

Winning First and Second Place

In the recent Copenhagen-Paris-Copenhagen, 1440-race, the Model A Ford car has again demonstrated to Europe its endurance, speed and durability.

Details of the performance of the two cars have just reached here.

From these accounts it was learned that the car winning first place—a Tudor sedan not in any way outfitted for racing—already has been driven 23,000 miles by the owner before the race.

"My car now as good as ever," said the owner, Paul Tholstrup of Roskilde, Denmark, at the conclusion of the race. "I am ready to drive to Paris again without even giving it a once-over."

11 cars started the race, 6 finished. The most formidable difficulties were encountered. Great stretches of road were deeply rutted and for miles impassable. For hours the cars had to be driven through fields. Dense fogs made the night driving extremely hazardous. Many detours added to the difficulties.

Baptist Church Notes

Three candidates for baptism were baptized by the pastor at the last meeting of the church. At a recent meeting of the finance committee the budget system of finance was adopted for another year. It was also recommended that a revival meeting be planned to begin the first Sunday in September. The following church officers were installed for one year: Mrs. D. A. Dudley, Treasurer; Mrs. Eunice McBrayer, Clerk. Sunday School officers were also elected for another year as follows: Mrs. J. C. Burkett, Superintendent; J. C. Burkett, Chorister; Mrs. T. E. Kelley, Pianist; Ruth Kelley, Secretary. Teachers: Mrs. Kelley, Junior Boys; Mrs. Eunice McBrayer, Primary; Mmes. Berry, Mary McPherson, Nell Abel, Supply Teachers.

"Carrizozo" March

(Cincinnati Theatrical Billboard)

Chas. W. Storm, late of Sousa's Band, cornet soloist, bandmaster, composer and arranger, has placed a new march entitled "Carrizozo" with the C. H. Berg Music Publishing Co. of Cleveland, Ohio. This march is dedicated to his old chum, Lewis A. Burke, trombone soloist, of Carrizozo, N. M. Mr. Burke is in the newspaper business at that place.

Martin-Morgan

At the home of the bride's parents in Alamogordo, June 30, William A. Martin of Clovis and Miss Ruth Morgan of Alamogordo, were united in marriage with the Rev. C. A. Duncan performing the ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Morgan, her father being editor of the Alamogordo News, having associated with him in business, his two sons, Ralph and Murray. The former Miss Morgan has a large circle of friends who have showered the couple with congratulations.

The groom is a prosperous young merchant of Clovis, where they will make their future home.

Thomas Zumwalt Passes On

Near the hour of 8 o'clock Monday morning, Thomas Zumwalt, aged 76, and one of the old pioneers of this locality, passed to the great beyond. Mr. Zumwalt had been ill for the past year and for the past 6 months, he had been confined to his home, consequently, the end was not unexpected.

Thomas Zumwalt came to these parts 50 years ago when his oldest child, A. B. Zumwalt, now superintendent of this division of the water works of the Southern Pacific was but one year old. In those days, opportunities abounded in these regions and young Zumwalt possessed of strength and courage, was quick to grasp them. He settled on the Bonito, where he resided for many years, after which he moved to the Nogal-Mesa, where he conducted a farm, raised stock for the many years of the half-century, which he lived in this locality.

To Mr. and Mrs. Zumwalt's union were born 11 children, 6 of whom are still living, the rest having passed on. He leaves a wife and sons, Bowen, Elmer and Tommy; daughters, Mesdames Floy Skinner, Ben Coe and E. H. Ferguson, all of whom were here for the funeral which was held Tuesday from the home in Nogal with the Rev. Louis Holland of Nogal conducting the same and the remains interred in the cemetery at Angus, attended by a host of friends of the family from Nogal, the Mesa and elsewhere over the county.

Thomas Zumwalt was a model man and a Christian in every sense of the word. His friends were many and his enemies none. His reputation for honesty, square dealing and trustworthiness was well known to everybody over the territory in which he had lived so long. To the survivors of our estimable friend and neighbor, the sympathy of the community is tendered.

Summer Orchestra to Play

The Carrizozo Summer Orchestra will play several numbers at the Crystal Theatre on some date which will be announced later.

This orchestra is composed of members of the High School who are in town, augmented by boys who are home from college, numbering about 14 members in all, under the direction of J. C. Burkett. The music that will be played will include "Sweetheart of Sigma Chi," two fox-trots and "Il Trovatore."

Big Indian Celebration at the Mescalero Agency

The usual big pow-wow and dance of the debutantes was staged this week, winding up the festivities this morning. Three beautiful Indian girls, Marion Dakalugia, Salome Smith and Bunch Plata, young daughters of prominent Mescalero Indian stockmen, were debutantes at this year's celebration by the Mescalero tribe as 'eligible' daughters.

The opening day's festivities were interrupted by rain, but many visiting Indians arrived from Arizona, Oklahoma and different points in New Mexico for the second day of the three-day celebration for the debutantes. The girls wore beautiful buckskin beaded dresses which cost more than $100 each. They presented a striking appearance as they swung to and fro in the wild and grotesque dance.

The girls danced in tepees accompanied by four tribal singers and musicians, while other members of the tribe danced in a big circle around the tepee.

A feature of the celebration this year, was the "Flaming Arrow" tepee singers, who gave the Navajo, Hopi and Eaglances. The singers are, Flaming Arrow of Acoma, Blue Cloud of Conchicita, Falling Rain of Roswell and Eagle Feather of Gallup.

At these annual celebrations, crowds of spectators attend from Lincoln, Dona Ana, Otero and Chavez counties. Many tourists are in the nearby mountains at this time of the year and this celebration has romantic charms which furnishes them with wonderful tales to tell when they get back east. The dancing is a part of the wedding ceremony which follows. When the dancing ceases at daybreak on the last day of the celebration, the bride-to-be leaves the tepee on a run and is followed by the groom in the game, who of course, catches and brings her back for the closing part of the ceremony.

Snake Stories Without Moonshine

One morning this week, we fell into conversation with several old-timers who called to mind some 'true' snake stories as they were told to them, and one of the group told one of his own.

The first was the experience of the late Uncle Bud Crockett. He killed several rattlesnakes and becoming convinced that a den of snakes was near at hand, so he took a long piece of fence wire, made a sharp hook at one end.

He would reach into a prairie dog hole and every time the wire came out, he would either bring a rattlesnake or prairie dog. He finally stopped the killing, counted the snakes which numbered 19, and the combined measurement of the 19 snakes was 81 feet.

Another neighbor said that on one occasion, he killed 11 rattlesnakes without having to 'fish' them out of holes, as they all were found sunning themselves on the ledges of the rocky walls of the canyon.

Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Hamilton

were here from El Paso for several days this week. Mrs. Hamilton visiting her old Carrizozo friends while the attorney attended to some matters in the Probate Court.

Band Concerts Are Making Big Hit

That the band concerts put on by the Tucumcari band every Thursday evening are going over big is proven by increased attendance. The concerts are staged early, closing by 8 o'clock, so as to not interfere with the picture show or social activities of the evening.

The program last Thursday night consisted of old time favorites, old familiar airs everyone knows, and this program proved the band has been developing into a real band, for when airs people are familiar with are played, it is not hard to check up on the harmony.

Come out next Thursday evening and hear some real music.

Revival Meetings Continue

at the Methodist Church with exceptionally high-class talent in charge.

Rev. Houts is delivering fine and beneficial sermons. Just to hear 'Jackie' play the violin is worth all of your trouble. If you enjoy fine orchestra music they have it; if it is singing that you like, it is of the best; if you appreciate a good sermon you can hear it at the cost of a little effort. Why not put forth one big get-together effort for the good of the whole town.

The total increase of sales made in the state for the month of June, 1929, over those for the corresponding month of 1928, was practically 651602 gallons, an increase of approximately 21 per cent.

The above report was submitted by Miss Mary Bartolino, Assistant State Comptroller in the Gasoline Tax Department.

Mr. and Mrs. John Walls

family of Abilene, Tex., came in Monday and are spending the week as guests of H. J. Garrard. On Wednesday, Mr. and Mrs. Garrard drove them up to the Bonito and thence to the mountain resorts. They were pleasantly surprised at the beauty of our mountain resorts. They will be taken to the Mescalero Indian Agency, Alamogordo and Tularosa before returning home.

Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Ludlow, Jr.

Mrs. W. E. Reynolds and Mrs. Addison McPike are spending the present week with the H. M. Bullard family at Luna.

Miss Lois Snyder

formerly a popular teacher in our schools, and who for the past year has been teaching at Cheyenne, Wyoming, writes that she is now at the University of California, taking some advanced work. The remainder of her vacation will be spent at the home of her parents in Alma, Nebraska.

Mr. and Mrs. H.W. McMillan

and family, Walter Burnett and family, Albert and Mrs. Roberts and T. J. Price made a trip to Alamogordo Wednesday, this being the beginning of the 3-day celebration. They spoke highly of the courtesies shown by our Alamogordo neighbors and said that the people were so friendly that it made a person feel desirous of going again.

Recreating on the Bonito

Assistant Division Engineer E. S. Bissel, Mrs. Bissel, son Wm. and daughters, Alice, Dorothy, Helen, and Mrs. Marshall are spending the summer on the Bonito. Mrs. Bissel and children are from Oakland, Calif., and Mrs. Marshall is from Portland and is the guest of the Bissel family for the summer.

Earl Rountree, Chairman of the Board of County Commissioners and A. E. Stover, Member, attended the quarterly meeting of that body this week.

Encampment Arrangements From July 6 to 14

The plan of entertainment at the Ruidoso Baptist Encampment will be the same as last year, according to Rev. F. C. Rowland, pastor of the local Baptist Church. Arrangements are being made to serve free meals at the tabernacle to all who enroll and pay the fee of $2 for the 8-day period. Cabins are available nearby at from $10.00 to $12.50 per week. Good camping places are to be had near the tabernacle and a number are expected to come prepared to camp for one or more days and enjoy the Encampment (among the whispering pines.) A large attendance is expected from Eastern New Mexico and western Texas, the pastor said.

Hodges-Woods

In the city of Balboa, Panama Canal Zone, on June 22, occurred the wedding of Frederick H. Hodges and Miss Esther Woods, both of Balboa. The nuptials were solemnized at the home of the bride's parents and attended by a host of friends of the contracting parties.

The new Mrs. Hodges is well known here, having taught in our high school for the 1927 term and has many friends who will wish and newlyweds a life of undisturbed happiness. The groom is not known here, but is member of one of the leading families of that locality.

Announcements were received here this week among whom the Misses Rhea and Beatrix Boughner, Mary Romero and the Outlook office.

To Those of Us, Who Have Not Yet Served

Santa Fe New Mexican: Mr. Dawes, may we not say in closing this brief effort, while establishing international recognition of America's inalienable right to wear the ugliest leg-coverings in the world, has done a most humane service to those of us who have not served our terms as Ambassador and whose neither physical conformation would expose us to the velled giggles of the court ladies, were it necessary for us to be bound by the precedent which the ex-vice president has busted.

"Highest" Court in United States

"I'll," said Judge Albert Stephens, "in the absence of our bailiff, leave the controls for a moment and come back here and call this court to order." And so was opened the first aerial court in the history of the country—in fact the highest court in the world. For when it was opened it was cruising toward San Francisco 7,000 feet above Los Angeles county in a Western Air Express plane. As soon as Judge Stephens became accustomed to the hum of the three motors, he began taking testimony in the condemnation suit brought by the county against the San Gabriel Canyon Development company, to force the latter to give up gold claims near the site of the great San Gabriel dam.

SYNOPSIS

Capt. Francois de Vigny, serving with Maximilian's army in Mexico, tells the story. A roving group of officers is discussing La Anita, who, rumor says, has lured French officers to death or desertion. Summoned by Maximilian to make explanation, De Vigny undertakes to deliver the message to La Anita. At La Anita's home, De Vigny meets Colonel Lopez, Mexican officer and the girl's cousin, Pablo Madrella, who bears a wonderful resemblance to De Vigny, except that he wears a beard. Angered that Anita should be called before the emperor, Madrella forces a duel on De Vigny, in which the Mexican is wounded. Assisting Madrella to his carriage, De Vigny picks up a paper that falls from his pocket. It proves to be a pass, granting Madrella passage through the Mexican lines. Laid before Maximilian, it is, of course, Madrella's death warrant, since it proves him a spy. Questioned by Maximilian, La Anita denies luring French officers to danger, and is given her freedom. De Vigny secures leave of absence, planning, while Madrella is wounded and under guard, to grow a beard and impersonate him, with the idea of securing information of Juarez's movements. Dressed as Madrella, he enters La Anita's home by stealth and overhears a conversation between Madrella and Lopez which proves the latter a traitor to Maximilian. Lopez has secured Madrella's release and the latter is leaving at once for Juarez's camp. He reaches Cuernavaca about the same time as the real Madrella. An unsuccessful attempt is made by Madrella to kill De Vigny.

CHAPTER VI—Continued

Pasqual, with the silent movements born of his Indian blood, had come through the window.

Madrella studied me a long moment, then a flame of understanding leaped into his eyes. "You have seen her then, as—myself?"

"Of a truth! We had a touching scene. With tears in her lovely eyes she told me that she could not kiss me, and because—in character—I must put on a face of woe, she kissed me prettily; yet it was a sister's kiss and not of love. She called me 'Poor Pablo,' and when a woman speaks thus, senior, to a man once beloved, it is the end."

"For that," he cried, a wild passion in his face, "you die!"

He raised the weapon as Pasqual leaped, and the gun—thrust suddenly upward—drove a futile bullet into the ceiling. Madrella shrugged clear of the Indian and swung his right arm with the clubbed pistol. Again I lifted that bandy stool and brought it down upon Madrella's head. He went down even as Manuel had done, and the floor trembled with the fall of him.

I pocketed the pistol; then Pasqual and I climbed swiftly through the window, descended the blinding roof that led nearly to the cobbled floor of the patio, and, with the horse and the burro, made off, leaving Madrella and the "fat and apoplectic Manuel" to wake up or not—as they chose.

About five miles south of Cuernavaca, on the road that leads to Tlatlaya, we stopped beside an arroyo. In the cool sweet waters of which I bathed my bruised face, for Madrella's hard fist had beat a tattoo upon it.

"In two or three days, senior," said Pasqual, "you will look the same as ever."

"Pasqual, I owe thee more than I shall ever be able to pay."

"I shall not be hard to pay, senior."

Now, having cleared the Imperial lines, we changed clothing again, and after paying Pasqual more than I had bargained for, I mounted the horse.

"Here we part," said I. "Tomorrow, or certainly on the day thereafter, I shall return. I hope to find you here."

"I shall stay here, senior, day and night—until you return."

"And if he should come, Pasqual?"

"The bearded man, senior?"

"Aye, it is not my desire that be traced."

"He will get no farther than this."

"But in what manner will you stop him?"

The Indian squared his trim shoulders. "If the senior, armed only with a stool, can vanquish two men with knives and guns, surely Pasqual—"

"Adios, then," said I.

I have always regretted the trick I played Pasqual, yet, with my regrets, there is the satisfaction of knowing that in the courageous heart of a fine Indian lad, there is a place reserved for me.

Before me, in the head of a tiny amphitheater, lay a town—Trentia, I think it was called. A vast, one-story building faced the road, and as I approached it, a sign across the front revealed its purpose. Meals could be purchased there, and rooms for sleeping, and even feed for horses. We I dismounted, and a mason led my horse toward a barn; the mason's front door opened and the best appeared. He was taller than I, with a tremendous breadth of shoulders, with shifting gray-brown eyes, and a pocket-sized face of wax.

His face broke into what he doubtless deemed to be a smile. "Buenos dias, senior."

I bade him good morning, knocking the dust from my hat the while, and I asked him if food and drink might be procured. He roared an intelligible order and almost instantly a Chinaman, whose every move seemed to have the sure swiftness of a panther, brought two bottles of wine, opened them, placed them, with two glasses, upon a small table, and disappeared as swiftly and as silently and as mysteriously as he had come.

We drew up chairs. The wine was as smooth as any that the Cafe Miramon possessed, and mine host, noting the look of surprise and satisfaction on my face, spoke: "Did not the senior expect good wine?"

"One never expects good wine in Mexico," said I. "How simple a thing for me to say, yet it betrayed me as a foreigner, a thing I had hoped, above all things, to avoid, for I was in an area controlled by the revolutionists of Benito Juarez, and must, therefore, observe exceeding care."

He smiled. "You have come from the north—is it not so, senior?"

I nodded, for the thing could not be denied. I was in the enemy's country, and circumspection, therefore, was a vital thing; yet I was Pablo Madrella, and so long as I remained Madrella this country was my own. I had, I knew, some hours' lead over the worthy cousin, with Pasqual—a man of resource and courage—between us.

"Aye, from the city."

"How far do the lines of the Empire extend?"

"To the east and north and west," said I. "I do not know, but southward they reach some miles this side of Cuernavaca."

"To travel the roads, senior," said Monsieur Evilface, "is a dangerous thing these days, even for a native."

"It is as a native that I have traveled. A loaded burro, a dragging step, a bent back, and a beard—all gray with alkali—and I walk through the French lines as though they were not. Besides, Manuel, of the Hotel Montezuma, is my friend."

"Yet the wife of France, your mine host, 'soothed thy palate, and caused thee to speak ill of Mexico. Does such talk best a patriot?"

He had half risen, and passion flamed in his eyes. I slipped one hand into my pocket, where lay the gun of Madrella, and waited.

"I have stopped for food, senior, and drink," said I; "and having satisfied my hunger and my thirst, I desire to pay you and be again upon my way. I got slowly to my feet."

"And your way, senior, is—where?" There was no attempt to disguise the doubt or hostility in his voice.

"To the camp of General Juarez."

"And that is—where, senior?"

"Tlatlaya," said I, for so La Anita had told me.

He laughed harshly. "Tlatlaya!" he roared, thrusting the table forward with great suddenness; but, anticipating just such a move, I had leaped clear as the table slid across the room and crashed against the wall.

Now he swung his great body, with that peculiar gliding motion of a gorilla—his dark face working, his breath hissing through heavy teeth—and cast himself upon me. Even as his hairy hands clutched at me he stopped—grotesquely—midway in a gesture, for he found my pistol pointing at his heart.

"I cannot miss you," I said, for, as a target, his bulk was a serious handicap for him. "Believe me, senior, a gun is not an unaccustomed thing in my hand. I think, in fact, I owe you a bullet."

"Yet you will never pay that debt, senior?"

"Because," said he, "between you and safety lie many miles of hostile country, and men will spring up, like spirits out of the earth, across your path. The Empire will know you no more. You are French, senior; it is evident, despite the smooth perfection of the Spanish you use and the artistry of your disguise. Six soldiers of Benito Juarez will stand you up against a wall—"

He laughed freely, loudly; and in the noise of that laugh the Chinaman approached swiftly and leaped upon me from behind. He struck my elbow and the gun clattered to the floor. Then the giant Mexican swung a muscular arm. I tried in vain to dodge the force of that pit-driver blow.

There was an earth-shaking jar, a brilliant conglomeration of varied-colored lights before my eyes, and a taste of sulphur in my mouth. The huge figure that towered menacingly over me faded away in a crimson haze, the haze melted slowly to darkness, and I fell—and fell.

When I awoke the Chinaman was standing over me, an empty bucket in his hand and a look of anxiety on his yellow face.

"Mine host laughed," "Search him, Tal Sing, and see if he has another gun—or a knife."

The oriental's deft fingers went over me swiftly, finding only a wallet, from which the Mexican drew a sheaf of bills. "Money," he said gaily, "two hundred pesos and over; a deal, even in the state of Morelos."

He transferred the bills to his own pocket. "You will have no further use for them, for before the day is gone, your body—"

He said a suggestive finger across his thick neck. "Tal Sing will carve a man as readily as he does a helpless chiva; and the spy, senior—"

While I lifted myself painfully to my feet he held the gun upon me. "You were misinformed, senior, about Benito Juarez; you would have sought him at Tlatlaya, while, in fact, he is encamped ten miles from here. Had you come to see him in the name of the Republic you would have known that. Perhaps, senior, you will tell me, now that your race is run, just who you are."

Now my head was clearing from the terrible blow that he had given me, and my brain was beginning to function again. "I am Madrella," said I. "Pablo Madrella—and my business is with the President. If you take upon yourself the responsibility of halting me you will doubtless hear from him; and his hand, as you must know, is heavy. I bring him news of grave portent."

The giant laughed. "I have heard of Madrella—what patriot has not—"

He roared an intelligible order and almost instantly a Chinaman, whose every move seemed to have the sure swiftness of a panther, brought two bottles of wine, opened them, placed them, with two glasses, upon a small table, and disappeared as swiftly and as silently and as mysteriously as he had come.

I nodded, for the thing could not be denied. I was in the enemy's country, and circumspection, therefore, was a vital thing; yet I was Pablo Madrella, and so long as I remained Madrella this country was my own. I had, I knew, some hours' lead over the worthy cousin, with Pasqual—a man of resource and courage—between us.

In the wallet, bringing at last to light the pass of Benito Juarez, the folded paper that had dropped from Madrella's coat the night of our duel. He opened it, and his area devoured its brief contents. The parchment, with its potent message, fluttered to the floor; the gun fell from his hand, struck his boot and bounded across the room, and Tal Sing—wondering—picked it up. Reading aright the evident fear in his master's face he proffered the weapon to me, and I put it back into my pocket.

Mine host searched my face, an eager hunger in his eyes. "Dios," he gasped, "How can I be forgiven? The general—"

I laughed. "Benito Juarez will do to you just what I ask—him to do."

"Yet surely, senior, I was only—"

He returned the money to my wallet, plucked up the pass, and pressed them into my hands. "I was only seeking to serve the Republic; General Juarez has many enemies."

"Thy service is an uncertain thing; yet—"

"Ah, senior, I will do anything!" he cried, anticipating a concession.

"Then get my horse, for I must be again upon my way. Benito Juarez waits for me."

"I have another horse, senior, a fine black one; and more befitting your station. Will you do me the honor to ride him, while your own rests in my stable? On your return a change may be made, or in case you do not return I beg to present him to you in the name of the Republic."

I nodded, for speech was beyond me.

"And," he continued, "may I ride with thee? The country is filled with bandits; they would never attack thee while I am along."

I soon discovered that Don Fells Perez—for such was his name—was, despite all appearance to the contrary, a man of vast accomplishment and education, and the hour that we rode before we reached the Republican lines was full of profit to me, for he told me many things of value.

The river which passes through the village of Puente de Ixtla, was less than a mile away when sentries beside the road barred our progress.

"Do you dare halt the great Madrella," roared my companion, "and Fells Perez? We would see the general; take us to him quickly!"

I could not have approached Benito Juarez under conditions more favorable for my success. As we rode up, the general, standing before the massive adobe building that was his headquarters, came toward us. He put an arm over the wide shoulders of Don Fells Perez, and they had a word or two of friendly greeting.

"Ah, Pablo," said the giant Mexican heartily, "we are here at last." Truly the man was striving for a favorable report.

Now Benito Juarez took both of my hands and smiled at me, and I looked into the dark inscrutable eyes of Mexico's greatest patriot, the man we had fought three years. And, as I looked, a great fear possessed me, for, though my head reached higher than his and my shoulders were broader, he radiated a sort of vibrant energy that left me weak and helpless.

Although past sixty, he had the poise and the physical appearance of early middle age. His face was beardless, his eyes were steady and unchanging, his head was large and round; and he possessed the ponderous jaw, the big, close-set mouth and the massive nose of the man of action, of determination. Danger left him cold; he never forgot a friend—or an enemy—and his native ability and genius for organization made him President of Mexico more than once. This much must I, a French soldier who knew him well, concede to Benito Juarez.

The great general considered long the bruises left by the fists of Madrella and of Don Fells, and I had begun fearfully to wonder if doubts of my identity had entered his head when he spoke: "One would imagine, Pablo mio, that you have traveled on your face."

"Don Fells Perez looked down a crooked nose, 'Excellency,' he said at last, 'there was a misunderstanding, a difference, and I struck him—once. I have tried to make amends.'"

"It is nothing, excellency," said I; "he imagined that he was serving the Republic." Rancor is not a thing that thrives in my heart, and Fells Perez had done me a lasting favor.

"And your wound, Pablo; has it healed sufficiently for you to travel in safety?"

My wound! I had forgotten that I was wounded. Having the appearance of Madrella I needed now most sorely that clever brain of his. If I admitted a wound I might, for identification, be required to exhibit it, for Juarez was a man who overlooked nothing; and once suspicion came to him I was doomed. And if I did not admit it—I sighed. He was at least ignorant of my resemblance to Madrella; upon that I must build my fabric of lies.

"We heard, Pablo," he continued, "that you had fought with Captain Vigny, and that you lay, grievously wounded, at your home, with soldiers of Maximilian as a guard. Was there no duel?"

"Aye," said I; "there was a duel, if my poor efforts against that master swordsman may be so termed."

"Do you mean to tell me the French officer—?"

"Exactly, excellency; that sword of his was a veritable part of him; I was helpless. He played with me as a cat plays with a mouse; I was a babe before him. He is called the Blade of Picardy, and in a nation of fencers such a nom de guerre may not be easily earned."

The dark eyes of the future master of Mexico beamed into mine. "Then he—?"

I laughed. "It is not the part of wisdom, excellency, to continue a contest wherein you have everything to lose and naught to gain. I might just as well have tried to stab a moonbeam; he was everywhere—and nowhere. So, awaiting opportunity, I accepted a thrust in the side; a thrust which barely broke the skin, bringing forth sufficient blood to stain my shirt. They took me home and put me to bed; and Doctor Mendez came—and looked and smiled—and went away with his tongue in his cheek. A scratch, general, that healed and was forgotten in a week."

"Ah—Pablo," laughed the President, "you are a delight!" He put an arm across my shoulder. "Come in."

I turned to Don Fells Perez: "Senior, your horse shall have the best of care, and I shall bring him back to you—and reclaim my own—before the morrow."

So his evil face broke into another smile, and—smiling still—he rode away.

My first hurdle had been won; now to block the attack on Cuernavaca!

CHAPTER VII

Sons of France

A tall man in gorgeous uniform got to his feet as I was led into a room half filled with a massive table that bore a jumbled lot of maps. "General Escobedo!" I breathed.

"You know him then, Pablo?" questioned Juarez.

"Aye, excellency, every one knows the hero of Matamoros." For it was the fall of Matamoros that had lost to Maximilian the eastern portion of Mexico.

After the manner of Latin General Escobedo embraced me, and his first statement sent a chill of terror to my heart. His deep voice sounded like the knell of death. "Assuredly he should know me, for Pablo Madrella is engaged to marry my niece, lovely La Anita."

Truly the understudy of that worthy cousin would have to be a busy man! And I was leaving behind me a tangled skein that even the clever brain of Madrella would find difficult to unravel. Had not terror so firm a grip upon me I think I should have laughed.

"Pablo," the President explained, "is the connecting link between me and the city. What the emperor plans to do gets to Madrella, and then, through him, to me."

"Then Pablo is just in time," said the hero of Matamoros, "for he doubtless brings news of Cuernavaca, and of the disposition of Maximilian's forces. Is it not so?"

I considered a long moment. "The attack on Cuernavaca, general, has been delayed too long. Maximilian is well aware of your prospective move. Instead of the presumed five thousand soldiers of the Belgian corps there are twelve thousand men in Cuernavaca."

"Impossible! Only yesterday I had word from there."

"Yet the word you received was incorrect, excellency; those men are hidden."

"You must explain," Escobedo urged.

"Assuredly. Maximilian would give much for the head of General Juarez, having failed to vanquish him in battle he tries subtlety. He has known, for a week, of your plans; and he has drawn men from the east for the protection of Cuernavaca because he realizes only too well the strategic value of that city. Besides, he is making a great deal on trapping the President in this endeavor."

"My plan," said the President, "was known to two people in Mexico City, yourself and Colonel Miguel Lopez."

THE STORY OF EZEKIEL

LESSON TEXT—Ezekiel 3:1-11; 14:1-11.

GOLDEN TEXT—As I live, saith the Lord God, I have no pleasure in the death of the wicked, but that the wicked turn from his way and live. PRIMARY TOPIC—Ezekiel, a Messenger of God.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Ezekiel, a Messenger of God. INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Frankness in Friendship. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—A Prophet-Pastor.

Ezekiel prophesied in the land of the captivity. The purpose of his ministry was threefold.

(1) To keep before the house of Israel that they were in captivity because of their sins (14:23). (2) To show that God is righteous in His visitation of judgment upon them (7:8,9). (3) To sustain their faith by assuring them of their national restoration, the punishment of their enemies, and their final exaltation, among the nations when Messiah should reign (34:11-31).

1. Ezekiel's Call (2:1, 2). 1. Command to stand up (v. 1). He was given a vision of the Almighty God on His throne of glory (ch. 1). The purpose of this vision was to give a synthetic grasp of the execution of the divine will through the powers and forces which God had created. Before this vision the prophet fell prostrate upon his face. When one sees the diversity and complexity of the agencies employed, including the animate and inanimate creation intelligently moving forward, under the direction of the Almighty, he will be ready to face any task regardless of its difficulty.

No Abbreviated Pants for Gen. Dawes

Ambassador Charles Dawes could always be counted upon to "pull" something different from others, not to parade himself in the spotlight, but it is just his nature, and you can either take it or leave it.

It has always been the custom in England for Ambassadors from all foreign countries to dress in English costumes with knee pants, etc., before being presented in court, but Dawes would have none of this.

When being presented, he surprised English royalty by coming in ordinary American evening dress, much to the embarrassment of the throne and powdered wig potentates, but Dawes paid no attention to the side glances he didn't give a damn.

Dawes reminded us of the immortal Bill Nye's comical account of Benjamin Franklin's first visit to England as an American envoy and stepping up to the King, he hung his hat on the throne and told him how business was.

When Andrew Jackson was President of the United States, he made his appointments of envoys as usual and the first to approach him for instructions was the minister to England, who said: "Your honor, what about diplomacy? Have you formulated a plan for me to follow in my relations with Great Britain in order that I may act diplomatically?" Old Hickory raised his glasses, gave the newly-appointed envoy a good look, and answered: "Go on about your business, treat every man on the square, don't take anything from anybody and by Hell, that will be all the diplomacy you will need."

Dawes has been criticized many times for what has been considered by some as being "hard boiled," but to sum it all up, he is strictly original and intensely human. He despises camouflaging and is of a nature to speak what he thinks, and as he chops his wood, allows the chips to fall where they may; in other words, take it or leave it. In his manner, he is very much like Benjamin Franklin, and "Old Hickory," both of whom never hesitated to speak out as best suited their thoughts in good old American language that left no room for misunderstanding.

Long and Short Wave Radio Used To Telephone Across the Atlantic

Showing Apparatus Used at Short Wave Receiving Station at Netcong, N. J.

By JOHN B. O'BRIEN

IN view of the increasing use of the transoceanic telephone service and the many refinements constantly being made to long wave and short wave channels, low frequencies and high frequencies, it might be well to inquire just what these terms mean.

When the transatlantic service was opened, a long wave channel was employed. This service has been supplemented during the past year by the inauguration of a short wave channel. Still another such channel is to be placed in operation during 1929, and later another channel is planned and also one to Argentina in South America. What then is the difference between a long wave channel and a short wave channel?

As the name implies, short waves are radio waves which have a shorter wave length than do the long waves. The long wave channel now in use employs waves of 5,000 meters, or about three miles in length, whereas in the short waves, if one could see the distance from the crest of one to the crest of the next wave, such a distance would be less than 35 meters, or 30 yards. This is very much shorter than the waves of broadcasting stations which lie between 200 and 550 meters.

Rapid Vibrations
Short wave and long wave channels do not interfere with one another, as each receiving station selects the particular wave length which it is desired to receive, just as each individual radio fan can select the particular broadcasting station he desires to hear. Thus, short wave transatlantic channels can transmit conversation at the same time that long wave channels are transmitted. Short waves are sent out with very great rapidity from the antenna at the transmitting station. The electric currents flowing back and forth in the wires of the antenna send out one wave for every cycle of the current variation, and in order that the waves may be short, it is necessary that each one should follow its predecessor by a very short interval of time. This means that they must be sent out very rapidly, or at a high frequency.

Hence, the term, high frequency waves has come to be used for short waves. In fact, in the high frequency transatlantic circuit they occur at the rate of over 9,000,000 vibrations per second. As a vibration is also a cycle, and 1,000 vibrations is a kilocycle, this means that the transatlantic high frequency exceed 9,000 kilocycles per second, whereas the ordinary radio broadcasting stations are operated in frequencies between 500 and 1,500 kilocycles per second. On the other hand, the low frequency transatlantic channel which was opened in January, 1927, uses a frequency of only 60 kilocycles per second.

Frequencies to Suit Time of Day
Signals from a short-wave transmitting antenna die out rapidly within a few miles and there is a zone several hundred miles or more in diameter around the station, in which few or no signals can be received. Outside this zone, signals again appear, having apparently traveled through the upper atmosphere, skipping over the weak signal zone just mentioned. For this reason, the radius of the zone is called the "skip distance." As the transmission characteristics of the upper atmosphere change in accordance with changes in the sun's rays to which it is exposed, the type of short waves which are best suited for use at any time depends considerably on the season and time of day.

The result is that the efficiency of high frequency waves is dependent upon conditions at the time when they are sent. For example, a particularly high frequency might be adequate at 10 o'clock in the morning, but at 6 o'clock in the afternoon the frequency would be very poor and another one would be very effective. The result is that in transatlantic telephony, high frequency channels have three sets of frequencies. When the entire path between New York and England is in darkness, the frequencies of about 9,000 kilocycles are used in both directions, but when there is sunset in the mid-Atlantic, frequencies of about 15,000 kilocycles are used, and when there is daylight all the way the frequencies employed are of about 18,000 kilocycles. Thus, it is necessary to change the frequency used at certain times during the day and when this is done, satisfactory transmission can usually be obtained continuously.

Sending and Receiving Stations
In the case of high frequency waves the antennas used are small in comparison with the high towers or long lines of poles which are necessary for low frequency transoceanic communication. On the other hand, there is a greater variability in the reception of high frequency waves, but the research men and development engineers of the Bell System have accomplished many improvements in high frequency apparatus and methods during the past year or so.

The high frequency waves from England are now received at Netcong, N. J., where there are three receiving antennas, one for each frequency that is used. High frequency waves are sent out from Deal, N. J., but when the new station which is under construction at Lawrenceville, near Princeton, N. J., is opened later in the year, the Deal station will be used largely for experimental work. The low frequency station from which the waves take the long jump across the Atlantic is located at Rocky Point, on Long Island, and the receiving station is located in Houlton, Me., which is connected with New York via telephone circuit. As in the case at Netcong where there are three receiving antennas for the high frequency waves, so at Deal there are three transmitting antennas, one for the night frequency, one for the sunset frequency and the other for the daylight frequency.

stantly being done. Careless motorists act as a constant menace to the men who are working on the roads by passing at too great a speed, sideswiping, and by frightening animals.

Cars more or less are enveloped in a cloud of dust, he points out, cannot be accurately gauged as to speed or direction by the men working on the roads. Also, the men cannot stop for every passing vehicle or no work at all would be done.

"There is a definite danger to the motorist as well as the highway workers," he says. "Where new work is going on there are often soft places, minor wash-outs or some other bad condition which the work is to cure. If the car swerves into one of these places or hits new patches of surfacing or a soft place at a high rate of speed there is a large possibility of accident with bad results to the driver.

"Minor repairs have to be made while the road is under traffic or else a rapid disintegration of a large stretch is liable to happen. If traffic is turned off the road while such repairs are being made the slowing up and general unpleasantness of having to use a detour cause as much trouble to the travelling public as the condition which is to be repaired.

"We must, then, necessarily continue to make minor repairs and reconditioning work while traffic is on the road," he concludes, "and the only way in which this can be done without a needless waste of life and limb is to enjoy the full cooperation of the travelling public. Again we ask that traffic slow down and give the road workers a chance."

Some Good Things to Eat

By NELLIE MAXWELL

Where the pools are bright and deep,
Where the gray trout lies asleep,
Up the river and over the sea,
That's the way for Billy and me.
—James Hogg.

Salads, greens, and fresh vegetables should be used abundantly at this season.

Salad.—Slice three-fourths of a cupful of green onions and cover with french dressing to which a teaspoonful of sugar has been added. Let stand one-half hour. Drain and arrange with one cupful each of sliced new beets and green peas on a bed of water cress. Garnish with cheese balls made by mixing the cream cheese with two-thirds of a cupful of finely chopped peanuts. Mold into small balls and dust with paprika. Serve with more french dressing.

Boston Brown Bread.—Take one cupful each of graham flour, corn meal and rye meal, three-fourths of a teaspoonful of soda, one and one-half teaspoonfuls of salt, three-fourths of a cupful of molasses and two cupfuls of sour milk. Mix and sift the dry ingredients, add milk and molasses, beat well, add a few raisins and pour into a well greased mold, two-thirds full. Cover and steam three and one-half hours.

Plain Muffins.—Mix and sift together two cupfuls of flour, three teaspoonfuls of baking powder and one-half teaspoonful of salt. Add one cupful of milk, two tablespoonfuls of sugar and one unbeaten egg. Beat and mix the batter thoroughly, stirring in widening circles, keeping the spoon on the bottom of the bowl. Place in muffin pans and bake twenty minutes in a hot oven.

Spanish Meat Loaf.—Take two cupfuls of ground beef, one-half cupful of fat salt pork ground, two cupfuls of cracker crumbs, one cupful of milk, one beaten egg, salt, pepper, tabasco sauce, one onion, one and one-half cupfuls of strained tomato, strips of bacon. Mix all the ingredients except the tomato, form into a loaf and place in a greased baking pan. Cover with strips of bacon and over the top pour the tomato sauce. Bake forty minutes in a moderate oven.

Gooseberry Relish Sandwich.—Add enough finely grated Herkimer cheese or old American cheese to one-half cupful of the strained gooseberry relish to bind. Spread on thin slices of toast cut into fancy shapes. Serve on lettuce.

A nice dish to serve for luncheons, which may be prepared from stewed fowl is:

Chicken Warmen.—Take a large fat fowl, cut up for serving, and put on to stew in plenty of water. When tender, remove the chicken, and cut it into small pieces, removing all the bones.

Put a bunch or two of diced celery into the broth and cook it until tender, remove it, and add noodles, cook for fifteen minutes, then serve a nest of noodles with celery and top with the chicken. Add a little gravy made with broth, cream and serve.

Green Peas, Onion and Cucumber Salad.—Take one and one-half cupfuls of cooked, drained, small green peas, the same amount of thinly sliced young cucumbers and one cupful of thinly sliced green onions. Mix and dust with salt and paprika. Add any good salad dressing, heap on lettuce and serve.

Lima Beans and Celery.—Take two cupfuls of cooked lima beans, add to them, one cupful of green celery diced and two tablespoonfuls of chopped onion. Serve on lettuce with a good boiled dressing; garnish with radish roses.

A Dainty Dessert.—Cut out squares or circles of sponge cake, make wells with a small cutter and brush well with melted butter. Put into the oven and toast. Serve with the wells filled with sugared fruit. Strawberries or any reasonable fruit may be used. Top with whipped cream or serve cream with the dessert. When dried of salads use a fruit cup for a change. Combine almost any in-season fruit, add a bit of lemon juice and some sugar sirup and serve well chilled, in tall glasses.

Orange Banana Cream.—Remove the skin and fiber from six bananas, mash to a pulp, adding gradually two cupfuls of orange juice. When all is well mixed add four tablespoonfuls of cream and chill. Serve in glass cups.

Maple Sirup Salad Dressing.—Beat one-fourth of a cupful of maple sirup to the boiling point and pour over three egg yolks well beaten, add a bit of salt and paprika and one teaspoonful of lemon juice and one-half cupful of cream beaten stiff, when the mixture is cool.

Planning Ahead for Picnics

Community Picnic With Cafeteria Service.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Whether it occurs on the "glorious Fourth" or on any other day of the summer, a community picnic, attended by persons of all ages, is likely to be successful if consideration is given to everybody's comfort. Young people do not mind perching on logs or rocks to eat their lunches, or sitting right on the ground, but those who are less energetic prefer a bench of some sort and a place to set their dishes or beverages. Mothers with little children, too, can manage them better and get them to take their milk or fruit drinks more readily in spite of the prevailing distracted and excitement, if the arrangements for eating are somewhat like those they are used to. Set tables and benches such as are found in automobile tourist camps, answer admirably, however roughly constructed. Shade is essential to a comfortable outing. A grove of tall trees with no underbrush is ideal, and if there is a stream or lake in sight to make a pleasant outlook and add interest for the children, so much the better. A supply of pure drinking water should be assured, either from a well or spring known to be safe, or carried from home. Children should be taught not to touch the water in brooks or ponds, lest it be contaminated.

Foods for the community picnic should be planned beforehand by a competent committee. The preparation of the various articles on the menu may then be allotted to volunteers and there will be no unnecessary duplications or omissions. Some hot foods like bacon, steak, wieners, or rounds of hamburger wrapped in bacon may be cooked on the grounds. Coffee may be cooked when wanted or carried in thermos bottles. On the whole, however, cold foods and beverages will be found easiest to manage for a large group of people, especially on a warm day. Mixed and mixed foods which might easily spoil, are best avoided, either as separate dishes or in sandwiches. Salad ingredients may be carried separately, packed with a little ice, and put together at the picnic. The cafeteria method of serving is quick and easy. It insures every one's getting the foods preferred, so there is a minimum of waste. The Oregon women in the illustration, taken by the United States Department of Agriculture, belong to a home demonstration club under the direction of the state extension staff. They have found cafeteria service very satisfactory.

Electric Ventilator Keeps Kitchen Cool

An electric ventilator will bring comfort to the one-window kitchen, says American Home. There are now three kinds available: The portable type, which can be hung up over a window and moved when the family moves; the built-in type, which cuts off no light but must be put in when the house is constructed, and the more elaborate type which is installed in a hood over the range. All of these ventilators, of course, are run by motors; they are simply glorified electric fans, which can be turned on and off at will.

A man will carry gossip, but only to those he can trust.

Fairy Tale for the Children

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

"Grandmother was the first of our kind," said a beautiful pink rose.

"We're known as the Columbian rose family."

"I'm glad to make your acquaintance," said the yellow rose a little stiffly. "I was quite impressed talking to a brand-new kind of rose."

"Thank you," said the pink rose. "What did you mean a little while ago when you said you had only been trained to do what you were told to do lately?" asked the yellow rose.

"Well, my grandmother was the first to do what she was told to do—now wasn't that interesting in a grandmother? They are usually the nicest people in the world but you don't usually say they do what they're told for they're not usually told to do things."

"I didn't actually mean that I had only been trained of late to do what I was told, but I meant that my family had been trained of late to do the thing we were supposed to do. That is we're not doing what we are not supposed to do."

The yellow rose dropped a petal in astonishment. They were in vases of water in the window of a florist's shop.

Some passerby saw the yellow rose petal drop and said:

"What beautiful yellow roses, but one of the roses just dropped a petal. They must be getting a bit old."

And they admired the beautiful pink rose—and the pink rose which had been talking to the yellow rose, gracefully and very beautifully bowed its head over so little.

"I must be careful and not get excited by what you say again," said the yellow rose, "for the florist won't be able to sell me, and I won't be taken home to cheer up some one."

"I Want to Wear a Rose."

"I'm not really old, I was only very much excited by what you had said."

"I tried to keep up with what you were saying, but gracious! I was terribly confused."

"Poor yellow rose," said the pink rose. "It was all my fault. For a rose that doesn't prick I'm very inconsiderate."

HINTS FOR HOUSEKEEPERS

Cook eggs at a low even heat.

To slice hard-cooked eggs without crumbling use a hot, dry knife.

Vegetables canned this summer are insurance against next winter's ill.

Grated cheese on creamed vegetable soups or on salads adds valuable nutrients and variety to the diet.

Children's clothing should be loose enough to permit plenty of activity and allow the body freedom for growth.

Before measuring molasses, dip the measuring cup or spoon in scalding water and then the molasses will turn out quickly.

Stockings short in the feet cause almost as much trouble as that caused by short shoes. Get stockings half an inch longer than the feet, to be sure of enough room for the toes.

Handwork Adds to Little Frocks

By JULIA BOTTOMLEY

In creating styles for little frocks, dress designers are laying great stress on handworked ornamentation. Far more enthusiasm is expressed for applique effects. One notes on certain dresses of every material a pro-ponderance of applied design which manipulates colors and fabrics in strikingly modernistic patterns.

There are the clever felt coat and hat ensembles, for instance. They sound a note of originality which is very refreshing. Almost amusing are some of these "sets" made of gay felt, in that grotesque little figures are cut of multi-colored felt, the same applied in unique borderings and such on a monotonous colored background. The colorings are as lively as imagination can picture—a row of bright flowers or fruits on perhaps a pale green felt coat or bright blue, or even orange color for the background. If you are looking for a coat, or a sleeveless jacket, or a hat-and-bag set for your child to wear at the seashore this summer do not miss seeing these cunning felt styles.

The dress which the wee Parisienne in the picture is wearing, shows to a nicely the trend toward bright-colored applique design. Not only is the play or color indicative of the times but the bold conventional patterning applied on a simple white background is characteristic of present-day design.

This whimsical party dress is of white crepe de chine. About the irregular hemline is a triple piping done in three colors, peach, sile and blue. The modernistic design is worked in the same colors of crepe as the piping. This frock ought to prove an inspiration to mothers who make their children's clothes, for it could be carried out in piece or gingham or any of the many gay cotton weaves.

However, for the party frock, no fabric gives any better satisfaction than does crepe de chine. Parisienne styles are complex; they always dependable with weaves for ever so many of their loveliest "dresses" frocks. (© 1939, Western Newspaper Union.)

Protect Child's Head From the Sun

A matching sun hat of cretonne and cable net is worn with her colorful sun suit by the little girl in the picture. Some protection for a child's head and eyes is advisable when the sun is sufficiently hot to give the beneficial effects of a sun bath on the skin surface of the body. The cretonne used for both suit and hat is sure to delight any little girl. It has a gay design of plump red cherries on a cream-colored background. The waist is of ecru net, as is the ventilating crown of the hat, and the whole is headed with blue tape of soft green.

The hat can be easily made by experimenting with a piece of paper and a pair of scissors until a satisfactory pattern is made for the brim, fitting the head comfortably. It should be cut a little wider in front than in back, and by means of a back seam can be shaped becomingly. The circles of cretonne are needed for the upper and under sides of the brim, and an interlining of thin muslin. Green binding is used. The brim is slightly starched to hold its shape. The crown which is detachable, is simply a circle of the net, bound with green blue tape and arranged to draw up and button to the brim.

The hat and sun suit were designed by the Bureau of Home Economics of the United States Department of Agriculture. No patterns are issued by the bureau for any children's garments, but this sun suit can be readily adapted from a commercial Drexler-singer pattern, which shows out at the sides. These side pieces are pinned together at the lower edge and trace the other-wise upon pinboard, and retouch the sides of the drop seat. Bands of blue tape trim and define the legs but do not bind them.

YELLOWSTONE PARK OPENED

Indians in tribal costume and cowboys attired in western regalia united with high government officials in welcoming tourists to Yellowstone National Park, the pleasure grounds of nearly a quarter million people each year, when it opened its portals for the fifty-eighth season, June 26th.

The official opening was held at Gallatin Gateway, Montana, the newest entrance to the oldest national park. The program was under the direction of the Milwaukee road, the railroad serving this new entrance to Yellowstone.

CENSUS BILL SIGNED

Washington.—President Hoover recently signed the census and reapportionment bill. The new act has a two-fold purpose: provision for the regular decennial count of the population and the setting up of a plan for reapportionment of the House of Representatives. This will be the first reapportionment since 1910. The census count will be for the calendar year 1930 and the House members will be apportioned upon it. Under this reapportionment a number of states will gain additional representation, while several other states will lose seats.

CONNIE MACK WILL NOT RETIRE

Connie Mack, veteran manager of the Philadelphia Athletics, has spiked reports frequently heard in baseball circles that he wanted to win one more pennant and then retire. He said he had no intention of retiring and hoped still to be managing the Athletics when he is 70 years old. He is now 66.

$780,000 NET IN ELECTION

London.—It is estimated that between one-half million and three-quarter million dollars changed hands in settlement of the "differences" arising out of dealings in the stock exchange "majorities" on the recent general elections. Some payments ran into tens of thousands of dollars. Because of the wide variations between the prices at which dealings took place and the final standing of the Liberals, some heavy differences had to be met.

MARLAND APPROVES CONTINENTAL MERGER

Wilmington.—Stockholders of Marland Oil Company met recently here and approved the merger with the Continental Oil Company, removing the last barrier to actual consolidation of the two firms. Continental stockholders ratified the plan for the $200,000,000 merger at a meeting Monday. Marland stockholders also approved the change in the company's name to Continental Oil Company of Delaware and the increase in authorized capital from 2,400,000 to 5,000,000 no par shares.

$100,000,000 REQUEST

Indianapolis.—Public bonds of approximately $100,000,000 to be available in 1930 are made in a bill filed for debate here. It provides for $50,000 to be kept intact for 200 years at compound interest. The bill is that of Wm. H. Latta, Indianapolis, street railway attorney who was killed when an automobile he was driving was struck by a passenger train near Carmel, Ind.

1—Tent city where boys and girls of 4-H clubs live during their annual visit to Washington. 2—President Hoover signing the farm relief bill. 3—Dr. Joseph S. Ames who has been elected president of Johns Hopkins university to succeed Dr. Frank J. Goodnow, resigned.

Congress Recesses, the Farm Aid and Reapportionment Measures Are Signed.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD
WITH the farm aid bill signed by President Hoover and $151,500,000 appropriated to begin putting its provisions into operation, and the census and reapportionment measure also made law by the President's signature, congress quit work for the summer in the middle of the week. The senate recessed until August 19, when it will reassemble to begin debate on the tariff bill which its finance committee is expected to have completed by that date.

Senator Borah of Idaho made a strong fight to have the tariff revision confined to agricultural and directly related commodities and in the course of a heated debate asserted that his resolution to that effect was in accord with the President's views and the primary purpose of the special session. Most of the regular Republicans and seven Democrats, however, stood firm for more general revision and succeeded in beating the resolution by the narrow margin of one, the vote being 33 to 33.

JUST before recessing congress gave its approval to President Hoover's recommendation that France be relieved of the necessity of paying the $400,000,000 due August 1 for the surplus war supplies it purchased after the close of the war, on the condition that the Mellon-Berenger debt funding agreement be ratified before that date by the French parliament. Under the terms of that accord the sum mentioned is absorbed as part of the entire French debt which is funded over a period of sixty-two years. The arrangement was attacked in both houses. The senate adopted a separate resolution on motion of Senator Howell of Nebraska declaring that in effect the United States under the Mellon-Berenger agreement canceled the entire $4,230,777,000 of the principal and accumulated interest up to 1925 of the French debt. The payments to be made by the French government over a period of sixty-two years are merely the equivalent of annual interest payments of 2.17 per cent on the original sum, the resolution declares.

As the matter now stands, if either the French parliament or the American congress fails to ratify the Mellon-Berenger agreement, France must pay the $400,000,000 on May 1 next.

TRANSFER of prohibition enforcement activities to the Department of Justice has been indefinitely postponed. Senator Jones introduced a resolution for the appointment of a joint committee to study reorganization and centralization of dry enforcement, as asked by the President, but the anti-Volstead senators, aroused by the repeated killings by enforcement officers, started such a hot debate, demanding that the shootings also be investigated, that the administration leaders had the resolution withdrawn until August 19, when it was promised a vote would be taken.

Citizens of International Falls, Minn., where Henry Virkula, an apparently innocent man, was killed by enforcement agents, appealed directly to the President for protection. He did not reply immediately, so the city council of the place sent a telegram to him to the same effect. Then, at the White House press conference, Mr. Hoover gave out this formal statement: "I deeply deplore the killing of any person. The Treasury department is making every effort to prevent the misuse of arms. Any case of misuse will be determined by the orderly proceedings of the department and the courts. I hope that the communities along the border will do their best to help the treasury end the systematic war that is being carried on by international criminals against the laws of the United States. It is these activities that are the root of all of our difficulties."

Mayors of Detroit, Wyandotte, River Rouge, Trenton and other towns and cities of Michigan close to the Canadian border responded with pledges of wholehearted co-operation with the federal authorities if a sane enforcement is adopted. That the rum runners up that way are encouraged by the attacks on the enforcers was shown when the crew of a well-known liquor smuggling boat opened fire on a customs patrol speed boat near Detroit, smashing its bow and windshield and damaging its machinery. Officials of the Province of Ontario announced that they would try to reduce the peril of border gun fights by disarming the occupants of all boats leaving lake and river ports.

WHEN Oscar De Priest, colored, was sent to congress by a colored Chicago district everyone knew trouble was likely to result. It has come, and is likely to stay for some time. In the house Mr. De Priest had conducted himself in a manner that cannot be criticized, but the presence of himself and his family in Washington has brought on social complications. Mrs. Hoover recently entertained several congressional women in the White House, and among her guests was Mrs. De Priest. Of course the South rose in immediate and loud protest, and the action of the First Lady has been attacked as unseemly and unwise by southern legislators, officials and individuals. The implications of the affair are more than social, for the administration is receiving numerous warnings of a renewed solid Democratic South, these coming especially from those states below the Mason and Dixon line which were carried by Hoover.

VIRGINIA'S anti-Tammany Democrats, who, being bone dry, were opposed to Al Smith, consolidated themselves in a state convention in Roanoke which was dominated by Bishop James Cannon, Jr., of the Methodist Episcopal church south. The 800 delegates nominated Prof. William M. Brown of Washington and Lee university for governor and C. C. Berkeley for attorney general. The executive committee was authorized to select a candidate for lieutenant general, and may name either J. H. Price, the regular Democratic nominee, or the man to be picked by the Republican convention. The De Priest incident cropped up here, too. I. C. Trotman bolted the convention when it rejected a platform plank he offered denouncing Mrs. Hoover's action in entertaining the Negro woman.

AMBASSADOR DAWES and Prime Minister MacDonald between them gave a great boost last week to the cause of reduction of naval armament and consequently of world peace. Their speeches, the one at the dinner of the Pilgrims society in London and the other at Loughborough, Scotland, had been awaited with intense interest and neither of them was a disappointment. General Dawes declared that naval reduction was the problem of outstanding importance to the world at the present time, and he discussed the methods whereby it might be brought about. He said it must concern all naval powers and should have world sanctions. The final negotiations, he asserted, must be carried on by statesmen rather than by naval experts, from whom he personally would expect a failure to agree. Said the ambassador:

"It would seem that to adjust to human nature the method of arriving at naval reduction each government might separately obtain from its respective naval experts their definition of the yardstick and then the inevitable compromises between these differing definitions, which would be expressed in a final fixation of the technical yardstick, should be made by a committee of statesmen of the nations, re-enforced from the beginning by these separate expressions of abstract technical naval opinion and able again to seek further naval advice if necessary before the final fixation."
"These statesmen should further be the ones to draw up for the world the terms of the final agreement upon naval reduction which should be couched in those simple terms understandable to the ordinary man in the street and which, while the pet aversion of the casualist, are the highest expression of true statesmanship. That final agreement covering quantitative dispositions would go to the nations for approval or rejection."

Mr. MacDonald told of his conversation with General Dawes and expressed his sincere belief that they might be instrumental "in preparing a board around which other nations might ultimately sit in co-operative fellowship studying the arts and the ways of peace."

PREMIER POINCARÉ of France held a long conference in Paris with Foreign Minister Stresemann of Germany, who was on his way home from Madrid, and though there was no public announcement, it was understood they reached a complete agreement concerning the coming conference that will put the Young reparations plan in operation. Then M. Poincaré went before the foreign affairs and finance commissions of the house of deputies and urged that the way be cleared by the ratification of the American and British debt agreements. He told the two commissions that the great liquidation conference would be called soon so as to enable the chamber of deputies and the reichstag to ratify the Young plan in good time for it to go into effect on September 1 and for the former body to put its O. K. on the debt agreements.

LOTTI, Assolant and Lefevre, the French aviators who flew across the Atlantic from Old Orchard, Maine, are being accorded all due honors in their home land, for they made a great flight notwithstanding the fact that they landed first on the coast of Spain instead of Le Bourget. This was made necessary by the unexpected presence in their plane of one Schreiber, a brash American youth who stowed away on the Yellow Bird and whose added weight made the take off difficult and prematurely exhausted the supply of fuel. Displaying scarcely the intelligence of a seven-year-old child, Schreiber did not realize that he was endangering the lives of the aviators and imperiling the success of their flight. The three Frenchmen treated him with the greatest forbearance and admitted he had nerve. But it is good to read that he was almost completely ignored in Paris and all right minded people hope that that will be his fate on his return to the United States. M. Lotti made the youth sign an agreement that half of any money he might receive as a result of his foolhardy exploit should be given to Assolant and Lefevre, the pilots, and to a fund for victims of air accidents.

Seven persons lost their lives when the City of Ottawa, huge air liner of the Imperial Airways on her way from England to Paris, with eleven passengers fell in the English channel three miles from the English shore. The main shaft of one of the two motors broke and the pilot was unable to keep the plane up or to land safely. Four passengers and the pilot and mechanic were rescued.

COLONEL and Mrs. Lindbergh emerged from their honeymoon seclusion aboard a power boat on Wednesday, appearing at Mitchell field, New York, to take part in the first tests in the prize competition held by the Guggenheim fund in the hope of discovering an absolutely safe airplane. Lindy put on a helmet and parachute and took up the first entry, after which he gave Mrs. Lindbergh a ride in a fast army plane.

ALL the troubles of Gen. Bramwell Booth, former commander in chief of the Salvation Army, came to an end when he died at his home in London. He was given a great funeral by the army whose council had deposed him recently, and his flag were kept flying high for as its official said: "General Booth is not dead—he has passed to glory." Others taken by death were Asa F. Potter, well-known controller of Boston; Sir A. Maurice Low, for many years American correspondent of London papers, and E. F. Kingston, veteran general manager for Florence Ziegfeld.

Women Willing to Work Way on Ocean Liners

Modern women hear the call of the sea just as insistently as do their adventurous brothers. Judging by shipping companies' long waiting lists of women seeking jobs on ocean liners.

Hundreds of applicants for positions as stewardesses, conductresses, nurses, manicurists, hairdressers and shop attendants on shipboard present themselves to shipping companies weekly. Many of them are women of good birth and education, and with a love of travel, but who cannot afford world tours and are willing to work their way in order to get them.

Shipping officials point out, however, that shipboard jobs are so strenuous and exacting that there is no chance for the woman who takes them as a means of cheap travel getting to see much of the world while she is working in a liner.

Average Human Heights
There have been no statistics compiled as to the average heights of men and women in the United States, but the Public Health service states that approximately 5 feet 8 inches is the average height of a man, and 5 feet 4 inches is the average height of a woman.

Rather Rough
"Tommy," asked the teacher, "what is a relief map?"
"Well, I dunno," said the future pugilist, "but it looks like Willie Brown's map did when I had got through with it."

Couldn't Stand It
"Oh, mamma, Willie hit me!"
"I'm ashamed of you—such a big girl standing for that."
"I ain't—I couldn't stand it, but he hit me anyway."

Used to It
"Having any trouble getting along with the widow you married?"
"Well, no more than I do getting around with the second-hand bus I bought."

Saying "No"
"I've had to say 'no' to several young men recently."
"Yes, you can't buy everything the salesman bring around."

County Board of Education

met July 1, and teachers were elected for next year. Transportation contracts were awarded and there will be marked improvements in transportation accommodations. Some drivers have contracted to put on the regular factory bus bodies.

The County Superintendent made a trip to Bonito last Saturday to see about moving the Parsons school down to Mon Jeau Park.

The president of the board and Mrs. Alice French, secretary, made a trip to the Corona district last week to look over the situation in regard to locating a school in Zagate Canyon. There are over 20 children in this locality who are unable to reach any school or truck. A location for a new school in the Ancho district was also given attention.—Mrs. Alice French, Co. School Supt.

Mr. and Mrs. John Dale

and sons Fred and Elmo were visitors here Wednesday, doing some shopping and returning to their ranch home near Ancho in the afternoon.

Chas. and Gerald Cree

left last Saturday for Ruidoso, where they will spend about six weeks in the cooler altitude. Gerald will remain with us until the latter part of August, at which time he will return to the Cree home in Scotland.

Mrs. Clint Branum

came down from Tucuman last week and on Monday, Mrs. F. E. Hedrick and son Raymond and Mrs. Branum made a trip to the mountain regions, where they are enjoying a good outing and catching some fine fish.

Mr. and Mrs. Bryan Hightower

Mr. and Mrs. Jim Cooper, Mr. and Mrs. George Cooper, the Fambroughs, Kings and several other families from the region near Ancho, spent the 4th in Alamogordo. A big crowd from here attended the celebration at Fort Stanton, many remaining to view the fireworks in the evening.

L. E. Cobb

was a business visitor from Alamogordo Monday of this week, and incidentally, took pains to do a lot of talking about the Big Rodeo of the 4th and the town in general.

Mrs. E. E. Hawley

the mother of Rev. T. V. Ludlow of the Methodist Church, is leaving Saturday evening for her home in Ringwood, Ill., after a month's visit with her son and his family.

E. M. Wooten

PERSONALS

Dr. and Mrs. R. E. Blansy

spent the 4th at Eagle Creek.

George Roberts

popular druggist of Corona, was here the latter part of last week, attending to some business matters and from him we learned that he has sold his drug store to Mr. Simpson, who will hereafter conduct the business. Mr. Roberts is undecided as to what he will do in the future, but has several propositions before him and as George is always a busy man, we predict that he will soon be in some important project.

WANTED—A used Ice-Box. Inquire of the Outlook office.

Perfecto Sandoval

was here from Picacho Monday attending to some business matters of an educational nature with others from the lower valley. Perfecto is raising a nice crop of hay on his home place near Picacho, and has already harvested the first crop of hay. They need rain down there, but indications are that moisture and plenty of it, is not far away.

Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Burkett

left for Abilene, Texas, Monday to, spend the 4th with the home folks. A big patriotic program was carried out at that place, the principals in the affair being old friends of the home-comers. They will return by the last of this or the first of next week.

Mrs. Elizabeth Gumm

our postmistress, returned Saturday from her vacation to California. During her stay, she visited many places of interest in the Golden State, and met many former Carrizozo people who have cast their lots with the people along the coast. She visited at Los Angeles, San Francisco, Pasadena, Riverside, and other places.

Mrs. Harriett Robertson

one of the owners of the famous Helen Rae Gold Mine, who now resides at Alameda, Cal., writes this office that she expects to make California her home in the future. She spent the last winter at Scranton, Pa., and the coldness of that region made the season long and dreary, so she prefers California. She also wishes to be remembered to her friends at Nogal and Carrizozo.

Real Del Monte Mines Workers Here Tuesday

Bill Langston, carpenter; Ernest Steffen, Bill Wattstein and Ernest Bureh, miners at the Real Del Monte Mines in the Gallinas mountains, were here Tuesday night, leaving for their work at the mines Wednesday morning. This was the first time the boys, with the exception of Bill Langston, had been to Carrizozo for two months, so busily are they engaged in their work. Work at the mine, under the direction of Carl Degner, manager, is progressing nicely and new specimens of good ore is being steadily encountered as the work goes on.

Sheriff John E. Brady

returned Sunday from Muscatine, Iowa, in charge of the boy, Edward Nicola, who was wanted here on the charge of taking a Ford car, watch and revolver from the Welch ranch about two months ago. His age, 14, will cause him to be held to await the action of the Juvenile Court. The property was recovered.

NEW ALLOY IS DEVELOPED FOR TELEPHONE USE

Perminvar<sup>2</sup> Made of Specially Treated Iron, Nickel and Cobalt, Announced

The new alloy, perminvar, which has been developed in the Bell Telephone Laboratories, is a series of alloys of iron, nickel and cobalt. When the constituents are melted together in certain proportions and the resultant alloys suitably heat treated, their magnetic properties are unusual and fundamentally different from those of other magnetic substances.

The development of perminvar is an outgrowth of the earlier discovery of permalloy also by the Bell Telephone Laboratories. Permalloy, composed of iron and nickel, has resulted not only in multiplying the possible speed of submarine telegraph cables by five, but has been of great value in connection with the improvement of loading coils and other elements of the telephone plant. Perminvar has been found to have remarkable magnetic properties, its permeability being constant to a remarkable degree through a certain range.

The name "perminvar" is a combination of the first parts of the words permeability and invariable, and thus brings to mind at once one of the unusual characteristics of the alloy. Not only are the proportions of the three constituents important, but the alloy must receive special heat treatment in order to bring out its unusual properties. It is expected that this new alloy will be of great value in the improvement of telephone apparatus, and that it will also be efficient for the continuous loading of telephone conductors.

Dr. and Mrs. O. I. Neabitt

and little son, passed through here today on their way to their home in Espanola, N. M., after attending the big 4th of July celebration at Fort Stanton, the particulars of which will be published in our next issue. They were profuse in their praise of the manner in which it was carried out and courtesies extended.
