About 400 enjoyed the State College Band concert here last Sunday, under the direction of Prof. Alden. The program was put on by the Trowel Club and credit is extended to Mr. Beck of Carrizozo in aiding the Trowel Club. The Girls' quartet from the State College gave a concert Saturday afternoon, under the auspices of the Trowel Club. Appreciation is extended to the people from the State College for their efforts in coming to the Fort.

On Saturday, March 10, the Scouts took a hike to Cub mountain, separated into squads of 5, and hiked to the top of the Cub mountain from different angles, keeping each other posted on their whereabouts by a hand and smoke signals. They lunched on the mountain top and hiked home in the afternoon.

Little J. B. Clare of Gran Quivera took 'french leave' away from home last Thursday causing much worry to his parents, only to show up the next morning safe and sound.

Easter Week Mail

The Band Concert

The State College Band came in about 4 o'clock Saturday afternoon and were quartered at the Carrizozo Eating House. At 8 o'clock p. m., the concert began and continued until 9:30, with one of the most pleasing and professional programs ever given in Carrizozo.

After warming up on several good marches, Prof. Alden directed the band through the program which appeared in this paper for 3 weeks previous to the coming of the band. During the concert, there was not an idle moment, and the musicians seemed to derive as much pleasure from the concert as we did.

The different numbers were roundly applauded, especially, "Sur del Rio Grande," a medley overture by Prof. Alden, in which we recognized the plaintive strains of "La Golondrina," "Two Little Bulfinches" by Messrs. Menger and McCla, the baritone solo, "Lassus Trombone" and "Oriental Moonlight."

While we were proud of our home boys in the band, we were not unmindful of young ladies and gentlemen who were identified with the organization, who were far away from their homes and familiar faces and who conducted themselves so admirably while among us. With this in mind, let us hope we made their stay a pleasant one. After the concert, a dance was held which was fitting finale to a well spent evening. The band gave a concert at Fort Stanton on Sunday, for the account of which, we refer our readers to the Fort Stanton news correspondent.

Echoes from Gran Quivera

C. F. Jones of Tularosa was a Gran Quivera visitor last Sunday.

Cliff Smith of the Spence ranch paid a visit to his home folks Sunday.

Many people of Gran Quivera are attending the camp meeting at Mountainair this week; the meeting will close Mar. 25—the last two being convention days.

Dr. Smith had a few visitors at the National Park Sunday—he also stated that there is to be quite a lot of improvements to be made on the Monument and Park this spring to make it more attractive to tourists.

Gran Quivera is boosting the new road to Corona, and the roads to Willard and Mountainair.

Little J. B. Clare of Gran Quivera took 'french leave' away from home last Thursday causing much worry to his parents, only to show up the next morning safe and sound.

Black Gowns Are Smart

By JULIA BOTTOMLEY

DELIGHTFULLY feminine "futtery" black dinner gowns are the smart thing for present and coming events. If you can afford but one formal frock, by all means let it be black, and very sheer with homeline which flutters and "drips" and dangles in rhythmic grace. If you can afford many dinner gowns, it is just as essential that at least one of the many be of illusive transparent black.

frock register 100 per cent in modishness, but it insures against the "nothing-to-wear" calamity which befalls so many women who fail to hold in readiness a gown for the unexpected invitation.

It is sophistication of line which makes the simple chiffon gown in the picture smart. That it is sleeveless, that trimming on the bodice is conspicuous by its absence, that the hemline is recklessly uneven are all points which attest the good style of this model.

The interesting flare treatment given to the hemline of this Paris-made black dinner gown is characteristic of the spring and summer style trend of all sheer frocks. These fluttering all-bonnettes are indeed in promise to the point of exaggeration.

Filmy scarfs, which are not accessory but are interworked details of the frocks themselves, schullike drapes which are brought about the shoulders to tie at the front with long streaming ends, deep transparent capcollars which fall over unsleeved arms, panels which float and myriads of equally as fluttering devices will give sheer prints or plain, chiffons either in black or in enchanting colors, the attainments of a truly feminine styling.

Polo Ponies

The Field says that the superhigh-priced mounts used for polo are never allowed to get out of condition. As soon as the matches are over, the shoes are taken off and the ponies turned loose in a soft soil grass paddock, which is free from stones. Two or three months later they are shipped South, and worked into condition for the early spring matches.

CANNED VEGETABLES

One need not be confined to a half dozen vegetables even in winter, for we have such well-canned food that it is often better than the fresh.

Asparagus Leaf.—Mix two cupsful of canned asparagus tips with half a cupful of dried bread crumbs, add three tablespoonfuls of melted butter with one cupful of hot milk, a fourth teaspoonful of paprika, one egg slightly beaten and one hard-boiled egg coarsely chopped. Add salt and pepper and mix the ingredients. Turn into a buttered casserole and bake one hour. Serve with hollandaise sauce.

Corn and Potato Scallop.—Place in alternate layers in a buttered baking dish one cupful of canned corn and four medium-sized cooked potatoes, diced. Sprinkle each layer with salt and pepper; dot with bits of butter, add a little sugar, leaving the potato for the top layer. Pour over a cupful of hot cream and add grated cheese, sprinkled generously over the top. Brown in a quick oven.

Asparagus in Pepper Cases.—Cook small sweet green peppers in boiling salted water after removing the stems and seeds. Drain and fill with canned asparagus tips which have been mixed with a well-seasoned white sauce. Butter bread crumbs and sprinkle well over the top. Bake in a hot oven until brown.

Should Keep Record of Family Expenses

(Prepared by the Bureau of Home Economics, United States Department of Agriculture.)

The woman in the home partnership often handles the greater part of the family money and keeps the accounts. The bureau of home economics of the United States Department of Agriculture believes in keeping records of family expenditures for the same reasons that business accounting is considered important. The various groups of home expenses—food, housing, clothing, and so on—may be compared to the different sections of a business enterprise. Without a satisfactory system of records there would be no way for the business man to know which departments were well managed and which needed to be reduced. In a similar way any group of household expenses must stay within the budget for that group. It is not enough, therefore, merely to list home expenditures in miscellaneous order and add them up. They must be classified under definite heads, so that they can be analyzed, and used as a guide to future spending.

To simplify the homemaker's task in keeping track of household expenditures, the bureau of home economics has planned a loose-leaf account book with marginal indexes and concise directions for entering expenditures under the correct heads. There are pages for estimating the yearly income and probable expenditures, for recording insurance and investments, for making a summary of property owned and a household inventory.

TIPS FOR THE HOUSEKEEPER

To seal a bottle dip the neck, cork and all, in melted paraffin.

Prevent wash-day backaches by setting the wash tub at the right height. The top of the tub should come to the bend of the hips.

Left-over jelly may be used on top of a ball of cottage cheese served with a salad or on half a slice of orange as a garnish for the meat plate.

When hanging very fine materials on the line to dry, protect them from tearing by fastening an extra cloth under the clothespins. This is especially useful in winter when they freeze and tear easily.

Every child likes to have a place reserved especially for his toys and treasures. An attractive and inexpensive play box can be made of a sturdy packing box covered with colored pictures from magazines and these coated with shellac.

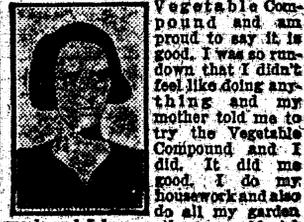

Special pages are furnished for farm families who depend in part on home-grown products.

The account book may be purchased for 50 cents in cash from the Superintendent of Documents, Government Printing Office, Washington, D. C. The Department of Agriculture has no supply for free distribution.

Many Delicious Ways of Serving Cranberry Dishes

People are beginning to realize that cranberries may be used during a number of months, as well as at Thanksgiving and Christmas, and also that there are many good ways of serving them beside making them into sauce or jelly. Those who like a slightly tart pie will enjoy one made of cranberries. The recipe is given by the bureau of home economics.

1 quart cran- berries 3 tablespoonfuls butter 1 1/2 to 2 cupfuls flour 1/2 cupful sugar 1/2 cupful pastry

Select firm berries and wash them well, rejecting all that are withered. Prepare a slup of the sugar, water and salt, and when the sugar is dissolved, add the fruit and cook for five to eight minutes. Line a pie tin with pastry, pour in the cranberries. Place on the upper crust after moistening the lower rim and press the edges together to hold in the juices. Cut a slit to allow the steam to escape. Bake until the crust is golden brown.

High in Food Value

Bananas are high in food value. Because of the starch and sugar they contain, they may be regarded as a good source of energy. Baked bananas may be served in place of a starchy vegetable with meat or as a dessert. The bureau of home economics gives the following method of preparing them as dessert.

Baked Bananas With Lemon Sauce. 4 ripe bananas 1 tablespoonful 1-3 cup sugar lemon juice 1 tablespoonful melted butter 1/2 teaspoon salt

Skin the bananas, scrape them lightly to remove the stringy portion and split them in half lengthwise. Place in a greased shallow baking dish and pour over them the liquid mixture. Bake in a hot oven until brown. Serve from the dish.

Children's Bedtime Story

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

"I do so little work these days I really feel as if I didn't know anything," said the letter Z.

"Dear letter Z," the other letters of the alphabet said.

"You were going to tell us your story," said the letter H.

"I will," agreed the letter Z.

"Pray do," the others urged.

"It's the letter E that has caused me the trouble," said the letter Z.

The letter E wiggled and wriggled and twisted and turned and said:

"I beg your pardon, letter Z. I am sure I have meant no harm."

"None at all," said the letter Z. "I am sure you have meant no harm."

"And you needn't beg my pardon. Don't let it hurt your feelings."

"You can't rule teachers and parents and writers and students. You do what you can for them, that is all."

"But think about it, letters, and you will understand."

"Just think of the number of words which need to need my letter in them, and now they have put the letter E in instead."

"Yes," said the letter M, "that is true, and we can think about these things now, for it is recess time."

"Think of all the words which end with the letters 'ee.' They need to end with the letters 'ee.'"

"True," said the letter A, "perfectly true."

"You're sure you are not angry with me?" asked the letter E wiggling nervously.

"Quite sure," said the letter Z. "As I said before, it is not your fault."

"But isn't my tale a sad and sorrowful one? If alphabet letters cried I am sure you would all be in tears now."

"We would," the others said.

But just then spoke the letter B and the letter I and the letter K.

"Letter Z," they said, "come and join us or we won't be a word. We

Each one kept its own place in the word, but sometimes they made themselves look very big and sometimes they made themselves look about medium size.

For, as they made up the word size they did everything they could with it. Then other letters formed other words and they played around, just as they should have played to show what they meant.

You can imagine what a wonderful time F and U and N had. They most certainly did have fun.

But recess time was over and the children were hurrying back to their classrooms.

"Hurry, hurry," said the letter E.

"All the big B letters and all the little E letters, hurry to the class rooms."

"I don't have to hurry much," said the letter Z, "but I will either live in a very old age from being lazy and doing nothing to tire myself, or else I'll be forgotten entirely."

"Oh no, you won't be forgotten," said the other alphabet letters.

"We'll see to that," said the letters A and B and C. "We have a great deal to do with schools and lessons, you know, and we will keep you with us, never fear."

"Thank you, thank you," said the letter Z, as it twinkled itself slowly back into the school room.

And the letter E said:

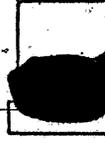

"Thank you for not being angry with me. You're a good sport, letter Z."

"You're very good to me," said the letter E as it played around with the letters B and I and K.

"I beg your pardon, letter Z."

Do the letter E joined these three letters and they all jumped around as the word SIZE appeared, as you have doubtless already guessed.

"You're very good to me," said the letter E as it played around with the letters B and I and K.

Information on Fitting Dresses and Blouses

(Prepared by the Bureau of Home Economics, United States Department of Agriculture.)

If you have had trouble in fitting dresses on yourself or on anyone else in the family, it may have been because you were not quite sure where to take in or let out to get the proper "hang" or "set" of the part of the garment that was wrong. You will find Farmers' Bulletin, 1530F, "Fitting Dresses and Blouses," which has been issued recently by the bureau of home economics of the United States Department of Agriculture exactly what you need.

Suppose, for example, you have just bought up a dress and the skirt swings out in the front. The two illustrations given here show a dress which had this defect and which was corrected by the following method:

The entire back of the dress was raised 1 1/2 inches and the front edge of the underarm seam was eased into the back edge for several inches below the armhole. This treatment was necessary because of the border on the bottom of the dress. The armhole of the dress was recut, and the sleeves were cut out three-fourths of an inch lower than the arm. When the should-erly because of the border on the bottom of the dress. The armhole of the dress was recut, and the sleeves were cut out three-fourths of an inch lower than the arm. When the should-der line was correctly placed, the top trimmed and the collar put back, the dress hung perfectly.

Another way would have been to open the underarm seam its entire length and to take a dart three to five inches long parallel to the knee on the front edge at the belt line or at the fullest part of the bust. One or more darts in either of these places, or both, are especially needed in dresses for stout figures, but a small dart under the arm improves the hang of any dress. The width of the darts will vary with the figure and with the number needed. Sometimes gathers are used, as in the illustration, but they are not so satisfactory unless the fullness is slight.

The Green Cloak

By YORKE DAVIS

CHAPTER VII—Continued

His first questions were about the cloak; where she had bought it, and whether, so far as she knew, there were any good ones like it. The girl's whole interest, as shown by her replies, appeared to be to perfect her identification of it. She admitted, reluctantly, that hundreds of them had been sold in the city that fall; admitted that she herself had seen dozens on the street, the counterpart of it in cut and in color. But this particular cloak, she protested, she knew without a doubt to be her own. It was badly rumpled and had been exposed to the weather, was hardly fit to wear any more, but, notwithstanding these facts, she knew that it was hers.

"Was it in good condition the last time you wore it?"

"It looked as good as new."

"Then how can you be sure that the one which was advertised as found is the same one?"

"Well, she was sure, and she proceeded to demonstrate the fact by a multitude of details—some of her own sewing, and a patch on the lining which she could not mistake."

"How did you come to lose the cloak?"

"I don't know, sir," she answered. "I just wish I did. I think one of the other housemaids stole it, sir, or borrowed it and didn't bring it back. I suppose they thought because I was sick I wouldn't have any use for my cloak. I didn't know nothing about it until today. Then I looked for it and it was gone. So I began asking the other girls about it, and at last one of them said—she was a girl who had given notice and was reading the want columns every day—the said there was a green cloak advertised found. So I went and got it. But I'd like to get hold of the girl that borrowed it, I'd make her take it and buy me a new one, or I'd have the law on her."

Ashton had listened to this speech with a show of somewhat greater interest. Evidently it occurred to him that an inquiry as to who the girl suspected of having taken it might be productive of results. She could easily be induced to tell all she knew about the other employees in the hotel. He much was clear. But when, instead of following up this lead, Doctor McAllister changed the subject abruptly, Ashton dropped back in his chair with a little gesture of impatience.

For myself, the doctor's course puzzled me profoundly. That all this examination was a mere pretense, was, of course, obvious to me. We knew all about Jane Perkins, infinitely more about her than she knew about herself. We knew she had worn the cloak; knew that she, or the woman, rather, who had for a while inhabited her body, had actually murdered old Morgan. And if the object of the pretense were to keep Ashton amused, to make him believe that it was leading him to a possible solution of the mystery, then it had signally failed. Ashton was bored and rather disgusted. But it was not like my chief to fail, and certainly there was no look of defeat about his face. He was accomplishing something, I felt sure, though I could not even guess what that something was.

His next question seemed to me to be getting somewhat nearer the point, although it was the very one that made Ashton drop back in his chair with that gesture of impatience.

"Are your parents living, Jane?"

"No, sir. Neither of them."

"Have you lived in this country long?"

"Five or six years, sir."

"You're from New Zealand, or Australia, aren't you? You're not English?"

That question made Ashton sit up at any rate, and the girl's answer was to it.

"Wellington, New Zealand, sir. But how did you know?"

The answer came instantly, but she next moment, with eyes perplexed, and with a vague gesture of her hands across them, she said:

"It's queer. It seems as if I had dreamed of talking to you about that."

"You knew, didn't you, Jane, that Old Morgan who was murdered was a New Zealander? Oh, New Zealand has produced some great men. You're young, and I suppose you don't remember, perhaps have never even heard of Bobly Franklin and Josiah Haines. Old Morgan knew about them, though, I'm wager."

He stood for a minute in silence, like one who tastes, in reluctance, the flavor of an old story.

Then he pulled himself together and began asking the girl a series of rapid, and, to me, rather meaningless questions. They were chiefly about Will Harvey, her acquaintance with him, how long ago it had begun and, in a general way, to what length of intimacy it had gone. The girl answered all these questions freely enough and with an appearance of hesitation.

"You know he lived at Oak Ridge, didn't you," the doctor asked finally.

"Only two or three blocks from the house where Morgan was murdered?"

"You don't think he had anything to do with the murder, do you?" she asked. And then she laughed a little. "He wouldn't do nothing of that kind, sir. He's just a silly."

"I'm inclined to think, Perkins," the doctor commented, "that that's a good diagnosis. I don't believe Will Harvey, even if he showed us every thought within that rather empty head of his, would ever take us very close to old Henry Morgan with his maps and his mysteries."

He turned away there rather sharply, his back to all of us; tossed his head back once or twice, with a gesture very familiar to me as characteristic of his periods of intense thought. Then, turning back, he spoke to Ashton.

"Did we tell you," he asked, "that Phelps and I discovered one map which your detectives had evidently overlooked, an odd sort of map, from a geographer's point of view, drawn on a very large scale? And the queer thing about it was, that it showed neither latitude nor longitude. There was nothing about it to indicate what part of the world it represented. I brought it away with me this morning. I'll show it to you presently if you care to look at it. It's there on the table in that big manila envelope."

"Wilkins! And by Thunder I Believe I've Got Him."

"I beg your pardon, sir"—it was Wilkins who spoke—"I wonder if you could spare me now, sir. I'm supposed to be in the dining room at this hour."

The capacity of a trained scurrilist like Wilkins for eliminating himself, transforming himself into a mere piece of furniture, is something extraordinary. He had sat through the whole examination with a countenance of the same wooden imperturbability that he always wore on duty in the dining room.

The doctor unfastened the long flexible wires which he was harnessed to the instrument.

"I hope we haven't kept you too long, Wilkins," he said. "It was very good of you to come."

"Not at all, sir. Don't mention it, sir. Sorry I have to leave now."

"Well," said the doctor slowly, "I think we're about through, anyway. Jane here has been ill, and we mustn't keep her too long. I don't think of anything else I want to question you about, Jane. Thank you very much for helping us."

He removed the little telephone that hung before the girl's lips, and slipped a dollar bill into her hand as he spoke. Then he turned to Wilkins, who had risen, still in his harness, and was scrutinizing, with amused curiosity, the portentously named instrument to which he had been attached.

The doctor, with a smile, was unstrapping the small recording instruments that were attached to his chest and wrists. "We're very much obliged," he said. "You've really helped us materially. His tone was low and confidential, not intended for the girl's ears. "I don't think she's any the worse for her examination, Wilkins," he concluded.

Rebuke to Emperor by Master of Music

At a concert in St. Petersburg, before a brilliant assemblage which included the czar and many members of his court, Franz List was conducting a symphony. During the course of the music the czar began to converse in audible tones with one of his fair neighbors. In the very midst of the movement List gave with his baton a signal for the music to cease, and the players stopped short.

The abrupt silence filled the audience with surprise, and the czar at once sent an enquiry to ask for an explanation. Whereupon List sent back word:

"When the czar speaks, all the rest must be silent."

As this was a court regulation, the czar had to suffer the rebuke of a

"Oh, no; likely not, sir. She looks a little pale, but I fancy that is no more than because the room is somewhat close."

"Is it?" asked the doctor.

"Well, it struck me so, sir. And I think, if you'll allow me, it might be well to have that ventilator cleaned. It is really very foul, sir. If you like, I'll speak to them in the office and have them send up a man tomorrow to do it."

He nodded, when he spoke of the ventilator, to a grated opening in the wall, and my eyes followed him. I didn't see anything wrong with it myself, but the man's eyes were evidently more practiced than mine.

The doctor fed him also, and liberally, and the next moment the head waiter and the chambermaid were out in the corridor and the door was closed behind them.

At the sound of that closing door, Ashton exploded, not with impatient anger, as I half expected he would, but with pure amusement. He laughed loud and long, and without the slightest effort to suppress his mirth. Doctor McAllister paid no attention, but let him enjoy his laugh undisturbed.

"Well," said the district attorney when he had got his breath, "I'm really very much obliged. After hearing so much about these psychological examinations, it's interesting to have been present at one."

The doctor nodded rather grimly. "It's not half as interesting as it will be in about five minutes," he said.

He was busy with the instruments on the table as he spoke. "Do you care to wait and see the results?" he added.

"Come—" said Ashton; "you don't really believe, do you, that you have found out anything, by some subtle, scientific process of yours, about that girl?"

"I know all about the girl already," said my chief. "But come, were you really taken in by the trick?"

"What trick?"

"Did you think, all the while, that it was the girl I was examining?"

A great light suddenly burst upon me, but Ashton was not so quick. His face went perfectly blank.

"Did I think it was the girl you were examining? What else could you have been doing? Who else was there to examine?"

"Wilkins!" said the doctor with a blow of his fist upon the table. "Wilkins! And, by thunder, I believe I have got him."

CHAPTER VIII

"Wilkins!" repeated Ashton. "What sort of farce is this?"

"If it turns out to be a farce," said the doctor, "it will be of your making. If I were clothed in your authority and know only what I know at this moment, I would go to that telephone and call in some trusty man to watch him; and if my guess survives the test to which I am about to put it, I should, within the next half hour, order his arrest."

He turned away too quickly to see the shrug of tolerant contempt which was all the answer Ashton vouchsafed to this suggestion. He unswerved to this suggestion. He unswerved to the instrument to which Wilkins had been harnessed, and attached to it a pair of ear tubes to listen through, a glass tube which looked like a thermometer and another tube which terminated in a glass bulb, half full of a red liquid. He put the listening tubes to his ears and started the machine.

"Give Ashton a cigar, and don't let him talk," was his injunction to me.

For nearly a quarter of an hour after that there was silence in the room; but at last he stopped the cylinder which was revolving in the instrument, took the tubes from his ears and laid them on the table. Then he turned to us.

"I was right, Ashton," he said. "I know you want an explanation, and I'm going to give it; but if Wilkins is to be at large during the time it will take me to tell the story, I want the responsibility to be upon you, and not upon me. If I were in your place, I should order his arrest."

Howe About—

By ED HOWE

Ball Syndicate. WNU Service.

"If I have any sense now, it is a tribute to the knowledge an ordinary man may accumulate naturally as he stumbles through life."

For originality I did not have any, and those about me had little.

The school teachers of my youth had scant education, probably, but I do not know as to that, as it happened I did not much associate with them. I attended country schools at intervals until ten or twelve years old, but took no interest in their sessions; they were poor and unattractive, and I attended them as a disagreeable duty, as I chopped wood, or went after the cows, husked corn, or stripped sorghum cane, with a forked stick.

The little I know came to me from contact with the necessary activities of life.

I have selected the best with that spirit of selfishness which lies at the bottom of everything.

I have avoided poison for my mind as I have avoided it for my body; I quit a mistaken notion for the same reason that I quit a food that does not meet the requirements of food.

A really good job steadies a man more than anything else.

A man having one is less apt to disgrace himself than one who is here today and there tomorrow.

The man with a good job knows the part reliability, politeness, fairness, played in getting it; he knows how apt bad conduct is to result in his disgrace.

Note the men arrested for crime. A very large per cent of them lack good jobs, respect at bank counters, and in their neighborhoods.

Note the men arrested for thievery, drunkenness; it is said of mighty few of them that they have good jobs.

A good job will steady a young man as nothing else will. He may be unfaithful to small duties, but will hesitate about proving unfaithful to a good job.

I met a rather smart fellow the other day who has a lot to do, and attends to it rather faithfully and successfully. He told me he could spend all his time reading. I couldn't. Reading doesn't appeal to me as much as it seems to appeal to some others; I want to get closer to events than a book account of them.

When I have an opinion, I try to decide how much it is influenced by age, and how much by experience and intelligence.

It is a mean feeling, after you get old, that you might have done better with your opportunities. The same feeling appears in the consciousness of the young. A feeling that you have often been petty, inefficient and impotent; that people have laughed at you when they might have cheered, is a bad thing to carry around with you.

If you lack education, it is your own fault. Every man you meet—every incident of life—every hour of the day—is a page from the best textbook there is. This book is called Experience.

An American puts himself on record so frequently as a patriot, a Christian, a gallant husband, etc., he is ashamed to protest when called upon to assist in doing noble things that cannot be done.

The world would treat us all better if we would treat the world better, and all it asks is a little more common sense; a little more fairness, politeness and industry.

Revolution is agreeable when it is brewing, but when it breaks and the furies are unchained, the people begin clamoring for order.

The scandalous things we read in the papers are not half as exciting as those we know go on everywhere, and hidden from the public. I have participated in events more exciting than anything I read about, and so have you.

Judges and policemen have me bluffed into paying a good deal of attention to their regulations. I herewith enter complaint because they do not similarly impress others with their frowns and clubs.

Every man who tells a lie believes he is cunning. He is actually a fool. One of the few sure things is that a lie never prospers. All the people are as ambitious to punish liars as they are to tell lies.

When women love us, they forgive everything, even our crimes. When they do not love us, they give us credit for nothing, not even for our virtues.—Balzac.

When a fool writes a book, or talks, the only explanation must be he thinks all the rest of us are fools.

When the people can't do a thing, after trying for years, they put it up to congress, and howl and yell because congress does not do it within a day or two.

Relics of the Past Are Fast Disappearing

With the tearing down of the old buildings on El Paso avenue, the last was what was always known as the "Canteen." At this place, before slavery days one could always see bronchos hitched, their owners being on the inside, imbibing in numerous quantities of "Conversation Water." It was the stopping, or rather the meeting place for people who had business propositions to iron out, and likewise a gathering place for those who had chips on their shoulders, or had a desire to settle a grudge or start something.

The star performer of the group after all had assembled, and incidentally imbibed to the extent of having their whistles wet, was the one who could sing the loudest and cuss by note. Midnight was invariably made hilarious by rollicking songs, or rather chants, from those who were loaded to the guards. If there was a man itching for a crap, he could get it at the canteen; if a destitute wayfarer caught a glimpse of the lights and asked for alms, he could always come away with enough to satisfy the emptiness of his stomach and some change to help him on his way.

Now, it is being dismantled, and as it appears, one can imagine he hears the shouts, songs, and alas, the groans that were so often heard in the old canteen. Shouts of so-called joy, which ended in despair and remorse; songs of hilarity which ended in pain and disgrace. The proprietors, notwithstanding the business they were in, sought to preserve order, but what could they do. It is gone—and may it never return.

There is Always a Way

In the days when street cars were driven by mule power, a motorman was asked how he managed about collections. "There is a box at one end of the car, and the passengers drop their coins in the end of same," the motorman said. "How do you knock down in case of necessity?" was the inquiry.

"You see this grasshopper, well, when I get a little short on money, I just drop said grasshopper into the box, and he always comes up with a coin, sometimes it is a nickle, sometimes a quarter, and he got a dollar once, but these occasions are rare, the dollar being too heavy for him."

ZeZ Confrey Mixes Salads and Songs

ZeZ Confrey, famous composer of the musical classic, "The Kitchen on the Keys," is hailed by his friends as the most versatile of America's popular song composers. Those who know him say he can mix a salad or a song oddly with equal success, which is saying considerable since his portrayal of the delightful pranks of a certain young fellow frisking over the ivories has been recognized as the model of American syncopation.

But Mr. Confrey has other "brats" in his repertoire, his acquaintances declare. Country bred, he is a judge of horse flesh, and also knows a good cigar.

The simple life is Mr. Confrey's idea of happiness. Every so often Manhattan gets too crowded for him and he boards a train for the country and the companionship of a certain murmuring brook. Inevitably he comes back with one of the merry tunes for which he is noted.

A bachelor, ZeZ keeps open house for his friends. If he invites a few of the boys over for a midnight supper, he does the cooking himself. Invitations to his lively little dinners are sought after. There are two dishes to which Mr. Confrey is partial. So are his friends. His recipes for the two follow:

Royal Eggs With Mushroom Sauce.
12 eggs 1 1/2 cup evaporated milk diluted with 1 cup water
Salt 1 1/2 cup meat stock
Pepper (This may be prepared from bouillon cubes)
1 lb. round mushrooms 2 tbsp. flour
1 slice pimento 2 tbsp. butter
15 slices toast

Saute the mushrooms in two tbsp. butter, taking care not to burn; make a white sauce of two tbsp. butter, four evaporated milk and meat stock. Cook five minutes. Add the cooked mushrooms and chopped pimento. Break eggs and drop into hot fat, being careful to keep eggs in a globular mass. Just as soon as they are golden brown lift out and drain. Place an egg on each piece of toast. Allow two pieces for each serving. Pour over all the mushroom sauce and garnish with parsley.

Pineapple-Cheese Salad.
10 slices pineapple
1 cup cream
1/2 cup chopped nuts
2 tbsp. evaporated milk
Crisp lettuce leaves
1 tsp. pineapple juice
1 tsp. sugar
Green and red mangoes
Creamy salad dressing

Combine the cheese, nuts, evaporated milk, pineapple juice and mangoes and blend into a smooth mass. Cut pineapple circles in half. Spread cheese mixture on a slice of pineapple and place the other half circle of pineapple on top of cheese as one would a slice of bread to make a sandwich. Cut diamonds or triangles from green and red mangoes and press into the edge of the cheese mixture between the pineapple. Lay two of the prepared pieces of pineapple on a crisp lettuce leaf. Serve with creamy salad dressing. This serves five.

"Get the Message Through"

THE first communication system in the West was the pony express.

From St. Joseph, Mo., to San Francisco these riders carried the mails over mountain ranges and across wilderness and plain.

The motto of their service was "Get the Message Through!"

The telephone worker of today is inspired by the same ideal. Men and women brave dangers and undergo privations to establish and maintain this modern service of communication.

It is noteworthy that, at Denver, a splendid building which will be this company's general headquarters, is being erected on the site of one of the stations on the old pony express line.

Like those couriers of another day, the people who will occupy this building are animated by the first principle of telephone service: "Get the Message Through!"

Information as to unemployment is sought from the secretary of labor in a resolution adopted by the senate after a two-hour debate with a political tinge.

Full returns from the general election in Japan place the balance of power between the government and the opposition in the hands of 14 independents, of whom Yasuki Tsurumi is one of the leaders. Mr. Tsurumi is well known in the United States and is known to be friendly to this country. A happy augury for good relations between Japan and the United States is seen in this by Mr. Tsurumi's friends in this country. It is also believed that it will lead to a more liberal policy on the part of Japan toward China.

Senator Thomas Walsh of Montana, who has been injected into the race for the Democratic nomination for the Presidency by party leaders opposed to Gov. Smith received 48,376 votes to 41,213 for Walsh.

Charles C. Eberhardt, United States minister at Managua, has communicated to the government of Nicaragua the determination of the United States government to see that Nicaragua has a fair and free election. Mr. Eberhardt has informed the Diaz government that further delay on the part of the Nicaraguan legislature in passing an adequate election law would compel the United States to take steps necessary to see that its obligations in Nicaragua were carried out.

YBN SAUD, king and sultan of Nejd, officially has declared a holy war against the desert Moslems of Iraq and Transjordan, British mandate states. This move, coupled with Egypt's rejection of a proffered treaty, has caused Great Britain to slap down the lid on Egypt's pretensions to independence. The blow takes the form of a note sent to the Egyptian government by Lord Lloyd, British high commissioner, declaring that it will not tolerate the passing of any laws by the Egyptian parliament which are likely to hamper his administration in Egypt or hinder the British government in its duty of defending the interests and security of foreigners.

The note is directed at three recent laws passed by the Egyptian parliament, but not yet signed by the king. The first permits Egyptians to carry arms; the second repeals a law regulating the public assembly and granting practically free and uncontrolled public meetings; and the last deals with the methods of election of village mayors.

All these, it is believed, were passed by the Egyptian parliament to see how far Great Britain would allow the Egyptian Nationalists to go. The position of King Fuad is difficult. He is a member of the British government and not particularly popular in Egypt, and while he has to obey the British, who put him on the throne, he has also to make a show of playing up to the National sentiment. In the circumstances, it is un-

REVIEW—JESUS PROCLAIMS THE KINGDOM OF GOD

GOLDEN TEXT—And Jesus went about all the cities and villages, teaching in their synagogues and preaching the gospel of the kingdom, and healing their sickness and every disease.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Stories About Jesus.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Mark's Stories About Jesus.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—How Jesus began His Work.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Early Ministry of Jesus.

The method of review must always be determined by the genius of the teacher, the grade of the school, and the aptitude of the pupil. For the senior and adult classes perhaps the most profitable method will be to summarize the facts of each lesson and to study the main teaching thereof. Since the great personality around which all the facts and teachings of the quarter gather is Jesus Christ, it ought not to be difficult to plan a review. Whatever plan is used, the teacher should have the matter thought out and assignment made to the different scholars a week ahead of time. The following suggestions are made:

Lesson for January 1. John the Baptist came in fulfillment of Isaiah's prophecy announcing the advent of the Messiah. The leading lesson is that Jesus is the Messiah, the Son of God, as witnessed by John the Baptist and the Voice from the open heavens.

Lesson for January 8. Jesus taught with authority and demonstrated it by conquering demons, healing a fever, and cleansing a leper. Jesus Christ is able to save unto the uttermost, to deliver from all kinds of sickness and satanic powers.

Lesson for January 15. Jesus freely gave Himself to the task of healing the diseases of the people and forgiving their sins, and the leading lesson is that Jesus has not only power to heal the diseases of the body but to forgive sin, which is the cause of disease.

Lesson for January 22. Jesus lived His life in conformity with God's law. Conflict with the Jews over the matter of Christ's disregard of their laws of fasting and the Sabbath was, due either to their failure to understand God's law or to its perversion. Human welfare can be realized only through conformity to God's law.

Lesson for January 29. With the increase of the fame of Jesus came increase of opposition. In spite of the opposition by His enemies He continued His mighty works in casting out demons and ministering to those in need.

Lesson for February 5. Jesus was misunderstood by His friends, His family and fellow townsmen, and violently opposed by the scribes and Pharisees. A spiritual nature is necessary in order to understand Christ.

Lesson for February 12. Jesus showed Himself the master teacher in picturing truth concerning His kingdom so as to conceal the truth from those who were not in sympathy with Him and by interpretation to be understood by His disciples.

Lesson for February 19. Jesus' deity was manifested in calming the storm-tossed sea and in healing the demoniac. Because of what Jesus is we should confide in Him.

Lesson for February 26. Jesus raised from the dead Jairus' daughter and healed the woman who had been afflicted for twelve years. Only a divine being could raise the dead.

Lesson for March 4. Jesus called twelve men and sent them forth to preach the gospel of the kingdom. Those sent forth were furnished with power to heal diseases.

Lesson for March 11. Christ had compassion upon the multitudes and created food to supply their hunger. Our small gifts and possessions, when placed at the Lord's disposal, are sufficient for any need.

Lesson for March 18. Christ denounced the empty forms and traditions of the Pharisees and showed that defilement can only come from the heart.

Eternal Thoughts

The thoughts of God are eternal thoughts. They are independent of time, independent of worlds. You set your life today into the doing of the will of God. After you have set your life into that life, it need never be changed. Let change come, let death come, we pass on still doing God's business for ever and for ever.—Alexander MacKenzie.

The Lord's Aid

I tried to build without the Lord, and let a tumbled pile of bricks upon the ground; I turned, and built with the Lord, and let the walls rise fair and firm, and the sky is their roof, and eternity is their foundation.—Amos R. Wells.

Flinding the Sunny Side

He who utters above the cares of this world and turns his face to his God has found the sunny side of life.—C. H. Spurgeon.

CAP AND BELLS

WORSE AT EVERY WORD

Buck and Bud had not seen each other for several years when they met at a Legion convention.

"Hello, Bud, old scout! How's the wife?"

"She's in heaven," replied Bud sorrowfully.

"Is that so? I'm sorry." Then, realizing that this did not sound quite right, Buck added: "I mean I'm glad—no, that is to say, I—'m surprised."

Confiding Public

"You have the confidence of your constituents."

"I am sure of that," answered Senator Sorghum. "I often think, but never with regret, of the money I might have gathered if instead of being a statesman I had become a regular confidence man."—Washington Star.

Admiring Attention

An artist gains our great applause. The kindly audience hollers—Not for his art—but just because He gets a million dollars!

The Appeal

The second speaker on the program arose and with evident dismay said: "The speaker who has just preceded me has taken the words out of my mouth."

The other speaker jumped to his feet, and with a dramatic appeal to the audience exclaimed: "I am accused of petty larceny!"

Willing to Oblige

"That's a pretty bad cold you have, old man. What are you doing for it?"

"Today I'm doing what Jones told me to do. It's Simpson's day tomorrow and the next is Brown's. I'm not better by Sunday, and if I'm still alive, I shall try your remedy. Just write it down on this card, will you?"

MOUTH OMITTED

He (mentally)—Answer me with your eyes.
She—You will always be answered with my nose.

Responsible Detail

The merchant said, attempting fate without a tremor of dismay, "My goods are not so very great, but my Publicity's O. K."

Unforgettable

"You say you never forget a friend?"
"Yes," answered Senator Sorghum. "As a matter of fact, the friends to whom you are indebted in practical politics never permit you to forget 'em."

Taking Advantage of It

"What is it?"
"Collision between automobiles."
"Sorry, but it's our chance to cross the street."

Drink Water If Back or Kidneys Hurt

Begin Taking Salts if You Feel Backache or Have Bladder Weakness

Too much rich food forms acids which excite and overwork the kidneys in their efforts to filter it from the system. Flush the kidneys occasionally to relieve them like you relieve the bowels, removing acids, waste and poison, else you may feel a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, the stomach sour, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment, the channels often get irritated, obliging one to get up two or three times during the night.

To help neutralize these irritating acids and flush off the body's urinous waste, begin drinking water. Also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine and bladder disorders disappear.

This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys and stop bladder irritation. Jad Salts is inexpensive and makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to help prevent serious kidney and bladder disorders. By all means, drink lots of good water every day.

The BABY

No mother in this enlightened age would give her baby something she did not know was perfectly harmless, especially when a few drops of plain Castoria will right a baby's stomach and end almost any little ill. Fretfulness and fever, too; it seems no time until everything is serene.

That's the beauty of Castoria; its gentle influence seems just what is needed. It does all that castor oil might accomplish, without shock to the system. Without the evil taste. It's delicious! Being purely vegetable, you can give it as often as there's a sign of colic; constipation; diarrhea; or need to aid sound, natural sleep.

Just one warning: it is genuine Fletcher's Castoria that physicians recommend. Other preparations may be just as free from all doubtful drugs, but no child of this writer's is going to test them! Besides, the book on care and feeding of babies that comes with Fletcher's Castoria is worth its weight in gold.
