It was in the form of a get-together meeting of the three lodges and they were well represented. Work was performed in the second degree, after which a luncheon was served. After the sumptuous repast, the newlyweds stole away from their friends, but the honor guests failed to make their escape. The crowd followed them to town and under the supervision of Captain Henry Hoffman, the groom was hog-tied and taken to the home of Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Spencer, leaving the new bride to wonder what had happened to him. After paying the penalty for playing truant on his hostess and other guests, he was released and restored to his wife, who was patiently awaiting his return.

For the foregoing information, we are deeply indebted to Captain Hoffman, who says he has no apologies to offer for the imprisonment of the head of the family.

Time to Come Back

Capitan Notes

School starts Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Vaner Thompson chaperoned the young folks of Capitan at a marshmallow roast Monday night. An enjoyable time was experienced.

The new bridge east of Capitan is completed and open for traffic. This will be glad news to the many motorists who have been put to much inconvenience in having to detour or hauled across the big arroyo by horses.

Mrs. Blackmar, daughter and son spent Sunday and Monday at the Lumpkins ranch home.

Mr. Cozzens and family who were in Texas for the summer, have returned to their home on the Mesa.

The Ladies' Aid Society met at the home of Mrs. C. S. Rockwell Wednesday afternoon with an attendance of 19. After the business session, the hostess served dainty refreshments.

Mrs. Ruth Andrews, who was one of our teachers last year, will teach in the school at Dexter, N. M., for the fall and winter term. Mrs. Andrews was a visitor here for several days this week.

Mrs. Beall has charge of the telephone office during the absence of Mr. and Mrs. McGinnis, who are on their vacation.

Montie Gardenhire and Miss Gladys Dozier, who were married at Fort Stanton last Sunday, will make their home in Capitan, as this is already Montie's home and we welcome the new bride to our town. She is one of Carrizozo's popular young ladies. She is a third-year student of the Carrizozo High School, a member of the High School Glee Club and a member of Carrizozo Assembly of Rainbow for Girls. Mr. Gardenhire is connected with the Chevrolet Garage here which is a branch house of the City Garage of Carrizozo. The young couple have a host of friends in both places who are offering their congratulations.

The building to be occupied by the Ferguson sisters is about completed. They will carry an up-to-date line of ladies' wearing apparel.

Mrs. Rufus Hughes and children are here this week from El Paso, to which city they moved about six weeks ago and are up for a visit with relatives and old friends in Carrizozo.

Miss Catherine Mackel, who came here in an airplane to visit Miss Lorene Stimmel, has returned to her home in Las Vegas.

Dr. and Mrs. R. E. Blaney were guests of Mr. and Mrs. E. S. Burns at Three Rivers Monday and were treated to a spin in the new Marmon car, the Burns recently purchased.

Car Accident

Sabino Vidaurri and Father Reyes left Sunday afternoon for Tularosa and when a short distance from Oacura, where a bridge had been washed out by a recent flood and the road was very narrow and rough, Mr. Vidaurri lost control of his Buick at the spot and the car left the road, landing into the ravine and landed against the bank. Mr. Vidaurri received several bad cuts about the face, caused by the broken glass from the windshield; his chest was also badly bruised from the impact against the steering wheel. Father Reyes was also cut about the face and head, but aside from this, they were not injured. The car was badly damaged, so much so, that it will have to undergo considerable repairs. They were fortunate in escaping as they did, for wrecks of less violence have even caused the occupants of cars to lose their lives.

This unfortunate happening has caused the Catholic Union to postpone the program scheduled for Aug. 31, to Sept. 14, as Mr. Vidaurri is one of the leading characters in one of the plays to be presented, and by that time he will have recovered from his injuries completely.

Heavily Laden on One Side

Charges made during the past week by the Albuquerque Journal of graft, bootlegging and other misdemeanors on the part of highway employees, have shook the state to its foundations but we have heard only one side of the case. Governor Dillon, who is now in Gallup, attending the Indian Ceremonial, will set the machine of investigation to work as soon as he returns to Santa Fe.

The Governor says that the charges are unbiased, and whether this be true or otherwise, we do not know, but as it stands, the other side of the argument, if there be any, certainly should have a chance to make a statement.

Graft, more especially in political circles, always did exist, and as long as we have politics, it always will, but if graft exists in the individual alone, there is no cause for wonder, for the evil-designing mind is always at work in all channels, but if the leaders of the state machine are involved, it is a different matter. If the charges are true, let the guilty be punished, whether they be of high or low station. In the meantime, let's hear the other side before passing judgment.

FORT STANTON NEWS

Dr. Tappan has been spending a few days leave in El Paso; Earl Farr, stenographer, accompanied him. They will return to the Station on Wednesday, Aug. 28.

Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Hendren were guests of the T. E. Kelley family at Carrizozo last Sunday.

George Elmgren at the Property Office is the owner of a Chevrolet Coupe, which he purchased in Roswell.

Miss Mary Jane Harris, our school teacher, returned from her vacation and is ready for the opening of the Fort Stanton school. Mrs. J. W. Morman, our other teacher, who will assist Miss Harris, is expected to arrive Saturday.

Max Faget was entertained with a birthday party on Aug. 26; all his little friends in the Post were there; also Dr. Faget, Mr. and Mrs. Howson, Mr. and Mrs. Fagan, and Miss Mary Jane Harris were assistants in the entertainment. Baseball and other games were enjoyed as well wading in the Bonito.

Mrs. Genster is taking a large crowd of patients out for a picnic Wednesday afternoon.

On Tuesday evening at eight o'clock in the Chapel of Our Redeemer, the Rev. Milton J. Swift united in marriage Montie Gardenhire and Miss Gladys Lee Dozier. They were accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Gardenhire, parents of the groom and Miss Gardenhire, sister, and Joseph Evans, friend of the groom.

Fort Stanton administered a drubbing to the crack Roswell team last Sunday to the tune of 18 to 3. We had expected a tough battle, but the Roswell hitters could do nothing with the slants of Edwards, our lanky pitcher. The Fort Stanton boys kept the Roswell outfielders busy on the run all through the game, the hitting of Pitts, Edwards and Cavanaugh, being the features of the game. Our team has been strengthened so that we are now able to give any team in this section a good argument. A large crowd from the vicinity, as well as from the Fort turned out to witness the game.

Attention, OddFellows!

At the regular weekly meeting to be held Sept. 4, the 3rd degree will be conferred, after which, a luncheon will be served and a smoker will follow. All members are urged to attend. Visiting brethren are respectfully invited.

Herman Kelt, N. G.

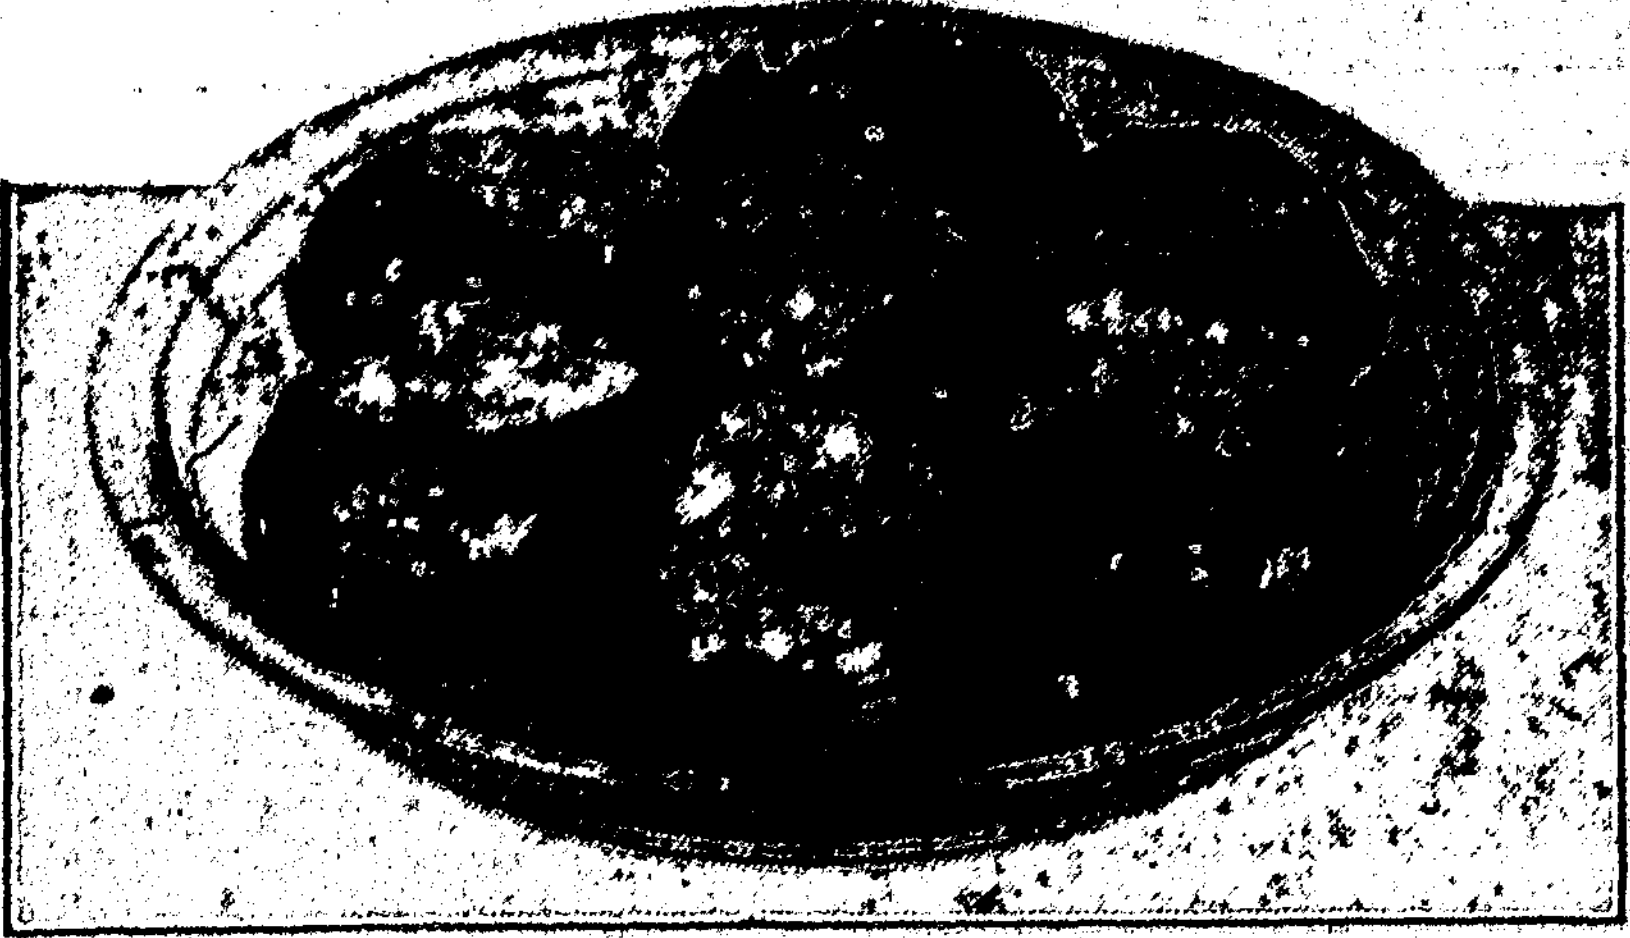

Wm. J. Langston, Sec'y.

The Clerk was directed to notify F. A. English that the water meters are to be read not later than the 26th of each month.

Baron James V. Auriemma, Field Worker for the Salvation Army, was present and made a little talk in behalf of his organization and incidentally asked the Trustees for a donation for the Army. After some discussion, a motion was made by Mr. Miller, seconded by Mr. Kelley and carried, that the Village donate $25 to that organization.

No further business being presented, the meeting was adjourned.

Stuffed Tomatoes Fine Dish

Most Appetizing—Vegetable for Serving Stuffed.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

One of the most successful and appetizing vegetables for serving stuffed is the tomato. Large, unblemished tomatoes should be chosen, firm enough to hold their shape when cooked. After they have been washed remove a thin slice from the stem. Carefully scoop out the pulp so that the tomato shell will not be broken. This pulp is added to the stuffing. Here is the entire recipe, tested by the bureau of home economics of the United States Department of Agriculture:

Stuffed Tomatoes

- 6 large firm tomatoes
- 1/2 tsp. celery seed
- 1/2 tsp. salt
- 1 cup diced salt pork
- 1/4 tsp. pepper
- 1 cup dry bread crumbs
- 1/2 cup buttered crumbs
- 1 tba. chopped parsley
- 1 tba. onion pulp

Fry the salt pork until crisp and remove it from the pan. Add the parsley and onion to the fat and cook for two or three minutes, then add the cup of dry bread crumbs, the salt,

HINTS FOR HOUSEKEEPERS

Careful planning cuts down time in preparation of meals.

Snit the fish both inside and out before stuffing to get the best flavor.

The baby's first shoes should have flat, flexible soles, pliable tops and broad toes.

Blk garments last longer if washed frequently. Dust particles and perspiration have a destructive effect on the fibers.

Plan the family menu to include each day an egg yolk for the baby under two years of age and a whole egg for every other member.

To make boiled vegetables popular with the family drop them in boiling water and cook them only until they are tender. This preserves the pleasant flavor, color and texture as well as the food value.

Good Things for the Table

By NELLIE MAXWELL

Now is the time to get ready for all the good things which add so much to the table during the whole year.

Be sure to try one or two jars of these attractive pickles:

Cucumber Pickles.—Select cucumbers one and one-half inches in diameter, pare, cut into halves and remove the seed portion with an apple corer. Now slice into half-inch thick pieces. Stunmer for a couple of hours in half vinegar and water, to cover, salting to taste; drain. Make a sirup of one pound of brown sugar, three cupfuls of mild vinegar and half five minutes with a bag of mixed spices; skim and pour over the rings. Stand over night; repeat two days more. On the third day, pack in jars, cover with the boiling sirup and seal. A few large, plump raisins added to this pickle improves the flavor and adds to the appearance. Rhubarb and Orange Marmalade.—Take three pints of good flavored pie plant, add the grated rind of three oranges and one lemon, add the juice and pulp, and three pounds of sugar; let stand over night and in the morning cook down until thick. Put into small glasses to serve; seal with paraffin when cold.

Peach Conserv.—Scald and peel six pounds of ripe peaches, add an equal quantity of sugar, the shredded kernels of six or eight pils, two oranges put through the meat chopper and the juice from a small bottle of maraschino cherries. Cook, stirring frequently until well blended, adding a few minutes before taking up, the cherries cut into fine pieces. Store in jelly glasses or half-pint jars.

Poverty Pudding.—The wealthy need not spurn this pudding for it is good: Take six cupfuls of milk, one-half cupful of rice, one-half cupful of sugar, one teaspoonful of salt, one-half teaspoonful of nutmeg and one-half cupful of raisins. Put all together in a baking dish and place in a moderate oven. Stir frequently at first, then occasionally. Butter or finely minced suet will add to the richness of the pudding.

When a little meat of any kind is left over, put it through the meat chopper and use it in layers with scalloped potatoes, adding a little onion, and lacking fat, some butter. Bake until the potatoes are done. Such a dish will be sustaining enough for a main dish and a little meat will season a large dish of potatoes.

Meat Pie.—Cut fine or chop any left-over meat, add any cooked vegetables and gravy and mix with a good white sauce, season well with onion, salt and pepper, cover with a biscuit dough or small biscuits, or a layer of left-over mashed potato brushed with egg. Bake in a moderate oven until well heated through.

Pineapple Sherbet

In the very warm weather a fruit sherbet is often more appealing than a richer dessert. Lemon is used with most other fruit juices to bring out the flavor and add a cooling acidity, as in this recipe for sherbet made from fresh pineapple. The use of a beaten egg white is customary in sherbets to give a smooth texture and make the mixture seem less cold on the tongue than a plain water ice. The directions are from the bureau of home economics.

- 1 large fresh pineapple
- 4 tba. lemon juice
- White of 1 egg
- Sugar
- Well beaten
- 1/2 tsp. salt

Select a well-ripened pineapple, remove skin, eyes and core. Grind the fruit in a food chopper, using the fine knife, and take care to place a bowl underneath to catch the juice. Press the juice from the pulp and add to the juice in the bowl. To each measure of pulp add an equal measure of sugar and heat. When the sugar has dissolved press the mixture through a colander to take out the tougher fibers. Combine the juice and pulp. Add the salt and lemon juice and sufficient water to make 1 quart, and more sugar if desired.

Use a freezing mixture of 1 part salt and 4 to 6 parts of ice. Turn the crank of the freezer slowly and when partially frozen remove the dasher and stir the beaten white of egg into the mixture. Pack the freezer with more ice and salt and let the sherbet stand for 2 or 3 hours to ripen in flavor. These proportions make about 1 1/2 quarts of sherbet when frozen.

"My darling," was all her grandmother said, but Betty knew she understood—understood how sad it was with the empty cage after having so longed for the bird but also how beautiful it was to feel that the bird was now free and happy. Fairy Tale for the Children

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

I want to tell you more about the little girl Betty who longed to own a beautiful red bird who lived in a cage in a shop in the town where Betty was.

She had wanted that red bird more than anything and now Grandma had come to visit her.

Grandma was such a dear. She had not been feeling well lately and she had come for a nice rest.

She knew she would be so happy with Betty, and Betty looked forward to having Grandma come.

Then such a wonderful thing happened to her. It was what Grandma said to her that was so perfect.

"Betty," she said, "I shall be wanting a good deal of help while I am getting better and I shall pay you as my little nurse. I shall pay you ahead of time as I know you would love to have your bird now."

"You can have the five dollars for him and three dollars for a cage."

Betty could hardly believe what she heard. But it was true. As quickly as she could she went to the shop where the bird stayed.

On her way there she felt almost certain that she would find the bird had been sold, but wonder of wonders, when she arrived she saw the bird in his cage just back from the window.

She looked in the window first of all. She wanted to do all this very slowly.

It was going to be such happiness to say she would pay for the bird and take him along with her. But as she stood looking in the window some one was speaking to another.

"What a wicked thing to have a scarlet tanager in a cage! A bird which loves the woods and green trees to be kept in a cage!"

Betty turned to the woman who had spoken. "But the man says he doesn't mind any more than a canary does."

"What nonsense," said the woman. "Why, it's as bad as to cage a robin!"

"Oh," was all Betty said. Sadly she went into the shop. She told the man she had come to buy the bird and the cage and that she would take him with her.

When she came outside the people had gone. She took a street car but not in the direction of her house.

It was hard carrying the cage but she managed and at the end of the line she got out.

There she walked a little until she came to the edge of some woods, and then she opened the door of the cage.

At first the bird did not stir from his perch. His heart was beating from the ride and the excitement, and then suddenly he seemed to realize his door was open.

He looked out. Ahead of him were green trees—woods—a beautiful wild park.

And then he spread his black wings and off he flew to the nearest tree. For a minute he perched there.

And then with a gorgeous flight of happiness he flew away into the green trees.

All that Betty could see was a flash of scarlet in the green of the leaves.

"Dear, dear bird," Betty said, but the bird was too far off to hear her or to pay any attention at all.

She was very late in getting home. Her family had just begun to worry about her, and in she walked carrying the empty cage.

Then she burst out crying. "Why, darling, my darling Betty," her grandmother said, "did the bird get away? You poor little girl!"

"Oh, Grandma, I'm so happy—really, Grandma, I am happy."

Her family could not understand it at all. She had lost her bird, she was crying, and she said she was happy.

"Oh, Grandma, the bird was a scarlet tanager, and he belongs with green leaves and in the woods and I let him go—free, so he could be with

At First the Bird Did Not Stir.

Gay Jacket for Autumn Wear

By JULIA BOTTOMLEY

Short rather than long is the verdict recently rendered for the unlined separate coat. Midseason styles especially place emphasis on the shortened jacket.

It is a short-rather-than-long coat which gives the final touch of chic to the costume in the picture. If one is the happy possessor of a sleeveless print frock (most women own not one but several), the addition of a little jacket similar to this one will tune it admirably to midseason wear. Which is exactly what many are doing this very minute—buying or making cunning jackets such as will extend the wearableness of their frocks of gay print into the cool fall days.

Color is a very important consideration when choosing the right jacket for the right gown. Either white or high colors are most successfully matched with the more summery frocks in light print for immediate wear. It is a little jacket of heavy white crepe which imparts a flattering fitness to the print gown illustrated. The jacket which fastens with a softly tied bow as does this one is a favored type.

Many women are taking advantage of the short-jacket vogue to sound a startling color note in an ensemble way. For instance, a tangerine and brown silk print dress topped with an orange-colored flannel or crepe jacket, the same surmounted with a matching felt hat, becomes an exponent of mid-season chic. If there is one color more than another which is being featured at this writing it is orange, or call it tangerine if you will, the vogue carrying even into bright pumpkin shades.

Coming back to the short-jacket phase of the mode, the popularity for immediate wear of the sleeveless print frock with jacket accompaniment should be mentioned. The smartest are self-colored. That is, a pale yellow plique which companions with a jacket of that crepe silk in perfectly matched color harmonies that which is fashionable. In the same matching spirit, a delicate pink crepe coat is posed over a silk or cotton plique, the one equally as fashionable as the other.

Contrasting the white and vivid-toned little jackets are those in navy, these same being very popularly worn with white and printed frocks.

The subject of jacket and frock costume suggests a very interesting theme—that of the new silks for fall which feature a print weave with a plain in choice related colors. The newest types, which are simply too beautiful for words, are called plumage silks, so named because of their realistic bird colorings. Watch for these!

If madam wants to be shown plumage silks in pleasant colorings, or peacock tones, or parrot shades, the next person will bring out the most interesting combinations, perhaps a marvelous print all in yellow and ruddy browns which looks as if it had captured all the glorious tints of the pheasant. With it will be shown the same silk weave in a beguiling pheasant brown in solid tone. The idea is to use the print for, say, the frock and the plain for the coat, or vice versa if you prefer.

Wen Fame in America

Bib That Child Can Manage

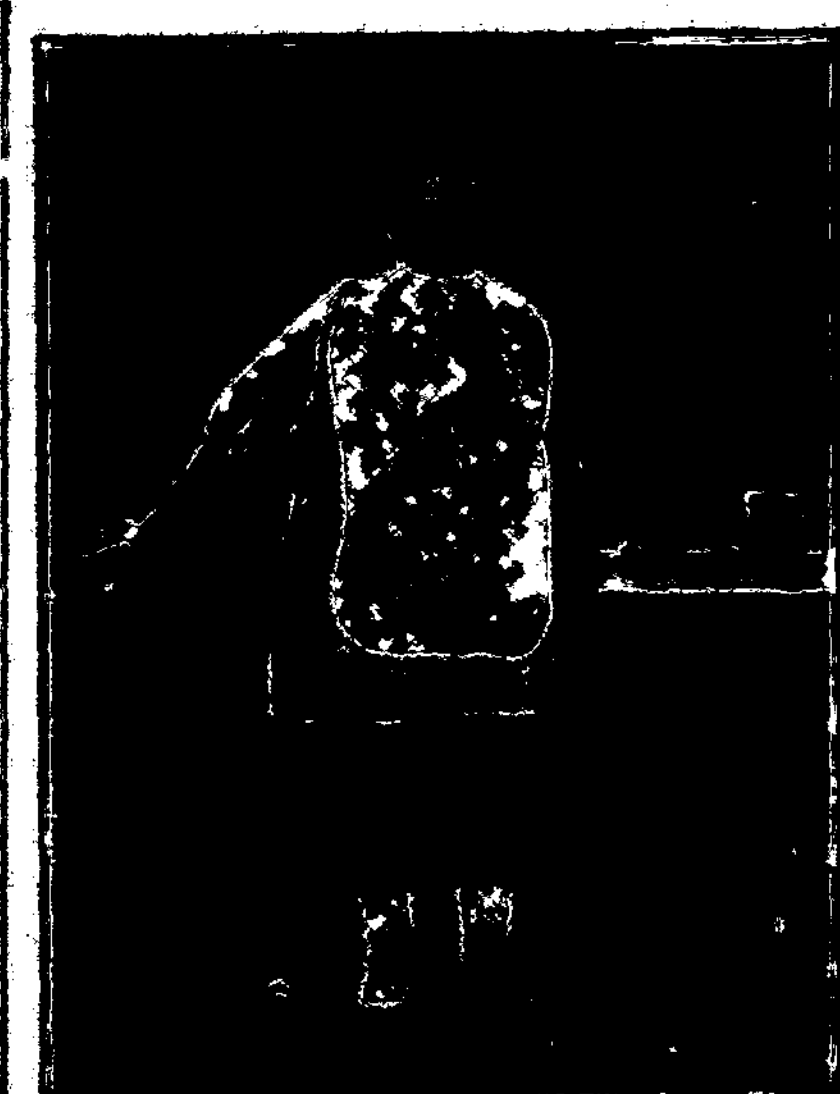

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Everything a little child wears may be made to play a part in its development if thought is given to the way the garment will be used and what the child itself will have to do to manage it without adult assistance.

Being interested in children's clothing from the standpoint of self-help in dressing as well as in practicality and simplicity of design and attractive appearance, the bureau of home economics of the United States Department of Agriculture has scrutinized a good many commonly used children's garments and found them lacking in some important feature.

One of the humblest, smallest, and yet most universally necessary articles is the bib worn at every meal from the time the first solid food is fed from a spoon. Attention has been given rather to protection of the clothing than to ease of manipulation, so that even a child of three or four is usually obliged to ask some one else to tie the strings of his bib at the back of his neck. Bibs of rubber and other water-proof fabrics are widely used, and while these have the merit of preventing damage to the garments they are not comfortable.

Clothing specialists of the bureau have several suggestions to make about the fabric used in bibs and its attractiveness to the child, and they recommend improved styles of bibs which train the child in self-help. Rattles and Japanese cotton crepe are favored because they are soft and non-absorbent, easily washed and require no ironing. These materials prevent the food which the child spills from dropping to the floor, and can be used as napkins. Children love pretty colors, and interest can be added to the wearing of the bibs by making them of different colors bound with white or of white bound with color. One successful bib developed by the bureau is of white ratine, bound with bias tape in color. This binding is extended at the neck line into 18-inch strings which are put through eyelets on opposite sides of the neck and then fastened to small brass or bone rings. The bib has no right or wrong side, and the child has only to get both strings over his head and pull on the rings as in the illustration, and the bib is adjusted snugly around the neck. If the strings are thrown back over his shoulders they form a loop which holds the bib securely in place throughout the meal. To get it off, the child takes hold of it at each side of the neck and pulls it out and down. Even a two-year-old may be taught to manage this bib without help. Anyone can easily cut a pattern for this bib. The United States bureau of home economics in Washington will furnish a diagram if needed, but it does not have patterns of this or any other garments for sale.

Trade Unionism an Agency of Progress

Since the war other nations repeatedly have sent delegations to the United States to try to discover why America is so much more prosperous than the rest of the world. There seems to be an impression there is some magic secret about it all. If the secret could only be discovered it could be applied in Europe with transforming consequences.

There is no such secret, of course. But Labor day may well serve to call the attention here at home to the factors that have made for the progress that in the last quarter century has nearly doubled the output of each worker.

There has been a great development in machinery, in labor-saving devices, in the elimination of waste, in more efficient organization. The accumulation of capital has made possible the extensive use of machinery. Immigration restriction has been an incentive to the mechanization of the farm and of industry generally, and has helped to maintain the American standards of living.

Contributing to these factors and in some measure underlying them all has been the intelligent co-operation between workers and managers which characterizes American industry. The advantages of this co-operation appear in the contrast with conditions in England, where profound distrust and suspicion exist.

In England labor has often opposed the introduction of labor-saving devices because it has believed it would be given no share in the profits arising from the resulting economies. In America a more enlightened spirit has prevailed. Labor generally has shared in the profits of increased production. The co-operation between employers and employees in this country has been a source of wonder to visitors from abroad.

America's industrial problems are not all solved by any means. There is still irregularity of employment that ought to be lessened. But no one can review the events of the last 25 years and contrast conditions now with those at the opening of the century without realizing the enormous progress that has been made in standards of living throughout the homes of America. The condition of the average man is improving decade by decade.—Chicago Daily News.

DIGNITY OF LABOR

By VICTOR A. OLANDER
The dignity of labor is a wonderful blessing which flows only on the shores of willing effort, rooted deep in the knowledge of life.
It is the essential joy of existence, for it is the consciousness of achievement.
At its coming the barriers dividing action and belief vanish as the sun of the night before the rays of the morning sun.
Inspiration, that heavenly messenger of whose touch man's words, deeds and thoughts are made, comes only to those who stand forth a shining creature, radiant in the realization of his being as the image and likeness of the Creator.

HEAD OF PRINTERS' UNION OF AMERICA

Charles F. Howard, president of the International Typographical Union, President Howard is a member of Chicago Typographical Union No. 16, which celebrated its diamond anniversary.

Idea of Labor Day Goes Back to 1884

George McGuire, a cigar maker, is credited with having been the father of the Labor day idea. He urged, at a labor convention in Chicago—in 1884—that one day be set apart each year as a labor holiday, when labor organizations could celebrate their achievements and recount the progress of their cause. McGuire continued to urge this plan until the first Monday in September was set apart in most states as a holiday, to be known as Labor day. McGuire died at Manchester, N. H., November 22, 1915.

There is a vast difference between Labor day in this country and abroad. Most of the European countries observe the first of May as their Labor day, and it is frequently marked by riotous demonstrations. Labor day in Europe has been the occasion of bloodshed more than once when it was seized on to demonstrate hatred of the employing class. Europe always breathes easier when the May day celebrations are over.

In America it is the custom to observe Labor day much as other holidays are observed. The banks and public buildings close, business is suspended generally and labor organizations meet in an orderly manner to celebrate their day of days. As they look over the year that is past they realize again the truth of the assertions frequently made by William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, that the worker in this country is the best paid in the world, that he has a better home life, better working conditions and more progress to his credit than the men who labor under any other flag.

It is worth recalling that the American Federation of Labor has stood squarely against any radical movement

Labor's Great Part in Building Nation

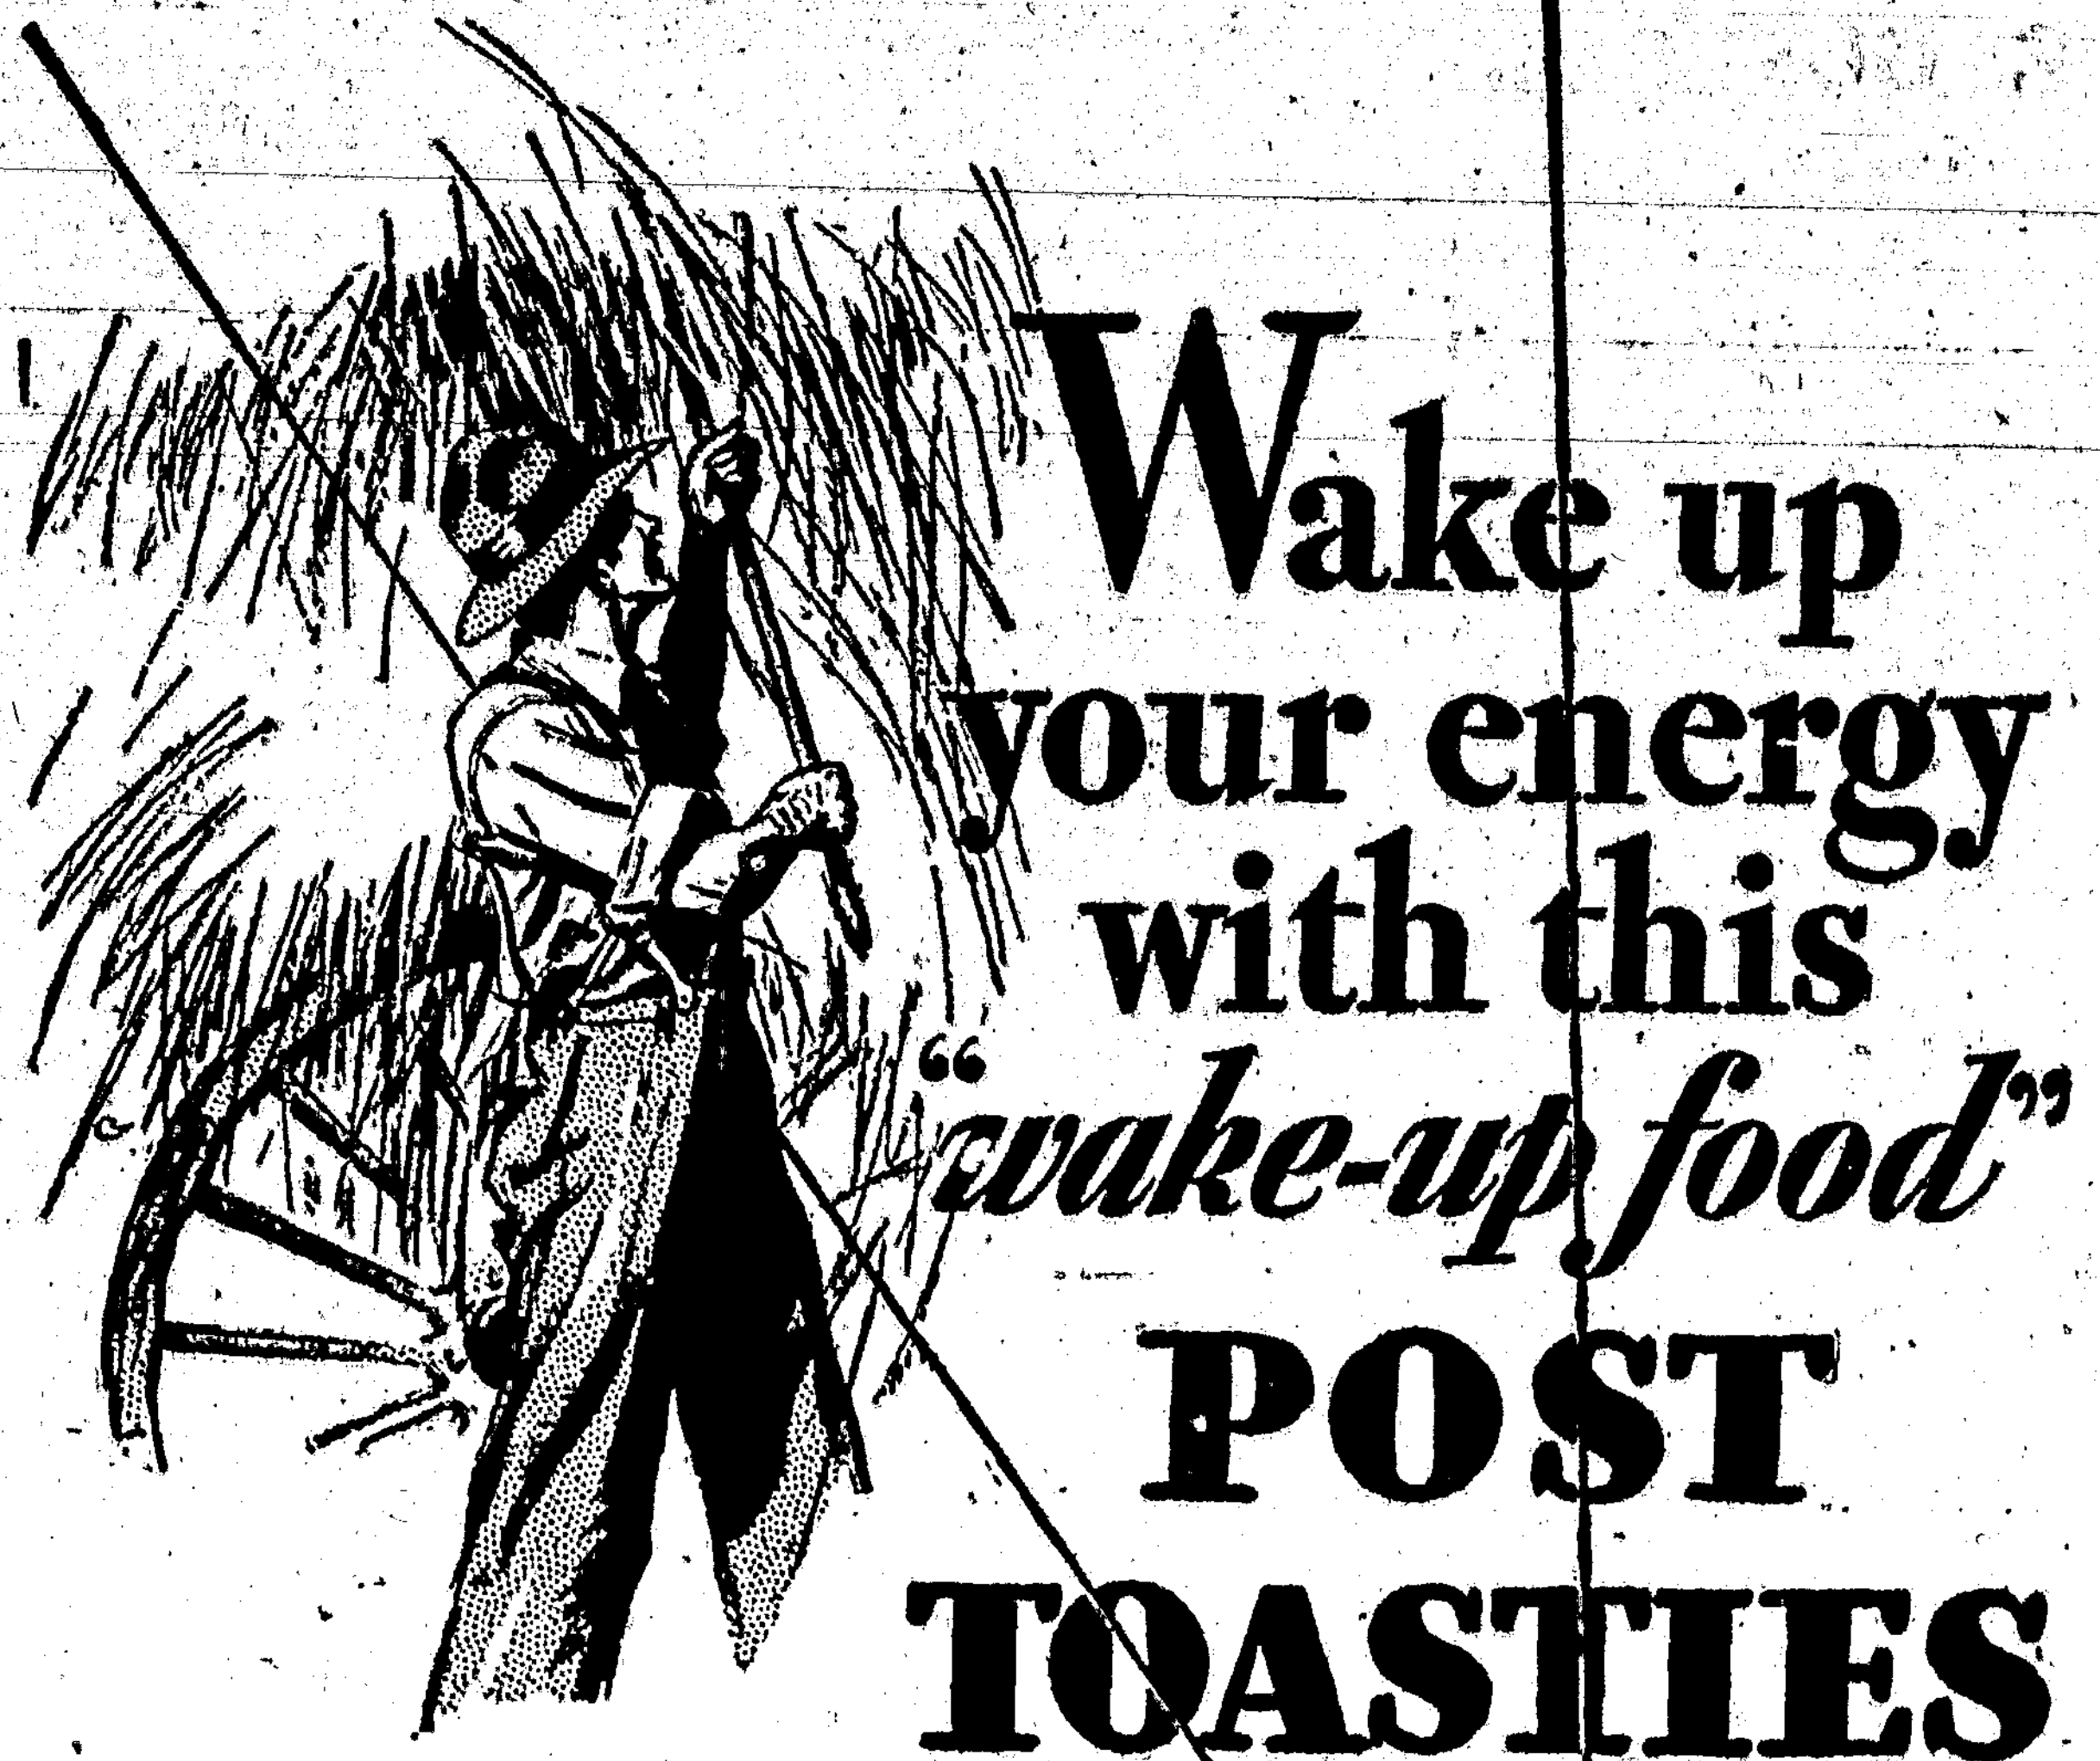

Labor day finds this international union with a gain in membership which I do not believe is exceeded by any other organization in the building trades, taken in proportion to the total number of workers in the industry. It finds us with an average wage of which we are proud, and with a spirit in our ranks that comes as near the old time fighting American trade-union spirit as anything I know of. It finds us with a financial strength which we believe more than equal to any probable demands, and with a mortuary and benefit system which cares for those who are afflicted in a manner comparable to the best in American trade unionism. It finds our ranks almost free from any spirit of disaffection, solidly united in one great army of toil, progress and idealism.

Those are the compactly stated facts which bring to the officers and members of our organization a great sense of satisfaction on this Labor day. It is surely a day worthy of celebration. We have been doing the things which an American trade union is expected to do and organized to do. We have the results which that action is bound always to produce. We have, in the lives and homes of our members the great, living proof of the soundness of American trade union policies and the fundamental rightness of its great philosophy.

I know of no organization that has departed after false gods, seeking the fulfillment of chimerical promises, that has brought down from the clouds the sound, substantial results which we have achieved through sticking to straight American trade unionism. I can do no more than to proclaim on this stock-taking day, this annual Labor day, the gospel of American trade unionism, the most effective instrumentality for the advancement of the rights and interests and of the liberties of the wage-earning masses of our country. We are ever on the march, taking a step at a time, surely, steadily going forward, making life better and richer and freer for ourselves and for those who must take up the burdens after us.—John J. Gleeson, Secretary, Bricklayers, Masons and Plasterers' International Union of America.

In America, Samuel Gompers held that position during his long service with the federation, and Green, who succeeded him, has made the federation's position even stronger. Labor realizes that what it has won has been through an orderly campaign, and it has no use for the insidious forces that would tear down the country's institutions.

It is labor which produces everything—all the riches, all the splendor, all the wealth. Nothing has any value until turned over by the hand of labor. Everything is begun by the hand of labor, and is finished by the hand of labor. Labor has produced all the wealth of the world.—Charles M. Schwab.

Insects Borne by Wind Travel Long Distances

The race is not always to the strong, at least not in the case of insects. This has been determined by the use of an insect trap carried on an airplane operated by the Department of Agriculture. "So far, it seems that the stranger flyers, although influenced by the air current to a certain extent in their directions of travel, are able to confine themselves to comparatively low altitudes and have rather definite control over their directions of travel," says the report. "The weaker flyers, however, are not so successful in offsetting air currents, and apparently many of them are carried absolutely as the wind takes them. Species which never before have been suspected of being wind-borne have been caught at great elevations." As uncomfortable as this may be to the insect, it gives him, as a race, a considerable advantage over his stronger cousins in his fight against the persistent efforts of the government scientists and private farmers to exterminate him.

Sow "Adopted" Skunk

A Duroc sow became the mother of ten fine little porkers on the Coffeyville (Kan.) farm of C. E. Emerick. Some three or four days later a baby skunk wandered into the pen, apparently about lunch time for the pigs. The baby skunk accepted the invitation to stay to lunch, and made its home in the pen for a month, when it was accidentally killed by its foster mother.

Town Flying Fields

Any town in the United States with a population of 5,000 or more can have a flying field, according to the Lehigh Airport Competition. The competition's Program Committee, composed of 24 of the country's outstanding architects, engineers, city planners and aeronautic experts, points out that hundreds of American communities with less than 10,000 population are among the 1,224 towns which already have airports. "With the smaller cities the problem of acquiring land is less acute than in the great congested areas," the Program Committee says. "Suitable land is usually close at hand, and sufficient acreage may be obtained to provide not only for immediate needs but also for those which can reasonably be foreseen in the inevitable growth of flying as an accepted means of high speed traffic."

"The history of the typical American airport is about as follows: The Chamber of Commerce or some other citizen's association get enthusiastic about the idea, hold a meeting and appoints an airport committee. This committee then obtains from the Department of Commerce the general requirements for airports, and it may also seek the advice of local pilots. A site is chosen either because of its cheapness or because of political pressure. Funds are raised by public subscription or through a municipal bond issue, and the field is developed."

In actual fact, an efficient airport is a highly complicated product requiring for its location and construction the specialized knowledge of a technical expert.

All forward-looking towns should have airports in order to handle the high-speed traffic of tomorrow, just as in the past they have built railroad stations, according to a consensus of expert opinion.

F. Trubee Davison, assistant secretary of war for aeronautics, points out the airport will be tomorrow's fortress of national defense, taking the place, in part, of the forts of the last century. In time of war, key airports would be transformed into military units.

Former Postmaster General Harry B. New, who has made an intensive study of aviation, believes no town should be without its flying field. It may be difficult for some communities to see the value of an airport, he says, but if aviation develops to a point of universal usage, like the railroads have, then these towns without airports will be left behind in the march of progress.

Among others who have stressed the value of airports to American communities are William F. McCracken, Jr., assistant secretary of commerce for aviation; Colonel Harry H. Blee, chief of the airways and airports division of the Department of Commerce; and Harry Wiley Corbett, general chairman of the Lehigh Airport Competition and a noted architect.

Mr. Corbett has issued a warning to American communities and a prediction. He has warned that unless intelligent planning is combined with airport construction, the cities and towns of this country may lose millions of dollars through the building of flying fields which will become abandoned sea ports.

Mr. Corbett's prediction is that every airport, however small, will attract sufficient business to make it a profitable enterprise. "Even though it is not on the main transcontinental lines, the small town airport will become a branch line station in a short time and then will justify its construction."

YOUTH--AND THE NEW LEADERSHIP

By CRAIG B. HAZLEWOOD President American Bankers Association

LEADERSHIP is a picturesque word. With it, one pictures Hannibal fighting his way through the passes of the Alps...

Craig B. Hazlewood

It is the onrush of our business life. Our economic progress plunges ahead at a rate unheard of in the history of the nations of the world...

Leadership is not play. Leadership offers countless positions of varying opportunity, of which the highest places will mean almost unbearable responsibility in the new era.

Long and Short Wave Radio Used To Telephone Across the Atlantic

Showing Apparatus Used at Short Wave Receiving Station at Netcong, N. J.

By JOHN B. O'BRIEN IN view of the increasing use of the transoceanic telephone service and the many references constantly being made to long wave and short wave channels, low frequencies and high frequencies, it might be well to inquire just what these terms mean.

When the transatlantic service was opened, a long wave channel was employed. This service has been supplemented during the past year by the inauguration of a short wave channel.

As the name implies, short waves are radio waves which have a shorter wave length than do the long waves. The long wave channel now in use employs waves of 5,000 meters, or about three miles in length.

Short wave and long wave channels do not interfere with one another, as each receiving station selects the particular wave length which it is desired to receive.

each one should follow its predecessor by a very short interval of time. This means that they must be sent out very rapidly, or at a high frequency.

Hence, the term, high frequency waves has come to be used for short waves. In fact, in the high frequency transatlantic circuit they occur at the rate of over 9,000,000 vibrations per second.

Signals from a short-wave transmitting antenna die out rapidly within a few miles and there is a zone several hundred miles or more in diameter around the station, in which few or no signals can be received.

frequency channels have three sets of frequencies. When the entire path between New York and England is in darkness, the frequencies of about 9,000 kilocycles are used in both directions, but when there is sunset in the mid-Atlantic, frequencies of about 13,000 kilocycles are used, and when there is daylight all the way the frequencies employed are of about 18,000 kilocycles.

In the case of high frequency waves the antennas used are small in comparison with the high towers or long lines of poles which are necessary for low frequency transoceanic communication.

The high frequency waves from England are now received at Netcong, N. J., where there are three receiving antennas, one for each frequency that is used.

The result is that the efficiency of high frequency waves is dependent upon conditions at the time when they are sent.

LEGAL INTOLERANCE

Dr. Wm. S. Thayer of Baltimore, president of the American Medical Assn., eloquently denounced the regular personal habits and the curtailment of personal liberties by the government in a speech before the association's convention at Portland, Ore.

It is interesting to get the views of a man like Dr. Thayer, who is a leader in a profession which has a minimum of contacts with courts, laws, politics, and the business of government generally.

Interesting also is the reception given his speech. He was accorded an ovation, the wires inform us, that has had no equal in medical conventions in recent years.

Dr. Thayer said government by the majority is wholesome so long as it is tolerant, and added:

"But there are lengths beyond which a majority may not go. When in a country like ours the national government attempts to legislate for the whole country as to what we may or may not eat or drink, as to how we may dress, as to our religious beliefs or as to what we may or may not read, this is to interfere with rights which are sacred to every English-speaking man.

"As a nation we have of recent years set a rather sorry example in the passage of inconsiderate, ill-considered and intolerant prohibitions and restrictions, some of which may be proper enough in certain localities where they represent the desire of the majority, but which, when applied to the country at large, interfere with the personal liberties of the people.

221,000 CHANGES IN TELEPHONE DIRECTORY

So great has been the recent growth and movement of the most densely populated telephone area in the world, namely New York City, that 221,000 changes in listings were made between the time that the summer directory of 1928 was issued last June and the winter edition in December.

Although lumber is not one of the chief raw materials used in the manufacture of telephone apparatus, the Western Electric Company's Hawthorne works in Chicago uses annually more than 20 million board feet--enough to build more than 2,700 6-room bungalows.

Although it has not kept pace with the growth of other industries in recent years, the dairy industry ranks as one of the most important in the state of Arizona, and one that has remarkable possibilities for profitable expansion, it is indicated by a recent survey made by the Arizona Industrial Congress.

The state highway engineer of New Mexico is now the highest paid official in the state. The salary of W. G. Davidson, state highway engineer, has been increased by the highway commission from $6,000 to $7,500 annually, it was learned when the payroll for the highway department was submitted for payment.

Arizona leads other states of the nation in the national egg laying contest, with a production of 30 per cent in July. Washington was second, with 74.5, and Colorado took third place, with 73.4. Carl Slater's entries from Coolidge lead in the Arizona contest. His hens have produced 1,993 eggs in 373 days. The Arizona contest is being conducted by University of Arizona.

The recent industrial employment survey report, issued by the U. S. employment service of the U. S. Department of Labor, states that the resident labor supply and demand in Arizona and New Mexico were fairly well balanced throughout July. Grain harvesting, cotton cultivation, and other farm work gave employment to many men. Manufacturing establishments, particularly those producing construction equipment, operated steadily. There was an increase in metal mining activity. New metal mine development and construction work under way or soon to start, includes a $3,000,000 construction program at a copper mining plant at Ajo, the installation of a $125,000 electric hoist at Warren, enlargements and improvements at the Douglas smelter plant to cost $1,000,000, and other miscellaneous projects. Some difficulty was experienced in securing skilled metal mine labor. Lumbering activities in the woods and at the mills increased in Flagstaff and McNary districts; several planing mills at Flagstaff operated overtime for a temporary period. The major industries in New Mexico reported normal operations and plants manufacturing building materials slightly increased activities. Canning factories resumed their seasonal runs, absorbing many workers. Grain harvesting was finished the latter part of July; however, cotton picking will probably start some time during August. Metal mining, particularly of copper, continued active, especially in the Silver City district. Coal mining continued on a seasonally curtailed basis. The volume of building and general construction work increased somewhat and many public school buildings and church edifices are under way throughout the state. Preliminary work has been started on the $10,000,000 Middle Rio Grande conservancy project. Other work under way or soon to start, includes the erection of a $200,000 court house and a $110,000 program of water extensions at Silver City and the installation of a $30,000 sewer system extension at Hot Springs. Lumbering activities increased, particularly in the Bernalillo district. A slight shortage of highway construction labor may develop during the next thirty days.

Award of contract for construction of approximately twelve miles of the Douglas-Rodeo highway was made to Skousen brothers of Silver City, N. M., on their low bid of $22,310.87. It is announced in Phoenix by the Arizona State Highway Department.

The Tombstone "Hellorado," a replica of the mining town of the roaring '80s, will be held in that city on Oct. 24, 25 and 26. The celebration will commemorate the fiftieth anniversary of Tombstone. Preparations for a monstrous demonstration have been made.

Point of Comparison

Hard on the Russians

Ronald McPherson, the rich Pittsburgh promoter, said on his return from Russia:

"The Russian government's moral sense is about equal to old Gobsa Goad's sense of etiquette."

"Old Gobsa Goad, the profiteer, was eating dinner in his tapestry-hung dining room when the bishop called for a subscription, you know."

"The bishop came in timidly. The butler and the four footmen in the dining room, awed him."

"Don't let me disturb you, Mr. Goad," he said. "I can call another time."

"No, no," said Gobsa. "Take a chair, do."

"And then he added with a polite society smile:

"You'll excuse me not eatin' this here rich puddin' with my knife, bish—'it's so darn thin and sloppy."

Hindu Festivals

The outstanding Hindu festivals which have a national appeal are the Durga, the Lakshmi and Kali "pujns" in northeast India and their equivalent, and the "Dewali," in the rest of India. The pujas and Dewali take place in October and are celebrated with pomp for several days. Government trade is all but suspended. Business at the bazaars during the few days preceding the puja is very active.

Historic Chapel

Although the present building of St. Bartholomew's hospital in London is comparatively modern, the hospital patients still use the beautiful old Norman chapel, the only part of the ancient hospital that remains. It is one of the earliest Norman churches in existence, the work of Bishop Gundulf, bishop of Rochester from 1077 to 1108.

Yeggs in Hard Luck

Two safe-crackers retained their amateur standing when they attempted to blow a strong box at Oakland, Calif. They did not get into the box. Nothing was missing when company officials checked up, and while one of them was searching for clues, he found a $20 bill one of the yeggs had dropped in the excitement.

For true blue, use Red Cross Ball Blue. Snowy-white clothes will be sure to result. Try it and you will always use it. All good grocers have it.—Adv.

Inevitable

"I hear that young Whippersnap has inherited his father's business. What's he going to do with it?"

"Oh, the usual thing, I suppose. Start in at the top and run it down."—Life.

Thorough

"After my daughter finishes chemistry we propose to give her a course in electrical engineering."

"That will be nice."

"Yes, we want her to be a good cook."

Rich Deposit of Rare Ore

What is declared to be the only known commercial deposit of brucite, a rare mineral that can be used where other magnesium compounds are now employed, has been discovered and opened to some extent near Luning, Nev., says Popular Mechanics Magazine. A prospector accidentally stumbled across the ore and at first had no idea of its character or its value. He had samples analyzed and the findings were that the deposit may yield a fortune for the discoverer.

Anita stood in front of me, catching the lapsels of my rough coat with dainty fragile fingers. She raised her face and let me look into the deep amber eyes. What I saw there made me catch my breath. I put my arms reverently around the slim shoulders, and held her for one brief, delicious instant; while Neville studied his hints and Brugiere looked out the window.

"Senorita mia," I said, "I am not worthy of your smallest thought." "He is not worthy," cried Brugiere; "did you hear, Neville? We will be upon our way." Neville put his great arms around me. "Francisco," he said, "we will walk with thee tomorrow—early." He turned toward La Anita, and, to justify the tears in his eyes, said softly: "Some day I will have to tell his mother."

She stood on tiptoe and kissed him. "Adios," she whispered. We were alone in that gloomy cell, with the agony of parting before us. I took her in my arms. "You did not come to see me in Cuernavaca," I reproached her, softly. "How could I? Had you not spurned me; had you not thrust me aside when I mentioned love to you; did you not say my love were legion, and that I used my love for motives that were questionable? Ah—Dios!"

I had—or rather Madrella had; and it was not in me to try to offer alibi now that her cousin was dead. That cowardly piece of indecision of mine had cost me dear. I could have saved Lezrange, could have prevented the stabbing of Lopez, and avoided my consequent odyssey. "Yet you came to my funeral, senorita."

gions. Tomorrow, which would bring my death was an ungodly thing; the knowledge that she loved me would give me strength. One hour of life with Anita would pay for a thousand deaths.

"Yes?" How exquisite was her face! "He offered to sell me your life?" "Humph!" "But the price he required—" "Ah—my sweet—" "—was more than you would have me pay."

"Ob, God—just for one more day of life, to kill him; just to get my fingers—" "Never mind, Francisco; I think I put a hurt into his soul. When we Spaniards love—or hate—nothing is life as great as that love or that hate. If Colonel Lopez goes through this night without committing some act of fearful folly I do not know the Spanish mind."

"Whatever he does, my sweet, can never take this hour away from me; you have brought a joy into my life that shall live forever; the very angels shall envy me my happiness." She traced, with a dainty forefinger, the deep lines that had come into my face, a mist of tears in her eyes. "How old are you, Francisco?" "Twenty-eight."

"And lines of pain in your face—and the thoughts of deep sorrow, and mental anguish, and hardship, and bitter disappointment. Ah—dear heart, you have suffered!" "In eight months I have lived a thousand years; I have been an old man—and now I have come back to second childhood again." I laughed.

to her. She held her glass of wine with fingers that trembled a little, and she looked at it with a strange mixture of fear and hope and indecision in her eyes.

"You will remember, Francisco, my own, that I have loved you?" "My angel!" "Then—" Her eyes were smiling, and her lip—unconsciously, I believe—formed one word: "Adios!"

Now, even as her dainty mouth touched the glass, I stretched forth a hand swiftly and caught her wrist. Why, I do not know, unless it be that our love was so deep a thing that I could read her thought. A hurt, frightened look came into her eyes. "Please, Francisco," she cried "let me drink."

"No, dear heart." "A Spaniard's love, Francisco, is all there is to life. I cannot live without you. Let me drink—let me drink and hold me; let me feel your arms around me while I die, let me look into your face."

"No, my sweet." She clung to me. "You must, Francisco; the world will die with you; may I not die also?" "This beautiful world holds much for thee, Anita mia; time—" "Time will stop, Francisco, tomorrow. Let us both drink; there is more than sufficient to kill two of us. It is swift and painless. We will drink, Francisco, then you will take me in your arms and we will put our lips together, and so—" "I cannot be so great a coward."

Madrella was dead—dead by my own hands—yet he had prepared the noose for me. I saw Pasqual and his lovely little Dolores, and I wondered if they knew where I had gone. Through all these pictures came and went, like a will-o'-the-wisp, the figure and the face of La Anita, and her amber eyes were fathomless wells of love, and her red lips were smiling, and the slim hands beckoned to me.

And, doubtless because of my fear of the ever-tightening Liberal lines, my dream went back to the emperor, who had loved me, and who—before I had fallen so miserably—had trusted me. He was all alone—standing alone—and the bare encircling hills of Queretaro cut the sky behind him. He faced a squad of dark-faced men with guns, who stood—solemn, silent—awaiting an order. They raised their weapons and I saw the spurling streams of flame. The great figure crumpled, half rose, fell, and lay still. Mon Dieu—they had killed him! I cried out in my agony: "The Emperor—they have killed him! They have—"

The vivid horror of that dream brought me to sudden, startled wakefulness. I lay trembling, thanking God that it had been only a dream. A beam of sunlight, entering the barred window, shone full on my face.

"I got to my feet slowly, and looked around, surprised to find familiar things. The night had gone and with it half the morning, for the sun was high. How quiet was the world; I looked out. The convent of La Cruz was still there, and the bare encircling hills as well.

Had they forgotten me, or were they merely waiting? Was this a scheme of Colonel Lopez; to wait, and wait—letting my hopes run high? It was such a thing as he might do. While I stood, half dazed and wondering, I heard a deep voice and the sound of footsteps in the narrow corridor. Now they were coming, coming to take me out and hang me. What was it Madrella had said? "We tall, long-legged men wiggle a vast deal on the end of a rope." That was it. I waited. Courage—that was all I needed; I would show them how to die! So, with eyes upon the door I waited.

"Quite well, and under nominal guard at La Cruz." Then the emperor had fallen, the Empire had fallen. Ah—the glory and the pity of it all. I dropped beside the table and put my arms upon it and my head upon my arms, and I cried as I had not cried in twenty years. And Anita bent over me, and clasped her loving arms around me.

"Francisco," she said, "I love thee. My brave Francisco, who is so strong—and so weak; so courageous—and so timid; who is so deep and fine—and so simple. Do not you see, dear heart, that this will give you life?"

"But life was a small thing compared to an empire. Now I felt the hand of Eschobedo on my shoulder. He was Anita's uncle, and doubtless loved her very dearly; he could not, therefore, have been devoid of tender feelings toward the man upon whom Anita had bestowed the blessing of her love.

"Does a great, strong, brave man, Francisco," she continued, "cry?" "The greater they are, Anita mia," said Eschobedo, "and the braver and the stronger—the easier they cry. And the fall of an empire, is a thing to cry over; but there should be, in our hearts, some quickening of joy in the birth of a new republic. When one nation dies, another one is born."

I got to my feet and extended a hand toward her uncle. "When I was a soldier of the Empire, General, I played a base trick upon you and General Juarez." He smiled. "A very clever trick indeed, senor; and had it not been for your act of reckless daring in Cuernavaca—and a few tears from the irresistible Anita—your life should have paid for it. As it is I think the new republic has gained a stalwart."

Improved Uniform International Sunday School Lesson

(By Rev. B. B. FURSWATER, D.D., Dean Moody Bible Institute of Chicago.) (C. 1221, Western Newspaper Union.)

Lesson for September 1

THE RETURN OF THE SECOND GROUP OF EXILES TO JERUSALEM

GOLDEN TEXT—The hand of our God is upon all them for good that seek Him. LESSON TEXT—Ezra 7:1-8:36. PRIMARY TOPIC—God's Care on a Journey. JUNIOR TOPIC—God's Care on a Journey. INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—How Prayer Helps. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Prayer and Providence.

I. The Leader—Ezra (7:1-10). 1. Who he was (vv. 1-6). (1) A priest (vv. 1-3). He was from the line which was to stand between God and the people, a descendant of Srahiah, the chief priest who had a lineage back to Aaron. The leader of the first company was Zerubbabel, a sort of military governor. The great need now was for a religious leader, for the people had gone far from God.

(2) A ready scribe (v. 6). He was a teacher of the law of God. A scribe's training began at thirteen years, but he did not enter upon his official duties till thirty years of age, giving him seventeen years of training. 2. His high ambition (vv. 7-10).

(1) He set his heart to seek the law of the Lord (v. 10). He definitely set out with the purpose to know God's word. No one who purposes in his heart to seek the law of the Lord can fail. (2) He set his heart to obey the Lord (v. 10). He was not only concerned with knowing God's word, but obeying it. God's word cannot be known in its fullness by the intellect; it must be experienced. (3) He set his heart to teach in Israel God's statutes and judgments (v. 10). He not only had a love for God's word, but a desire to implant it in the hearts of others.

II. Ezra's Commission (7:11-26). Artaxerxes, the king, gave him a copy of the decree, authorizing him to lead a company back to Jerusalem. This decree empowered him: 1. To collect funds (vv. 15, 16). 2. To levy tribute (vv. 21, 22). 3. To appoint magistrates and judges (v. 23). 4. To execute penalties (v. 26). For this great favor Ezra lifted his heart to God in thanksgiving (vv. 27, 28).

III. The Company Which Returned (8:1-20). The company was comparatively small—only seventeen hundred and fifty-four males, but including women, children and servants there were perhaps six or seven thousand people. IV. Ezra's Prayer and Fasting (8:21-23). The first thing that Ezra did was to seek God's guidance. All Christians, as well as leaders of the people, should seek divine guidance and help in every new undertaking. No success can be realized without His help and blessing. The reason Ezra sought the Lord's help was that as far as possible he desired his mission to be free from human dependence. He did not minimize the dangers attending his journey, but since he had assured the king that the hand of the Lord would be upon all for good who sought Him, he was now ashamed to ask the king for a military escort to protect them from the marauding Arabs. His desire was to prove to the king the reality of God's help, for God's honor among the heathen was at stake. This was a real test of faith, but God was faithful.

V. The Successful Journey (8:24-32). God heard their prayer. The treasurer entrusted to them was great. Perhaps the entire value of money and sacred utensils was about five million dollars. For a small caravan carrying such an amount of money to go through a country infested by robber bands was most perilous, but Ezra knew that God was able and would protect them. Observe: 1. Care and honesty (vv. 24-30). The money was weighed unto them at the start and was to be weighed when turned over to the authorities at Jerusalem. The incentive to honesty and strict accounting of the trust was that they were holy men and were entrusted with that which was holy because it belonged to God. Most exacting care should be exercised in handling the Lord's money. 2. Their safe arrival (vv. 31, 32). Some four and one-half months were required to make the journey. God brought them safely to their destination, thus proving that He is faithful to those who put their trust in Him.

God's Answer Not Always Yes A little girl had been invited to a picnic party. Being a devout little girl, she prayed for fine weather and a happy time. But on the morning of the day the skies were gray and rain fell heavily. Instead of roaming in the fields she stood looking out on a drenched landscape. "You prayed for fine weather, dearie," said her mother, "and God hasn't answered your prayer, has He?" "Oh, yes, He has, mother," came the apt reply, "and He has said 'No.'"

Now They Were Coming, Coming to Take Me Out and Hang Me.

Happiness Had Come to Me at Last, a Happiness Never Dreamed Of in My Life.

CHAPTER XIV A Fallen Empire

I went to the window and looked out. I studied the stars, and wondered which was the star of my luck and what I had done thus to have lost its favor. They seemed so near to me, so very near indeed—the twinkling mantle of the stars and the wide blue arch of heaven—so very near to me.

The graceful outlines of the convent of La Cruz stenciled a pretty picture against the sky. Windows were alight; I wondered which was Maximilian's. I envisioned the vast preparations for tomorrow's night they would leave me—leave my body dangling. Yet I had done no wrong; I had given all my majority to my country; I had committed no crime against the Empire. I had served faithfully, and for that service I now faced the noose. There had never been a need for me to serve, for the extensive De Vigny estate was worth a fortune. Yet, because of my love of service to my country, I was here.

Finally she raised her face, smiling again. "Do you love me, Francisco?" "An, my sweet—there are not words—" "Then—may I drink with thee?" "Assuredly." I filled two glasses and gave her one; and, holding it, she turned toward the window. "Can you see La Cruz from here, Francisco—the great convent where Maximilian has his headquarters?"

Frigidaire Facts

Growing public appreciation of the importance of refrigeration to proper food preservation, is evident in the phenomenal growth of the electric refrigeration industry, as well as the increase per capita consumption of ice, according to F. A. English, local Frigidaire representative.

"Scientific discoveries, bulletins broadcast by the U. S. public health service, U. S. Department of Agriculture and other public agencies, have brought people to the realization that proper food preservation depends upon refrigeration, where lower temperatures are assured. No longer are back porches, window boxes and cellars considered adequate. Make-shift methods are being discarded."

As an example of how the public is turning to modern methods of food preservation, the local Frigidaire representative pointed out that the business done by that company has enjoyed a tremendous increase. Every month of 1929 has shown a substantial increase over the business done in the same month of 1928, he said.

Shipments of household refrigerators from the factories at Dayton, Ohio, during the six months of this year were 112% greater than they were during the first half of 1928.

It was the best half year in the history of the company, he said, and during this period the one millionth unit was manufactured and shipped to the field.

"Much of this business increase was due, of course, to the great popularity of the famous Frigidaire cold control" he said, "but it can be seen that the public has accepted electrical refrigeration as the answer to the centuries-old food preservation problems."
