Small Town Stuff Argument Put to Route

Magdalena News: Many words of commendation were heard from the guests during the week on the splendid manner in which Magdalena entertained the visiting Masons. From the general run of conversation, it appeared that many of the visitors had come with the idea that owing to the small town, the time spent between Grand Lodge sessions would be more or less dull, but before departing, the idea had vanished and all expressed themselves in the kindest manner of the hospitality of the people of Magdalena. All really seemed to enjoy every minute spent here.

Editor Outlook: Dear Sir—Your article on the first page of last week's issue, under the caption of "Town Development" hit the nail on the head, so to speak.

The writer of this article knows conditions in Carrizozo. I hope that every citizen of Carrizozo who has the town's welfare at heart will realize that everything that was said in that article referring to small towns included Carrizozo which will certainly always remain a small town unless its citizens do their full duty and try to make it grow.

About a year or so ago The Outlook had a lengthy article signed "S. N." which article suggested that the town make a leader in civic matters.

So far, this leader hasn't made his appearance—I hope he will soon "bob up!" Citizen.

Teams to Tournament

The Carrizozo Basketball Boys will leave for the Tournament Thursday morning, which is to be held at Artesia, March 2-3.

Capitan and Carlsbad will open the Tournament by playing at 8 o'clock Friday morning.

Following this game, we will meet our first adversary—Hope High School. The strength of this team is unknown but we feel pretty sure of the strength of ours. We think we have pretty good chances in the Tournament, and our first game is with Hope—we hope to win.

The players that coach Riddle will probably take are: George Cooper, Captain, and Mack Shaver, centers; Florentino Lopez, Don Lemon and Fay Harvey, forwards; Maurice Lemon, Paul Gallegos and Joe Holcomb, guards.

The players are leaving with the determination of winning such honors and we hope that they will come back with them.

Returns from Sad Mission

L. A. Whitaker returned from El Paso Monday where he attended the funeral of his little nephew, William Wallace Whitaker, age three, son of Mr. and Mrs. Herman Whitaker, and the only grandson of Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Whitaker.

The remains were placed in the Masonic vault at El Paso, and as soon as the Whitaker mausoleum is completed at Asheville, N. C., they will be transferred to that place for final interment.

Birthday Party

Wednesday, 16 friends of Dr. and Mrs. R. E. Blaney gathered at the Blaney home and sprung a glad surprise on the head of the family on the eve of his birthday. Cards were played, J. B. The evening was spent in a pleasant manner and ended with refreshments, the feature on the refreshment table being a large and handsomely decorated birthday cake.

Wider Highways

Wide roads are everywhere in demand. Increase in traffic on our public highways makes wider roads a prime essential, and public officials who fail to take this vital fact into reckoning are making a mistake.

According to a writer in the Memphis Courier Appeal, "road widening has become a definite policy in several states in which the automobile registration is high." One of these states has been adding strips of paving from 3 to 6 feet to some of its roads; another is placing along its roads lateral extensions of from 12 to 18 feet, and these widening policies are particularly to be noted in metropolitan areas around some of the larger and more important cities of the country.

Narrow roads do not take care of the traffic, and besides, they are more dangerous than roads of wider types.—Manufacturer.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Dissensions in the Pan-American Conference—Political Gossip.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD.

INTERNATIONAL discord was rife in the Pan-American conference at Havana during the week, and it became increasingly evident that plans for the adoption of a convention putting the Pan-American union on a re-organized permanent basis could not be put into effect yet. They were blocked mainly by the attitude of Honorable Pueyrredon of Argentina, who still insisted that the convention must contain a declaration against trade barriers in the form of high tariffs and who declared he would not sign a convention without that feature. His government, however, instructed him to sign the convention with reservations, whereupon he resigned both as head of the Argentine and as ambassador to the United States. The modus vivendi then adopted by the conference for the government of the Pan-American union until the governments shall ratify the new convention provides for continuance of the resolutions in effect with a few modifications.

Then, in a plenary session of the conference, the matter of immigration regulation came up, and three resolutions, all aimed at the policy of the United States, were adopted. To each proposition, as it was adopted, Ambassador Fletcher, a member of the United States delegation, made the reservation that the United States regards immigration a purely domestic question and legislation thereon exclusively the function of the United States congress.

One of the resolutions provided that any American republic may restrict immigration from a non-American continent. Immigration into the United States from the other American republics and from Canada and the West Indies is now unrestricted, but the Coolidge administration favors the extension of our restrictive policy to countries in the western hemisphere and the question is to be considered by congress at this session.

The convention for regulation of commercial aviation among American countries, favored by the United States delegation, was adopted. But the Americans lost a point the day before when the committee on public international law adopted a rule of war that would operate to prevent any American republic from arming merchant ships against submarines. The fight for this resolution was led by Doctor Podesta of Argentina and the vote was 11 to 4. It is not likely that the United States will accept it.

The same committee, on motion of the Mexican delegate, asked that the Pan-American union convene a commission of experts to consider plant quarantines. Mexico especially objects to United States regulations that bar importation of Mexican fruits and plants infected with insect pests. Ambassador Fletcher gave notice that the United States would not consent to arbitration of plant disease quarantines.

Fascist Italy contemplated with satisfaction the dissensions in the Havana conference and looked on the meeting as a virtual failure. The opinion of the Roman press was that the major Latin-American nations, in order to escape from the hegemony of the United States, should seek cooperation with Spain and Italy, which represent Latin civilization in the world.

HERBERT HOOVER, secretary of commerce, is now formally in the race for the Republican Presidential nomination, for he has consented to the use of his name in the Ohio primaries against Senator Willis. Under the Ohio law a candidate must give consent to the use of his name, and Mr. Hoover went that far, and then stepped for the present. He decided not to take the stump anywhere during the present campaign and he remains in the cabinet; and he noted that expenditure of money in his behalf be "strictly limited and rigidly accounted for."

Willis' supporters in Ohio at first affected to be unalarmed by the Hoover move, asserting that it was brought about by a "group of state politicians without prestige" and would be without avail. But their complacency was disturbed when Maurice Maschke, national committeeman from Ohio, deserted the favorite son and announced he would support the secretary of commerce, believing him the strongest man the Republicans could select. Senator Willis was astonished and accused Maschke of having repudiated promises of support. The Hooverites predicted that Hoover would win from 16 to 24 of the state's 51 delegates to the convention. In a letter to Maschke Senator Willis more than intimated that the vote prefer the nomination of Hoover. "The chief newspaper supporters of Mr. Hoover openly state in their editorials and news columns that they are supporting Mr. Hoover for the nomination on the Republican ticket and falling in that, they will give their support to Gov. Al Smith," the letter said. "This makes their purpose and attitude in the matter very clear. I cannot believe that you and your organization sympathize with such a viewpoint."

Managers of the Hoover boom plan to enter nine or ten of the seventeen primary states. Their estimates of the initial Hoover strength in the convention run from $25 to $75, and they profess to be certain that he will be far ahead of Frank O. Lowden, whose vote on the first ballot has been predicted at 250 or more. The convention will have 1,089 delegates and 545 will be necessary for the nomination.

PROSPECTS for a long and bitter fight in the Democratic convention are increased by the news from Albany that Gov. Al Smith will insist that the platform contain a plank calling for modification of the Volstead act. This is his reply to the statement of McAdoo that no wet will or can be the Democratic candidate for the Presidency, and at least it shows he has the courage of his convictions. Recent canvasses have shown, it is said, that at the start of the convention the South will be almost solid against Smith, the exception being perhaps Louisiana. But it has been supposed that a lot of southern delegates would shift to the governor if there were to be no wet plank in the platform.

The dry Democrats at present are apparently concentrating their efforts on an attempt to bring about the nomination of Edwin T. Meredith of Iowa. He is a dry and favors rather radical legislation for farm relief. Though the survey of the South, before alluded to, revealed no especial sentiment here for Senator Reed of Missouri, his managers assert they have received many assurances of support for him in those states as well as in the West. Mr. Reed began his active campaign Saturday when he started for Dallas, Texas, on a speaking tour that will take him to the Pacific coast.

MANY members of congress, both wets and dries, have long sought to avoid going on record on the prohibition question in any form, but the other day they were all forced out into the open. Representative Lathrop of Maryland, leader of the wets in the house, moved to recommit the treasury and post office appropriation bill and add the following section:

"That no money heretofore appropriated for the enforcement of the national prohibition act shall be used in the preparation or issue of any permit for the removal or use of any industrial alcohol known to be contained by any deadly, poisonous drug."

The motion was rejected by a vote of 211 to 51. Though outnumbered by more than four to one, the wets seemed pleased as various members representing wet districts were forced to make good on their Anti-Saloon league pledges.

PUBLIC utilities of the United States are to be investigated, but not by a senate committee as Senator Walsh of Montana desired. Senator George of Georgia and many others opposed the Walsh plan and public utility of both parties supported it. Finally the Montana senator's resolution was amended to provide that the federal trade commission should be directed to make the investigation and in this form it was adopted.

The inquiry is to apply to utility corporations doing an interstate business, and also will affect corporations holding the stocks of two or more public utilities operating in different states. The resolution directs the commission to go into the pertinent facts in connection with the securities of utility corporations, the extent to which holding companies or their stockholders figure in the situation, and whether any legislation should be enacted by congress to correct abuses. The resolution also authorizes the commission to inquire into the extent to which utility corporations or their officers seek by the expenditure of money to control elections of President, vice president, or United States senators, or to influence public opinion.

FARM relief legislation is again before the senate, for its agricultural committee has reported favorably on the revised McNary-Haugen bill. An altered, the measure meets many of the objections of President Coolidge to the original bill, but it still carries the equalization fee provision. An almost identical bill, introduced by Representative Hagen, was still being discussed by the house agricultural committee; but it was hoped by the senate leaders that it would be reported and acted on by the house before it became necessary for the senate to take a vote. The house committee heard last week the new proposition of B. F. Youkers that the marketing problem be turned over to farm commodity organizations working under federal charters.

INDIANA'S great political scandal of 1924 became virtually a closed incident when Gov. Ed Jackson was acquitted on the charge of having conspired to bribe former Gov. Warren T. McCray. This verdict was directed by Judge C. M. McCabe on motion of the defense because the state had failed to prove that the bribery conspiracy had been concealed, and therefore the statute of limitations ran against the charge. The prosecution had produced a lot of evidence sustaining the bribery charge, but the defendant was saved by the technicality.

COLONEL LINDBERGH wound up his Latin American good-will tour by flying from Havana to St. Louis without stop. From the time he left Washington on December 12 he had flown 9,300 miles in 119.31 flying hours and without mishap. Secretary of War Davis has expressed the hope that the colonel will now give up all stunts and dangerous flying, but the young man indicated that after a rest he would resume his work in that line. Capt. Joseph F. Donnellan, who started from Chicago to fly to Chile, abandoned his trip at Havana because the fog made it too perilous for a single-motored plane.

HERBERT HENRY ASQUITH, Earl of Oxford and Asquith, greatest leader of the Liberal party since Gladstone, died at his country home on the Thames near Oxford after an illness of two years. He was prime minister during the stormy years from 1906 to 1916, directing the course of the empire in the first two years of the war, after which he resigned to let Lloyd George, a more vigorous man, take the helm. In recent years he and Lloyd George had disagreed seriously and this almost split the Liberal party, but in October, 1925, Asquith retired from the party leadership. Prominent men of all parties paid tribute to the earl's great qualities when his death was announced, and parliament adjourned for a day. Burial was offered in Westminster Abbey but was declined by the family because of the known wishes of Earl Asquith.

Leo O'Neil Brown, a veteran member of the Illinois legislature and widely known lawyer, met tragic death at his home in Ottawa when he fell from an embankment into the Fox river and was drowned.

Walter Fay, old-time comedian who was known throughout the country, died suddenly in Kansas City during what he had said was his farewell tour of stages on which he had appeared during more than half a century. He was seventy-three years old and his real name was Edwin Fitzgerald.

The recent industrial employment survey report issued by the U. S. Employment Service of the U. S. Department of Labor at Denver states that winter schedules prevailed in practically all outdoor activities during January, although there was a slight upward trend in building, highway construction, and metal-mine development work. There is plenty of labor available for all demands, and a large surplus of migratory outdoor workers exists. Spring agricultural work which will probably start in the next three or four weeks, will reduce the unemployment among seasonal outdoor workers. Coal mines operated steadily. Indications point to considerable development work in the metal mine and oil field industries. Considerable highway work is planned for this year, which will mean employment for a large number of men. The report states that the ending of the cotton harvest and grazing in Arizona released quite a large number of workers. Shipping of the winter lettuce crop will soon be over, when more workers will be released; however, spring agricultural work will soon be under way, which will offer employment to many of those unemployed. Considerable metal-mine construction and development work is under way, particularly in the lead and zinc mining districts. There was a slight increase in copper mining during the month; however, a surplus of skilled and unskilled metal-mine labor exists in all districts. Building increased somewhat. Work has started in some localities on the 1925 municipal improvement program, which will offer employment to quite a number of men. Winter schedules prevail in the Flagstaff and McNary lumber districts. Lumbering operations have been seasonally curtailed, and a temporary surplus of this class of labor exists. Forces employed in highway construction were increased somewhat during the past 30 days.

One of six ARIZONA boys hunting near Cottonwood was blamed for the accidental death of Miguel Escalante. Escalante was shot through the head. He and his brother were gathering wood on the Verde river.

Four Arizona firms will furnish the state highway department with $168,000 worth of highway equipment under bids accepted recently. The four firms are the F. Konstadt company of Tucson, the C. S. Stapley company at Phoenix, the Arizona Tractor and Equipment company at Phoenix and El Troy of Mesa.

The Green Cloak

By YORKE DAVIS

WNS Service Copyright, 1928

STORY FROM THE START

Dr. Ronald McAllister, psychologist, undertakes to solve the mystery of the murder of a reclusive young woman. The dead man's papers reveal that he had been in New Zealand, where McAllister had lived in his youth. Will Harvey testify to seeing a woman in a green cloak at the Morgan home the night of the murder? Doctor McAllister is asked to see a young woman patient in a hospital. In her delirium she mutters in a strange language which only McAllister understands. He suspects who may know something of the murder. A carefully hidden map is discovered by McAllister and Asst. Atty. Gen. Atkinson. As they search in Morgan's home, while they are searching a young woman enters the house in the darkness and, according to the doctor, a green cloak. In response to an advertisement of the finding of a green cloak, a young woman, who is the daughter of the housemaid at the Morgans, claims it. McAllister takes two laboratory instruments to the Morgans for an unexplained purpose. The head waiter, Wilkins, admits Jane Perkins is employed at the hotel.

"I was sent up here to do up the bedrooms, sir," she said. "Was there any mistake about it, sir?"

"I realized now how 'face' and 'nice' had suggested a rhyme to Harvey. She pronounced the word, 'mistake,' in the vilest cockney.

"No, it's quite right," said I. "Come in."

Doctor McAllister let her go straight through into the bedrooms with no more than a glance at her, and a nod in her general direction.

"Well," he said, "how about it? Does the resemblance strike you?"

"I don't think it would have struck me had I not been looking for it. But I imagine if we could get allouettes of those two faces and put them side by side, they'd look a good deal alike."

He looked at me rather oddly, turned away and paced the length of the room a couple of times. It was one of his incongruous and unexpected characteristics that he liked to whistle or hum popular tunes to himself when he was thinking in an abstracted way. He began to do it now, though it was no popular tune which his fancy alighted on; indeed, it took me a minute or two to identify the queer, haunting cadence which he hummed over and over again. I did not identify it, in fact, until he left off humming and began to sing, and then the guttural words he used gave me the clue. It was that ghastly death chant we had heard the girl in the hospital drooping and mumbling to herself.

Presently he strode over to the mantelpiece. There was a large ornamental, narrow-necked vase at the end of it, and the doctor began tapping idly enough upon the side of it with a little pearl-handled pocket knife. I turned round in some surprise.

"That sounds as if it were full of water," said I.

"It is."

"Well, who in the world can ever have thought of putting water in that vase?"

"Who, indeed?" he said. "Oh, look here, will you, Phelps? I've dropped my knife into it."

It was curiously unlike him to do an idle, clumsy thing like that, quite as unnatural as that the vase, which had never held a flower, should be full of water. But suddenly something in his face told me that the thing he had done was part of a carefully calculated trick.

The next moment he called out, "Perkins—"

"Yes, sir," came the chambermaid's voice from the next room. "Coming, sir."

As she entered the room he turned to her and indicated the vase. "It's just dropped my penknife in there," he said, "and my hand is too big to go in through the throat of it. Do you think you can fish it out for me?"

"My hand isn't as small as some, sir," she said with fat good humor, "but, anyway, I can try."

"Hold on!" the doctor cried as she moved her hand toward the vase. "The thing is full of water. You'll get your sleeves wet."

I was standing close by waiting to see what would happen, still utterly at a loss for a guess as to the doctor's purpose.

The girl slipped back her sleeves and plunged her arm into the vase.

And I, unable to believe what my eyes had seen, clutched the doctor's shoulder and stared, astounded, into his thoughtful face. For high up on the girl's forehead, just inside the eyebrow, was a tattoo mark in red and blue—a mark that I had not forgotten.

CHAPTER VII

It was fortunate that she did not see look into my astonished face, because for the first few moments I had no control of it at all, and to any eye, even a stupid one, it would have betrayed strange matters. At first I simply stared at that mysterious little tattoo mark in red and blue; it seemed as if I could not pull my eyes away from it. But at last, rubbing my hands over them, I looked up at the doctor, astonished, questioning, incredulous, and yet convinced.

Of any such momentary turmoil his own face showed absolutely no sign. It was calm, almost to the edge of indifference, but his bright old eyes met mine for just an instant with a flashing look that admonished me of the necessity for self-control.

I pulled myself together, turned away for just the space of one deeply indrawn breath, then turned back again for a look at the girl. She was bending over the vase, her hand plunged down to the bottom of it, where she was fishing about for the doctor's knife. She was evidently a good-humored sort of person, easily pleased. The doctor's pretended mishap and her own efforts to retrieve it, seemed to be providing her with genuine amusement. She smiled and giggled and chattered all the while she was groping around for the knife, and uttered a triumphant exclamation when she found it.

All of that I barely saw, for I was searching, too, searching her face with a concentrated gaze that would have astonished her had she encountered it. As I looked, in the light of my new knowledge of her, the physical identity of her features with those of the wild girl became steadily more apparent, until I was forced to marvel at my previous blindness to it. Physically the face was the same; but everything of bone and flesh, every infinitely subtle muscular strain or relaxation about lip, eyelid and brow, everything which makes of the human face a window through which the soul looks out—all of that was different. Her movements were different. Sensory and motor nerves must be keyed to an altogether different pitch. The deep, stable color in her cheeks told of a pulse that beat at an entirely different rhythm. I remembered the poise of her body the last time we had stood face to face with her there in Henry Morgan's study, her attitude of frozen alertness, the deep breath drawn in through the dilated nostrils. She had caught our scent then and, recognizing it as something strange and perilous, had fled like a shadow.

The doctor was standing close beside her, and now again he began humming the weird cadence of the death chant which I had heard for the first time myself—Wellington, New Zealand, but I never heard that language.

"No," he said; "you'd have to go a matter of a thousand miles or two from Wellington to hear that; it's Maori."

"I never heard of him. Is that all, sir? Shall I do up the rooms?"

He nodded; but as she turned to leave the room he called her back.

"You're rather near-sighted, aren't you, Perkins?" he said.

"Oh, no, sir; quite to the contrary, in fact. I can see farther than most people."

"Did you ever have your eyes tested?"

"Measured for glasses, do you mean, sir?" she asked. "No, sir. I shan't never come to them."

"Sit down in that chair a minute," said the doctor, with an easy assumption of authority. "No, not that one; this big chair here. I want to see if your eyes are as good as you think they are."

The chair he indicated, and in which she rather reluctantly seated herself was deep and soft and heavily upholstered. Neither the doctor, nor I enjoyed sitting in it, however, because the curve at the back thrust one's head forward at an unnatural angle.

"Lean back," commented the doctor, "all the way—so."

When she was seated to his satisfaction, he wheeled the chair around with its back to the table, and then adjusted the powerful electric reading lamp so that it shed a beam horizontally above the girl's head.

She surveyed these preparations a little uneasily. "It's like having a tooth pulled," she said.

"Not a bit," said the doctor cheerfully. "It's not going to hurt. I only want you to look into this little mirror and tell me what you see."

He held it up before her eyes as he spoke. It was circular, slightly concave and was adjusted upon a long ivory handle. He held it above her head so that she had to strain her eyes upward to see it at all, and at such an angle that it reflected the light of the reading lamp straight into her eyes.

"I don't see anything at all but a spot of yellow light."

"You only see one?" questioned the doctor.

He pulled out his watch and glanced at it. "Don't mind what I'm doing at it. 'Don't mind what I'm doing," he admonished her. "Look steadily at the little mirror. Let me know how long it is before you begin to see two of those spots."

from the girl's own lips. He hummed it through once in a reminiscent sort of way, and then began singing the words.

The girl looked up at him and burst into a peal of laughter.

He stopped abruptly. "What's the matter?" he asked.

"I beg pardon, I'm sure," she said. "I couldn't help laughing. That was such a funny lot of noises."

"Is my singing as bad as that?" he asked good-naturedly.

"Not the singing, sir; the noises that went with it."

"Oh, you mean the language. Didn't you ever hear that language before?"

"Do you call that a language, sir? Does it mean anything? Do people talk like that?" Then she went on, without a pause, "I beg your pardon for being such a rattle, sir. And here's your knife."

Among the most important monarchs who governed a mighty civilization centuries before Athens came into fame was Seti I, a great warrior and a great builder, who ruled Egypt not long after the death of Tut-ankh-amen. Ramses I, founder of the nineteenth dynasty of Egypt, ruled only two years and was then succeeded by his son, Seti I. The young ruler took up the task bequeathed to him by his father of leading his conquering armies into Asia. He marched to Lebanon and compelled the Syrian princes to cut down some of the famous cedars for his triumph. He overran the Philistine country, marched through Palestine and subdued the Amorites. He also had conflict with the Hittites of Asia Minor, but little is known of his wars with them. Seti's military achievements, she wiped it on her apron and laid it on the center table; then wiped her hand and started to pull down her sleeve.

"That's a curious bit of tattooing on your arm," the doctor commented. "How did you come by it?"

"I don't know," she replied indifferently. "It's always been there, I fancy; ever since I was too small to remember anyway. I hope your knife won't get rusty, sir. And I hope you don't mind my laughing at that bit of song you sang."

"Not a bit," said the doctor. "I don't wonder the language struck you as queer. Yet it was common enough down in the quarter of the world where I was born."

"And where might that be, sir?" she asked.

"Oh, I meant the South Pacific generally. Where I lived was in New Zealand."

"Fancy now!" she said, obviously pleased. "That's where I come from."

"I pulled myself together, turned away for just the space of one deeply indrawn breath, then turned back again for a look at the girl. Hard to Get Around Ignorance Like This

Dr. Van Fardleah of the American medical commission, recently assigned to work in the Near East, remarked that medical effectiveness in the Orient would never be established until the masses were better educated.

"A peasant woman," he said, "had several children and when one of them was taken ill, we insisted that the others be vaccinated. Much against her will, she finally consented. Two days afterward she stormed into the relief hospital and upbraided us because one of the recently vaccinated children was dead."

"Dead!" I exclaimed, "but—how could he be dead? He was all right when we vaccinated him."

"He fell down and broke his neck," scoffed the woman. "A lot of good vaccination does."

Sardonic French Humor

French humorists are beginning to insist that the safest way to commit murder is with a pistol. Most of those who have employed other means in recent years have gone to the guillotine, but a number who use pistols are still enjoying life and freedom. Commenting upon this, Maurice Prax of the Petit Parisien, says it has become an established custom that the revolver, in crimes of passion, is strictly "de rigueur, like evening clothes after dinner at the Deauville casino. "It is strictly forbidden to strangle one's wife," Prax says. "It is equally forbidden to chop a wife or a rival into bits, or to give them poison with their meals. But the revolver remains authorized—and recommended."

Overcrowded Moscow

More than 70,000 residents of Moscow, Russia, live in houses unequipped with running water and even without sewerage, as a result of the great recent growth of the city population. Last year homes for 100,000 persons were built, but the city increased by 450,000 in that period.

Save the Mission Walls

Dr. Frank Pinkley, superintendent of the government national monuments, makes the following report, the first of this month concerning the old mission walls at the Gran Quivira, according to the Estancia News-Herald:

After making mention of a letter he received from Dr. Smith, custodian of the monument, he says: "A report from Dr. Smith under date of Jan. 14, reads as follows: Your letters of instruction have been received in which you ask of the actual needs of the monument. As you know, the walls are falling little by little and the cost of preserving each room will be about $300 and the cost will increase as the years go by. In my opinion it would be economy if the government would appropriate a larger sum, so that we might work up the rooms, cover them over and save the monument, for it will soon tumble down and our monument will be gone. I need a house near my work. I do not think it good policy to spend money on excavations, when our mission walls are tumbling down. Let us have all the money you can to save one of the great wonders of the southwest."

We are glad to hear Dr. Smith speak up and he is perfectly right in more ways than one. In the first place, money should be spent to preserve the old mission which is fast crumbling to dust. Next, Dr. Smith's present residence is far from what it should be and is a long distance from the gate. There is plenty of material near at hand, such as rock and timber which could easily and cheaply be used to construct a suitable and comfortable residence near the monument gate for the custodian. Excavations should be held back until these much needed improvements are made.

Young War at 'Baile'

Roy Spanish-American:
What for a time threatened to be a young-war and in reality developed into a sizeable conflict occurred at a "baile" in the Lucero hall last Saturday night near the hour of midnight. An argument over some trivial matter led to a flistic encounter that had disastrous effects on the facial appearance of a dozen or so participants. Fists and feet augmented by a stove-poker and other weapons of defense flew fast and furious while several in the melee went down for the final count.

Next Tuesday morning at ten o'clock the combatants will face Judge Reeder and give their version of the onslaught:

Scouts Re-organize

In answer to the call in this paper last week, 16 boys met with Rev. Rowland at Lutz Hall Friday night and reorganized the Carrizozo Boy Scouts, with Rev. Rowland as Scoutmaster.

Under the reorganization, a troop committee was formed, consisting of T. Kelley, R. E. Lemon and P. M. Shaver.

The meeting nights have been changed from Friday to Thursday nights, beginning with this week and all boys of the ages of 12 and over are invited to attend and enroll.

In a letter received from Sylvester Mireles, who is now in Moriarty, N. M., he speaks of being well pleased with his new location, and says that they have been having plenty of snow, and the bean farmers are highly elated and expect to raise a nice crop.

PERFORMANCE
as different as the car itself

Were greater beauty their only advantage, the new engineering principles of Dodge Brothers Victory Six would still be revolutionary.
Were greater safety The Victory's only advantage, it would still command the gratitude of a life-loving world.
Were greater economy its paramount feature, the fact would still remain that The Victory has made possible 21 miles per gallon at 25 miles per hour FOR A SIX.

But these are incidental to the basic Victory achievement. You must DRIVE the car to know about that!

You must take a corner faster than you ought, a cobble pavement faster than you thought, before The Victory secret begins to reveal itself. And you must unleash the full, sustained speed of the car before the idea takes full hold!

Victory design is unlike that of any other vehicle in the world - and Victory performance is equally radical and remarkable.

To examine the one and experience the other will prove an event that we urge you not to postpone.

WASHKOWSKY'S OLD SHOE
We call the attention of the American Bankers Association to the case of Mr. Washkowsky of Brooklyn. Mr. Washkowsky is hard working and thrifty, but like so many of us his education is defective; who is to blame for that we don't know. Mr. Washkowsky has been saving a part of his weekly wages for a long time, but hadn't told Mrs. Washkowsky where he was depositing his nest egg. That was a mistake, probably, but an inquiry into it belongs to another branch of education with which it is probable the bankers association cannot be held to have any concern.
But with Mr. Washkowsky's depositary it has. He chose for that purpose an old shoe. He kept the shoe, and its mate in his closet, and to the other day had tucked away in one of them savings amounting to $350. On that same other day Mrs. Washkowsky, rummaging Mr. Washkowsky's closet like a good housewife, seeking what she could throw away or transfer to another place where Mr. Washkowsky couldn't find it, as is the habit of good housewives, found this same pair of old shoes. We suppose she said to herself, Mr. Washkowsky not being present to have it said to him, "Isn't that just like a man?" and acting thereupon just like a woman she took the shoes to the cobbler to be repaired. It was either that or the ash barrel for them, and being frugal and Mr. Washkowsky paying the cobbler bills anyway, she sent them to the cobbler.
A distraught man was Mr. Washkowsky when he next went to make a deposit in his old shoe. "What's gone place," he asked in that wary tone affected by husbands on similar occasions, "have you found for my old shoes?" Mrs. Washkowsky told him, expecting to be praised for her thoughtfulness. Women-but that's another branch of education.
Mr. Washkowsky went to the cobbler and found his shoes, but not the money, which we cannot but feel is not remarkable. We hope he will find it, but he hasn't yet, which again should cause no astonishment.
But what we would like to hear from the American Bankers Association is what steps it is taking to discourage people of magpie habits from keeping their money in stoves, shoes, mantle clocks, behind wall pictures, under floor boards and similar places, but from casual evidence we are inclined to believe there are enough funds hidden away in such places in this enlightened and progressive country to pay off the national debt. Not that we advise paying it off, because that would leave congress nothing to fuss with Mr. Mellon about; but if deposited in banks our banker might have some to lend when we need it, which he now never has; he says money is very scarce. We hold it is not; it is merely in Mr. Washkowsky's shoes.

The national capital gave France's two famous flyers, Mlle. D'Amboise and Joseph Lebrun, a royal welcome when they landed safely at Bolling field after the flight from Montgomery, Ala. High officials of the government, members of the diplomatic corps and army and navy officers were on hand to greet the daring flyers who were the first to make a nonstop flight across the South Atlantic ocean. In the photograph, left to right: Maj. Georges Thiery, assistant French military attaché; Lieutenant Lebrun; Hon. Paul Claudel, French ambassador to United States; Undersecretary of State Robert E. Olds; Lieutenant Costes; Secretary of War Dwight D. Davis and Secretary of Navy Curtis D. Wilbur.

What Beard Tells

A heavy beard is not necessarily an indication of good health and great physical strength, according to a report given before the master barbers. In fact, the report stated the beard grows faster in poor health and as the owner grows older. No explanation was offered by the barbers for this contradictory growth.

Lesson for March 4

JESUS AND THE TWELVE

LESSON TOPIC—Mark 2:12-18; 4:7-13. GOLDEN TEXT—Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel unto every creature.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus Chooses Twelve Helpers. JUNIOR TOPIC—The Twelve Apostles and Their Work. INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Jesus' Call to Service. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Training of the Twelve.

1. The Twelve Ordained (Mark 3:13-19).

Jesus, knowing that His earthly career would be cut short, made provision for the carrying forward of His work after He was gone by calling and ordaining the twelve. Before doing this He spent a whole night in prayer (Luke 6:12). The burden of His prayer is indicated by what He immediately did. From among His disciples He chose twelve, whom He ordained for a twofold purpose.

1. "That they might be with Him" (v. 14).

Fellowship with the Lord is not only the highest privilege of a disciple but the indispensable qualification for witnessing for Him. Personal association with Jesus Christ—the interaction of personalities—the impact of His personality upon ours is the essential preparation for Christian service.

2. "That He might send them forth to preach" (vv. 14, 15).

To proclaim the good news of salvation to the lost world was the supreme mission of the disciples. Their credential for this mission was the endowment of the power of the Spirit—"To heal sickness and to cast out devils" (v. 15). Concerning those who were to be Christ's messengers observe:

(1) That twelve were ordained (v. 14). This was the beginning of the process by which the infinite God was to make known His grace to the whole world, therefore He sends forth the number of men corresponding to that purpose. The number twelve is the product of the heavenly three and the earthly four indicating the purpose of the triune God to reveal Himself to the four quarters of the world.

(2) Their characteristics. (a) Men of average ability. They were not from schools and colleges, yet men of mental capacity and efficiency. This has been the history of the Christian church. Not many noble, not many wise after the flesh are called (1 Cor. 1:26). (b) Middle ranks of society. They were not chosen from among the rich, neither from among paupers. The most efficient workers are those who are able to sympathize with the common people. (c) Diverse temperamental gifts. They were so grouped as to have impulse and leadership—respect and questioning went together, and among them were found men of practical business ability.

11. The Twelve Sent Forth (Mark 6:7-13).

1. They were sent forth in pairs (v. 7).

Two reasons may be assigned for this. (1) A cheering and comforting companionship for the workers. (2) Confirmation of testimony. In the mouth of two or three witnesses every word shall be established. People would more likely believe that which was verified by two.

2. Supernatural authentication of their mission (v. 7). He gave them power over unclean spirits. He endowed them with power to work miracles, in order to demonstrate their divine commission.

3. Their maintenance (vv. 8, 9).

They were to depend wholly for their support upon the Lord who sent them. Having received the message and the power gratuitously they were to give them out in the same way (Matt. 10:9).

4. Contentment with hospitality (v. 10).

According to Matt. 10:11, inquiry was to be made upon entering a city as to a reputable place to stay. Upon being directed to such a place the missionary was to be content.

5. The responsibilities of the hearers (v. 11).

Judgment was to be pronounced upon those who rejected their message.

6. Their message and work (vv. 12, 13).

They went out and preached that men should repent. Matthew adds, "The Kingdom of Heaven is at hand" (Matt. 10:7). This means that the kingdom promised to Israel was at hand, that the Messiah was present and ready to set up His kingdom. In confirmation of this message they cast out many devils, anointed with oil many that were sick, and healed them.

God's Overflowing Love

There is such a thing as putting ourselves in the way of God's overflowing love and letting it beat upon us till the response of love to Him comes, not by struggle, not even by deliberation, but by necessity, as the seed comes when the sower strikes the rock.—Phillips Brooks.

Howe About—

By ED HOWE

A Bell Syndicate. WNU Service.

A country wherein the newly rich are numerous is a good country; it has opportunity. I like to see the rich change every five or ten years.

This is justice, equality. It is meaningless to abuse the newly rich. We should all be more or less guilty; otherwise we are not getting along properly.

We are all newly rich in the enjoyment of blessings men didn't enjoy a few years ago; it is the newly rich who enjoy the electric light, the telephone, the radio, and dozens of other things.

We are all newly rich in being men rather than apes.

Take advantage of your opportunities; there are riches for everyone. If you do not get yours, you are fooling around with foolish things.

An Englishman lately visited this country, and when he returned home, wrote another of those awful books about us. He said we had some good habits; but made much of the charge that we are so unnecessarily noisy. As a rule I do not agree with an Englishman in anything, but there is a good deal in this charge. Why should everything in white America be as noisy as a negro church festival?

If I were a god, or king, I believe I should still have a disposition to recognize the rights of others. I dislike people grumbling at me, and they seldom do if I give them no cause. I would make a poor slave owner, I so dislike their protests. I should rather not be known at all than be known as a mean man.

There is only one thing I can do easily and well. That is to catch mice. If old Hannah tells me there is a mouse in the house, I can bait a trap with a little cheese, and catch it. But with all my other endeavors, I have considerable difficulty.

Your suspicion is usually belief that another may do what you would do under similar circumstances.

In the old days the people were constantly indignant because taxes were levied by rulers, and not by parliament or congress. So, after the murder of a good many rulers, the taxing privilege was transferred to parliament or congress. And taxes have increased ever since.

You say you don't know. If you come to a conclusion fairly and intelligently, you do know. If, heeding experience and such knowledge as is available, you come to a doubt, you at least know a doubt; usually indicates an untruth.

In the average small town there is usually room for only half a dozen or so really smart men.

I do not wish to argue with anyone; a fool may annoy me, and a wise man convict me of folly.

You clamor for equality. Your natural chances in life are fifty-fifty. By behaving well, you can increase your chances to sixty, seventy, while the ill-behaved man's chances will be reduced to forty, or thirty.

Information, temperance, fairness, politeness, good work, good health, give you an advantage.

Everyone has a little disposition to rob the other fellow.

Rob him by behaving better than he behaves.

An editor in the East refers to me as an optimist pessimist. It is a good line. If you behave well, and work hard, be optimistic about results; you will seldom be disappointed. But if a town bum wants to borrow money of you, be pessimistic. If a man of no ability promises great results for his community, and offers stock for sale, be pessimistic. Pessimism wins out over optimism. I am ashamed to say so, but it is true.

Can men keep up the old pace of gallantry toward the woman? Real women are worthy of it, and properly appreciative, but a lot of tough ones have grown up who deserve the police court rather than gallantry. Will it finally become necessary to revise gallantry, and cut out the unworthy?

A man who is making money never runs away. It seems to be the rule that no matter how much a man thinks of a woman, he will not run away with her if he has to give up a job or business that is very profitable and in good condition.

I am often astonished at the number of clever people now living. Probably we have twenty to one, as compared to a hundred years ago. And as we know better, we should do better. Our trouble is not ignorance; it is carelessness, silliness, meanness, unfairness, all qualities that punish.

When a boy is sixteen and hasn't anything else, he is pretty apt to have a girl.

Men have no opportunity to judge the wisdom of women; women are absent when no men are around.

CESAR 3,000,000 FEET

Albuquerque—To be exact, 30,000,000 board feet of forest products were cut from the national forests of Arizona south of the Grand Canyon and New Mexico under commercial sales during the year 1927, according to reports just compiled in the office of the district forester at Albuquerque, New Mexico. The value of this material was $213,421.01, 25 per cent of which is made available to the states of Arizona and New Mexico for road and school purposes, according to Quincy Hambley, in charge of the forest management, southwestern district. In addition to the material cut under commercial sales slightly over a million board feet was cut under.

New Mexico Dairy Industry Promising. State College, N. M.—The prospect of developing the dairy industry in New Mexico is bright, E. M. Anderson of the State Agricultural College said here recently. "New Mexico does not nearly supply the dairy products which are consumed within the state," he said. "The shortage of dairy cows in the United States, together with the increasing consumption of dairy products is likely to keep the price of these products up for some time. Better feeding methods are also having an influence in increasing the profits derived from dairying, causing the industry to spread and grow. The increase in the number of independent cream stations over the state is helping to insure the dairyman of a stable market, which should lead eventually to better products and higher prices for the farmer."

Stirling Wins Casper Tourney. Casper.—The high school hoops team from Sterling, Colo., won the interscholastic championship of the intermountain region by defeating the Casper Mustangs here 25 to 20. Klous, Sterling guard, whose playing throughout the tourney has been spectacular, was high point man with 12, while Harlow, Casper center, gathered nine for the Mustangs. The Mustangs had difficulty in solving the Sterling offensive.

Well Arranged New Jersey Farm Kitchen

Tea Wagon Made by New Jersey Housewife From the Backs of Two Folding Chairs That Were No Longer Fit for Service.

(Prepared by the Bureau of Home Economics, United States Department of Agriculture.) Unusually well arranged is this farm kitchen in Essex county, New Jersey. The modern sink with its double drain boards is placed sufficiently high for a medium tall woman. It has splendid light from the double window above and also from the window in the dining alcove, which is near enough to make meal getting a very simple problem, yet just enough removed from the activities of the kitchen to be pleasant. The useful tea wagon was made by the homemaker and her husband out of the backs of two folding chairs that were no longer fit for service. The stool on which one can sit while washing dishes is also homemade. The wooden rack saves the bottom of the sink from marks made by the dishpan. Other features that make this kitchen attractive to work in are the cretonne curtains over the sink, and the applied drapes in the alcove. The improvements in this kitchen were the result of advice given by the county home demonstration agent. The photograph was taken by the United States Department of Agriculture.

Good Things to Eat

—BY—

Live for something, have a purpose. And that purpose keep in view! Drifting like a helpless vessel. Thou can't see'er to life be true. Half the wrecks that strew life's ocean. If some star had been their guide, Might have now been riding safely! But they drifted with the tide. —Whitaker.

Everybody likes to make candy once in a while; let the boys and girls have the kitchen and make:

Peanut Brittle.—One and one-half cupsful of sugar added to three-fourths of a cupful of corn syrup with two-thirds of a cupful of cold water. Add one tablespoonful of butter and one-half pound of shelled and skinned peanuts. Add three-fourths teaspoonful of soda and pour out into well-buttered pan. When cold break up into pieces.

Butterscotch Pie.—Take one and one-half cupsful of brown sugar, one and one-half cupsful of water and bring to the boiling point. Pour over three tablespoonfuls each of flour, cornstarch and sugar well mixed; then cook until thick. Add the slightly beaten yolks of two eggs and cook a minute longer. Remove from the fire, add three-tablespoonfuls of butter, one teaspoonful of vanilla, and a pinch of salt. Pour into a baked-shell and cover with a meringue, using the egg whites, a pinch of baking powder and four tablespoonfuls of sugar.

Chicken Meringue.—Take a four or five-pound chicken, dress, clean and singe, then disjoint. Sprinkle with salt, pepper and flour. Fry quickly in a frying pan until brown. Remove the chicken to a casserole. Fry one onion and two cloves of garlic well minced for five minutes, then add four table-spoonfuls of flour and brown. Add one teaspoonful of salt, one-eighth of a teaspoonful of pepper, one teaspoonful of paprika, two cupsful each of chicken stock and strained canned tomato. Cook until slightly thickened then pour over the chicken in the casserole; cover and cook for one and one-half hours. When nearly ready to serve add two tablespoonfuls of chopped olives and one-half cupful of minced mushrooms.

A nice salad which is always well liked and is not hard to prepare is:

Asparagus With Chiffonade Dressing.—Arrange the asparagus, three or four stalks, in a ring of tomato or green or red pepper and serve with the following: Take one and one-half teaspoonfuls of salt, one teaspoonful of sugar, one-half teaspoonful of paprika, one and one-third cupsful of salad oil and four tablespoonfuls of lemon juice. Put all the above ingredients in a glass jar and shake until thoroughly mixed. Just before serving add one hard cooked egg and two cooked beets chopped, three tablespoonfuls of parsley and two of onion also chopped.

Raised Corn-Meal Muffins.—Pour a pint of boiling water over a half cupful of corn meal, add two table-spoonfuls of shortening, one-half cupful of molasses, one teaspoonful of salt and mix well. Let stand until lukewarm and add a yeast cake dissolved in two tablespoonfuls of warm water, beat in about six cupsful of flour; let rise until light, put into muffin pans, let rise again and bake in a hot oven twenty minutes. This mixture started at night is ready for breakfast muffins. The recipe makes one dozen and a half.

Mexican Lamb Stew.—Take a pound neck of lamb, cut it into small pieces and roll in two tablespoonfuls of flour and brown in one tablespoonful of sweet fat, with one onion chopped, three green peppers and three tomatoes all chopped. Fry for five minutes, add two quarts of hot water, a tablespoonful of salt and one-fourth teaspoonful of pepper. Simmer for an hour. Add one cupful each of green peas and corn and one-half cupful of rice. Cook until the rice is done. When ready to serve pour over one beaten egg and a teaspoonful of oil with one-half teaspoonful of vinegar.

Ginger Ale Ice.—Mix together three pints of ginger ale, one-half cupful of lemon juice, one-half cupful of orange juice and one-half cupful of sugar. Stir and dissolve the sugar, pour into a freezer and freeze to a mush. Serve in sherbet glasses, garnished with a little chopped, candied ginger. (© 1922, Western Newspaper Union.)

What the Children Need for Their Health

Many Essentials for Good Nutrition Must Be Present.

(Prepared by the Bureau of Home Economics, United States Department of Agriculture.) Some of the nutritional and environmental needs of children were discussed in a talk recently given by Miriam Birdseye, extension specialist in nutrition, before the West Virginia State Nurses' association. Miss Birdseye said, in effect:

"Adequate food must be provided for children. This means that essential foods must be raised on the farm or available at all seasons of the year in nearby markets. Chief of these are milk and other good-quality proteins, butterfat, whole-grain products, vegetables and fruits, and pure water. Foods must be selected to meet the needs of the body at different ages and to come within the reach of the family purse. They must be prepared and seasoned to meet the needs of different age groups, combined into appealing meals and served at regular hours. Food habits must be wisely trained.

"Other essentials for good nutrition must be present. These are sunshine, sleep, rest, fresh air, happy work and play, freedom from overwork, normal emotional life, wise parental guidance, protection from illness. A glance at this list shows that agriculture, medicine, sanitation, nutrition, home economics, and psychology all have their contribution to make. Specialized service is needed from a number of agencies, and on certain points several organizations can unite their efforts."

PAINT BRUSHES IN LINED OIL

Paint should never be allowed to dry on a brush, says the United States Department of Agriculture in "Farmers' Bulletin 1452 on "Painting on the Farm." Nor is it advisable to keep paint brushes in water. When painting stops for more than an hour, the brushes should be kept in raw lined oil. When painting is again resumed, as much oil as possible should be scraped or wiped from the brushes, after which the remainder should be thoroughly mixed with the paint by repeatedly filling the brush and scraping it against the inner edge of the paint pot.

The BABY

Why do so many, many babies of today escape all the little fretful spells and infantile ailments that used to worry mothers through the day, and keep them up half the night?

If you don't know the answer, you haven't discovered pure, harmless Castoria. It is sweet to the taste, and sweet in the little stomach. And its gentle influence seems felt all through the tiny system. Not even a distasteful dose of castor oil does so much good.

Fletcher's Castoria is purely vegetable, so you may give it freely, at first sign of colic; or constipation; or diarrhea. Or those many times when you just don't know what is the matter. For real sickness, call the doctor, always. At other times, a few drops of Fletcher's Castoria.

The doctor often tells you to do just that; and always says Fletcher's. Other preparations may be just as pure, just as free from dangerous drugs, but why experiment? Besides, the book on care and feeding of babies that comes with Fletcher's Castoria is worth its weight in gold!

The Bedtime Story

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

"India," said the cobra snake, "is our home. We do a great deal of harm. Of that I am proud. They say that we cause the loss of thousands of people every year."

"Don't be noble, young cobra, and don't be gentle. Do you hear me, hiss, hiss?"

"But we have an enemy, a terrible, terrible enemy. Many stories have been written about him and his name is the mongoose."

"He is a little animal. His size can be compared to that of a ferret's, and he is supposed to be a cousin of that family."

"You must watch out for him. The mongoose will jump and hurry about a poor snake, getting a snake all mixed up and quite dizzy. But he won't get dizzy himself. No, he will only make the nice cobra dizzy."

"Then he will spring at the cobra." "Oh, oh," hissed the young cobra. "Yes, he will spring at the cobra," angrily hissed the old cobra, "and he will put his mean, contemptible, horrid, sharp little teeth into the spine of a fine cobra snake.

"He will go for a cobra's beautiful snake throat. He will escape, like the quick little creature that he is."

HOW TO COOK ARTICHOKE

Jerusalem artichokes may be boiled in their skins and peeled afterwards or peeled beforehand. Only a small quantity of water should be used. Small tubers will cook in 15 to 20 minutes. They may then be served with melted butter with a few drops of onion juice, in cream, in white sauce, or in a savory tomato sauce; or they may be scalloped in a white sauce with grated cheese and crumbs on top. Pared and sliced Jerusalem artichokes may also be cooked in milk in a casserole or a double boiler, or they may be simmered in meat broth.

Stuffing and Baking the Chicken

A large fowl of too uncertain an age to be safely baked may be appetizingly prepared in the following way, says the bureau of home economics:

Plump fowl, weigh- 2 table spoon- ing 4 to 6 pounds chopped onion 4 or 5 medium-sized 2 table spoon- potatoes parsley 1 cup raisins, with- Flour out seeds Butter 2 cups canned tom- Salt and pepper toes

Simmer a plump fowl weighing four to six pounds in a small quantity of salted water until tender. Remove it from the broth and set the fowl aside for stuffing. To the chicken broth add three cupsful of canned tomato and two tablespoonfuls of finely chopped mild onion and let this sauce cook down. In the meantime prepare a stuffing for the chicken by cooking and mashing the potatoes and adding to them the raisins and enough milk to make the mixture like ordinary mashed potatoes. Stuff this while still hot into the body cavity and neck of the fowl. Crown in all the stuffing possible and do not add if it protrudes somewhat. Pour a little melted butter over the chicken and put it in the oven to brown. Thicken the tomato sauce to the consistency of a gravy and add two or three tablespoonfuls of finely chopped parsley and green pepper if desired. When the chicken and the surface of the potato stuffing have become delicately brown put the chicken on a huge hot platter. Pour part of the sauce around it and serve at once.

Honey Crystallization
Nearly all varieties of honey will crystallize, but the extent to which this takes place varies, due to the variation in the relative amounts of dextrose and levulose in them. Some honeys, such as alfalfa and white clover, crystallize nearly completely while others, such as sage and tupelo, remain liquid under practically all conditions of temperatures, etc.

Chic Shawls and Scarfs

By JULIA BOTTOMLEY

A SCARF, if not a scarf, then a fanciful shawl, or a triangle or kerchief square, thus does the mode call for something to throw about mid-lady's fair shoulders.

Seeing that sleeveless gowns are decreed for the warmer months to come, the importance of shawl and scarf is all the more stressed. In the fashioning of these roguish sleeveless frocks dependence is placed upon fending panels, cape attachments, draped scarves, also clinging shawls to "conceal yet reveal" the contour of unsleeved arms.

The unusual is interpreted through the scarf which is incorporated as a part of the dress, rather than serving as an accessory. That is, it is actually attached at the neckline, with either or both sides brought to the front, on some one or another artificial manner. Dresses of sheer material especially flaunt scarf attachments.

ble fingers should not make her own evening shawl or scarf. Take either a square, a half circle or a length of velvet. Stamp a pattern on this, if not able to sketch free-hand. Be sure to use a very stiff bristle brush to accomplish the painting, which is really worked into the nap of the velvet until it leaves it smoothly tinted. Hand-tied fringe adds an elaborate finish.

The gorgeous scarf in the picture is of sheer velvet, the bordered ends being handsomely embroidered in multi-colors.

Exotic shawls, Spanish or Italian, as you will, still continue in high favor for evening wear. The one in the picture is in pure white with silver metal stitchery contributing to its enrichment. The molded-to-the-head toque is of silver cloth.

USE MEAT THERMOMETER WHEN ROASTING BEEF

If the homemaker would use a meat thermometer when roasting beef she would get the same results each time she cooks, according to the bureau of home economics, United States Department of Agriculture. The thermometer is placed in the center of the thickest part of the roast, and when it records certain temperatures, the meat has cooked to the stage of rare, medium, or well done. When the family preference is for rare roast beef the meat should be taken out of the oven when the thermometer reads between 130 and 150 degrees Fahrenheit. A medium roast is cooked to between 150 and 170 degrees Fahrenheit, and the meat is well done at about 180 degrees Fahrenheit. The element of guesswork is thus removed when a thermometer is used. Meat thermometers are made by several different manufacturers. They are not expensive. Specialists in meat cookery in the bureau of home economics have found that by their use in the laboratory they can cook hundreds of roasts and always have the results comparable. They recommend, therefore, that homemakers who wish to cook by exact methods should use the meat thermometer.

Latest among evening scarfs and shawls for immediate wear are those of transparent velvet. The hand-painted ones are especially lovely. There is no reason why the woman gifted with artistic instinct and abun-

CHERRY PIE IN WINTER TIME

Cherry pie can be made in winter time if canned cherries are used. The bureau of home economics gives the following suggestions for making it:

Bake an undercrust until it is delicately browned. Be careful not to let this crust become too brown, however, or it will be overcooked when the pie is baked. Strain the juice off of the canned cherries. If they are unsweetened mix the needed quantity of sugar with about one-half tablespoonful of cornstarch for each pie, and cook this with the cherry juice until it is thickened. Add one tablespoonful of butter and a few grains of salt, stir in the fruit, and put this filling into the prebaked pie crust. Moisten the rim, lay the top crust in place, and press the edges carefully together so that the juice will not leak out. Prick the top crust to allow the steam to escape. Bake the pie for about 20 minutes in a hot oven (450 degrees Fahrenheit), or until the upper crust is brown.

For cherry tart or bake pastry shells on the outside of muffin pans, and fill with the fruit mixture. Serve at once, or to give an extra touch add a spoonful of whipped cream or cover with meringue made of a stiffly beaten white of egg, one tablespoonful of sugar, a few grains of salt, and a drop or two of vanilla. To brown the meringue, return the tart to a very slow oven for 15 to 20 minutes.

"With the life of a generous monarch perished all the projects which his ambition and his generosity had formed."—Ivanhoe.

Hugo says of leaders of men that "while themselves advancing, they cause their satellites to progress, and it is an entire solar system moving onwards."

Our familiar solar system is made up of the sun and its satellites, the stars and planets. Some of the planets have satellites of their own; but the entire system is dependent upon the sun, which, we are told, is itself dependent upon a greater sun in outer space. Ours is not the only solar system; there are neighboring ones all around it.

If our sun should be suddenly destroyed, there would be a period of chaos. When order emerged again from chaos, there would be a new center of our solar system and a rearrangement of the stars and planets.

So it was when Richard died. All the group that he had gathered about him was thrown into chaos. From this chaos emerged a new governing group, with a new king for its center.

With Richard perished all the projects which his ambition and his generosity had formed—both projects for the good of the country and projects for the advancement and happiness of his favorite knights. Herein lies the bitterness of death, that a man cannot hope to have his plans and projects carried out by his successor. Each man has his own interests, his own satellite or satellites, and his own way of doing things. Try as hard as he may, he cannot do a piece of work in the exact manner and spirit of his predecessor. Nor can he often accomplish work with the same corps of people that his predecessor found serviceable.

The commonly heard statement that some one can always be found to take one's place is rarely true of leaders. No one could take Richard's place after his death. Another became king, it is true, and the country continued its existence; but the destiny of the country, and especially the destiny of Richard's knights, was inevitably changed by his death.
