WILL MARK HISTORIC SPOTS OF LINCOLN COUNTY WAR

The Alamogordo correspondent to the Associated Press recently sent out the following which contained a few more morsels of "Billy the Kid," dope, evidently relished by the general public...

TWO AND HALF BILLIONS OF DOLLARS PLANNED FOR HIGHWAYS IN 1930

Washington, D. C., Dec. 9.—With every indication that Congress will increase Federal Aid appropriations to stimulate road-building throughout the country, expenditures for highway and street construction and maintenance in 1930 will exceed two and a half billion dollars and furnish employment to 625,000 people...

This statement was issued today by Chas. E. Henry, president of the American Automobile Association, who pointed out the tremendous influence his vast program will have in justifying the billions of dollars to be spent in other channels next year...

Mr. Henry's estimate of road and street expenditures for 1930 is based on a survey of expenditures for 1928 and 1929, and reports from affiliated A. A. A. motor clubs and highway authorities throughout the country...

"The nation's highway bill, in 1928," he said, "totalled $1,850,000,000, and preliminary estimates for 1929 place the amount at well over $1,800,000,000. An additional $50,000,000 in Federal Aid appropriations, to be matched with a similar amount by the states, together with the speeding up of construction generally as pledged to President Hoover by state executives, will easily mean an increase of $200,000,000 in road expenditures next year."

"To this must be added approximately $500,000,000 a year spent by municipalities for construction and maintenance of streets. This amount will in all probability be exceeded in 1930. It is estimated that every $4,000 spent in the construction and maintenance of streets and highways is equivalent to the wages and materials used by one worker. On this basis the anticipated two and one-half billion dollar program in 1930 would mean the employment of 625,000 people...

While urging the states and counties to do everything possible to encourage their road appropriations for 1930, Mr. Henry declared that this is a good time for cities to launch their program for street-widening and the acquisition of the necessary rights-of-way...

RADIO RUBE'S R-A-M-B-L-I-N-G-S

The radio, during the past week, has proven that greater things than ever had been expected of it, has been realized.

The National Broadcasting Company put on a series of programs which a year ago would have been an impossibility, but this year, it not only put these programs and carried them out without a hitch, but even received and transmitted many programs from Europe.

AMOS had a great Christmas, although Andy's presents to Madame Queen, consisting of a second-hand piano and a wrist watch bought from a peddler on the corner had failed to function. The keys are fast coming loose on the piano and it has lost one of its pedals, and the watch won't run.

Amos is happy in the fact that he not only made the proper presents to his fiancee Ruby Taylor, but gave Andy enough money to buy presents for Madame Queen.

The beautiful Christmas carols came over the radio uninterrupted, so much that it would seem that some act of providence had willed it.

'Stilly Night' was sung in divers languages, and many songs and sacred addresses were made which fell pleasantly on the ear. —Wonderful country, this!

The joyous spirit of the yuletide was carried out to listeners to the General Motors Family Party at which Frigidaires presided as host, Monday night of this week. Throughout the program, which was on the air from 9:30 to 10 p. m., Eastern Standard time, on a nation-wide network of the National Broadcasting Company, the voice of Merle Alcock, noted contralto, formerly of the Metropolitan Opera Company, and an orchestra conducted by Don Vorhees was heard in appropriate Christmas numbers.

Marshall Beck, official announcer of the State College station K O B, is here this week visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Beck. Marshall is putting in some of his spare time each evening in hearing what other announcers have to say and listening to this musical programs over the country. As a musician, he likes to hear them say "a phonograph record" when they are running records.

"Piccolo Pete," "Barnacle Bill the Sailor" and "Gay Caballero" seem to be the most popular of the 'nut' songs heard of late over the radio.

Heard a good one the other night over my set — A Scotch man wanted to do some building and to do it as cheaply as possible, he sent over to Masonic headquarters to see if he couldn't get a couple of "Free" Masons to do the work.

Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Simer of Captain were Carrizozo visitors the latter part of the week.

Movies and Morons

THIS morning I talked with a man who said that the success of the movies was due to the way the film producers played into the hands, or eyes, of the morons. I told him I thought that was not nice at all.

It's not that I'm a hound for the eye punishment, which one gets from the shooting and kissing and pleasuring which greet our wistful orbs when we want a filmed play. But I do go as a matter of amusement, education and habit.

I believe that the movie began as a Nickelodeon for it was run on a five-cent basis, but now it's a great industry like Standard Oil or U. S. Steel. It has stock because people take stock in it. But there are limits to the screen and you mustn't expect it to educate you the way day school and night school do.

There's a moral censorship of the screen, so I have heard, but it seems to me that there should be a mental one, too. We don't want to have the conscience shocked by a low-toned performance, and we don't want our brains to be stung by a low-browed show either.

There have been and still are great minds which have devoted themselves to the stage—Bernhardt, Duse, John Drew, Mantell, Southern and Marlowe. You can't compare Hollywood names with these, can you?

You and I want to see a show with some sense to it. We'll stand for all the horse-play and monkey-business, the kisses and the pies, if only the film-maker will make the film seem natural. We hate to be kidded by these screened fairy tales which are supposed to give us real life.

In the other arts the best minds set the standard of taste. The architect of the Taj Mahal or the Farthing didn't try to figure out what the gang in India and Greece would like. He gave them the ideal in stone.

The great painters haven't ever acted like the boys who make up the comic strips for the edification of the thoughtless people. No, the fellows like Raphael and Corregio, who flung the fancy brushes, gave people the best and let 'em take it or leave it.

The same with Shakespeare, whose old plays are still running, and Ibsen and Clyde Fitch. Even old Barnum gave something like an ideal circus.

But the movie has played down to low taste and when it becomes a movie-talkie, it may be shown up so that it will have to brace up to meet the demands of good sense and good taste.

Every Kitten Has Its Day

YES, she has and this is the day. It's Mother's day once a year, but the happer may claim the other 364 as her very own. Then there are dog days in the good old summer time, but the kitten has a whole calendar full of those purring days of the present.

The way that the styles are figured, out in Paris, if that's where they do come from, every girl has a chance to display her charms. Even the plain girl can make a good impression with these modern frocks to say nothing of hostery.

You see, it's like this: In the old days with the old patterns, about all you could see of a girl was her face, which was all right if she happened to be pretty and nothing else. The plain girl who could shine in a bathing suit, where form counted, didn't have much of a chance, for one couldn't go bathing all the time.

But the modern frock suits the plain girl to a T. Her face may not be dimpled, but she may be able to make up for that with tricky ankles. Her countenance may not be resplendent, but where form counts in the beauty game she's bound to score.

Mother Nature is certainly eccentric when it comes to putting human beings together in separate bundles. She will stock a large head with its full face on a slender body, and try to pair off arms and legs when they are not at all proportionate.

The contrast between face and form is very noticeable in most women, although now and then Nature will adapt the pretty face to the graceful body, but how often the beauty of the village or town was not so proud of her shape, and how just as often the girl whose face was not of the same candle power had a figure that would make the Venus of Milo want to reduce.

The girl who has form with grace doesn't need to take any dust from the girl who has just a pretty face but nothing about her that would suggest the dancer or swimmer. There is charm about every woman no matter how little she may think of the impression she makes upon her mirror. And these are the days when a woman's charm has its chance.

American Entry to World Court Will Again Be Up to the Senate.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

SO FAR as the administration can go with it, the United States has now adhered to the World Court. Under instructions from President Hoover and Secretary of State Stimson, the American charge d'affaires at Bern, Switzerland, Jay Pierpont Moffat, signed all the protocols involved in America's entry into the tribunal.

The President's action followed the receipt of a note from Secretary Stimson analyzing the situation and urging acceptance of the new protocol. Mr. Stimson holds that the amendments to the court statute safeguard the rights of the United States and sufficiently meet the objections and reservations made by the senate.

"The amendments," he says, "are shown to be general in character, so as to include all nations; they also show that the reason why it is proposed to assimilate the procedure on contentious cases is the fundamental reason that unless both parties to a dispute are present and heard the opinion will not carry any weight."

By a vote of 230 to 100 the house of representatives approved the Mellon-Berenger agreement for settlement of the French debt. Although the debt resolution has not been voted on previously in the senate, the indications are that it will pass that body by about the same proportionate majority it received in the house, and as the French chamber of deputies ratified the agreement on July 27, approval by the senate will make it effective.

RIOTOUS demonstrations in Haiti have ceased at least for the present and the American marines as usual "have the situation well in hand." Total casualties in the worst of the clashes between the marines and natives, the one at Aux Cayes, were ten Haitians killed and thirty wounded. The disorders were directed against President Borno and the Americans who have been assisting his administration, and Gen. John H. Russell, American high commissioner, considered the situation so serious that he asked for more marines. Reinforcements were started but the quieting down of the trouble made them unnecessary. President Borno made a statement that he would not seek re-election and Russell said this had a most telling effect in restoring order.

President Hoover thinks conditions in the island republic are so chaotic that they should be investigated and asked congress to authorize him to appoint a commission to make an inquiry and advise the administration as to its wisest course. Some of the Democrats and radicals objected loudly to this, declaring that the President himself was responsible for conditions in Haiti and was seeking to unload it on congress.

FOR the second time in five months convicts in the New York state prison at Auburn made a wild and murderous attempt to escape. A group of them captured Warden Edgar S. Jeannette and seven guards, released other desperate criminals from their cells and went word to troopers, guards and state police gathered outside that they must be allowed to go out unharmed or they would kill their captives. When the doors of the main hall were opened the troopers threw in gas bombs and a lively gunfight ensued in the course of which three convicts were killed, a number wounded and the warden was rescued. The other prisoners retreated to another hall and kept up the battle and before they surrendered five more of them were shot to death. Principal Keeper C. A. Ingraham was fatally shot by the convicts early in the up- rising when they tried to seize him as hostages.

comparison to the importance of their states, were desirous of refusing him admittance to the senate. But Senator Caraway of Arkansas, chairman of the lobby investigating committee, recognized that a fight against Grundy would be futile and refused to oppose his seating. "I think," said he, "that it will be a good thing for the Democratic party to admit him to the senate."

Consequently, when Grundy presented himself Thursday, accompanied by Senator Reed of Pennsylvania, he was permitted to take the oath. But not before the radical senators had told him what they thought of him and his appointment. It was their last chance for such plain speaking and they made the most of it, castigating Grundy severely and declaring that Governor Fisher had disgraced the state of Pennsylvania and insulted the senate by naming the super-lobbyist a member of that august body.

Senator Nye of North Dakota asserted that, instead of an election, there had been an auction sale. The senatorship had been knocked down, he said, to the highest bidder, Mr. Grundy, whose expenditures for Governor Fisher were greater than those of Mr. Vane. Senators Cutting, Norris, Wheeler, Barkley, Pittman and others were no less severe. But Robinson and Norris and others who are lawyers told them there was no legal reason for refusing to admit Grundy to his seat. Nye, however, offered a resolution that Grundy be declared not entitled to retain his seat because of his participation in a campaign where such huge sums were expended, and it was referred to the committee on privileges and elections.

WHAT was described as the worst studio fire in the history of the movies in America cost the lives of ten persons in New York city and many others were seriously burned. Four of the dead were chorus girls. A company of 110 was making a picture in the studio; on the Harlem river, when a curtain was fired by a piece of arc light carbon or a cigarette. The flames spread so rapidly that it was with greatest difficulty that any of the occupants of the building escaped. John C. NEXT of the groups to organize a co-operative marketing system in compliance with the plans of the federal farm board so as to obtain its financial aid are the fruit growers of Michigan and Wisconsin. The board announced that a tentative understanding had been reached with representatives of fruit growers' co-operative organizations of the two states "looking to the development of a unified co-operative marketing program." Two regional corporations are planned. The board is willing to lend to the fruit growers as facilities loans a total of $1,920,000, to be advanced to individual co-operatives on a basis of 90 per cent of the properties acquired or constructed.

COL. PATRICK J. HURLEY, who has been assistant secretary of war, has been promoted by President Hoover to be head of the department to succeed the late Secretary Good. Colonel Hurley holds from Oklahoma and has had a varied career, distinguishing himself in various ways. He is the youngest member of the cabinet. The President appointed William A. Castle, first assistant secretary of state for the last three years, to be special ambassador to Japan to serve during the period covered by the naval limitation conference in London. In making the appointment known it was stated at the White House that Mr. Castle would return to his present duties when the armament conference is concluded. His selection for special ambassadorial duties was made so that the administration would have a trained diplomat, thoroughly conversant with the naval situation, in Tokyo while the naval conference was in session.

TERRIFIC storms swept over the Atlantic for days, resulting in the wrecking of many small vessels and some larger ones on the European side and the loss of more than one hundred lives. In the southern and western parts of England the flooded rivers inundated towns and farm lands and did vast damage. The Thames valley, Somerset and parts of the western midland counties were the worst sufferers. Roads were made impassible by the water and some smaller railroad lines suspended service.

In the midst of everything the Centurion stood ruthlessly through the heart of the convoy, loosening her broadside batteries at intervals to heighten the existing consternation. The frigates, responding to frenzied signals from the flagship, finally gave chase, but by the time they had discovered the whereabouts of the privateer the fog blanketed her, and Fellowes changed his course to due south. He saw no more of the convoy, although in the morning he picked up one of its trailers, a little Scotch brigantine, which was so crumpled that he burned her.

The following week, cruising backward and forward in wide loops across the track he expected Chater to take, he spoke a Charleston privateer schooner, driven into these latitudes by a storm the Centurion had avoided. Her master had tracked the brig's course, but had seen nothing of the True Bounty, so Fellowes turned northward again into a region of frequent fogs, where the cold was biting and ice froze on the railines, until the men could scarcely find a footing when they went aloft.

Headwinds drove him back, and in more moderate latitudes a pair of fast thirty-eight gun frigates, evidently one of the patrols on the watch for the hard-hitting Yankee men-of-war of the same class, chased the Centurion two days' sail to the southward. Having dodged his pursuers, Fellowes caught a smart Plymouth schooner, the Sprightly Jean, loaded with Jamaica rum, a cargo which Joshua could sell at a ready profit in the state of the New York market. He depleted his crew to man out the prize, and again pointed the brig's bow north.

Certain of the crew grumbled at this departure from the trade-routes. But Fellowes held on his course to the Fifeties, held on until he was convinced Chater had not ventured so far into a latitude.

Driving southeast, they struck the outbound track of the West Indian convoys, and snatched a sloop, six-hundred-ton ship, the Mary Carroll, of London, from under the guns of a razeed and a thirty-two-gun frigate. Conflicting also permitted the Centurion to make off with the prize, Cuffee's snap-shooting with the Long Tom diminishing the frigate's ardor for the chase. A sweet prize, the Mary Carroll, her strong-box held ten thousand pounds in gold, and her holds were full of fancy goods and kinkshaws for the spoiled wives of planters. Fellowes put ten men and a prize-master aboard her, and dispatched her for New York, after shifting the coin to the Centurion.

There was no more grumbling, now that the brig steered east by south for the trade-routes to southern Europe and the Mediterranean. The eight blockade of American ports seemed to have released British merchantmen from their earlier dread of the Yankee privateers, and these southerly seas almost swarmed with shipping. The Centurion captured a small Canton trader, the Pembroke, of Bristol, and the very next day ran down the Jessie brig, of Falmouth, bound for the Gold coast with trade-goods.

Simply as a privateering enterprise, the cruise had been successful up to this point, but Fellowes was perturbed by the failure of his main objective. He had come to sea, first of all, to catch the True Bounty, and the True Bounty had disappeared as completely as the Flying Dutchman sailors said was forever trying to mound the Cape of Good Hope—and forever disappointed by headwinds blown against him by an outraged Divinity.

"The course is southeast by east," he announced to Bred, who relieved him. "We'll follow it until we strike one of the Gibraltar patrol. I'll cruise 'twixt here and the latitude of Cadiz."

And they zigzagged westward, now southwest, now west by north, now west, now west by south, now southwest. The third day, an hour past sunrise, a thin half drifted down from the main-top:

"Sail ho! Fower p'ints to starboard!"

Spencer, officer of the deck, summoned Fellowes, who tumbled out of his bunk, half-dressed. One look through his glass, and he sped a man forward to rouse Cuffee.

"Take the glass," Fellowes directed. "Can you make out that sail? Is she the True Bounty?"

"Cuffee don't wan' no glass, Mars'r Fellowes. Dat him Chater ship."

The jagged white teeth glistened in the cold sunlight.

"Oh, my aunt! Now we shoot him Long Tom, Mars'r. Now we shoot him plenty hard."

Fellowes' lips tightened. He strove to reconcile the rising floods of exultation and sorrow, of triumph and foreboding, that choked him emotionally.

"But shoot carefully," he warned. "We may require to cripple a mast, but I'll have no killing—if it can be avoided."

"Yab, Mars'r. Cuffee know. We don't hurt him pitty ill Missus. But his Chater."

The lightning black bands, free of the araving railines, opened and closed, crooked and flashed.

"But why should you hate Chater?" Fellowes questioned.

"Cuffee hate him Chater 'e' dat yer hate him, Mars'r. 'E' seal Cuffee kill him plenty quick."

"Not save I bid you," Fellowes cautioned sternly, descending to the deck.

A dangerous force, this hatred, he reflected. A disease which seeped from one heart to another. But a smoldering glow burned in his blue eyes, and his jaw squared aggressively. No moment for sentiment. This was the day of his vengeance, the day he had awaited for months. Ah, but why should the savor of it be bitter in his mouth?

He remembered Joshua's parting advice. Hated Hate enough, and all would be simple. Hate every one of your enemies, aye, every one linked with them. Hate 'em root and branch. And a mighty wave of resentment swamped his spirit, resentment against Joshua, against Ben, against Chater, against—against—He claved open his neckcloth so feverishly that his officers, busy though they were, regarded him perplexedly. Aye, against her! Above all, against her!

She, who consorted with the nation's enemies, who intrigued with Wellington and God alone knew what other British statesmen, who enter-taind Collishaw's suit, who had not lifted a finger to save him from being dogged! Why shouldn't he hate her? She merited nothing from him. She, whose lover was the man who had whipped him! She, who had accepted a visit from this man after their lips had met that last night on the True Bounty!

Something awelled up in his throat, hot, suffocating. Hated? Aye, hated! "Run out that Long Tom," he ordered hoarsely. "A shot betwixt his masts, Cuffee."

Chater had the weather gauge, and maneuvered expertly to make use of the advantage; but the Centurion could sail two knots to the True Bounty's one, and a couple of round-shot between his masts seemed to convince him of the hopelessness of his plight. He lay to while the brig overhauled him and rounded his stern in position to rake, Fellowes dominating her crowded decks, his slight figure taut with repressed energy.

Above, on the lofty poop of the True Bounty, Chater glowered sullenly, beside him Ben Inglepin, an expression of well-nourished resentment clouding the merchant's chubby countenance. Cara, muffled in a great coat of fur, clung to her father's arm. There was curiosity in her glance, but no fear; and as often before, Fellowes was constrained to admit a grudging measure of respect for her.

The Centurion came back, with a din of snapping canvas, and not waiting to be hailed, Inglepin bawled angrily:

"What is this that you do, Captain Fellowes? You have reason to know this vessel. D'you not see the colors she flies?"

"I'm not assured you have a justifiable claim to that flag's protection,

"Well, Naow," He Snarled, "Murdered Me, Ain't Ye?"

Disease Germs Cannot Live in Mother's Milk

Scientists have known for some time that babies fed on mother's milk were protected in some mysterious fashion from various diseases such as whooping cough, measles, diphtheria and the like. Now it appears that the mother's milk actually has the power of killing disease germs. Dr. Friedrich Schaeppel, bacteriologist at Bern, Switzerland, has experimented with milk from nursing mothers and found that the milk has this bactericidal power to a very high degree. If the milk is kept at a mean temperature this power may be demonstrated for sixty hours or more. Such bacteria as get into it are at least very severely retarded in their development if not actually killed. The milk is even able to destroy bacteria which do not normally occur in it. Boiled milk has not this power. Doctor Schaeppel has succeeded in filtering milk, obtaining a clear greenish liquid which contained albumin but no fat. The germs naturally contained in the milk stayed back with the fat, but the power to kill bacteria remained in the clear filtrate. This was proved by adding germs to the filtrate, which destroyed them.

Daylight screens have been developed to a point where it is possible to project pictures on them in the diffused daylight of a room with thoroughly satisfactory results. To do this requires projection from the rear of the screen. Darkness is required back of the screen between the projector and screen.

January in American History

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

THE association of New Year's day with important events in American history goes back to its very beginning. In fact, the very name "America" came into being through association with an event which took place on January 1. In the latter half of the fifteenth century a Florentine named Americus Vespucci discovered to Spain and, hearing of the discoveries of Christopher Columbus, resolved to seek his fortunes in the New World. So he visited Espanola (Hayti), went on a pearl hunting expedition with the Spaniard, Ojeda, in 1499, and on January 1, 1502, he discovered the Bay of Rio Janeiro in South America.

Sometime during his voyage he wrote a letter in which he called the western lands "Mundus Novus" instead of Asia, and some historians assert that Vespucci, before Columbus, discovered the mainland, that he was the first to realize that "Mundus Novus" was wholly distinct from Asia and was, in fact, a new world, and that therefore he has some claim to the title of "discoverer of America." But whether he deserved that honor or not, the fact remains that the new continent was to be known as "America" rather than "Columbus." And this is how it came about:

At St. Die in the Vosges mountains there was at the time Vespucci was making his voyage a little collegiate institute which was a center of geographical learning. Two of its faculty members, Matthias Ringman, a Latinist, and Martin Waldseemuller, a geographer, were preparing a new edition of Ptolemy's "Geographia." Before it was published, however, they printed a little essay under the title of "Cosmographie Introductio," to which they added the letter of Vespucci. It was in this essay that Waldseemuller, after describing the three continents of Europe, Asia and Africa, then gave an account of the voyages of Vespucci and closed by saying "The fourth part of the world having been discovered by Americus it may be called the land of Americus or America." The suggestion met with favor, and although at first the name was confined to South America, it was later applied to both western continents. And thus, whether rightly or not, was the name of Americus Vespucci perpetuated on the maps of the world.

The next great epoch in American history in which several important events were linked with New Year's day was the American Revolution. On January 1, 1735, there was born in Boston to a French goldsmith named Apollis Rivora (who, however, changed that to Paul Revere soon after his arrival in America) and his marriage to Deborah (Hickborn) a son who was named after his father. Young Paul followed his father's trade and became an expert in it and in many other things.

But, although few Americans may know of Paul Revere in any of these roles, few indeed are they who do not know of him as a courier bearing "a word that shall echo forever more!" For it was his famous "midnight ride" in April of 1775, which warned the patriots of the approach of the British and rallied them to make their stand at Lexington and at Concord, where "the shot heard round the world" was fired.

On the day that Paul Revere celebrated his tenth birthday, there was born on a farm in Chester county, Pa., another boy who was destined to achieve even greater fame in the great struggle for liberty. Anthony Wayne was his name, and when he grew to young manhood he became as well known as a surveyor in Pennsylvania as Washington was in Virginia. He attracted the attention of Benjamin Franklin who had him appointed to look after the interests of a number of Philadelphia business men who owned lands in Nova Scotia. Upon his return from this work in 1767 he married Polly Penrose, the daughter of a prominent Philadelphia merchant, and they settled in Chester county where young Wayne made a good living as a farmer and surveyor.

Betsy Ross, Born Jan. 1, 1752

AMERICAN FLAG RAISED AT CAMBRIDGE, MASS., JAN. 1, 1776

In 1774 he was made one of the provincial deputies and he was also a member of the Pennsylvania convention held at Philadelphia to discuss the impending trouble between the colonies and the mother country. But Anthony Wayne was a man of action, not merely a man of words, and New Year's day of 1770 found him at his home, Waynesborough, impatiently awaiting word from Philadelphia, where the Pennsylvania committee of safety was about to choose the colonels for the four battalions, which were to be sent to the aid of General Washington and his Continentals before Boston. Unable to restrain his impatience, Wayne, two days later, bade his Polly and their children a hasty good-by and set out for Philadelphia, there to learn that he had been appointed colonel of the first battalion.

So the military career of Anthony Wayne began and how brilliant that career was is told in one of the most interesting biographies of recent months—Thomas Boyd's "Mad Anthony Wayne," published by Charles Scribner's Sons. No better characterization of Wayne can be given than in the scene, as Boyd describes it, which took place after the long, bitter winter at Valley Forge when Washington summoned his generals to a council to decide whether or not to allow the British, who were preparing to leave Philadelphia for New York, to pass across New Jersey unmolested. Gen. Charles Lee spoke longest and loudest and his advice was to let the British alone. Then:

Anthony Wayne had sat apart, holding a book beyond which he had looked with bright-eyed scorn as ten of his fellow officers had agreed with Charles Lee. He raised his head.

"Well, general," asked his Excellency, "what do you propose to do?"

Wayne answered quickly, "Fight, sir."

But that reply could scarcely have surprised the commander-in-chief or any of the others. For when hadn't the leader of the Pennsylvania line voted in favor of attack? At Brandywine? At Germantown? At White Marsh last November? Never. Attack! attack! It was the only word he knew.

And those two words "attack" and "fight" were the keywords of his whole career, both in the Revolution and during the Indian war afterwards. It would have been appropriate if he could have died on the field of battle. Instead, he was stricken by illness in December of 1793 at the fort at Presque Isle on the shores of Lake Erie, and there after great suffering the end came on December 16.

The third member of the trilogy of Revolutionary notables who had New Year's day as their birthday was a woman. Born on January 1, 1752, Elizabeth Griscom of Philadelphia, was married to John Ross, a Philadelphia merchant, who was also an upholsterer. His most able assistant was his wife who had become widely known for her excellent materials and the unusual skill with which she shaped them.

Among her patrons were the foremost citizens of Philadelphia and she numbered among her friends such men as Washington, Franklin, Adams and Rittenhouse. So perhaps it was natural that when the Continental congress on June 14, 1777, "Resolved, that the flag of the thirteen United States be thirteen stripes alternate red and white; that the Union be thirteen stars, white on a blue field, representing a new constellation," the committee which was appointed to carry out this resolution should go to "the widow Ross" to have her make it for them. Whether or not Betsy Ross designed the first Stars and Stripes or whether that honor belongs to Francis Hopkinson of New Jersey is a matter for dispute among historians. At any rate Betsy Ross seems to have been connected in some way with the early history of our national banner and the "Betsy Ross legend," if legend it be, seems to be firmly fixed in our national tradition of the origin of our flag.

There is one event connected with the flag which took place on January 1, however, which is undisputed. That is the fact that on January 1, 1776, Gen. George Washington raised over his camp at Cambridge, Mass., a flag which, although it had the Union Jack in the canton, had the thirteen alternate red and white stripes, representing the thirteen colonies. This flag was referred to in the correspondence of the day as the "American colors," and may safely be regarded as the first American flag. Since the thirteen colonies represented in the thirteen stripes, although fighting for their rights, had not yet broken entirely away from the mother country, the British Union Jack was retained to show their connection with England. Six months later, however, the ties which bound them were severed by the Declaration of Independence, and then the need for a new banner resulted in the doing away with the Union Jack. Then came the historic resolution of June 14, 1777, the stars were placed in the canton and the flag of the United States became the Stars and Stripes.

On January 1, 1800, there was born at Wallingford, Conn., a man who was destined to become an important figure in American journalism and to introduce an innovation which was to be the forerunner of one of the most important factors in our modern newspapers. For it was Moses Yale Beach who conceived the idea of speedy transmission of news which resulted ultimately in the founding of the Associated Press, the greatest news gathering organization in the world. A cabinet maker, inventor and paper-mill owner in his youth, the turning point in Beach's career came in 1821 when he married a sister of Benjamin Day, founder of the New York Sun. In 1835 he purchased an interest in that paper and later became its proprietor. Beach brought to the Sun original methods for securing the first tidings of important events. Express trains were run between various points at his expense, and before the telegraph was invented he used carrier pigeons to bring early European news from incoming steamers, as well as from political gatherings, race tracks, etc. During the Mexican war, finding the means of transmitting news so slow, he established a "pony express" system of couriers which reduced the time by one-third. Laying the matter before his fellow publishers a form of a co-operative alliance was worked out which was a forerunner of the modern Associated Press.

The War of 1812 saw another important event taking place on New Year's day. For it was on January 1, 1815, that the British made their first attack on New Orleans, and a week later occurred the decisive engagement in which "Old Hickory" Jackson so decisively defeated Pakenham's veterans.

On January 1, 1822, the first American soldiers arrived in Texas, an event which forecast the struggle for a second war of independence in North America and the addition of the Great Southwest to the United States. On January 1, 1831, William Lloyd Garrison, the Abolitionist, published the first issue of the Liberator, the paper which was to have so great an influence in the slavery dispute. And what Garrison started on January 1, 1831, was finished by Abraham Lincoln 32 years later. On January 1, 1863, his historic emancipation proclamation went into effect, and the death blow to slavery in the United States was struck.

EDITORIAL COLUMN

One more week will bring us into the new year and as the curtain falls on the old year, we may make our inventories of experiences, conditions, etc., which we have confronted during the last twelve months. To some, the dying year has brought nothing short of sorrows and heartbreaks, while to others, the year has been full of blessings. To the first mentioned, the holiday season with all its gladness, is but a hollow mockery and we could not expect it to be otherwise, but to the last mentioned, are they thankful for all these blessings?

What will the new year bring? If it brings prosperity, health and happiness, we will enjoy the real and everlasting things of this life, while the reverse, sorrow, suffering, lost hope and all things of this nature, are unrealities and must have an ending, while the good things mentioned, will endure forever.

Discontent, lack of confidence, despondency and the entertainment of unpleasant memories, are the bitter enemies of man and the more we realize them in that light and set our minds on the real things of life, the more they will disappear. Then let us face 1930 with a full measure of confidence. As a result of this manner of thinking, the wheels of happiness, contentment, prosperity and all the real things of life, will materialize.

The above picture shows a sectional view of Sameon "Oil-Rite" Windmill illustrating principle of Pump and location of Four Timken Roller Bearings

The AUTOMATIC OILING SYSTEM and lubrication of the various parts is accomplished as follows: The oil is poured into the gear case, which submerges the lower part of the double gears, including the wrist pins when at the bottom of stroke. The rotation of the gears carries the oil up and floods the pinions, and the oil running down over the inside of the gears floods the gear shaft. The trough which is part of the hub of wheel head, maintains a level that submerges the lower part of both front and rear Timken bearings, and the surplus oil is returned to the gear case through a passage in the main frame extension. A felt oil retaining washer and paper gasket prevent any oil from working out around the wheel shaft.

AUXILIARY OIL PUMP

One of the outstanding features of the SAMSON "OIL-RITE" is the extreme simplicity, efficiency, and practicability of the pump.

The main frame on the Oil-Rite mills forms a reservoir that holds a sufficient amount of oil to lubricate the mill for one year. A sheet metal helmet completely encloses the reservoir and covers all working parts thus eliminating waste and making it dirt, rain, sleet and snow proof. No water can get in to flood the oil, no dust can blow in to grind out the bearings. This construction prevents squeaks, rattles and gear howling brought about by insufficient lubrication, all of which is avoided in the automatically oiled "OIL-RITE" mill. The ball bearing turn table, the constant supply of oil always flooding the moving parts and the Timken roller bearings insure the owner the "OIL-RITE" mill will pump water in the slightest breeze.

Hard for Robots and Men
We Need Submarines
Letting Convicts Read
A New Standard Lady

Science piles prodigy on prodigy, miracle on miracle, so rapidly that it tries the average brain.

Professor Partridge, only twenty-six years old, in New York university's chemistry department, can manufacture lithium at $15 a pound. A little while ago you couldn't have got a pound for a million dollars. Lithium is a metal so light that it floats even on kerosene.

Some things that float on water, you know, will not float on kerosene. Professor McFavish of New York university demonstrates a robot, a mechanical man, with an electric lamp in place of eyes, a radio tube in place of a brain, relays and magnets for hands.

However, it can be shown that no robot can ever develop any new idea. He who wishes to avoid robot competition should devote himself to developing new ideas and working them out.

From Seattle, the Pacific Aeronautic Research foundation plans, for next May, a nonstop flight across the Pacific.

Men have flown from Europe to South America, from London to India, across the Atlantic repeatedly, over the North and South poles.

The Pacific alone remains to be conquered. And only a few years ago Lord Northcliffe offered $50,000 to any one that would fly the English channel!

The Brooklyn navy yard starts work on a new submarine, the V-7, keeping at work 725 men that would have been discharged. This encourages the people to think we may have some intelligent interest in national defense. Submarines with modern engines can go around the world without taking fuel, traveling on the surface, as they do in peace. A good fleet of really big submarines with heavy guns, knocked-down fighting planes, high speed and long sailing range would do a great deal for peace if they could be sent to visit every important port in the world. Those well prepared have peace. The unprepared have war.

Warden Lawes of Sing Sing prison, who man, says: "I shall let my convicts read in newspapers accounts of the outbreak in the Auburn penitentiary. There will be a good deal of buzzing when they read them. But the effect on their morale of withholding the newspapers would be worse than allowing them to see them."

That's an intelligent man. The crans might be rulling yet had they known enough to let the people know the facts.

Information and discussion supply a great safety valve.

The warden of Auburn prison captured by convicts in rebellion, said the convicts, of whom many are dead, were made desperate by the knowledge that if they failed, they would surely go to the electric chair. In this case, at least, capital punishment did not deter men from murder.

The United States bureau of standards says the ideal woman is now "the perfect 34" not the "perfect 30" of days before the "lovely figure."

If your bust is 36, your waist should measure 31 inches, hips 39 inches. Thirty-four bust, 29-inch waist, 37-inch hips, is the "standard lady," according to the bureau, which, however, knows nothing about it.

Abraham Lincoln's mother wasn't a "standard 34" nor was "Bertha with the big feet," mother of Charlemagne. For a clock model, the "perfect 34" is ideal, perhaps.

For an eminent mother, which is what counts, bigger busts, bigger waists, bigger hips.

Somebody supposed to be an expert says that the United States will manufacture in 1930, 1,000,000 fewer automobiles than in 1929.

That prediction, probably mistaken, is not creditable to the people's intelligence.

Many things a family can do without, but no family, properly organized can do without a good automobile.

The country, apparently, is still doing business. "Big Steel," Wall Street's name for the United States Steel corporation, shows unfilled orders for steel tonnage increased by 33,783 tons last month.

The company has a total of unfilled orders amounting to 4,126,246 tons, which does not look much like a "panic."

"As a sheep before her shearers is dumb," That's the word from the Bible. "As a lamb after its shearing is dumb" may soon be the news in Wall Street. It depends on the rapidly with which the lambs go back for another shearing.

They always do go back, which is what makes brokers' seats worth $800,000 apiece, and will some day make them worth $1,000,000 apiece.

Mr. John T. P. Moffat, representing the United States at Geneva, signed the protocol that, if nothing happens to prevent, will lead us in the World court.

CALLS ON RED CROSS INCREASE; RESPONSE TO ROLL CALL URGED

Society's Activities Reach Millions Each Year - Chairman Payne Acknowledges Support in Membership.

Disaster relief work, service to disabled veterans and their families, public health work and its many other activities caused expenditures of $11,004,000 by the American Red Cross for the year ended June 30, 1929, according to the annual report of the organization.

This work by the Red Cross is supported by the annual Roll Call for members, which is held from Armistice Day to Thanksgiving Day, November 11 to 23.

Directing attention to the heavy expenditures by the Red Cross during the past year, and to the fact that the organization was called upon for assistance in 120 disasters in the United States and its insular possessions, Judge John Barton Payne, the chairman, said:

"The Red Cross is a volunteer society, supported by its membership, and belongs to all of the citizens. While it is a semi-governmental agency in that the President of the United States is its president, and one-third of its governing board are representatives of Government departments, yet it receives no financial support from the Government.

"Funds for our work for war veterans and their families, for carrying on disaster relief, for our varied health activities, the life saving and first aid work and our many other activities, all are derived from the membership fee. The public is asked only once each year - at the Annual Roll Call - to join in this support of the Red Cross."

The Red Cross expended an average of $22,000 per year in the past seven years, in disaster relief work, from its own treasury, statements show. The work for world war veterans also has caused heavy expenditures.

Government Cites Convenience of Heating Homes With Oil

There is widespread interest in the new method of heating homes by burning fuel oil, and many types of oil burners have been designed especially for this purpose.

In general these burners are not equipped with automatic control. The atomizing types have a motor and other mechanical devices for atomizing the oil and mixing it with air before delivery to the combustion chamber.

FELLOWSHIP THROUGH WORSHIP

LESSON TEXT—Neh. 8:1-12; Micah 4:1, 2; Ps. 122:1-9; Heb. 10:23-25. GOLDEN TEXT—As his custom was, he went into the synagogue on the Sabbath day.

1. The Place of the Bible in Worship (Neh. 8:1-12).

(1) The eager assembly (v. 1). The people gathered themselves together and requested Ezra to bring the book of the law. God had touched their hearts, creating within them a yearning for His Word.

(2) They joined heartily in the prayer (v. 6). As Ezra led them in prayer, they united in saying, Amen, Amen, bowing their faces to the ground.

(3) He caused the people to understand the reading (v. 8). The supreme business of the minister is to make the Word of God plain to all, old and young.

(4) The divine method of convicting men of sin is the application of God's Word in the energy of the Holy Ghost.

(5) What a wonderful day when all peoples of the world shall worship together in God's holy temple!

This psalm is one of the songs sung by the Jews as they made their pilgrimages to Jerusalem to worship at the great festivals. This song embodies the following great ideas:

One Way to Help God There is but one way in which man can ever help God—that is by letting God help him; and there is no way in which His name is more gloriously taken in vain than by calling the abandonment of our own work, the performance of His—Russia.

Arrival of 1930

New Year's Homecoming
Katherine Edelman

NEW YEAR'S eve and all the little town of Ashton stir and alight! Sounds of laughter and good cheer floated out upon the night and everywhere there was evidence of the hearty good will and fellowship that prevails at this season.

A full moon was lending its charm to the beauty of the night, throwing a soft and silvery radiance on the snow-covered earth. It was one of those nights when Nature seems to almost outdo herself in the lavishness of the beauty that she dispenses.

Ashton had particular cause for happiness this evening. For, in addition to the joy of the New Year holiday, a big celebration was taking place in the town hall to welcome home the town's most distinguished man, Warren Denham.

One home in particular held a very excited person, Marian York found it hard to keep up a semblance of calm. She was fearful lest the loud beating of her heart would betray her feelings to those around her. Over and over again she told herself that she was foolish, that she meant nothing to Warren Denham, that probably the silly vows they had exchanged in childhood were forgotten by him long ago.

She felt that the wisest plan would be for her to stay away from the celebrations; not to risk the pain of the old longings and desires that the sight of him would be sure to arouse.

But the urge to see him again was too strong, and now she was standing before the mirror, giving a last critical glance at herself before departing for the hall. She had let the rest of the family go on ahead, as she felt that she wanted to go alone.

It was over ten years since she had last seen Warren Denham. During that time he had gone out into the world and made his name famous, while she remained at home, living the quiet, uneventful life of the little town. He was now a famous engineer, who had brought to a successful completion one of the most difficult engineering feats that had ever been accomplished in western Africa. She had remained a nobody. It was unlikely that he would feel the slightest interest in her.

moment that I have looked forward to for a long time. During all my wanderings the thought of the day I would come home has been with me. But you have made it even happier than I had anticipated." His voice almost broke for a moment, then he went on:

"It was the thought of your faith and trust in me that often lent me strength—that made me want to do my level best. I owe you far more than you owe me. And I am proud and happy to be back."

It was nearing midnight when the program was over; then the crowd surged up to shake Warren Denham's hand. But Marian York stole quietly away. She felt it was better to do this. More than ever now she seemed to realize the great gulf that lay between her and Warren Denham. She must not allow herself to see him; it would entail too much after-suffering to see the indifference in his eyes.

With quick steps she walked up the deserted street. "Oh, why had he come back, to revive all those memories she had tried so hard to stifle? Life was going to be harder and lonelier for her than ever now! If only he had stayed away!"

Suddenly she woke to the consciousness that she was being followed; footsteps were gaining on her at every moment. Her heart began to pound. There was something about the footsteps that seemed to be familiar. Again she told herself that she was foolish; that it was probably some one who was in a hurry to get home.

Now, the hurrying one had caught up with her and a voice spoke—a dear and well-remembered voice out of the past: "Why—why are you rushing away, Marian?"

Confused and stammering, Marian stood before Warren Denham. "I—I thought there were so many others," she said. "I—I did not think that you would miss me. Things are different now, Warren."

"Not miss you, Marian!" Warren Denham's voice held tenderness and emotion. "Why, Marian, all the things I said in the hall tonight were meant for you. I do love this little town, but—but you are really Ashton to me. I—I found out as soon as I got to Africa how much you meant to me. But my word was pledged then, and I could not come back. I felt that I must finish the job, and I couldn't ask you to come there. But all the time I kept hoping that you would wait for me."

"Marian, tell me now if the old promise of our childhood still stands good. Will you marry me?"

As Marian gave him her answer the joyous bells rang out the happy message that another New Year was born. While the strains of rejoicing were wafted over the snow-covered ways, two hearts sang with joy for the happiness that the New Year had brought them.

ANTIQUATED LAWS REAL PERIL

By JUDGE FREDERICK E. CRANE, New York Court of Appeals.

ANTIQUATED laws are the bane of the American people today. We are trying to adjust our modern scope of life to fit laws that were incorporated practically centuries ago.

I do commend the progress, little though it may be, that law has made to date to become modernized. There are articles always being printed criticizing the law. Most of these articles were written by men who never even served on a jury, let alone profess a knowledge of the law. Because of their profession, they take advantage of the exemption law, exempting writers and newspaper men from serving on juries.

Probably no one ever thinks of the law in the same light as his religion—but it can be viewed in the very self-same light—for the law is part of mankind. There is one law that is even higher than the Constitution of the United States—and that is the law of personal liberty.

The young lawyer of today has an advantage over the lawyer of my day. At that time there was no workmen's compensation law—but there was a master-and-servant law in effect. There probably was no lawyer who was not confused at some time or another by the intricateness of the master-and-servant law.

As an example, if two workmen were hoisting a machine and A told B how to do the work, A would have no recovery under the old law for injuries, because he would then be classed as a master.

The law is to be used every day, and not kept as a monument to the dead, or living on past performances. The thing we call the law is an instrument of government, for the protection, control and regulation of mankind—and if necessary, by force.

SIN IN MODERN DISGUISES

By REV. DR. HARRY EMERSON FOSDICK (Baptist).

Present-day individualism is a psychological cosmetic, under which sin, nastiness and filth are being paraded just as they were in the Eighteenth century. One of the most characteristic phenomena of our time is the way we rationalize sin. We take every-day, garden varieties of nastiness and personal infidelity, dress them up in new psychological phraseology, and say "Oh, how modern."

St. Paul tells us that sin can disguise itself as an angel of light, but Paul never dreamed of our new psychological cosmetics, by means of which any sin from adultery up can walk abroad, now as self expression, now as release from an inhibition, now as the new freedom, or now as overcoming a complex. Amid all this looseness, disguised in the paint and apparel of the new phraseology, we all of us need to hear a salutary and challenging summons—"pull yourselves together."

This is not by any means a reactionary appeal to old moral codes or taboos. It is primarily an appeal to a knowledge of history. The idea that this looseness is really modern is absurd to anyone who knows history. One can find every item of it reduplicated in the Eighteenth century.

DEFECTS IN SOCIAL ORDER

By DAVID SEABURY, Psychology Expert.

Our social order has never been built in the past on a knowledge of human nature. Marriage and child training have always been based on the old prejudices and stereotypes, not on human nature and its needs.

Experimental psychology is pointing the way to a new aristocracy—the aristocracy of the brains. It has shown that a moron is just as likely to be born in the millionaire's family as in the poor man's.

Engineers, teachers and architects have all been educated for their professions, but society has never offered any training for motherhood, which is the hardest job of all.

The new psychology offers a challenge to our ideas about matrimony. Men and women marry without a knowledge of human character, without any real knowledge of compatibility, with only a fixed idea of social dominance. There is nothing wrong with marriage as an institution; there is something ghastly wrong with what we have done with it.

Education, too, must change its views, and must consider the emotional interference of the child, as it affects his behavior in school and his application to his studies.

NORDIC SUPERIORITY A MYTH

By DR. JOHN HAYNES HOLMES, New York.

Because of the wars, migrations and colonizations of history there has been such an intermingling that there is no such thing as a pure race. I maintain that, while there are superior individuals and families, there is no such thing as a superior race. No sillier idea has ever been presented to the ignorance, credulity and selfish pride of men than the idea of white, or Nordic, supremacy.

There are no racial groupings but only social groupings, and there is no race problem in countries in which negroes and whites have lived together without social distinctions. I argue, too, that there is no such thing as an instinct of race prejudice, no person being born with an aversion to any member of the human family. The so-called race prejudices resulted from matters of education, environment, social custom and traditions. The prejudice could be eliminated in a generation by proper rearing of children. I, therefore, hold the "race problem" to be an educational, social and religious problem.

CHURCH HURT BY DISSENSION

By REV. DR. JOHN W. BRADBURY, New York.

Modern churchmen have been attacking one another rather than the foes of humanity. A great deal of the ancient challenge of the church has been soft-pedaled in recent years. The church has become so intricately involved with the power of wealth and dazzled with the glamor of worldly pageantry and pomp that it no longer seems to ride out into the lists against entrenched wrong and unholy greed. Its great spokesmen have for years been turning their guns upon each other instead of upon the foes of humanity. The malnourished mentality, of loudspeaking modern prophets can see nothing of the great problems of mankind but passes its time decrying such petty things as denominational differences—as if to put all men into one denomination would cure the social evils of mankind.

BARTON'S DYANSHINE SHOE POLISH

Movement in Poland to Change Unseemly Names
A Polish parliamentary deputy belonging to one of the peasant parties wishes to introduce a law to facilitate and cheapen the changing of surnames. Many peasants' surnames have crystallized out of mocking nicknames conferred by neighbors. There are on record "Paunch," "Leprosy," "Scour" and many others still less complimentary. Jews are often in a worse plight than peasants. Until the end of the Eighteenth century they bore patronymics such as "Abraham, son of Jacob."

The police of the three powers that partitioned Poland insisted that they should all take surnames. Either in an attempt to extort bribes or else to amuse themselves they often inflicted the most ridiculous and unseemly names on the unfortunate Jews. "Tonweight," "Abdominal Ulcer" and "Berlin Blue" are among those recorded.

Some such surnames have so grossly indecent a meaning that they could not be translated in the pages of a respectable paper. Some of the Jews, who only understood Yiddish, did not know what their Russian names meant. Thousands of them have changed their names since the war—Exchange.

If you use Red Cross Ball Blue in your laundry you will not be troubled by those tiny rust spots, often caused by inferior bluing. Try it and see.—Adv.

Old Engine Superannuated
An old hauling engine at Seaham docks once used for drawing wagons by a wire rope up an incline, has been dismantled. The engine was of the beam type and on the beam is the date of 1825. The docks were begun in 1828 and tradition says that before being set up at Seaham the engine did duty at a colliery in the west of the country. It worked regularly up to the war period. Very ponderous in character, the engine had a fly wheel 20 feet in diameter and a large upright cylinder.—London Mail.

Old Town Renews Life
Once Weymouth, N. J., was a prosperous town, but it was off the beaten track. One by one families moved to larger cities until only a few old settlers remained. The town became deserted and for several years no rent has been charged the few residents willing to stay in the old town. Now a water company has run a line into the town and a service fee of 10 cents a month has been placed on every house and the tenants are required to pay the fee.

Popular
Reports are sweeping in that New Jersey is striving to emulate California. A real estate man in Camden tried to sell a lot to a Californian. The deal was moving along just so-so when the Californian heard something. "What is that awful humming he demanded suspiciously. "Oh, just the theme song for a mosquito revue," was the prompt reply.—Los Angeles Times.

Criticism

On Concrete
The four-year-old daughter of a Sullivan (Ind.) man has an odd opinion as to the physical, and possibly mental, makeup of her father. MILE-HIGH POTATOES PRODUCE GOOD SEED

State College, N. M., Dec. 31.—The High Altitude Potato Growers' association reports an increasing business in the production of seed potatoes the present year, says G. R. Quisenberry of the New Mexico Agricultural College. This association, which has been organized only three years, is situated in the northern part of New Mexico at an elevation of 8,500 feet and produces a high quality of seed under dry land conditions.

During the present year a little less than eight carloads of potatoes were produced by members of the association, but due to the severe fall weather and early snow, they were unable to finish digging about 25 percent of the crop. Of the remainder, a little less than one-half have been shipped out. Some went to Chicago, some south to Santa Fe, Las Vegas and Albuquerque, and a part to the seed growers of Colorado. Mr. J. I. Hurst, a large grower at Kocca, Colorado, who has been buying some of this seed for his own planting for several years, bought 2,000 sacks for his own use. The Monte Vista Potato Growers' association also bought several hundred sacks. Another lot went to the Center Association of the San Luis Valley, Colorado, and small shipments went to other sections, including one lot to Central Mexico.

This Association grows the largest quantity of certified seed potatoes of any group in the state, and by planting their treated potatoes on dry land under the severe conditions that exist in this section, all the weaker tubers are eliminated, very little disease ever develops, and a larger yield is the result from planting seed of this type which has grown at an elevation of over a mile high.

COMDR. BYRD STATES RADIO BIG FACTOR IN FINE RESULTS OF POLAR EXPEDITION

The Byrd Antarctic expedition could not have accomplished its mission without its radio communication, Comdr. Richard E. Byrd informed the Federal Radio Commission Dec. 19 in a radiogram.

"Radio has played a very vital part in operations down here and has been a safeguard to life in hazardous airplane flights of exploration and dog team expeditions," Commander Byrd said in his message to the Commission chairman, Ira E. Robinson. "Without it we could not have accomplished our mission."

BILL PROLONGING LIFE OF RADIO COMMISSION SIGNED BY PRESIDENT

President Hoover on Dec. 19, signed the bill to continue indefinitely the administrative authority of the Federal Radio Commission. Under existing laws the Commission would have relinquished this authority on Dec. 31 to the Department of Commerce and itself would have become a radio appeal board, on a per diem basis.

The measure was enacted with the understanding that the Commission would serve as the radio licensing authority until succeeded by a permanent agency on communication. There is pending before the senate committee on Interstate Commerce, the Coughens bill to create a Federal communications commission with the complete authority over wires and wireless, and to take over such functions relating to these modes of communication as are now vested in the Interstate Commerce Commission, Department of State and other Federal agencies.

The Radio Commission, since it was created in March, 1927, has been a temporary agency. Its life twice has been extended on a year-to-year basis.

The new legislation, besides definitely extending the commission, also provides for the appointment of a chief engineer with a salary of $10,000 per annum and two assistants with salaries of $7,500 per annum. The terms of the two incumbent commissioners expire on Feb. 23.

RECORD BREAKING DISTILLING OUTFIT SEIZED NEAR EARLSBAP MONDAY, DECEMBER 26

Caught in hands of Messrs. Pfeiffer and Wray Being Big Business With Commission in the Oil Fields of Texas and New Mexico.

Officials of three counties with Howard Beacham, sole representative of the Federal Prohibition force, participating, the largest illicit distilling outfit ever seized in New Mexico, was taken 26 miles southeast of Carlsbad Monday forenoon, December 26. The location of the outfit which consisted of two stills, one of a capacity of 200 gallons of mash, and the other with a 400 gallon mash capacity, was well isolated from the prying eyes of any chance passer-by. From overtop of a hill the distilling outfit was a center-like depression on a hill the whisky factory could not be seen until one was within an eighth mile distant. In fact the excellent isolation of the plant prevented the men in charge from seeing the party of officers until the latter were right on them with guns in hand.

The officers, Howard Beacham, federal prohibition officer, Sheriff Thomas of Chaves county, Sheriff James of Eddy county, and Deputy Wood and Deputy Head of Eddy county, surprised the three men in the act of storing a quantity of liquor that had just been run. Three hundred gallons of whisky, 20 barrels of 120 mash, two large copper stills, and a Chevrolet truck, besides other minor items of property, were apprehended and the men were placed under arrest. The prisoners were brought to Carlsbad and had a hearing before U.

S. Commissioner Stayner, and were permitted bond in the sum of $1,000 each to appear before the next federal grand jury. They gave their names as Paul Coite, 23, William Dublin, 33, and Herbert Barnett, 27. Coats was the master spirit of the enterprise and the others claimed to be only working for him.

One man made the remark that had the officers gotten there a short time before they would have found 1,000 gallons of liquor on hand, or if they had delayed their official visit for a short time they would not have gotten any whisky, unless a ten gallon keg the boys was "aging" for his own use. The liquor was said to have been of a better quality than is usually found in illicit distilling and was made of rye mash. The retail price of the liquor taken is said to be about $6,000, with a wholesale value of about $1,800. The stills had an alleged capacity of running off 100 gallons of whisky per day, but the mash capacity of the plant was probably about 70 gallons of liquor per day. There was considerable evidence that the plant had been running for some time. Coats is alleged to have said that the outfit cost about $5,000 worth of property.

The truck was taken to Carlsbad, the stills were smashed with an ax, the liquor was poured out, all but a few gallons saved for evidence. The still outfit is said to have exceeded by about 200 gallons anything ever taken in the state before. A few months ago a still was taken near Ft. Sumner with a capacity of 500 gal-
