Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Squier

former Carrizozo residents, who have been conducting the Spooner Variety Store at Spooner, Wis., writes that, like all others, they have had the coldest and most disagreeable winter that old residents in that section can recall. Mr. and Mrs. Squier, we presume, think more often of Carrizozo during the winter season than at any time of the year, judging from what he says in a letter to this office Monday. Among other things, he said:

"We would like to have some of the warm sunshiny weather we know you are having, in exchange for the cold and snow we have had since the first of the year. We read with interest, the items in the Outlook, and as we always have a warm spot in our hearts for Carrizozo, we hope some day in the near future to pay the old town a visit and greet our friends there, to whom, please extend our regards and best wishes."

The ladies' high score was won by Mrs. O'Lovelace and the gentlemen's by Mr. L. J. McAdams. A delectable three course repast was served, that would excite the envy of Maggie and Jiggs.

Banner Day for Excitement

Monday proved to be a day for excitement. Wm. Sterling was arrested for assault with intent to kill Ware Brazel on a ranch near Oscura. In the alleged assault, the charge is that Sterling shot at Brazel from a shack on the ranch which now belongs to the First National Bank and formerly owned by Sterling. The shot, it is claimed, grazed Brazel's leg and entered the breast of his horse and penetrated the heart. The horse ran for a distance of one-half mile before it fell dead. Sterling was arraigned before Judge Harvey, where he waived preliminary examination and was bound over to the District Court in the sum of $2,500.

The next was the case of arrest of W. E. Evans (alias Blonde Evans) who with Arley Stewart was alleged to have killed cattle and it is also alleged that the hides were found with the brands cut out and the sheriff's officers also found some of the beef of the killed animals. They also waived preliminary examination and were remanded to jail and bound over to the District Court in the sum of $1000 each. At this writing, neither of the men mentioned have furnished bail and are still in jail. - Later: Bail was furnished to above parties yesterday, we understand.

A party of 25 factory officials from the general offices at Dayton, Ohio, headed by R. F. Callaway, manager of branches, will be there for the occasion. The convention program will be given over to demonstration of outstanding new products in the field of electrical refrigeration and discussion of sales policies for 1929.

Frigidaire's new cold control for the regulation of temperatures in the freezing trays of household cabinets and the electric room coolers, will hold the spotlight during the demonstration of new products.

He told of being in Albuquerque a short time ago and had a good long talk with Dr. Warner, former Commander of Fort Stanton. Dr. Nesbit is now in the government service among the Indians.

Some Ford Incidents

J. W. Turton of Niles, Mich., has driven the three Ford automobiles he has owned a distance of equal to nine times around the world - has never been out of gas, oil or water and has never had an accident.

He purchased his first Ford, a touring car, in 1915, drove it 103,200 miles, and then sold it for $125 cash.

Visitors have passed through the plants of the Ford Motor Company at Detroit in such large numbers during the last year that on some months more than 50,000 persons witnessed the production of the new model A Ford.

Feathers on Hats

By JULIA BOTTOMLEY

In the hands of a French modiste a bit of a colorful feather can work wonders in imparting a definite style touch to a spring chapeau. Hats arriving from Paris are demonstrating this fact daily. With les Parisiennes the hat with a feather has already become a leading favorite.

The day feather motifs are not only most unique and sprightly in color but they are handled in ways quite unusual. They are always of the flat variety and they are at all times positioned with great cunning—perhaps inset through the crown or the brim, or in small bunches flattened over the ear. Pointed perky quills—a group of five-sized ones—offer a most pleasing one-side trim for a snug-fitting felt or soft straw.

straw shapes give little curious shaped feathers give a flattering note, and for early spring hats of this genre are indeed apropos.

Each of the hats in this group can trace its modishness to the presence of a feather or feathers which have been positioned by a deft hand. The first model is one of those pliable straws draped like a felt. A bit of a feather adds a piquant note, posed, as it is, so coquettishly over one eye.

A curled quill motif in bright yellow trims the brown felt hat to the right at the top.

An ornament of soft lion feathers is placed at each side of the off-the-face felt hat positioned in the group just between the two above described.

The hat next below shows a long-side brim which also turns up smartly, for-off-the-face effects have been revived. The large flat motif is composed of tiny pasted multi-colored feathers.

In the circle, two curled coque feather novelties are effectively posed on a simple felt toque.

Iridescent coques enhance the straw shape which concludes the group.

MAKING SPLIT PEA SOUP

Wash and pick over half a pound of split peas and soak them overnight. Cook with four cupsful of water, a pinch of baking soda, two tablespoonfuls of bacon cubes, one small onion sliced and a tiny pinch of summer savory. Cook slowly for about three hours, or until the peas are very soft. Press through a sieve and slightly thicken with a tablespoonful of butter or bacon fat rubbed with a tablespoonful of flour. Season with salt, pepper and add a few drops of table sauce to each helping. Serve with toasted crackers or croutons.

KEEPING WAXED FLOOR IN CONDITION

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

To recondition a waxed floor, it should occasionally be given a very thin coat of wax, put on with a woolen cloth, and polished, if possible, with a weighted brush. This is a good job for which to call in one of the boys in the family or the neighborhood. Pushing one of these weighted polishers around is fairly heavy work, but it requires just the sort of muscular effort a boy likes to use. Needless to say, the room should be prepared for a waxing of this kind by having the furniture moved out, and the walls, woodwork, and floor completely cleaned and dusted.

Get the Schoolboy to Help Wax the Floor.

Waxed floors, says the United States Department of Agriculture, should be swept with a soft brush or mop entirely free from oil. Oil softens wax and should never be used on it in any way. About once a week a waxed floor should be given a more thorough cleaning with a cloth wrung out of warm, soapy water, or moistened with turpentine or gasoline. Applying too much wax is a common mistake. Rub white spots with a woolen cloth or weighted brush, applying a little wax if necessary. Keep a slip-on cover on the weighted brush when it is not in use. Never allow it to come into contact with oil.

Varnished floors may be swept with a soft brush, a mop, or a broom covered with a cotton-fannel bag, and then rubbed with a cloth or mop slightly moistened with floor oil or kerosene. The oil gradually dries out of varnish after it has been applied to wood, and unless restored by an occasional rubbing with an oiled cloth the varnish becomes exceedingly hard and brittle. Use only enough oil to moisten slightly the cloth or mop.

Notes of Bell

A good bell, fairly struck, should give out three distinct notes—a "fundamental" note, the octave above, or "nominal," and the octave below, or "hum-note." Very few bells have any two of these notes (and hardly any all three) in unison; the "hum-note" being generally a little sharper and the "fundamentals" a little flatter than their respective "nominals."

Astronomical Term

A "light year" is the term employed in astronomy to indicate the distance a ray of light traveling 186,000 miles a second can traverse in a year. Thus one can easily compute the distance of the present outermost visible limits of space which are estimated to be 100,000,000 light years away from the earth.—Exchange.

said Mr. Thrush. It simply means that the clock has not yet been wound up, or that something is the matter with it.

"I really could never understand why they didn't say that time hurried along with its hands."

"They always speak of it flying—very, very funny."

"You spoke in the same way," said Mrs. Thrush.

"That shows what a habit it has become," said Mr. Thrush, "but still I think they should do less talking about time flying and more about birds flying. For we have wings and we do fly."

"But quite differently from time," said Mr. Vireo, in his shy, sweet voice.

"You see, time goes on all the time. It never stops. And we do."

"We rest, we sleep, we eat, we keep still, we sing, we do so many things."

"Yes," ended Mr. Vireo, "I think it deserves to have the word flying used for it."

And the Thrush thought so, too.

Fairy Tale for Children

By Mary Graham Bonner

"We are safer in the night time so we travel then," said Mr. Thrush as he hurried the rest of the family so they could start their spring journey.

"May we join?" asked the Vireo family. They are very shy and they like to travel at night for in the daytime they are afraid of being seen and hurt.

"Yes," said Mr. Thrush, "we will go from tree to tree and take rests as we started off and very slowly they took the trip.

They traveled only at night and they flew from one tree to another.

They said they all felt too shy to travel in the daytime.

At last they reached their summer home. The Vireo family settled in the woods where some of their relations were.

They knew they would be quiet where they had settled for it looked wild and as if few people came along that way.

The Thrushes chose some nice bushes for their homes, and the Warblers soon got their nest homes ready for the season.

When the other birds saw that they had arrived they were very much pleased.

"You were so late," they said. "We were afraid you would not come at all."

"Oh, yes," said Mr. Thrush, "but we kept putting off the starting of our trip and time just seemed to fly by."

"Just as we did, eh?" asked the other birds.

"Yes, time and birds are both good flyers," said Mr. Thrush. "But the strange part of it is that one is always hearing about the time flying, and not nearly so much about birds flying."

"True," said Mr. Warbler, "I wonder why that is."

"I am sure I don't know," said Mr. Thrush. "Of course, when it is said that time flies it means that time hurries along."

"For time doesn't really fly. It hasn't wings. It has clocks and hands on the clocks that keep time and go straight on all through the days and nights, with winding."

"There are clocks named after us," said Mrs. Cuckoo.

"Yes," said Mr. Cuckoo, proudly.

"And they have a little make-believe bird which looks and speaks as we do."

"But clocks often don't go," said Mrs. Thrush.

"The time goes on just the same,"

NO GUESSWORK IN ROASTING MEAT

Rib Roast With Yorkshire Pudding.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Probably at no point is the inexperienced cook so doubtful of success as when she attempts to serve roast meat for dinner. Steaks and chops and all the small meats, cooked in plain sight on top of the stove, are fairly simple; but when you've shut your dinner up in the oven and have to keep peeping at it to guess when it's done—the outside generally looks done right away!—and you realize that, on hardly ever have roasts anyway, just for two—you go through an agony of uncertainty until the carving knife reveals your results.

As a matter of fact, all this guesswork and anxiety about roasting meat can be very easily avoided. A roast meat thermometer can be purchased for a comparatively small sum, and with it you can tell to a hazy when your meat should be taken from the oven, according as you may want it rare, medium, or well-done. The thermometer is thrust into the thickest part of the meat, and when it registers a given temperature, the inside of the meat, which you cannot see, will be as you want it.

These directions for cooking a rib roast of beef, given by the bureau of home economics, will explain how the roast meat thermometer is used.

Select a two or three-rib standing roast. Wipe it off with a damp cloth, rub with pepper, salt, and flour. Place the roast fat side up in an open pan without water. As the fat melts and cooks out it will baste the meat. Make a small incision through the fat covering and insert a roast meat thermometer so that the bulb reaches the center of the roast. Place the meat in a hot oven (300 degrees Fahrenheit). Sear the meat for 20 or 30 minutes until lightly browned, then reduce the oven temperature to about 300 degrees Fahrenheit and continue the cooking until the thermometer in the meat reads about 140 degrees Fahrenheit for a rare roast, 100 degrees Fahrenheit for a medium roast, or 130 degrees Fahrenheit for a well-done roast. A rib roast will probably require 16 minutes to the pound to be rare, 22 minutes to the pound to be medium, and about 30 minutes to the pound to be well done. Higher oven temperatures than 300 degrees Fahrenheit will shorten the time of cooking, but it will increase the shrinkage of the roast, and both the meat and drippings may become too brown. Reducing the oven temperature to 250 degrees Fahrenheit will decrease the shrinkage markedly and will cook the meat uniformly, but longer time will be required.

"When a rib roast will not stand upright, lay it on a rack in an open pan without water, and insert the roast meat thermometer directly into the center of the lean meat, not through the fat covering as in the standing roast. Baste occasionally during cooking to prevent drying out.

"Serve the roast on a hot platter, surrounded by browned potatoes or by squares of Yorkshire pudding." And if you do not have a recipe for Yorkshire pudding, which is the traditional accompaniment to roast beef, the bureau of home economics will be glad to send you one, as well as suggestions on other ways of cooking beef.

DR. CALDWELL'S THREE RULES

Dr. Caldwell watched the results of constipation for 47 years, and believed that no matter how careful people are of their health, diet and exercise, constipation will occur from time to time. Of next importance, then, is how to treat it when it comes. Dr. Caldwell always was in favor of getting as close to nature as possible, hence his remedy for constipation is a mild vegetable compound. It can not harm the most delicate system and is not habit forming.

The Doctor never did approve of drastic purges and surgery. He did not believe they were good for human beings to put into their systems. Use Syrup Pepsin for yourself and members of the family in constipation, biliousness, sour and crummy stomach, bad breath, no appetite, head-aches, and to break up fevers and colds. Get a bottle today, at any drugstore and observe these three rules of health: Keep the head cool, the feet warm, the bowels open. For a free trial bottle, just write "Syrup Pepsin," Dept. 23, Monticello, Illinois.

Good Things to Eat

By NELLIE MAXWELL

"No endeavor is in vain; the reward is in the doing and the pleasure of pursuing to the prize the vanquished gain."

The commonest things in life which have to do with our foods are often the ones we know least about. Yeasts, molds and bacteria enter into all our food problems. They are necessary to life and at the same time cause its destruction.

Yeast—the small plant which is used to make our bread digestible and palatable, grows by budding. One small bud throws out another until a mass of plant life is formed which permeates the glutinous mixture of flour and liquid, making it full of gas which the growing plant throws off in its growth. The mixing and kneading of the dough gets every part of the mass well filled with the yeast buds, making an even porous dough which results in a light, tender and digestible loaf when well baked.

Yeast plants to grow must have food, warmth and moisture. A lukewarm mixture is needed to dissolve the yeast, then the food, which is starch of the flour, milk and water for liquid and sugar also for food. The starches and sugar during the growth of the plant make the gas which holds up the dough. In baking the cells of the bread are set and the gas expelled by the heat.

Those who have a small garden space in the back yard may provide themselves with good vegetables for the winter. Carrots, Bermuda onions, beets, parsnips, rutabagas all add to the vegetable cellar. Celery, too, may be packed in a trench, watered, occasionally and kept for months crisp and delicious.

The important thing in a vegetable cellar is the temperature. Mushrooms may be grown on a shelf of earth, adding much to the winter menu. Fifty degrees is a good temperature to keep vegetables and a degree or ten higher will be better for the growth of mushrooms. In the fall the thrifty housewife will go to the fields and gather the mushrooms for drying. After cooking for a few hours they are ready for any dish. At this season when the jelly and jams are getting low try:

one and one-half pounds of carrots through the fine knife of the meat chopper, add one quart of cold water, cover and boil for twenty minutes. Add three lemons, or two oranges and one lemon, scrubbed and thinly sliced; cook for an hour, then add two-thirds of the measure of carrot and fruit and sugar. Stir and cook quickly until it is jelled. Add one-fourth to one-half cupful of almonds, walnuts or peanuts and pour into jelly glasses.

The molds of cheese add flavor which enhances its food value. Such cheeses as Roquefort have a mold peculiar to themselves. It was originally made of goat's milk and it is said that a young shepherd left a piece of cheese with some of the peasant's black bread in a cave and when he found it the mold had given such a piquant flavor to the cheese that he took it home and his mother thereafter put cheeses with the bread in the cave to ripen and from that time Roquefort became popular.

Bacteria is a microscopic form of life which are servants as well as destroyers. The good ones enrich our food with flavors, those of disease break down and destroy the body. They work to build and others work to tear down.

Lesson for March 17

THE CHRISTIAN'S SABBATH

LESSON TEXT—Exodus 20:8-11;
Matthew 12:1-8.
GOLDEN TEXT—For the Son of man,
is Lord even of the Sabbath Day.
PRIMARY TOPIC—God's Day, Sunday.
JUNIOR TOPIC—God's Day, Sunday.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOP-IC—Keeping the Lord's Day.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOP-IC—The Lord's Day in Modern Life.

The designation "Christian's Sabbath" is a misnomer. The word "Sabbath" has a definite meaning. It signifies rest, cessation from action.
When God had finished the heavens and earth, He desisted from creative action (Gen. 2:1-3). Since God's creative work was completed in six days,
He ceased from action on the seventh day, which was therefore called the Sabbath, or Rest Day. Five definite objects may be assigned to the Sabbath:

1. To commemorate the work of creation (Gen. 2:3, cf. Ex. 20:11).
2. To keep alive the knowledge of the true God. Creation witnesses of a creator. Keeping the Sabbath in mind kept in mind the creation, and the creation made real the Creator.
3. A forward look to the time when man shall enjoy full fellowship with God (Heb. 4:1-10).
4. To Israel it was a sign of the covenant between them and God (Deut. 5:12-15).
5. It was made for man's well-being (Mark 2:27).

At least while man's earthly condition continues, the Sabbath is needed to keep a proper balance between his body and his soul.

1. The Fourth Commandment (Ex. 20:8-11).

1. Obligations enjoined (20:9, 10).
(1) Work through six days (v. 9).
The command to work six days is just as binding as the command to rest the seventh day. In fact, there can be no rest unless there first be work.

(2) Rest on the seventh day (v. 10).
There must be cessation from all work on the Sabbath. Since God gave the example and then sanctified the day, it should be kept holy. It was not only to give relief to the physical body but to be a time when man's thought would be turned to God. It was designed to keep fresh in his mind the consciousness of God and His mercies. The human spirit should be refreshed by the study of God's Word.

2. How this commandment may be broken.

(1) By engaging in labor or pursuing business interests on this sacred
day.

(2) By devoting it to amusement,
since it was designed to keep fresh in mind the consciousness of God.

(3) By making it a day of feasting.

II. The Son of Man is Lord of the Sabbath (Matt. 12:1-8).

1. The hungry disciples plucking corn (v. 1).

This took place on the Sabbath day
and became the occasion for criticism.

2. The Pharisees finding fault (v. 2).
They asserted that Christ's disciples were breaking the law, when in reality they were only violating the traditions with which the law was encumbered. The Lord's purpose in instituting the Sabbath was to conserve man's highest interest and contribute to his happiness. It is extremely unfortunate when human tradition is elevated above the Word of God.

3. Christ's reply to the cavils of the Pharisees (v. 8-9).

In this reply He shrewdly answered
the Pharisees and pressed His transcendent claim as to the dignity of His person. This claim moved them to plot His death. As to His claim, observe:

(1) He is greater than their greatest king (v. 9, 4). David, when rejected, was forced to do that which was unlawful for him to do (1 Sam. 1).
Because they had rejected the one greater than David, the plucking of the ears of corn became a necessity.

(2) He is greater than their sacrifice and priesthood (v. 5). If the priests, because of their position and services, could violate the Sabbath laws and be blameless, much more the One greater than they in performing
His work of sacrifice and redemption
for them should be considered guilt-less. He was the true sacrifice and priest.

(3) He is greater than the temple
(v. 6). The temple, with all its gorgeous rites and ceremonies, was typical of Christ. Much more than did He have the right to do what He did.

(4) He is greater than the Sabbath
(v. 8), because He is Lord of the Sabbath.

Great Task of Happiness

It was for the joy that was set before Him that our Lord endured the Cross, despising the shame. The joy of the Ascension is but an echo of the joy of Bethlehem, and the task of Christ was one "great task of happiness."

To Gladden Our Hearts

Love's siftings often precede His liftings. He lifts to get rid of the chaff, and He lifts to gladden our hearts.—Selected.

Scientist Says Earth Is Made of Material That Was Expelled From the Sun

By DR. H. S. WASHINGTON, Scientist.

ANALYSIS of the sun's atmosphere by astronomers reveals that its chemical composition is just like that of our own earth.
This is conclusive proof that our earth is composed of material that was originally expelled from the outer part of the sun.

This belief is further strengthened by study of the chemical composition of meteors which strike the earth from time to time. They have the same composition, proving thereby that they too had their origin in the sun just as did our own earth.

Study of the earth's composition reveals the fact that while there are 92 chemical elements in existence, 99 8-10 of the earth is composed of 13 elements. The other elements only make up two-tenths of one per cent of the earth.

Iron leads the list composing 40 per cent of the earth. Oxygen is next, forming 27 per cent. Silicon forms 13 per cent and nitrogen 8. The other important elements are calcium, aluminum, sulphur, nickel, sodium, phosphorus, potassium and hydrogen.

But while iron comprises 40 per cent of the earth there is no way for man to get at most of this iron.

Most of the iron is at the very center of the earth, forming a core about 4,000 miles in thickness.

There is next a transitional layer which is a mixture of heavy rock of the sort known as peridotite and iron. At the start it is mostly all iron and it finally gives way to a layer that is all peridotite. This layer is thought to be composed chiefly of a kind of peridotite known as du-nite.

The sort of meteors which fall to earth bear out this theory. They are of three general types. One is an all-iron type. The second is a mixture of iron and stone, the stone being largely peridotite. The third type is composed entirely of stone.

The theory of an iron-core earth is borne out by the fact that the measurement of the density of the earth shows that the earth is five and a half times as dense as water, whereas the crust of the earth is only about two and three-quarters as dense as water.

Model Child of Today Very Seldom Does Any- thing to Startle the World

By DR. JOHN J. B. MORGAN, Northwestern University.

Children who are models of obedience to discipline seldom do anything startling in the world, and those who rebel at restraint become material for future ultra-moderns, religious radicals, and criminals.

Frequently a mother becomes obsessed with the idea that she must do the best for her child without having a well defined purpose in her supervision. Doing her best easily becomes such close direction that all opportunity for spontaneity is denied. It leads to the treatment commonly called nagging.

Even more pernicious in its effect than nagging is the smothering of a child's individuality under the guise of affection. The parent who uses such tactics overburdens the child with an ever increasing load of obligations, because of the parent's self-sacrifice, and convinces himself that he is doing the best for his child.

True affection of a parent for his child, means not an increasing intimacy of the bonds which tie them together but a better understanding of the sort of child who is developing. Such an understanding involves some conception of where the child's life is pointing, an analysis of the things, that will be for the child's best interest and guidance only in so far as the child's own best interests are concerned.

When subject to too much parental love and influence, children may become mere echoes of those who have them in charge, or they may break through the restraint and become too independent.

Another group feels the restraint imposed upon them, attempt to get away, but can't quite make it. Those persons become neurotics, driven between conflicting impulses, to conform, on the one hand, and to be independent, on the other, but never having the stamina to do either.

Man Lost When Out of the Right Relationship to Almighty God

By REV. W. S. COOK, Cleveland.

A man is "lost" when he is out of right relationship with God.
No chapter in the gospels throws more light on the character of Jesus than the fifteenth of Luke. It is the incidental rather than the purposeful that gives us our best basis for judgment of men.

Jesus knew the value of a sheep. If it were lost it was worth hunting for. When it was found there was rejoicing. A coin had value and there was joy when it was found. A man lost and then found must certainly be of greater significance. Jesus' estimate of a man's value determines his course in life. The Pharisees' estimate determined theirs and the chapter at the beginning sets forth the contrast. "The Son of Man came to seek and save the lost."

When is a man lost? We have a right to inquire. A man is lost when he is out of his right relationship with his Heavenly Father. In such a case the son cannot share in the family life of God, he is in a far country. When a child cares for some one else as much as it does for its father it is lost. The father has suffered life's greatest tragedy.
When the prodigal said "I will arise and go by my father" he was found.

It was Jesus' business to set in motion influences which would restore right relations between the Father and His children. His method was through personal contacts. The disciple is not greater than his master. The church must go out and seek the lost.

American Frontier Exists in "Melting Pot" Districts of Large Cities

By DR. WARREN N. CLARK, Welfare Worker.

Danger and opportunity, the two outstanding aspects of the frontier of the old West, are reproduced in the American frontier of today, the melting pot districts of the great cities.

Today's industrial frontier has developed its gang life to an extent never dreamed of in the frontier that knew the Daltons and the James boys. It is reaching out, too, for political power, a far more dangerous weapon than any known in the old West.

The destiny of cities like Chicago and Detroit is not being determined in the semi-childless apartment hotel sections, but in the foreign settlements with eight and ten children in a family. In a democracy, numbers count. It will not profit us to train our children for leadership if the majority is not trained to appreciate intelligent leadership.

HOW TO LIVE LONGER

By JOHN CLARENCE FUNK

TRY IT

HAVE you ever tried a winter vacation? Some of you have probably "gone South," or taken a
"cruise," or even "followed spring around the world" in the winter. In which case you have been extremely fortunate and doubtless have had a wonderful time. But the present, discussion concerns a winter vacation,
not a vacation in the winter season.
The two things can be entirely different.

Each year winter resorts are becoming more and more fashionable.
Tobogganing, skiing, skating and snow-shoeing in the northern woods are quite the things to do these days. But aside from the social gesture involved in such a pilgrimage, it is one of the most magnificent opportunities you can give to your body.

Fortunately one does not have to spend any more, and often not as much, on a vacation of this kind as he is compelled to spend on the more conventional journey to the shore or mountains in the hot season.

For the greater proportion of the population in the United States and for practically all of the people in Canada, winter is either at one's back door or at most only a few hundred miles distant. Therefore, instead of grumbling about it, step out into it and put it to use. The winter vacation is one of the best ways to do this.

Those who have not spent days in the winter woods plowing through glistening snow, or are ignorant of the thrills of winter sports have something to live for on the score of amusement alone.

It is not possible even to suggest the genuine delights that are connected with an outing of a week or ten days in the December or January woods. And, as a matter of fact, one does not need the background of a formal winter playground to experience the joys of wintertime. All one really requires is a good companion and the will to make the most out of the beauty and life-building qualities that winter offers.

To the many who are looking for a new thrill, try a real winter vacation.
The physical benefits from an outing
of this character will have to be experienced in order to be appreciated.

So, no matter how healthy you are,
put the winter vacation on your schedule. And see what happens.
"You'll be surprised!"

BEAUTY

THE desire for personal beauty is almost as deep-seated as for life itself. Women and men fortunately take the biblical statement that "God made man in his own image" as a literal fact. It follows, that to develop personal attractiveness or to keep that which nature bountifully bestowed is a most natural objective.

In these days of "service" beauty has not been overlooked. And this is as it should be. Beauty salons and barber shops abound. And millions of dollars annually, through them, are taken from our pockets and given to those whom we believe can make us more pleasing to our mirrors and to the rest of the world. Who would have it otherwise?

Nevertheless, when it comes to buying beauty, humanity is very prone to be gullible. One causes a phantom but with no more effort than to reach into the pocket and take out money.
It is here that a fair objection may be raised.

A very misleading statement is this one: "Beauty is only skin deep." Don't believe it! Not even for a moment.
Beauty is much deeper than that.
In fact, beauty goes into the very heart of one.

Certainly, the set of your features,
the cut or condition of your hair and the style of your clothes all play their part in your general appearance. But one can have the best of all these things and still lack that essential attractiveness that is only to be found in abounding good health. Dull eyes, sluggish blood and brain, an everlastingly tired body, are not the things that make for beauty. And this, no matter how beautiful you may happen to be.

Incidentally, no amount of rouge or hair-waving for the women, and no amount of shaving and massaging
for the men can give you what you lack. As auxiliaries to beauty? Yes.
But as a foundation for it? Positively no!

Red cheeks and lips, sparkling eyes,
a sprightly step and a keen brain are not to be got from beauty specialists or the lotions they offer for sale.

The only things that count in this connection are fresh air, a proper amount of wholesome food, plenty of rest, sufficient exercise, regular alimentary habits and a cheerful state of mind.

Patronize beauty parlors and barber shops by all means. Indeed if you don't you will be hair dead, for your conceit will be gone. But "patronize" the rules of health more.
Therein lies beauty.

For Colds

How many people you know end their colds with Bayer Aspirin! And how often you've heard of its prompt relief of sore throat or tonsillitis. No wonder millions take it for colds; neuralgia, rheumatism; and the aches and pains that go with them. The wonder is that anyone still worries through a winter without these tablets! They relieve quickly, yet have no effect whatever on the heart. Friends have told you Bayer Aspirin is marvelous; doctors have declared it harmless. Every druggist has it, with proven directions. Why not put it to the test?

Slaughter by Any Name

The report of the Pennsylvania game commission shows that 23,097 does were killed in the open season last year, a total less than had been first predicted. The course is defended as "necessary to reduce the deer herd to a size commensurate with its natural food supply."

But this solution of the Malthusian problem in deerland stirred up as much criticism as the original theory when first applied to the human race one hundred thirty years ago.

When your Children Cry for It

Castoria is a comfort when Baby is fretful. No sooner taken than the little one is at ease. If restless, a few drops soon bring contentment. No harm done, for Castoria is a baby remedy, meant for babies. Perfectly safe to give the youngest infant; you have the doctors' word for that! It is a vegetable product and you could use it every day. But it's in an emergency that Castoria means most. Some night when constipation must be relieved—or colic pains—or other suffering. Never be without it; some mothers keep an extra bottle, uncapped, to make sure there will always be Castoria in the house. It is effective for older children, too; read the book that comes with it.

Hoover's Great American Ideals Mark His First Steps

Happy should the land be, that it is so fortunate as to have at the head of its government a man like President Herbert Hoover, who, in his inaugural address, foreshadowed what the people could expect of him during his administration, and his sound, wholesome advice to his countrymen on all things pertaining to our good and welfare which should be our means of safeguard for the future.

There was no "I" business about the address, but in everything "WE," the people, was expressed throughout this remarkable document.

From beginning to end, he expressed his undying faith in Almighty God and asked the people to assist him in carrying out true American Ideals for which we have stood since the foundation of this government.

Hoover's first advice when speaking of respect for existing laws was expressed when he said that the lack of observing a certain law, would lead to the disrespect of all law, and that if the citizens do not favor a certain law, it should be their duty to discourage its violation and work for its repeal.

Hoover promised a vigorous enforcement of existing laws, in which he asked the people's assistance. In connection with this statement, he frankly admits that while so much has been advocated by our reform organizations, we can read between the lines that there has been a laxity in our courts—Hoover also takes the liberty of saying that the first step toward the end of rigid law enforcement should no longer be delayed.

He glorified in our land which he said was rich in resources; filled with millions of happy homes, blessed with comfort and opportunity, and in no nation are the fruits of accomplishment more secure, or the government more worthy of respect. He expressed no fear for the future, which he said was bright with hope.

That remarkable closing in his address, should be framed and exposed in every American home: "In the presence of my countrymen, mindful of the solemnity of this occasion, knowing what the task means and the responsibility it involves, I beg your tolerance, your aid and your co-operation. I ask the help of Almighty God in this service to my country to which you have called me."

In these days when other nations are sharpening their swords and making faces at each other, when even in this country, elements which would gladly rob us of our high-prized liberty, when the blazing torch would eagerly take the place of the friendly home fireside where peace reigns and freedom abounds, how fortunate we are to have as President of our country, a man so deeply interested in our well being as to step down among his people and ask their assistance, their prayers, and above all, implore the blessings of God, in the performance of his duty. Like unto Washington and Lincoln, his greatest aim is to be of benefit to the whole people instead of a favored few. He will fulfill the expectations of the thousands upon thousands who worked and prayed for his election to the exalted position.—Let us not fear; the country is safe in his hands.

Tires for the new Ford are specially made to give long wear

WHEN the new Ford was designed, it was immediately apparent that a new tire would have to be made to match the car's performance. It was distinctly a new problem, for here was a car with quicker acceleration, greater speed and more braking efficiency than any car of similar size or weight. So that every Ford owner might be assured of maximum tire mileage at the lowest cost, the Ford Motor Company devoted many months to research and experiment in conjunction with the leading tire manufacturers. Though the Ford tires are designated as 30 x 4.50, they have the resiliency and air space of much larger tires because of the drop center rim of the steel-spoke wheels. For best results, the tires on the new Ford should be kept inflated to an air pressure of 35 pounds and checked regularly to insure this pressure all the time. This is important. Low inflation breaks down the sidewalls of a tire. By causing overheating, it also destroys the rubber that acts as an insulation, with consequent separation of the cord. At the end of each 5000 miles, when you have the front wheels packed with grease, it is a good plan to have the wheel alignment checked. This will prevent premature wear. When punctures come, as they will with any tire, you will find the Ford dealer particularly well-equipped to make repairs quickly and at small cost. See him, too, for replacements. Then you will be sure of getting tires built specially for the Ford car according to definite Ford specifications.

As a result, certain definite specifications were developed for tires for the new Ford. These specify cords of certain strength and texture, a large volume of tread and side-wall rubber, sturdy non-skid design, and reinforced plies for protection against bruise breaks—all the strong features of construction formerly considered for only the largest tires. Great care also was taken to secure the best riding qualities in connection with the transverse springs and the Houdaille shock absorbers. Ford car according to definite Ford specifications.

The albino half-closed his eyes, the pale eyeballs glittering through the slit of his lids as he reflected on this proposition, tapping a careless finger on his knee. He glanced absent-mindedly toward the bar, his thoughts wholly occupied with the matter in hand. A pair of eyes that gazed back at him drew his own and he found himself looking at Bentley, the man who repped with the Three Bar for Slade. The albino's suspicions were as fluid and easily roused as those of a beast of prey in a dangerous neighborhood. With one of those quick shifts of which his mind was capable he concentrated every mental effort toward linking Bentley with some unpleasant episode of the past. The man had turned away and Harper could only sense a vague feeling that he was dangerous to him, without definite point upon which to base his suspicions. At the sound of Harris' voice his mind made another lightning shift back to the present.

"Well?" Harris asked.

"Why, if I had anything to do with it, like you seem to think, I'd advise against our bucking each other," Harper said. "I'd try to get along—and declare hands off." He rose, nodded to the two men and returned to the stud game.

"He'll do it, too," Evans predicted. "There's that much fixed anyway—not a bad piece of work."

The two men returned to the bar and Brill moved close to Harris. For fifteen years he had stood behind that bar and observed the men of the whole countryside at their worst—and best; and he knew men. As well as if he had heard the words of the three at the table he knew that Harris and Harper had reached an agreement of some sort that was satisfactory to both.

Ten minutes later the five men rose to go. Harris looked at his watch.

"I'm off," he said to Evans. "I try and get the boys home by tomorrow morning if it's possible."

He went outside and mounted as the five rustlers swung to their saddles.

"I'm going your way as far as the forks," he said to Harper.

The three Bar men were treated to the sight of their foreman riding down the road beside Harper at the head of four of the worst rustlers in the state.

And behind the bar Brill moved softly back and forth when not serving drinks, pausing opposite first one group and then the next to dab at the polished wood with his cloth, listening carefully to the conversation and gauging it to determine whether the apparent sentiment toward the squatter foreman was sincere or would prove different when the men, flushed with undiluted rye, were unrestrained by his presence.

CHAPTER VII

There was a new contentment in the eyes of the Three Bar girl as she sat her horse beside Carlos Deane and looked off down the bottoms. A haze of smoke drifted above the little valley of the Crazy Loop. Three mule outfits were steadily slipping up the sage flats. The two rode down, to the fields with the pungent sage smoke drifting in their faces. Harris joined them, and swept his arm across the stretch of plowed ground.

"Can you picture that covered with a stand of alfalfa hay?" he asked.

The girl nodded.

"Yes—and cut and cured and in the stack yards," she said. "And a straight red run of Three Bar cows wintering under fence."

Harris wondered if her new contentment came wholly from the progress the Three Bar was making or was derived partly from the presence of Carlos Deane. Each man had recognized the other as a contender for the love of the Three Bar girl and during the two days of Deane's stay each one had been covertly sizing and estimating the caliber of the other man.

For a month prior to Deane's arrival Harris had been occupied from dawn till dark with the details of the new work. A hundred acres of plowed ground lay mellowing under the sun. The cowboys were out working the range in pairs, branding late-dropped calves and moving drifted stock back to the home range. Forty white-face bulls had been trail-herded from the railroad and thrown out along the side of the hills to replace the other bulls that had been rounded up and brought in. In a few more days the boys would come in from the range and gather at the horse ranch, preparatory to going out once more as the herd round-up.

"I'm about to take a vacation," Harris said. "The ranger is coming over to mark out some more trees for me and to run the U. S. brand on the logs we've already cut. I'm going back up in the hills with him to sort out a valley or two for summer range. We can get grazing permits on the Forest now—right in the best grass valleys. Each year we'll throw some cows up there to hold our rights. There'll always be good grass on the Forest Reserve, for they won't permit overstocking. The day will come when we'll be glad to have permits to summer-feed a thousand or so head on the Forest. I was thinking maybe you and Deane would like to make the jaunt."

"We'll go," the girl decided.

"We'll start in an hour or two," Harris said. "Just as soon as Wilton turns up. We'll only be gone five days at the most."

"Then I'll stretch my stay to cover it," Deane accepted. "I'd certainly hate to pass up a chance for a trip in the hills."

Calico had sidled off the plowing and was cropping grass at the edge of it. As Harris moved toward him Evans rode down the right-hand slope and the three waited for him.

"Moore and I were working in close and I thought I'd ride over to tell you that the wild bunch has lost a veteran," he said. "Some one put Barton out over in the Breaks."

Barton, whose name was linked with that of Harper, had been found with a rifle ball through his chest. His own gun, found by his outstretched hand, had showed one blackened cylinder, the empty shell sufficient proof that he had fired a single shot at his assailant.

The girl could find no sorrow in her heart over the passing of Barton but there was an uneasy feeling deep within her—a vague suspicion that she should be able to pronounce the killer's name. This elusive thought was crowded from her mind when the ranger rode up to the Three Bar accompanied by Slade, each man leading a pack horse.

"This is Everyday Business With Us," Harris Pointed Out.

"Slade's going to look over a little territory up on the Forest," Wilton explained. "So we can get it all done on one trip."

There was no way to avoid this unexpected addition to their party, and in half an hour the little cavalcade filed up a gulch back of the Three Bar, the ranger in the lead with his pack horse. By noon they made the first rims and followed over into a rolling country, heavily timbered in the main. In the early evening they rode out on to a low divide and Blind valley showed below them, a broad expanse of open grassland.

"Feed!" Harris said. "Feed, Worlds of it."

They made camp at the mouth of a branching canyon, just within the timber.

Harris sensed Deane's attitude toward it all for he knew something of the other man's way of life. Those with whom Deane was thrown most in contact were careful of appearances. It was unheard of in his code that a girl should jaunt for days accompanied by four men. Here appearances seemed entirely disregarded and no one gave the matter a thought.

The moon swung over the ridges and shed its radiance over Blind valley. Deane motioned to Billie and the girl rose and followed him to the edge of the timber where they sat on a blow-down.

"Billie, let me take you away from all this," he urged. "All this hard riding and rough man's work. Let

Trunk Tells Elephant of Proximity of Man

The elephant is probably the shrewdest and most adaptable of living animals and has no enemies except man. He eats anything that is green, and seems equally at home on the plains or in the forests and jungles, on the high mountain slopes or down in swampy lowlands. His trunk is one of the most extraordinary organs of nature—it contains the finest smelling apparatus on earth, and when the proximity of man is suspected the trunk is raised in the air and carefully turned in all directions, "feeling" for the man smell in the wind. Once an elephant gets that smell he does one of two things. He either retreats quietly and rapidly or charges. Years of experience in matching his wiles with those of man and his high-powered rifle has taught the elephant that it is safer to remain me give you the things that will shut out all the hardships. What's the use of going on like this?"

The girl was conscious of a vague sense of disappointment. She reflected that Deane's attitude was that of so many other men, his idea of love synonymous with shelter for the object of it, and his main plea was that of providing her with shelter against all the rough corners of life. Shelter! And what she wanted was to be part of things—to have a hand in running her own affairs.

"I don't want shelter!" she said. "And I can't think of anything else till after the Three Bar is a going concern."

The two went back and sat with the others round the dying fire, then all turned in for the night. Billie in her tepees and the men in their bed rolls with no other overhead shelter than the trees.

Near morning Deane was once more awakened by a clammy dampness on his face. A fine drizzle was falling. Slade was on his feet showing a few sticks of wood inside the flap of Billie's tepee.

Breakfast was cooked under the dripping trees. The outfit was packed up and the little procession filed away toward the next valley—and Carlos Deane proved his real caliber to Harris.

Throughout the day they rode in a fine drizzle; in the timber the wet branches whipped them and sprayed water down the necks of their slickers; in the boggy meadows of the bottoms the mosquitoes hovered round them in humming swarms. At night they made camp and slept in damp bed rolls with the clammy mist chilling them. The next day was the same.

Deane's neck was raw and chafed from the wet neckband of his flannel shirt and his hands and cheeks were puffed with the bites of the buzzing pests. But he had been cheerful throughout and had uttered no complaint.

Toward evening of the second gloomy day Harris rode up beside him.

"You'll do," he said.

"How's that?" Deane asked.

"There's maybe one man out of every two hundred that can go along like this and not get to blaming every one in sight for what's happening to him. I don't know as I'd have blamed you any if you'd been causing us all out for the past two days."

Deane laughed and shook his head.

"I've been rather enjoying it," he said.

"You're just a plain, old-fashioned liar, Deane," Harris returned. "You haven't been enjoying it any more than the rest of us—which is mighty little; but you've got inside enough to let on like it's a considerable sport—which is a whole lot."

"No one else has done any heading," Deane said. "So why should I?"

"This is everyday business with us," Harris pointed out. "And right unusual for you. There's likely a number of things you do every day back your way, but that doesn't signify that I could amble back there and perform as well as you."

"I suspect you'd make out all right," Deane said. "Anyway—I'm much obliged for the indorsement."

They camped again in the drizzle but by noon of the following day the sun peeped through. The ranger pulled up his horse as they struck a game trail in the saddle of a low divide. A bunch of shod horses had been over it a few hours past.

"Some of the albino's layout," Wilton surmised.

They rode out on to a spur and looked down on the low country. Slade and the ranger were going on the others returning to the Three Bar. Harris pointed to the country spread out below them.

"That's the Breaks," he told Deane. "I'll point out the albino's stronghold."

"While they're looking I want to talk to you," Slade said to Billie.

"Let's get together," he said, when the others had passed on. "Why are you so dead set on making a squatter outfit of the Three Bar? Don't you know the nesters will flock in here and cut the range all up as soon as they see a chance?"

"Not my range," she said. "Outside of the V L and the Halfmoon D there's not another site they can get water for, except maybe a couple of spring gulches where flood reservoirs will hold back enough to water a forty. So we'll still control our home range."

"But there's a dozen sites down in my range," he said.

"And a dozen small outfits wouldn't run any more cows than you do now," she said. "Why don't you have men file on all those sites?"

Does it Pay to Advertise?

One of the most persistent advertisers in the history of success was Robinson Crusoe. He knew what he wanted—a ship—and he put up an ad for one. He slung a shirt on a pole at the top of his island; that, in the language of the sea, was plain to every seafaring man. The circulation was small. There was no other medium, but Crusoe kept at it, despite the fact that he got no inquires for a long time. He changed his copy as one garment after another was frayed out, and in the end got what he wanted, was happy and his name and fame have come down to ages. There was only one 'possible' for him and he got that—not at first, but in the end. Suppose Crusoe had taken down that signal after, say, a year and declared, "Advertising doesn't pay; re-investment must be my policy in the future." Where would he and his story be now? Put up your signal and keep it there; advertising PAYS!

Why Should You go to Church?

Because the church is the mightiest agency on earth for realization of human progress. It presents the noblest ideals of life, and points the way to their realization. In its advocacy of civic and social righteousness it does more than all other organizations or institutions combined to make crime difficult and virtue easy.
