Employment Problem Congress Comes Back Soul and Body One Quite a Budget

President Hoover's forceful address to nearly 400 industrial leaders in Washington is one for which the country will thank him. It is found to produce results.

There is no cause for any pessimism or permanent discouragement, but the well-informed men know that there has been a sharp increase in unemployment.

We have probably in the United States fully as many unemployed as there are in Britain, where government pays a "dole" enough to live on each week, to those out of work.

We have here 2,000,000 more unemployed than they have in France, where unemployment is practically unknown.

And this is surprising in the richest, most prosperous country on earth. The President is determined to do something about it.

Congress again is in session and a cut of $100,000,000 in the income tax is the program.

That will be welcome news to those that pay income tax, a small percentage of all the people.

But it is just as important news to those that pay no income tax. They all earn money, and any cut in income tax, especially in corporation tax, encourages development, expansion, employment.

A man will work harder for money that the government does not take away from him.

One of the most important institutions in America is the new psychiatric unit of the medical center at Columbia College.

Doctor Butler of Columbia, Doctor Kirby and all promoting that important scientific center, including the New York state authorities, are to be congratulated.

At the dedication Dr. Eugene Bleuler of the University of Zurich explained to a hundred and fifty assembled scientists that acquired characteristics are transmitted through successive generations. Average intelligence increases that.

Professor Bleuler says the body and soul are one.

Billions upon billions of individual cells make up the human body. They give the inhabitants of a great republic, one human being. Each cell has its spark of consciousness, the total being a human mind.

The human body and mind are the two great marvels of our small world.

President Hoover presents to congress a budget of three billion eight hundred and thirty million and a few odd hundred thousand dollars.

It seems a great deal as compared with the days before the war when the government spent one billion in two years and everybody yelled "What extravagance!"

However, thanks to Secretary Mellon, President Coolidge and President Hoover, the amount that we are going to spend next year is a great deal less than we have been spending.

The income tax will be cut $100,000,000, if plans go through.

The President's reassuring expressions on the stock market crash, and especially his energetic and effective action in the assembling of great industrialists and mapping out a prosperity program, call for public gratitude.

Russia, naturally, is annoyed at United States interference in China. The Russians say Uncle Sam is trying to snatch away their victory, and encourage China.

The United States is cleverly put in the position of leading the other nations in what Russia considers meddling interference.

John D. Rockefeller III, grandson of the builder of the name, started to work at 26 Broadway, New York. He was on time.

Twenty-three years old, a big young man, bigger physically than his father, John D. III will have many opportunities in life. He will inherit what is called the world's largest fortune. By the time he gets it, it may not be as big as John D. Ford's and not as big as that of some unknown men today.

But he will surely have enough to carry out any ideas that he may have. Everything depends on the ideas.

That Rainbow Girls' Fish Supper

given last Saturday night at the Wetmore Hall was well patronized and netted the Assembly the sum of about $35.00.

Those that were fortunate enough to attend, were profuse in their praise of the supper and of the courteous service given by the Rainbow Girls. By this means of good service, they've justly earned the name of Royal Entertainers.

Capitan Notes

Mmes. W. B. Payne and Evans gave Mrs. S. E. Greisen a shower at the Buena Vista Saturday evening, Dec. 7. Mrs. Greisen received many lovely gifts.

The Misses Belva Conder and Ruth Lamay entertained their young friends at a party last Friday night, at the Conder home.

Mrs. C. V. Koogler returned home last Friday, after spending the week at Corona visiting her folks.

Several new students have enrolled in the Capitan grade school. Our attendance increases every month.

The Roswell basketball team will play the Fort Stanton boys at the Gym on Friday, Dec. 13.

The Capitan School will give their Christmas program Dec 20.

Mrs. Wm. Ferguson, daughters Mora and Bessie were visitors at Carrizozo last Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. B. Gavi and baby were business visitors at Carrizozo on Monday and Tuesday.

W. B. and Jim Payne were at the county seat last Friday, transacting some business.

A man who understands coal and oil has a patent for burning coal underground in the mine.

Gas extracted from the coal would be piped to the surface and sold.

That is an improvement on blasting and digging coal, hauling it to the surface, loading it on cars, carting it to cities.

Changed into gas, coal travels transported by its own power of expansion.

Standard Oil of New Jersey is making gasoline from coal. Our coal supplies are vast, and the coal industry has been in a bad way. Humankind may bring it back again.

Hard to Get Started

Mrs. T. E. Kelley's Recital

Mrs. T. E. Kelley, teacher of piano in the Carrizozo Schools, will give one of her Piano Recitals at the High School Auditorium next Wednesday evening, Dec. 18, at which recital, her class of pupils will appear. Here will be a chance to enjoy an evening of pleasure for the music-loving public and also to see what can be accomplished with an experienced teacher like Mrs. Kelley and the good results she has had in training our local talent. There will be no admittance fee at the door and Mrs. Kelley extends a cordial invitation to the public to attend. The recital will begin at 8 o'clock.

Ben (Santa Claus) Sanchez

at Ziegler Brothers' big store has the north window decorated in such a manner and with so many good things to tempt the palate that everybody is attracted by its artistic display. There you will find all good things for the holiday season from nuts to candy, to all appetizing things with which to supply the table in the home. This is surely a Santa Claus window and your attention is called to it, so that you may appreciate the artistic manner in which everything is arranged. In the other windows, Mr. Beck has a wonderful display of ladies' wearing apparel and gent's furnishing goods. A look at these attractive windows is enough to convince one of the up-to-date goods of all kinds inside of the store, and besides all this, their prices are exceedingly low for such excellent qualities.

Mesdames

S. E. Barber, Minnie Shields Zimmerman, A. N. Price and Wayne Van Schoyck were down from White Oaks Wednesday.

The "44 Flappers"

given by the Junior Class of the Carrizozo High School, assisted by selected students from other classes, made a big hit at the High School Auditorium last Friday night before a good-sized audience.

Every character was well taken, and it is hoped that the play will be repeated.

C. S. Rockwell

and J. R. Riggins were here Monday from Capitan and reported stock and range in splendid condition in that locality. Mr. Rockwell has fine Hereford stock on his ranch and his sale of calves recently brought a good round price.

Board of County Commissioners

met Monday and continued over until Tuesday before finishing their labors. At Monday night's session, Chairman Earl Rountree tendered his resignation to the Board and the same was rejected by Messrs. Grey and Stover.

The cause of Chairman Rountree's resignation was due to the fact that his ranching interests demands his entire time and while he is interested deeply in the good and welfare of the county, yet the duties of his office takes him away from his ranching interests and in view of that fact, he considered that it would be better to give the reins to someone who could give the duties of the office a greater amount of his time. While other members of the Board fully agreed with the chairman, they would not consent to allow him to resign, in view of his good work during the year about drawing to a close.

A great amount of our people are not acquainted with the duties of the board of commissioners, more especially those of the chairman, who must leave his regular duties no matter where they may be and go on short notice to distant places where his services are demanded in the county's interest. This, Mr. Rountree has done continually and while members were well aware of this fact, they could not, in view of his past good record, agree to have him resign, hence their rejection of the same.

The board in general, has had some stormy voyages during the past year, but they have handled the affairs of the county in a becoming manner and have proven beyond a doubt that they have guarded the interests of all parties concerned in a sound and business like manner, therefore, we commend the board on insisting that the chairman continue in office and with that expression of confidence, he will carry on in the future, as he has in the past. He has made a good official and we are glad the Board has insisted on him remaining.

Attention, Masons!

There will be a Regular Communication of Carrizozo Lodge No. 41, A. F. & A. M., on Saturday night, Dec. 14, for the purpose of business. At this communication, the officers of the lodge for 1930 will be elected, and the Degree of Fellowcraft will be conferred on two candidates.

All Master Masons are cordially invited.

C. F. Grey, W. M., S. F. Miller, Secretary.

ALTO NEWS

Mrs. Warney West arrived home from El Paso, where she has been visiting friends and relatives, and reported a lovely time.

J. B. Hightower is improving rapidly from an operation and will be taken to Alamogordo soon.

There will be a big turkey shoot at Alto Dec. 15. Everybody come and get a big Christmas turkey.

Hart Hale and family spent Sunday with the W. T. Hagee family.

Mr. Morgan has been very ill this week with a bad cold.

Mr. and Mrs. Shayer were Carrizozo visitors Saturday.

The P. T. A. had a meeting Friday evening in which they decided to have a Christmas tree at Alto Saturday, Dec. 21, 1929.

Mrs. Monroe Howard is home from El Paso.

Mrs. C. R. Humphrey was called suddenly to Tularosa several weeks ago because of serious illness of her father, E. C. Slaters. She reports that he is getting along quite nicely.

Mrs. Ufa Felts was up from Tularosa and stayed with her brother, Coffie Humphrey, during the absence of Mrs. Humphrey.

Christmas Goods in Profusion in Carrizozo Stores

Never before has Carrizozo displayed such an attractive line of merchandise for the Christmas shopper.

A visit through the shops and stores reveal a fine discrimination on the part of the buyers, who have achieved wonderfully in selecting holiday gift goods that take the eye.

The average citizen, making the rounds, like this reporter, will find hundreds of items which he would be delighted to own, and more delighted to acquire as a gift.

The variety of merchandise on display in Carrizozo will surprise those who have not already looked over the local offerings. Our merchants have invested thousands of dollars in bringing to our doors a big line of suitable articles. The shoppers of Carrizozo will do themselves an injustice if they fail to look over the stocks on hand.

Many merchants are advertising their Christmas goods in this issue of The Outlook and others will call your attention to their wares next week.

You can easily shop at home if you look through the ads and make up your list.

Prehm's Bargain Store

is visited daily by shoppers who are looking around for good things for the holiday season. Here you will find gifts of all kinds and as for things in the line of necessities, you may be served with equal reliability, accuracy and economy. The candy stand is on the left as you enter the store, Prehm's Bargain Store solicits your patronage. A look at the display windows will show some of the many good things on the inside.

RADIO RUBE'S R-A-M-B-L-I-N-G-S

I hear some funny things in my ramblings over the radio dial every night—for instance, I had been ramblin' up a n'd down the line, when I happened to catch Old Pop Henderson just long enough, to hear him read some of the telegrams he had received that night.

One from Texas said that if Old Man Henderson would come across the state line they had two places where they could keep him. His answer to that was, "If you fellows in Texas have two institutes for the feeble-minded, I can't see how in the name of common sense, you are still at liberty." Another wire came from Ohio that said, "You ought to take a job in a drug store making people Sick." The telegram was signed 'Hoggy Woggly.' The Old Man became very near getting all 'het up' but finally calmed down and replied, "Why in Hell don't you come out like a man and sign your right name to that telegram—it is because you are afraid of what I might say in answer."

Then I rambled on until I heard the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Leopold Stokowski, and the program was so fine and well selected that I was sorry when it drew to a close. The selections from the old Master Composers of the world, the principal ones that day being those of the old French, and those who heard that program certainly were well rewarded.

The beauty of the radio lays in the fact that you may hear the best that can be produced and then, as a diversion from that to something of a comic nature, you need not ramble far without finding it.

The Oklahoma Harmony Boys over KMOX of St. Louis give a weekly program which shifts from the sentimental to that of comedy and they fill every moment of the time in seeking to amuse the radio fans, and they certainly do it.

The Skellodians are a peppy bunch, especially when they put on their imitation of the circus caliope. It makes a fellow think of the times when he was a boy and how he wished he could elude the guard and get in the show under the canvas. While they are performing, if you close your eyes, you can almost smell the sawdust in the ring and occasionally get a whiff of roasted wienies and see the tall glasses of red lemonade.

A committee has been appointed by the government to devise ways and means to have the radio in all schools of the nation and a report from this committee may be expected soon. As an example of what may be accomplished in this direction, radio is being used right now in the schools of Kansas City, Kans. and furnishes the students with information from some of the foremost educators of the country and as to music, a program is put on each week from Walter Damrosch and his New York Symphony Orchestra, of rare merit.

1—Nelson T. Johnson, assistant secretary of state in charge of Far Eastern affairs, who was appointed minister to China to succeed John Van A. MacMurray, 2—Walter F. Frederick of Chevy Chase, Md., with his model for the George Washington Memorial building to be erected in the National Capital, 3—Two-thousand-ton clipper ship, Benjamin F. Packard, that was sold at auction in New York as an item in the art collection of Max Williams—the largest antique ever so sold.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Hoover's Prosperity Program Goes Well—China Asks Russia Be Checked.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD
BUSINESS as usual—and then some. This appears to be assured by the responses made to President Hoover's call and by the programs disclosed in the series of conferences held in Washington at his summons. The last of these conferences with different groups was that with the representatives of public utilities on Wednesday. They were the spokesmen for the electric power and light interests, the gas companies and the street railways, and after having held separate meetings in their respective fields, they went to the National Capital prepared to assure the President that they, like the other groups, were ready and willing to assist in his program for stabilizing business conditions and assuring the continuance of the country's prosperity. They told him their organizations would spend about $1,500,000 in improvement and expansion during 1930.

Mr. Hoover sent a message to the governors of all the states asking that they co-operate by canvassing the state, municipal and county programs and speeding up, so far as possible, public works so as to further employment. The responses were most gratifying, giving assurance of the expenditure with the next year of hundreds of millions for road building and other public improvements. Pennsylvania headed the list of states making definite pledges, announcing that $155,000,000 would be available in 1930 for roads and public buildings and that it would be distributed throughout the state with a view to taking up any employment slack that occurs.

Leaders of farm organizations met with the President Monday, Secretary of Agriculture Hyde and Chairman Leggo of the farm board being present. Mr. Hyde announced that they were in hearty accord with the Hoover program and promised to aid it in every possible way, and he added: "The general opinion expressed was that confidence has been gaining in agriculture and that the morale of agriculture is now better than it has been for years past. Except in short crop areas there has been genuine improvement in agriculture and an increased income, and therefore an increased buying power this year."

RAILROAD executives having announced extensive plans for expansion and improvement; leading industrialists having promised there shall be no reduction in wages, and heads of organized labor having pledged their word that there shall be no demands for increases in pay next year; and numerous associations of manufacturers and merchandisers reporting good conditions in their fields, it would seem that the prospects for continued prosperity are indeed bright. The nation is determined to show that the speculation crash has not done vital damage. Edward N. Hurley, one of Chicago's level-headed business men and a former president of the Illinois Manufacturers' association, put the matter so well that he is worth quoting.

"There is nothing wrong with American business and the outlook for 1930 is most encouraging," Mr. Hurley declared. "We have everything today that we had on September 1 in the way of brains, wealth and earned income. Nothing is gone except some delusions as to the amount of profits which American industries might earn in years to come."

"The deflation of so-called stock values from about $90,000,000,000 on September 1 to some $71,000,000,000 now does not represent the disappearance of the source of material wealth. Ultimately this 'loss' represents a positive gain, because it will insure more and cheaper capital and the industries will be relieved of the pressure to earn extravagant profits which is exercised by a speculative securities market." As a culmination of the President's conferences, some two hundred of the country's leading business men were invited by the Chamber of Commerce of the United States to gather in Washington on December 5. It was announced that Mr. Hoover would open this conference, the result of which was expected to be the formation of a business council for continuing study of business conditions and the co-ordination of activities. A summary of business conditions, published by the federal reserve board, reveals a higher industrial activity during the month of October last than in the same period of 1929, although there was a decline in both industrial production and factory employment as compared with the preceding month.

CHINA'S Nationalist government and the governments of the three eastern provinces of China have appealed to President Hoover, the League of Nations and the powers signatories of the Kellogg pact for action to halt Russia's invasion of Manchuria and to punish the Soviets for the seizure of Chinese cities and the massacres of Chinese citizens. Russia's aggression is termed a deliberate violation of the Kellogg treaty, which both Russia and China signed. The message from the Manchurian provinces was dispatched directly to President Hoover. It cited many definite instances of Russian invasions, raids and massacres, naming places more than 100 miles within the border lines, and added: that if the world tolerates this Russian policy it means "the triumph of Bolshevism and the end of humanity; also the end of the anti-war pact, which certainly is not the intention of the United States and other signatory powers." The appeals from Nanking were equally specific and urgent.

It was said in Washington that there was no indication that the State department would take any immediate action in response to the call from Manchuria. And the officials there were rather at a loss to know what could be done about it, since the Kellogg pact contains no sanctions and depends wholly on public opinion for its effectiveness.

Within the last two weeks the Soviet invaders have made decided advances in both eastern and western Manchuria. Hailar was captured, as were Muling and other important points, and it looked as if the Russians were getting ready to close in on Harbin, from both sides. Chinese troops everywhere were reported to be retreating almost without offering resistance, and thousands of them were made prisoners and disarmed. Those still in the field were described as lacking sufficient food, ammunition and winter clothing.

Japan was excited by the push into Manchuria, for she has many nationalistic residents there. The Japanese ambassador to Moscow, Tokichi Tanaka, told the Soviet government that Japan demanded that full protection be given its citizens in Manchuria, and Russia promised to exercise every care. The military group is very strong in Japan and there is some reason to believe it has been preparing to have the country eventually enter the conflict on the side of China.

ONE more of the great figures of the World war—perhaps the greatest—passed with the death of Georges Clemenceau, who, as premier, guided the destinies of France during the most critical years of the mighty conflict and by his tremendous courage and ability kept his countrymen nerve to their task until victory was achieved. The old giant—he had passed his eighty-eighth year—died in Paris of uremia after many hours of suffering, and the next day the "Father of Victories," as France called him when he was its idol, was laid to rest in a little village of the Vendee with only a dozen to witness the interment. In accordance with his instructions there was no state funeral, nor were there any religious rites, for Clemenceau was an avowed atheist. Premier Tardieu, however, ordered all flags at half staff and the firing of a salute of 101 guns such as was fired on November 11, 1918, in honor of the armistice. And the Sunday following the funeral the World war veterans marched past the tomb of the Unknown Soldier in honor of the Tiger. DEATH last week also claimed Francis Emory Warren, United States senator from Wyoming, who had the distinction of serving longer in the senate than any other man. He was a member of that body for thirty-seven consecutive years. A state funeral for Mr. Warren was held in the senate chamber, with President Hoover and his cabinet, Chief Justice Taft and his associates of the Supreme court, members of the senate and house and the entire diplomatic corps in attendance. The body was then taken to Cheyenne.

Senator Warren's death removes one of the last three survivors of the Civil war who held high office in Washington. Warren served in the Union forces with Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes of the Supreme court. Representative Charles M. Stedman of North Carolina served the Confederacy. Another well known American who passed away was Raymond Hitchcock, actor and musical comedy star, who died suddenly in Los Angeles from a heart attack. He had been in poor health since last May.

Lieut. George T. Cuddihy, one of the best pilots in the navy, was instantly killed when an airplane which he was testing at Washington crashed. Cuddihy, who was thirty-three years old, graduated from the Naval academy in 1917, served in the World war and later entered the aviation branch. He distinguished himself in the Schneider cup and other races, and in 1927 flew over the Andes.

TOKYO correspondents sent over what purported to be the Japanese program for the London naval conference, and it contained the demand for a 10-10-7 ratio in cruiser strength and other auxiliary ships, as well as a reduction in the size of capital ships. It seemed certain the United States would oppose the increase of Japan's ratio in cruisers, but later dispatches from Japan said its delegates had received private instructions to accept considerable less than 70 per cent of the British and American auxiliary navies.

France and Italy were still trying vainly to reach a preliminary agreement on policy in the conference. The principle obstacle is that the Italians insist on complete parity with France in all categories of warships. The French oppose this on the ground that Italy has only Mediterranean interests, while France also requires sea power in the Atlantic and in the English channel. The French also oppose giving Italy parity because of France's widely distributed colonial empire, whereas Italy's possessions are chiefly Tripoli and the area facing the Red sea.

THE text of the trust agreement for the Bank of International Settlements has been made public by a Paris correspondent. The principal provisions relative to the issuance and marketing of bonds are contained in article 12, which provides that the international bank, as trustee, will be guided in matters relative to mobilization of annuities "by the provisions of the" (Young) plan which govern mobilization." The bank also will inform the creditor governments when it seems "practically possible" to proceed with the issuance of bonds.

CREATION of five new cardinals was announced at the Vatican, bringing the membership of the sacred college to 62, of whom 23 are non-Italians. The new list included the Most Rev. Joseph MacRory, archbishop of Armagh; Msgr. Carletta, patriarch of Lisbon; Archbishop Yelder of Paris; Archbishop Lavitrane of Palermo and Archbishop Minoretti of Genoa.

GEN. G. P. SUMNERALL, chief of staff, in his annual report recommends the enactment of a selective service law to operate in war time as the one method of procuring new units for the "far from complete" infantry division of the army. In other respects the report reflects a generally satisfactory condition throughout the army, says the decentralization system is justified, and that increased ration allowances have greatly improved the morale of the troops. ## The Unusual Christmas Gift

by Frances McKusick

IT WAS cold. About six inches of snow had fallen within the last few days. The stores were gay with their glistening decorations and pretty holiday gifts. The pine and spruce trees on the lawns were shining with many colored electric lights. It would be Christmas in a few days. John Clair and Gordon Lawson were sitting before the open fire in the New Haven University club. They were young, good looking and frankly men of leisure.

"I think I shall go to Miami soon," said John Clair, as he filled his pipe. "It's getting cold here now."

"Why don't you stay a while?" asked Gordon, "the season's just started, and there are some very pretty debs this year."

"Women, all you think of is women," said Clair disdainfully. The two men were silent for a few minutes. Then John said: "Oh, by the way, Lawson, what are you giving the ladies for Christmas?"

"Why?"

"Oh—just a matter of my feeble but still functioning curiosity."

"For Caroline—a gorgeous dresser set (she's vain); for Lelah—a rope of pearls (she has an unusually beautiful throat) for Marise—"

"Stop!" interposed Clair. "Why don't you give her something original—a beautiful shoe tree set, for instance?"

"What are you going to give the darlings for Christmas?" demanded Lawson.

"My dear Lawson," he answered condescendingly, "I am going to present a girl with her brother as a gift."

"A brother? Why not a husband?"

"That will come later. Shall I tell you the story?"

"Yes, go ahead—if it gets too tiresome I'll let you know."

"Do you remember when I graduated from Yale?" began Clair; "that was about three years ago, I believe, and a notable year, because it was the last time I ever did any work."

"Aren't you Russian?" she asked.

"Heaven forbid," I replied; "I am a God-fearing American citizen, about to graduate from Yale, and—"

"I beg your pardon," she said coldly, and moved toward the door.

"I am sorry if I have offended you in any way," I apologized. "Won't you at least stay and have breakfast with me?"

"She shook her head, but when she saw how it was snowing outside she reconsidered, and turned around.

"I suppose you deserve an explanation," she said.

"You don't have to tell me a thing if you don't care to," I replied.

"You funny boy; don't you think it is at all strange to find a girl whom you'd never seen before, asleep in your apartment?"

"I don't know—I was just wondering why I ever stopped believing in Santa Claus," I answered.

"The girl laughed, and after that we got along beautifully. While we were eating breakfast she told me all about it. It seems that she was a member of the aristocracy in Russia, not a princess, perhaps, but still of very high rank. Well, she and her brother managed to get along for a time, then one day he left her to go to another town on business, and he never came back. She heard from him once or twice, and he said he was escaping to America, and asked her to follow him. So she did. And she told her story to the New York and Boston newspapers, but she was never able to find any trace of him. Almost penniless, she came to New Haven. She read my story, thought perhaps I was a Russian writing under a pen name, went to the newspaper office, obtained my address, and with a few faint hopes, she came to my apartment.

"Of course the men in the office knew who you were," she said indignantly, "but I suppose they thought it would be a good story for you to find me here."

"God bless the newspaper men," I said fervently. "And I'll help you find your brother—what is your name, by the way?"

"Dounia Petromonoff, but I couldn't think of letting you try to find him," she protested.

"Think nothing of it. I am training to be a detective, and that will be good practice."

"I don't believe it," she laughed, "but you are a dear American, so I think I shall let you."

"How nice of her," interrupted Lawson. "And I suppose you found the brother?"

"Yes, I found him just a few days ago, playing in a cafe in Hartford. It was a sort of Russian resort. So I gave him her address and a little cash. As you have probably concluded, I fell in love with the girl, but I decided I wouldn't ask her to marry me until I had found her brother."

"I understand. You wanted to make her feel indebted to you."

"She is wonderful," he mused, "wonderful."

The two men smoked in silence for a few minutes. Then a boy brought in the afternoon mail. Clair looked through his until he found a small envelope addressed in large, unusual handwriting.

"An invitation to spend Christmas with Dounia and her brother," he exclaimed, as he tore open the letter: "May I come, too?" teased Lawson. Clair read:

"Dear Johnnie:

I want to thank you many, many times for finding Leo. It has made me very happy, and you were so kind to look for him. But I want to ask your forgiveness for deceiving you, for it wasn't my brother whom you were looking for. It was my husband.

"He sends his best regards. We both want you to spend Christmas with us. You will come, won't you, Johnnie? Affectionately,

"DOUNIA."

They Were Young, Good Looking, and Frankly Men of Leisure.

English theme. It was about a Russian Christmas.

"Good Lord," ejaculated Lawson, "you've never been to Russia, man."

"I know, but I took the idea from a book, or magazine or something, and rewrote it. Well, the good-hearted prof. handed it in to one of the papers, and they published it. How realistic that story was you will understand in a few minutes."

"I hope so."

"Christmas eve I was coming home rather late from a party, in fact a series of parties, so it was almost dawn when I let myself in the apartment. And what should I see curled up asleep on the Chesterfield but a girl. She was poorly dressed, and she had a lot of dark hair that had fallen across her face, so I couldn't tell whether or not she was pretty, but I took the chance, and awakened her. She sat up straight and looked at me and smiled. She was beautiful, fine features and that sort of thing. And a figure that would make most of these debs turn green with envy. Well, anyhow she started talking to me in an anglo tongue and all I could do was look amazed.

BY ARTHUR D. HOWDEN SMITH

CHAPTER IX

The Chase Begins

To the considerable amusement of Joshua Inglepin, Fellowes was obliged to rescue Tom and Cuffee from a ring of admiring idlers who crowded the taproom of the Washington hotel to watch the negro twirling horseshoes and breaking bricks in his great hands, and listen to Tom's hair-raising yarus. Cuffee had been so delighted with the admiration he aroused that he forgot his charge to restrict Tom's drinking, with the result that Mr. Grogan was a good bit more than three sheets in the wind.

"D'you want to go with me as ho-sun in the Centurion privateer?" demanded Fellowes.

"Boshun?"

"That's what I said. But I won't have a drunkard piping my fo'e's'le."

Cuffee, who had been humbly apologetic over his dereliction from duty, was unable to confine his enthusiasm at this news.

"Yo' ketch him ship wid Long Tom, Ma'r's Fellowes?" he cried, eyes shining.

"Yes, but her gunner is going to be a man I can depend on. Frankly, I'm at a loss what to do with you two."

"Tush," said the merchant, "we'll send 'em to Christian Bergh. He can rig hammocks for them aboard the brig. Here, Tom, give this line to Mr. Bergh. He'll take care of you. And now, by your leave, Captain, we'll have a bite of dinner, and after wait upon his excellency."

Fellowes' head was jammed with an incoherent stream of thoughts as he walked beside the merchant under the weighted, green boughs of the tulip trees. His mind was concentrated upon the future. He was planning the berthing of one hundred and fifty men, estimating the quantities of powder and shot for great guns and small, the proportion of boarding-pikes to cutlasses, of pistols to muskets, designing special broadside ports for the Long Tom in either bulwark, so that by yawing in sight the Centurion might sting a pursuer to the utmost.

He scarcely heard Joshua Inglepin's conversation; his responses were mechanical. Eating his food, drinking the choice Madeira, it was always the same: Joshua's voice, declaiming positively, his own measured responses, the turgid stream of his thoughts.

They left the house and walked down Broadway. In Bowling Green they were challenged by a picket, but Joshua's name passed them inside the grounds of Government house, and they ascended the wide stairs of the portico among a procession of aides-de-camp and politicians. A short walk, then, and they were ushered into the presence of Governor Tompkins.

The governor was both courteous and interested.

"Captain Fellowes? Ah, yes, to be sure. Knew your father well, sir. A shame he left the legislature, but he was determined for diplomacy. Well, well! And you have been in the enemy's hands? Flogged, b'gad! And there are Federalists who would assure the country that no honest Americans have been pressed and there's not such a tool as the cat in the British fleet! But tell me your story, sir."

He listened keenly, with an occasional interjection, drawing out Joshua's theories, and after his callers had concluded delivered instant judgment.

"Your lawyer friend was in the right, Captain Fellowes. We could never maintain your evidence in judicial proceedings, civil or military. Moreover, 'twould be bad politics to attempt it, for the Federalists would make capital out of our efforts. A prosecution, d'you see? A partisan attack upon a leader of their faction. No, no, 'twouldn't do. 'Twouldn't do at all, sir. But don't think I'm belittling the value of your information. Circumstantially, it bears out evidence we have been accumulating this past twelve-month. The fact is, gentlemen, New England is rotten with intrigue against the national government. There's a move afoot now to summon a convention of delegates of the dissatisfied states to take action to secure a peace. There's open talk of secession."

He was silent for some minutes.

"Joshua, you have the right idea," he decided at last. "This is a matter for private enterprise. But—are you certain you wish to bring your brother to justice? Should the evidence Captain Fellowes seeks come to light, 'twould be a hanging job, my friend."

Joshua Inglepin's features contorted spasmodically, with such a congestion of blood that Fellowes wondered

If he ought to loosen the man's stock. But Joshua waved him away.

"I'm—all right." Passion throbbed in the merchant's voice. "Damm, Governor, who should bring my brother to justice, if not I? Isn't he a reproach to my name?"

"Yet, after all, your brother," the governor reminded him. "And there is the young lady. I fear, gentlemen, if the affair is as black as 'tis painted—"

Joshua Inglepin fairly shouted at Fellowes:

"Well, Captain, what have we to say to that? Shall we shrink from our task because a woman is concerned with it?"

Fellowes looked from one to the other, lilly aloof.

"I have settled that issue with Mr. Inglepin," he said quietly. "Miss Inglepin must take her chance. She is not—" he struggled for the right phrase, anxious neither to overblame nor excuse—"a loyal American, your excellency."

"Forgive me, captain, if I intrude upon your personal affairs," replied the governor. "But let me ask again: are you sure you will not regret your participation? Hatred is a bitter medicine."

"Not so bitter," Joshua spoke up fiercely. "A man hates for the satisfaction of it! There's seat in a right, proper hatred. Take Ben. I hate him because he's disloyal. I hate him because he's my brother. I hate him because he's a Federalist. And I might go on indefinitely at the same rate. If I can live to see Ben ruined, I'll die happy. Happy, by G—d, sir! Eh, Fellowes?"

"I have no expectation of happiness," Fellowes answered wearily. "But we wander from the point of our visit. Your excellency has not said you'll help us."

"By all means in my power," the governor returned promptly. "The Secret Service shall be instructed to protect you, and report every move of these people." He paused. "I suppose you'll wish to have the young lady watched?"

"She must take her chance with the others," Fellowes insisted. "We'll play no favorites, sir."

Joshua Inglepin clipped his arm, savagely peremptory.

"Aye, no favorites, damme," rasped the merchant. "You can't afford 'em when you hate, Fellowes. I know!"

An aide knocked at the door.

"General Scott is arrived from the Niagara frontier, your excellency," he announced.

"Ah," exclaimed the governor. "In that case, I must ask you to excuse me, gentlemen. But be assured of my sympathy in your undertakings." He hesitated. "My sympathy, gentlemen, and my pity," he added earnestly.

Outside on the steps of the portico, Joshua Inglepin clutched Fellowes' arm again.

"Don't heed the governor's twaddle," he urged in his jerky, impatient speech. "He means well, but he doesn't know. How could he? How could anyone, who hasn't learned to hate? Bah! We'll show 'em, Fellowes. We'll show 'em, damme!"

Fellowes experienced a slight inclination to nausea, and asked himself if Joshua's hysterical asseveration wasn't perhaps, a reaction from the same cause. He hated, he hated with his whole being. But there was no satisfaction in it, despite Joshua's claim. It was, on the contrary, rather debasing.

There was much to be done in fitting the Centurion for sea, but the easiest job of all was collecting a crew. Nimrod Sopher, with Paris Eaches, Joe Doak and a dozen more Babylonians posted into town by Jeff Riggle's coach as soon as the news trickled through the pine forests down the South shore, and were all enrolled in the marine guard, and put to assisting Cuffee in mounting the battery and overhauling the small arms. A Marblehead man named Spencer, who had left his home-port in disgust at New England's Federalist proclivities, was accepted as first lieutenant, and a low-voiced Virginian, Henry Breed, qualified as second. For surgeon Fellowes picked a city doctor, Aloysius O'Shaughnessy, red-headed son of a surgeon in Willett's regiment of the old New York Line.

The minor ratings were selected from some five hundred applicants, for the shipping trade was hamstrung, and employment in a fast heavy-armed privateer was infinitely preferable to enlistment in the regular army or militia, notwithstanding bounties and land-warrants freely offered as inducements to recruits. Fellowes took only healthy, seasoned men. When the brig hauled out of her slip, and anchored in the stream, she mustered the choicest crew, mariners said, that ever had sailed from New York.

Fellowes was imperturbably satisfied, and Joshua never tired of his visits of inspection. "I wish to God Ben would make up his mind, and sail," he'd exclaim, scowling over the stumpy hull of the True Bounty, lying a quarter mile nearer Governors Island. "This vastly annoying, this delay."

Fellowes, himself worn by the tension, could only counsel patience.

"We're ready, Mr. Inglepin. The moment he slips his cable, we'll be after him."

And Joshua would sigh gustily, his ruddy features suddenly ugly with the passion that stewed in his soul.

"If we might only seize him when he sails! But doubtless he'd destroy aught damaging to his interest."

"Doubtless," Fellowes agreed curtly. And added as curtly: "And forget not you'll watch for us until I've brought the Badger to action, aye, if it takes a year."

Strangely, Joshua never resented such reminders.

"To be sure, to be sure," he'd assent. "I mustn't be selfish. You have Collishawe to reckon with, too. And you do well to hate thoroughly, captain. You'll never regret it."

So he'd go over to his wherry, piped by Tom and his mates, like an admiral into his barge.

Summer waned into fall and the waterfront speculated freely on the conjunction of circumstances that kept the two Inglepin ships in port. So did Ben and his friends. The Secret Service reports that came to Joshua every few days were full of such passages as this:

"Mr. Inglepin had with him over the Thursday Senator Pickering of Massachusetts. They attended a meeting at the Bank Coffee house in the evening. Higgins, the waiter, says there was a deal of talk of secession, but mostly of the objective of Mr. Joshua Inglepin's new privateer brig. Mr. Benjamin assured the gentlemen he'd give the d—d rascals the slip."

Another time Mr. Daniel Webster, a young, fiery representative in congress from New Hampshire, and Mr. George Herbert were cited as having conducted an animated discussion at Ben's dinner table. "Curse this government," cried Mr. Herbert. "At six days' notice I'd march for Washington, and swear upon the altar not to return until Madison was buried beneath the ruins of the capital." A sentiment which Mr. Webster applauded. "This is no longer a free government," said he. "The Constitution is foully libeled. There is growing up in Washington a fabric of despotism. We must take measures, gentlemen, desperate measures if need be."

Finally, in September, when the fall gales began to blow in earnest, the True Bounty loaded a cargo of barreled flour, salt fish, and sundries, and Ben Inglepin visited the custom house in person and took out clearance papers for Cadiz.

Joshua foamed with rage when he heard this. "The impertinence of it," he fumed. "The d—n teller's been trading with the enemy. Aye, and if the truth be known, he is, now. Cadiz! H—l, Fellowes, there are roads from Cadiz to Wellington's front. Cadiz! Why not Southampton, and be done with it?"

Joshua made a nuisance of himself occasionally, but it was he who fetched the first warning of the True Bounty's sailing.

The day had been overcast with light airs quartering from south to east. Fellowes was sitting at supper in the main cabin, solitary by choice, when a thump sounded overhead, and Joshua pelted through the companionway.

Dire Punishment for Man "Mute of Malice"

"Mute of malice" is a legal term of considerable antiquity, and applies to prisoners who on being arraigned in court refuse to plead. In a recent Dublin case, counsel said that to seek a verdict of this kind nowadays was only an "absurd formality."

But once it was not so. Then penalty was terribly severe. Here is an instance as late as 1740. A highwayman, who pretended to be dumb and refused to plead at Kilkenny assizes, was tried as to whether he was "mute and insatic by the hand of God or willfully so." On being found "mute of malice," he was sentenced to be pressed to death, a decree which was pressed out in the market place.

"As the weights were heaping on the wretched man" (says an account) "he earnestly supplicated to be hanged, but it being beyond the power of the sheriff to deviate from the mode of punishment prescribed in the sentence, even this was an indulgence which could be no longer granted to him."—London Mail.

EDITORIAL COLUMN

Boston Gives Gov. Ritchie the Air

Tremont Temple, famous meeting place in Boston which for many years has been open to public speakers, has been closed to Governor Albert C. Ritchie of Maryland, who was scheduled to speak on Maryland without a State Enforcement Prohibition act, Tuesday night, Dec. 10.

The Liberal Civic League, under whose auspices the Governor was to speak has engaged the Symphony Hall, after being denied the freedom of speaking in the Tremont Temple. It has also become known that Boston Elevated Railway has refused to allow posters advertising the Ritchie speech placed on their trolley cars.

Again: Governor Frank Allen of Massachusetts and Malcolm E. Nichols, Mayor of Boston, have announced that because of previous engagements, it would be impossible to attend a luncheon given in Governor Ritchie's honor, which was given Tuesday night.

To those who believe that Gov. Ritchie was wronged by being denied the freedom of Tremont Temple, let them consider that the subject which the Governor spoke on and the object of such a speech, was to encourage the violation of the prohibition act which is a part of the constitution and it was because of the fact that the Tremont Temple, where the greatest statesmen of the country and the most ardent upholders of our constitution, have swayed waiting masses of people with speeches of loyalty and patriotism, saw to it that a speech in defiance of the law of the land, could not be delivered within its doors.

A private opinion concerning things of this nature is one thing, but law is quite another. We may believe or not believe in the National prohibition act, but the fact remains nevertheless, that it is law and the above instance serves to prove that the people are losing interest in attacks on the constitution, such as the Maryland Governor is making over the east. Admitting the right of his state to be without a prohibition law, does not license his state to violate a law of the nation. When public men, such as Governors, Mayors of cities and organization in a place like Boston, will ignore and condemn such things as Governor Ritchie is advocating in defiance of law, it means much to the people as a whole, as an example for others to follow. If the country is tired of prohibition, it will do away with it; but facts do not prove such to be the case and Boston comes to the front boldly and fearlessly in defense of the National law and says by its action, that Tremont Temple, famed for the habitation of patriots, cannot be used for speeches in defiance of our laws. Score one more for Boston.

Study Bacteria to Find Causes of Food Decay

Bacteria, molds and yeasts went unobserved for many years before the first crude microscopes interrupted their privacy. Now their every move is watched, their habits are studied, they are even photographed.

These three classes of infinitesimal organisms are at the bottom of all food spoilage, scientists have found. Whenever a piece of improperly preserved meat has a disagreeable odor; whenever an apple gathers a velvety fuzz or a pint of milk sours, the responsibility is theirs.

To find means of arresting activities of these destroyers Frigidaire Corporation maintains an extensive biological laboratory at Dayton, Ohio. P. K. Bates, Ph. D., in charge, has been working for years to determine best methods of preserving food. In this work he has had the cooperation of Prof. S. C. Prescott, Sc. D., head of the Department of Biology and Public Health, Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Equipped with a knowledge of average household refrigeration gained from a survey of many kitchens, Dr. Bates has conducted thousands of tests, watching the rapid growth of bacteria at temperatures higher than 50 degrees and seeing them become dormant at lower temperatures. He has proved that damp and poorly circulating air in a refrigerator is conducive to the rapid growth of mold while dry cold, with air properly circulating, retards such growth. He has watched food properly refrigerated remain fresh and eatable for many days while a similar quantity under inadequate refrigeration is soon ruined by the hungry molds, yeast and bacteria.

RED CROSS EXPENDS EIGHT MILLIONS FOR RELIEF IN DISASTER

Year Just Closed Put Heavy Task on Society—120 Calls for Help Were Met.

An unusually large number of disasters in the United States and its insular possessions have required assistance from the American Red Cross during the year just closed. The organization sent emergency relief workers to the scenes of 120 tornadoes, floods, fires and other types of catastrophes and expended $8,020,000 in relief and rehabilitation of the victims.

Calls for aid came from eleven other nations in which earthquakes, floods and other problems caused distress to large populations, and the Red Cross sent $76,300 to help in relieving the suffering.

The catastrophe causing the greatest loss of life and most widespread devastation was the West India hurricane of September, 1928, in which more than 2,000 lives were lost in Florida, Porto Rico and the Virgin Islands. A relief fund of $5,883,725.62 was contributed by the public, following a proclamation by the President of the United States, to which the Red Cross added $50,000 from its own treasury, and the society was enabled to give relief to more than 700,000 persons.

In the early Spring, river floods in the southeastern states cost a heavy loss to many persons. 76,000 inhabitants being affected in four states. The Red Cross assisted 4,383 families, approximately 23,000 persons, with food, clothing, temporary housing, feed for stock and seed for replanting.

In all, thirty-eight states were visited by calamities during the year, affecting 364 counties. Twenty-eight counties were devastated twice by storms, fires and floods.

Red Cross expended $434,000 from its treasury in giving relief in these disasters, and at one time had as many as 120 disaster relief workers, nurses and other representatives in the field.

Funds for this relief work are obtained in the annual roll call for members, which occurs from Armistice Day to Thanksgiving Day, November 11 to 23. Only once a year—during this period of Roll Call—does the Red Cross ask public support to carry on its many activities.

PEACHES AND PEARS

Before starting to can peaches or any other fruit, collect and examine equipment and put it in good order. Have a liberal supply of new rubbers, test and fit jars and lids. A sure method of testing is to put water in to the jar, put on rubber, fasten the lid tight and invert. If the jar leaks, try another lid. Discard all defective lids and jars to avoid further trouble. Regulate balls for glass top jars by removing from jars and tightening or loosening them by bending to fit.

Grace Viall Gray. With everything in readiness, you are now ready to can the peaches. Select peaches which are ripe but not soft. Before preparing fruit, make thin syrup, or richer if desired, allowing one cup for each quart jar. Add one cracked peach pit for each quart of syrup, boil five minutes and strain.

Immerse peaches about one minute in boiling water or until skins will slip easily, plunge at once into cold water, peel and stone. Pack in jars at once, placing the halves in overlapping layers, concave sides down with blossom end facing glass. Fill containers with syrup. Process quart jars for 10 minutes at 5 lbs. pressure, pint jars for 6 minutes, Process No. 2 and No. 8 tin cans for 10 minutes at 5 lbs. pressure. Never use more than 5 lbs. pressure for peaches and all other fruits and berries.

Pears may be canned whole or cut in halves. Peel and remove core if cut in halves. When packed whole, leave stems on. Cook from 5 to 10 minutes, according to size, in a medium syrup until barely flexible. This pre-cooking is necessary in order to make a full pack. When packed whole, if pears are small, place in layers, stems up; let the second row fill the spaces between the two stems. Add the hot syrup as the layers are built up. Process 3 minutes at 5 lbs. pressure.

Many people think the pear is rather bland in flavor so they add additional flavor, as lemon or ginger, to the syrup. Then add a slice of lemon or a small piece of ginger root when packing the jar.

The Kieffer, the Pineapple and the La Conte pears are desirable for canning.

When canning a larger quantity of pears, they are apt to turn brown very rapidly when exposed to air. This can be avoided by placing the fruit in a dilute salt brine (2 tablespoons salt to 1 gallon water). A good, medium syrup for pears is made by boiling together one quart of sugar with two quarts of water.

If pears are canned in tin plunges immediately into cold water and cool as quickly as possible, otherwise fruit may turn pink in color.

OFFER $5,000 IN PRIZES IN NATIONAL CANNING CONTEST

To win off a threatened surplus of farm products in many sections and to improve more homesteads with the economy and healthfulness of home canned foods, a National Canning Contest is now under way to find the best jar of canned fruit, vegetables and meat in the country. Two hundred and twenty-two cash prizes totaling $5,000 have been being up by the National Agricultural Foundation, including a grand sweepstakes prize of $1,250 for the best jar of canned food entered by the contest. Any woman or girl is eligible to enter the contest, but entries must be received later than October 1, 1929. Further information on the contest and free jar and entry blanks for sending in entries may be had by writing to Anne Williams, Director, National Canning Contest, 925 S. Hoxton Avenue, Chicago, Ill.

LAWS AND PUBLIC UTILITIES

By JOSEPH W. JAMISON, American Bar Association.

IF PUBLIC utilities of America, with combined investments totaling $5,000,000,000 and a daily need for $7,000,000 new capital, continue to function, neither congress nor any state legislature can dictate to them what their percentage of profits shall be. The economic aspect of this situation is controlling in importance. It is a direct and positive limitation upon the powers of congress or the states to fix the return which shall be earned by public utilities. The limitations upon the power of regulatory bodies to fix this rate demonstrates the wisdom of the policy of the states in the enactment of their commission laws.

But it is both possible and practicable to fix and approve the rates which will do justice to both the investor and the consumer. No congress, of course, could tell the utilities exactly what percentage they could earn on a given investment, as they could, of course, refuse to put their money into it. The only reasonable and just control that possibly could be exercised is that of fixing the rates themselves.

It does not require any elaborate procedure to enable the management of a public utility to determine whether a rate adjustment should be made or not. If, in the administration of the law, carriers are afforded a return which will place them on a parity with other comparative investments, then there will be no interference with the operation of the economic law which has been under discussion. On the other hand, if the operation of this law is so administered as to deny this parity to the investors in railroad or other securities, they will withdraw their investments and this will eventually compel the recognition of the economic law. The alternative would be restriction and deterioration in the railroad service entailing a loss to which the public would not submit.

RURAL SCHOOL PROBLEMS

By MISS HELEN HEFFERNAN, California Department of Education.

Gone forever are the dunce cap, the roller towel, the birch rod, the recitation bench, the tin dipper, and the common water bucket that once were indispensable adjuncts of the old-time little red schoolhouse. Today the little red schoolhouse itself is fast following them into oblivion. The magnitude of the rural school problem at the present time is not generally appreciated. When we speak of the country school, we mean 87 per cent of America's elementary school enrollment. When we speak of the country school teacher, we mean 64 per cent of the elementary teachers of the nation. And when we speak of the country school, we mean 91 per cent of the elementary schools.

In my state we are developing state rural demonstration schools to serve as standards for a better type of rural school. We are training teachers to take the general materials of education and shape them to the condition of the rural school.

The greatest function of the new teacher is to develop an environment—simple, natural and beautiful, in which there is an informal atmosphere of happy living. The new school is child-centered rather than teacher-centered. In the old school it was the teacher who was active, planning, inventing, organizing, talking. The reorientation of the school around the child naturally leads to the acceptance of the necessity for child interest and activity.

UNIVERSITIES FACE PROBLEM

By ROBERT MAYNARD HUTCHINS, President Chicago University.

More money for faculty members to make education respectable and to enable universities to compete with business for the nation's best minds is the greatest need of American higher education. The money is needed to strengthen three key point universities, to be pacemakers for all the others.

In the last twenty-five years the best minds of America have been drawn to business, hence American education faces a new problem in competition—competition with big business for the best men.

If you spread $100,000,000 over all the worthy colleges in the land you might increase each professor's salary as much as $134. You might as well throw the money in the lake. But spend it on the key institutions and you will develop pacemakers that will revitalize American education.

I would have the three key universities located one in the East, one in the Central West and one on the Pacific coast. The amounts which universities are spending on building projects and on their facilities are shockingly disproportionate. In the last ten years the University of Chicago has received $53,000,000 and only $7,000,000 went to a faculty composed of 772 men and women.

MARKED SPREAD OF ATHEISM

By REV. WILLIAM M. WOODFIN, Pittsburgh.

Eighty-five per cent of the resident students at the University of Pittsburgh and Carnegie Institute of Technology either do not attend church or attend only occasionally, because of insufficient home training, "heavy dates" on Saturday nights or the failure of ministers to reconcile religion with the science the students are taught. College men and women throughout the country are abandoning religion.

Why not let us say right out from the pulpit that the truth of religion can never conflict with the truth of science? If we pastors had the courage to run the risk of being called modernists by people whose thinking is in terms of medievalism, we might save many of our young people from mental torture, loss of faith and ultimate atheism.

EXPANSION NOT PROGRESS

By REV. GEORGE A. BUTTRICK, New York (Presbyterian).

The go-getter spirit of the modern American city and village mistakes industrial expansion for progress. I have particularly in mind those cities seeking populations of millions as their only goal and villages willing to see their landscapes disfigured by factory smoke stacks.

After the present fever of expansion has abated, the realization will come that this civilization is no more enduring than any other. The question will arise then whether skyscrapers and factories, railroads and airplanes are worth the price of a deviled soul and a shell-shocked spirit.

The CHRISTMAS LIST 1929

The Sammy Christmas Corporation.
by William L. Gaston.

Sammy lived in the trough. The trough was a low flat lying between two hills in the river section of a big city. The houses were old and unpainted. Poverty of all grades had huddled in the trough for the last half-century. Christmas came regularly to the homes on the higher ground, but in the trough all days were alike.

Sammy was errand boy in a downtown office, and it required all of his $12 per week to pay the rent for two small rooms and buy plain food for his invalid mother, himself and two little sisters. The clerks in the office were beginning to talk about Christmas. Sammy had never seen but one Christmas tree but he believed in Santa Claus. He wanted a Christmas for his mother and sisters, but Christmas was not for the poor. He tried to imagine what it would be like if Santa Claus came to the trough and brought Christmas to everybody.

To Mr. Munson, a kindly young clerk in the office, he confided his wish for a Christmas in the trough. "Why don't you organize a Christmas corporation and put on a Christmas of your own?" responded Mr. Munson. He went on to explain a co-operative company could be organized and shares sold and a Christmas given to the trough with the money. You could be president. I will buy a few shares. And I know a rich lady, a Mrs. Bennett, who will be here this afternoon, and I will ask her to be general manager of your corporation.

The young man went to his desk, took out a corporation blank and filled it out in regular form for a co-operative corporation. He gave it the name of "The Sammy Christmas Corporation" and fixed the capital stock at $2,000, to be subscribed at $1 per share. Sammy was named as president, and Mr. Munson one of the directors.

Mrs. Bennett came during the afternoon, and after she had talked a few moments to Mr. Munson, Sammy was called over to the clerk's desk. Mr. Munson explained the proposition and all the details. Sammy was in the seventh heaven of delight when Mrs. Bennett consented to become manager and subscribed for fifty shares of stock. Mrs. Bennett said she knew the superintendent of the Mission Sunday school in the trough and she would ask her to take charge of the tree. Sammy told her about his home, his mother and little sisters, and something about the children in the trough.

Two newspaper reporters came in and were told about the corporation and the proposed Christmas for the poor. Cameras clicked, and in the morning papers big headlines told the story. There was a picture of President Sammy. The article played up the story of poverty and made a plea for help. It told what was needed to make the tree a success, and pointed out that the name of Mrs. Bennett guaranteed the integrity of the corporation.

Sammy's employer called him into the private office and asked about the trough, about his corporation and his own family. He also subscribed for twenty-five shares in the corporation. The mails commenced bringing letters with checks for shares. President Sammy became popular in the office.

A survey of the trough population was made and appeals were made in the big papers. The uptown merchants sent donations of candy and nuts. Great quantities of toys were sent by charitable people and merchants. With the cash contributed the mission worker bought shoes and warm stockings, suits for boys, dresses for girls, and there was food, also orders for coal for the sick and the widows who lived there with families.

A tree was put up in a great vacant room and everybody in the trough turned out. The place had never seen such a Christmas before. There was candy and toys, besides clothing, for all the children. Nobody was forgotten. The old people were made happy. Little gifts were sent to the homes of those who were sick and not able to be present.

President Sammy was the happiest of them all. His mother was there in a new wheel chair, his little sisters received new dresses, toys and dolls. Somebody put a suit of clothes and a warm overcoat on the tree for the president of the Sammy Christmas corporation. Addressed to Sammy was a card from his employer wishing him a Merry Christmas and saying that his salary had been raised $5 per week.

For COLDS

We all catch colds and they can make us miserable; but yours needn't last long if you will do this: Take two or three tablets of Bayer Aspirin just as soon as possible after a cold starts. Stay in the house if you can—keep warm. Repeat with another tablet or two of Bayer Aspirin every three or four hours, if those symptoms of cold persist. Take a good laxative when you retire, and keep bowels open. If throat is sore, dissolve three tablets in a quarter-glassful of water and gargle. This soothes inflammation and reduces infection. There is nothing like Bayer Aspirin for a cold, or sore throat. And it relieves aches and pains almost instantly. The genuine tablets, marked Bayer, are absolutely harmless to the heart.

High School Notes
Hi School Pupils—

Carrizozo and Mountainair basketball teams met at Mountainair last Saturday night, Dec. 7. Mountainair teams proved to be the fastest Carrizozo had met this season. The girls started out with a line-up as follows: Centers, Jessie Pearl Rustin, jump and Georgie Rustin running; Forwards, Margie Rolland and Evelyn Grumbles; Guards, Mary Romero and Dozier. At this time, Evelyn went to center and Georgia to forward, after the end of the first quarter when the score stood 8 to 8. At the end of the first half the score was 10-12 in favor of Carrizozo.

At the end of the third quarter, Mary Romero was injured and was replaced with Katherine Kelt. This put Katherine three minutes before the expiration of the game and Georgia was ruled out on fouls. Neither Mary or Julia Romero being able to play, left us without substitutes, so we played out that three-minute period with one forward. During the above mentioned period, Carrizozo made two points and Mountainair, a goose egg, closing the game with the score, 29 to 16.

The boys entered their game with the usual line-up, having for substitutes Virgil Peters and Hazen Davis. The game started fast, our boys being handicapped by the small court and low ceiling. Mose Lewis fouled out during the first half. Hazen Davis filled the vacancy. Florentino was playing an unusually fast game but the fouls counted him out during the 4th quarter. Peters took his place. All the boys played a good game and Mountainair was lucky in a score of 20-13 in their favor at the end of the game.

The teams left for home Sunday morning, coming by Gran Quivira to see the old ruins. The Federal guide was present and showed them about and explained many things of interest.

The Carrizozo teams will meet Capitan on the home court this Saturday at 7:30 p. m. If these games are half as interesting and fast as the ones at Mountainair you will be fully repaid for the time and money spent in seeing them.

The teams feel that these games will be even more interesting as the Capitan teams are rivals of old standing.

Season tickets are now on sale by the basketball students at 75 cents and $1.00. All school pupils may use the 75c ticket.

Notice

Be it resolved by the Board of County Commissioners of Lincoln County in session this 10th day of December, 1929, at the County Courthouse in Carrizozo, New Mexico:

That it is found that the boundary lines and records of the various precincts in Lincoln County are not complete or correct.

Therefore, the Board of County Commissioners of Lincoln County are going to re-district the precincts in Lincoln County at their regular meeting to be held on Monday, January 6, 1930, and pass a resolution fixing same. Any persons interested in the changing of precinct boundary lines may appear at said above set forth meeting.
