Happy Birthday

Road Across Malpais Assured

County Commissioners Chas. F. Grey, W. B. Rose and Sheriff S. W. Kelsey left Monday morning for Santa Fe and returned Tuesday evening. The trip was made in the interest of road matters, more especially the one across the Malpais, which the commissioners and the highway department have been working on for some time past, and the plans were awaiting the advisement from the Federal Bureau of Roads.

While there, word was received from the Federal Aid Bureau, approving the project for what will be known as 126 A and 126 B, Carrizozo Socorro State Highway. The above cut is from a picture taken of a road in another part of the state and shows how a road can be built through lava beds such as we have here. In some places, blasting must be done, while at others, concrete filling will be put in. We have long desired this road, which will directly connect us with Socorro and furnish a straight line to connections for the coast cities.

The two Federal Aid projects to be let in July 25, will be known as 126 A and 126 B. 126 A will have an extent of 9 miles and will reach from the water structure on each side of the Malpais, across same and on through the Limestone Hills. 126 B will have an extent of 9 miles reaching from the foot of the Oscura mountains and crossing the same.

The intermediate projects will all be State constructions and great credit belongs to our highway department and the energetic work of our Board of County Commissioners.

Beginning with the coming week, work will start on water drainages between Three Rivers and Ancho, on highway No. 3. While political scoffers are condemning the present administration, let thinking people compare the past shameful neglect of roads in this county with the present generous attitude of the administration's highway department towards us, in seeing that we get what we long have needed. Facts are stubborn things, but to him who has eyes to see and ears to hear, no argument is necessary.—An eye-full will decide the matter. The project will save 20 miles over the old road.

Service Brings Results

In a conversation with D. LaVelles, manager of the City Service Station recently, he said: "Perhaps it is because there are more tourists going through; perhaps it is because every one likes to get out and create a breeze by 'opening 'er up' these hot days, or it may be that times are better in general. Anyhow, our sales have increased over 500 per cent in the last 45 days. What's the proper answer? Better Service! CITY SERVICE STATION 'The Kind of Service You Like' Mr. Alden Here

Talking further along this line, Mike said that where at one time, tourists avoided this route, they are now recommending it to their friends. This, he continued, is due to the energetic work of our highway department and our county commissioners and counts for bigger things to come.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Miss Earhart, First Woman to Fly Atlantic, Gives All Credit to Pilot.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD
MISS AMELIA EARHART, Boston social worker, the first woman to make the flight across the Atlantic ocean, is being acclaimed queen of the air, or the "Lady Lindy." With Wilmer Stultz as pilot and Lou Gordon as mechanic, the young woman flew from Trepassey, Newfoundland, in the trimotored monoplane Friendship, heading for Southampton, England. After 20 hours and 40 minutes of flying through clouds and fog the aviators found their fuel supply was running low and they came down in the estuary off Burryport, Wales, 2,010 miles from the starting point. Taking on more gasoline there, they completed the flight to Southampton and after an enthusiastic reception there, proceeded to London, where they were vociferously welcomed.

Miss Earhart in newspaper articles and interviews asserts that she was in reality only a passenger on the momentous voyage, although she is an experienced aviator, and that the credit for the successful flight belongs to Pilot Stultz and Mechanic Gordon. Because of her sex it was natural that she should attract the most attention, but she rejects this and insists that recognition be given the great work of her male companions, especially Stultz. Owing to the fog and clouds it was necessary to make almost the entire flight by instruments and this Miss Earhart could not do, so she did not handle the controls at all. Stultz says they never saw the sea after going into a fog an hour out from Trepassey until they came to a fairly clear patch 75 miles east of Queens-town. Part of the time they were in touch of land and slips by the radio set they carried. The plane Friendship was originally built for Commander Byrd's antarctic expedition. It will be brought back in a crate, for Miss Earhart, Stultz and Gordon planned to return by steamer after a brief visit to the continent.

Miss Mabel Bell and two companions have abandoned their plan to fly to Europe in Lovino's plane Columbia. Thea Rasche, German stunt flyer, backed by Mrs. James A. Stillman, has been preparing to pilot a plane across the Atlantic but was delayed last week by court proceedings started by her former backers.

GEN. UMBERTO NOBILE and five of his crew of the lost dirigible Italia were located by Major Maddalena, Italian aviator, flying the seaplane Savoia. Small parachutes carrying food, rubber boats, guns, spirit lamps and other supplies were dropped, and Maddalena thought the marooned men might be able to work their way toward land with the rubber boats. Ten other members of the dirigible's crew still were lost—the three men who started afoot toward land after the Italia crashed, and the seven who remained with the dirigible and were borne away to the east when the gas bag rose again.

COL. CHARLES A. LINDBERGH may now be addressed as "Doctor Lindbergh," for the University of Wisconsin, which he attended for a time before he became famous, conferred upon him the honorary degree of doctor of laws.

HUBERT C. WORK, secretary of the Interior, was made chairman of the Republican national committee and generalissimo of the Hoover-Curtis campaign, and Representative Franklin Fort of New Jersey was made secretary. Joseph R. Nutt of Cleveland succeeds W. Y. Hodges as treasurer. The principal campaign headquarters will be in Washington, with branches in Chicago and New York.

DEMOCRATS from all parts of the country were flocking to Houston for their national convention which, it was generally admitted, was certain to nominate Gov. Al Smith for the Presidency. Senator Jim Reed of Missouri, however, had not given up his fight and professed to be confident that Smith would be "stopped" and he himself put at the head of the ticket. Gen. Henry T. Allen of Kentucky, who was commander of the American army of occupation on the Rhine after the armistice, also announced he was a candidate for the honor, his chief plank being one for temperance. Governor Ritchie of Maryland, long considered a possible choice, withdrew from the contest in favor of "Smilin' Franklin Roosevelt was selected to put Smith in nomination. National Committeeman-Norman E. Mack of New York, arriving early in Houston, created some excitement by a vigorous attack on Bolshevism, and it was taken by some as forecasting an attempt by Tammany to put a real wet plank in the platform. George H. Van Namee, pre-convention manager, for Smith, gave out a much more tactful statement.

Potential candidates for the vice presidency were numerous. They included Jesse Jones, the pride of Texas; Senator Robinson of Arkansas, minority leader of the senate; Lewis G. Stevenson of Illinois, son of the late Adlai Stevenson; Evans Woolen of Indianapolis; Senator Kendrick of Wyoming; and last but by no means least, James Hamilton Lewis, former senator from Illinois.

THERE was great excitement in the Balkans following a murderous outbreak in the parliament of Yugo-Slavia, and grave rumors were feared. A radical deputy and government supporter, Ratchitch, fired six shots, killing two deputies and wounding four others. He was attempting to kill Stefan Raditch, leader of the opposition, and succeeded in wounding him in the stomach. The row was over the Nettune treaty which permits Italians to own land in the Dalmatian coastal plain and which was violently opposed by Raditch and his followers. It was predicted that the pact would be rejected, and also that as a result of the assassinations the conference of the little entente—Rumania, Czechoslovakia and Yugo-Slavia—would break up. This conference, in Bucharest, had planned to discuss Italy's penetration of Albania, Hungary's attempt to revise the treaty of Trianon and the Nettune treaty.

When the news of the murders reached Croatia ten thousand persons gathered in Agram to demand that the Croatian parliament be convoked for the purpose of decreeing the separation of that country from "Bloody Serbia."

CHINESE Nationalists, now victoriously established in Peking, are planning further consolidation of their control over the country. Their government has named two delegates to negotiate a compromise at Mukden by which the three eastern provinces of Manchuria, Fengtien, Kirin and Heilungkiang, would become members of the Nationalist government without further fighting. It also was announced that the Nationalist government does not intend to push the military movement to Manchuria pending the outcome of the negotiations.

The Japanese have more than 12,000 troops in Manchuria and apparently seek to establish a protectorate there. Gen. Chiang Kai-shek withdrew his resignation as generalissimo of the Nationalist armies and chairman of the military council. Foreign Minister Wang has asked the United States to agree to the revision of all treaties with China. He considers America the best friend China has. Dr. C. C. Wu, who represents the Nationalist government in Washington, said Secretary Kellogg had taken the question of revision under consideration. He also said the capital of China would be moved immediately to Nanking.

GREEN is having serious difficulties with the communists and the government declares it has uncovered a revolutionary conspiracy. Riots among strikers broke out at Kansas and the authorities suppressed the row with severe measures. In retaliation a strike on potatoes and potato plants was called and later it spread to berries and other industries. There were many clashes between the police and the strikers, especially at Denver where thirty were killed and more than one hundred wounded. General Pangalos, former dictator, who has been in prison since August, 1923, was carefully guarded, it being feared the strikers would try to release him.

DR. CHARLES FRANCIS BRUSH of Cleveland, inventor of the arc light, has announced the establishment of a $500,000 fund, the income from which is to be used to finance "efforts toward the betterment of human stock and toward regulating the increase of population." The fund, all of which was donated by Doctor Brush, will be known as the Brush Foundation in memory of Doctor Brush's son, Charles, Jr., who died last year.

In a statement Doctor Brush declared that he established the fund because he believes: That the threat of overcrowding the earth is rapidly increasing; that science now preserves the unfit, and that science should also improve the quality or reasonably limit the numbers of those born. "We are drifting rapidly toward the condition of China and India, where the people struggle, not for clothes, not for education, but for something to eat," Doctor Brush said.

COLD, rainy weather made last week rather unpleasant for President and Mrs. Coolidge at the summer White House on Cedar Island, northern Wisconsin. For several days they were compelled to content themselves within doors, and then Mr. Coolidge ventured out for some trout fishing in the Brule river. He caught six fish, and it was made public that he used flies, not worms. When the weather moderated the President made a trip to his executive offices in Superior. Mrs. Coolidge was recovering steadily from her recent illness but did not get out doors very often.

LOVERS of good literature are mourning the death of Donn Byrne, American-Irish novelist, who was killed near his home in Ireland when his automobile upset. Mr. Byrne, who was only thirty-nine years old, was considered one of the best writers of English of the day and his novels were especially popular in the United States. He was born in New York of Irish parents, was educated in America, Ireland, Germany and France, and was for a time employed on the staffs of two New York newspapers.

Edwin T. Meredith, who was secretary of agriculture in President Wilson's cabinet, died at his home in Des Moines, Iowa, after an illness of four months. Born at Avoca, Iowa, in 1876, Mr. Meredith began active life as a real "dirt" farmer and after leaving college he bought the Farmers' Tribune, a farm weekly, from his grandfather. Later he discontinued this and established Successful Farming as a monthly periodical. He was prominent in the Democratic party and more than once had been considered for nomination for the Presidency.

ONE of the worst earthquakes Mexico has experienced since 1912 occurred in the state of Oaxaca. It lasted 45 minutes and many small buildings and church spires were thrown down. It was feared the loss of life would be heavy.

Tornadoes were reported from many parts of this country, the worst being in Oklahoma, Indiana, Iowa and Ohio. Several persons were killed and the property losses were great.

PRINCESS HELEN of Rumania at last is legally freed from her union with Prince Carol, former crown prince. A divorce was granted her by the Bukharest courts on the grounds of "profound affronts offered and desertion." Helen was married to Carol in 1921 and their son Michael is now king of Rumania under a regency. Carol, who eloped with Magda Lupescu in 1926, did not contest the divorce.

SECRETARY OF STATE KELLOGG has invited all Latin-American republics to a confederation and arbitration conference in Washington December 10. Mr. Kellogg and Charles Evans Hughes will represent the United States. The invitation pointed out the conference was provided for in a resolution passed at the Pan-American conference at Havana last February. Opposition adopted would be submitted to the various governments for ratification.

So-Called Trial Marriage Really Poor Imitation of the Real Thing

By DR. NATHAN KRASS, New York Rabbi.

MARRIAGE is one of the oldest of human institutions. It dates back to prehistoric times. It was not in its earliest stages, as many people erroneously believe, merely a convention, but rather rooted in universal and eternal value. Matrimony was not a mere bargain or an experiment in sociology or a frivolous, ephemeral union. It was a tie that bound not only physically but spiritually. Throughout the ages, marriage has undergone all sorts of changes. Varieties of matrimonial experiments are recorded in the pages of man's progress through the centuries.

Some of the suggested modern substitutes were tried long ago. The idea of companionate marriage, with particular stress on mutual consent to dissolve the union, was also known in ancient Roman days. Trial marriage and free love were tried in days gone by. Yet, these substitutes for traditional marriage have taken on the color of the present age and have added to the social problem features derivative of the modern environment.

The highest conception of marriage is reached in the realm of religion, which not only dignifies wedlock but invests it with divine sanction. Religion divests marriage of purely selfish considerations and lifts it to the high plane of co-operative responsibility.

While happiness is a great desideratum, it was never made the cornerstone of the matrimonial structure. To make personal pleasure the foundation of marriage, to discard the doctrine of responsibility, to evade grave duty, is not to clothe marriage with high significance.

Like all human institutions, marriage is imperfect. Its flaws and defects, its shortcomings and disillusionments, do not, by and large, outweigh its positive value for good. Marriage is the plinth of human society, and no unit has as yet been discovered that surpasses the family.

Too Little Attention Given to Home Economic Courses in Public Schools

By MRS. JOSEPH C. GAWLER, Women's Clubs Official.

Ninety per cent of the girls in this country are destined to be homemakers. Yet only 16 to 50 per cent of the girls are enrolled in home economics courses in the public schools.

One of the chief reasons for this state is that the facilities are not great enough to accommodate all the girls who would enroll, and school officials frequently prefer to spend their appropriations upon what they term cultural courses rather than upon home economics.

Another unfortunate circumstance is that many mothers will not allow their daughters to put into practice in the home the principles taught them in school because of the personal inconvenience, expense or annoyance to the maid.

Another circumstance which has led to the curtailment of courses in home economics has been the high requirements for teachers of the courses, with only low salaries available to them. If any money comes to the hands of the school board for salaries, it goes to increase the general staff and not to provide highly trained experts in home economics. Most schools employ as teachers practical women in preference to trained ones, for salaries are seldom commensurate with training requisites.

Immigrants Too Prone to Follow Bad Examples Set by Some Americans

By RABBI JACOB KATZ, New York.

America cannot be blamed "in a way" for closing her doors against immigration. The foreign elements, instead of taking an example from those who are righteous leaders in the various walks of life would rather follow the path of least resistance and take as models of American life those who figure in the higher circles of the government and figure high in graft. Any one living midst the foreign element, or rather let me call it the first generation of the various European generations, knows the connotation when the foreigner says "this is America," and by that he implies, "Get all you can as long as you can get away with it."

Sewers, oil reserves, street cleaning, census, Chicago; what a spectacle of American life! And I would say that because America felt that she herself is not healthy and clean, she could not undertake to absorb into her midst the newer elements without detriment and danger to herself. Not being strong she could not take on to her main branch the newer saplings.

Day of Educating Children Through Instrumentality of Fear Has Passed

By HERBERT C. PARSONS, Massachusetts Penologist.

Spanking is passe. Fear will not make character in children. The child who has learned to be afraid of persons faces the world with a tragic handicap. I was never spanked in my life, nor were my children. I don't believe in it.

Parents who come into juvenile courts frequently should be punished instead of the children. They haven't been on their job as parents. For instance, parents who worry about their children lying frequently are to blame. Love of truth comes about naturally in children surrounded by adults who welcome their ideas. Talk to your child and get at his views and listen to his joys and sorrows.

Massachusetts was the first state to pass a probation law. That was in 1878. There hasn't been an additional cell built in the state for five years, thus proving, in my opinion, the value of probation.

Labor Unions Controlled by Communists Are Not to Be Tolerated

By WILLIAM GREEN, President A. F. of L.

Communist control of any union affiliated with the American Federation of Labor will not be tolerated. When the Communists gain control of an international union, then that union will be wiped out of existence and a union formed to take its place and fight it.

The Communists believed that the emotional temperamental makeup of the members of the unions of the Needle Trade industries was such as to make them easy prey to the teachings of the philosophy of Moscow. These claims would have succeeded but for the American fighting spirit of year leaders and the backing of the American Federation of Labor. We succeeded in stopping this movement by revoking charters of the unions controlled by the Communists and expelling from membership the leaders.

CROPS VALUED AT $132,316,000

Farm Products in 1927 Raise Colorado to 30th Place in U. S.

Farm products grown in Colorado in 1927 were valued at $132,316,000, according to report compiled by the state board of immigration and the U. S. bureau of crop estimates, made public recently.

The crop raised the state from 31st to 30th place in the United States in agricultural products. Colorado supplied 1.57 per cent of the total for the country.

Colorado ranked first in the production of sugar beets, second in broomcorn, third in cantaloupes, fourth in dry beans, sixth in celery and pears, seventh in spring wheat, eighth in barley and onions, ninth in potatoes and wild hay and 10th in peaches.

Approximately 8,211,000 acres were under cultivation last year or 1.85 per cent of the acreage harvested in the United States.

The outstanding crop was sugar beets, which was estimated at 35.6 per cent of all beets grown in the country, while the acreage used was only about 30 per cent of the soil used for beets in the United States. Broomcorn and cantaloupes totaled about 15 per cent of the nation's production.

The land used for corn was 91 per cent non-irrigated and therefore produced only .82 per cent of the total for the nation, although 1.41 per cent of all corn land fell within the state.

The potato crop was 3.39 per cent of the national total with 3.32 per cent of the total acreage.

Among the other products, the state's apple crop last year was 123,455,000 bushels to place Colorado in 13th place. The state ranked 13th in wheat; 12th in rye, 24th in oats and 25th in corn.

A program of humane education for children and adults also will be included in the foundation's activities. Eighty per cent of the fund, however, will be used in the protection of all animals useful to mankind, including wild fowl and game animals.

The summer session of Colorado Agricultural College opened with approximately 400 students enrolled. This is a 16 per cent increase over the 1927 enrollment.

Lesson for July 8

SAUL AND STEPHEN

LESSON TEXT—Acts 22:3,4,13,20; 23:6,9,11; 26:10-15.
GOLDEN TEXT—Be thou faithful unto death and I will give thee a crown of life.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Saul's Cruelty to Christian People.

JUNIOR TOPIC—How Saul Persecuted Stephen and Others.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—The Consistency of a True Guide.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Stephen's Influence on Saul.

I. Saul's Training (22:3, 4; 25:4, 5, 9-11).

1. Taught to love his own nation (v. 3). He declared, "I am a Jew." Saul was a strict Pharisee. The Pharisees were the nationalists of their day. Being a strict Pharisee he was therefore a patriot. Those who are intelligently loyal to their own nation can most effectively help others.

2. Taught to love God's law (v. 3). "Taught according to the perfect manner of the law of the fathers" Love for the Bible is a valuable asset in life. To be destitute of love and reverence for God's Word is to be out on life's ocean without chart or compass.

3. He was zealous toward God (v. 3).

His heart and soul went out toward God with great enthusiasm. The root meaning of the word "zealous" is "to boil." It means a passion for God and His work. It was zeal for God that made Saul think of and plan for His work.

II. Saul Hears the Voice of Jesus (Acts 22:9, 10).

It was while on his way to Damascus with authority to arrest and imprison Christ's disciples that he heard a voice from heaven saying, "Why persecutest thou Me?" It was this sight of the living Christ that wrought the change in Saul.

III. Saul Thoroughly Conscientious (Acts 23:9, 10).

In his conscientiousness he opposed Jesus, for he regarded Him as an impostor. Saul is to be commended in that he responded to his conscience, but he is condemned for his attitude toward Jesus. Conscience is the law of life for every man, but it needs to be regulated by God's Word.

IV. Stephen's History (6:1-15).

In order to understand the significance of Stephen's martyrdom, a synthetic view should be obtained of his life.

1. Chosen as a deacon (6:1-7). He was one of the seven men appointed to look after the temporalities of the church.

2. Why Stephen was opposed (6:8-15). In his work of charity he testified of Jesus Christ and by the Holy Spirit wrought miracles. These mighty deeds aroused the people. The following features characterized him: (1) Wisdom. He was a man of common sense. (2) Grace. He had a beautiful character. (3) Power. He had the ability to do wonders and great signs, and he spoke the truth effectively. The men who opposed him were not able to resist the wisdom and the spirit by which he spoke. Not being able to withstand him, they arrested and brought him before the great council. Even here they could not silence him by argument, so they decided to do it by violence.

V. Stephen's Martyrdom (7:54-60).

Stephen made a magnificent defense before the council. This he did by tracing the history of Israel from the call of Abraham to the crucifixion of Christ. His aim was to show that God had never been localized and that the temple was but a small part of God's plan. He did not speak against the temple, but showed that God did not live in the full sense dwell in it at any time. This contention he proved from Scripture (Isa. 61:1, 2; 1 Kings 8:27). In his conclusion he declared that the Jews had always resisted the Holy Spirit. Now their stubbornness had reached its culmination in the betrayal, rejection and murder of the Son of God. This charge cut to the heart. His arguments were unanswerable. In this hour of trial God gave him a wonderful vision. He was permitted to look into heaven itself where he beheld the glorified Son of man standing at the right hand of God.

VI. Saul Consenting Unto Stephen's Death (8:1-3).

The very ringleader in this persecution was Saul. Stephen's death is described as falling asleep. Devout men buried him, making great lamentation over him.

"Well, yesterday you had a new hat on and I understand some one was calling it a miracle hat."

"Indirectly some one did. If a hat can become a girl I certainly would call it a miracle hat."

Democratic Women Will Bolt the Party

Washington, D. C., July 2—The women of Democracy will bolt their party rather than vote for Gov. Al Smith, and they will support Herbert Hoover in an active campaign, Mrs. William A. Du Puy, press representative for women dry groups at the Houston convention, declared in a statement here Sunday night.

She said that working through these dry organizations she plans to start immediate formation of the "Hoover Democratic Women."

"I do this confident in the belief that a million of them will be brought to the polls for Hoover next November," Mrs. Du Puy said. "These women will support Mr. Hoover without in any way yielding to their Democracy."

"We hold that Gov. Smith is an unnatural nominee of the Democratic party, forced upon it by a conspiracy of circumstances. We hold further that the spirit of the platform written at Houston was dry and that the party was dry."

"We believe that when Gov. Smith, after being nominated, resurrected the prohibition issue and made it the basis of his campaign, he did it in defiance of the will of his party, and that Democrats are therefore justified in refusing to support Gov. Smith. We believe he deliberately scuttled the ship."

"Ninety per cent of the women of Democracy are dry," Mrs. Du Puy said. "They know that Gov. Smith is wholly wet and that his election would plunge the country back into a distressing series of liquor fights."

She added that "we intend to serve notice here and now that we will not follow un-astorful candidates blindly," and that "we propose to defeat the nominee of our own party."

Smith, Lightning-Change Artist

AL SMITH, it is said, is planning a whirlwind campaign over the country, and we assume by that, he will be a lightning-change artist, something like this:

Some places he'll be plain Al Smith; at others he'll be, for instance—in German localities, he'll be Hans Schmidt; in Swedish, Johan Smithson; in Mexican, Juan Herrera.

In dry localities, he'll sniff dust; in wet localities, he'll say "come on, boys—the sky is the limit!"

An Example for Reba

By H. LOUIS RAYBOLD (Copyright)

THE three girls were sitting in Reba's room - discussing Helen Mallory, who had been one of their class.

"Helen was such a social creature," Kitty was saying. "That it seems terrible to think of her being buried in a one-horse town longing to be back here."

"She hasn't returned for a single reunion, has she?" asked Bernice Bailey.

"Not one," declared Kitty. "And she has more class spirit than any girl I know."

Reba had listened rather than talked. Somewhat, the question of Helen Mallory's happiness was more to her than a merely academic problem.

For Helen was really Helen Mallory rather than Helen with a husband and three children.

"Not even a professional man, my dear," Kitty had said. "Sells hardware."

But Reba was personally interested in what marriage can do to a free and untamed spirit, for wasn't Dick Wolcott urging her to forsake her career and marry him?

"Tell you what we'll do, girls!" she exclaimed suddenly. "On our way to the Interfraternity convention, let's stop off and call on Helen. Give her a surprise."

The tiny stop where their train deposited them a week later had nothing to recommend it at first sight.

"That's where we're going," she said, waving towards a distant hill. "Our house is on the very top with the most perfect view."

"Madge Baker sent her best love," said Kitty, glad she had remembered the message.

"Madge Baker? Oh, yes," said Helen. "Very sweet of her." But as Kitty said afterward, it was easy to see that Madge Baker meant no more to Helen's life now than George Washington.

The house proved attractive. Tastefully furnished as any house of Helen's would be.

The three children were adorable. Yet, as Bernice said, it was not that they were anything out of the ordinary.

John, coming home to supper, proved a most every-day sort of husband, not bad looking, but certainly no Apollo. He was hospitably itself and seconded his wife's urging that the three stay over night if not longer.

He scolded the children for being noisy, wished Helen would not forget to order the coal again, and played a wretched hand at bridge. Then he insisted that Kitty, who had been looking on while they played, take his hand and went out into the kitchen and made them all a pan of nut fudge.

Bill Wettstein, popular musician and dance promoter, will give his first dance of the summer at White Oaks on Saturday, July 14th. The affair will be one of those good old-fashioned barn dances and everybody will be guaranteed a good time.

Mr. Wettstein hails from St. Petersburg, Florida. From 1920 to 1925, he managed three large orchestras at that place, one of which was at one of the largest dance halls in the south, at the Coliseum in St. Petersburg.

"Good music, and managing a good, clean dance, where everybody can come and enjoy themselves, are the crowning attractions," says Mr. Wettstein.

"On coming to this part of the country in 1925," he continued, "I found that everybody loved to dance" and he added, that he had met some of the most wonderful people here, he had ever met in all his travels.

There will be dances at White Oaks every two weeks starting with the month of August. Mr. Wettstein says he will hold no dances in this vicinity when there is a benefit dance of any nature on in Carrizozo. It

THE RETURN OF ANTHONY TRENT

BY WYNDHAM MARTYN

COPYRIGHT BY BARS & HOPKINS

WNU SERVICE

STORY FROM THE START

Anthony Trent, once master criminal, now reformed, returns to New York after four years' absence. He learns his friend, Capt. Frank Sutton, is in Sing Sing. Trent is surprised to find his New York apartment occupied by a stranger, Campbell Sutton, who represents himself as the brother of Frank Sutton. Trent is asked by Campbell to force a confession from Fayson Grant, whom he accuses of having crookedly obtained all of Frank Sutton's property and then married the latter's wife. Trent starts on a campaign to accomplish the downfall of Grant. He learns that Captain Sutton has escaped from Sing Sing and later, to his surprise, finds that Campbell is really Frank Sutton. Trent takes his place in society as the opening gun in his campaign against Grant. He becomes popular at once. To be invited as a guest at the Grant home is his first objective.

The butler was Albert Thorpe, who had taken service only with the bluest blood in his native land and the longest purses in the country of his adoption. He had come to the Grants from one of the great houses in Newport.

The two footmen, John Sprowston and William Carrow, had pedigrees which spoke of well-filled hours of easy toil. The women servants were as easy to classify, and he could not suppose for a moment that he had ever seen any of them. Mary Connor was the cook. Other names meant nothing to him. He noted that Natia Grant had a French maid named Dupin. She had a room at the top of the house, and took her meals with Miss Brewen, the housekeeper.

The guests, who had said unanimously that they were glad to meet him, were rich business men. None of them alighted at any higher society than that among which he toiled himself. Most of them had ceased to work, but none of them had yet learned to play.

So far as he knew, Trent had begun his adventure with every favorable wind of fortune. He had no suspicion to overcome, no character to enact but the one they desired him to be. And he knew that the Grants would be delighted if he stayed with them a month instead of a week.

It was at this moment, when he felt himself absolutely safe, that Anthony Trent, turning from the balcony, perceived some one had thrust a note under the door.

In all the years of his illicit adventuring, in all those desperate situations when capture seemed imminent, he had never been so conscious of the bitterness of impending disaster as when he stared at the note. Some forewarning oppressed him with the certainty that here was what would turn his dreams of victory into positive defeat.

It was addressed simply to "Anthony Trent," and the writing was, possibly, disguised. Yet it was the writing of an educated man or woman; which, for the moment he could not tell. What guest in the Grant household would want to send him a letter in such a fashion as this?

Cutting the envelope, he drew out a letter of a few lines written on plain, cream stationery. There was no signature.

"Some one in this house knows you and the purpose for which you are here."

"Unless you find some excuse to go away after dinner, and before midnight, you will be denounced to Mr. Grant. If you take this warning and act promptly upon it you will not be molested. If you ignore it you will be handed over to the police."

It was worse even than he had anticipated. Some one here had either recognized him or had private information concerning his errand. In any case utter rest must be his lot.

It was difficult to gather from the letter of how much the writer was aware. The definite statement that his purpose was known did not satisfy Trent, although the threat was sufficiently unequivocal. There was so much more he desired to learn. Whether, for instance, the writer had merely meant that it was Trent's desire to average Sutton which had brought about this warning. And the other interpretation was vastly more disturbing. Conceivably, he could abandon his task and go back to Sutton and admit defeat. This would be better enough to a man so sure of himself as Anthony Trent. But in such a case Sutton would be the only loser.

If, however, the unknown writer intended to convey the impression that Trent's past offenses were known, he would never again have a peaceful moment. Perhaps, after all, some one high and slow-moving fate had chosen just such punishment for him as this when his former life was given up and he was performing a purely unselfish action for a man to whom he felt the utmost friendship.

He smiled a little ruefully as he realized that at least the function of dinner was permitted him. He must leave this Italian palace on shores Jerseyan before the stroke of twelve. There was something melodramatic about the midnight touch. But whereas, before the receipt of this note his yellow guests had seemed colorless, without interest and the meal a prospect of boredom, it was now a function of desperate intensity. Trent did not doubt that amongst these guests was the man or woman who asserted knowledge of his purpose.

He found himself placed on the right hand of his hostess. On her left sat a tall, thin old man, whose wrinkled and sunbaked neck eluded on all slides the encircling collar. He was introduced as Mr. Gilbert, a great traveler, and now devoted to the development of Texas oil fields. He had a direct way of stating at one and an uncompromising manner of speech. He announced, and Trent could not be sure the remark was not aimed at him, that he either liked a man on sight or hated him; if he liked a man that fortunate individual could have the Gilbert shirt. If he hated him, Gilbert would have the defeated one's shirt.

It was this man, gimlet-eyed and talkative, who most interested Anthony Trent. He declared for the benefit of those who cared to listen, that his memory for faces was infallible. He seemed eager to talk to Trent. The trouble was that Trent was not able to know whether Gilbert was in a shirt-giving or shirt-taking mood.

The lady on Trent's right, a Mrs. Fisher, plunged presently into the subject of jewel robberies. It was a subject which unloosened every tongue. Trent listened attentively. A dark, corpulent man at the other side of the table assumed that the recent Weld robbery had been committed by a gang of experts.

"I wouldn't wonder," he said, "but it was the same gang which took the great Mount Auburn ruby from my dear friend, Jerome Dangerfield, some years ago. That was a mysterious crime, if you like."

Anthony Trent listened eagerly to an account of one of his own exploits. The dark man held that at least three had been involved in it. From this he passed on to discuss with grudging admiration, what qualities were needed for the perfect

Got Instrument That Suited Whole Family

"An agent was at our house the other day trying to sell us a piano," said the fat plumber.

"Did you buy one?"

"The thin carpenter naturally asked the question."

"No, because my daughter is the only one in the house who can play a piano."

"I see."

"And then he wanted me to buy a harp."

"I suppose you bought one."

"I did not. None of us can play a harp."

crook. "Such a gang would have a great haul here," he announced.

"Not a chance," said Fayson Grant. "I've burglar alarms, watchdogs and take every possible precaution. I'm willing to bet there isn't a house on the Jersey coast so carefully guarded as this."

"Why?" Trent asked. "Are you expecting burglars?"

"Not for a moment," Grant said hastily, "but one has to take precautions. There were some robberies at Spring Lake last week."

Sutton believed that some member of Grant's household would be engaged to protect him from the imminent assault of a vengeful convict. Sometimes such operatives were introduced as guests. The three man-servants Trent had seen seemed to be merely highly trained people of their class. He had seen many such. As to the guests, they seemed what he might have expected to find, well-fed, hearty men of money.

The dinner dragged its weary length along until ten. Anthony Trent thus had two hours in which to unmask his enemy or leave the house defeated. As he rose from the table he felt convinced that the writer of the note had not been one of his fellow diners. He was aware, ere half the meal was over, that the sense of imminent danger was removed.

Slipping away to his room, Trent scanned again the list prepared by David More, Connor, Dempsey, Miller, Davis, Meannon, Oplin, Applegate, Warner and Thompson. With the three men and Miss Brewen, the housekeeper, those made up the indoor help. Outside were Regan and his two men, Ropes and Sage. The gardeners lived in Asbury Park and had no business within the house.

Trent rang his bell and informed a footman that he wished to speak with the butler.

Albert Thorpe had been informed by Grant, who in turn had dragged it from Swilbin Weld, that the young American had been an honored guest in the household of the earl of Rosecarrel. Thorpe was profoundly anxious to serve. He was reassured when Trent nodded curtly.

"I sent for you," said Trent, "because you must know about the maids, their references and so on."

Thorpe bowed with dignity.

"I'll tell you what I want to know," Trent went on. "I have reason to believe that some one here desires to blackmail me for a youthful indiscretion. Now, I don't propose to submit to that sort of thing, and I am equally anxious to keep it concealed from my hostess. I am telling you this because you have seen life and understand."

"Indeed I do, sir," said Thorpe eagerly. "How can I help you, sir?"

"I want to find out if there is any one here whose writing is like this."

Trent tore a line from the note. It read "after dinner, and before midnight, you will . . ."

Thorpe looked at his watch. It was half-past ten.

"How long can you give me?"

"Not more than an hour. I must go downstairs now. If you have found out anything come and interrupt me, no matter what I'm doing. Say that Mr. Swilbin Weld wants me on the long distance and won't give a message. I am in the habit of paying for any services, and I am sure you are discreet."

Never had a fourth at auction bridge been less ready for his favorite game than Trent. It was while he was dunnify that Albert Thorpe approached, suave and discreet.

"Mr. Swilbin Weld on the long distance," he said in a voice all might hear. "He won't give a message, sir. He says he must speak to you personally."

Excusing himself Trent walked to a telephone booth made from a Sedan chair which stood in the hall. Lest prying eyes should be on him, he entered it, closed the door, and pretended to listen. If Thorpe had no comment to offer, this fake call would lend color to any excuse he might be called upon to account for an unpremeditated departure.

When a reasonable amount of time had elapsed he came out and saw the butler place a letter on a nearby chair. Pinned to it was the line he had torn from the mysterious message. The letter was written, a month earlier, to Mrs. Fayson Grant. The sender, Marie Dupin, was apparently a teacher of the French language, and had been employed in households of rank and fashion. The writing of the two documents was identical.

Anthony Trent was sure he had never heard of Mademoiselle Dupin and doubted if he had seen her writing before. And yet she had threatened him.

How to Dodge the Sheriff

By RING LARDNER

To the Editor:

A great many of my creditors and their pals has probably been wondering that how come that we are loose as a couple years ago I was almost shaking hands with the referee in bankruptcy and where as I am now on my feet again and got pretty near enough money to pay my last November grocery bill.

Well, friends, when I find out a good thing I am not the kind of a bird that will keep it to myself but I will pass it along and tell my pals about it so as they can take advantages and pull themselves out of the hole the same like I did.

Well about a year ago I was talking with my wife and myself I might and she says how is it that I and you are making about 200 berries per wk, more or LESS and we owe everybody in Illinois except the gov't. and on the other hand here's the Quynles living next doors to us and him only getting 40 thousand per annum and yet they seem to enjoy themselves a whole lot more than we and don't owe nothing.

So I said what of it.

"Well," she says, "I been reading the magazines a whole lot lately and I seen an ad in I signed by the Rainy Day Corporation and it's supposed to tell the husband and their wife how to get themselves on their feet, and the course my costs $300 so why not let a subscribe for it and you don't have to pay in advance, but first you get the course and read it and then you can pretend like you don't care nothing about it and send it back to them and they refund you the $300."

So I said all right like I usually do when she speaks to me at all and she sent for the course and it comes in a form of 5 books, which I didn't have time to read and she read them and sent it back to them with the words that it was not so good, but at that it was good enough to get us out of our troubles and look at us now.

Well, the idea was this in a few words. In the first place most of our debts was owed in dribbles like ten dollars and the book says:

"If you owe ten dollars apiece to a whole lot of people in the same town, why the idea is to quietly move out of that town as far as you can and move to some other town, and the merchants and etc. back in the old town won't bow you because it would cost more than the debts is worth."

So one night we quietly moved out of the old town and moved to Great Neck, and we haven't heard nothing since from people we owe money to.

Well the next lesson in the course was to get yourself a job that paid more money so I day I went down to N. Y. City and went in a man's office that I had heard about him, and I said I wasn't getting enough money in old Chi, so he said what did I want and I said I wanted a raise and he gave it to me.

So as I say here, we are living in Great Neck and getting more salary than out in old Chi and all our debts repudiated and they can't see us on acct. of how much it costs on acct. of the distance and here we are living in the lap of luxury in Long's Island and all as we half to do is to keep out of old Chi or go their incognito, and on acct. of the wife seeing the Rainy Day Corporation ad in this here magazine, which the pure reading matter was so bad that she felt like she had to read the ads.

Now gents I don't want you to take my testimony without no supports, so I will tell you about a couple of friends of mine along the same lines that was in as pretty a pickle like we and seen the same ad and got the same results as us or better as follows: beginning with a letter I got from a friend of mine name Chas. Clarke as follows:

"Dear Old Pal. You know how Mildred and I used to struggle along while I was earning $10.00 per week as clerk in the Bon Ton Market which my uncle owned it and I was the only heir. Well one day Mildred read me the Rainy Day Corporation ad in one of the magazines about how to pull yourself out of the rut so she wrote them and they wrote back advising me to quit being the clerk and become the prop. so one day I took a big-cleaver and used it on my uncle and by the time I got through there wasn't enough left of him to be prop. of a soda fountain in Cuba so now I and Mildred is running the market and last year we layed away $1.05."

The other letter is from a carpenter friend of mine that lives at Fifth Avenue and 70 st. and in 2 yrs. he was only able to save $220,000 so 1 day him and his wife happened to see each other and begin talking and she seen this ad and wrote to the Rainy Day Corporation and they wrote back and told him to raise he--ll and get more money so he wrote to the union and told them he wouldn't carp no more unless they give him more money so they give him a raise and now he is making more than a st. car conductor and not having 1/2 as good time.

That is the way it come off boys and girls and if you are satisfied to go along worrying about financial matters—why well and good but if my little talk has showed you the way out why I am satisfied without no further annotations only the knowledge that I helped drag you out of the Meyer.

Gives Congress Idea of How Much to Spend

A budget system was adopted in the United States in 1921 and the bureau of budget was created. The bill authorizing the establishment of the budget makes the President the head of the budget system, creates the bureau of budget, requires that the President submit the budget to congress at the beginning of the regular session each year, and requires that congress be told at that time exactly what the revenues and expenditures for the year are to be, and what is the state of the public debt. This report must contain recommendations for increasing or decreasing the revenue as need may require, must give details of expenditure for the year past, and must give much other necessary information regarding the national finances. Co-ordinating departments have been created which function under the direction of the bureau of the budget. These departments effect saving and prevent duplication throughout the government service.

Duel to the Death

Between Two Ducks

The story of a duel between two ducks on a woodland lake near Watertown, N. Y., was told by a resident of Watertown, N. Y.

The duel was carried out in two encounters on successive days. On the first day, one duck was wounded and sank, but came to the surface later and recovered. The next day the battle was resumed and again the defeated duck sank beneath the surface. The victor dived beneath the surface, brought the defeated duck to the top and held its head above water.

Other ducks, apparently in the hope the duck would revive, aided in keeping the wounded bird above the surface. The life-saving methods proved unavailing, and the dead bird finally was abandoned.

No Woofing Cows

Little Samuel Goldstein, age three, 4325 North Illinois street, recently was taken to the circus by his father. On his return, his Uncle Abe tried to get him to tell what he saw, but all that Samuel would say was "animals."

Uncle Abe then called out his latent histrionic talents and gave what he believed to be a realistic interpretation of an angry lion.

"And did you hear an animal that went: 'Woof! Woof! Woof!'"

"There weren't any cows there," said Samuel.—Indianapolis News.

Ox-Wagon Fortress

Larger is a term that was first applied by the Boers of South Africa to a defensive camp improvised out of ox-wagons. The wagons were arranged in a circle together, with the wheels so as to form a continuous ampart.

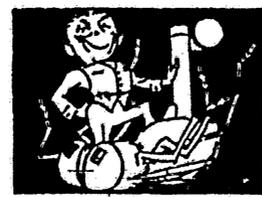

"Ponds" Public Property

The "great ponds" of Massachusetts are bodies of fresh water more than ten acres in extent. In 1911 the Massachusetts Bay colony decreed that they should be open forever to the public for fishing.

Lincoln County Ahead; Come on, Socorro!

A statement of tax collections for every county in the state has just been received by the State Tax Commission showing the percentages of taxes collected at the close of business in February of the present year. Lincoln County shows considerably better than the average for the state. The report for Lincoln County compared to Socorro, which joins us on the west, is as follows:

Lincoln, 1923 and prior years, 95.34 per cent; Socorro, same years, 80.17 per cent. Lincoln, year of 1924 and prior, 95.75 per cent; Socorro, 79.40 per cent. Lincoln, 1925 and prior, 94.54 per cent; Socorro, 86.69 per cent. Lincoln, 1926 and prior, 93.83 per cent; Socorro, 78.59. Lincoln, 1927 and prior, 49.45 per cent; Socorro, 42.12.

In conversation with J. B. French, Delinquent Tax Collector, the following conditions were found to exist:

That for the years of 1925 and prior, approximately 95 per cent of the taxes shown to be delinquent in Lincoln County cannot be collected on account of double assessments, indefinite descriptions, etc., and also the fact that a great deal of property is put on the rolls every year that does not exist. The practice of assessing on "information" is used by practically every assessor in the state and the "information" is the tax roll for the previous year. No funds are budgeted for assessor's expenses in the field and in order to keep the county's valuation from getting lower, a great deal of property is put on the roll that does not exist with the result that 2 or 3 per cent can never be collected. This coupled with the fact that about 10 per cent of the taxpayers won't pay without a suit, causes shortages in practically all funds, so that current expenses cannot be met promptly.

On the present valuation of the county, which is approximately $7,400,000, a void or defective assessment of 3 per cent means a loss of revenue on $222,000 or approximately $5,700.00 in taxes.

County school teachers have not yet been paid for the last month they taught this year. This situation is caused partially from the above mentioned conditions and also the fact that the budget for 1927-1928 was based on a collection of 95 percent when as a matter of fact experience of past several years shows that it takes one and a half to 2 years to collect better than 92 percent of the taxes.

Visiting Bryans

J. P. Phillips, Mrs. Phillips and little daughter of Roswell have been spending the week as guests of Assessor and Mrs. J. L. Bryan. They had a pleasant visit and while here, the Bryans drove them over to our scenic resorts and attended the celebration at Fort Stanton.
