair Crude Oil Purchasing company. The committee is making up its report, but expects later to investigate the oil leases in the Salt Creek field.

RETURNING from Washington, where they attended the funeral of Floyd Bennett, the German-Irish transatlantic flyers were given the usual uproarious reception that New York accorded such celebrities. It included parades, banquets and valor medals and the aviators were almost worn out by the attentions showered upon them. Next they journeyed back to the national capital where they were officially welcomed to the United States by Secretary Kellogg with dignified ceremony. They lunched at the White House and President Coolidge pinned on their breasts the distinguished flying crosses which congress had voted them. In Arlington National cemetery they laid wreaths on the tomb of the Unknown Soldier. Among those who greeted them in Washington was Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, who had flown there in his "Spirit of St. Louis" for the purpose of placing that famous plane in the Smithsonian Institution. Thursday Baron von Huenefeld, Captain Koehl and Major Fitzmaurice flew to New York to arrange for their air tour of the East and Middle West.

Gen. Umberto Nobile and companions left St. Paul, Germany, Thursday in the airship Italia for Spitzbergen, 1,700 miles away. The Italian explorers plan to make several flights over the polar regions during the summer. Delegates from all parts of the world are assembled in Kansas City in attendance at the quadrennial general conference of the Methodist Episcopal church. They have a lot of business on hand, but it is not likely their delays will be tinged with sensationalism, since at the start they voted overwhelmingly against a formal discussion of fundamentalism and modernism. In their episcopal address the 44 bishops recommended that full advantage be taken of the chance to assign responsibilities to younger members of the church. They held the possibility of a world union of Christian churches to be beyond consideration at present. Among the laity there is a strong movement for the democratization of the church government, including the election of bishops for a term of years instead of for life. The conference approved a court of 17 members to try Bishop Bast of Copenhagen on charges arising out of his conviction in civil court of misusing church funds. Rev. Fred S. Stone of Chicago was chosen prosecutor.

CHIANG Kai-shek, generalissimo of the Chinese Nationalists, has moved his headquarters to Tainan, capital of Shantung province, and is laying his plans for the final drive against Peking and the armies of Chang Tso-lin. It is reported that Chiang has gathered 100,000 men in the vicinity of Tselow, where there is a large arsenal, and presumably the next big battle will be in that area. The situation between the Nationalists and the Japanese was relieved when the former agreed to reopen the Shantung railway and permit the Japanese troops to operate between Tsingtao and Tsinan. But the Nationalists in Shantung are keeping up their anti-Japanese boycott.

JOHN BULL is likely to cancel his agreement to help Uncle Sam stop the smuggling of illegal liquor into the United States, for he is getting greatly peeved over the impetuous action of some of the American rum chasers. Coast guard boats have been entering Bahama and Bermuda ports without warrant, and foreign ships have been seized by them allegedly without right. The British government made formal protest, and Secretary Kellogg, after replying in apologetic tone, ordered all coast guard craft to remain away from Bermuda ports. Only a few days ago, too, Canadian authorities complained that our enforcement agents in the Detroit area were firing shots that crossed the river and endangered the lives of Canadians. This was denied by Washington.

EGYPT isn't going to lose its independence just yet, but it must mind its step. Great Britain's protest against the Egyptian "public assemblies bill," which it was said would hamper the protection of foreigners, was followed up by the sending of several warships to Alexandria and open threats to reduce the country again to a dependency. But the Egyptian government postponed consideration of the objectionable measure and the warships were called off. However, Foreign Secretary Chamberlain warned Egypt that there must be no revival of the controversy.

GERMANY has unqualifiedly accepted Secretary Kellogg's proposals for a multi-lateral treaty to outlaw war. The Berlin government indorses the plan enthusiastically and says it is ready to enter negotiations with the leading powers for the consummation of such a pact. The German note holds unfounded the French fear that an unconditional anti-war treaty would conflict with the League of Nations or a nation's right of self-defense, and takes the position that reservations to the American draft treaty are unnecessary.

PREMIER RAYMOND POINCARÉ was a big victory in the French parliamentary elections and is assured of a working majority of about one hundred in the chamber of deputies. The country thus gave evidence that it wishes him to continue his task of patting its finances in order without interference from the radicals who had threatened his plans with destruction. As a preliminary to stabilization of the franc the premier has announced a heavy loan to reimburse the Bank of France for advances to the state.

DEATHS of the week include that of Congressman Thaddeus Sweet of New York, killed in the crash of an airplane; and of Palmer M. Anderson, United States marshal for the northern Illinois district. Mr. Anderson has been succeeded by E. C. W. Leubner.

JESUS TEACHING IN THE TEMPLE

LESSON TEXT—Mark 12:13-14. GOLDEN TEXT—He taught them as one having authority. PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus Answers Some Hard Questions. JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus Teaches Great Duties. INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Jesus Answers His Critics. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Love, the Law of the Kingdom.

1. The Parable of the Husbandman (vv. 1-12). Having put the scribes, chief priests and elders to confusion by a skillful counter question when they demanded to know His authority, Jesus by means of a story lays before them His claim of divine authority, and charges them with betrayal of trust and with plotting to murder the very Son of God. His teaching cut them to the quick, and they sought to lay hands upon Him, but desisted for fear of the people.

2. The vineyard (v. 1). Represented Israel (See Ps. 80 and Isa. 5).

3. The husbandmen (v. 3). Represented the rulers who were charged with responsibility for the spiritual interests of the people.

4. Messengers (vv. 2-5) represented the prophets whom God sent to Israel, even including John the Baptist.

5. The Son (vv. 6-8) represented Jesus Himself.

6. The judgment of the Lord of the vineyard (v. 9). This represented the time when the Jews shall be brought to account for their treatment of the servants of God and of Jesus Himself.

7. The Tribute Money (vv. 13-17). They already would have gladly taken Him by violence and killed Him, but they feared the people. In order to destroy Him they seek to discredit Him among the people (v. 13).

1. Their question (v. 14). "Is it lawful to give tribute to Caesar, or not?" The Pharisees contended that since God was the real King of Israel, it was not obligatory, yet, it was even sinful to give tribute (taxes) to a heathen king. The Herodians were supporters of Herod; with flattery on their lips, they put this subtle question. For Him to answer "Yes" would have discredited Him with the people, and to have said "No" would have made Him liable to arrest as an enemy of the government.

2. Jesus' reply (vv. 15-17). He asks that a coin be brought and inquires whose image and superscription it bears, declaring that those who accept the coin of Caesar should pay taxes to Caesar. In this reply the Lord escapes their trap and enunciates a principle which applies to all time and conditions as to the Christian's responsibility to civil government.

3. The Resurrection of the Dead (vv. 18-27). The Pharisees and Herodians being silenced, the Sadducees came with a question which involved not only immortality but the resurrection of the body. They denied the reality of the resurrection, and believed not in angel nor spirit (Acts 23:8).

1. The case proposed (vv. 19-23). The law of Moses made it not only legal but morally binding in the case of a man dying without children for his brother to take his wife (Deut. 25:5). They propose the case of a woman married successively to seven brothers. They ask whose wife she will be in the resurrection.

2. Jesus' reply (vv. 24-26). By a quotation from the Mosaic law (Ex. 3:6) He proves the resurrection of the dead, and their continued existence after death as glorified beings. He shows that marriage is for this present life. He points out that their great error was due to two things.

(1) Ignorance of the Scriptures (vv. 21). In the very Scriptures which they professed to believe was positive proof of the resurrection (Ex. 3:6).

(2) Ignorance of the power of God (v. 24). God is able to provide a life where there is no death, no births or marriages.

IV. The Great Commandment of the Law (vv. 28-34). Christ's answer shows marvelous insight. He sums up man's whole duty in one word—love. The first and great commandment is supreme and undivided love of God. The second is like unto it in that love is its center; but love for our neighbor in the measure that we love ourselves. Having put His questioners to silence, Jesus now puts to them a question which involves the central doctrine of the Christian faith—the person of Christ (vv. 35-40). Is He human or divine, or both?

Some Good Advice

There is nothing more that I can say. Christ is before you to take freely, accept Him; trust Him; believe what He says; assume that you are His and behave as if you were.—Alexander Whyte

Fifty-three four-year high schools in New Mexico have been accredited, by the state board of education. These do not include North Central Association accredited schools which were passed upon by the national committee in March.

Due to the increasing acceptance of the University of Arizona at Tucson as the logical institution to teach the language of the neighborly republic to the south, the study of Spanish will be changed considerably on the curriculum of the extension division, according to Max Vosskuhler, director.

W. A. Wunsch, extension agent of Eddy county, New Mexico, is urging the planting of the Chinese elm tree which was introduced into the United States in 1908 by the Bureau of Plant Industry, U. S. Department of Agriculture. It is now established in many places in this country, particularly in the south-west.

The Santa Fe Short Line Railway was chartered recently by the New Mexico state corporation commission. The company plans to build from Des Moines, N. M., to a point near Harmer, Okla., where it will connect with the A. T. & S. F. It was set forth in the corporation papers. The authorized capital stock is 300 shares without par value.

More than $18,000 worth of business was placed with Arizona producers and business firms during the first three months of this year as a result of the "Trade at Home—Use Arizona Product" policy followed by the Verde Copper Company, according to a statement transmitted by the company to the Arizona Industrial Congress for the statewide "Buyers and Sellers" conference, held in Phoenix last month.

In no other part of the United States does climatic condition exert so great an influence in watershed and erosion control as in the south-west, says John D. Jones of the U. S. forest service. Over a great portion of Arizona and New Mexico the rainfall is extremely meager and the main agricultural valleys range from desert to semi-desert in type. The rains, when they do occur, are usually torrential in character and, unless there is a fairly firm cover, a heavy runoff is inevitable.

One hundred years ago before New Mexico became a territory of the United States, the Apaches were the most feared of all the Indian tribes. "Always naked, always slaying by treachery and thieving, they torture their prisoners, cruelly scalping them alive, and usually carving their bodies into little bits," said Antonio Barriero, who introduced the first printing press into New Mexico. His "Ojeda's" or Survey of the Southwest at that time published in the current issue of the New Mexico Historical Review, state historical society publication.

Why some New Mexico eggs keep well in storage and others do not is a question which the agricultural economics department of the New Mexico A. and M. College and extension service at State College, New Mexico, are attempting to solve.

A building program totaling more than $250,000 is under way in Gallup, New Mexico. The structures now under way are largely in the business district on Railroad avenue and Coal avenue, the number of houses and apartments are being built in the residence section.

The RETURN of ANTHONY TRENT

by WYNDHAM MARTYN

COPYRIGHT BY BAASE & HOPKINS

WNU SERVICE

STORY FROM THE START

Anthony Trent returns to New York after nearly four years' absence. Once known as the master criminal, Trent is going straight. The pursuer accuses Trent of jumping overboard from the Tollana at Liverpool, but is disappointed when Trent shows no surprise. He learns his friend, Capt. Frank Sutton, is in Sing Sing.

Anthony Trent crossed the room to a trunk and took from it a photograph in a black morocco frame. Brunton Warne looked at it with respect. "Surely that is the earl of Rosecarrel?"

Lord Rosecarrel was England's secretary of foreign affairs, a statesman and diplomatist of international renown.

Trent drew the photograph from its frame and showed the pursuer the inscription on the back. On it was written, "To my dear friend, Anthony Trent, the most chivalrous and courageous gentleman I have ever known."

"It was to meet Lord Rosecarrel's son that I made that suspicious jump at Liverpool. He saved my life in the war, and I simply had to see him. If it will ease your mind you can write and ask him."

"My dear sir, I should not dream of it," said Warne, much impressed. "This inscription is sufficient to satisfy me. I'm exceedingly sorry I've bothered you."

Trent watched him close the door and then sank into a seat. He had lived an hour which had been more filled with dread and fear of the future than the amiable pursuer would ever guess, but now for a moment clear weather seemed ahead.

Then he thought of his city of New York, where most of his exploits had been achieved. During his absence, what piecing together of scraps of evidence might not have been made which should at length fashion themselves into definite clues to his undoing? Although he could easily enough satisfy the law that he had nothing to do with Sutton's unbelievable crimes, he did not court investigation. The fabric he had reared with such ingenuity could be torn down if once the processes of justice were set in motion. And these same processes had caught Sutton, the wealthy clubman, lawyer and capitalist, and had sent him to Sing Sing prison for a long term. It was a blow to Trent to learn of his friend's disgrace. But he could not fail to remember that such an incarceration added to his own safety. The one man who might by an idle word denounce him, was now behind stone walls and iron bars.

CHAPTER II

The Man Who Made Himself at Home.

No inconveniences attended Trent's debarkation. He went to the rooms he had engaged by wireless in a fashionable hotel.

In Central Park, West, his own apartment had awaited for some years his coming. It was in these rooms at the top of a brown-stone mansion, now converted to flats, that he had begun his predatory career and continued to it until he had gone with his regiment to France. Just before he sailed he had bought the place and was returning to it as owner, but this ownership was not allowed to be known. It had its main usefulness in permitting him to discriminate as to the tenants beneath and enabling him indefinitely to remain in his eyrie next to the sky.

His desire to see his home again did not make Trent abandon his cautious habits and calculated prudence; although he was not again to enter the metropolitan world of crime, what he had done in the past still hung over his head, and he, who had left New York in 1917 as the uncaught master criminal, might return to find that he was known.

There had been rewards offered for his apprehension aggregating a half million of dollars. Never in his line of industry had a nameless man gained such notoriety. It was late afternoon when he sauntered along a path by the park's western wall and ascended the seven steps to the glass-paneled entrance of his home and made his way quietly up the broad, well-carpeted stairs. The ultimate flight, up which those went who had not business with him, led to a plain mahogany door. But underneath the wooden veneer was a sheet of steel capable of resisting the onslaught of men with axes.

The door was opened by two keys. The lock of one was in the obvious place. Where the other key functioned was known only to his old housekeeper and himself. He would have no agent whose master key might embarrass him.

There was a certain excusable interest in Trent's commonly expressionless face as he hung open the heavy door. He went through all of the five rooms and found them incredibly free from dust. Once a month Mrs. Kinney, the housekeeper, came down from her home in Wareham, on the Cape, and saw everything was right. Until her master returned she waited. He had talked with her, fragmentarily, on the long distance telephone only yesterday and told her to come within the week.

It was when he had hung himself in the great winged chair before a window in the front room that the problem recurred to him as to what he should do with his life. The vow that never again would he be of the great dilettant of crime was not to be broken. What should he do with the many years that remained?

Then, with a peculiar vividness, he became aware of the aroma of newly made coffee. Its invigorating fragrance was permeating the air; it floated toward him from the kitchen in the rear, the kitchen that had been empty an hour ago.

For a moment he supposed that Mrs. Kinney had hurried to the city from Wareham. She would have had time to do so. He was glad; he would be able to leave the hotel whose noise and crowds he disliked. Suddenly he realized that it could not possibly be the old housekeeper. The brewer of coffee had entered the flat while Trent had sat in the chair by the window. And to enter the flat the unknown must have passed along the passage after opening the heavy door. To one whose senses have been trained to a special and vocational alertness this was impossible. Trent would have heard any person, no matter how lightly he trod.

The front door was the only entrance to the flat. That is to say, it was the only entrance designed by the builder. But above Trent's rooms was the roof; entrance to it could be gained by a ladder in a large closet in the passage. The rear wall of Trent's house was separated by some five feet from the side-wall of a small apartment house in a street leading from Central Park, West, to Manhattan avenue. Long ago Trent had seen in this an admirable way of escape. While men might try to force his front door he would be leaping from his own roof to that of the apartment house. It was one of those five-story dwellings, without elevator or hall service. A number of times Trent had made his exit and entrance this way to demonstrate its practicability. The maker of coffee in his kitchen could only have entered by this unauthorized method. What did this mean? Trent sat back, motionless, and tried to think it out. The first inevitable thought was that dread of the law which chills the hearts of those who have operated outside it. It might well be that a detective was waiting. Perhaps Scotland Yard had cabled New York that he had sailed on the Brabant. They might wait for him here, knowing full well he would come back to his house.

He strained his ears to catch what noises were coming from the kitchen. A group might be taking its evening meal for all he knew. His hearing was acute, and he had little difficulty in recognizing the sounds of footsteps. He could plainly distinguish them. He judged they were made by one man who had no reason to feel the need for caution or the fear of interruption. This dispelled the theory of police occupation. Central office men would not openly advertise their presence.

Along the corridor, with a silence and stealth born of a hundred desperate situations, Trent made his way to the kitchen.

Sitting at the white kitchen table, his back to the house's owner, was a man in a purple dressing-gown. Trent recognized the garment as one of his own. The room was illuminated solely by a reading-lamp placed in the center of the table, against which was propped an evening paper. The unknown's meal was made up of hulled eggs, brown bread and butter, and a pot of coffee. He was a broad-shouldered man, but the neck which Trent gazed at was wasted, as though its owner had formerly carried more flesh. The hand lifting the cup to the unseen face was white and well-kept. He perused his paper with the leisure of one who fears no interruption.

"Why not use the dining room?" Trent said pleasantly.

The man put down his coffee cup with no appearance of haste; he did not seek a weapon and he did not glance behind him.

"Come in, Mr. Trent," he said courteously. "I have been expecting you for a long time."

In answer to this amazing greeting Trent took a few paces forward and looked his visitor in the face. He was certain he had never seen him before. The physical appearance of the invader was a strange one. A large and thin nose of the high-bridged, Roman type was the most marked feature of his face; there was something asymmetrical about it, but what? Trent could not for the moment determine. The eyes were small and gray, and they were shrewd eyes. They contradicted the nose, which was not the nose of action and daring such as Trent himself possessed. The cheeks were fat and the skin light and glistening.

Anthony Trent lighted a cigarette and kept his eyes fixed on his visitor. First and foremost was the fact that he knew Trent and evidently had no fear of detection. And Trent was certain he had never looked on this man before.

"Now," said the stranger, rising, "let us adjourn to that delightful front room, where we can discuss those problems which puzzle you as to my presence here and its effect on your immediate actions."

His impudent self-possession nettled Trent.

"The immediate effect may be that I shall invite the police to investigate you."

The stranger did not immediately answer. Apparently he was fearless, for he turned his back on the younger man and walked calmly through the dining room to the larger room in front. He settled himself in Trent's favorite chair after lighting a floor lamp.

"You were speaking of informing the police, were you not? I suggest that would be most ill-advised. An investigation is a double-edged weapon which often turns upon the one who wields it. You would make your case good to a certain point. Then your difficulties would commence. I should cast doubts upon you. I should demand an investigation. You would do one of two things. You would permit this or you would fight against it. If you permitted it, you would be lost. If you fought against it, you would be suspected. I should admit a natural curiosity about you. I should inform the police that the ways of Mr. Anthony Trent had interested me for some years."

The younger man yawned a little. There was an air of perfect fearlessness and serenity about him. (TO BE CONTINUED.)

Mosque Fine Specimen of Arab Architecture

The pride of the Moslem world is the mosque of the Omayyads. It was erected by that famous dynasty of caliphs and rebuilt after its destruction by fire on the occasion of the conquest of Damascus by the Mongol hordes of Tamerlane. It was then that the once famous craft of Damascus swordmakers came to a tragic end, and never since has Damascus produced its famous sword blade, once the most treasured arm of the oriental warrior. The mosque of the Omayyads is a typical specimen of Arab religious architecture, and differs from the Turkish mosques by the absence of the big central cupola. A huge oblong-shaped building, with an open court and quadrangular minarets, its plain exterior is likely to mislead the visitor, who, once within the precincts of the sanctuary, stands dumfounded with an overwhelming impression of splendor. The halls surrounding the court are of such vast dimensions that they hold several chapels of the daintiest structure, which in themselves are large enough to be temples. The floor is covered throughout with the most luxurious carpets.—Edward J. Bing, in Current History Magazine.

Beware of Swindlers

A smooth swindler has recently been operating in the west, according to C. P. Huppertz, local agent for the American Railway Express Company, through which corporation he learned of the workings of the swindler in a letter received this week and in turn, Mr. Huppertz seeks to guard our merchants against falling victims to his nefarious schemes.

This party is described as being over the age of 60, height 5 feet 10 inches, weight between 190 and 200 pounds, grey hair and blue eyes. He is a clever salesman and poses in the west as a fixture, showman and refrigerator salesman, also claiming to represent the Weather-proof Shoe Co. of Boston, Mass., and St. Louis, Mo.

He calls on merchants, usually small ones and convinces them that a new showcase or fixture is needed, then he has just what they need, in some other town where he has taken the same up in exchange for new ones or he sells the merchant a bill of goods to be shipped on open account and gives him a showcase for display purposes. He then collects half transportation charges from the victim, buys money order for full amount and delivers money order stub to his victim as a receipt.

This party operates under the name of Geo. W. Thayer, alias R. G. Thomas, D. D. Brown, E. B. Campbell, E. G. Crawford, R. H. Douglas, and when last heard of was traveling in a Ford touring car, well loaded with sample cases, boxes and camping outfit. Thayer lives in automobile camps and usually does his own cooking.

He has been arrested in several states and a warrant for his arrest is now in the hands of the sheriff at Salinas, Calif.

This party operated at Gonzales, Cal., Apr. 12, and during the same week also at Soledad and Salinas, Cal.

Apparently his operations in Lincoln county were just preceding that time. At the present writing, only one victim was fleeced in this vicinity, although more may have been that have not been reported.

A certain Carrizozo doctor received a hurry-up call one day last week from a home where the first baby had lately arrived. He shot the juice to his jitney, had two punctures, finished the trip on the rims. On arriving, he found the father standing on the porch, holding his watch in his hand. "What's wrong, said the doctor? "Nothing this time, doctor, we just wanted to see how quick you could get here if the baby should get sick."

Just the Nicest Ice Man

By JANE OSBORN

(Copyright.)

THERE was a certain slippance about Helen's manner and speech that was decidedly disconcerting to her perfectly conventional mother.

"Your remarks are so inconsequential," Mrs. Ross told her. "Half the time I don't know whether you are in jest or in earnest, if you mean what you say then you are extremely silly, and if you don't mean what you say then you are making fun of me and my friends, and that is extremely rude."

Helen was spending this summer at home, or rather at the Ross summer cottage, by the sea, and in order to give her mother an opportunity to play all the afternoon bridge that she wanted with the other cottagers and to give herself a little much-needed experience in household matters she with two maids was taking full charge of the housekeeping.

When her mother gave her first porch party of course Helen had to appear, and as a preliminary Mrs. Ross made her little speech about Helen's inconsequential remarks and slippant manner.

Mrs. Mack cornered Helen before the card playing began.

"We never see you at the casino," she accused. "And your mother says you don't play bridge. I do hope you are having a pleasant time. Do you like it here at Seaside?"

"I adore it," answered Helen. "I've been at lots of seashore resorts, but I never knew another where there were such perfectly adorable shells on the beach."

Mrs. Mack raised her haughty eye brows and gave Helen a searching glance. Helen's mother, who had overheard the remark, also raised her eyebrows and indicated her motherly disapproval of what Helen had said.

"But I really do think the shells are remarkable. There are some lovely pink ones with blushing tints. Don't you ever pick up shells Mrs. Mack?" The question was not even worth a reply. Mrs. Mack couldn't strap her own shoes or pick up a card that had slipped from the card table.

Later Mrs. Horton engaged Helen in conversation.

"Don't you find the people here at Seaside charming?" she cooed.

"Absolutely," said Helen. "I never saw such an accommodating expression, and we have the nicest ice man. Do you happen to know the ice man Mrs. Horton?" Mrs. Horton regarded her with the smile she saved for the inmates of the home for feeble-minded orphans of which she was a manager. And Mrs. Ross standing behind Mrs. Horton uttered a sharp, "Helen."

"But really, mother, he is the nicest ice man," insisted Helen. "He can swing a perfectly enormous piece of ice into the refrigerator as if it weighed no more than a feather, and he has the most delicious sense of humor. He's going to have Friday morning off and I'm going to go swimming with him. He knows a new stroke I'm crazy to learn."

"Helen," fairly shrieked her mother, and Mrs. Horton, turning away smiled compassionately at Mrs. Ross. "Helen, I think you are crazy. Don't you know that Mrs. Horton belongs to one of the best families of the state? The Hortons have the finest cottage in Seaside. She was going to invite you to a dinner they're giving, but she'll think we're impossible going swimming with an ice man?"

"Well, I'll go to her dinner if she'll invite my ice man," laughed Helen. "I'll bet he can dance too. His name is Mortimer." But Mrs. Ross heard no more. She was wondering whether it wouldn't be a good plan to have Helen psychoanalyzed.

A week later—after Helen had learned the new swimming stroke from Mortimer, the ice man, and had trotted along the beach on a moonlight night with Mortimer's stalwart arm around her waist as they walked—Mrs. Ross told Helen that she had been invited to Mrs. Horton's dance.

"I believe she has been able to get almost as many young men as girls for the party. She has arranged to have some come down from the city—and she has discovered that there is a perfectly charming young man here doing some sort of work—desk clerk or something of that sort at one of the hotels, I suppose—and she has asked him, too. It's a Mr. Mortimer Fitzdavis—he'll be a senior at Harvard next winter. The Fitzdavis have loads of money, but Mr. Fitzdavis has some curious ideas. He believes in paying his sons' expenses through three years in college. The last year they have to pay their own way. I hope you will wear your pink children, Helen. Only it would be much more becoming if you hadn't allowed yourself to get so sun-burned."

"Mortimer likes sunburn," said Helen. "His favorite color is green so I think I had better wear my Nile green organdy."

"Mr. Fitzdavis, you mean—how do you know what he likes—Helen, don't be insane?"

"Mortimer Fitzdavis," said Helen, feeling rather dazed. "He's the perfectly adorable ice man I've been trying to tell you about. We've been walking on the beach—last night in the moonlight. Mother, you wouldn't be very cross or think I was crazy or flip or inconsequential if I told you that I am engaged to Mortimer—would you?"

Famous Mining Strikes

The Tin Mines of the World ALTHOUGH its name has come to have a meaning almost of scorn, due to comic aspects of the lowly tin can in a vacant lot, tin is one of the most important of the world's metals and is also one whose history is closely associated with romance.

The tin mines of Land's End, in Cornwall, England, probably were the first mines yielding anything but gold or gems, to be worked in all Europe. They are supposed to have been in use as long as the Bronze Age, before man discovered iron or knew how to make steel. It is known that the people of ancient Tyre and after them the Romans and probably the Carthaginians sent ships to England with slaves who worked these mines for their tin.

Until the early part of the present century British tin mines held an important place in world production, but their output has been nearly to nothing against the competition of much larger and richer deposits now worked in other parts of the world.

By the irony of fate, Potosi in Bolivia, which was a world center of silver production 400 years ago under the Spanish and had all the characteristics of the most "roaring" mining camps, has come down from the precious metals to become, today, the single largest center of tin production.

Ying with Bolivia as a center of tin production is the Malay peninsula. Until ten years ago the Malay states usually produced more tin per year than did Bolivia, but the scale swung in favor of South America's mountain republic in recent years.

Siam and southern China are other important tin-producing districts. The Chinese are constant users of tinfol with which they wrap a variety of things, ranging from foods and firecrackers to idols and gods. It is said that 100,000 Chinese earn their living heating tin into tinfol by the old-fashioned hand methods and that they use several thousand tons of tin in this manner every year.

Mexico has become a moderate producer of tin in recent years, and there also have been discoveries in Africa, which continent seems destined to reveal colossal deposits of practically every mineral that mankind wants.

HOW TO COOK AND SERVE ASPARAGUS

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)
Asparagus should always be cooked as soon as possible after it is cut. It toughens and loses flavor very rapidly if allowed to stand. To prepare it for cooking trim off any tough ends, brush carefully, and scrape off the larger scales. Wash so as to remove all sand and particles of earth which may have lodged under the scales. Fresh, tender, home-grown asparagus does not need scraping.

Asparagus is cooked in slightly salted water whole, or cut up in inch lengths. The pieces may be left whole. The cooking time of fresh tender young stalks cut up in this way may be only five to ten minutes, according to the United States Department of Agriculture; twenty to twenty-five minutes' cooking at most should be enough.

Season the cooked asparagus with salt, pepper, butter and a little cream if you have it. Let it stand in a warm place for a few minutes and then serve, either alone or on toast. Hollandaise or white sauce may accompany the asparagus or mayonnaise or vinaigrette, which is similar to French dressing.

The water in which asparagus has

Flavor of Tomato Well Liked

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)
In many places fresh tomatoes are not obtainable during the spring. The flavor of tomato, however, is so acceptable in salad, and the vitamins contained even in canned tomatoes are so important in the diet, that an attractive way of serving tomato in a salad has been evolved. A jelly is made from the canned tomato juice. While no other flavor need be used, a particularly good apple is made by mashing other vegetables, cut up in small pieces, in the tomato juice. Here is the recipe, from the bureau of home economics:

- 1 1/2 envelopes, or 3 tsp gelatin
- 1 quart canned tomatoes
- 1 tba finely chopped green pepper
- 3 tba finely chopped celery
- 1 tba finely chopped parsley
- 1 cup very finely shredded cabbage
- 1/4 tsp salt
- 1/2 tsp onion juice
- 1/2 tsp sugar

Soak the gelatin in a small amount of water. Boil the tomatoes for five minutes, and strain through a fine sieve to remove the seeds. Pour the hot tomato juice over the gelatin and stir until it is dissolved. Add the salt and the sugar and chill. When the gelatin mixture is partly set, add the finely shredded vegetables and mix well. Add more salt, if needed. Add if the mixture is not tart enough, add a little lemon juice or vinegar. Pour into wet custard cups and place in the cold until set. Turn these molds out on crisp lettuce leaves and serve with mayonnaise.

Wife's Rights

Flank Steak Stuffed With Well Seasoned Mixture

Flank Steak Can Be Made Into Savory Dish.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)
A flank steak is one of the less tender cuts of meat, since it has long muscle fibers which become somewhat stringy unless cooked and carved in the right way. Flank steak, however, is economical, for there is no bone and other waste material. Like other among the less tender cuts, it can be made into an attractive and delicious dish when one knows how.

The general method of cooking any of the less tender cuts differs from the method for tender cuts. Heat, moisture, and slow cooking, help to make these cuts tender. The flank steak stuffed with well-seasoned mixture is first seared and then cooked slowly in a tightly covered vessel until the meat is tender.

The ingredients for stuffed flank are given by the bureau of home economics:

- 1 lb flank steak
- 1/2 cup olive bread crumbs
- 1 tsp salt
- 1/2 tsp pepper
- 1 onion, minced
- 1/2 cup minced celery
- 1 tba butter

been cooked can be used in many ways and should be saved. It makes a delicious soup when seasoned, with a little cream or milk added. This may be thickened or not, as preferred. Asparagus stock is an improvement to soups made from other vegetable juices, such as tomato, onion, or celery. It combines well with cream of chicken soup, and can be made into a good sauce to use with left-over asparagus in making other dishes.

Cooked asparagus may be used in making scalloped dishes, croquettes, fritters, vegetable loaf, timbales, or added to almost any soup, stew, or vegetable salad. Vegetable combinations are increasingly popular, and such dishes as cut-up cooked asparagus with new diced creamed potatoes, or with peas, give variety to the menu; and make profitable use of small amounts of each vegetable.

Voluminous Drapery Focused to One Hip

By JULIA BOTTOMLEY

DRESSMAKING is becoming quiet a one-sided affair, as the frock in the picture bears testimony. Many of the new gowns are just like that and even more so—the voluminous drapery focused to one hip in one huge effect of puffs, bows, loops, jabots, sash ends and tag ends, which sometimes dangle so as to form uneven hemlines. Especially are the irregular hemlines featured in the one-side draped evening gown.

So if you are looking for a decidedly voguish pattern for the dress you are planning to make, seek out one which has a conspicuous side drape. There is nothing newer or smarter in the way of styling than the one-hip effect—unless it be the unique bustle effect which brings all the drapery to the back. The strange part of the muchly be-draped frocks which concentrate voluminous bows and flounces at the back is that in their new-fashioned styling they assume a quaint old-fashioned look—quite a la Godey's Ladies' Book, some of them. To be sure the bustle drape is too extreme to attract the average woman, but nevertheless the trend of fashion, particularly evening modes, is in that direction.

However, returning to the subject of the one-side effect, designers find that soft sheer materials or the stiffer materials are each admirably adaptable to this treatment. Quite a fluff has sprung up for tulle, also moire and certain extra-weight satins, especially for the making of evening gowns which feature either the one-hip drape or bustle-effect. Daytime modes adhere rather to the less formal flowery prints and solid-toned transparent crepes.

The fabric used for the sweetly feminine frock in this picture is called crepe chait. While it is firm and of suede-like finish it is sheer enough to suggest transparency. The home dressmaker will find the pattern such as was used in the styling of this dress, an ideal one from the standpoint of "easy to make." In any of the pastel shades or in beige or gray such a dress is most charmingly attuned to bridge parties or afternoon teas.

It is interesting to note that this young woman is wearing a hat with a brim. More and more as the spring costumes appear one sees them accompanied with "picture" millinery. Many of the newest hats are even large and floppy. Transparent hair types are quite the rage with fluttery colorful frocks.

Dessert Flavored With Chocolate

A delicate dessert flavored with chocolate can be made in the following way, according to the bureau of home economics:

- 1/2 cup sugar
- 1/2 cup fine stale bread crumbs
- 1 tba flour
- 1 tba butter
- 1/2 tsp salt
- 1/2 cup milk
- 4 eggs
- 1/2 tsp vanilla
- 1 1/2 squares chocolate, unweetened.

Mix the flour and butter, add the milk, and stir over heat until thickened. Melt the chocolate over steam, and add to the cream sauce, with the salt, bread crumbs, sugar, and well beaten egg yolks. Beat well. Fold in the well beaten whites of the eggs. Pour into a greased pudding dish and bake in a moderate oven (325 degrees Fahrenheit) for one hour or until well set in the middle. Serve hot with hard sauce or whipped cream.

MARY GRAHAM BONNER'S KIDDIE STORY

"I was flying over a house tonight," said the fairy named Silvery Night, "and I heard the voice of a little child inside."

"I hopped on the window sill where she couldn't see me. She was talking to her mother."

"When does the doctor say I'll be able to sit up?" she asked.

"Very soon, my love," her mother said, "you must be a little stronger."

"Oh, mother," the little girl said, "I do hope it will be soon. I get so tired of being in bed. I feel so very lonely sometimes without my friends, the Shooting Stars."

"Now I found out that this little girl always sat by her window before she went to bed and looked at the stars, and so many nights she saw the Shooting Stars."

"She loved them so," continued Silvery Night, "and always wanted to see them if there were any to see."

"But now she had to lie in bed and the bed was quite a distance from the window as she had to be kept out of drafts."

"I could tell that her mother was afraid she was getting so discouraged that it would take her longer to get well. So I stopped on my way and had a talk with the Dream King."

"Yes, and what did he say?" they all asked.

"He said he would help."

"Hurrah!" they shouted.

So the Night Fairies and the Shooting Stars led by Silvery Night and the

"I Do Hope It Will Be Soon."

Dream King ran their races all through the dreams of the little girl and up and down the ceiling.

They danced over the bed, and sometimes she almost caught them as they raced by her!

But she never quite caught one.

"Oh, my dear beautiful Shooting Stars," she said, "and the beautiful fairies."

And the fairies whispered to her: "You'll soon be well, little girl. Be patient, very patient, and soon you'll be strong again."

"The Night Fairies are watching over you and the Shooting Stars have not forgotten their little friend who loves to see their sports."

Morning at last came and the Shooting Stars, the Night Fairies, Silvery Night and the Dream King had gone and the little girl was wide awake.

"Oh, mother," she said, "I feel so much better. The Night Fairies and Shooting Stars and Silvery Night had night races for me in my dream, and they told me to be patient a little longer."

"I have been feeling so tired and impatient lately."

The doctor came to see the little girl that day and he said that she was so wonderfully improved that within two days she could be up once more! He really didn't understand all the wonderful improvement, but some of the little creatures did, and they were the Night Fairies the Shooting Stars, Silvery Night, the Dream King and the little girl herself!

So the night races were a very big success!

But no one was happier about it than Silvery Night!

Good Things to Eat

By NELLIE MAXWELL

Though you be one of the million, hitched to the cart of care, ride as your own postilion, driving and drawing fair. What though the road be dreary, fraught though, each mile with guile?

What though your eyes be weary? Lift up your face and smile! —Stephen Chalmers.

A glass of orange juice before breakfast and as many glasses during the day as one can enjoy and is able to provide, will keep the system in health, sweeten the blood and keep the alimentary canal in active order.

When adding orange juice to various dishes it is best uncooked, though if not cooked at a high temperature or too long the flavor and food value will not be destroyed.

Orange Queen Pudding.—Three tablespoonfuls of butter, one-half teaspoonful of grated orange rind, three-fourths of a cupful of sugar, the yolks of two eggs, one-fourth cupful of orange juice; cook over boiling water until thick. Cool and add one tablespoonful of lemon juice. Spread six slices of bread with butter then cover with the custard mixture and lay in a baking dish. Beat the whites of two eggs with two whole eggs, add three-fourths of a cupful of orange juice and one-half cupful of milk, a pinch of salt, pour over the bread and set the pan in hot water. Bake in a slow oven until the custard is set. Serve hot or cold.

Hashed Roast Beef Sandwiches.—Chop meat from the Sunday roast (very fine), add gravy to it and a few shreds of green pepper for seasoning, or onion if the pepper is not at hand. Heat over boiling water, then add a little table sauce, or tomato catsup. Spread generously on buttered slices of whole-wheat bread or toast and serve on hot plates with spicy pickles—such as apple or peach pickle.

Hot Hamburg Sandwiches.—Take half a pound of finely chopped round steak, one small onion, also chopped, cook in butter until well browned, season to taste and add one tablespoonful of flour and cook, stirring often until brown. Add one cupful of tomato juice and finish cooking. Spread while hot over well-buttered slices of white or whole-wheat bread. Los Angeles Salad.—Cut three oranges into halves, keeping the shells whole. Arrange crisp lettuce on individual plates. Cut the orange pulp into pieces, dice a small green pepper and mix with one-half cupful of diced celery; mix all well, moisten with thick mayonnaise and heap in the orange cups; sprinkle one-fourth cupful of nuts, chopped. Beside each orange place a ripe olive and a sweet pickle.

Fruit is such an essential in the diet of old and young that even when the fresh fruit is limited the dried ones may be served acceptably. A most delightful dessert when nothing seems to be ready is stuffed dates with cream cheese. Roll them in granulated sugar and serve with black coffee.

When the fresh fruit supply runs low, try slaming a cupful of seedless raisins in one-fourth cupful of water, add a dash of orange juice and serve.

Most breakfast foods are improved by the addition of a few dates, raisins or figs. A mixture of barley and whole wheat in the same proportion is especially well liked. All dry cereals are improved by heating them in the oven.

Ring Gets Shaved Son Forch

By RING LARDNER

To the Editor:

I hope you boy and girl readers won't be bored on acct. of me writing the events on Long's Island every little while but really things do happen here that I don't believe they happen nowhere else. Like for inst, the other evening I was setting at home working like a dog though I never get seen a dog that done any real work, but any ways a prominent citizen who his name I won't mention, but he was a delegate at large to a convention of paper hangers and he called up and says I am coming over to see you and bring 2 friends. So I says please don't come right now as I am working and besides which I ain't neither dressed or shaved. But he says we will be right over, so what was they left to do only for me for to get dressed as soon as possible and did not have time to shave.

Well they come over and I met them on the porch and served them a couple of ice cold drinks of one kind another and one of his friends was a gal and the other was a man and he introduced me to the gal but did not say nothing about the man. So we set down a while and to make conversation I says well if I had of knew that I was going to have company I would of shaven myself.

Where as the stranger to who I had not been introduced says wait a minute and leapt up and went out to the prominent citizen's car and brought in his satchel which contained a full barber's kit and he come in and stropped his razor and asked me where I kept the hot water and I says we live in a kind of out of the way place and don't have no hot water so he says all right I will shave you with ice water. So he shaved me there on the porch and the passers by was certainly astounded and said what a swell guy that must be to have a barber come and shave him on his own porch. Afterwards it developed that this party to who I had not been introduced was the prominent citizen's personal barber and the reason he had not introduced me to him was because he did not know his name.

Well either that night or the next night they was some company come in and one of them was Jules Schwob who is Florence Moore's husband and somebody suggested a game of bridge and as had luck would have it I got Mr. Schwob for a partner and the dealer dealt and passed and it was my bid and I bidded 2 spades and the lady on my left passed and my partner doubled.

As far as I was concerned that was a brand new convention and for a minute I was mystified. But the others did not seem to think nothing much about it so I redoubled and they left me in and I made 2 spades which was doubled and redoubled by my partner and I so we made a whole lot more than if we had just played it plain 2 spades. You learn every day.

Well the bridge game finely broke up in a terrible row and we decided to play charades at whom I am a master. The idea was to give the names of prominent people in Great Neck of who they are a great many and I won't tell what other charades people give because they were not so good but will give you one of my own.

I says this is the name of a prominent actress who has been both on the stage and on the screen and always wears pretty clothes. Her name is in 5 syllables. The first syllable is the 12th letter in the alphabet and is a consonant. The second syllable was the past tense of the preposition for. The fourth syllable was a German and the fifth syllable was his boy.

After several hours they all give up. The answer was Elsie Ferguson. Virtually everybody laughed except Frank Craven.

Well one day we went over to the goals of a gal's tennis matches which they held them at Forest Hills and if you can find any forest or any hills you are a better man than I am Emile Coue but any ways that is what they call it and the finals was between a very young gal from El Paso and another not so young gal from Natchez and the El Paso gal kind of romped in so I made the remark that youth will be served and her whom I laughingly call my wife said yes but it is even worse when she is doing the serving herself. Girls will be girls.

That is about all the news that has happened on Long's Island since I seen you last and I hope you ain't bored with it but if so will give you the promise that you won't hear nothing more about it for a wk. at the outside.

Youth

Youths are not necessarily happy; youth is. It means freedom, strength, courage, curiosity, adventure, growth, plasticity, movement, action; disdain of danger and death and indifference to self; passion to discover life and create it anew. Youth faces the future, champs at the bit, dares greatly, counts no cost. Without conviction, it will explore; without wisdom, it will experiment; without knowledge, it will learn; without adventure, it will venture.

Youth is as remote from infancy as from senility. It created human culture and alone can save the human race. Human immortality flows with youth; exalting happiness abides in eternal youth. To be happy is to be young.—George A. Dorsey, in Cosmo-politan.

Educational Drawback in Failure of Teachers to Understand Pupils

By DR. ALFRED ADLER, Viennese Psychologist.

THE most common error in education is the failure of the teacher to understand the coherence of the child's living. The "problem child," the class "bad boy," is scolded and punished, but that is about as foolish as for a physician to call on a man who has broken his leg and say, "Aha! I see you've broken your leg—for shame!"

If the teacher will put herself in the bad child's place she would see that, according to his lights, he is acting intelligently. He has either been pampered or hated and has grown into an atmosphere of alienness, feeling nothing in common with others around him and wanting to be aloof.

To discover the child who steals, and punish him, does not correct the evil; it increases his sense of the sport of the thing and only sets him to figuring out what his mistakes were which led to his discovery so that in future he can avoid them.

The progress of education has been greatly retarded through the stress placed on the inheritance of abilities. To say that one child is gifted and another stupid is to retard both. The gifted child is stumped by thinking too much is expected of him, and the stupid one comes to think it is futile for him to try to achieve anything.

Mankind is as a species tremendously timid. We need encouragement, not discouragement. We need to be taught, what is really the truth, that we can be anything we want if we will train ourselves properly for it.

Entrance Requirements for Colleges or Too Much of Medievalism

By DR. GEORGE W. FRASIER, Colorado Educator.

American liberal art colleges, which seem not to be interested in the future of public education for the masses, should strive to discover the kind of students they want rather than how they have been prepared. Preparing for entrance to one of the average eastern colleges wrecks the high school career of thousands of boys and girls.

The subjects, Latin, essay writing, English classics, "dry as dust ancient history," as taught in high schools prepare for nothing in the world but college, and it takes a confirmed optimist to see how they do that.

Liberal arts colleges should not prepare high school teachers and these colleges should drop specific matter requirements for entrance and also drop the type of specific examinations demanded by the college entrance board.

For present entrance requirements I would substitute judgment of the student's intelligence and character and evidence of the accomplishment of whatever kind of high school work he may have chosen.

The present domination of the colleges over the high schools would be a good thing for the high schools if these colleges had a conception of education as something to do with modern life. But the average college of this group still clings to its medieval curriculum.

Older People Not Justified in Condemnation of the Youth of Today

By DEAN C. M. WOODWARD, Emory (Ga.) University.

Since youth today possesses more information and knowledge, is more intelligent than their predecessors, it is necessary to impress them with the reality and character of God in order to get them to co-operate with the moving force behind the universe. Youth today knows more about the world in all its phases than those of any other period in the race's history and youth today has a wider freedom of choice than youth has ever had.

With all its progress in every branch of human activity, the world has not had time to devise means of handling the knowledge it has obtained. I wonder if older people are justified in criticising the youth of today. In my opinion, youth can be relied upon. The change from the home of the past, when authority and discipline held sway, and the present condition when the child has about as much contact with other spheres of life as the home, emphasizes the need of development of internal control and youth should be made to realize the reality and character of God. By using intelligence youth can co-operate with God in the development of a world personality.

Wage Earner Seeks Only Opportunity for Full, Free, Comprehensive Life

By WILLIAM GREEN, President A. F. of L.

Organized labor considers wages of first importance because wages are the basis of human activity and human enjoyment. The working man must depend upon wages for the education of his children, for old-age protection, for the care of dependents when he is incapacitated.

He seeks reasonable hours of employment that he may relax from exacting toil, so that he may have time to think, that the better part of his life may be developed, because man was not made to slave and die. There is something better in man. He must be given opportunity to live a full, free and comprehensive life.

We have increased wages, shortened hours, improved work conditions, but, in addition, we have secured enactment of laws that have brought many benefits not only to wage workers directly concerned, but to the community.

We were the pioneers in compulsory education for children. We prefer to see America's children in the school house and playground rather than toiling in factory, mill and mine.

Belief in Immortality Has Its Foundation in Accepted Natural Laws

By JOHN HAYNES HOLMES, New York Community Church.

I believe in the immortality of the soul exactly as I believe in the law of gravitation, or the theory of evolution, or the magnificent vision of a fourth-dimensional universe. What science consists of, in its higher reaches, is speculation as to the ultimate meaning of the facts of observation and experiment. These facts must be explained and man's explanation constitutes a generalization which we call a natural law. We do not doubt these scientific facts. We accept them as a part of the great body of scientific truth. But at bottom they are all theories, deliberately conceived to explain facts otherwise unexplainable.

Immortal hope is a generalization of the same kind. There are facts of human life that cannot be explained without the postulate of an immortal soul.

Don't Make a Toy Out of Baby—Babies Have Nerves

By RUTH BRITAIN

Much of the nervousness in older children can be traced to the over-stimulation during infancy, caused by regarding baby as a sort of animated toy for the amusement of parents, relatives and friends. Baby may be played with, but not for more than a quarter of an hour to an hour daily. Beyond that, being handled, tickled, caused to laugh or even scream, will sometimes result in vomiting, and invariably causes irritability, crying or sleeplessness.

Fretfulness, crying and sleeplessness from this cause can easily be avoided by treating baby with more consideration, but when you just can't see what is making baby restless or upset, better give him a few drops of pure, harmless Castoria. It's amazing to see how quickly it calms baby's nerves and soothes him to sleep; yet it contains no drugs or opiates. It is purely vegetable—the recipe is on the wrapper. Leading physicians prescribe it for colic, cholera, diarrhea, constipation, gas on stomach and bowels, feverishness, loss of sleep and all other "upsets" of babyhood. Over 25 million bottles used a year shows its overwhelming popularity.

With each bottle of Castoria, you get a book on Motherhood, worth its weight in gold. Look for "Chas. H. Fletcher's signature on the package so you'll get genuine Castoria. There are many imitations.

NEW DRAPERIES for A FEW CENTS By Mae Martin

All of us realize nowadays how bright-colored draperies seem to invite people in, and how warm touches of color in spreads, cushions and runners help to make us love our own surroundings.

No woman need deny herself these touches of cheer, because they can easily be had at the expense of a few cents and a little planning. Curtains that are faded or drab in color can be made bright and pleasing with a package or so of Diamond Dyes. Then spreads, covers, runners, etc., can be tinted or dyed to match. Anyone can do it. Tinting with Diamond Dyes is as easy as bluing, and dyeing takes just a little more time. Brilliant new colors appear like magic, right over the old, faded colors. Diamond dyes give true, fadeless colors. They are the kind of dyes used when the cloth was made. Only Diamond Dyes produce perfect results. Insist on them and save disappointment.

My new book, "Color Craft," gives hundreds of dollar-saving suggestions for beautifying your home and clothes. Sixty-four pages, fully illustrated in colors. It's FREE. Just write Mae Martin, Home Service Department, Diamond Dyes, Burlington, Vermont.

Almond Varieties

Almonds are of two kinds—bitter and sweet. The bitter almond is cultivated to a limited extent in Mediterranean countries, and the nuts are used in the manufacture of flavoring extracts and of prussic acid. The sweet, or edible, almond is grown on a commercial scale in the south of Europe, in California and in some other countries.

The words of a weak woman often carry more weight than the muscles of a strong man.

"Busy" Men Can Learn Lesson From Genesis

"Big Business is Too Busy," says Bruce Barton in McClure's Magazine. He begins his article with this suggestion:

"Once a year the president of every company should assemble his entire staff and read the first chapter of Genesis aloud. It is the supreme record of the way in which work used to be done.

"A clear-cut program.
"An early morning start.
"No conversation or consultation.
"Each day's work finished at the end of the day.
"Real rest at the end.
"Let us refresh our memories with a glance at the seven-day program:
"First day—The Almighty said: 'Let there be light; and there was light.'
"Second day—The Almighty said: 'Let there be a firmament . . . and it was so.'
"Third day—The Almighty said: 'Let dry land appear. Let the earth bring forth grass and herbs and fruit trees . . . and it was so.'
"Fourth day—He made the sun and moon and stars.
"Fifth day—He created all fish and fowl.
"Sixth day—He created animals; also Adam and Eve.
"Seventh day—He rested."

At the Movies

"I'm getting kinda tired of taking my children to the picture show in town," said Gap Johnson of Ruggus Ridge. "They always get into a row with the Betts kids, and the Bettses usually lick 'em, and I have to fight Buck Betts, their dad. My kids generally tote rocks in their pockets and pounce 'em to the young Bettses."

"Well, tuther night they took their rocks and broke up the show and darn' nigh broke up the Betts kids. Then Buck Betts came ruying with his gun; he his hand and driv' me and my kids out of town. I'm getting sorter weary of the picture show, somehow."—Kansas City Star.
