Ancient Redmen Drank Real Water

Alamogordo News:

Indian water cisterns discovered recently in the driest section of the Sacramento mountains by Forest Ranger W. H. Woods may help archaeologists to determine how the early Indian lived in the desert section of Otero county.

These diminutive cisterns are cut, jug shape, in solid limestone and hold from 5 to 10 gallons each. They were discovered in the foothills a short distance east of Alamogordo, just above where prehistoric pit dwellings recently had been uncovered.

When found each cistern was covered with a large flat rock about as large as one man could move. The water evidently had run from the smooth surface of the adjoining bluff during the rainy season and was guided into these cisterns by tiny grooves. The rock covering protected the cistern so the water was clear with very little sediment at the bottom.

Possibly hundreds of thirsty palefaces had passed over these hidden cisterns but none had ventured to raise the large rocks in search of the cool, clear water the red man had provided for years before.

Record Year for Banking in State

Deposits in state banks showed an increase of $2,218,816 on Dec. 31 last as compared to the corresponding date in 1926. State Bank Examiner Lawrence Tamme reported Wednesday. An increase of $1,864,563 was shown over the deposits of Oct. 10, '27.

"The reports indicate 1927 was the best banking year in the state's history," said Mr. Tamme. "Good prices and production in cattle, sheep and cotton were largely responsible for this increase," he believes.

Loans and discounts decreased $359,288 from Oct. 10 last and $18,015 from Dec. 31, 1926, while resources increased $1,569,551 and $2,219,816 for the periods, respectively, 18 per cent in excess of the amount required by law. Investments, including federal securities, increased $393,816 for the year and the surplus account, $32,787.—State Record.

The Hondo Basketball teams visited Capitan Friday afternoon. The boys' and girls' second teams played Hondo's first teams. Both of the visiting teams were defeated.

Railroad Rumbblings

A glance at the official rosters in the fraternal lodge column will find that many wives of railroad men are chiefly identified in each, for instance: Mrs. Elizabeth Green, wife of conductor J. E. Green, is Worthy Matron of the Eastern Star; Mrs. Allie Greer, wife of fireman Ira Greer, is Noble Grand of the Rebekahs. Aside from these, other wives of railroad men are identified in lower stations of the fraternities.

Movement of perishable freight continues to be heavy. 12 crews are being worked between El Paso and this point, 8 crews between here and Duran. Practically all train and engine men who were layed off during the dull season, have been recalled and are working practically every day. In fact it has been necessary to borrow a few men from other divisions. More freight power is assigned to the New Mexico division than has been since the mison movement and the excellent performance of this power, permits on-time service being given with important perishable trains that are being handled.

On account of the extra travel and extra cars on trains 11 and 12 these trains are being double-headed between Tucuman and Carrizozo in order to assure an on-time schedule and road foreman of engines M. T. Hull is kept busy looking after the movement of these trains.

The Southwest Lumber Co. has finished cleaning the log pond at Alamogordo and are again working full blast.

During the absence of conductor D. A. MacKenzie, conductor Quirk is captain of the package run between here and Duran.

We are glad to have trainman Vickory back on this division after having been temporarily employed by the T. & P. at Big Springs, Texas.

Engineer Robertson left for the east a few days ago on leave-of-absence.

General yardmaster A. V. Swearingen is laying off for a few days and is being relieved by Pat Collins.

Tickets to the dinner dance to be given by the S. P. Square and Compass club at El Paso, can be secured from conductor S. G. Allen or trainmaster Horton.

Roundhouse foreman J. E. Farley is off duty for a few days this week, taking a much needed rest.

Foreman T. S. Sanford and 2 men from his painting crew, are repainting the depot, Eating House and other buildings belonging to the company. It will require about two weeks' time to complete the work.

M. E. Pittman, father of Trainman W. C. Pittman, sister, Mrs. P. C. Packard of San Diego, and brother, L. Pittman of Los Angeles visited the Pittman family this week. While here, they were taken to Eagle Creek and the Ruidoso, and were agreeably impressed with the beauties of our mountain scenery. They left yesterday by motor for their respective homes.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Neighbauer were here from their ranch Wednesday and during a conversation, Uncle Fred said that young grass is springing up among the rocks and his goats are wintering-over, nicely, but moisture is badly needed.

Mass Meeting at Community Hall

In view of the fact that some of our people had expressed themselves as thinking that the Chamber of Commerce had not been as active as it should regarding efforts to secure the Methodist Association Summer Recreation Ground for White Oaks, a mass meeting was called for Tuesday night, to which a good-sized crowd responded.

E. M. Brickley, President of the Carrizozo Chamber of Commerce, opened the meeting, and reviewed the C. of C.'s activity in the past in its efforts to secure the recreational proposition.

Rev. T. V. Ludlow, J. B. French, A. J. Rolland, W. W. Stadman, Judge Hawick and others made brief talks, and finally it was moved, seconded and carried by a unanimous rising vote, that we express our confidence in the president and directors of the C. of C., in their efforts to gain the recreational grounds, and it was also the sense of the meeting that inasmuch as we cannot expect the C. of C. to pay the expenses of sending committees to confer with the committee from the Methodist Association from time to time, that a committee, be named by the president to canvass the town and secure $200 to defray said expenses.

As we said at the beginning of this article, that there were some who had expressed themselves as being dissatisfied with the manner in which the work has been progressing, but according to the unanimous vote in favor of the board of directors, these people either changed their minds after hearing the procedure, or failed to appear with their claims—but the officers may rest assured that no matter how well they may work or how much is accomplished, some people will have a kick to register.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

President Goes to Cuba and American Marines Bomb Nicaraguans.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE left Washington Friday by train for Key West, Fla., where he boarded the battleship Texas and steamed across to Havana, Cuba, thus leaving the United States for the first time in his incumbency of the Presidential office. With him were Mrs. Coolidge and the distinguished gentlemen comprising the American delegation to the Pan-American congress. It was to participate in the opening of that assembly that Mr. Coolidge made the journey, and his stay on the island was to be brief.

There were unmistakable signs that the leadership of the United States in the affairs of the continent was to be contested by the delegations of some of the Latin American nations, this being precipitated by resentment against American intervention in Nicaragua. In order that the President and his delegation might not be embarrassed by criticism at home, the senate committee on foreign relations decided to postpone its investigation of the Nicaraguan situation until after his return. Such an inquiry was called for by a resolution introduced by Senator Wheeler of Montana and a majority of the committee seemed to favor it but deferred action for the reason stated. Protests against our course in Nicaragua have been rather frequent, the latest being in the form of a cablegram to President Coolidge from the editors of papers in Bogota, Colombia.

Meanwhile American marines numbering 1,000 were being hurried down to Nicaragua from both the Atlantic and the Pacific stations and General Lejeune, commander of the corps, also went down there to look over the situation. The announced intention to break up the rebel band led by General Sandino and give the country complete peace has not been altered. The bandits, who are said to be trained by a former German officer named Muller, are active and enterprising and have made several attempts to snubbin detachments of marines. In one instance, at Somotillo, a number of native troops deserted their allies and helped the rebels in an attack on a patrol commanded by Capt. Paul W. Payne of the marines. Outnumbered, Payne retreated to Villa Nueva, obtained reinforcements and returned to Somotillo, but was again driven off. A larger body of troops was rushed there from Chinandega, but the bandits and deserters had fled to the mountains. Lieut. F. C. Schitt, marines aviator, discovered about 200 bandits lying in ambush awaiting a column of marines which was marching from Quillal to Jicaro. With bombs and machine guns the lieutenant put the band to rout, killing fourteen and wounding others. Bombs dropped from another marine plane north of Quillal killed nine rebels, breaking up a concentration.

Of religious conferences and congresses for unity to which all are invited the encyclical says: "Such attempts cannot obtain the approval of Catholics. These movements are founded on the false theory presupposing that all religions are good and meritorious; therefore all, although in a different way, manifest and signify equally that sentiment, inherent in us, to be carried to God for reverent recognition of His dominion."

Followers of such a theory not alone decide and err, but repudiate true religion, distorting concepts, tending little by little to naturalism and atheism, whence clearly those adhering to such theories detach themselves from the religion revealed by God. Under the appearance of good they more easily hide deception when they try to promote the unity of all Christians."

SECRETARY OF THE NAVY WILBUR and Admiral Hughes, chief of naval operations, appearing before the house naval affairs committee in behalf of the new $23,000,000 construction program, told the congressmen flatly that the American fleet is now inadequate to the defense of the country. They asserted that the building of 71 vessels, including cruisers, submarines, destroyer leaders and aircraft carriers, would fulfill the sea defense needs of the United States.

While saying that the program can be considered as placing the United States in competition with other nations, Secretary Wilbur admitted that in working out American needs the size of other navies was taken into consideration. He said the program would put the United States well within the 5-54 ratio as far as Britain is concerned and slightly above the ratio with Japan.

Admiral Hughes said the completion of the program would give the country "reasonable security," but would not give the United States command of the sea.

SURPRISINGLY, the Democratic national committee in session in Washington selected Houston, Texas, for the national convention and set the opening date for June 23. The contest was between Houston and San Francisco and the fifth and deciding ballot was 54 to 43 in favor of the Texas city. Houston offered $200,000 for the convention and promised to build a new hall if the city auditorium, which seats 5,000, were considered too small. The place has hotel accommodations for 10,000 to 12,000 persons.

The Jackson day banquet was attended by most of the party leaders and harmony prevailed, at least on the surface. Gov. Al Smith of New York was not present, but a letter from him was read and evoked long and loud applause. To observers in Washington it begins to look as if Smith might get the Democratic nomination almost without a contest.

On the Republican side it was announced that Frank O. Lowden would enter the North Dakota Presidential primaries to be held March 20, the first to be held in the Middle West. In the East the Hoover boom was growing steadily and his cause was helped by the fact that Thomas A. Edison and Henry Ford, both declared for him. Senator Jim Watson of Indiana said he had not yet decided whether to be a contender, but that if he entered the race it would be in earnest and not as a stalking horse.

REORGANIZATION of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railroad having been approved by the interstate commerce commission, Federal Judge Wilkerson in Chicago issued orders for the receiver to transfer the company to the new organization, and at midnight Sunday the old company passed out of existence, its place being taken by the Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul & Pacific railroad. Henry A. Scandrett of Omaha is president and H. E. Byram, former president, becomes chairman of the board of directors. The reorganization was carried through by Kuhn, Loeb & Co. During the receivership of nearly three years the property has steadily improved, according to Mr. Byram.

REPLYING to Secretary Kellogg's suggestion of a multilateral treaty renouncing war, the French government proposes that the ban shall be restricted to "aggressive war." This is not agreeable to our government and in a second note Mr. Kellogg shows it clings to its original stand that the treaty's declaration be against war without any qualifying or modifying definition attached, and also that other world powers be asked to write in, signing it. The new turn in the discussion is not considered by the State department to bar the way to ultimate negotiation of a treaty between France and America, and ultimately with all powers, declaring against war as a weapon in international relations.

THOMAS HARDY, dean of English literature and the last of the great Victorian writers, died Wednesday at his home near Dorchester at the age of eighty-seven, after a month's illness. Of late years the famous novelist of Wessex had devoted himself to writing poetry, but whether any of these poems will be put into print is doubtful.

Among other deaths of the week were those of Louise F. Post of Washington, author, editor and adherent of George's single tax theories; Marvin Hightall of Chicago, pioneer railroad builder and executive; Sara A. Combs of New York, labor leader, and Dr. Julius Grinker of Chicago, eminent neurologist.

ALBERT D. LASKER, former chairman of the United States shipping board, and Mrs. Lasker have given $1,000,000 to the University of Chicago for medical research directed toward establishing the nature, causes, prevention and cure of degenerative diseases. In other words, the aim is to increase the life expectancy of men and women who have reached middle age.

DEATH in the electric chair in Sing Sing brought to a close the tragedy of Ruth Snyder and Henry Judd Gray, murderers of the woman's husband. Reconvicted lawyers tried up to the last minute to prevent or delay the execution, but all their efforts were futile.

THE GROWING FAME OF JESUS

LESSON TEXT—Mark 3:7-12; 6:52-56.

GOLDEN TEXT—"The common people heard him gladly."

PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus Followed by Crowds of People.

JUNIOR TOPIC—The Growing Fame of Jesus.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Why the People Followed Jesus.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Secret of Jesus' Fame.

1. Jesus Ministering by the Sea (3:7-12).

1. Why He withdrew. It was because of the murderous plotting of the Pharisees against His life. So violent was their hatred against Him that they conspired with the Herodians, whom they regarded as traitors to their nation and country, to put Him to death. Their opposition was aroused when Jesus claimed to have power on earth to forgive sins (2:10). He grew in intensity when He mingled with publicans and sinners (2:16), and was fanned into a violent flame when He set at naught their false interpretations of the Sabbath law (2:23-28). Criticism and harshness causes Jesus today to withdraw from our presence.

2. To whom He ministered (vv. 7, 8).

A great multitude, representing a wide stretch of territory. They came from Jerusalem and Idumaea on the south, from beyond Jordan on the east, and from Tyre and Sidon on the northwest. Jesus was the magnetic attraction—the hero of the hour. The interest of the whole country centered in Him.

3. The result (vv. 9-12).

(1) So great was the pressure that lives seemed endangered by the thronging of the multitudes. Some came out of curiosity, "when they heard what great things he did" (v. 8). Others came for physical benefit, to be healed of their diseases. To escape from the throng He ordered the disciples to secure a little boat for Him.

(2) The unclean spirits prostrated themselves before Him (vv. 11, 12). They confessed Him as the Son of God. They had no doubt about His deity. This testimony He refused to receive because (a) the time for His declaration was not yet ripe. (b) They were not the beings to make Him known. He would not receive tribute from such a source. He would be proclaimed only by those who loved and honored Him.

11. Jesus Ministering at Gennesaret (6:52-56).

1. Jesus recognized (v. 54). The people quickly recognized Him because they had witnessed His mighty works. The feeding of the 5,000 was doubtless still in their minds. Perhaps many of them had witnessed His works in Capernaum and nearby places. They had doubtless heard Him teach also. He was recognized wherever He went. When His rules in the lives of believers today, those who come into touch with them recognize the fact. They take knowledge of them that they have been with Jesus (Acts 4:13).

2. The people ran to see Jesus (v. 55). They did not go about this in a half-hearted way. Those who really come into touch with the Lord Jesus Christ have called forth from their unusual energy. The degree of reality of our contact with Him is expressed by our enthusiasm.

3. They searched the whole region for those in need (v. 55).

Those who were found to be sick and in need were carried in beds to Jesus. Those who have come to know Christ will go about earnestly seeking for the lost to bring them to Christ; it matters not what effort is required.

4. They were made whole by His touch (v. 56). The only touch which is needed for the healing of the human soul is that of faith. When the individual is brought into touch with Him by a vital and living faith, sin is vanquished and sickness and death lose their power.

A SIMILARITY

"Well, I wish him luck," said Jones, the other evening, after reading in the evening paper an account of the wedding of a popular member of the local cricket team, "but," he added, in a ruminating tone, "marriage is very much like cricket."

"Don't be so ridiculous," snapped Mrs. Jones, "However can you compare cricket to marriage?"

"Why," replied Jones, "it looks so easy to those who haven't tried it."

The College Graduate—And will you pay me what I am worth?

Employer—Well, I'll do better than that; I'll give you a small salary to start with.

The BABY

No mother in this enlightened age would give her baby something she did not know was perfectly harmless, especially when a few drops of plain Castoria will right a baby's stomach and end almost any little ill. Fretfulness and fever, too; it seems no time until everything is serene.

That's the beauty of Castoria; its gentle influence seems just what is needed. It does all that castor oil might accomplish, without shock to the system. Without the evil taste. It's delicious!—Being purely vegetable, you can give it as often as there's a sign of colic; constipation; diarrhea; or need-to-aid-sound, natural sleep.

Just one warning: It is genuine Fletcher's Castoria that physicians recommend. Other preparations may be just as free from all doubtful drugs, but no child of this writer's is going to test them! Besides, the book on care and feeding of babies that comes with Fletcher's Castoria is worth its weight in gold.

With between 2 and one-half and 3 and one-half million dollars to become available for road construction in New Mexico in 1928, the state highway department announced bids will be open Feb. 1 on seven projects to cost approximately a half million dollars.

The body of Mrs. Liza E. Rogers, age 65, pioneer woman of Snowflake, Ariz., who has been missing since December 26th, when she left her home following a quarrel with relatives, was found in the Horse Prairie Pasture 12 miles west of Snowflake by Samuel F. Smith, president of the Snowflake Stake, and Raymond Stratton, also a resident of Snowflake.

After February 1 a double fee on automobile license plates will be levied, E. O. Whitworth, superintendent of the motor vehicle division, Arizona state highway department, announced in asserting the intention of county assessors and the highway department vigorously to enforce that section of the highway code which orders all pleasure cars to be provided with 1928 license plates before the end of January.

Posing as a telegraph messenger, an unidentified man gained entrance to the home of Mrs. C. C. Becker in Phoenix, overpowered her and escaped with $132 in cash. Mrs. Becker told Detective Captain John J. McGrath after she admitted the man to the parlor of her home, he followed her into a bedroom where she went to get her purse to pay messenger charges. The man choked her into semi-consciousness.

New Braille story books are being purchased for children of the New Mexico school for the blind at Alamogordo from a fund contributed by the Rotary clubs of Gallup, Deming, Alamogordo, Las Cruces, Roswell, Carlsbad and El Paso, and individuals. The fund now totals $142. Institution Superintendent P. A. Small is asking cooperation in the reporting of cases of blind children in the state who should be receiving the benefits of the school here.

New Mexico a total of 777 corporation returns were filed, with the net income of 437 amounting to $3,549,715 and taxes totaling $379,622. A deficit totaling $3,475,283 was shown by returns of 340 corporations. A total of 1,002 corporation returns were filed in Arizona, 590 of these reporting a net income of $9,814,351, on which the government received taxes amounting to $1,014,116. Returns of 406 companies showed a deficit totaling $4,958,045.

The body of Mrs. Dorothy Clement Corry, 32, with a note pinned to her clothes was found near the office of the Arizona Sand and Rock Company in Phoenix. The note, scribbled with a lead pencil, requested that the woman's mother, Mrs. J. W. Clement, Cabot, Ark., Box 203, be notified. Mrs. Corry had been taken to the sheriff's office two hours before her death. At that time she was in an automobile belonging to John H. Perkins, one of the owners of the sand company, and Perkins was trying to persuade her to leave the machine. Perkins, police said, told them he had parked his car downtown and when he returned, Mrs. Corry was seated in it. Efforts to have her leave were futile, until after the visit to the sheriff's office.

Simultaneously with the opening of the new telephone exchange in Gallup on Jan. 14, a new toll line from Albuquerque to Gallup and westward to Winslow, Holbrook and Flagstaff was formally opened for business. According to E. C. Phillips, manager of the Mountain States Telephone and Telegraph Company at Gallup, the expenditure of his company in Gallup since the purchase on June 1, 1927, is in excess of $85,000. The new toll circuits connect Albuquerque and northern Arizona by a direct line and generally follow the route of the Santa Fe railroad. Two new copper circuits were strung between Gallup and Holbrook, a third between Winslow and Holbrook and an additional circuit is opened from Winslow to Flagstaff. The project involves a new pole line from Gallup to Holbrook, connecting with the Albuquerque-Gallup line which was completed about two years ago. Heretofore connection between Albuquerque or Gallup and northern Arizona points was routed through El Paso and Phoenix.

Otero and Lincoln counties shipped 48,651 head of cattle during 1927. Alfred Hunter, inspector for the state cattle sanitary board reports. During December 7,775 head of cattle and 1,007 horses were moved from this district. November shipments total 18,040; exceeded those for November of any previous year. Despite the large shipments old timers claim more livestock can be seen on the ranges between here and El Paso and between here and Las Cruces than in several years. Livestock is in excellent condition and rangers are needed.

EDITORIAL COLUMN

'Life' Does Not Mean Life

Rio Grande Farmer:

The warden of Sing Sing prison, New York, decries the use of capital punishment, and advocates life imprisonment as a far more dreaded punishment. His argument in many respects is good, but his conclusions are without merit because they are based on the fallacy that court sentences are carried out.

No doubt the majority of the people now favoring capital punishment would revert to support of the life term idea if they had any confidence that life imprisonment means life. But that is just what, in the majority of cases, it does not mean.

Capital punishment is the only means the public has of punishing the criminal and beating the courts and executives in obstructing justice.

Life imprisonment is sought by criminals as practically a sure means of eventually beating justice, when the public has forgotten. In several states executives have "sold" pardons at so much per head.

These reformers who decry the use of capital punishment and advocate life imprisonment could do much to win their cause would they find means to so fix the statutes that executives, courts and busy-body societies could not continue to make justice in this country a mockery.

The perpetrators of one of the most heinous crimes on record, Leopold and Loeb, sons of millionaires, through the power of money, were found "insane," and their necks saved. The public as a rule does not know that one of these so-called insane murderers has been teaching school in the asylum, until public protest stopped it.

Insanity was but a trick of the law, brought by the power of money, to cheat justice. Only a watchful public can halt an eventual release of these young millionaires.

So long as the courts, executives and other powers have the means at their hands to cheat justice, just so long will capital punishment continue on the statute books.

Such application shall be made and filed on or before January 1, 1930, personally by the veteran or in case of his inability to do so through mental or physical incapacity, then a name can be

DAINTY PARTY DRESSES

By JULIA BOTTOMLEY

IN THIS matter of party dresses, youth gaily flaunts the fact of its youthfulness before the eyes of an admiring world. For only the young girl dare proclaim as her own the bouffant dome frock which consumes yards and yards of frothy tulle or other airy fabric of diaphanous weave. So it is that the debutante together with Miss Sweet Sixteen are dancing to hearts' content in "picture" frocks full of skirt and slender of bodice, quite like the lovely model pictured herewith.

This dainty dress is fashioned of two tones of chiffon—pink, and then a lighter pink if you please. Aside from its bouffant styling its most distinguishing feature is its cunning cape made of the very material as the frock itself. Fashionists are making much of these capelets for the young girl's party gown.

Turnips Are Source of Vitamines

Raw or slightly cooked turnips have been found a good source of vitamins. Hence it is wise to include them frequently in the diet. Some people prefer dishes that combine other flavors with the pronounced flavor of turnips, as when equal parts of mashed potato and mashed turnip are blended together. In the recipe below for quick turnip soup, the onion, parsley and milk flavors, with the raw turnip make a particularly appealing combination.

Quick Turnip Soup.
4 cups milk 1 tablespoon flour
2 cups grated raw 2 tablespoons butter
1 1/2 teaspoons salt 1/2 teaspoon caraway
1/2 teaspoon grated 1/2 cup cut very fine onion

The newest idea is the tulle frock tiered to the waistline, with flounces. The sleeveless bodice is of satin, with which is worn a cape of the tulle, carried out in tones of yellow such as a frock will number among the prettiest.

Some there are who are wearing taffeta instead of tulle or chiffon, in which case color is made the outstanding feature. Gowns of white taffeta garnished with either white or

A nice pie which will make a variety and is especially tasty is:

Sour Cream Pie.—Take one cupful of sour cream, add one-half cupful of sugar, the yolks of two eggs well beaten, one-half teaspoonful of cinnamon, one-fourth teaspoonful of cloves, a pinch of salt and one-half cupful of raisins chopped fine. Line a pie plate, fill the crust and cover with a top crust. Bake in a slow oven. If desired, the top crust may be omitted and a meringue of the egg whites used for the top.

French Pineapple Pudding.—Take one cup of pineapple, one cupful of cooked rice, two tablespoonfuls of gelatin, one-fourth cupful of cold water, one-half cupful of sugar, one cupful of whipping cream. Soak the gelatin in the cold water, dissolve in one-half cupful of pineapple juice which has been heated until hot. Add the rice sugar and one-half can of pineapple. Fold in the cream, whipped, and line a wet mold with rings of the remaining pineapple. Pour the pudding into the mold and place in ice and salt to become firm.

and suggests that carrots may be used in the same way.

Turnip Custard.
1 cup grated raw 1/2 teaspoon salt turnip or washed 2 tablespoons cooked turnip 2 tablespoons milk 1/2 cup
1 pint milk 1/2 cup
Few drops of tarragon

Beat the eggs lightly and add the salt, the turnip, the milk and the tarragon. Stir in the melted butter and bake in a moderate oven in a pan surrounded by water until the custard is set in the center. Serve at once. Carrot may be used in the same way as turnip.

palest pink flowers, number among favored types.
Tulle with velvet for the bodice is carried out effectively from the standpoint of color effect. Such is a lively frock the bodice of which is of pastel pink transparent velvet. The skirt is a billowy mass of pink tulle ruffles shading from rose to palest tint. A huge flat pink rose is posed at the waistline.
Myriads of very narrow ruffles are tiered on some of the latest models up to the very waistline. By actual count, a recent lovely frock of pale green tulle numbered twenty tiny round-and-round rufflings on the skirt. A pretty effect is attained by scattering rosebuds in various places among these diminutive ruffles. All of which goes to show the dominance of youthful picturesque effects in the youthful evening mode.

Curtains for the Home Are Very Easy to Make Important Task Seems to Be in Taking Measurement.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)
There are the same advantages in making your own curtains as in making your own dresses. You get an individually fitted product, of color and material selected to go with other furnishings, and often you either save money by doing the sewing yourself, or get better materials for the same money.

The simple curtains used in most homes at present, generally intended to be washed and ironed when necessary, are easy to make. They may be plain glass curtains, with or without side draperies, or simple ones looped back, such as the ruffled colonial curtains, or side curtains only if it is desired merely to frame an unobstructed view. The suggestions following apply to making any of these types of curtains.

Before you buy your material, take very careful measurements. The bureau of home economics suggests that you begin by drawing to scale the window or group of windows to be curtained. Then you can plan on the drawing just what kind of curtains you will have and how they will be hung, and measure on the drawing accordingly. Glass curtains will be hung from the lowest part of the top casing and just escape the sill. If side curtains are used they should be hung from the middle of the upper casing and reach the bottom of the "apron" below the window, or to within one-half inch from the floor. The yardage you buy will depend partly on the width of the material. Some materials are sufficiently wide to allow splitting lengthwise for the two sides of the window, but ordinarily two lengths of goods are bought for each window, even if part of the width should be trimmed away. Scant draperies are not attractive.

After the length of the finished curtain has been estimated on paper and checked on the window itself, add at least nine inches to the amount of goods required for each curtain, for hems and shrinkage. If there are to be valances, plan to have them one-sixth the length of the side hangings when finished, and allow nine inches extra in the same way. The length of a gathered valance is usually one and one-half times the width of the space it must cover.

If the material you are using has a distinct pattern it will have to be balanced at each window, sometimes at every window. In this case have the length you have recorded laid off for as many curtains as you need on the goods, in the bolt before cutting. There will probably be some unavoidable waste in matching. When you cut off the lengths of curtains in preparing to make them, draw a thread, if the weave permits. This will guide you in cutting absolutely straight. Otherwise the curtains will not hang straight, especially after they have been laundered. Trim off all selvages so the side edges will not shrink or sag when the curtains are washed.

Make the side hems first, then the top and bottom hems, using a card or other gauge and carefully matching both halves of each window in length. Allowance for shrinkage can be concealed in the top hem or heading, or it may be basted in as a tuck just below the top casing, or an extra hem may be turned in at the bottom. On transparent materials such as used for glass curtains, both the first and second turning of the hem should be the same width. This gives a better effect when the light shines through. Press curtains carefully, keeping them straight with the thread of the goods, when ready to hang them. Even with the greatest care in cutting and making, curtains do not always hang evenly. Irregularities can usually be adjusted by little tucks at the upper casing.

lemon extract, two lightly beaten eggs and a pint of rich milk with one teaspoonful of salt. Combine the ingredients and turn into a rich pastry shell. Bake in a moderate oven for an hour or until the pie is a rich brown. Serve on state occasions with whipped cream and grated cheese over the top.

make of the desired consistency. Flavor with vanilla. Use the remainder for icing the cake.

The curtain is at home in a thousand ways; in egg dishes such as omelets, ramekin dishes, minced cold meats warmed over in gravy, or any number of other dishes which will occur to mind. The crouton or toast triangles enhance the dish by their presence. Salads and curries are improved by them; soups, of course, are the most common use of them, as they are served with almost every soup.

Juicy Broiled Steaks

Steak Broiled in a Gas Oven.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)
Steaks and chops may be broiled with equal success in the gas oven or in a coal or gas range. In either case the meat gets that delicious broiled flavor which many persons think cannot be surpassed by any other method of cooking. In broiling the meat should be seared at high temperature first to prevent the escape of the appetizing meat juices. The bureau of home economics of the United States Department of Agriculture gives other points about broiling steaks in the gas oven.

Select a porterhouse or a sirloin steak from 1 1/2 to 2 inches thick. Trim the steak of excess fat and wipe it off with a damp cloth. Grease the rounds of the broiler and place the steak on it underneath the same of a gas oven. Do not close the door. Sear on one side and then turn, being careful not to break the tender coating which holds in the juices. When both sides are seared turn down the flame and cook the meat, turning to cook evenly to the desired "doneness." After searing, the steak may, if desired, be placed in the baking oven with the door closed and the cooking finished there. This will leave the housewife's time free for other last-minute preparations. When done place the steak on a hot platter, add salt, pepper, and melted butter. Garnish with parsley and serve at once.

No definite time can be given for cooking a steak because of varying thickness, heat of oven, and personal preferences. A steak 1 1/2 to 2 inches thick will probably require 20 to 25 minutes to be cooked medium rare.

WOMEN OF MIDDLE AGE

Praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Mrs. Annie Kwinaki of 526 1st Avenue, Milwaukee, Wis., writes that she became so weak and run-down that she was not able to do her housework. She saw the name Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in the paper and said to her husband, "I will try that medicine and see if it will help me." She says she took six bottles, and is feeling much better.

Mrs. Mattie Adams, who lives in Downing Street, Brewton, Ala., writes as follows: "A friend recommended Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and since taking it I feel like a different woman."
With her children grown up, the middle-aged woman finds time to do the things she never had time to do before—read the new books, see the new plays, enjoy her grand-children, take an active part in church and civic affairs. Far from being pushed aside by the younger set, she finds a full, rich life of her own. That is, if her health is good.

Thousands of women past fifty say they owe their vigor and health to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and are recommending it to their friends and neighbors.

Have Kidneys Examined By Your Doctor

Take Salts to Wash Kidneys if Back Pains You or Bladder. Both.

Flush your kidneys by drinking a quart of water each day, also take salts occasionally, says a noted authority, who tells us that too much rich food forms acids which almost paralyze the kidneys in their efforts to expel it from the blood. They become sluggish and weaken; then you may suffer with a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sour, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine gets cloudy, full of sediment, the channels often get sore and irritated, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night.
To help neutralize these irritating acids, to help cleanse the kidneys and flush out the body's urinous waste, get four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy here; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days, and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help flush and stimulate sluggish kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in the system as they no longer irritate, thus often relieving bladder weakness.
Jad Salts is inexpensive, cannot injure and makes a delightful after-dinner drink.

Evening Story for Youngsters

Now the ladder was a section of one of the parts of Mrs. Fox's hole home. It was the same to her, though, as the see box is to a housekeeper.
She brought all sorts of dainties and delicacies and put them before Mr. Fox. But first she put a tablecloth of leaves on her table of earth.
"A banquet," said Mr. Fox, smacking his lips. "How hungry I am!"
"And what a Ban for you are! You know how to feed an old fellow well!"

The GREEN CLOAK

By YORKE DAVIS

WNU Service, Copyright, 1924

STORY FROM THE START

Dr. Ronald McAllister, famous in his special work—applied psychology—employs his leisure time in the elucidation of crime mysteries. As the narrative opens he is interested in the murder of the small town of Oak Ridge, of a recluse, Henry Morgan. The murdered man, his papers reveal, had been in New Zealand, where Doctor McAllister had lived in his youth. Will Harvey has testified he saw a woman wearing a green cloak in the Morgan home the night of the murder. Doctor Reinhardt, friend of McAllister, telephones to him a queer case in his hospital, and invites McAllister to see the patient. The doctor sees a possible connection between the murdered New Zealander and the girl, McAllister and his friend go through Morgan's papers. An immense collection of maps interests them. The doctor finds a noose and pipe, used as a tourniquet, the instrument of the killing.

"There must have been some standard, some test that he tried those coast lines by. When they did not fit it, he destroyed them. That test or standard may have existed solely in his memory. If not, if it was a thing committed to paper, then we can find it. Whatever it was, he must have been in the habit of referring to it constantly. In that case, I have no doubt that it's somewhere in this room. Take the lamp and hold it at the other end of the bookshelves—so. Now raise it so that the light will fall horizontally along the top shelf."

He had stationed himself at the opposite end from where I stood, and he sighted along the projecting edge of the shelf as I raised the lamp to the height he indicated.

"Try the next one," he said, "—so. And now the next. There; that'll do. We've got it, if I'm not mistaken."

He walked over toward my end of the case and pulled a book out of the third shelf.

"Our thanks are due to the old woman for not being too good a housekeeper," he observed in comment. "The dust on those books is evidence enough that he was not in the habit of reading them. But this one shows a clear track in and out of the shelf. There's no better hiding place for a sheet of paper than a book."

He balanced the book carefully in both hands, and then let it open where it would.

"Well," he said, "I think we've found it," for there between the two yellow pages was a bluish sheet of semi-transparent paper, folded.

He laid down the book and opened up the paper. It was a map, too, and as I looked at it closely, I saw that it was executed on a very large scale. It was a map of a very narrow-necked peninsula. The soundings in the sea all about it were indicated frequently. Over the surface of the land itself were various little numerals, which had their explanation in a legend in the corner. One had only to read a little way down this explanatory column to see with what minute care the map had been drawn, and on how large a scale. Such unimportant objects, from a geographer's point of view, as a granite boulder or a blasted tree had their position indicated.

No, the purpose of that map-maker had not been purely geographical. So much was clear.

"It's a tracing, you see," Doctor McAllister observed. "He's got the original locked away somewhere, now. But, do you notice, there's nothing on the sheet, anywhere, to indicate in what part of the world this bit of land lies? There's no latitude or longitude indicated. We'll have to get the original to find that."

At that, the explanation of the whole mystery of this wilderness of maps flashed across my mind.

"No," I cried, "he hasn't got latitude or longitude on the original, either! He never knew; to the day of his death, any better than we know now, into what sea that little peninsula juts its head. That's what he spent the last three years of his life hunting for."

Doctor McAllister nodded gravely. "You are quite right," he said; "right beyond a doubt. There's no knowing what there is to be found on that bit of headland, but whatever it is, he wanted it badly."

It was natural that we should both fall silent just then, natural, too, that in our excitement over the discovery, our nerves were higher strung than usual. It had grown pretty late. There was a dead stillness within the house. The only sound, save the ticking of a clock, that came to our ears was the occasional moan of a gust of wind through the trees and around the corners of the house. So it was natural that we both started violently when a gust of wind blew open one of the windows, with a bang, and crashed our lamp to sicker and then to go. I laughed nervously, and wiped my forehead with the back of my hand. It was wet. Then I rose, or rather, started to rise, and spoke at the same time—began to speak, at any rate. What I had in mind to say was, that I would clean the window if the doctor would relight the lamp.

the compelling grip of his muscular hand thrust me back into my chair, and my sentence trailed off into a sort of gasp.

So, for a moment, we sat breathless.

"Somebody's getting in," I whispered presently. "It must be Mallory."

"Mallory has a key," he retorted. "Listen—"

No, that was not Mallory. It was not anybody trying to get in, for somebody had already succeeded—somebody who was already making his way, with swift, almost incredibly stealthy steps, up the stairs from the second floor to the room where we were sitting.

We drew back into an obscure corner and stood close together, half-crouching, eying the door.

Presently we saw it opening. And then there emerged from its shadow a face we both knew—a face neither of us is ever likely to forget. The eyes in that face we had never seen before, for they had been closed the last time we looked at it. Now they were about all we could see. The black hair lost itself in the shadow which enveloped the doorway, and the olive-brown skin was itself a shadow. But the eyes—they burned with the flaming green intensity of a leopard's.

The doctor and I shrank back into our corner and waited, breathlessly, to see what she would do. The first thing was curious, and little to be expected. She closed behind her the door by which she had entered. Then, with brisk certainty, but with no noise at all, she moved toward the desk. That brought her a little nearer us.

She had got within arm's reach of the swivel chair, when suddenly, like a flash, all the motion of her body was arrested. Her attitude had something of the frozen alertness that one sees in a setter dog when he points game. We could see her face better now; it was turned squarely toward us. But, apparently, she did not see us. That was natural, for we were deep in the shadow. But she knew we were there. The next moment I perceived that she knew by virtue of the same sense that the setter uses. She had caught our scent. Her head went back a little, her nostrils dilated, and she seemed to be drawing in a deep breath.

I have no command of English to describe the suddenness and unexpectedness of the thing that happened there. She stood there before us, as I have said, like one frozen, so still was she. And then, with no preliminary motion whatever, no crouch, no visible gathering up of the forces for a spring, she flashed across the room toward the open window, like a dancing shadow. For just an instant I saw her etched in profile as she poised upon the sill. And then she was gone.

I had followed her to the window as swiftly as my clumsy, human motions would permit, and looked down, expecting to see her lying bruised and broken on the frozen ground. Instead of that, I saw the fleeting shadow of her moving swiftly across the snowy lawn toward the gate.

A moment later, bare-headed, bare-handed, I was running at top speed down the rough, frozen country road in the direction I had seen her take.

Before I had gone fifty yards, I heard other footsteps pounding along behind me, and a momentary fear that my old chief had been reckless enough to risk his bones in such a chase caused me to pause and turn back. It was not Doctor McAllister, however, but the detective, Mallory, and as he panted up alongside me, he said:

"I saw her coming down the rain-pipe. She might almost as well have fallen, she came down so fast. What was she like? I don't suppose you got anything of a look at her, though?"

"No," said I. "The wind had just blown out the lamp, and we were there in the dark when she came in."

"It doesn't matter," he said briefly, as we plowed along, side by side. "I'll know what she's like well enough when I come up with her. But there is no use in your keeping up the chase. I'll get her alone, never fear. Nothing that wears skirts can outrun me."

I was already half inclined to take his advice and turn back, for the pace was beginning to tell on me, when I tripped over something and fell headlong.

By the time I had picked myself up and shaken some of the loose snow out of my sleeves, he was already a hundred yards ahead down the road. I was about spent, so, regretfully, I turned back.

But for one moment I passed curiously to investigate the cause of my fall. It had been something soft, something that gave a little as my foot struck it, and then clung. It had been entirely covered by the snow, which had fallen out here in the country to a depth of nearly six inches.

I scuffed around in it with my feet until I found it. Then I stooped and picked it up. It must be a shawl or a blanket, I thought, as I shook the snow out of its folds and held it out in both hands. No, it was neither. It was a cloak; a green cloak, and the collar was cut high in the back.

I cast a glance over my shoulder. Mallory was already out of sight in the distance. I threw the cloak over my arm and trudged back to the house.

CHAPTER IV

Early the next morning Doctor McAllister and I took one of the trains upon which the male population of Oak Ridge habitually goes to town upon its several and various business.

We had by no means exhausted the possibilities of discovery which still lay concealed, we felt sure, within that lonely old house where we had passed so strange a night; nor had we solved its mystery. But matters of a more instant importance compelled us, for a while, to abandon it.

In the first place, we knew that, little as we liked the prospect, it was our clear duty to report to Ashton what we knew of the mysterious, wild creature who had escaped from the hospital and was now at large. By one means or another, she must be found as quickly as possible. She had already destroyed one life—that of a man we were practically sure—and until she was safely under restraint again, we could have no guaranty that she would not destroy others. To thwart that possibility, we must call in Ashton and the police, however little to our liking such a course might be.

We deferred our breakfast until our arrival in town, memories of the dinner we had had the night before making it easy to go hungry for a while. We were later getting in than we expected to be, for a combination of fog and freezing sleet delayed our train. Out of the car windows we could see as we crawled along, that the telegraph wires were already sagging under their white armor of ice. As soon as we got in, we drove straight to The Meredith.

In the restaurant we found Ashton himself, just sitting down to breakfast. He welcomed us with an eagerness that showed that he had already heard some report of our adventure of the night before.

Cats Alike Fond of Traveling and Home

The glare of limelight that recently beat upon Fluffy, the London Victoria station cat, who boards the 10:45 train to Dover every morning, lunches upon nice creamy milk at the buffet there, and returns to town by the afternoon train, is a reminder of a curious fact about cats; they are at once the greatest travelers and the greatest "home bodied" of all domesticated animals. In most countries, regularly journey long distances on trains, usually in the restaurant car, but sometimes with the train crew. As for seafaring cats, there must be hundreds of thousands of them, from North Cape to the Horn, Southampton water to Nagasaki bay. Most fleets carry quite a number; there are White Star vessels with five-and-twenty aboard. There was at amusing incident not long ago when one of the Adriatic's cats, that had failed to turn up when the ship sailed, reappeared for the next voyage with its tail proudly waving in the breeze and five little kittens trotting along behind.—Manchester Guardian.

Howe About—By ED HOWE

WNU Service, WNU Service.

Helen of Troy ran away from her husband, and lived with another man. After years of fighting, in which thousands were killed, the husband captured Helen, and brought her back home.

The neighbors supposed his purpose was to boll her—in old. Instead, he forgave her, and again put her in charge of his home.

Did Helen appreciate the mercy? She certainly did not; she bossed her husband more cruelly than ever before, and made a fool of him on every possible occasion.

Some are like that; they regard forgiveness as license for still worse offending.

Our favorite meanness is to praise some things more than they deserve. Of every particularly successful man it is said by his special enemies that his wife, or his head clerk "made him."

There is lots of nonsense in the world, but it is all plainly labeled. When a man tries to sell you a book he makes a large profit on and which will be a dead loss to you, there is a label on him as large as a barn door. There is also plenty of sense in the world, and it is plainly labeled, too. People talk sense quietly; nonsense is nearly always heralded in loud voice or large type. The next time you are in a crowd, try the experiment and see how easy it is to pick out nonsense.

The question has been raised what two men would do, who lived a solitary life in the wilds, and met each other for the first time. Putendorf believed they would approach each other as friends; Hobbes, on the contrary, as enemies; Rousseau, that they would pass each other by in silence. Putendorf, of course, is right. Did not Robinson Crusoe welcome even Friday, a poor native who could not speak his language?

The critics are right; the people are an abused lot; and the critics are not any better than the rest of us.

There is no woman who gives us the radiant dreams that lurk beneath the word Woman; there is no wine that realizes the intoxication imagined by the word Wine; there is no perfume that our deceived nostrils find equal to the word Perfume; all is too little for the word All, and no nothingness is an empty enough vanity as to be arch-terrorist word Nothing.—Emile Tennessee.

It was the late A. C. Benson who told the story of a soul who arrived in the next world and, there finding all the more pleasant features of his earthly life reproduced without their accompanying responsibilities, observed from the cozy depths of a supernatural armchair, "I had no idea that heaven was so comfortable!"—Where to another shade tersely replied: "It isn't!"

I sometimes think there is nothing a crazy man dreams might be done that cannot be done. I am half convinced that fiction is only a record of things we do not yet know about.

If cowardice had not been a strong characteristic of mankind, history would have recorded the existence of tyrants, only to give grateful particulars of their execution. There is no excuse for an individual or majority submitting to tyranny; a remedy may usually be found.

The great disgrace in Nero's history is that the people submitted to him. That one man should go wrong is not surprising, but that millions should patiently submit to his tyranny and brutality for years, is surprising.

When his subjects finally revolted, Nero ran away like a whipped cur; a single man easily disposed of him.

I have never attracted the favor of any man to the extent that he was willing to divide his money with me. But everyone I meet is willing to divide his valuable ideas with me.

"Don't preach at a fire," H. L. Mencken lately said. Still, when a house is burning because of some one's carelessness, and women and children standing barefoot in the snow, quite a sermon is being preached.

And if a neighbor appears who devises an efficient method of getting water on the fire, and the furniture out, he will preach a sermon that will not only do good at the time, but be long remembered for future usefulness.

Never deal with a rogue. On the appearance of trouble, he always turns state's evidence and makes your part of the transaction worse than it is.

Be very careful what you ask for in youth, lest you receive too much of it in your old age.—Goethe.

Ben Franklin used to say it is the disposition of men to tire of a woman, a guest, and rainy weather, in three days.

Carrizozo Boys Defeat Alamogordo

The Carrizozo High School boys' basketball teams journeyed to Alamogordo and returned that night with the long end of a 20-16 count over the Otero county boys.

The game was slow due to the tired condition of some of the men. The half ended 10-8 in favor of Alamogordo. The 3rd quarter 16 to 10 also in favor of Alamogordo. Riddle's admonitions and the yells of the Carrizozo rooters spurred the gang into action and they scored 5 field goals in the final stanza to rout the Alamo aggregation who were unable to score.

There were no individual stars in this contest. All were far below their usual form in the first 3 quarters but rose to the occasion and overcame the six-point lead. Over-confidence and lack of practice was rather hard on our bunch.

They will play Mescalero next Saturday at 2:30 in the afternoon.

The girls' game was postponed until February 4, due to the illness and failure of some of the girls to make their grade.

Baptist Church Notes

Pastor F. C. Rowland of the Baptist Church, assisted by Sec. S. S. Bussell of the Baptist Convention of New Mexico is conducting an enlargement campaign with an effort to reach every member of the Baptist Church and every interested person in a systematic study of God's Word every Sunday. The Sunday School is being re-organized on the basis of the most up-to-date Sunday School methods as presented by the Southern Baptist Convention, consisting of 3,750,000 members. Sec. S. S. Bussell is teaching a class each night at the Baptist church, using as a text one of the latest books, 'Building a Standard Sunday School,' by Sec. Arthur Flake, one of the greatest authorities on Sunday School work and organization in America. In addition to the text book taught, practical lectures on how to build up the Sunday Schools in Carrizozo are being given.

The Carrizozo Baptist Sunday School has set an attendance goal for Sunday, Jan. 29, of 75. To this end the teachers and officers of the Sunday School are visiting in the homes of the people inviting them to attend worship next Sunday.

Spring Buyers' Season (El Paso Gateway Club)

El Paso, Texas, Jan. 26.—"The entire month of February will be devoted to the Spring Buyers' season," according to Geo. Ryan, Chairman of the Trade Extension Bureau of the El Paso Chamber of Commerce.

From the markets of the world the wholesalers and manufacturers have brought the finest and best that could be found for the selection of the Southwestern merchant who makes El Paso his buying headquarters. The stocks that will be on display have been selected with the needs of the merchant in mind. We are aware of the fact that a line that would appeal to a Northwestern buyer would not interest a Southwestern buyer. With this knowledge backed by years of experience the El Paso merchants have selected lines and merchandise that will have a ready and profitable sale in our territory, he continued.

One of the most interesting features entering our trade activities this year is the fact that both the White House and the Popular, the Southwest's largest department stores have consented to wholesale millinery and ready-to-wear from their vast stocks. With this addition, El Paso can offer the buyer a complete market, Ryan claimed.

The El Paso market is also unique in that fare refunds are granted every day in the year, and are not restricted to the special buying season. We have in this a service that our customers appreciate, and we are happy to say that it will again be in effect during 1923, he continued.

Capitan—Tularosa

Two games of basketball were played at the Community Hall last Saturday night, Tularosa being victorious in both games.

The Capitan teams played hard, but luck seemed to be against them. We would be glad to see return games played here again, for it is our opinion that there was a 'fix' some place, and another contest would make the score different. You may call this partiality, if you will, but we still maintain that the Capitan teams can beat them.

L. R. La May, son Fred and daughter Mrs. Cora Barber were here from the Nogal-Mesa Tuesday. They said the same nice weather prevailed in that section that we are having here.

To Members of C. of C.

The members of the Carrizozo Chamber of Commerce are advised that at the next regular meeting Feb. 23, there will be an election of directors who will in turn select a President for the balance of 1923, the term of the present directors and the president having expired.
