

CAPITAN NOTES

Mesdames Larsen and Hannett, who had been spending several weeks at Hot Springs, returned home Tuesday.

Chester Lumpkins, daughters, Lorraine Virginia and Mary Kathleen, are here from Odessa, Texas, for a visit with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Lumpkins and will remain for a week or so, during which time, they will visit old friends in other parts of the county.

The Ladies' Aid Society met Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Bert Provine. After a business session, the hostesses served delicious refreshments. Attendance and interest is increasing at these meetings and every member is urged to come and bring a friend.

Work on the new bridge that was washed away during the big flood a short time ago, is being done as fast as possible and will be ready for use in two weeks. Rains continued for so long after the flood, that work on the new structure was impossible and automobiles had to be steered across the ditch with the aid of horses.

W. B. Payne has leased the Buena Vista Hotel and will conduct the same with the assurance, that when once served at this popular hotel, they will want to come again. Mr. and Mrs. Payne are well acquainted with the hotel business and their many friends over the county will be glad to hear that they have leased the Buena Vista. Parties driving over the highway can phone in and have good service at all reasonable hours, where the best of meals and accommodations may be had at moderate rates. Contractor Wm. Langston of Carrizozo is putting a new front and will have it furnished before Sept. 1.

Joe Huff and Richard Blackmar of Roswell were guests of the W. T. Lumpkins family last Sunday, returning home Monday morning.

Samuel W. Hale, our section foreman was a business visitor at Carrizozo Monday.

The Musical Vaudeville

given last night by Baron Auremma at the High School Auditorium for the benefit of the Salvation Army was well attended. Those who took part in the exercises, the Miss Lorena Sager, Mrs. T. E. Kelley, pianists; Miss Helen McCammon, Raymond Lackland and Ernie Prehm, in "Dreams of the Past," were roundly and deservedly applauded throughout the program. The Salvation Army Drive ended with this program and the net proceeds from the same over the county, amounted to over $600. The Baron wishes to thank the people of Carrizozo and of other places over the county for their contributions.

Girl Scouts Met

Last Wednesday morning for a two-day camping trip at the Helen Rae mine. They arrived without any trouble and after much excitement Captain Lucky and Mrs. Kelley succeeded in getting them together for dinner.

The only sad moments of our trip were when Mrs. Kelley let her egg cook too hard and made

Buried With Imposing Masonic Honors

The funeral of E. H. Sweet, proprietor of the Carrizozo Eating House, who died in Los Angeles last Sunday morning was held Wednesday afternoon from the Scottish Rite Cathedral in El Paso, and attended by the different Masonic bodies in which the deceased held membership. The services were conducted by the Scottish Rite body at the Cathedral and the remains interred in the Masonic cemetery, with El Paso Lodge No. 30 performing the burial rites.

Mr. Sweet came here from Socorro with his family 8 years ago and took charge of the Carrizozo Eating House after Mrs. Julia Gurney, who had conducted that hotel for many years, had given the place up to go to Elk City, Kansas, where she resided on her farm until about a year ago, when she passed on.

Mr. Sweet was a friendly, genial and sociable gentleman and to know him, was to make him a friend at first sight. He was deeply interested in the welfare of Carrizozo and made it his business to help and assist every project that would be favorable to its advancement. He was charitable and benevolent in every way. His friends were legion and his brethren mourn. He will be sadly missed by the people of Carrizozo, many of whom journeyed to El Paso to pay a last sad tribute to their deceased friend. The pallbearers were: J. P. Nash, Tucumcari; W. B. Crabtree, Jose Baca, Socorro; S. W. Kelsey, Santa Fe; R. C. Sowder and C. P. Huppertz, Carrizozo.

He leaves a wife, two daughters, Mrs. James Lee, Louise Sweet and two brothers, A. E. Sweet, traveling passenger agent for the Southern Pacific at El Paso and F. H. Sweet of Baldwin Park, Calif., to all of whom, the combined sympathy of our community is tendered.

us all suffer for it, and when Captain Lucky became homesick for Clyde.

We practised making signals and trails. All the girls declared that it was a wonderful trip, but added that they would like to stay longer. Thanks to Mr. Robertson, who made it possible for us to go.

The Scouts will meet next Tuesday with our Captain. All girls please try to be present.

Third Annual Lincoln County Fair and Track Meet

The management has learned that the Chaves County Fair will be held at Roswell Oct. 9-10-11-12. For this reason the dates of our Fair and Track Meet have been changed to Oct. 18-19, 1929.

This will enable the exhibitors at the Roswell Fair to bring their exhibits here after the close of the events in our neighboring city and we will take care of them until ready to exhibit at our Fair on Oct. 18-19.

A letter of appreciation has been received from the Roswell Chamber of Commerce on account of our vacating our dates in their favor.

Santa Rosa, Vaughn, Tularosa, Alamogordo, El Paso, Wilford, Estancia, and Mountainair have been notified of the dates of our Fair and Track Meet and have been asked to avoid conflict if possible. Thus far we know of no conflicting dates.

The management is open to suggestions at any time with regard to conducting the Fair.

Every citizen of Lincoln County is being asked to assist to advertise the Fair and Track Meet and make it the best yet held.

Dingwall-Estes

In accordance with a common custom among our young people, Ernest Dingwall and Miss Velma Estes journeyed to Alamogordo Monday and according to best authorities, were united in marriage. We have not been officially notified of the wedding, but we are taking it for granted, although they sought to spring a surprise on their friends, but the secret leaked out, as usual.

The bride is a daughter of Mrs. O. C. Davis and since coming to Carrizozo from Nogal several years ago, graduated from our high school, after which she has been employed as deputy in the county treasurer's office. She is one of our highly esteemed young ladies and will make an ideal life partner for Mr. Dingwall.

The groom is a conductor on the Southern Pacific, where he has been employed for a number of years; has given the best of satisfaction to his company and has the confidence of both the company and his associates in his business. Both of these young people have many friends here and over the county who will be glad to offer their congratulations after they return from their honeymoon trip, which they are making through Texas and will be at home at Carrizozo about Sept. 1.

Mrs. F. C. Berry

and daughter, Jean, were over from Fort Stanton last Saturday and returned in the afternoon. Jean attended the University at Albuquerque the last term and will enroll again at the beginning of the fall and winter term.

Herman Kelt

closed Monday, after one of the most successful events of this nature ever held in the district. Alamogordo was chosen as the place for the next meet, winning over Deming by one vote.

The visitors were high in their praise of the manner in which they were entertained by Carrizozo at the grounds and also at the added entertainments, guests were served with appetizing refreshments by the ladies. A dance Monday night was a fitting finale to the pleasant affair.

A business meeting was held Tuesday, and Alamogordo was selected as the place for the next meet, that Association will choose officers for the coming year.

Many business houses closed Monday afternoon in honor of the event.

CORONA GLEANINGS

Don't forget that Vaughn plays here Sunday, Aug. 25. They beat the Clovis team, so let's beat them!

FORT STANTON NEWS

On last Friday afternoon 'Slim' Hendren and his bride slipped into Fort Stanton, seeking to evade the eagle eyes of their many friends, but they did not succeed. Their new quarters had received a visit before the bride and groom arrived, and all the lights had been put out by plugging the switches; water turned off, and numerous alarm clocks arranged to ring at various unearthly hours, and other pranks fixed. In the evening the Fort Foot Warmers arrived and the saxophones, cornets, drums, etc., were accompanied by pots, pans and noise-making apparatus. The bride and groom were deposited in a cart all decorated and ready for them, the bride having on a nice lace curtain veil and the groom a hat, and the parade started with them in the lead. Everyone at the Fort was along the line of march to see and help out with the celebration and welcome the newlyweds to our midst. Mr. and Mrs. Boyd entertained at dinner for the bride and groom at six, a delicious dinner being served.

Miss Alice Farr of Laurel, Miss., was a guest of her brother Earle for a few days last week.

The local ball team finally defeated the fast Alamogordo outfit at Alamo last Sunday, 5 to 2. The boys are rounding into fine form now, and although being defeated before by the "Loggers," they made up for it Sunday. Edwards, our new pitcher, pitched a fine game and all of the boys played bang-up ball behind him. Roswell is coming here next Sunday and it is hoped we can trim them, although they are semi-professional and have several star players. This should be one of the best games of the season, as these teams are old rivals.

Miss Foley will start in a few days for a month's vacation.

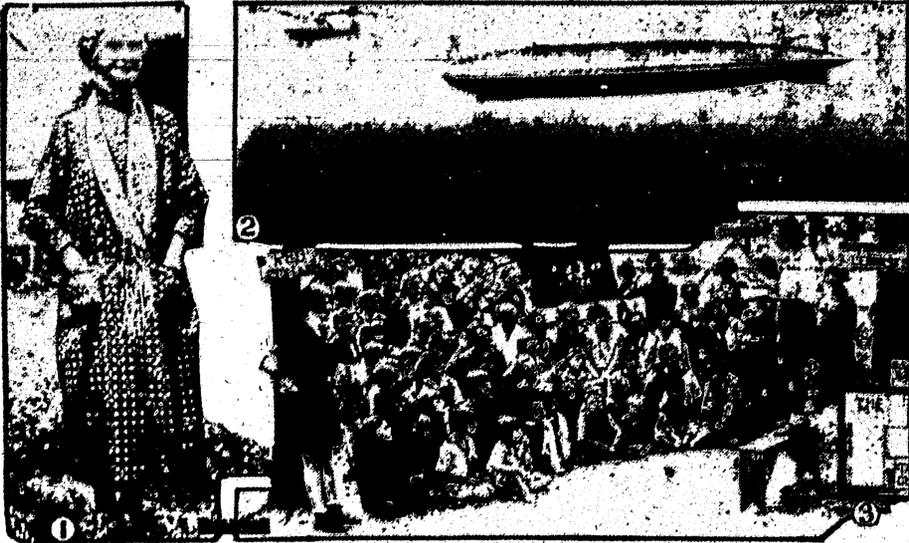

K. T. Byrne and Joe Gentry were Carrizozo visitors from the Fort last Sunday, returning in the afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. R. S. Fagan and children were visitors at Carrizozo last Saturday, staying for a few hours and returning to Fort Stanton about 4 p. m.

Miss Jennie Richards

He will get lots of kick out of interviewing some of his old characters in Nogal, among whom are Rich Hust, Ed Comrey, Hal Young and others, during his stay here. When he wrote the column for this paper, he was known all over the state and many of our exchanges clipped his articles, which contained much interest of human nature. It has been said that "Bill" is looking over the New Mexico field for a location in the newspaper profession, but this rumor has not been verified by him.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Graf Zeppelin Arrives and Starts Eastward on a Trip Around World.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

GRAF ZEPPELIN, the great German dirigible, was the feature of the week's news. Its second crossing of the Atlantic, from Friedrichshafen to New York, was made without mishap, and after flying over the metropolis it came to the ground at Lakehurst, N. J., in a perfect night landing. Nineteen fare-paying passengers, one stowaway and a miscellaneous cargo that included one chimpanzee, one gorilla and 600 canaries were brought over in comfort and safety.

Three days later the big airship, having been refueled, started back to Germany on what is planned to be the first leg of a trip around the world. The only stops are to be at Friedrichshafen, Tokio, Los Angeles, and again Lakehurst. If the Zeppelin keeps to her schedule she will arrive at the New Jersey hangar on August 23. Twenty-two passengers were taken on the eastbound trip. Those who intended to continue aboard for the globe circling journey included William B. Leeds, Lady Grace Drummond Hay, Carl Von Wiegand, Joaquin Rickard, Sir Hubert Wilkins, Lieut. Jack Richardson, Lieut. Commander C. E. Rosendahl and C. D. Burgess, the last three being sent by the United States Navy department. Dr. Hugo Eckener, as on the previous flight, is pilot of the dirigible, but it was reported that after this world tour he would relinquish his command and devote himself to the management of the Zeppelin company, of which he is the business manager.

Near Admiral William A. Moffett, chief of the naval bureau of aeronautics, while praising the successful trip of the Graf Zeppelin, calls attention to the fact that our navy is now building at Akron, Ohio, two dirigibles that will be about twice the size of the German airship. Work on these vessels has been going on for some time and the admiral says the first of these will be put into use in 1931. Each will be filled with six and one-half million cubic feet of helium gas and will carry five airplanes attached to the bag. Admiral Moffett has been looking along the Pacific coast for a good place for a base for these immense dirigibles.

One novelty in aviation is to be noted this week. A company has been formed in Kansas City to rent "fly-yourself" airplanes to persons who cannot afford to own and maintain planes. One hundred two-seater sport planes have been ordered and they will cost the renter between $15 and $30 an hour.

LEUT. ALFORD J. WILLIAMS, America's lone hope in the international airplane race for the Schneider trophy, to be run at Cowes, England, September 6 and 7, has produced his plane, without government backing but with the aid of Admiral Moffett, and was testing it out near Philadelphia last week. He believes it will prove to be the fastest ship in the world and that it will beat the time made by Major De Bernardi of Italy last year—316 miles an hour. The engine, of 24 cylinders in banks of six, will deliver 1,100 horsepower. The plane is a twin boat monoplane, the fuselage, wings and fixed tail surfaces of wood and the control surfaces of metal.

Lieut. Florentin Bonnet of the French army, selected by the ministry of air to pilot the French entry in the Schneider cup race, was killed when the airplane in which he was training for the speed test was wrecked in leaving the airfield at Bordeaux. Bonnet was the holder of the world speed record for land airplanes.

EMINENT statesmen representing 13 world powers gathered in The Hague and on Tuesday opened a conference designed to liquidate the international problems left over from the World war. The chief matters to be settled were the adoption of the Young plan for German reparations, the evacuation of the Rhineland, and the establishment of a committee of conciliation and control to supervise the demilitarized zone of Germany along the western frontier. Whether all or any of these things could be arranged amicably at this conference was a bit doubtful. This was especially true concerning the Young plan, which in certain of its features was distasteful to every one of the powers except possibly France and Italy.

Philip Snowden, British chancellor of the exchequer, opened the discussion by frankly stating that the British government could not accept the Young scheme for division of reparations because it reduces England's share from 22 per cent to 18 per cent. He said: "Great Britain objects to the proposed division by which France gets five-sixths of the unconditional annuities—$11,000,000 out of $157,060,000. Italy gets a considerable annual sum, amounting to $10,000,000—much larger than under the Dawes plan. I hope for your forgiveness for my frank and firm speaking, but this division is utterly indefensible and the experts did not attempt to explain or justify it."

The smaller creditor powers, for which Premier Venizelos of Greece was the spokesman, also protested that their debts had been overlooked by the experts when they formulated the plan which "compresses" their reparations, but they said they had no intention of attacking the Young plan.

Representatives of France, Italy, Belgium and Japan defended the new plan as probably the best that could be devised, although each of them asserted his country was making sacrifices in accepting it. M. Cheron, French minister of finance, declared France accepted the plan in its entirety, without reservations, and considered it indivisible as the experts stated. Notwithstanding these expressions on behalf of the other nations, Mr. Snowden and Arthur Henderson, British foreign secretary, told the reporters positively that Great Britain would reject the proposed new division of reparations.

Two commissions were named by the conference, one to study the political consequences of adoption of the Young plan and the other to deal with the financial questions involved. These bodies may not get through their work for five or six weeks.

Dispatches from Rome said Italians generally were indignant at Snowden's speech, which they considered a childish attack on the Latin nations and calculated to endanger the friendship between Italy and England. Berlin also disliked it, feeling that Snowden was trying to "squeeze still more out of the unfortunate German tax payers," and fearing that France, rather than quarrel with England, would compromise at Germany's cost.

PRESIDENT HOOVER'S law enforcement commission has divided its work into eleven sections and for each a committee has been named. Chairman George W. Wickersham himself is head of the committee to study prohibition, the other members being Newton D. Baker, Ada L. Comstock and Judge William B. Keenan. No other single body of laws was singled out for such concentrated study as those concerning the Eighteenth amendment.

Judge Kenyon was designated chairman of the committee on lawlessness by government law-enforcing officers, which was made one of the subjects of special inquiry because of the recent use of firearms by prohibition agents in cases which aroused criticism in and out of congress. The committee on juvenile delinquency is headed by Miss Comstock, that on causes of crime by Henry W. Anderson, of Virginia, statistics of crime and criminal justice by Dean Roscoe Pound, of Harvard law college, police by Frank J. Loesch, of Chicago, courts by Judge William I. Grubb, of Alabama, prosecutions by Monte M. Lomax, of New Orleans, penal institutions by Judge Kenneth Mackintosh, of Washington state, criminal justice by Newton D. Baker, and cost of crime by Judge Paul J. McCormick, of California.

FARMERS who wish to make cider and let it get hard will not be bothered with by the agents of prohibition if they don't sell the stuff.

Treasury officials announced that no restrictions would be placed on the manufacture of cider and fruit juices in the home providing these beverages were not sold unlawfully, and Dr. James M. Doran, prohibition commissioner, warned the dry agents not to molest the makers unless there was clear violation of the Volstead act.

"HOLD your wheat as long as possible in order to avoid increasing the congestion of the terminal markets," is in substance the message to wheat growers issued by the federal farm board. The board's statement said the crowding of the markets by unusually heavy shipments has caused a sharp depression of cash prices, although there is every prospect of a crop shortage in the world supply, which naturally would make prices higher in domestic and foreign markets.

OUR federal prisons must be made bigger and better, especially because they are now so overcrowded with violators of the prohibition and narcotic laws, in the opinion of President Hoover. Consequently he has given his approval to a program of expansion of prison facilities that calls for the expenditure of $5,000,000 and includes the building of a new prison in the northeastern states. The penitentiaries at Atlanta and Leavenworth will be considerably enlarged.

VICTOR L. BERGER, former congressman from Wisconsin and for many years an international leader of the Socialist party, died in a Milwaukee hospital from injuries sustained in a street car accident in July. He was a determined fighter for the cause of socialism and though he got into trouble during the war because of his denunciations of capitalism, he was respected by his political enemies. He was elected to congress first in 1910, being the first Socialist to hold a seat in that body. Two famous inventors were claimed by death. They were Emile Berliner, who devised the disk phonograph and many other things, and Dr. Karl von Welsbach of Austria, best known for his invention of the incandescent gas mantle that bears his name and his development of metal filaments in electric lamps. Thorstein B. Veblen, noted economist and author, passed away at Menlo Park, Calif.; and Mary MacLane, who gained considerable fame a generation ago as the writer of a diary and several other books, died in Chicago.

THERE is going to be a lively fight for the governorship of Virginia, for the Democrats who refused to bolt their party last fall because Al Smith was the Presidential candidate have nominated John Garland Pollard of William and Mary college to contest with Dr. William M. Brown, put up by the anti-Smith Democrats and the Republicans and backed by Bishop James Cannon, Jr., Professor Pollard was an active supporter of Smith.

Down in Georgia the split in the Democratic party was made wider by announcement of the anti-Smith faction that they would take no part in the primary called to select a candidate for congress to succeed the late Leslie J. Steele of the Fifth district but would concentrate their strength in the general election. There will be three aspirants for Steele's seat—a Republican, a regular Democrat and an anti-Smithite.

THAT old war between the On Leong and Hip Sing tonge broke out again in New York, Chicago and other large cities, and several slant-eyed gentlemen were shot to death. But United States District Attorney Charles H. Tuttle of New York threatened wholesale deportations unless the conflict ceased, so the tong leaders got together and signed a peace treaty.

KING FCAD of Egypt and his prime minister left London with a proposal from the British government for giving Egypt the status of an independent nation and at the same time preserving in all essentials British control of the Land of the Nile. It is designed to satisfy the troublesome Egyptian nationalists without periling British interests, and it must be accepted by a new treaty elected Egyptian parliament.

His jaw dropped, the fire of anger in his eyes died down, passion went out of his face and a happy smile spread over it. "Francols!" he cried. "None other, Brugiere."

He held my hands and laughed aloud in an excess of joy; he put his arms around me. "We gave you up for lost, dear friend. What are you, Francols—twins?" He pointed to the still form of Madrella. "If you are Francols—and you are beyond a doubt—who, in the name of God, is that?"

"Who is he? He is the man who killed Lestrangle, and stabbed the good Colonel Lopez. He is Captain Francols de Vigny, late of his majesty's service, and—being dead—he is, therefore, no more a fugitive from justice!"

"What a thing!" cried Brugiere. A wagon, escorted by a squad of soldiers, came from the garrison at Cuernavaca and carried away the body of Madrella.

Brugiere told me that Louis Napoleon of France, who cared less for Mexico than he did for his mustache, had withdrawn all support, that the great rebellion to the north of us, awakening slowly from a disastrous civil conflict, had made a gesture of displeasure, and the good Louis—sensing his own danger from a rising tide of Prussianism in the East—had dodged. He said that the feared attack of Juarez upon Cuernavaca had not materialized, and that Maximilian, needing badly the reinforcements he had sent, recalled them. "Then Cuernavaca will fall, my friend," said I, "and after that—the city."

"I cannot say," said Brugiere, "my service, Francols, calls for fighting, not for thinking; and Maximilian still leans upon a large army."

Brugiere seemed less interested in Cuernavaca's problem than in my own peculiar case. "As he is dead—Madrella, I mean—and Captain Vigny will be buried tomorrow or the day thereafter, who are you?"

I laughed. "I am not De Vigny, and I find substantial faults about the identity of Madrella, so I cannot be that clever gentleman. Besides, a lady—glorious La Anita, whom you have doubtless seen—told Madrella that she didn't love him, and I do not care to be one whom the senorita cannot love."

"Could she love De Vigny?" inquired Brugiere.

"Ay!" "And De Vigny is dead." He chuckled. "Your luck is out, Francols!"

CHAPTER XII

The Fall of Cuernavaca

After the burial of Madrella as De Vigny I left the town of Cuernavaca, for I wanted to be alone; I had no wish to see people. I had lost an identity, I had died disgraced, I had lost La Anita because I had killed De Vigny—and she had loved De Vigny. I had killed the man she loved, and—to take his place—I must face another disgraceful death.

There was one solution, an easy one. I could still die De Vigny, and as she loved De Vigny, I might take away with me—wrapped up in my soul—a portion of that wondrous love of hers, to be with me through all eternity. Yes, that was the easiest way—and I had faced death too many times to fear it. The thing was too easy, the problem was solved, for surely such a love as hers could reach into another world.

My mind was made up; I would go home. I would take the hand of brave honest Pasqual in mine and I would bid him good-by. I would thank him and his lovely little Dolores for the many things that they had done for me; I would write a letter to my mother, and a letter to Anita, and then—

Now, approaching me at breakneck speed, a horseman came into view; and looking more closely, I recognized the "calico" pony and knew the rider for Pasqual. Why should he ride so swiftly, why should he hurry? This world held much for him. Wondering thus, I waited.

He brought the pony to a sliding, dust-raising halt in front of me. His eyes were wild with excitement and his tall body trembled. "Senor, the soldiers of Benito Juarez! They are everywhere, senor; they approach my house, they fill the valley and they line the ridges. There are many thousands of them."

Now I knew that Brugiere would get the fighting his service signified, and I feared that, so far as the French were concerned, Cuernavaca would be closed.

Behind us came the clear notes of a bugle. The Cuernavaca garrison was preparing—the frail skeleton of a boat that would have been required as held the city against Juarez. I had saved it once, and it had dropped back into a fool's dream of security. Ah, well!

The Mexican advance-guard, teaching the French suspects, opened up an intermittent firing, and the French and Belgians fired also; and, for the first time in many months I heard the soft drowsy drone of speeding bullets. The excitement of the battle got into my blood; I must see it, I must get into it. I found a narrow water-bag fashioned from the skin of a goat. I filled it, and, with a drinking gourd, set out. No one would stop a bent old man intent on giving wounded soldiers the blessing of a drink.

The clash of contact came to me; the thudding of cannon and the rasping screech of a shell; the swift crash of musketry, the wild yells of sudden charges, and the shrill agonizing scream of a wounded horse. It was all so real to me, all so vivid; and I longed to be—shoulder to shoulder—with the brave French and Belgian lads who were waging a hopeless fight. But I was nobody, I had no identity, no country, no future, no ties. . . . I was just an old man, following in the wake of a victorious army, bearing a water-bag.

Now I saw Leroux and Besancon, captains in the Juarist army. They led the center of that vast force, and I remembered their words: "Some day a great battle between the Empire and the Republic will hang in the balance; then will come our opportunity—and the Republic will lose!"

The city, scarce a half-mile away, lay before us, and between us and that goal an army barred the way. The right wing of the Liberal forces touched the bench to the east of the city, the left wing spread across the valley, while the center held to the road. The wings were thrust forward like a great, swooping bird of prey. I could not but wonder how helpless the bird would be without that body. . . . and Leroux and Besancon controlled the massed forces in the center which made up the body.

The two brave sons of France must have had the same thought also; for the center came apart—opened gradually as soldiers under orders of their two captains went eastward toward the bench or westward toward the valley; leaving a gap that even a small force of French—entering quickly and turning—might have put the Juarist army to a grievous disadvantage.

Now Leroux played the game that he and Besancon had doubtless rehearsed. He stood out in the middle of that fatal opening in the Liberal position and, facing the Allied forces, fashioned a sort of bugle with his hands:

"Come on," he called in French; "the way is open! Approach, sons of France, and win an empire!"

I wrung my hands in impotent misery. Why—why did not they charge? Here was a chance to save the city, to crush the Juarist army, to capture, possibly, the great general himself. Mon Dieu—had they turned to stone? Surely they could hear him, less than three hundred meters distant.

"Are you cowards," screamed Leroux; "why don't you move? Approach—the gate is wide, the gate to freedom, to glory. . . . Come in!" He waited, expectant, but they did not move.

Now his voice shrilled far above the clamor of strife: "Name of God—are you dead on your feet, or do you stand out there to have your pictures taken; have you come to battle or do you seek alms?"

The Mexican soldiers understood his gestures, if not his words. A dozen guns spoke behind him, and Leroux, raising his arms in final supplication, fell. The promising gap closed again, and the body of the giant bird of prey moved on.

I approached Leroux, lying beside the road. I raised his head and poured a gourd of cool water down his throat. He opened his eyes. "I thank you," he whispered.

"A glorious thing, Rene!" I cried. "It is Francols—do you know me?" He smiled a little. "Ever a clever rascal! General Juarez never knew for Madrella never came. Well, we tried." He attempted to raise his head and failed, a film came over his eyes. "Why did they not come in, Francols, with the way so easy?"

I raised my eyes to the field of battle. The Allied army had retreated into the town, and the wings of the invading force had closed in. I knew that Maximilian had lost the last strategic gateway to the historic city.

"What do you see, Francols? Everything is black before me; tell me what you see."

"I see," said I, "a man on yonder ridge who wiggles a signal with two flags."

"What does he say, dear friend?" Rene's whisper was faintly audible. I looked that message from across the valley: "Lamadrid is dead!"

That was it. Colonel Lama did, the commandant of the garrison at Cuernavaca, had been killed. This, then, was why they hadn't charged. Mon Dieu! I could not repress a sigh.

French have won—and that the Empire is saved."

"Thank the good God!" whispered Leroux, smiling—and smiling, died.

The short, mild winter had gone and spring had come again; the sun at midday was hot, and the early morning had lost its chill. We had broken ground for the spring crop—Pasqual and I—had sowed the seed, and now the tiny shoots were coming up.

But in my heart there was no spring, no happiness, no rebirth. The fields, the horse, the plow, food and sleep—that was my life. I had become, in very truth, a brother to the ox. They had put away De Vigny, had prayed for the salvation of his soul, and De Vigny was no more. I was only the husk of a human being the empty shell from which identity had long since fled, from which the soul had been removed.

Since the Mexicans had taken Cuernavaca—and held it against the French—I had never been to that city, though it was only a mile or two away. After the fall of Cuernavaca I had given up, a prey to bitter discouragement, and had set out on the road to Acapulco, where I had taken a sailing ship for the States. But when the Pacific port had dropped behind us, sinking in the mists of the ocean, the irresistible lure of La Anita came back to me, and I knew that—separated from her by so vast a distance—I should die. So I left the boat at Manzanillo, and took the next one back to Acapulco, where I labored for a pittance, loading ships with bales of cotton and bags of sugar and coffee.

One night in an Acapulco cantina I had heard a dashing Mexican officer give a toast to the "Glorious Arrellanos—the goddess of Cuernavaca!" Cuernavaca? Then she had left the city? That sent me back to the plantation of Pasqual, where I resumed my work in the fields.

The knowledge that she was near gave me consolation, yet I never wondered why she had come, nor had I ever gone to Cuernavaca to see her. My mind could not conceive of my looking upon her again. I was dead.

Now I saw her, she was coming toward me, and I was afraid. I tried to arise and failed, so I lay, waiting. She bent over me, fear and anxiety in the deep amber eyes. Ah—what a glorious being she was! If I might die with my eyes on that exquisite face—that's all I asked; just to look upon her while I died, to carry that picture away with me, to hold for ever.

"How brave a thing, senor!" she said, and the music of her voice was softly soothing. "Are you hurt?" I tried to smile. "No," I said, scarcely her face in eager hunger. At the sound of my voice a shadow of fear crossed her face, rested one brief instant in her eyes. She touched her throat with slim fingers, as if to stifle a cry. "Monsieur!" she whispered, in the tone of awe that one might use in speaking to a ghost.

I raised my hands toward her. As you are no longer helpless, Anita mia, nor in the power of the French, may I tell you that I love you?"

Now a nauseating dizziness came over me, a vast weariness possessed me; and, as her exquisite face faded sadly in a misty turbulent sea, and the shadows came, and darkness settled upon the world, I heard, as in a dream—just as I had heard in other dreams—the voice of La Anita: "Francols—Francols." and again, "Francols!"

They moved me, under heavy guard, from the gloomy hospital—where I had lain three weeks while ribs had healed and wounds had disappeared—to the even more gloomy prison, where they cast me with scant ceremony and less gentleness into a cell with one barred, narrow window through which the morning sun came for an hour or two.

So, a prisoner, a spy, I waited. My head had been removed, and with it the mantle of age; my identity revealed. The trick I had played upon Juarez and Escobedo had doubtless long since been discovered, and I was certain I would have to pay for that.

A few days later the rising sun found me on the Toluca road, with sturdy mountain ponies between my knees, and ten tattered Mexican soldiers as a guard. I had been exchanged to the French for an officer of equal rank, and was on my way to my travels of a trial.

CHAPTER XIII

The Coming of La Anita

Through the window of the cell across the narrow hall I had watched the red sun go down behind the Sierra Argonina, and had looked, with my soul in my eyes, as the shades of twilight fell, for this was my last sunset, this the last time that I might see the soft purple veil that comes before the night.

I had been found guilty of murder

what I heard that the menacing cloud of Imperialism, which had hovered over the land for three years, was gradually passing away, and the bright sun of freedom had begun to shine again. The Empire had filled the emperor had lost!

From afar came faintly to us the sound of cheering; a ripple of applause swept over the waiting crowd, punctuated by sharp cries of "Viva—Viva Juarez! Viva Escobedo!"

As the carriage, drawn by a pair of magnificent black horses and containing two generals in gorgeous uniform came into view, a hoarse voice roared at my ear: "Viva La Senorita!"

Now I looked—and saw La Anita and her aunt! Their backs to the driver, they faced the Mexican generals, and, although she smiled at the multitude, I thought her lovely face was very pale. All the old love came back to me, burning me again like a flame, filling my empty soul with new resolve.

A hat—a wide-brimmed, high-crowned sombrero—hurled doubtless by some devout disciple of drink, sailed gracefully through the air and struck one of the nervous, high-strung horses hitched to the glittering carriage. He squealed, reared, plunged, flung his mane with his own fear, and the two—beyond control of the driver and maddened by their own increasing terror—dashed away, plunging wildly, the frail equipageurching like a tiny dory in a storm.

She was in danger, La Anita might be killed! I took no thought of consequences; my life—and the spending of it—was hers. As they sped by I launched my body at the racing horses—reaching blindly, my fingers touched a strap—clutching; the great ring that forms the end of a Mexican bit found its way—by good fortune—into my other hand, and, thanking God for the good strength that He had given me, I held—and held—as the pounding hoofs beat me down.

One of the horses fell, and before he could find his feet again the crowd closed in. She was safe then, she was unhurt; and as the myriad faces above me wavered and were lost in the sea of blackness—and came back again—my heart sang, because she was safe, she was unhurt.

Now I saw her, she was coming toward me, and I was afraid. I tried to arise and failed, so I lay, waiting. She bent over me, fear and anxiety in the deep amber eyes. Ah—what a glorious being she was! If I might die with my eyes on that exquisite face—that's all I asked; just to look upon her while I died, to carry that picture away with me, to hold for ever.

CHAPTER XIII

The Coming of La Anita

Through the window of the cell across the narrow hall I had watched the red sun go down behind the Sierra Argonina, and had looked, with my soul in my eyes, as the shades of twilight fell, for this was my last sunset, this the last time that I might see the soft purple veil that comes before the night.

I had been found guilty of murder

In the death of Captain Lestrangle, of resisting arrest and of making an unprovoked attack upon a superior officer in the person of Colonel Lopez, and of desertion in that I had fled and had not returned to the service of the Empire for more than half a year. My sentence, of course, was death.

Anon, the silent guard appeared bringing my supper of baked chiva, frijoles and tortillas; and with him came Neville and Brugiere, who sat mute or sighing deeply, and watched me eat.

"I cannot stand it, Francols," Neville said at last; "you eat the food as though you might enjoy it, and you face your last night with a dreamy sort of smile upon your face. Are you mad, dear friend; has life been so unfortunate a thing—a thing of such overwhelming sorrow—that you leave it with a smile?"

"Life has been a beautiful thing, Neville—a glorious thing—and I have lived it. No man has got more out of life than I."

"Madness, Francols; you have lived as a stupid old man so long, your brain has dried. There are left so few of us, so very few; all in less than a year. Some day, Francols, I will have to tell your mother."

Now, having finished this final meal of mine, I got up and put an arm across his shoulder. "There is no man in all the world that I would rather have tell her than you, my friend. And you may tell her that I died for a love worth dying for—and that I was happy. Now—a little cheerfulness, Neville; is it thus that you come to my death chamber and pull a sigh that fairly bends the bars of my cage?"

A slow smile spread across his handsome face, but a hurt lay deep in his eyes.

"Do you know," he said, after a long silence, "that the emperor plans to break through the Liberal lines and make for the city—or the sea?"

"He can do it," said Brugiere; "when?"

"Tomorrow—a forlorn hope. He has but ten thousand men, and all of Mexico is up in arms against him."

"Tomorrow; ah! Not so forlorn a hope, Neville. An effort worthy of our emperor."

"But ten thousand men," said Neville.

"Is enough. Xenophon led ten thousand men across fifteen hundred miles of alien country—and lived to write about it. Shall Maximilian do less?"

"If Lopez—" I began, but stopped, because the sound of footsteps on the cobbled walk under my window came to us; footsteps and a voice—a low musical voice that brought my heart into my throat. "Anita," I whispered, "would she come here?"

"Ay," said Brugiere; "shall she journey a hundred and fifty miles over this God-forgotten land to see you—and pause at the portals of a prison? You do not know La Anita."

"Mon Dieu," I gasped, "Mon Dieu; she would come here?"

"Assuredly," Brugiere grasped my arm. "Shall she find you and, Francols, or happy? Will we wait—solemn, silent—fearing death, or shall she find three merry soldiers of the Empire, facing light-heartedly anything that may come?"

"I thank you, dear friend. We must not hurt her. She shall find us in joyful celebration; we shall drink and laugh—and sing!"

We might have been at our accustomed table at the Cafe Miramon; we were laughing gaily together, and trying, with woefully inadequate voices, to sing when the guard brought her to the door and let her in.

Ah—what a glory she brought into that prison! She gave me her hand, a warm sweet smile on her lovely face.

"What wondrous friends you have, senor."

"A good friend, senorita, is a gift of God."

"Then you are twice blessed." She offered slim fingers to Neville. Brugiere caught her swiftly in his arms and kissed her; then, while she stood, blushing prettily, said: "Francols is thrice blessed, gracious lady, for he has a friend among the angels."

"You should save your honeyed words for Colonel Lopez. He is beside himself with fury."

Brugiere laughed. "Our Frankenstein will hesitate before he builds another monster."

"Yet he will do some desperate thing, I fear. No one may reach his majesty; I have tried."

"The colonel," explained Neville, "has thrown a cordon of his own creatures around the emperor. I have striven for a week to gain the ear of Maximilian. No one may even approach La Cruz. What Lopez is planning to do I cannot imagine."

"What the estimable colonel may choose to do," said Brugiere, "need concern us this night not at all, for what he does will be stupid or dishonest, and neither stupidity nor dishonesty can avail him anything. When the emperor hears the truth about Lopez, we will have another chief of staff."

Lighting the Train's Exterior

After some tests and experimentation, the Indian government is about to make use of a system by which the trains are lighted on the exterior for the purpose of intensifying the illumination at country stations as a safeguard against trespassers. Several lights are placed on either side of each car and these are automatically switched on when the train is running below a certain speed and off again when the prescribed limit is exceeded. Thus the lights are on as the train slows down to enter or pass a station, but on the road the presence of the lights is not essential.

Littlefield dam in Arizona went out under pressure of a cloudburst in the mountains.

A total of $15,216.03 was collected during July by the three departments of the Arizona State Corporation Commission.

Improvements totaling about $100,000 are being made to the properties of the Arizona Edison Company at Casa Grande, Ariz.

The new baseball park at Artesia, N. M., was opened in a game between the newly-organized Artesia Oilers and Roswell.

All five plants of the Clayton, N. M., school system will be heated by natural gas next year, according to an announcement made recently by O. E. Duggins, manager of the Clayton Gas Company.

Francis C. Wilson of Santa Fe, who for the past three years has represented New Mexico in Boulder dam negotiations, has been relieved of his position as interstate river commissioner for New Mexico, by Governor R. C. Dillon.

The dairy industry in Arizona, through a survey made recently by the Phoenix Chamber of Commerce, amounted to $10,357,500 for 1923. This is considerably in excess of previous estimates, but is based upon figures which are very conservative.

The ancient and storied plaza of Taos is to be brought up to date, insofar as traffic is concerned, it was stated in Santa Fe at the New Mexico highway office. By a co-operative agreement with the town of Taos, the Highway Department will grade, drain and oil surface the road around the old garden spot.

Preliminary statistics, just released by the Department of Commerce, shows a slight decrease in the amount of lumber manufactured in Arizona and New Mexico in 1923, compared with the amount manufactured in 1922, the banner year for the southwest, according to Quincy Randalls of the forest service.

With completion of $75,000 worth of improvements at the New Mexico state penitentiary, according to reports from Santa Fe, Warden Pat Dugan will have added $125,000 to the value of the plant within the past year. Of this amount, $50,000 is represented in the new hospital, for which the Legislature made an appropriation, and the remaining $75,000 comes from earnings of the institution.

The New Mexico state treasury had a balance of $3,520,969.27 on July 31, State Treasurer Emerson Watts reported in Santa Fe. On the first of July the balance was $3,000,310.90. Warrants and transfers during July totaled $2,493,218.81 and receipts and transfers to funds were $2,354,947.78, permanent fund investments were $2,030,611.25, representing a gain of $176,735.15 for the past year.

Religious leaders of the Apache and Pima Indian tribes see the uplift of the Indians accomplished and their real standing as independent and progressive American citizens established in the spread of religious thought. This was the trend of discussions at a meeting of fifty members of the tribes in Prescott, probably the first gathering of Indian religious leaders conducted exclusively under Indian management.

Mrs. Katharine Halscy won her third new trial, when the New Mexico State Supreme Court reversed her second conviction for murder for the death of her husband. Mrs. Halscy was originally sentenced to hang with two men. Archer and Foster were convicted as accessories, but on the first appeal the court affirmed the death sentence for Archer, granted the woman a new trial and remanded Foster for resentencing.

Plans have been announced for the expenditure of $1,000,000 in enlarging the Gillespie project in west Maricopa county, Arizona. A dam was built on the Gila river several years ago and some 15,000 acres was irrigated by water diverted by means of this dam.

Contracts have been signed by the Cochise County Fair Association for an aerial circus, to be staged during the week of the county fair in Douglas, Ariz., September 23 and 25, inclusive.

While the management of the Inter-Tribal Indian ceremonial, which is to be held at Gallup, N. M., August 28, 29 and 30, rightly claim that this is the only all-Indian show in the world, yet there is one part of the sports program which never has and never will be shown in any other part of the country. This is the pony race put on by the Indians, with only Indian-owned ponies in the competition.

Last vacationists, who set out to "See Arizona" this month and next, will find recreational areas of the state at the height of their summer beauty, according to P. G. Spilsbury, president of the Arizona Industrial Congress.

Shipments of Thompson seedless grapes in the Salt River valley in Arizona indicate that the crop will be profitable this season. Two cars were sold to Phoenix for $2,400 each. The season's crop will total sixty to seventy-five carloads.

The management of the Magna Copper Company, at Superior, Ariz., announces that development work in the bottom of the mine, which was suspended nearly two years ago, owing to a disastrous fire, which several men lost their lives, will likely be resumed by January.

EDITORIAL COLUMN

Spreading of the Red Viper

To those who are always ready to laugh off the warning that the communistic doctrine is gaining ground in this country, we offer the following information taken from the Daily Worker, a rank communistic paper published in New York, which is the official organ for the Red Flag movement in the United States.

August 1, being the day set for demonstrations, the official organ says that 16,000 "workers" took part in the demonstration at Pittsburg, 3,000 at the meeting at McKeesport National Tube Works, 4,000 in the Westinghouse Electric Company's plant, while thousands of others took part in like demonstrations in the steel towns of Ambridge, Monessen and in the mining towns of Avella, Coverdale and Penosa.

This is but a portion of what the Daily Worker has to enumerate of the demonstration which took place on that day. At all places mentioned, police were on hand to quell riots caused by inflammatory speeches made by the Reds, and while a certain portion of the attendance at these meetings were people who were there out of curiosity, the fact remains, nevertheless, that the cause of the Reds is growing, and it is backed by the Reds from Russia who are spreading the country with literature against the government and the same is finding lodging places in the ranks of the American workmen.

Reasons many, have been given for the recent uprisings in the prisons over the country and all reasons given except the one which we have in mind, and that is, that it's nothing more nor less than communistic doctrine which has reached the cells of these criminals which caused the convicts to revolt.

When these Reds will distribute literature against the government and seek to incite mutiny in prisons in this free country—it is high time that true Americans gather under the flag and renew allegiance to it. All organizations of a patriotic nature should band together with the end in view, that not only shall this propaganda be stopped, but that the leaders be banished from our shores.

Saved "The Robin"

The St. Louis Robin has already made aviation history, but were it not for the humble part played in its dramatic exploit by a specially-equipped Chevrolet truck, it is possible that the story might have been different. A special brand of gasoline was being used in the Robin, and on Sunday, July 21, the flyer's second aloft, the supply was nearly diminished.

The nearest point where an additional supply could be obtained was Tulsa, Okla., but the train which started forth immediately from that point with a new supply was unfortunately blocked off by a wreck ahead. News of the mishap was sent to St. Louis and the reply came back "Send it by truck."

So a huge truck containing 800 gallons was placed on a sturdy Chevrolet and the drivers were ordered "to step on the gas."

Now, speeding afloat under most conditions, but never so if it is a transport for gasoline. At a speed rarely within the bounds of safety, the truck started on its 450-mile trip late Sunday afternoon over a road that was mostly gravel.

Shortly after noon the next day the trip was completed without mishap. Amid cheers the Chevrolet pulled up alongside the refueling plane, and thus was obviated the necessity of switching brands of fuel—a step that was feared both by the pilots and the designer of the Robin's engine.

An interesting point in the part played by the Chevrolet was that it had been run only 15 miles before it undertook its emergency mission. Nevertheless, according to the drivers, not once did the motor heat up, nor have there been any consequent engine difficulties.

SUMMONS SLEEPING FIRE FORCE WHEN ALARM FAILS

When the fire alarm system at the local fire station at Beaver Dam, Wis., failed to function early one Sunday morning recently, Miss Helen Hammer, night telephone operator, resourcefully met the emergency. The operator did not have a list of the firemen, but she called up all the men whom she knew to be members of the department and informed them of the location of the blaze which had broken out shortly after midnight. The siren stop the city hall was out of commission and the fire bell also was frozen, and Miss Hammer's efforts in routing out the sleeping members of the fire department undoubtedly prevented a conflagration.

VACCINATION NOTICE

The laws of New Mexico require all children of school age to be vaccinated against small-pox before they can be admitted to the public schools of the state. We understand that all rural and municipal schools will begin early in September. I would advise that so far as it is convenient to do so, that parents attend to the vaccination of their children during the month of August, so as to give that important requirement attention before the opening of school.

MOVE FOR 186 MILLION INCREASE IN FEDERAL AID

Santa Fe New Mexican:

The national motoring and good roads bodies are agitating the increase of federal aid allotment from $75,000,000 to $126,000,000 which will especially benefit the public lands states of which New Mexico is one of the largest. In the case of congress honoring the request for greater allotments New Mexico's quota would be raised past the two million mark, annually, it is probable.

"The United States did not yet have 25,000,000 automobiles in operation when 1929 began, but it is approaching that great total and undoubtedly will surpass it long before the present year is ended," says a bulletin from Kentucky.

The number of persons per car in New Mexico is larger than that of the United States as a whole but is evidently rapidly approaching the nation's average. There are slightly less than 5.6 persons per car in New Mexico against 4.9 for the nation as a whole. At this time last year the figure for New Mexico was over six persons per car.

With most of the western states straining to keep their road building pace within sight of the ever mounting car registrations, the only solution is more federal aid, proponent of the increased allotment idea assert. The greatly increased registration, longer life of present day cars due to better road conditions and finer mechanical workmanship, and ever growing percentage of traveling citizens, puts an unprecedented strain on roads which must be met with more mileage to dilute traffic and higher type of road structure to withstand the trebled wear.

The proponent of the increased allotment idea call on all good roads boosters to exercise their constituent's right of requesting their national representatives to back this measure. Already several senators and representatives have publicly declared themselves in favor of the idea. More are expected as the campaign grows in intensity before the reconvening of congress.

Another bulletin points out that Canada for the first time has passed the million mark and that more and more Canadians are coming to the United States to spend their vacations.

The records of the motor vehicle department of New Mexico shows that the increase felt all over America is well borne out in the Sunshine state. At this time last year 62,000 license plates had been issued. The records show that on this date there are roughly 70,000 plates out for 1929. This is an increase of 2,000 registrations over last year. The end of the calendar year will see this figure greatly expanded, motor vehicle department officials state.

EDISON MEDAL TO DR. JEWETT

DR. FRANK B. JEWETT

DR. FRANK B. JEWETT, Vice-President of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company and President of the Bell Telephone Laboratories, Inc., has been awarded the Edison Gold Medal for 1929 by the American Institute of Electrical Engineers, "for his contributions to the art of electrical communication."

The Edison Gold Medal "for Meritorious Achievement in Electrical Science or Electrical Engineering, or the Electrical Arts," was founded in 1904 by friends and associates of Thomas A. Edison in commemoration of the first quarter century of the art of electric lighting. Among the distinguished men to whom the award has been made were Dr. Alexander Graham Bell, inventor of the telephone, in 1916, and General John J. Carty in 1918.

Dr. Jewett has performed notable pioneer work in the development of the theory and practice of voice transmission over wires. He had general charge of the transmission engineering of the first transcontinental telephone line, while the perfection of wireless telephoning is another of the notable undertakings which has been completed under his direction.

EUROPEAN TELEPHONE FACILITIES IMPROVED

Officials Adopt American Idea of Planning in Advance to Meet Demands

In a recent editorial in the Boston Evening Transcript, attention is called to the fact that while in America business follows the telephone, with the telephone as a rule, a few steps ahead of business and social necessities, in Europe, as a general thing, the point of view has been directly opposite and extensive improvements have not been installed there in anticipation of business.

This is one of the reasons why telephone development in this country is so much ahead of Europe, but an American telephone man who recently spent some time observing conditions in the major countries of Europe has found that some of the European telephone officials are now beginning to be affected by the American idea. The International Chamber of Commerce, composed in part of American members, has greatly encouraged this point of view and since their activity began, international toll service has been much improved as is shown by the fact that within three months, after the installation of a larger supply of trunk lines between the cities of Paris and Berlin in 1928, the number of toll calls between the two capitals increased by more than 300 per cent.

Fairy Tale for Children

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

Miss Musk Ox was certainly very handsome. Her hair covered her whole body, which was quite big, though she was not nearly so large as Mr. Musk Ox.

"Your hair is lovely," Mr. Musk Ox said.

Miss Musk Ox tried to blush, for she thought that was the right thing to do, but she was so brown and so woolly that she couldn't, somehow, get the color to show, though she felt as though she must be blushing.

"Yes," continued Mr. Musk Ox, "you have the most wonderful brown hair I have ever seen."

"It is much lighter than mine—it's so much softer and it is so very thick."

"Yes, You Have Beautiful Hair."

"Yes, you have beautiful hair, Miss Musk Ox, in fact, beautiful doesn't half express it."

"I can't find words to tell you what I think of your hair. Ah, such a color, so soft, so thick."

"You are so sensible, too. You have some good straight hair over that, which is your umbrella hair."

"I am glad to see you have your own umbrella. It would be hard for me to provide you with one, for I could never cover up your masses of hair."

"And your umbrella is the finest ever a musk Ox had."

Miss Musk Ox turned her big eyes upon Mr. Musk Ox and smiled, a nice, friendly smile, which Mr. Musk Ox thought very wonderful.

The Musk Ox family have straight, long hair which is quite thick, over their beautiful soft woolly hair, and it sheds the rain from them in the storms.

Otherwise they would become soaking wet, for their own hair is so heavy it would catch and hold all the rain if they did not have this protection.

"I'm glad you like my umbrella," said Miss Musk Ox.

"Yes," said Mr. Musk Ox, "and it's the only thing I can't offer you, for mine would do you no good.

"It's a big relief to feel you have one of your own. As I have said before, too, it's the very best umbrella I've ever seen."

"And we never have to borrow umbrellas the way some creatures do."

"We don't borrow them, and so we don't forget to return them. We're quite superior in that way."

Miss Musk Ox quite agreed.

She thought it would be dreadful to have to borrow umbrellas, and also quite dreadful that people forgot to return them.

Then Mr. Musk Ox moved a little, and under one foot he showed what he had been hiding all this time, a bunch of hay for Miss Musk Ox.

He had been standing in the same position all the time he had been talking.

"This is for you, Miss Musk Ox," he said, and his face looked quite silly, though Miss Musk Ox thought it was very handsome.

"And it means," he continued, "that I want to look after you always, to get your food and to be your dear Musk Ox companion."

"Will you, will you," he stammered, "become Mrs. Musk Ox?"

Miss Musk Ox was all a-tremble, her long brown hair shook, for she was so nervous with excitement. But how happy and proud she was!

"You're just about my age, aren't you?" asked Mr. Musk Ox. "You're not too young, nor are you too foolish," he added.

"I'm just your age," she answered.

"I thought so," said Mr. Musk Ox, delightedly. "Then will you do me the honor to become Mrs. Musk Ox?" he asked again.

"I will be honored myself," said Miss Musk Ox. "It will make me very happy."

Brother Musk Ox, nearby, grinned as he saw them walking off together, and heard Mr. Musk Ox say that he wanted the new Mrs. Musk Ox to do all the managing and bossing in the family.

Slightly under ripe fruits make the best fruit pickles.

Fruits canned in too thick a syrup shrink and rise to the top of the jar.

Clothes should be damper for an ironing machine than for ironing by hand.

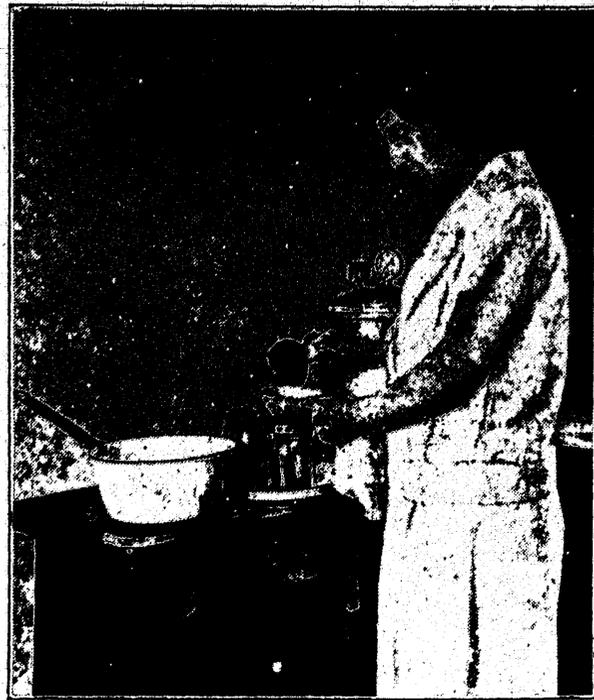

Easily washed curtains which let in every available breeze and are not harmed by sunlight are best for summer use.

Can String Beans in Pressure Canner

String Beans Most Popular of All Vegetables.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The farm garden should be planned to supply a considerable surplus of excellent vegetables and fruits which may be enjoyed later on at little cost if canned when fresh. Of course, the practical homemaker does not waste time canning what may be stored, like maturo beets, turnips, carrots, sweet potatoes, parsnips, winter squash and pumpkin, or vegetables that may be dried, such as okra and large lima beans.

String beans are among the most popular and satisfactory of all the home-canned vegetables. Only the steam pressure canner should be used to process them. (Processing means heating the material to kill bacteria.) All vegetables except tomatoes require processing at higher temperatures than boiling. This can only be done under steam pressure. Either glass or tin containers may be used.

String beans and all vegetables should be packed boiling hot. That is, they are cooked for a few minutes and then, while still boiling, packed into the jars, sealed, and processed the required length of time. This is sometimes called the "hot pack." It is recommended by the bureau of home economics of the United States Department of Agriculture because the beans at the center of the container are quickly raised to the temperature required for processing, and the bacteria that cause spoilage are more likely to be killed. The following directions for canning string beans, as well as for canning most other common vegetables and fruits, are given in Farmers' Bulletin 1471-F, "Canning Fruits and Vegetables at Home."

Pick the beans over carefully, string, wash thoroughly, and cut into pieces of the size desired for serving. Add enough boiling water to cover, and boil for five minutes in an uncovered vessel. Pack in containers boiling hot, cover with the water in which they were boiled, and add one teaspoonful of salt to each quart. Process immediately at ten pounds pressure, or 240 degrees Fahrenheit—quart glass jars for 40 minutes, pint glass jars for 35 minutes, and No. 2 and No. 3 tin cans for 30 minutes. Remove from the canner and invert glass jars, placing them out of drafts. Plunge tin cans in cold water to cool quickly.

When there are a few sandwiches left over from any occasion, wrap them carefully, and if the next meal is a luncheon or breakfast, dip them into a fritter batter and fry until well browned. Serve hot.

Scalloped Corn and Celery.—Take two cupfuls of corn, one cupful of celery finely chopped, one cupful of dry bread-crumbs well buttered, one teaspoonful of salt, one small green pepper, two tablespoonfuls of butter, one cupful of hot milk. Arrange corn, peppers, celery and crumbs in two alternate layers in a buttered baking dish. Add butter to the hot milk and pour over the vegetables. Cover with buttered crumbs and bake 40 minutes. This will serve eight.

Sherry's Dressing.—Mix one-half cupful of olive oil with five tablespoonfuls of vinegar, one-half tablespoonful of powdered sugar, one small chopped Bermuda onion, two tablespoonfuls of finely chopped parsley, one-half teaspoonful of chopped red pepper, one tablespoonful of chopped green pepper and one teaspoonful of salt. Let stand an hour in a mason jar; shake for five minutes before serving.

Food for the Family Table

By NELLIE MAXWELL

As almost every one likes a good potato salad here are two worth adding to your card index:

Potato Salad.—Take ten small boiled potatoe, three small cucumbers, three stalks of celery, four hard-boiled eggs, one small grated onion. Cut the vegetables into thin slices and use any desired dressing with salt and cayenne to season. The charm of a good potato salad is lost unless the dressing has had plenty of time to season the potatoes and cucumbers. The potato should be marinated at least two or three hours with a snappy dressing, then the cucumber and onion may be added a short while before serving.

Another Potato Salad.—Take six medium-sized potatoes, cut into cubes, two cupfuls of cucumber cubes, one cupful of shredded almonds, two tablespoonfuls of green pepper and two of red, onion juice if desired. Add a good boiled dressing.

Maple Biscuit.—Make ordinary baking powder biscuit, roll thin, spread with butter and finely shaved or grated maple sugar. Roll as a jelly roll cut into slices and bake in a hot oven. Serve hot. Nice served with a sauce for puddling.

Coconut Salad.—Take two cupfuls of coconut, two cupfuls of tart apples, one-half cupful of celery, two tablespoonfuls of chopped onion, one tablespoonful of chopped parsley, a dash of red pepper and a good french dressing.

Cheese Nests Salad.—Take cream cheese, tint a delicate shade of green and roll into small eggs around a peanut or almond. Pepper with finely minced parsley and a few with chopped nuts. Lay into lettuce nests and serve with a mayonnaise dressing.

buttons better, but there is less strain and pull on the shoulders when they are used. Easy making and easy laundering are also points kept constantly in mind in planning children's clothing.

Here is an all-in-one outfit for a little girl to wear on hot days. It eliminates the need for undergarments, yet has the outward appearance of a dress. It is made in two parts, with a detachable plaited skirt for easy laundering. The self-help idea is emphasized, since the dress has an invisible front opening, snapping together under the blue front trimming. The child can also learn very quickly to button the skirt onto the waist before she puts the dress on, if she is once shown how the box plait comes in the middle of the front. The seven buttons on the skirt are arranged so that there are two side-back buttons and none in the center back. The buttonholes are made vertical so the buttons will stay closed.

A kimono style romper pattern was chosen, with a seam on the shoulder, and very short sleeves. Except where the collar-like trimming closes at the center front, it is stitched flat, fitting the outline of the neck. The panty part of the romper has an invisible drop seat, and is made on a fold of the goods to give ample room through the crotch, and the very short legs are bound with plain blue material like the little skirt, the neck and arm-hole trimming and the top of the pocket.

"Vitamins" or "Vitamins"?

The pronunciation of this term depends on the form of spelling used. Two forms are in use, vita-mins, giving the first "i" the diphthong sound that it has in aisle, and vitamines, pronounced vita-meen. Of late, certain medical men have introduced the pronunciation vit-a-min, a pronunciation that is not yet recorded by the dictionaries.—Literary Digest.

AN in Favor Say "Aye"

A teacher wanted to convey the meaning of the word "invisible." "Now, what do we call a person," she asked, "who is present without ever being seen?"

"I have it," one little boy offered. "The janitor!"

Child's All-in-one Dress

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The fewer clothes in hot weather, the more comfortable the child. Up to about three or three and a half years old a romper is often the only garment necessary on either a boy or a girl; but as the little girl grows older she looks better in a costume with a skirt of some sort, however abbreviated.

Garments that button in front with few and easy-to-find flat buttons or other forms of fastening are preferred. Attractive Pajama Costume venience and their fancy.

Wherefore the theme of the pajama resolves itself into many classifications—sleeping pajamas, lounging pajamas, elaborate pajamas as hostess' apparel, pajamas for the beach, which is not so simple as it sounds when one realizes that nowadays one entertains at bridge, at luncheon under canopied umbrellas and gay striped tents. Nor does this complete the list, but it is sufficient to prove the fact that fashion has mapped out an important program for the pajama costume.

There's this about the majority of pajama sets—they are supposed to be highly colorful and ingeniously designed. Perhaps the most popular way of carrying out this order for striking color and design is to combine gorgeously gay print with plain. The model in the picture shows how effectively such a plan works out. Note the circular flare to the pajamas, this being a featured detail this season.

A late idea is to employ twin prints for the making of pajama outfits—the crepe de chine print being used for the trousers, which are worn with a white or monotone tinted blouse, over which is posed a coat of the sheer chiffon patterned to match the design of the crepe.

Clever for the bridge party is the pajama which instead of having "buttons all over it" has cards scattered over blouse and coat, these cards being made of white satin hand-painted with clubs, spades, diamonds and the like.

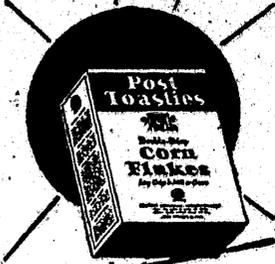

The pajama-wearing society is increasing its membership at a rapid rate. No longer is the pajama costume exclusive with a select few—on the contrary it has become part of every well-equipped wardrobe.

Then, too, the sphere of the pajama is no longer limited to the boudoir or to home environment. As to the current when and where of the pajama suit, women have settled the question for themselves by donning it whenever and wherever it suits their con-

REBUILDING THE TEMPLE

LESSON TEXT—Ezra 3:10-13; 6:14-16; Psalms 84:1-4.
GOLDEN TEXT—I was glad when they said unto me, let us go unto the house of the Lord.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Rebuilding God's House.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Rebuilding God's House.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Building God's House.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Builders of God's House.

After becoming settled in the town surrounding Jerusalem, the people were called together for the purpose of establishing the worship of the Lord God. The leaders in this movement were Jeshua and the priests, and Zerubbabel, the governor. In view of the fact that the clearing away of the debris of the old city and temple and the erection of the new temple would take a long time, an altar was erected where sacrifice might be offered at once unto God. Upon this newly erected altar were offered the regular sacrifices commanded by Moses, including those of the Feast of Tabernacles (Ezra 3:1-7).

I. The Foundation of the Temple Laid (3:10-13).

This was an auspicious occasion and was celebrated with most impressive ceremonies.

1. The priests' apparel (v. 10). These garments symbolized their consecration to the Lord's service.

2. The priests with trumpets (v. 10). The trumpets were used in calling together the people.

3. The Levites with cymbals (v. 10). This was according to the arrangement made by David (I Chron. 15:10-21).

4. They sang together by course (v. 11). This means that they sang to one another responsively. The one company sang, "The Lord is good," the other responded, "For His mercy endureth forever."

5. Mingle weeping and sighing (v. 12, 13). Some of the older men who had seen the magnificent temple of Solomon, which had been destroyed, wept much when they saw how far short the present foundation came of the former temple. Others were glad of the favor of God which had brought them back, and that a beginning was made in the new house of worship.

II. The Building of the Temple Hindered (ch. 4).

The leading adversaries were the Samaritans, a mongrel people—the offspring of the poor Jews who were left in Palestine and the foreign people who were sent into Palestine after the Jews were taken captive. The three perils which delayed the building of the temple for about fourteen years revealed the persistent methods which the enemy uses to hinder the program of God's people in every age.

1. An unintelligent pessimism (3:12).

Under the circumstances, a glorious beginning had been made. Many today, because things are not quite what they should be, do not go forward with a constructive program, but even hinder those who have the hopeful outlook. In spite of all the evil forces at work to thwart the purpose of God, the Christian church should push forward its program of evangelization.

2. Wordly compromise (4:2, 3).

"Let us build with you, for we seek your God." This is Satan's most cunning and effective method. God's children should not seek the world's patronage in building churches and carrying on His work. The leaders should declare with Zerubbabel, "We have nothing to do with you to build an house unto our God."

3. Opposition by word (4:4-24).

When refused a part in the work intimidation and political scheming were used by the enemies to defeat the building plan of God's people.

III. The Temple Finished (5:1-6).

Through the ministry of the prophets Haggai and Zechariah, people were encouraged to resume enthusiastically the work of building the temple. When the temple was finished, it was dedicated to God.

IV. The Blessedness of Dwelling in God's House (Ps. 84:1-4).

1. The longing of the soul for God's house (v. 1, 2).

It is refreshing when people long to meet God in His house.

2. The sparrow and swallow find protection in the sacred precincts of God's house (v. 3).

3. Dwelling in God's house (v. 4). Those who have a heart for God find their chief delight in dwelling in His house.

PROBLEM FACING CITY CHURCH.

By REV. C. H. SEARS, General Secretary Baptist Missions Society.

THE task of supplying a therapeutic for the degenerative diseases of the soul of the city man is big enough to require the co-operation of all religious faiths. It has been assumed that the problem of the city church has grown out of the rapid community changes of the last few years. The problem is much deeper; the problem of the city church grows out of the changes in the city man who has to do with things and people not known and with forces not understood.

In his daily quest for the utilities, values and thrills which the city has to offer, he joins the daily rhythm of city life, a tidal movement of the crowds. Under such conditions an individual tends to sink into anonymity and to cease to feel himself a person. Moral restraints are seriously weakened when contacts become thus impersonal and conflicting.

The city man lives in a social whirlpool. Stimulation has gone beyond the danger point, both for health and for morals. Neither physical proximity nor the mechanics of communication makes for sympathy. The city man lives in isolation within a multitude of contacts; a city is where men die of loneliness in the crowd. Aggressiveness on the part of one person or group is met by a defensive attitude on the part of others. Self-assertion is a characteristic sin of the city man.

Nor is there a compensating moral control for the city man. It is doubtful if religion, with its tendency toward otherworldliness and the church, with its traditional aloofness, have helped to make available spiritual forces released by the discoveries and inventions of a scientific age. The task of supplying a therapeutic for the degenerative diseases of the soul of the city man is big enough for the co-operation of all religious faiths. It is even bigger than co-operative Protestantism.

YOUTH IN ADJUSTMENT PERIOD

By LEONARD W. DE GAST, Y. M. C. A. General Secretary.

The old-fashioned boy who believed in Santa Claus, had lofty ideals and thrived on hard work, is having quite a struggle to survive the complex swirl of modern-day life, with its sophistication and pleasures. These were the findings made by Y. M. C. A. secretaries at their annual convention in Columbus, recently.

But this does not mean that boys are "going to the dogs." It indicates that youth is adjusting itself to changing times and is developing a propensity for taking care of itself.

There is less contact now between boys and their parents. I recommend more comradeship between boys and their fathers.

Six "trends" which the Y. M. C. A. has noted in boys are:

Boys are a sophisticated crowd. They are a different article from those of other days, but this is not a question of better or worse.

Their time is competed for not only by commercial amusements but by a host of organizations.

"Having a good time" plays a big part in all the life of today.

Boys are up against a definite and highly vocal opposition to Christianity and the church—indeed to all forms of idealism.

The world is more complex and many boys are confused as to their place in the scheme of things.

There is less contact of men and boys than in the past generation.

PROBLEM OF MEDICAL COST

By SECRETARY OF THE INTERIOR RAY LYMAN WILDUR.

The American medical profession, ultra-modern in science, is woefully archaic in economics. Medicine has never been adjusted to the strides of modern business. As a result the cost to the public of obtaining the benefit of medical care is exorbitant. The profession has progressed mightily in scientific discoveries, in combating disease and prolonging life. It has stood so far as adjusting its financial aspect is concerned.

A survey of the medical expenses of a group of government employees showed that they had spent on the wide range from 0.7 per cent of their annual salaries to 33.9 per cent. This grossly uneven burden shows the extreme hardship imposed on those families in the higher brackets.

We have planned a five-year program covering all angles of the medical cost problem. At the end of that time we expect to be able to make a definite recommendation to the profession and to the public which will remedy the situation.

Medical men must face the problem, and gain nothing by stubborn, unreasonable resistance. I have often told audiences of physicians: "Either you are going to do it, or it's going to be done to you."

Meanwhile, all experiments and plans, many of which are in process of being launched, can do no harm by being given trials. They should all prove useful in arriving at the ultimate solution.

PERIL MODERN YOUTH FACES

By REV. GEORGE W. JOHNSON (Baptist), Detroit.

Despised and criticized for frank disregard of conventionalities, the youth of today is unsurpassed by the youth of any other day. There never was a finer body of youngsters than the boys and girls of our day. They simply are more honest and sincere and less secretive than former generations.

The "youth problem" is not a new one. For proof of this read the Book of Proverbs, written in 1,000 B. C. Concern for youth is well founded, always has been, for the years of adolescence and young manhood determine later character. Young people cannot afford to expose themselves to too much temptation, pay too much for pleasure, refuse all restraint. The years of youth slip by quickly. See to it that even at thirty or thirty-five you are not compelled to despise yourself because of wasted opportunities and a none too good name.

Paul's advice to Timothy was good, for the good opinion of real people is worth having. And the advice meant: "Common respect as a young Christian minister, by your character and ability." No better counsel can be given to all present-day youth. Command respect of others, and self respect, because of what you are and because of real ability. Follow Christ sincerely and find in Him all needed aid and inspiration.

NEW!—HEAR IT—TODAY

Sensible Canadian

A heat wave that prevailed in Ontario, Canada, for several days induced a male citizen of Tillsonburg, after observing feminine styles, to appear on the street in short blue pants, bare legs and sandals, silk shirt with open neck and short sleeves and a straw hat. He first took the precaution to ask the chief of police if he would be arrested and was told that his costume was within the law.

Too Humble

"We farmers are humble, but we're not as humble as some of these politicians seem to think."

George L. Quackenbush, the millionaire farmer of Virginia, was talking in Richmond about the farmer's hard luck and his demand for government aid.

"Yes, we're humble," he went on. "But we're not like little Willie."

"Where are you going, Joe?" little Willie asked his friend.

"Down to the drug store," says Joe "to get an ice cream soda."

"Little Willie looked up at Joe wistfully and said:

"Say, Joe, can I come and watch ye?"
