RAILROAD RUMBLINGS

Fireman and Mrs. Louis Adams left Sunday to be permanently located at Tucumcari.

Mrs. Ford Kellar wife of Trainmaster's Clerk Ford Kellar, came in last Saturday from Tucumcari to make Carrizozo their future home.

Mrs. Ira Greer and children left Tuesday for Tucumcari, to make that place their future home.

Seven cars of cattle were shipped from Carrizozo Tuesday and four from Capitan.

The Fundamentals of Safety

In the opinion of the head of the National Safety Council, the four fundamentals of accident prevention are a belief in safety, acceptance of the principles of personal responsibility by every citizen, an active, not a passive attitude toward the accident menace and leadership to eradicate it.

Automobile accidents are the result of 8 causes--recklessness, incompetence or ignorance. Few are the unpreventable accidents.

Great industries, such as the railroads, have made amazing success in preventing accidents by study, education and enforcement of working rules.

Legislative accident prevention panaceas such as compulsory liability insurance, begin at the wrong end of the problem by attempting to indemnify instead of prevent.

There is one Chamber of Commerce in California that refuses to get excited about the fight between the Southern Pacific and Great Northern and Western Pacific railroads.

Therefore, be it resolved that the Livermore C. of C. which regards all of the correspondence received is not familiar with the project or the necessity for the construction of said railroad, remain absolutely neutral in the controversy.

CRYSTAL THEATRE

Friday--The Stars of "The Big Parade" together with John Gilbert and Renee Adoree in "The Cossacks" and a two-reel comedy.

Thursday and Sunday Matinee--Audrey Ferris and James Murray in "The Little Wildcat" and "Tarzan" serial.

Monday Night Only--Lina Basquette and Robert Armstrong in "Celebrity," a Pathe fight picture with lots of comedy.

Tuesday and Wednesday--Tim McCoy in "The Law of the Range" and "Felix" Comedy.

Thursday and Friday--Greta Garbo in "Wild Orchids."

Ludlow--Jones

At the home of Rev. and Mrs. T. V. Ludlow last Sunday, Thomas Ludlow, Jr., and Miss Lucille Jones, both of Carrizozo, were united in marriage.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Bullard of Luna, N. M., and the groom the son of the pastor of the local Methodist Church.

The young couple are well known here and have many friends who are extending their congratulations.

Tonight, Mrs. Reynolds will entertain at a joint affair, which will be a shower for Mrs. Ludlow and a general entertainment, at which, both sisters will be honored guests.

Ten Year Old Boy, Musical Prodigy

Stephenville, Texas, Empire:

Edwin Donaldson, aged 10 years, who is visiting his aunt, Mrs. O. O. Gaines, of Dublin, was a guest of the Fine Arts Department at the chapel hour Friday, and a rare treat it was, to hear one so young, perform as do the professionals.

If I Had a Million

The Abo and Gran Quivira

In an interesting article in the El Palacio for the month of May, we find much ancient history of interest concerning the Gran Quivira and Abo, where ruins still tell of human habitation of centuries ago.

The Gran Quivira is about 40 miles east of south from Quarro and is situated in the midst of a barren and elevated country.

The ruins consist of the remains of a large church or cathedral with a monastery attached; a small church or chapel and the remains of the town extending 900 feet east, west and 300 north and south.

From our earliest knowledge of New Mexico we find the Gran Quivira spoken of as a place of remarkable interest, and the most fabulous accounts are related of it.

John Mims, Jr.

beloved son of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Mims, died the first of this week from injuries received by being thrown from a horse.

Johnny had been in the habit of horseback riding, but the last one he tried was a nervous and vicious animal which threw him and death resulted from the injuries.

Young Mims had reached the age of 14 years, and we presume that his fancy riding was formed from a desire that when he had reached the proper age, to be a Forest Ranger like his father.

The Mims family are well known here and lived in Carrizozo for about two years, after which they lived at Alamogordo and Ruidoso, Mr. Mims being in the Forest Service.

John was exceptionally well advanced in school, being a sophomore in High School at the

MUSIC REVUE to Stop Here

Helen Strakova, formerly of the Chicago Opera, and her Revue of eight people, will stop over in Carrizozo Monday night to give a performance at the Crystal Theatre.

This troupe will make a stop-over from Tucumcari to El Paso, and have strictly high-class entertainment of the revue type, including singing, dancing, comedy and novelty skits.

The picture to be shown in connection is "Celebrity," a prize fight comedy by Pathe.

Admission will be 25 and 50c.

Summer Orchestra to Play

The Carrizozo Summer Orchestra will play several numbers at the Crystal Theatre on some date which will be announced later.

This orchestra is composed of members of the High School who are in town, augmented by boys who are home from college, numbering about 14 members in all, under the direction of J. C. Burkett.

Schmelling Wins

Carrizozo fight fans heard the big fight last night over the radio, between Schmelling and Uzeudun, the former winning the decision in a fierce 15-round contest at New York.

The Wm. Ferguson Family from the Nogal-Mesa, were Carrizozo visitors yesterday, doing some shopping at our business houses and returning home in the evening.

Attention, Masons!

There will be a Special Communication of Carrizozo Lodge No. 41, A. F. & A. M., on Monday night, July 1, for the purpose of conferring the Fellowcraft Degree.

All Master Masons are cordially invited. C. F. Grey, W. M., S. F. Miller, Secretary.

thoughtfulness, John was cited before a large company of Boy Scouts.

John was a model boy, deeply religious in his very nature and possessing a wonderful initiative in anything he would undertake.

Mrs. Mims taught piano in all places where they lived, being an exceptionally talented musician.

Mr. Mims is a member of Carrizozo Lodge No. 41, A. F. & A. M., and the fraternity tender its deepest sympathy.

FORT STANTON NEWS

A determined Fort Ball Club journeyed to Fort Bliss for games Saturday and Sunday with the 82nd Field Artillery and returned with two well earned victories, scores 11-1 and 29-8.

This now evens the games to 3 each for these two teams. The weather was very warm for both games, but Flores and Gifford seemed to thrive on it and pitched invincible ball at will.

The 4th of July committee has completed major arrangements for the big celebration planned for the Fort on that date, with an extra ball game thrown in on July 3.

A goodly number of Fort folks and local followers of the team were in El Paso to witness the game at Fort Bliss, among whom were Mrs. Brockwell and daughters, James and Monroes Howard, Al Basford, Farr, Clark and Herting.

Plans are being made to move the ball diamond down on the flats just above the picnic grounds for the ball games July 3 and 4.

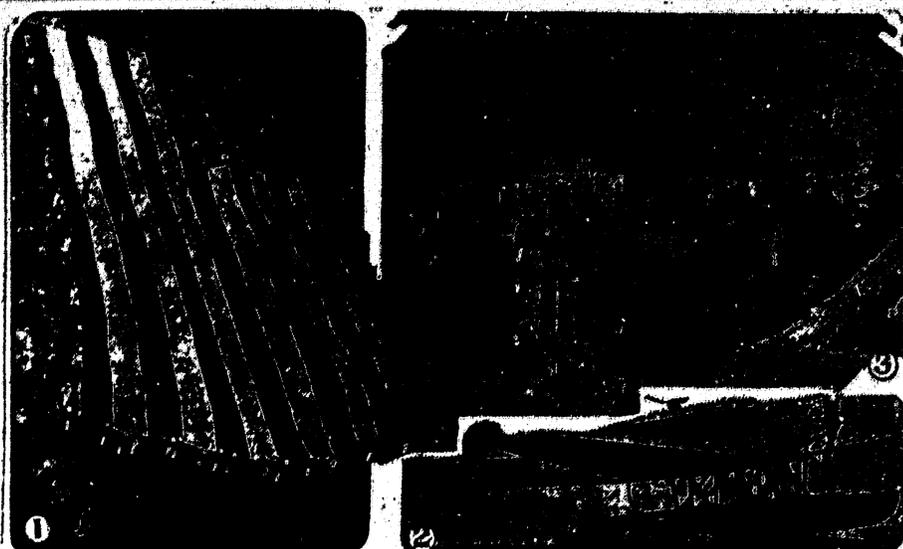

Revival Services

Rev. Roy T. Houts and family will conduct a two weeks' Revival Meeting at the Methodist Church beginning next Sunday night.

They are all fine musicians and will make music a special feature of the services.

The services are for the benefit of the entire community; an invitation to attend is extended to everybody.

Mrs. Houts is a graduate of one of the eastern conservatories of music. The management hopes to enlist the musicians of the town in making this a time of musical treat as well as a spiritual uplift.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Ramsay MacDonald Coming to Washington for World Peace Conference.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

RAMSAY MACDONALD, new prime minister of Great Britain, is planning to come to the United States to confer with President Hoover, in regard to naval armament reduction and enforcing the Kellogg pact outlawing war by joint action of the English speaking peoples. In Washington the news of this plan was well received, and it was learned at the White House that Mr. Hoover would be glad to meet Mr. MacDonald and discuss with him questions of mutual interest to their two countries. American Ambassador Dawes, on his way to England, was apprised of this development by radio and almost immediately after his arrival in London he went to Scotland for a conference with the prime minister who was taking a ten days' vacation at his home in Lonsdale. Mr. Dawes was expected to deliver to Mr. MacDonald an invitation to visit Washington and hold there a conference with President Hoover and Prime Minister Mackenzie King of Canada. The best guess in London was that the trip would be made about the end of July after the session of parliament adjourns.

According to London correspondents, Mr. MacDonald said: "If President Hoover invites me to Washington I am going to answer 'I will go.' I shall hope to settle this question of Anglo-American relations once and for all." It was asserted he hopes to carry the discussion much further than naval subjects. He believes the world is entering on an era of great industrial and financial combines whose boundaries will cut across all national frontiers, and he is desirous of a discussion on economic co-operation and avoidance of cut-throat competition in foreign markets. Mr. MacDonald, as a Socialist, welcomes the welding of industry into trusts and sees no objection to the spread of trusts in the international field under proper governmental control.

JUST when it appeared that the farm relief bill as doctored up by the house and senate conferees and approved by the President had clear sailing, the senate nixed things all up by rejecting the conference report by a vote of 43 to 46 because the export debenture feature had been eliminated. In this step the Democrats were joined by 15 Republicans, all listed as radicals except Cousins of Michigan. The debenture advocates not only stood by their scheme, but they were especially determined to force the house to go on record on this feature of the measure.

President Hoover immediately called leaders of the house and senate to the White House and a program was agreed upon. This was to send the bill back to conference as the senate asked, and to have the conferees agree on their original report, after which it was expected the house would reject the debenture plan by a comfortable margin and accept the conference report. There appeared to be no doubt that the senate also would adopt the report of the conference after the house had rejected the debenture by a vote of 250 to 118.

The most interesting feature of the affair was the outspoken threat of Senator Brookhart of Iowa that a third or "progressive" party would enter into the congressional campaign next year and the Presidential campaign of 1932 if the debenture were not included in either the farm bill or the new tariff bill. He asserted the President rather than the senate was to blame for delays in obtaining farm legislation.

Trick hearings were begun by the senate Finance committee, and Senator Wesley Jones told the senate this week should be speeded up with a view to completing the enactment of the legislation early in the fall, and therefore congress should recess for only a brief time. But Senator Watson, majority leader, expressed the belief that the tariff bill could not be finally acted upon until just before the regular December session.

SIGNATURE of the Young plan for German reparations payments by the seven interested nations is having speedy result in the way of settling other post-war problems. The council of the League of Nations met in Madrid, and the Germans carried out their plan of bringing before it the matter of early evacuation of the Rhineland. Aristide Briand, French foreign minister, proposed that an international conference be held this summer for the handling of all outstanding questions left over from the war, and this was agreed to by Dr. Gustav Stresemann, German minister of foreign affairs. Prime Minister MacDonald of Great Britain already had intimated that he was willing to participate in such a meeting. It was generally believed that the conference would be held in July, probably in London or The Hague.

It had been supposed that the council at this Madrid session would take up the vexatious question of national minorities, but Stresemann insisted it should be referred to the World Court at The Hague. This was strongly opposed by Briand and the representatives of the secession states, and a compromise was reached by which the matter was held over for the September session of the League assembly.

French Socialists in convention at Nancy declared in favor of the Young reparations plan, evacuation of the Rhineland and immediate ratification of the Mellon-Beranger accord for the payment of the French debt to the United States. Certain of the United States senators led by Howell of Nebraska have attacked the Young plan as "another move by the allies and the international bankers" to cancel not only the war debts but also the interest on the allied obligations to America. Administration leaders and State department officials asserted nothing in the Young settlement would affect the war debts owed the United States. J. P. Morgan, one of the American experts, declared on arrival in New York that the bank for international settlements, to be established under the Young plan, would be the greatest instrument for the preservation of world peace yet devised.

PRESIDENT HOOVER, because he used to be secretary of commerce, was especially interested in the ceremony of laying the cornerstone of the magnificent new Department of Commerce building. Surrounded by many other high government officials, he wielded the trowel that was used by President Washington in laying the cornerstone of the Capitol 136 years ago, and in his address he said the event marked the emergence of the Commerce department into full maturity and service. The building will be the largest single public structure in Washington and in its actual floor space will be the largest office building in the world. It is to be the most important structure in the government's $115,000,000 program for public buildings in the city of Washington.

NEARLY every day the quick shooting snafus of prohibition furnish more ammunition for the foes of Volsteadism. Last week they killed an apparently innocent citizen at International Falls, Minn., and a young man at Detroit whose companions admit he and they had been trying to run a boatload of liquor from Canada. Dry's in congress took the opportunity to denounce the activities of prohibition officers and Representative Clancy of Michigan demanded an investigation of the Detroit case, but after a trip to that city he said the shooting was justified. Representative Clarence Kahn of California introduced a bill in the house directing the treasury to pay $25,000 to the dependents of every person "wantonly or negligently killed by any prohibition officer not acting in self defense." Other congressmen urged that the treasury forbid the use of firearms by dry agents, but Eugene Lewman, assistant secretary of the treasury in charge of all prohibition enforcement agencies, said this could not be done. He declared that agents had been cautioned for more than a year against reckless use of firearms, and that he did not see what more could be done to prevent killings without crippling enforcement.

Two officers of Hopkinsville, Ky., who were convicted for killing a man in a prohibition raid were denied a new trial by Federal Judge Dawson in Louisville. In Silver City, N. M., a dry agent induced a bootlegger to sell him liquor and the latter was shot by other agents as he was making the delivery. Angered by the dry raid at Ilipon, Wis., during the celebration of the Republican party's seventy-fifth birthday, Assemblyman Lamoreaux of Ashland county introduced a resolution asking the federal government to desist from attempting to enforce the Eighteenth amendment in the Badger state. About the same time dry agents raided the favorite drug store of Wisconsin's wet legislators in Madison.

Mr. Lowman has ordered heavy reinforcements for the dry enforcers of the Detroit area, in the way of both men and boats. In response to this the big ram runners of the Great Lakes met in Ecorse and laid plans to operate in union. They adopted a shuttle system whereby traffic will be diverted to Lake Erie or Lake Huron when the enforcers are concentrated on the Detroit river, and they also have devised an elaborate intelligence system and began buying larger and better boats.

These are just a few of the wet and dry developments that take up vast space in the columns of the metropolitan dailies.

UNLESS all indications are wrong, peace between Mexico's government and the Roman Catholic church will be declared in the near future. Archbishop Ruiz of Michoacan and Bishop Pascual Diaz of Tabasco held conferences with President Portes Gil in Chapultepec castle as the climax of long negotiations, and there was good reason to believe they arrived at an understanding which would need only the approval of the Pope. In well informed quarters in Mexico City it was asserted the basis of the agreement was mutual consent for a broad interpretation of the country's religious laws, both sides making concessions.

THREE United States district judges sitting en banc in Chicago found the Standard Oil Company of Indiana and fifty-one associated concerns guilty of violating the Sherman antitrust act by pooling their so-called "oil cracking" processes. The decision which granted the government a permanent injunction restraining the defendant companies from further violations of the law, came after more than four years' litigation. In the original suit, filed in 1925, the government claimed the defendants conspired to restrain trade and create a monopoly by refuting independent concerns the right to use their Burton "cracking" process, used to extract gasoline from crude oil. In defense the Standard of Indiana held that the process had been of vast benefit to consumers and had materially lowered the price of gasoline.

THREE Swedish aviators started to fly from Stockholm to New York, but a broken gas feed pipe forced them to land on the coast of Iceland. They got their plane to Reykjavik and last week made three attempts to fly from there to Greenland but were driven back each time by rough weather. The aviators, Ahrensberg, Floden and Ljungblad, are trying to establish a new air trade route between Europe and America.

GALVESTON'S international "pag-est" of palchritude" came to an end with the awarding of the title "Miss Universe" to Pauline Phillips, Goldarbeiter of Vienna, Austria, the young governess being adjudged the most beautiful of all the contestants. Miss Irene Ahlberg of New York was named "Miss United States." The affair did not come off without a small scandal, for Theda Delrey, "Miss Talma," who was selected for sixth prize, was accused of being really the "Miss Houston" of two years ago and therefore ineligible as a former contestant.

Laymen Not Doing Their Full Duty in the Work of the Church

By LEON C. PALMER, Secretary Brotherhood of St. Andrew.

THE laymen of the church today constitute our greatest undeveloped resources. They are not working as they should. It takes 111 Episcopalians a whole year to bring one person into the church if latest statistics are correct. Ninety per cent of the church work is done as a rule by 10 per cent of the members. Our real problem is employing the unemployed, getting idle Christians and nominal members to accept personal responsibility for definite Christian service.

Thousands of Christians today have a merely negative religion, a futile piety. They are good, but good for nothing. They are nonentities so far as definite service to the church is concerned. We join in singing the great martial hymns, "Onward, Christian Soldiers," "Ye Soldiers of the Cross," etc., but too often it is not a church army going forth to battle but like a hospital with a large number of patients and a few overworked nurses. Many rectors are kept so busy nursing the sick Christians that they have no time left for going out into the highways and hedges to constrain others to come in.

Our churchmen are inclined to say, "Let George do it," George being the rector. We have looked upon our clergy as men whom we have employed and pay to do our religious work for us, just as we employ a stenographer or file clerk, a policeman or janitor.

The church is not growing as it should. This applies to practically all Christian bodies. Latest statistics show that nearly one-third of the parishes and congregations of the four largest Protestant bodies reported not a single conversion during the last year. Lay-Evangelism is today the greatest need of the church as a solution for this situation.

Country Must Be Aroused to Cope With the Menace of Organized Crime

By JUDGE GILBERT, Georgia Supreme Court.

Organized crime is the biggest business in America, and costs the country annually $16,000,000,000—more than enough to pay back the money America lent European nations during the World war. There may be cited the most familiar instances of crime in high places—national oil scandals, impeachment of governors and the conviction of governors for criminal practices, and embezzlement, graft and fraud among the municipal authorities in several of the country's largest cities.

Democracy itself is on fire and remains to prove that it can live as a means of government. This condition is the Augean stables of modern American life, to be purified only by public opinion enlightened by facts.

There is lack of respect for authority in the home and in courts, and the automobile, a necessity in modern life, is the most powerful aid to lawlessness, since it affords the criminal a quick getaway. There should be a system whereby drivers may be identified and properly controlled.

Some of the efforts necessary to check crime include study of all workable methods of prevention by removal of cause and opportunity; apprehension of criminals, especially through establishment of a bureau of criminal identification; practical application of doctrine of speedy trials; co-operation with agencies for reclamation and reform of ex-convicts; aid through laymen, in the church and out, by giving the general public realization of the terrible menace now existing.

Stressing Need of External Things Draws Soul Near to Danger Line

By DR. HALVORD E. LUCCOCK, Yale Divinity School.

The chief trouble with America today is not so much commercialism and materialism, despite the remarks of foreign lecturers and writers, but externalism—the habit of thinking too much of the outside world and not enough of the spirit. It is this current American feeling of reverence for external things that is our biggest fault.

The first lesson of Jesus in the curriculum of life is to keep from being smothered in a multitude of external things. Do not let the spirit be crowded out by over-emphasis on the life about us.

Life, it seems, has become a parade down a vast street of brilliantly lighted show-windows filled with thousands of articles, each crying out their necessity to our happiness, and ready to spring at us. How can we even approximate what used to be called the simple life when apparently there is such an increase in the number of things we must have to get along? How can we maintain an inner light in this constant parade?

We are not only urged to buy, but our pride and vanity is appealed to and our envy is aroused in the modern advertisements which urge us to get ahead of our fellows, to own something better than our neighbors. Pride and envy and all things that are in deadly opposition to the spirit of Jesus seem to be the basis of it all. There is a danger to our souls in putting too much stress on the clutter of outside things. Fortify yourself against an inner emptiness with an outer fullness. Have something inside yourself to show to God.

Fads in Medicine and Billboard Advertising Call for Condemnation

By DR. RIDGE, President Missouri State Medical Society.

Physicians must present a united front against fads and the presentation in the press of stories of incomplete and unverified medical discoveries.

Medical students should spend two summers during their school work assisting rural practitioners. Nominal wages would be paid the students. School credit, the equivalent of that given an interne for a year's work in a hospital, would be granted.

The lay press is anxious to print anything of a sensational nature. Charlatans will twist anything to their own ends. There are the cash register spliff movements, that try to gain indorsement of medical societies. Often it is given and a heavy expense of salaried organizers is foisted on the public.

In spite of the many millions spent by the Society for the Control of Tuberculosis in posting billboards all over the country, warning against the disease, in making examinations, and in giving talks, the last report showed no decrease in the death rate, but rather an increase.

If all this money had been put into a fund for treatment and care of tubercular patients, many would have been saved and the death rate would have been lowered.

There should be a co-operative widows' fund among organized medical men. The average doctor's widow does not know where to get the money to pay his funeral expenses.

South West PARAGRAPHS

The most recently incorporated town in Arizona is Buckeye, in Maricopa county.

Plans are now being made by the Arizona State Fair Commission to show agricultural products at the California State Fair at Sacramento, in September.

District Judge Reed Holloman sentenced Alfred Rivera of Santa Fe to serve from one to three years in the state penitentiary for selling marijuana in Santa Fe.

Jack Towles, 10, son of John C. Towles, former collector of internal revenue for Arizona, was killed instantly in Phoenix when he was run over by an ice truck.

A cave apparently thousands of feet long has just been discovered 135 miles east of Phoenix. Up to the present time this has only been explored to a very limited extent.

Mrs. E. A. Ferrault, secretary of state, certified to Governor R. C. Dillon that she has held the tobacco tax to be inoperative, because of the sufficiency of the referendum petitions.

The New Mexico bar examinations, Jose D. Sena, secretary of the board of bar examiners announced, have been postponed from the second Monday in July to the first Monday in August.

Hopes for a special session of the ninth Arizona legislature this summer apparently vanished when Governor Phillips declared he does not at this time see any good reason for assembling the legislators.

Superintendent Fred Anton of Las Vegas died in the hospital at Clovis from injuries received when his automobile got out of control several days ago, according to reports received by Santa Fe officials.

Camp John C. Phillips, will be the official designation of this year's annual encampment of the Arizona National Guard. More than a thousand officers and enlisted men will attend the training camp, August 11 to 25.

Poultry outlook this year for Arizona is favorable and should continue to grow better, according to Clyde F. Rowe, dairy and poultry specialist of the University of Arizona. He has completed a survey of several counties which specialize in poultry raising and dairy products.

Plans and specifications for construction of three state armories to cost approximately $300,000 each, are being completed and bids either singly or as a group will be advertised shortly, it was stated by the adjutant general. The new armories for use of Arizona National Guard units, will be located at Safford, Douglas and Nogales.

Helen Benson of Carlsbad, N. M., was only a novice typist a year ago and then she won the amateur typing championship of her state. Now she is going to the International Typewriting Contest at Toronto in September and hopes to win for the United States the world's amateur typing crown now held by Irma Wright of Toronto.

It is claimed that Arizona has the greatest area in national forests of any state in the Union. This now totals 11,249,835 acres. 12,373 acres were added during the past year. Only one county in Arizona does not have any land in national forests. National forests have returned to the other counties of the state during the past fiscal year $114,455. This money is used by the several counties for road or school purposes.

The first 50,000 copies of the official 1929 highway tourist map are now off the press and ready for distribution. The map is larger than those of previous years and includes small strips of adjoining states to enable tourists to orient themselves with regard to New Mexico localities.

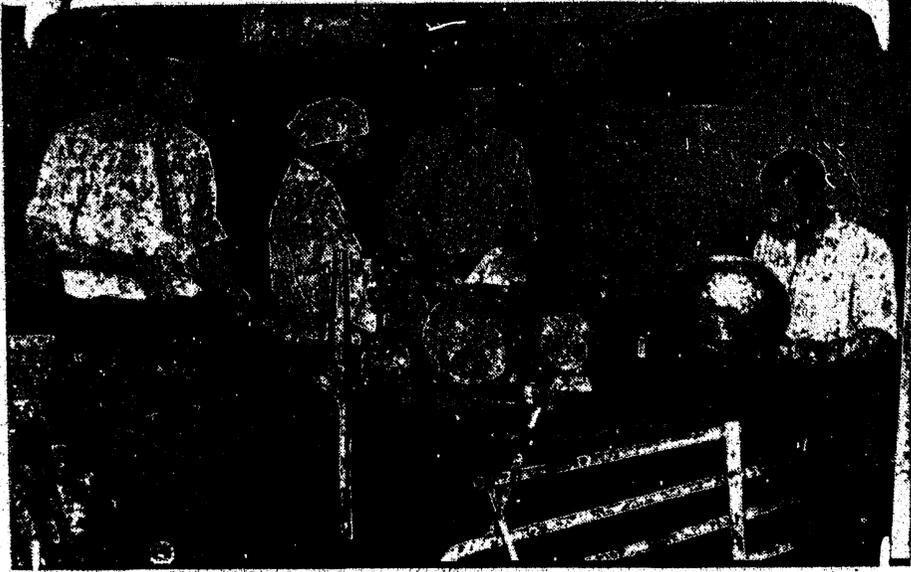

Juan, 4-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Aurora Marquez, of Las Cruces, was drowned while trying to get a drink out of an irrigation ditch.

Phil Townsend Hanna, widely known writer and editor of the magazine Touring Topics, which is said to have a circulation of over one hundred thousand copies, recently was a visitor at the highway service bureau in Santa Fe where he conferred on the proposed publicly to be given New Mexico in the Automobile Club of Southern California publications. The Auto Club contemplates publishing a map and descriptive material in book form covering all of the great tourist interest areas of America which lies between Needles, California, and the eastern New Mexican state line. This area is bounded on the north by an imaginary line drawn from Panaca, Nevada, to Walsenburg, Colo. The southern boundary runs from Needles, Calif., in an irregular line which includes within its bounds Prescott, Montezuma's Castle, Petrified Forest, and U. S. Highway 79, through New Mexico.

As a member of the spring graduating class at Colorado State Teachers College, Miss Marie T. Pratt, daughter of William Pratt of Eaton, received the life certificate in teaching.

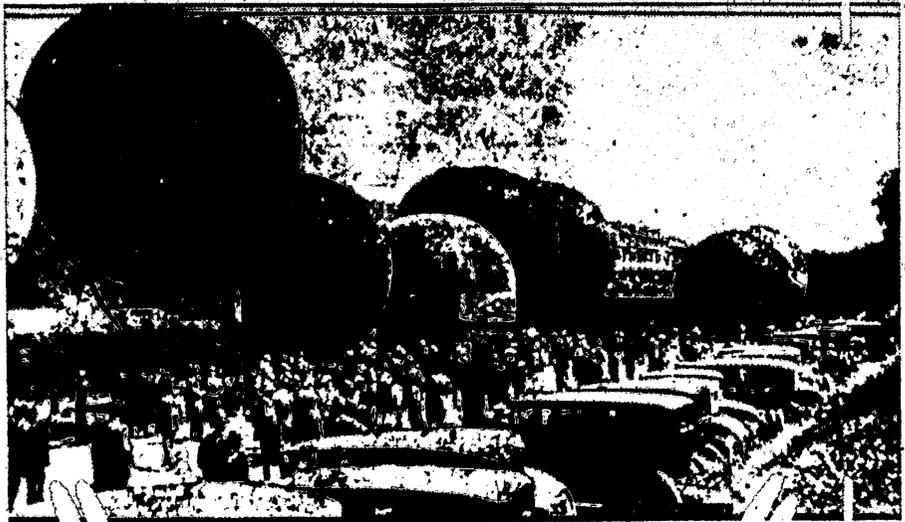

Fishing on the southern end of Mormon lake in Coconino county, and Oak Creek in Coconino and Yavapai counties has been prohibited by the Arizona State Game Fish Commission. The Commission also created a State Game Refuge on San Francisco Peaks near Flagstaff, and on Mormon mountain east of Mormon lake.

When Ford Had to Borrow Two Cents

Henry Ford at Atlantic City buying from Postmaster Alfred Perkins the first of the Thomas Edison commemorative stamps issued for the golden jubilee of the electric light. Though Mr. Ford is one of the richest men in the world, he had to borrow two cents to make the purchase.

Salt Water Swimming for Paralysis

On the theory that child patients suffering from infantile paralysis relax their muscles while immersed in warm salt water, a tank has been installed at the Children's hospital in Washington. Edith Symes, Louise C. Lippett and Mary E. Talbert are shown demonstrating the tank treatment with two tiny patients.

WINS HIGH HONOR

B. Kenneth Johnson, a member of this year's graduating class at Yale, who captured the annual award of the Prix de Rome in architecture. This is the William Rutherford Mead Fellowship, and it carries an annual cash income of $1,500 for three years, with residence and studio at the academy in Rome and an allowance for transportation to and from Rome. It is estimated to be worth about $3,000 to the winner.

KIPKE IS HEAD COACH

Harry Kipke, one of the greatest all-around athletes in Michigan football history, will guide the destinies of the Wolverine gridiron team next fall. He was named to succeed Elton E. ("Tad") Wieman, whose personal and administrative conduct with Athletic Director Fielding H. Yost resulted in his dismissal.

LISKA HAILED AS BEST YOUNGSTER

Submarine Hurler Favored to Win Out.

The season has been under way long enough to offer the conclusion that Ad Liska, the twenty-two-year-old submarine chucker with the Washington Americans, isn't destined to have the tag "bloomer" fastened on him. On the contrary, Liska seems well on his way to earning the distinction of being the best young pitcher to reach the majors this season.

Manager Walter Johnson, one of the greatest pitchers baseball ever has known, boosted Liska.

"He has impressed me more than any youngster I have seen in years," he commented.

It has come to pass that no one was wrong. Or, at least, isn't yet. Liska has pitched almost perfect ball for Washington. One of his games was a two-hit affair against Cleveland. He lost that, and was credited with losses in the two other games, because the Washingtons made only one run for him in them.

Bill McGowan, veteran American league umpire, was roaring gleefully about Liska after the two-hit game in Cleveland. McGowan officiated at the game.

"That kid has one of the most puzzling deliveries I ever have seen," he said. "It is hard to get next to."

"It's a lot different from the way Carl Mays pitches. Mays sweeps very low in his swing and a batter can follow the ball easily as he seems to hesitate just a little at the bottom of the swing and then push it in there. Not like Liska. He whips the ball. He doesn't swing low and he hides that ball so nicely that a batter can't see it until it is almost up to the plate. I sweep up and hope."

"Joe Sewell has just about the best pair of eyes in baseball. And those eyes, and the fact that he crowds the plate and is a little fellow, make him hard to pitch to. But Sewell, as well as the other players, was topping 'em. The infielders get plenty of work when Liska works."

"Liska looks like a great pitcher. His delivery has a nice hop and is a fast one. His curve isn't so bad, either. If he keeps hiding that ball the way he did against Cleveland, no club will beat him easily."

Long Stay for Moakley

Jack Moakley has completed his thirtieth year as track coach at Cornell, with a record of winning 82 out of 123 contests in cross-country and track meets.

Moakley, who has been at Cornell since 1899, has coached nine Cornell teams that won the intercollegiate track championships and seventeen teams that placed first in the cross-country championships.

The Cornell coach was a great athlete in his day, starring in sprint and distance events and the low hurdles.

Sporting Squibs

The second annual tournament for left-handed golf players will be staged in Toledo June 24.

Clark Rowley, a caddy, scored a hole-in-one at the Sand Point golf course, in Seattle, Wash.

The American Record for water plunging is 84 feet 6 inches, made by Ted Abrams, in Pittsburgh, March 8, 1924.

George Cook, Australian heavy-weight boxer, has not been knocked off his feet in more than eight years of scrapping.

During the last twenty years, the Seagram brothers of Waterloo, Ontario, have won more than $1,000,000 in turf prizes.

It is declared that youth needs discipline. The educator who can enforce discipline as well as a football coach would be a valuable intellectual adjunct to civilization.

An eastern flier has succeeded in detaching from an airplane to a stenographer in his office. It is to be hoped that the device may be used in the same way from golf courses, for that is the real need.

Welcoming New Baby

Everyone had a good laugh during tea at Annandale the other day when a socially prominent young matron made her first appearance since the advent of the family son and heir. She brought her five-year-old daughter.

Conversation naturally turned to the new baby and finally some one said to the little girl:

"And what do you think of your little-baby brother?"

To which sophisticated Young America promptly replied:

"I'm glad it was a boy 'cause daddy was getting sort of dissatisfied with just mother and me around."—Los Angeles Times.

A Warning

Ellnor Glyn said at a Hollywood tea:

"During dress isn't necessarily the most becoming. A wife said to her husband one day:

"John, what would people say if I went to the mask ball as a ballet dancer in tights?"

"They'd probably say, 'John answered, 'that I married you for your money.'"

Baby's little dresses will just simply dazzle if Red Cross Ball Blue is used in the laundry. Try it and see for yourself. At all good grocers.—Adv.

String to Legacy

Provided she is found to be "industrious, sober and not given to jazz" when she reaches the age of twenty-five, Beatrice Coleman, of Philadelphia, will inherit an estate of several thousand dollars under the terms of the will of Mrs. Rebecca Rolan Williams.

Act Promptly

There is no moment like the present. The man who will not execute his resolutions when they are fresh upon him can have no hope from them afterward; they will be dissipated, lost, and perish in the hurry and acurry of the world, or sunk in the slough of indolence.—Maria Edgeworth.

Good Markets for Cars

Australia, now the leading foreign market for American motor cars and trucks, has a car for every ten of its population. New Zealand is running it a close second, with a car for every eleven people.—Gas Logic.

Bitter, but Effective

Humility is the true cure for many a needless heartache.

First thing a poet needs is vocabulary.

Replanting Forests

Reforestation is gradually coming into its own, and during the last three years, 1,055,033 acres have been added to the state and community preserves. The state of Washington led in the increase, with Pennsylvania second. Three states which had not had state forests prior to 1925—Delaware, Georgia and South Carolina—have fallen in line. The total of public-owned forests now is in excess of 12,000,000 acres.—Washington Star.

Radium Prices May Drop

Prices of radium are expected to drop with the development of the new radium mines in Portugal. Until now most of the world's supply has been obtained from mines at Knattska, in the Belgian Congo, which are owned and operated by a Belgian company. The present quotation is about $80,000 a gram, or approximately $1,700,000 an ounce.

A friend induced me to take the Vegetable Compound. Since that time I have also taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Herb Medicine and the Pills for Constipation, and I have used Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash. I am a housekeeper and I am still taking the Vegetable Compound as a tonic to enable me to do my work."—Mrs. E. P. VICKNAR, 829 Hancock St., Gretna, La.

EDITORIAL COLUMN

Will Fight Roadside Advertising

Santa Fe, N. M., June 22—As some signboard owners in the state indicate their unwillingness to comply with the law passed by the recent legislature abolishing such signs as interfere with highway safety and comfort, various organizations of citizens are going on record in favor of buying only such commodities as are not advertised on the highways.

The latest addition to the anti-sign ranks comes from the Santa Fe Garden Club, composed of twenty five representative Santa Feans who will use their influence both in New Mexico and at manufacturer's headquarters to clean the roads of Santa Fe county of signboards.

The roads of Hawaii are entirely free from signboards of any kind, except those placed by the territorial road commission. This was accomplished by the women of Hawaii who banded together to free the highways of the islands of the obnoxious signboard. Their greatest weapon was non-patronization of road side advertisers.

In California the Anti-Sign League is following in the footsteps of Hawaii and is showing great success; recent letters from the coast inform New Mexicans interested in the formation of such a league in the Sunshine State. The formation of a branch of The National Committee for the Restriction of Outdoor Advertising in New Mexico is looked upon as a certain move in the near future as representatives of the National Committee have already visited the state with such an idea in view.

Tommy Knight is Two Years Old

In honor of the second birthday of her small son, June 24, Mrs. Almon Knight entertained all the children in the vicinity of Ancho with all their mothers and grandmothers at a lawn party under the big trees of the Pruitt residence. After the game of chance at which Miss Edwina won first prize and Archie McArthur the second, Mrs. Knight provided the children with balloon whistles which furnished them with fun and noise as they romped over the lawns.

In the house, a surprise had been arranged for Mrs. Belknap, whose birthday was close, a beautiful cake, decorated by Mrs. Pruitt, being her first hint of the large basket of gifts which overwhelmed her. This was followed by a game of 'Ago?' Mrs. L. L. Peters winning first prize and Mrs. Melton the consolation.

Then came the shower of gifts for young Tommy. The little lad was placed on a table and nearly went out of sight under the avalanche of toys and useful presents. Tommy took a very active interest in the opening of the packages and carefully inspected each one, finally

Notice for Bids School Trucks

Notice is hereby given that sealed bids for school truck transportation, Lincoln County, will be received at the office of the County School Superintendent of Lincoln County at Carrizozo, New Mexico, for the year 1929-30, until July 1, 1929, as follows:

- Lincoln 3 trucks
- San Patricio, 1 truck
- Ruidoso, 1 truck
- Picacho, 1 truck
- Corona, 7 trucks
- Hondo, 1 truck
- Archo, 1 truck
- Capitan, 4 trucks
- White Oaks, 1 truck.

All bids must be in the office of the Superintendent on or before 10:00 o'clock a. m., July 1, on which date said bids will be opened by the County Board of Education and contracts awarded.

Bidders may secure details of the truck routes from the local Board of Directors of the different school districts.

The County Board of Education reserves the right to reject any or all bids.

County Board of Education, Alice M. French, Secretary, June 28

High School Buses

The State Tax Commission has allowed High School buses from White Oaks to Carrizozo; also a High School bus from Lincoln to Capitan.

The above was an allowance made by the commission with other requests granted to Mrs. Alice M. French on a recent trip to Santa Fe, in the interest of the school budget.

FIRST WOMAN TO SING OVER TELEPHONE LINES

Mrs. Alice Henderson, who claims to have been the first woman to have sung over the telephone, died recently in the city of Detroit. Before she was married she won the singing contest in the posthumous choir of St. Paul's, Canada. At the time she had constructed an organ and a telephone system between Detroit and the summer home of Santa Fe, and she was noted as singing to the wife. This she did, the organ proving a great success.

A LIBRARY OF HEART THROBS

The curious sounds of the human heart, so difficult to analyze and remember yet so important in diagnosis, can now be recorded, perused at leisure, and compared with similar records of typical cases and with earlier records of the same case to determine the nature and progress of a patient's condition. The co-operation of Dr. Richard Cabot, Dr. C. J. Gamble, the Columbia Photograph Company and Bell Telephone Laboratories has produced a recording electrical stethoscope with which to learn, teach and practice cardiac diagnosis. The student hears not only all types of heart sounds but the comments of the attending specialists; the teacher's lecture is exemplified through a loud speaker; accurate and imperishable records replace the practitioner's fallible memory.

The Carndt Exchange, the first automatic exchange in Paris, with a capacity of 4,000 lines, has been opened, and four more automatic exchanges are scheduled to be put into service during the winter.

PRaises SERVICE

Colonel Sherrill, City Manager of the city of Cincinnati, declares that the city's telephone service is the best advertisement the municipality has. So important does he deem this feature of the government that he has placed the supervision of the switchboards at the City Hall in the hands of Robert N. Olin, Director of Service. Colonel Sherrill says that the telephone operators can be of great assistance both to the public and to the officials by the use of courtesy.

When Miss Lena Roten, telephone operator at Torrington, Wyo., was married recently, the ceremony took place at the local telephone office, the bride standing beside the switchboard where she had been employed.

HOWE ABOUT-

By ED HOWE (Copyright by The Bell Syndicate, Inc.)

There is no question about the facts: assaults on the truth are the excuses of those who object because the truth is true. I know a man who is in an asylum; actually quite a smart fellow. But the truth didn't suit him, and he complained so immoderately that it was necessary to lock him up.

I know a man who lately sold his business to a rival. He says he will in future devote his time to public service, in which he has long been interested. I think the facts in the case are as follows: The man gave too much of his time to the public service, and was worsted by a rival who attended to business. In fact, he failed, and his establishment was absorbed by his rivals. I make the prediction that the man will in future make his living from public service work, and charge all the traffic will bear.

A honeymoon is a good deal like a man laying off to take an expensive vacation and coming back to a different job.

When men are as gentle and polite as women, I like them as well as women. There is a story of an old-time man who resolved not to have women in his house; he said they had notions that annoyed him, because they were not true and natural. So he employed only men to wait on him. But finally he turned the men out, and had the women back, saying they were polite: in his presence, at least. Women may be impolite with each other, but they are politer than men in the presence of men.

How we all complain that the world is going to the devil; that the people are idle, shiftless, unreliable. And how we all fail to remember it is a personal problem: that we have habits to reform.

The grand writing men frequently refer to the splendor of the great poets. They say it to be nice: there is no such splendor.

Ever think of the worthlessness of your opinions? I mean the opinions you express in conversation. They are worthless since there is always some one present to controvert. And if you write for print, it is worse.

WISCONSIN TELEPHONE FACILITIES EXTENDED

Telephone facilities were greatly increased in the State of Wisconsin during the year 1928. A new toll cable was opened between Milwaukee and Madison, many toll lines were reconstructed, a new Long Distance cable was built between LaSalle, Illinois and the Wisconsin Illinois State line, additional loading for one of the cables to Chicago was installed, and additional circuits were constructed between cities of the state. There was a net gain of 19,800 Bell telephones in the state during the year, with the result that the Wisconsin Telephone Company was providing service at the beginning of the new year to 340,200 telephones, and the 678 telephone companies or associations whose lines interconnect with the Bell System were providing service to 501,439 telephones, making a total of 549,639 interconnecting telephones in the State.

LOS ANGELES' GROWTH

The growth of the telephone in the city of Los Angeles can best be realized from the fact that there are now 40 central offices in that city, which is almost twice as many as were operated there in 1922, and that they interconnect more than twice as many telephones. There are more than 350,000 telephones in Los Angeles, all records in applications for new telephones in that city having been broken in September, 1927.

Mexicans Mysteriously Hanged as Result of Nap Under Sacred Tree

MEXICO CITY - While souvenir hunters in London have succeeded in stealing royal silverware, and those in Santa Maria del Tule, in Oaxaca, Mexico, had entered the churchyard where the cypress stands, and taken a nap under its ample branches. Evil fortune has been supposed to attend all those who have not shown the proper respect in the past, and when news of the soldiers' actions got abroad in the village there were mutterings against them. The next morning all three were found dead, on the outskirts of Santa Maria del Tule, hanged to death.

"Proclaim Liberty Throughout All the Land"

The Voice of the Nation

July 4, 1776

The above is a reproduction of a souvenir of the Centennial exposition held in Philadelphia in 1876. It shows the Declaration of Independence in the form of the Liberty Bell. It was hand-set in the smallest pearl size type, from which an electrotype was made in the type foundry of MacKellar, Smith and Jordan in Philadelphia. Thousands of these printings from the electrotype were distributed at the Centennial.

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

SK the average American what took place on July 4, 1776, and he will probably reply in some such words as these: "Why, the Declaration of Independence, which made us free from England was written by Thomas Jefferson and signed by John Hancock, George Washington, and some others. Then in celebration of the event they rang the Liberty bell until it cracked wide open." And that represents pretty well the sum of the misinformation which many of us have upon the historic event from which we date the beginning of our nation.

commanding officers of the Continental troops; that it be proclaimed in each of the United States and at the head of the Army." It was late in the afternoon of Thursday, July 4, when this action was taken, so the committee, composed of Thomas Jefferson, John Adams and Benjamin Franklin immediately hastened from the state house on Chestnut street, in Philadelphia, to a little building on High street, where Dunlap and Claypoole conducted a print shop. These printers were prepared to do "rush jobs." They had put out broadsides immediately after the battles of Lexington, Bunker Hill, and upon receipt of the news of the disasters at Concord and Quebec. So they at once set to work and gave their personal attention to the setting in type of this greatest of all documents, which had fallen to their lot to print. Since the printing of it had to have official supervision, Jefferson, Adams and Franklin stayed in the shop until the Declaration was set in type and the first proof of it was pulled. They then made corrections on this proof, (the major responsibility for catching any errors resting on Franklin, no doubt, since he was a practical printer) and remained in the shop until this Magna Charta of American liberties had been placed on the old flat hand-press and was being printed.

philosophical society. The man who read it to the assembled people was Col. John Nixon, formerly an alderman in Philadelphia and commander of a regiment in the Continental army at the battle of Long Island and at Valley Forge. He acted for the sheriff who would by right have read it. The reading of the Declaration was received with much enthusiasm by the Philadelphians. It is true that the Liberty bell in the state house steeple (that bell whose makers had placed upon it the prophetic inscription "Proclaim Liberty throughout all the Land unto all the inhabitants thereof," when it had been cast some twenty-three years before), was rung at this time—to call the Philadelphians together for the reading of the Declaration and to celebrate the occasion after they had received the news. But the cracking of the bell did not take place at this time. That occurred exactly 53 years later while it was being tolled for the death of Chief Justice John Marshall, which took place July 8, 1835. Other bells chimed in the chorus, bonfires were lit that evening and all in all it was one of the most memorable days in the history of the historic City of Brotherly Love.

Although the first official proclamation of the Declaration of Independence took place on July 8, in Independence Square, this was not the first knowledge which the public had of the great news which it contained. For on Saturday, July 6, the Pennsylvania Evening Post, "published every Tuesday and Saturday evenings" at a "price only two coppers" devoted the entire front page of its issue for that date to the publication of the Declaration. On July 8, Dunlap and Claypoole also published it in their weekly, the Pennsylvania Packet, and within the next week or so it had been published in nearly all of the colonial newspapers, as well as having been proclaimed in various places by the assemblies, councils of safety and the like, for post riders were carrying some of Dunlap and Claypoole's printed copies throughout the newly-created nation. In Massachusetts where the struggle for liberty had begun, it was first proclaimed on July 14, 1776, and the interesting fact is that it did not take place in Boston. For, according to a contemporary account, "at about noon on Sunday (July 14) a messenger on his way to Boston stopped at one of the taverns on Main street (Worcester) for dinner for himself and team. While waiting for his team to be out and rest he was met by Isaiah Thomas, who obtained from him a copy of the Declaration which he took to the church and read from the porch."

Wanted Real Service
Not every one has a clear conception of the duties of a public service commission as the Baltimore women who ring up the Maryland department of public service one day and inquire for the service engineer. "May I leave my baby in your care for a while? I want to go down town and do some shopping!" "Why, you must have the wrong number!" the man replied. "This is the public service commission office!" "Well, I know that," was the quick answer, "and if you don't consider it a public service to take care of a baby once in a while I think you'd better change your name until you can begin giving real public service!" And she rang off.

HOW TO LIVE LONGER
By JOHN CLARENCE FUNK
CHOOSE WELL

NORTH AMERICA is a "going concern" just now. Millions of automobiles containing millions of joy-seekers are on the road. Many of the travelers are back-to-nature tourists—that ever-growing and now vast group who enjoy the marvelous scenery, the fine highways of the day's ride and end up by erecting tents for the night's repose. Many will find themselves in attractive pine wooded automobile camps. But even in the more elaborate ones, patrons should satisfy themselves as to the purity of the water supplies. While some jurisdictions protect travelers by testing the possible sources of infection, by no means all of them do. It therefore pays to investigate a bit on this important point. But the suggestions to follow concern those who are likely to avoid the established places and seek seclusion and nature in more remote spots. In thus becoming exclusive gypsies certain personal obligations arise, the fulfillment of which is self-protection and protection for others. Here they are: 1. See that your camp site is well drained. Keep away from marshy land. Of course, get among the trees, but avoid heavy growths or underbrush—mosquitoes hide in dense cover. 2. You will doubtless choose a spot that attracts because it is clean. Keep it that way. Perhaps you will want to come back to it. Then, there is the other fellow to consider. Burn or bury garbage, papers and other litter. 3. Put out your fire. Burned forests are neither good to look at or pleasant to camp in. Be particularly careful about discarding lighted cigars and cigarettes. The best way to do this is to put them out before you throw them away. 4. Keep your sewage out of the streams. Remember that many foolish folks are likely to drink this water. Dig a shallow pit, cover the wastes with earth. Both typhoid fever and dysentery will be disappointed by this practice. 5. See where the water comes from before, not after, you drink it. In any event, don't drink from a stream. Many thoughtless people have likely polluted it. Moreover, it does not pay to drink from a spring unless it is in a remote place. Not even then if there appears to be any possible source of contamination. Nothing unreasonable about these ideas, is there? Yet, thousands will deliberately violate every one of them every day throughout the season. Many of them will get ill, some will die, in consequence. Live to enjoy your automobile excursion next year, too. Follow the rules!

HAVE A HEART!

THE hot season is baby's danger period. It is also the time of year in which he is most uncomfortable. To many of his tribe, the thermometer means absolutely nothing, though through no fault of his to be sure. Suffering in a woolen band, heavy long-sleeved shirt, thick socks, petticoat, dress, with the woolen sack crowning all—he yells, he cries and he frets. While his superior parents, entirely oblivious to his feelings run around in shirt sleeves and thin dresses respectively, at the same time bewailing their possession of such a disturbing child!

A little less attention to their own comfort and decidedly more care of the little mite who can't help himself would be much more sensible. For example, when the temperature is above 85 degrees it is only fair to permit baby during the mid-day hour to lie around in diaper and band—the shoulder strap variety, or the single hot-weather garment. True, in such a common sense outfit the young man (or lady) will not be in formal dress, but there will be plenty of time later on for that.

The overdressed child on a tropically hot day is weakened and depressed by heat. Moreover, disease, especially summer diarrhea, is more likely to make him its victim. Outdoor sleeping is advisable, if safe, unless the house is cooler, which is frequently the case on mild super-heated nights. Again, if the house is cooler than outside in the daytime, keep him indoors. Otherwise seek outdoor shade, avoid direct sunlight, and by all means protect him and his food from flies.

After all, a baby is a pretty scintilla creature. He doesn't ask for luxury, money, for fine clothes, for exotic foods. He does demand, and should receive at all times, comfort plus common sense treatment. The next time baby sets up a howl, get behind the noise and locate its cause. And remember in torrid weather one of the most common causes for his vocal exuberance is a superfluity of clothes. Have a heart! (© 1925, Western Newspaper Union.)

Reclaimed by Ocean
The islands on the western coast of Scotland were originally part of the mainland. The whole western coast of Scotland has sunk. The fjords are submerged land valleys which subsided to a considerable depth below their former level. The Hebrides were formerly one with the mainland, but the land between sank and was covered by the ocean.

Thousands of Clocks Must Tick in Unison
The British post office can claim to have the biggest collection of clocks in the kingdom. More than 20,000 timepieces have to be kept perfectly synchronized, although thousands of these are "behind scenes" and are used only for timing junction and trunk telephone calls. Every day at 10:00 a. m. and 1:00 p. m. Greenwich time is telegraphed to chief post offices in England, Scotland, Wales and North Ireland. In point of size the second collection in the kingdom is probably that distributed among the royal palaces. There are 1,000 pieces, of which Windsor castle and Buckingham palace have most. At Sandringham all clocks have been kept half an hour fast ever since the time of King Edward. In the houses of parliament there are about 500 clocks, necessitating a great deal of winding and vigilant synchronization.

When James Coats began to make thread in the little town of Fergussie, Paisley, Scotland, 104 years ago, few could have realized the enormous profits that would accrue to the family. Nipse "cotton kings," headed by Lord Glentanar, who left an estate valued at £4,624,263, died millionaire, and the recent death of Mrs. Coats-Boyd, who left £748,118, brings the total to £21,296,274 for ten members of the family. Of this amazing sum amassed from the sale of reels of cotton, the state has claimed £5,104,528 in death duties.—Montreal Family Herald.

SYNOPSIS

Capt. Francois de Vigny, serving with Maximilian's army in Mexico, tells the story. A roving group of officers is discussing La Anita, who, rumor says, has lured French officers to death or desertion. Summoned by Maximilian to make explanation, De Vigny undertakes to deliver the message to La Anita. At La Anita's home De Vigny meets Colonel Lopez, Mexican officer and the girl's cousin, Pablo Madrella, who bears a wonderful resemblance to De Vigny, except that he wears a beard. Angered that Anita should be called before the emperor, Madrella forces a duel on De Vigny, in which the Mexican is wounded. Assisting Madrella to his carriage, De Vigny picks up a paper that falls from his pocket. It proves to be a pass, granting Madrella passage through the Mexican lines. Laid before Maximilian, it is, of course, Madrella's death warrant, since it proves him a spy. Questioned by Maximilian, La Anita denies luring French officers to danger, and is given her freedom. De Vigny secures leave of absence, planning, with Madrella, to grow a beard and impersonate him, with the idea of securing information of Juarez' movements. Dressed as Madrella, he enters La Anita's home by stealth and overhears a conversation between Madrella and Lopez which proves the latter a traitor to Maximilian.

"Our cold and cynical LeStrange," said Neville in deep passion, "is mixing woman with his business."

"And his business," I continued, "is grievously the loser by it."

"Do you mean, Francois?"

"I mean that the emperor has lost a soldier."

"Love," said Neville sagely, "can as easily break a man as make him. How about Lopez?"

"Lopez has never been ours," said I.

"Then the senorita is winning greater battles than Juarez. His majesty's military aide, and his chief of staff—truly a potent force to the Empire!"

"Yet am I most positive that the love of La Anita has never been pledged," I asserted. "The tale that I caught take to the emperor has in it the power to stand three men before a firing squad, but I cannot go to his majesty with my story for it would have little weight against their joint denial. Intrigue must be met with intrigue."

Now the rain, having fallen gently upon the face of our prisoner, brought him back to consciousness, and he stirred, making futile efforts to rise. Neville reached down and hoisted him roughly to his feet, where he swayed unsteadily. "We had hoped you were dead. Having seen you, he goes along—eh, Francois?"

"Assuredly," said I, for Mexico City was far too small for two Madrellas; "never again may he go back to the home of La Anita. This night we will put you on the road to Cuernavaca—beyond the soldiers—but if we ever find you again in Mexico City—"

"There is no chance," said the mozo fervently, a caressing hand on his throat.

"Cuernavaca?" said Neville, in dismay.

"Aye, friend of my youth; for the next move in the game of Empire is to be made at Cuernavaca, upon which, even now, Benito Juarez directs his army."

With heads bent against the rain we retraced our steps along the Avenue of Flowers. Opposite the great silent cathedral we found what we sought: a closed carriage, with a horse of almost unbelievable emaciation asleep in the shafts, and the driver—looking for all the world like a bedraggled crow—perched asleep upon the box. We brought him back to life with emphatic proddings.

"Senor?" he cried.

"Is lodging so dear," said Neville, "and forage so scarce that you and that equine caricature must live out in the rain? Were it not for the support of the shafts he would fall, of a truth!"

"Ah, senor," lamented the cochero. "I must seek my livelihood in all weathers—and the noble caballo is good for many leagues."

"We shall see," replied Neville, as the three of us crowded into the limited space within the cab; "we take the road to Cuernavaca."

It took us three hours to traverse the city, for the noble steed propelled himself with that deliberation which has ever been the privilege of nobility. Another bout of jolting toward the dim blue range brought us to a sentry box beside the broad road that led to Cuernavaca. Here Neville went out to find some officer who knew him well enough to permit us to proceed. This used up another hour.

Finally, free of the French lines, our steed broke into a sort of hopeless canter, and we left the city far behind. In the deep gloom of the early morning we passed a hatted, decrepit figure leading an over-laden pack horse with his overbearing

"That," said I in French—for Agostino, in his desire to return to the city, might forget the grip of my fingers on his throat—"is Madrella. Consider him well, Neville, for it will be thy task—almost within the hour—to halt him, and to return with him to Mexico City, where, according to Maximilian's order, he should be, even now, under guard. Only one Madrella goes to see Benito Juarez."

We were ascending the gentle slope of the bench when the sun came out of the mist of the east and lifted above the rim of the Great plateau. Here we stopped, for a horseman approached. It was only a mountain pony that he rode—a creature of little value—but hardy and fast, and, for my immediate need, quite sufficient.

For fifty pesos I purchased horse and saddle from the owner, a lean, stolid Indian whom Agostino seemed to know; and with whom—by our permission—he made off.

"At this point, Neville, we part," said I, casting a leg over the saddle. "You will gain the ear of the emperor, and you will say to him that Captain de Vigny sends news from authentic sources that Juarez plans to attack Cuernavaca before the week is out."

"And you, Francois?"

"I go—as Senor Madrella—to Cuernavaca, where Manuel, proprietor of the Hotel Montezuma, will take good care of me. He will see to it that I proceed safely on my journey to the camp of General Juarez. To Pablo Madrella the great revolutionary general will, doubtless tell many things of interest and of profit to his majesty. Besides, I have heard that Rene Leroux and Besancon serve under the banner of Benito Juarez, and I would get the story of their treachery from their own lips. Your best man, Neville, my friend, is to stop the real Madrella. There must be no failure; he must go back with you to Mexico City. In Cuernavaca there is no room for two Madrellas."

"Nor is there," said he with a grin. "In the heart of La Anita."

Now, as I jogged along the road to Cuernavaca, I found much sweetness in his morsel of wit.

CHAPTER VI

The Hotel Montezuma

Cuernavaca has been used for generations as a health resort by the people of Mexico City who cannot bear for long the excessive altitude of the national capital. Cortes lived here, and Maximilian built in Cuernavaca wondrous public gardens. It is the key—and has ever been—to all that vast area south and west of Mexico City. I noticed that my horse had slowed to a deliberate walk, and there came to my ears the words of a weirdly plaintive melody; and looking up, I saw a man—a tall man whose well-muscled body swung easily beside a burro which bore upon its back a tremendous load of hay.

"You sing," said I, surprised, for singing over one's work in Mexico is a rare thing indeed.

He touched the brim of a tattered sombrero. "Yes, senor."

"And you are happy? Is there in Cuernavaca, some one who waits for thee?"

"Yes, senor; Dolores waits for me."

"Dolores, then, is your wife?"

"When the season's hay is delivered, senor, there will be money enough for a marriage. It is certain a month yet." He sighed.

"Ah," said I, "what are you called?"

"Pasqual," he said.

"If I offer you, Pasqual, the amount of money that the labor of this month will bring to you, will you do for me the things that I ask you to do?"

"Why not?" said he, with a frank and engaging smile.

He was Spanish and Indian, but mostly Spanish, for his skin was a clear olive; his brown eyes had a resolute light, and his body held that dauntless, erect posture of an unrequered people.

"First then," said I, "we will change clothes, and I will walk beside the burro while you ride the horse."

We stopped behind a giant cactus tree, and, when we started on again, one would have looked closely to have recognized in the bent, dragging, gray-haired figure with worn sombrero, shapeless brown clothes, and dusty sandals, the impeccable Count de Vigny. Maintaining the back of my resemblance to Madrella I must pass through the Imperial lines.

So, as the sun went down, we entered Cuernavaca. We passed many soldiers of the Belgian corps. A French tenant stopped, and after watching us from the curb, spoke to Pasqual: "Why not permit the old man to mount the horse?"

Whereupon I laughed softly in my beard, for he was a Belgian, and who had not with us often at the Cafe Miramon, a man whose services had added much to the gaiety of our evenings.

Pasqual gave him a winning smile. "This man," said he, "is my true friend; I have walked many leagues."

"For that, Pasqual," I said, "I will add five pesos to thy pay."

The porte-cochere of the Hotel

Montezuma leads to a cobbled courtyard, or patio. A short fat man, who, I was sure, could be none other than Madrella's "apoplectic Manuel," waddled down the steps, and after a glance around to assure himself that we were alone, grasped my hand and spoke with asthmatic difficulty: "Senor, it is good to find you here again!"

Already Pasqual was leading the hay-laden burro toward the barn. Manuel directed me to a spacious room on the second floor, which overlooked the patio.

"Then you go to see the great general?" beamed Manuel.

"Yes," said I, "the plan, I think, is to attack the city ere the week has gone."

As we talked he told me many things that I would find of value in my unacquainted with General Juarez. And, after he had gone, I drew the covers up around my chin and went off into refreshing and peaceful sleep, which extended nearly through the night, when the crunch of iron-shod wheels on the cobbles of the patio brought me to half-conscious wakefulness. Peering through the window now I recognized the outlines of a closed cab similar to that in which we had left the capital the night before. Manuel appeared with a lantern, and in its uncertain light a broad-shouldered man dressed in the uniform of a French lieutenant emerged from the cab and disappeared beneath the porte-cochere.

"Neville," I thought, "what had Neville to do in Cuernavaca? He should have been, ere this, with his prisoner in Mexico City. Now I pondered this thing. There were, I knew, half a thousand cabs like this one in the city, and a score or more of broad-shouldered lieutenants. It wasn't one cab, it wasn't Neville, it couldn't be. So slumber beckoned, and I went back to my bed again.

When I awoke the night had gone, but day had not yet arrived, for the deep gloom of early morning filled my spacious room. A man stood beside my bed, a silent man who, when I started to speak, put a finger against his lips.

"Pasqual!" I whispered.

"Yes, senor; you will arise swiftly and dress."

While I got hastily into my humble habiliments Pasqual explained: "Less than an hour ago a French officer arrived in a cab. He and Manuel have talked, and because he looked so much like you, senor, I crouched beside the window and listened. They planned to kill you as you slept, so I have climbed up the slanting roof of the lean-to, which leads nearly to your window, to warn you. I think, even now, they approach, senor."

"And you, Pasqual; what would you do?"

"I would stay," said he, "and help you; you will find me strong, senor—and willing."

"But I do not pay thee, Pasqual, to fight."

"It is not for pay that I would fight. I do not like the emperor—nor the French."

Now, though I had wrangled in stripes around me in a dozen desecrated folds, I could not bring myself to accept service of this simple soul unless so grotesque a misapprehension led to retreat now would have meant to leave the field to Madrella, the aim of my trip to the headquarters of Benito Juarez—where I had hoped to gain useful information—and my desire unfulfilled to see Leroux and that other soldier of France who had turned their faces away from the emperor. "You must go, Pasqual," I whispered, "while I—"

"But, senor—"

I gripped his hand. "Some day, Pasqual, Mexico will have need for such men as thou art. Wait for me in the patio; if I do not come out in twenty minutes run quickly to the post and tell the soldiers there that a man has been murdered in the Hotel Montezuma."

Even as the latch lifted gently at my door the brave and earnest Pasqual went swiftly and silently through the window, I looked around for a weapon, and, save a heavy, three-legged stool, found none.

Quickly I fashioned the covers of my bed into a roll, which, in the semi-darkness, resembled a sleeping figure. Then, with the stool in my hand, I stood close to the door, listening. I could hear the labored breathing of Manuel, and Madrella's harsh whisper for silence.

I wondered what had become of Neville, for I had no doubt that Madrella swore his clothes if, as I had good reason to believe, Neville had fallen, then no report could have gone to the emperor concerning the prospective attack on Cuernavaca; and Cuernavaca then was doomed.

The door opened slowly, silently; and as it opened I kept behind it. Now both figures—the fat one and the tall one—were in the room. Manuel stopped halfway between the door and the bed, and Madrella, knife in hand, went forward stealthily to his business of murder.

Only vague outlines were visible in the gloom. I held my breath as Madrella leaned over the bed, fearful lest he discover the trick. Evidently satisfied, he raised his right arm and plunged a long knife into that defenseless roll of covering, the drew back, gasping, and raised his arm again then he voiced a great oath of anger and dismay.

As Madrella turned from the empty bed I raised the stool and brought it down with crushing force upon the head of the walling Manuel. He went down beneath that blow, and the door quivered under the impact of his fall.

The force of the blow had torn the weapon from my hands, and before I could regain it, Madrella was upon me, knife upraised. I clutched blindly at his arm, and, by good fortune, my fingers found his elbow and his wrist. I gave a scintillating kick to his knee, or to his left leg that drove matter-like, into my face again and again. I clung to his right arm, bringing the fingers of both hands together around his wrist. We stumbled over the prostrate figure of Manuel, and fell, but I held on, and we arose again together.

The daylight had come slowly, and as I looked into his bloodshot eyes new hope possessed me. I remembered that Madrella had walked many of the dreary miles that lay between Mexico City and Cuernavaca, while I had ridden; I remembered that he had traveled through the night, while I had gained refreshing sleep. This meant, to me, a vast advantage, an advantage which I hastened to use.

I had pushed him back to the wall; his right arm—holding the knife—above his head, while both my hands were upon his wrist. I had noticed that the plastered walls were un finished, and as rough, therefore, as a file. With all my strength I pressed the knuckles of his gripping fingers against this roughened surface, and, wherever they touched they left a print of blood. He seared me with a rasping curse, but his face went pale with the pain of his injured hand. Finally he relaxed, and the evil blade clattered to the floor.

I tossed him and reached for the weapon. I had no thought of a trick in that clever brain of his, yet I should have known. And now, half stooped to pick it up, I saw his design, and threw myself upon him again, for a pistol had appeared, by seeming magic, in his hand.

Struggling for possession of the gun we swept back and forth across the bare floor. Each of us had both hands on the weapon—our bodies swaying, our muscles tensed—and murder in our hearts; a red rage of fury and destruction overwhelming us. A blood-feud seemed to exist between us, a killing hate that only death might allay.

Even as he had begun to exhibit signs of tiring my finger found the guard, and praying that the pistol might be pointing toward my adversary, I pulled the trigger. With the report of the gun he drew in a deep sigh—almost of contentment—and, as I relaxed my hold, his body crumpled slowly to the floor, the weapon falling unnoticed beside him. He stretched out his arms and lay still.

Turning, I bent over the prostrate figure of the fat Manuel, and, holding his wrist, felt of his pulse for a long anxious minute. I was grateful that he lived.

Even as I studied him a deep soft laugh behind me brought my face to the window again, where Madrella—whom I had thought dead—stood, with a pistol in his hand. Had he been a ghost I think I should not have been more surprised.

"You use everything, Francois, but your head," said he. "This time I shall keep out of reach of those capable hands of yours. You will take your stool and sit upon it."

"Fine; now we can talk."

"Neville?" I questioned.

"Ere this the buzzards have found him, as they will doubtless find you tomorrow."

I had no difficulty in reading the evident murder in his face, or in that menacing pistol of his. Surely, this time, I would use my head.

"You will tell me, captain, how you came to know of this trip of mine?"

I laughed. "When two men, senor, love the same woman, is it conceivable that they will deal fairly with each other? Colonel Lopez, who is not so faithful to his majesty as he should be, knew of your projected journey, and as you well know, he loves La Anita. He told Captain LeStrange, and LeStrange, who worships the senorita, told me. It seems to fit in well with the plan of Lopez and LeStrange that you meet Neville and lie Vigny on the road. Surely one of the two will kill you. The field for the hand of Anita must be narrowed down."

"Lopez is out of my reach, but LeStrange—eh, I shall deal with Captain LeStrange!"

"Such personal hatred, senor," said I, "seems out of place. LeStrange has never yet failed in any of his endeavors. He has the ear of the emperor."

"And the heart of a blackguard," Madrella rasped. "Do you not know, senor, that Captain LeStrange has gone over to the revolutionists?"

I knew it, but this was no time to admit that knowledge. "His aim, in every truth told, to win the heart of Senorita Arrellanos," I said. "If he imagines a necessity for such a posture he will make it; yet it is but a gesture after all, for LeStrange is not a creature of impulse, nor is failure found in his lexicon. It was his plan that we kill you; it was his plan to supplant her cousin in the heart of Anita, and in half of that at least he has succeeded."

He breathed a potent oath. "LeStrange then, has spoken of this to you?"

"Aye, more than that," said I, looking beyond Madrella to the window where the welcome head of Pasqual—who would fight for me—had appeared; "La Anita told me."

"Absurd, senor; you jest."

"Not at all; now it is the words of your cousin who falls to use his head."

Much Sound Wisdom in Tagalog Proverbs

Following are proverbs of ancient repute among the Tagalog people in and around Manila: Nothing but rust destroys iron. Thorns thrust deep when the step is swift. Though you be far behind, wit may put you ahead. A drunken man may be twisted with impunity; not so he who is awakened from sleep. Noisy waters are always shallow. Never seek fortune; if really yours it will come of itself. Even water-soaked wood will burn if left long enough in the fire. Repentance never precedes the folly. The savings of today are the comfort of tomorrow. Even a egg, put away in the closet, will turn up for good use. The really wise will always shame him who merely pretends to wisdom. A small stool made of sound wood is better than a bishop's chair honey-combed with borers. When a palter begins laying eggs, chickens may be expected. Criticize yourself before doing so to others. He who never so exalted, the shaft goes no farther than the strength of the archer. He who splits at the sky gets the spray in his face. Pounding wet fire in the mortar only bestrains the workman.

An Arithmetic of 1649

In the Great Library of the University of Texas is the oldest arithmetic in America. Upon touching its yellow covers and back skin though your memory may go back to that proud but unwelcome day when your own schooling arrived at the portal page of "Fractions." With awe one discovers that pupils of 1649 had to wade through seven chapters of mathematical quibbles. The pioneers evidently desired to obtain strength of mind in their children for it was a stern age. Another chapter was devoted to the formulation of military companies in squares, hexagonal units and other strange geometrical forms. Otherwise the book shows people straggling with the same problems that perplex modern youngsters.

Renovated Statue of Queen on Exhibition

There is now to be seen at the Cairo museum in that city the statue of an ancient queen which was recovered in pieces from a quarry where it had been buried. The lady was Queen Hatchepet and her effigy had been removed and thrown into a quarry at the instance of Thothmes III upon the queen's death in 1493 B. C. The excavations near the temple Deir El-Bahari, at Luxor, have acquired the expedition for years. In 1827 it was confirmed that all the queen's statue in the temple had been ordered destroyed. After the mutilation or destruction the pieces were thrown by Thothmes re-buried into an abandoned quarry nearby. Finally, 55 years ago, when the temple was first cleared, all the debris from it was piled together. The expedition has been employing as many as 700 Egyptian laborers at a time in the task of retrieving the fragments of the buried statue and about 10,000 tons of rubbish have been removed. Fragments of several of these statues have been recovered and are being assembled, but the work is exceedingly tedious.

Key Burglers Spoken

An old-fashioned speaking, the variety popular in grandpa's day, was the sentence meted out to two youngsters by a judge of Alamosa, Calif. They had broken into a grocery store. The court advocated similar procedure in the case of other juvenile offenders.

The first chrysanthemums were imported from China into England in 1791; and soon made their way to other parts of the world.

TRAVELERS NEED MORE TELEPHONE SERVICE NOW

So Railroad Terminals Increase Their Telephone Facilities To Meet Demands

Public telephones are appreciated perhaps nowhere more than in a large railroad station, and one of the places where such telephone service is used to its greatest extent is the Grand Central Terminal in New York City. There a total of 12,500 local and out-of-town calls are made on each average day of the year.

In order to take care of this traffic which is rapidly increasing because of the vast army of travelers who use the station, commuters and others, it has been necessary to increase greatly the telephone facilities by installing a number of new booths and coin stations. As a result, there has recently been placed in service a new unit of 19 booths with operator service, and 8 coin stations on the west side of the lower level of the station. This brings the total public stations serving the big terminal up to 224 in number.

Of these public telephones, 166 are coin stations and 58 are operator, attended by a force of 26 supervisors and operators. In addition to the new telephone unit on the lower level, there is another unit on the upper level immediately above which has 20 booths with operator service and 21 coin stations. At the west end of the lower level is another unit with 8 booths with operator service and 15 coin telephones, while coin telephones are scattered about the big terminal building so that they are available in all parts.

The telephone operators stationed in the Grand Central Terminal often have occasion to aid the traveling public. Their sympathetic co-operation many times has aided persons in locating their friends and relatives. Four messenger boys are also at the service of the telephone patrons and are frequently able to help in a most valuable way.

Project Engineer T. G. Brown was a business visitor at Santa Fe the first of the week.
