WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

At the Warren ranch, the "Three Bar," on the fringe of the "cow country," a stranger applied for work as a rider...

He stood so close as almost to touch her but she failed to lift a hand or move back an inch, and Slade knew that he faced one whose spirit matched his own...

give him his half-interest if he would stay off the place; his weak instincts that there was some reason why he must spend two years on the Three Bar...

"What was the reason for your first idea—of coming here under another name?" she demanded.

"I thought maybe others knew I'd been left a part interest," he said.

She Knew That He Was Harmless to Her.

"and it might be embarrassing. The way it is, with only the two of us knowing the inside, I can stay on as a regular hand until the time is up."

"You're so plausible," she said. "You put it as a favor to me. Did it ever strike you that if the truth were known it might also be uncomfortable for you?"

She did see it, but had not so clearly realized it till he pointed it out, and for the first time she wavered in her conviction that he had come simply to deprive her of her rights...

"No," she said. "Go on out, please." He turned his back on Slade and went out. "And you," she said to Slade, "you'd best be going too. We've been too good neighbors to quarrel—unless you come over again with the same idea you did today."

Druggists With "Side Lines" Nothing New

The druggist who sells lunches, books, radio sets and fishing tackle isn't a modern phenomenon at all, as most of us believe.

Around 1600 to 1625 we find the pharmacist selling sweets, preserved fruits, brown paper plasters, hair powders and perfumes. In 1617, in England, a new charter separated the apothecary from the grocer and he began to concentrate more upon drugs and to dispense.

At a later date apothecaries virtually became physicians. They prescribed as well as dispensed and visited patients. The pharmacist was then practically a fully qualified practitioner.

But gradually he had fewer and fewer drugs to dispense as prescribed. Today a city will often support only a few exclusive pharmacies and the druggist has fallen back upon side lines, quite as in the early days. This is no new and riotous indulgence on on that idea and I've been patiently wondering why you don't rush matters and invite me to marry you."

He rose and flicked the ash from his cigarette into the fireplace.

"I do invite you—right now," he said, and in her surprise she left her chair and stood facing him. "I'd like real well to have you, Billie."

"That's the final proof," she said. "I'm surprised that you didn't tell me the first day."

"So am I," he said.

She found no answer for this but stood silent, knowing that she had suddenly become afraid of him.

"And that's the living truth," he affirmed. "Other men have loved you the first day. You know men well enough to be certain that I wouldn't be tied to one woman for the sake of owning a few head of cows—not if I didn't want her for herself." He waved an arm toward the door. "There's millions of miles of sage just outside," he said. "And millions of cows—and girls."

He moved across to her and stood almost touching her, looking down into her face. When Slade had stood so a few days past she had been coldly indifferent except for a shiver of distaste at the thought of his touching her. Before Harris she felt a weakening, a need of support, and she leaned back from him and placed one hand behind her on the table.

"You judge for yourself whether a man wouldn't be right foolish—with all those things I mentioned being right outside to call him—to marry a woman he didn't want for herself, because she had a few hundred head of cows." He smiled down at her. "Don't pull back from me, Billie; I won't lay a finger on you, but now do you think it's you I want—or the little old Three Bar?"

"You can prove it," she said at last. "Prove it by going away for six months—or three."

He shook his head.

"Not that," he said. "I've told you I was sewed up in a right peculiar way myself—which wouldn't matter a damn if it wasn't for this. I'd have tossed it off in a second if the girl on the Three Bar had turned out to be any other than you. Now I'm going to see it through. The Three Bar is going under—the brand both our folks helped to found—unless some one pulls it out of the hole. Believe me if you can and if you can't—why you know that one remark about my being unwelcome here will clear the road for you, like I mentioned a few minutes back."

He turned away without touching her and she had not moved when the door closed behind him.

An hour past noon on the following day a drove of horses appeared at the lower extremity of the valley and swept on toward the ranch. As Harris threw open the gates of the big corral he saw her standing in the door of the cookhouse watching the oncoming drove. Riders flanked the bunch well out to each side to steady it. There was a roar of hoofs and a stifling cloud of dust as three hundred half-wild horses clattered past and crowded through the gates, scattering swiftly across the pasture lot back of the corral. A dozen sweat-soaked riders swung from their saddles. There was no chance to distinguish color or kind among them through the dust caked in the week-old growth of beard that covered every face.

One man remained on his mount and followed the horses into the pasture lot, cutting off fifty or more and heading them back into the corral; for Waddles had decreed that they could have the rest of the afternoon off for a jaunt to Brill's store and they waited only to change mounts before the start.

Calico stood drooping sleepily in one of the smaller corrals and Harris moved toward him, intending to ride over with the rest of the men.

"The boss said for you to ride Blue," Morrow stated as Harris passed the group at the gates of the corral. "He's clear gentle-broke, Blue 'a."

The men looked up in surprise. Morrow had not been near the house to receive instructions from the girl. The lie had been so apparent as to constitute a direct challenge to the other man.

Harris stood looking at him, then shrugged his shoulders. "Whatever the boss says goes with me," he returned evenly.

A rusty blue roan swept past with the fifty or so others. At least once every round of the corral he laid back his ears and squealed as he scored some other horse with his teeth, then lashed out with wicked heels.

Would Your Stenographer Wear This?

A prominent Berlin physician has invented a mask for inhaling which can be used by any sufferer from bronchial trouble while working. The mask fits closely in front of the face, with glass insets for sight. A tube is connected with a box containing the inhaling mixture which is carried over the head to the nose. The bad air is carried away by a special respirator fixed over the mouth.

Improved SAMSON Windmills With SELF-OILING Boxes

The good qualities of this new device can be readily seen when compared with the old style, noisy, lumbering windmill, which had to be oiled every day in order to run. Now, your oiling troubles are at an end. The self-oiling feature of the new SAMSON wherein all bearings run constantly in a flood of oil, causes the windmill to run easily, make less noise and with less expense than any windmill on the market. As proof of the pudding is in the eating of it, so is the lasting virtues of the Samson windmill, made possible by a trial test. For full information SEE—

Improved SAMSON Windmills

With SELF-OILING Boxes

The good qualities of this new device can be readily seen when compared with the old style, noisy, lumbering windmill, which had to be oiled every day in order to run. Now, your oiling troubles are at an end. The self-oiling feature of the new SAMSON wherein all bearings run constantly in a flood of oil, causes the windmill to run easily, make less noise and with less expense than any windmill on the market. As proof of the pudding is in the eating of it, so is the lasting virtues of the Samson windmill, made possible by a trial test. For full information SEE—

HOOKED, BRAIDED AND WOVEN RUGS

Demonstrating the Making of Hooked Rugs.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Interest in the making of hooked rugs at home has become very widespread during the past few years since this old art was revived by extension workers among farm women. Like several other phases of home demonstration work, knowing how to make hooked and also braided and woven rugs has appealed to the farm woman from two standpoints: Beautification of her home at moderate cost, through her newly acquired craft, and the development of a new source of income when rugs were made for sale. In almost every county or state fair and in many community or church bazaars, hooked rugs made by farm women are conspicuously displayed and bring good prices. Through this means spare time is made to yield extra cash so that in addition to the rugs they make for home use the rug makers are enabled to buy other furnishings or conveniences to improve their homes. In some states county weavers' associations of farm women have sprung up and aid in standardizing the designs and patterns and in marketing the products. Thousands of dollars have been cleared annually by such groups of women working together in a single county. Commodity organizations have followed successful production and standardization work in rug making in a similar manner to what has been done in the co-operative marketing of other farm home products.

Fairy Tale for Children

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

"We can be cooked in so many different ways," said Mrs. Potato. "So could we," said the Squash family, "if only people would take the trouble." "Who is going to bother about a Squash?" asked Mr. Potato proudly. "I'm sure I don't know why not," said Mrs. Squash. "Oh, well," said the Carrots, "what can one expect from the Squash family?" "They're not considered the most wonderful food in the world by anybody, whether they are cooked one way or the other." "And who thinks so much of the Carrots?" asked Mrs. Squash. "The rabbits," said the Carrots haughtily. "They think more of the carrots than of anything else. 'The little dears,' ended the Carrots happily. "You're quite right, Carrots," said the Apples. "But think of us. 'We're the ones to be thought about.' " "And why?" asked Mr. Potato. For he wanted to have all the attention himself. "Because we can be stewed, we can be baked, we can be made into puddings, pies and tarts. 'Potatoes can just be potatoes, that's all.'

"Well, that's enough," said Mrs. Potato. "Yes," said Mr. Potato, "we can be fried or boiled or baked, and we can be stewed, too." "What is more than anything, we can be mashed. We're simply delicious then." "Well," said the Apples, "we don't think it's much of an honor to be mashed. Not much. "As if anything thought it fine to be mashed. That shows you are not so fine as we are."

"Ha, ha," chuckled Mrs. Squash, as she rolled to one side. Mr. Potato had been very rude to Mrs. Squash and she was glad to hear him being snubbed for a change. "You see," continued the Apples, "we can be eaten for breakfast as a fruit, we can be eaten for lunch as a dessert, and we can be eaten for supper as a vegetable, or almost any way they plan to use us." "Now potatoes are vegetables and nothing else. You never heard of a potato pudding, did you? Why, even Mrs. Squash can be made into a pie." "Of course Mrs. Squash was very happy now. And the Apples continued talking. "What delicious pies we make! We are the favorite pies of the world! "Think of that for a distinction! Some people like mince pie, some like pumpkin pie, others enjoy squash pie, or lemon pie, but almost every one likes apple pie. "To think of being an apple pie! It's a wonderful thought. And we can be eaten just as we are, too! "No one could eat a raw potato. That would be too horrible! "Now just at that moment the cook came down in the cellar to pick out the winter vegetables she would want for dinner. "Well," said she to herself, "it's nice to get something from the hot-house once in a while. "I get so sick of these everlasting winter vegetables and apples that we keep in the cellar. It's nice to have a few tomatoes for a change." Down she put a box with bright red tomatoes—just from the hot-house. "Well," said the Vegetables, "how do you do?" "We're very superior," said the Tomatoes.

"And why shouldn't you be?" asked Mr. Potato. "You have been in a hot-house, spoiled and petted. You'd be queer if you weren't superior, what with sun and warmth to give you a fine color." But the Carrots and Potatoes felt that they really were the most important of all the winter vegetables. Do you think they were right? (C. 1929, Western Newspaper Union.)

A TASTY DISH OF SPINACH

Open a can of spinach, pour the contents into a colander, and let drain for half an hour. Broil six slices of breakfast bacon and place on brown paper in a warm place. To the bacon gravy add one-fourth cupful of cold water, one-fourth cupful of pure vinegar, one teaspoonful of mustard, one teaspoonful of salt, one teaspoonful of sugar, if liked, and a pinch of paprika. When thoroughly blended and bubbling, add the well-drained spinach, stirring constantly, and cook for about five minutes, or until the spinach is well heated. Remove to a hot platter with the gravy and garnish the top with strips of bacon, or sliced or grated eggs may be put around the sides. If preferred, fresh spinach may be used.

Recipes Worth Trying

By NELLIE MAXWELL

"It is beautiful to leave the world a while For the soft visions of the night. And free, at last, from mortal care and guile, To live as only in the angel's sight. In sleep's sweet realm so cozily shut in, Where, at the worst, we only dream of sin. —John G. Saxe.

The breast of lamb is one of the most tasty cuts when properly cooked and served. It is especially well flavored as it contains a large amount of extractives.

Staffed and rolled then roasted, it is a choice main dish. Stewed and served with peas it is a most wholesome dish.

Cover with strips of bacon, season well and add one-half cupful of water and bake three-fourths of an hour. Served with potatoes baked with it and basted with the pan fat, one may have a whole meal-in-the-baking dish.

Scrambled Lamb.—Cut up two cupfuls of leftover lamb, beat four eggs and add four tablespoonfuls of milk. Mix and scramble in butter in a hot frying pan. Serve with French fried potatoes piled around the lamb on a hot platter.

Scotch Broth.—Cook a well cut-up lamb shank in one and one-half quarts of water. Season well with salt when the meat is first put on. Add two cupfuls of diced potatoes, one cupful of diced carrots, one-half cupful of carrots put through the meat chopper, two onions sliced. Cook until the vegetables are tender, strain and cool if the fat is to be removed.

Barbecued Lamb.—Cut cold roasted lamb into thin slices and reheat them in a sauce made as follows: Two tablespoonfuls of butter, one-half tablespoonful of vinegar, one-third cupful of currant jelly and one-fourth teaspoonful of mustard.

Mint sauce is always good to serve with lamb. Chop one-fourth cupful of mint, add a teaspoonful of powdered sugar and pour over a tablespoonful of boiling vinegar. Serve with the roast.

There is not, as a rule, much reason to study leftovers for turkey, when the prices for the bird are so high. However, when one does not have enough at the festive board to "lick the platter clean," here are a few suggestions:

Turkey Bombay.—Cut the turkey meat into half-inch pieces. Heat one tablespoonful of fat, add one tablespoonful of minced green pepper and two minced onions; brown five minutes then add one-half cupful of chopped apple, one cupful of uncooked rice, two cupfuls of consommé, one-half cupful of strained tomato juice, one teaspoonful of salt and one-eighth teaspoonful of pepper. Add two cupfuls of turkey meat, mix well and place in a casserole, bake 45 minutes. Remove and add to the hot mixture two beaten egg yolks and two tablespoonfuls of grated parmesan cheese. Mix lightly, put all in a greased mold and steam 25 minutes. Unmold and serve hot with reheated gravy.

Creole Turkey.—Make a sauce using the following: Take one tablespoonful of fat, add two-green peppers and one medium sized onion finely chopped; cook for three minutes. Add one can of tomato soup and one tablespoonful of flour. Season with one teaspoonful each of salt and sugar; when well blended add six small skinned mushrooms sliced, one-half teaspoonful each of chives and parsley. Place a row of turkey slices overlapping each other on a flat baking dish, moisten with a little melted butter and heat thoroughly. Garnish the platter with celery and pimento strips.

Roast Leg of Lamb.—Lamb salt, pepper and onion all over the meat. Insert small slices of clove of garlic in the meat, using one clove. Place in a hot oven and sear the meat on all sides. Add one-half cupful of water. Slice two tomatoes and one onion and place around the lamb with six or eight potatoes. Roast in a hot oven, basting the vegetables often with the meat. Serve very hot with the pan gravy. (C. 1929, Western Newspaper Union.)

HOUSEHOLD NOTES

To keep parsley fresh, sprinkle it washed.

The tall, thin woman should wear a hat of soft texture.

Make the child's winter dresses of washable wool material such as flannel or challis.

To obtain the most heat from your electric heater, keep the reflector brightly polished.

Remove the odor of onions from the hands by washing them in cold water in which a little dry mustard has been dissolved.

Grease stains which do not respond to soap and water should be treated with carbon tetrachloride, gasoline, or some other grease solvent and then with cold water, put it in a fruit jar with a tight cover, and keep it in a cool place.

VINEGAR MADE FROM ANY FRUIT

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Vinegar is not necessarily made from apples, although many of the late and windfall apples are utilized in this way. Vinegar can be made from any fruit, or, in fact, from any material which contains enough sugar and is in no way objectionable, according to the United States Department of Agriculture. Vinegar of good quality can be made from oranges, persimmons, pears, various berries, honey, maple products, watermelon, and grains. Large quantities of some of the fruits mentioned are wasted each year in the United States.

In England vinegar was first made from malt liquors, a method of disposing of ale and beer which had soured. Malt vinegar is still the standard in the British Isles. Here apple juice is largely used for homemade vinegar, and cider vinegar is considered the standard for household purposes. Whether it is done on a small scale in the home, or on a larger scale on the farm, or on a still larger scale in the factory, the production of vinegar is the result of two distinct fermentation processes—an alcoholic fermentation followed by an acetic fermentation. Sugar is the base of vinegar production. Any watery solution of a fermentable sugar may be transformed into vinegar under favorable conditions. Many fruit juices are well suited to this purpose, as they contain sugar in the proper proportion and other necessary or desirable substances.

Distilled or spirit vinegar made from molasses or alcohol obtained by a by-product from the manufacture of other products, notably compressed yeast, is nearly always colorless and lacks the aroma and flavor of fruit vinegars. For this reason it is not commonly desired for table use, but is extensively used for pickling or preserving.

Directions for making any of the above-named fruit and other vinegars will be furnished by the United States Department of Agriculture.

SECRET OF FAMOUS BISCUIT

Haven't you often wondered what was the secret of the famous "beaten biscuit" of the South? Here it is, given by the bureau of home economics. You will notice that there is no leavening; the beating which "blisters" the dough helps incorporate air into it—and that's the secret.

2 cups flour. 2 lbs. fat. 1/2 tsp. salt. 1/2 cup cold water.

Sift the flour and salt, rub in the fat with the tips of the fingers. When well mixed add enough cold water to make a stiff dough and knead until smooth. Beat with a rolling pin or potato masher for fifteen minutes or until the dough blisters. Pinch off small pieces of the dough and after rolling into a ball flatten out by pressing with the thumb in the center of the ball. Prick with a fork. Place in a lightly greased pan and chill for one-half hour. Bake from thirty-five to forty-five minutes in a fairly hot oven (400 degrees Fahrenheit) at first, then reduce the temperature to 325 degrees Fahrenheit. Continue the cooking until the biscuits are very light brown.

Less Trim on Shoes

By JULIA BOTTOMLEY

lical and comfortable of styles for daytime wear. For the same reason we are loyal to neat well-modeled shoes for general wear. The frocks illustrated are looking forward to the early spring days when we go careless. The vogue for the cloth coat-dress is clearly foreseen by those who are studying fashion's movements. It will come more into its own—the coat dress of light woolen weaves—than for many a year, but it will not, however, cut into the vogue for silk. As to the handling of the material in the sports and street models, silk is manipulated like wool and wool like silk. Bordered woollens and silk will be very fashionable during the coming months. In the picture the coat-dress to the left is made of beige cloth chevron bordered in navy, the border used as a trimming. Navy blue kid pumps and a navy felt hat add the finishing touch to this fetching color scheme. To the right is a printed silk in a two-piece sports model that borrows its design from tweed. Like its companion frock of chevron-bordered cloth, it uses its border as a trim. With this distinctive silk printed in brown and beige, brown kid shoes are worn, for fashion demands that our shoes blend into the color harmony of the costume. Kid shoes are taking to simpler lines and less trim with no intricacy of straps. The pair pictured in the foreground are of black glaze kid, piped in gold. A very new note is the separate strap with metal buckle which slips through rings on the side. And now, speaking of colorful kid shoes, give ear to this! According to the annual exhibit of fashionable footwear which recently was held in New York, men are going to wear blue shoes. You can scarcely distinguish them from black, they are so dark in color. (C. 1929, Western Newspaper Union.)

When Food Sour

Lots of folks who think they have "indigestion" have only an acid condition which could be corrected in five or ten minutes. An effective anti-acid like Phillips Milk of Magnesia soon restores digestion to normal. Phillips does away with all that sourness and gas right after meals. It prevents the distress so apt to occur two hours after eating. What a pleasant preparation to take! And how good it is for the system! Unlike a burning dose of soda—which is but temporary relief at best—Phillips Milk of Magnesia neutralizes many times its volume in acid. Next time a hearty meal, or too rich a diet has brought on the least discomfort, try—

Drink Water to Help Wash Out Kidney Poison

If Your Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers You, Begin Taking Salts

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys and irritate the entire urinary tract. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean, by flushing them with a mild, harmless salt which helps to remove the body's various wastes and stimulates them to their normal activity. The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In 24 hours they strain from it 500 grains of acid and waste, so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active.

Drink lots of good water—you can't drink too much; also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of J&J Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help clean and stimulate clogged kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in the system so they are no longer a source of irritation, thus often relieving bladder weakness.

J&J Salts is inexpensive, cannot be abused; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink, which everyone should take now and then to help keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this; also keep up the water drinking, and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and backache.
