Ramsay MacDonald, elected head of the British Empire by the Labor party. is here, the first British Prime Minister to visit the United States while in

The Prime Minister is the most powerful man in England. The King, addressing his lords and commoners, says exactly what the Prime Minister tells him to say.

Miss Ishbel MacDonald, here with her father, will seem hopelessly old fashioned to many of our rising female generation.

She does not smoke or drink alcohelic liquors and does not paint or powder her face.

And, most old-fashloned of all, she does look after her father and take a serious interest in public affairs.

If you see Ramsay MacDonald, Laber Prime Minister of Great Britain. you may also see Miss Rosie Rosen. Hers, vivacious, able young woman, the Prime Minister's private secretary. Mine Bosenberg joined the Social-let party in Loudon eleven years ago and has been MacDonald's secretary Mine years.

Observe the difference between "democratic America" and "conserva tive Great Britain." Here, if you join the Socialist party, and talk "that may," you stand a fair chance of be lug locked up. In Britain you may become secretary to the Prime Min-killed themselves. The convicts, at in terrals, had thrown out of an upper window the bodies of guards captured and mardered by them, the warden having on each occasion refused tolet them go free.

Once a prison inmate was a poor and miserable creature, with poor and miserable friends, if any. Some woman, sad-faced, might come to see the man in fall, bringing her child to see him, through the bars. giving him, perhaps, a few cents' wheth of tobacco.

That is all changed in these bootleg days. Convicts have, outside the prison walls, gangster friends that con-trel money unlimited. Convicts can afford to buy privileges, including drugs, eyen at the high prices charged in prison traffic.

That drugs played a part in the Colorado outbreak, with its recklese disregard for death and its suicides, seems probable.

Guarde will learn from the Colorade tragedy to watch their prisoners carefully, and to watch with especial care any grand or other person engaged in the prison drug trade.

Uncle Sam continues to prosper, in apite of increasing expenses. In three months ending September 30 be collected more than one billion dol tars, and $128,969,884 more than he collected in the same three months a year ago. It's a big, rich country, with pos single city spending in a year as much as the United States used to spend before the war.

Bookles whisky, "home brew" and aptonubile accidents are related. Drunken drivers kill many. Everybody knew that.

Now Doctor Norris, chief medical arandoer of New York City, says that drunken walkers" cause accidents for which the automobile industry is blamed.

Ductor Norris arges that reckless walkers be fined and adds. "Iwenty. are per cont of adults burt by automobiles are intericated."

Fellowes falls in love with her. The True Bounty is stopped by the British frigate, Badger, Captain Collishawe. Despite his American citizenship Fellowes is taken aboard the Badger a "pressed" man, Maddened at what he be-Heven is Cara's and Chater's treachery he strikes Collishaws, who orders him a hundred lashes with the "cat."

CHAPTER IV

Tom Grogan and Cuffee Cockroach

In his delirium Fellowes was plagued by a welrd spector—the head of Collishawe on the sinewy torso of Bob Clinch—that brandished a dripping cat over his incerated back. But always as the lashes were about to fall a gigantic black figure intervened, and a soft, crooning voice quieted his frenzied deflance:

"Hush yo'se'f, mara'r, Cuffee hol' yo' han'. Dar, yo' don' need holler-ain't only Cuffee 'n' Tom wid yo'."

Fellowes raised his head as the negro spoke, and his lips parted in a groan. He was lying on his stomach on a pile of hammocks; the yellow glare of a battle-lanthorn, suspended above him, revealed the confined space of the Badger's berth-deck. From his neck to his loins his back was a blaze of agony.

"How long have I been here?" he whispered.

"Dis two night". Yo' hab, much bobbery, mara'r. Yo' holler, an' yo' yell. an' yo' wan' fo' kill him cap'a. Ohe my aunt, yo' plenty sick!"

Fellower moved again, tentatively, to case a stiffness in his legs, and with the stab of pain which, shot through him he felt an olly molature percolating down his flanks.

"What have you got on me?" be asked, between gritted teeth.

"Plenty slush. Dat best fo' yo'. Bob Clinch fotch him from cookee. Yo' go fo' sleep." The negro settled back on his beels. "Sleep mo' better 10' 30'."

"But why do you do this for me?" exclaimed Fellowes.

"Cuffee help yo' fo' dat yo' strike alm cap'n bed face. An' Cuffee t'luk 30' plenty juju fo' take floggin' widout holler. Curee like jo' tine."

"I'm very grateful," said Fellowes weakly. "You-It's the last thing expected. What did you may your name was?"

"Cuffee, mars'r-Cuffee Cockroach. Now yo' go fo' sleep."

The crooning voice hummed a slow, monotonous tune, and despite himself, despite the pain that racked and burned. Fellowes drifted off into a drowsing slumber. When be awakened sunshine was pouring down an open hatch. He turned his head with difficulty, and at once a graff voice spoke beside him.

"Razy all, shipmate. That back's purty tender."

The speaker was the short, bowlegged sailor, of the bristling black beard and mahogany-tanned bide. "There was a negro here," Fellower answered feeebly. "In the oight-" "Culles, messmats. He's on watch -leastways, he's at gun-drill. Ye wouldn't skeercely suspect it, now, would ye, but that nigger's a marter hand with Long Tom? Holystone me, if he ain't the smartest gunner I ever seed."

Clinch rose uncomfortably. "See "ere," he said, "I don't like the way ye talk. The capn', 'e'a fair, but 'e's 'ard. All for discipline. 'e Fellowes experienced a profound pensation of weakness. "It doesn't matter," he mumbled, fighting back the tears of rage that pricked his eyeilds: "But if I live-G-d, how I bate the curl And bert and berl" His voice became a wall. There was a sudden patter of feet on the deck. "What yo' po' fool' do?" Cuffee scolded. "Buckes mars'r, him slick. like ill chile. Yo' wan' fo' make him mo' bobbery?"

And the grooning, monotonous hum of liquid polysyllables fell like an anodyre on Fellowes, aching nerves.

The Long Islander improved steadily. His buck, which, fortunately, he could not see, remained a horrid specfacle; but gradually the shredded flesh commenced to scab over, and, what meant most to him, his nerves eased off from the terrific tension imposed upon them. And now he was morbidly anxious lest the mitigation of his pain should quench the fire of hatred burning in his heart. But he need not have concerned himself. The first time he was assisted to the spardeck, and saw, alout in the sacred precincts aft, Collishawe's straight, trim figure, his eyes were clouded by the same red mist which had blinded him the day he boarded the Badger.

.With nothing else to think of, Feltowes found diversion in whetting the edge of his hatred, scheming plans of vengeance.' And slowly, as his mind became normal, he relinquished the fantastic dreams which had occupied him in his earlier convalescence. No ordinary retribution for him! No blow in the dark, no shot across a smoke-filled deck, no yielding to suicidal hysteria.

They'd stand face to face, aye, ship to ship, when the time came. Watching Collishaws, he discovered the Englishman's heart was bound up in the Badger. Smash her, take her from him, and Collishawe would suffer infinitely more than the pange of death. But to take or trap the Badger Fellowes must first escape from her, and this posed an apparently insoluble problem. He cudgeled his wits over it, and finally called on Tom and Cuffee for advice.

"Mebbe a man can escape when be's ashore," commented Tom: "but how ye goin' to escape anywhere in all this water?"

"There's always a way, if we can find it." Fellower answered doggedly. "We must hope, and keep a watch. And if we do get ashore I'll buy a ship that can run the Badger into her hole in Davy Jones' locker -and you shall be with me."

Cuffee was all smiles. "Yo' hab Long Tom. Mars'r Fellower Oh. my aunt, I most please to deat wid

But Fellowes refused to despair. "Nonzense. Tom." be exclaimed. "You shall be bosun. Think! A sharp, Yankee privateer that'll carry Fellowes remembered the papers Collishawe bad discussed with Cara Inglepin and Chater in the True Bounty's cabin. This could be no trival plot, which was referred direct to the admiral commanding the blockading squadrons, baving previously been indorsed by British authorities across the Atlantic.

Another reason for escape. Here should be a weapon with which to humble the Inglepins and Chater. For he mustn't wasie all bis hatred on Collishawe. No not it was Cara Inglepin who had betrayed him in the first place, And sneaking Saul Chater. If he might only escape! With any luck, he'd see them hung in chains. for the traitors they were.

For several hours the two vessels tossed on the waves, then Collishawe's boat put off from the Shannon, and the frigate scurried away south, while the Badger tacked inshore to resume her patrol.

Dripping wer in his boat-clock, Collishawe climbed the Badger's side as path. His eye lit on Fellowes, and the Long Islander, perceiving it, made a derisive tug at his forelock.

"You are the present man who was dogged?" Collishawe asked abruptly. Within her. (TO BE CONTINUED)

Finding I had strong and far eyesight, he asked me to count the islands I could see round the coast of Teneriffe, and I found that, with Grande Canary, they numbered seven.

He then requested me to look through the telescope and name what I could see on the lalet beyond Palma. And after I had specified a small palm tree, some low-growing trees and a small white but, he showed me the latest map of these islands-which did not include the Island we had

Artistic Bobbing

THE barber shops were the first L bobber shops. The girl's idea was to get a hair cut, to get rid of the old-style switch and be a flapper. With young girls, the net of cropping the mon of hair was not so bad, since a vivacious manner and a sweet face can get glong without woman's crowning glory,

But when women as well as girls sought the shears and the bair began to fall in all directions, what was all right with golden locks was not so good with gray, and something had to be done. The bob must not take away from a woman's beauty, but must leave it as it was, or perhaps improve and enhance it. That has been the problem of the bob.

The proper caper for the hair cutter is to make the hob add to and not subtract from the beauty of the head. The head? Yes, for it was that 'important portion of feminine anatomy which was often lost to view with the old-style colffure. People knew that a woman had something on the ton of her neck and then there was the pretty face, but the sculptured head was not in it with the wig.

When a modern woman decides to let her hair go the way men did when they came out of the woods, she is only like an Oriental dame who slings her well into the discard, if she really does that. Both women feel that they want to move about without any disguises and away go vell and switch, to say nothing of hatpins and hairpins. That's the woman who has sniffed the air of freedom.

A Greek goddess like Venus or Diana looked different from a French or English queen, if we may judge by their pictures, and it's the Grecian type that we are imitating today. This means that there must be form as well as face, the whole head and not merely eyes and lips. 'A woman who is bobbed may look strange for a while, but she doesn't have that top-heavy appearance of the dame of olden days. The bobbed head has the power to suggest that a woman intends to use her head and not merely wear it for adornment. When a girl has trim locks under her closely fitting cap and isn't all decked out like an arbor of trailing arbutus, she's bound to give the impression that she has something under that hat, something more than hair.

Artistic bobbing will bring out the ides that a girl has something more on her mind than a switch and that allo has as many ideas as her mother had pulls.

Time was, you know, when it was only women of the Four Hundred who used the bathing suit costume, and then it was after dark. Time is when any girl can rig herself up in decolicte and turn the office into a ballroom.

Women are naturally expressive. Let's put it that way. So a girl who may not be a cloak model or bathing beauty still wants a chance to reveal what beauty she has, along with the vaccination mark. A woman may concent her mind, but she makes up for this by showing her neck.

I know that the professors who like to figure things out in dollars and cents tell us that lack of sleeves and trains mean that woman wants to economize in dress materials. It was the war, they say, that made 'em economical

But economy was never a girl's malden name. A girl may save a litadroitly as though it was a garden- the on food, especially if she's getting lat hips, but she won't economize on dress. So it isn't economy in woman that makes her make a whole frock out of a scart. It's the elemental.

Makes Wonderful Gift to Chicago

Nearing completion on an island in Lake Michigan near the Field Museum is Chicago's Planetarium, the first in the United States. It is the gift of Max Adler of Chicago to the city to popularize and dramatize astronomy so the layman may get a new vision of the heavens.

Mr. Adler had three ideas in mind when he decided to give three quarters of a million dollars for the Planetarium. They were: First, to further the progress of science; second, to en able people to observe the action of the heavenly bodies as heretofore only astronomers have been - able to do; and third, as he expressed it, to emphasize that all mankind, rich and poor, powerful and weak, as well as nations here and abroad constitute part of one universe and under the great celestial firmament there is no division or cleavage, but rather interdependence a n unity. The building itself will comprise three twelve - sided tiers, built of granite, and surmounted by a gleaming copper dome, 85 feet across. Each side of the structure is to be decorated with bronze placques now being sculptured by Alphonse lanelli, one of the country's fore. tions, private and public. most sculptors. lic official with misconduct in office. The consequences may be very serious. In this case it cannot be seriously disputed that the emanations of the grand jury reflect on the petitioner's integrity. His official conduct in criticized, his motives are impugned, and he is held out as deserving of chastisement and reprobation. Even a grand jury should not attack with impunity the character of a citizen. Many a man of good repute in the world's ear may have his reputation blasted in this manner." The Santa Fe county grand jury report indicates that Mr. Charles Springer and Mr. W. C. Davidson had knowledge of certain alleged offenses committed by the said Frank Quinn and on this ground I am asked to dismiss these officers. No attempt is made in the report to show that Springer and Davidson are guilty of incompetency, neglect of duty or malfeasance in office. The Highway Commission is named by the governor and confirmed by the state senate and the commission selects the highway engineer and has the power to dismiss him if they deem it advisable. To remove any public official upon such suggestion as given in the report under discussion is a serious matter. Removel under any circumstances would reflect discredit upon these officials forever after, and tend to ruin their reputations for all time. It has never to my knowledge, been charged by anyone that Springer or Davidson are incompetent, neglectful of duty or guilty of malfeasance in office; on the contrary they have the reputation far and wide of being the best road builders in the entire southwest. Mr. Davidson is an engineer. To openly discredit and disgrace him by removal from office, without cause, might deprive him of his means of earning a livelihood. Both Messrs. Bravery and Efficiency of Telephone Workers Displayed at the Cleveland Clinic Disaster

ITHIN twenty minutes of the first explosion in the terriblo Cleveland Clinic disacter in May, which took a toll of more than 125 lives, emergency telephone lines had been installed on lighting poles in front of the Clinic building, and it the telephone was ever called upon to serve a humanitarian use, these instruments aurely performed auch a task.

Four such emergency telephones were installed in front of the Clinic building. Three of them were connected to the Clinic private branch exchange board by means of lines run out of the window, and fourth, for the use of the police had been taken over for the emergency.

In order to relieve the strain of the Clinic hospital facilities, nine subscribers' lines were taken over. These were struck through a window and connected with instru ments in the reception room so as to handle outgoing calls. Telophone operators were rushed to the scene in taxicabs, and by the time of their ing the Clinic board to the corridor or the hospital building.

Chairman Legge Makes Plain to Senators His Farm Board Policy.

BY EDWARD W. PICKARD

A LEXANDER LEGGE, chairman of the federal farm board, intends that the money put at the disposal of the board shall be handled "with a reasonable measure of safety," and he doesn't wish his appointment to be confirmed under the mistaken impression that any other policy will be followed. If the senate does not approve of this policy, Mr. Legge is perfectly willing to give up his office and return to his home in Chicago and his private business.

go much, and a lot more to the ermo purpose, the chairman told the senate committee on agriculture which was considering his appointment. The Democratic and radical Republican members of the committee questioned Mr. Legge sharply for many hours and made plain their displeasure because the board in the two months of its existence had not more rapidly organized stabilization corporations and placed at their disposal large funds with which to enhance the prices of farm products. Senators Brookhart of Iowa and Wheeler of Montana were especially vexed by the failure of the farm board to take steps assuring the stabilization of whent prices during the present crop season. Senator Wheeler said that If the board had announced that a stabilization corporation would be prejured to operate the farmers would have held their wheat. Senator Frazier of North Dakota said the farmers of his state had lost from 25 to 40 cents a bushel on wheat because of the failure of the board to take action.

Mr. Leggo explained that stabilization corporations would be organized as rapidly as it is possible to determino that they can operate with a reasonable prospect of success. It is intended, he said, that the grain marketing corporation, which was organized at Chleago conferences, shall act as a stabilization corporation. He explained that steps toward the formation of this corporation were taken within nine days after the board erganized.

Whoeler intimated that the board's loan to the Sun Maid Raisin Growers' association was made for the benefit of a Wall street house that floated the bonds of the Sun Maid Raisin corporation, but Mr. Legge effectively acotched that idea by explaining that the loan prevented the financiers from foreclosing on the company's property. He also took the wind out of the sails of those who sought to attack him personally in the matter of his connection with the International Harvester company by a detailed statement of earnings and market values of that concern's stock and of his financial interest in it.

Bhearer attended the Geneva arms limitation. conference in 1927 all virtually disowned him in their testimony before the senate investigating committee. agreeing in stating that they attached amall importance to his reports and none at all to his claims of influence there. In his final report to his employers Shearer asserted his work in Geneva resulted in the collapse of the conference. He said: "This advance campalen and the accuracy and authentle data released by me automatically made me leader of the unoffcial fight to the extent that the American officials referred the press to me, an they were bound to secrecy, with the result that the attempt to deliver the United States was defeated by a complete expess, which is now acknow edged."

CENATOR HOWRILL of Nebraka W attried up a hornet's neet when In the penate he declared the ligner laws could be enforced in Washington if the President desired it, since he is "all nowerful in the capital" and sould over the district commissioners if they neglected their duty. | Chicago, American representatives on Mr. Hoover responded promptly with a statement that Mr. Howell had impugned the integrity of the district officials, and called on the senator for "definite facts" supporting his charges of prohibition violations in the dis-

Relterating his charges Tuesday, Senator Howell admitted he was unable to give the time and place of violations but said it was "unfair to expect a senator so to do." Senator Brookhart then came to his rescue by telling of a convivial party he said was given in Washington by a New York stock broker in honor of newly elected senators and others some time ago. He declared there was a flask of liquor for each guest, and later be naid he would gladly face a grand jury and tell all about the party, giving the names of those present-which caused considerable niarm. There was indication that this function might be investigated by those who are probing the doings of lobbyists, for, according to Brookhart, there was much discussion of pending railroad legisla-

Mr. Howell, in continuing his attacks, charged as one instance of the follure of local enforcers that the Carlton club, one of the most exclusive night clubs in the capital, has never been raided or closed up, although four dry agents reported witnessing Volstead violations at numerous tables. Later he said he would seek to have Gen. Smedley D. Butfor, commandant of the marine corps hase at Quantico, detailed to Washington for a "clean-up Job." General Butler recently compelled the town authorities of Quantico to enforce the prohibition law by ordering the marines not to enter the town until the speakensies and bootleggers were driven out

His principal reason for asking for freedom, Sinclair declared, was that he had been Julied for jury shadowing—which had not before been prohibited by statute or rule of the court. "Observation of a Jury became contempt of court only when I engaged in it," he declared.

"In effect," Binclair said, "the statement of the attorney general can be summed up to mean that I should remain in jail because I was acquitted of an alleged offense for which he feels I should have been convicted."

L' took a hand in the tariff aght when he issued a statement urging the retention of the flexible tariff, which he asserted is "a protection for the sound progress in our economic system and for the future protection of our farmers and our industries and consumera," He gave at considerable length his reasons for this assertion, taking direct issue with the Democrats and radical Republicans who seek the rapeal of the flexible tariff. Senator Pat Harrison of Mississippi predicted the President would be defeated on this proposition.

L'VERY American was interested in the wedding of Maj. John Coollage, son of former President and Mrs. Coolidge, and Florence Trumbull, daughter of Governor Trumbull of Connecticut. The ceremony took place in the bride's home town, Plainville, Conn., and though the familles tried to make it a simple attain it was attended by a number of distinguished persons and the details were read with avidity throughout the land. The wedding gifts nearly filled one half of the second floor of the Trumbull home and included a big silver bowl and undue incident. Coming back from candiesticks from the foreign envers in Washington, Mr. Coolidge gave "a substantial check" and Mrs. Coolidge presented a solid manageny bedroom sults of colonial design and a check for $200, which she received for her peem, "The Open Deor," Inspired by the fifth anniversary of the death of her other non, Calvin Coolidge, Jr.

the commission that is to set up the bank for international settlements provided for in the Young reparations plan, have sailed for Europe, where they will meet their European colleagues. The effort to put the bank under complete control of the League of Nations falled for the time being in Geneva, but something in that line may come up at later sessions of the league assembly. Since it was specifled by the Young commission that the bank should be dominated by financial and not political interests, Messrs. Reynolds and Traylor did not confer with President Hoover before departing.

D AMBAY MAC DONALD, prime minister of Great Britain, occupying the imperial suite on the liner Berengaria, sniled for the United States for his conference with President Hoover. He is bringing no staff of experts with him because, as he told the English, the technical points of the proposed plan for a five-power naval limitation conference have already been settled and all that is needed is a diplomatic agreement. In the conversations with Mr. Hoover. besides the naval conference, other matters entering into Anglo-American relations will be discussed, one of them possibly being certain changes in the ship liquor treaty negotiated in 1023.

NEW INDUSTRIAL ERA AT HAND

By LIEUT, GOV. HERBERT H. LEHMAN, New York.

PREDICT a new era in industry, when sympathy and understanding between employer and employee will take the place of suspicion and misunderstanding. Unions of the future will resort less and less to strikes and the arbitration muchinery established in the cloak industry will be carried over to other trade unions.

The action of William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, has greatly encouraged me to hope for the future. Mr. Green showed the willingness of labor to regard its relationship to employers as a partnership when he attended the arbitration conferences that resulted in the agreements recently signed by the groups in the cloak-makingindustry.

Employers must work honestly to eliminate sweat shop conditions and to maintain the standards agreed to with the union. They must not abuse the privilege of reorganization granted to them in new contracts by discharging employees for political reasons. They must bend every effort toward strengthening the union.

The union in turn must not raise trifling, nagging questions. It must see to it that the entire industry is organized and that all standards established are maintained. They must co-operate with the enlightened manufacturers, strengthening those who want to play fair.

CRITICS OF CHURCH CONFUSED

By REV. EDWARD L. PEET, New York (Methodist).

It is fashionable to criticize the church. Complaints are made against it from all quarters. Some say the church does nothing; others resent its interference. From another direction comes the charge that the church is without faith. Others say that it is creed-ridden. The disinterested bystander is bewildered by this chaos of criticism, and the friend of the church, noting such inconsistency, properly suspects the critics of confused thinking.

With those who, believing in the way of ethical love, score the church for its average idealism, we heartily sympathize. They are the constructive critics. Others, in assuming to judge the institution, are striking at Christian faith itself. They are suspected. Their motives are not always sincere. They rail at the church for its peace efforts, but who they are really striking at is the teaching of our Lord upon the solidarity of the human family. Or, forgetting the teaching of Christ upon purity of heart, they label the church narrow because the church condemns unwholesome forms of amusements. Let them state their criticism clearly; if Christ offends them let them say so. In all fairness should they not forsake that tolerance which always is given to those who merely criticize the church? Would it not be more sportsmanlike for them to state their case upon an avowed attack upon the ethical doctrine of Christ? Such a declaration would clarify the issue.

SCIENCE MAKING WORLD LAZY

By HAL, S. RAY, Railroad Public Relations Director.

We live in the laziest age of history. Americans are too complacent, too self-satisfied. And it's all caused by modern science and invention. But this same science has made this age the most wonderful of all.

We must get away from this smug, self-satisfied feeling of security. If we are to properly aid our children, then we must make many changes in our private and business lives.

We all hate alarm clocks, and we hate them more and more all the time. Yet everybody needs one. We are learning to think wrongly about work. It has come to the place that we believe the prayer, in which we ask for daily bread, will be filled without effort.

Another factor of laziness, and which at the same time is a modern blessing, is the type of work. Our grandfathers had only a few things they could decide upon for their life's work. But look at today's list. We have almost 15,000 occupations men and women can choose from. And yet we all hate alarm clocks.

AMERICA EXPLOITS PROSPERITY

By PROP. T. E. GREGORY, English Political Economist.

The United States rates her success on the basis of material acquisition—the number of motor cars and radios and shining bath tubs which the possesses. I doubt if these are standards of civilization or of realprosperity.

But they have made Europe very dissatisfied with her position today. She has been poisoned by the talk about American prosperity. If you had not told us how rich you were we would not have asked for war debt cancellation. We are dissatisfied with what we have got.

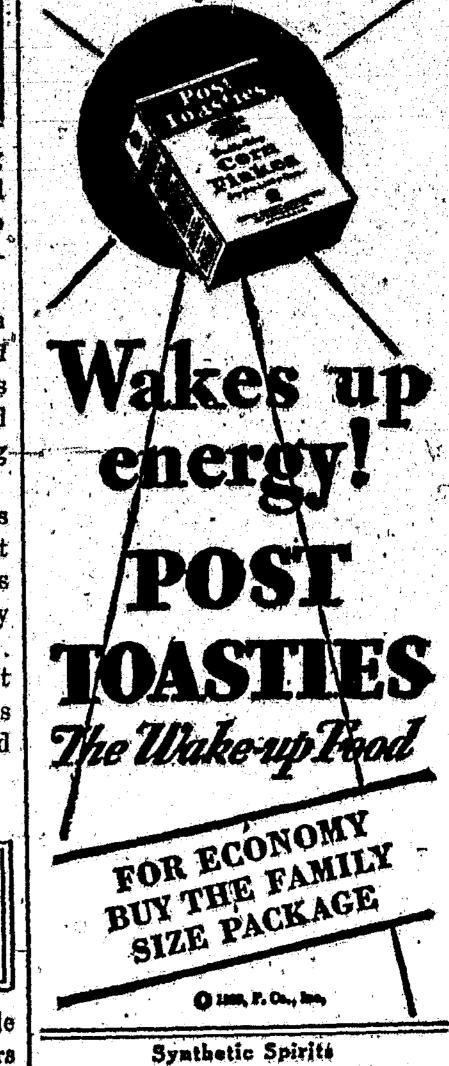

The prosperity which America enjoys today is due to her vast resources and land area, combined with a small density of population as compared to Europe. The topography of the United States, enabling it to build railways at a comparatively low cost, and the lack of trade barriers between any sections of the country are additional factors contributing to America's prosperity. The miracle is not that you are as well off as you are but that you are not better off than you are.

PSYCHOLOGY DESTROYING FAITH

By LIEUT, COL, WALLACE WINCHELL, Salvation Army;

Modern psychologists are filling libraries and seats of learning with philosophies calculated to destroy faith and lead the next generation into outer despair,

· A generation or two ago the alums of New York was the theme that interested the touring parties that came to the great city. The riots and roughhouse fights of the sensual "tough guys" kept everybody talking, When gangaters would start something, throw stones, cut throats, shoot enemies dead, burn orphanages and missions, steal and loot, it made the Bowery more thrilling to the slummers. The slumming of today is not in the vile shambles of the poor and ignorant. It is in the gutterous minds and pens of the so-called "intelligentsis." These highbrows in their roughbones scramble—hurling big words and high-sounding phraseology at each other—are undertaking to rob men of their precious possessions of falth and truth and eternal hope. Blind leaders of the blind, they are.

Valuable "Catch"

A fish story with a time element well worth reeling off is being told at Hillsborough, N. H. Alvin A. Yenton Jr., while trout fishing in the neighboring state of Vermont evidently let his hook, line and sinker drop and drag along the bottom of the stream, for when he hauled in his line there was a shiny watch on it ready to wind and start going.

Dorothy's Mother Proves Claim

Children don't ordinarily take to medicines but here's one that all of them love. Perhaps it shouldn't be called a medicine Jat all. It's more like a rich, concentrated wholesome, sweet to the taste and sweet in your child's little stomach. It builds up and strengthens weak, puny, underweight children, makes them eat heartly, brings the roses back to their cheeks, makes them playful, energetic, full of life. And no billous, headachy, constipated, feverial, fretful baby or child ever failed to respond to the gentle influence of California Fig Syrup on their little bowels." It starts lazy bowels quick, cleans them out thoroughly, tones and strengthens them so they continue to act normally, of their own accord.

Millions of mothers know about California Fig Syrup from experience. A Western mother, Mrs. J. G. Moore, 119 Cliff Ave., San Antonio, Texas, says: "California Fig Syrup is certainly all that's claimed for it. I have proved that with my little Dorbthy. She was a bottle baby and very delicate. Her bowels were weak. I started her on Fig Syrup when she was a few months old and it regulated her, quick. I have used it with her ever since for colds and every little set-back and her wonderful condition tells better than words how it being."

Don't be imposed on, See that the Fig Syrup you buy bears the name, "California" so you'll get the genuine, famous for 50 years.

On their way home his mistress stopped to make a call. Fu-fu stayed in the car.

Some common dogs passed by. They were barking and playing and seemed to be having a very good time. Fu-fu looked at them as if he really sometimes longed to be a real dog and to play as other dogs did.

But of course there was his family to be thought of and his background. He could not disgrace it. He must not try anything different.

He must stay at home, doing noting

Eggs are easily digested; hence, a most wholesome human food,

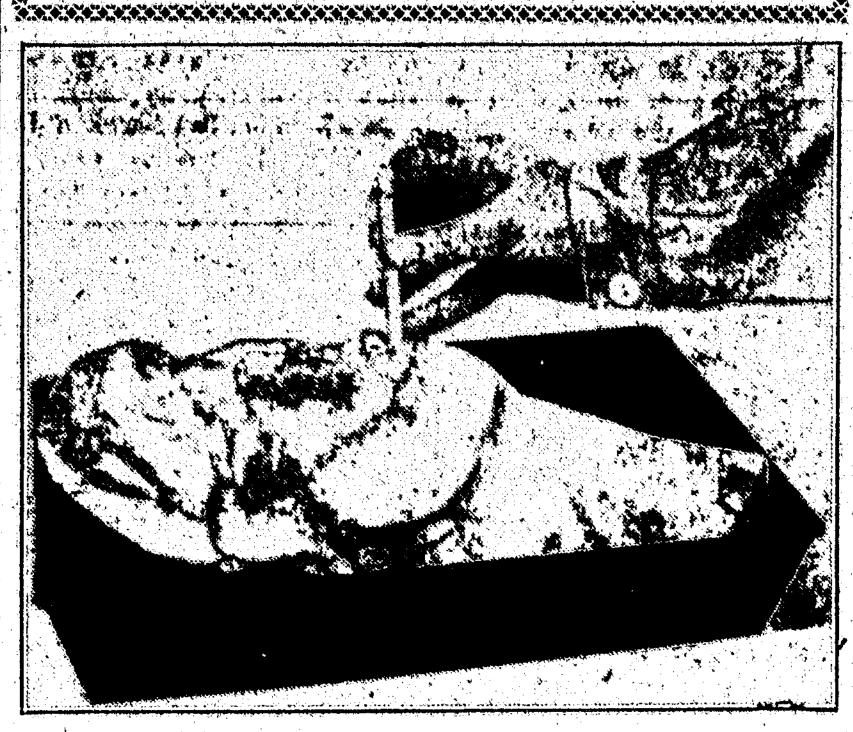

The baby's first shoes should have flat, flexible soles, pliable tops and broad toes.

Serve small enough portions of food to the child so that he can finish the whole amount.

Vitamine E is a necessary ingredient in feed for the assimilation of iron. It is found in lettuce, whole wheat, rolled oats, dried alfalfa, in milk fat, in yellow corn, etc.

Use Thermometer When Roasting

Eliminating Guesswork in Roasting a Leg of Lamb.

(Prepared by the United States Department | portion of the raw meat with a parof Agriculture.)

A roast meat thermometer removes the guesawork from roasting any thick plece of meat to the desired stage of doneness. It can be used with rib or sirioin roasts of beef, veal roast with leg of lamb, or ham. These thermometers, which can be bought for a relatively small price, are marked to indicate when the meat will be rare, medium, or well done. A small cut is first made in the leshlest row knife or a skewer. The thermometer is then thrust into this cut far enough for the bulb to reach the center of the meat. It will show when the meat is cooked to the degree wanted. Whenever a similar cut of meat is cooked in the same way, the results will be the same, hence the housewife can be sure of uniformity whether she does the cooking herself or has some one else do it for her.

The time required to roast ment of any kind depends largely on the temperature of the oven. Very high-temperatures shorten the time of cooking but increase shrinkage and may make the meat overbrown and too dry. In the case of roast leg of lamb, fittle juice is lost and the meat is uniformly cooked at the temperature given in the recipe below from the bureau of home economics, United States Department of Agriculture. It will have a light golden brown crust.

Whatever way lamb is cooked, if it is to be served hot it should be piping hot on hot plates, because the fat hardens as soon as it begins to cool. For an average family select a leg of lamb weighing from four to five pounds, preferably cut so as to include some of the loin. Whe the meat with a damp cloth, sprinkle with salt and pepper, and rub well with flour. Lay the roast skin side down and cut-flesh side up, on a rack in an open pan without water. Insert a roast meat thermometer so that the bulb reaches the center of the thick round of the leg. If the fat covering is very thin, lay several strips of bacon on top. Sear for 30 minutes in a hot oven (about 450 degrees Fahrenhelt).

The picture; however, not so black as one might suppose, for with a late happiness through another man's call for a strikingly colorful blouse is inevitable, which accounts for the gorgeous beaded blouse which animates the black duvetyne long-coat suit in the picture. This blouse should prove an inspiration to a seeker of the "new." It is entirely worked in exceedingly fine black, red and white heads, achieving irregular stripes.

Perhaps the blouse which occurs most frequently with the modish black suit is the one made of eggshell satin. Styling interest focuses to a great extent to the hemline which shows oddly draped and shirred effects, also soft bow ties. The swathed hipline is also observed in many blouse modes.

With the black velvet jacket and skirt, smart afternoon vogue features a sleeveless blouse of supple metal cloth, either plain or brocaded. This fashion is one of the most highlighted themes of the present season. Often color gleams through the gold or allver weave, as for instance in a blue and-sliver brocade or a green and gold plaided design,

While many of the metal blouses are sleeveless the majority of the satin crepe and printed velvet types have long, rather tight-fitting sleeves. Clever side fastenings, gilets and jabots detail most of the new models.

Two novelties in the autumn blousecollections are those of transparent corduroy, also a knitted Shetland woollace type, the latter as filmy and exquisitely delicate as one can conceive. (c) 1929, Wistern Newspaper Union.)
