Cheaper Money Bank Stocks Women's Colleges Starved 3,000 Automobile Deaths

Money was cheaper for all purposes, real business or Wall Street bargain buying.

Wise bankers will pass on to industry and business the benefit of the federal reserve discount cut.

In October this country sold to other countries merchandise amounting to five hundred and thirty million dollars, a record for the year, and for eight years, excepting two months in 1928.

In October we bought from foreigners three hundred and ninety-two million worth of goods.

Business is good, money is cheap. Then, what is the matter with us? Two things—a period of reckless gambling and a wave of hysteria.

Strangest among developments of the late Wall Street cyclone was the drop in prices of bank stocks.

Banks always make money. The people have no intention of getting along without credit, or without money. When times are good they use a great deal of it. When times are bad they need a great deal of it.

Yet the most brilliant and successful banks in New York saw their stocks dwindle in value in the recent panic of fear to an extent that exceeded the drop in any other line of stocks on the list.

Records show that since September the greatest banks in New York have averaged a drop of 52 per cent in quoted prices of their stocks. This applies to the greatest banks in the world—banks whose stock will have an ultimate value difficult to exaggerate.

And this drop in the price of stocks came in the face of a banking condition not merely absolutely sound, but extraordinarily prosperous, and "liquid."

Other countries are puzzled by extraordinary accumulations of gold in the Bank of France. The French have more gold than any country in the world, except this country, and are rapidly approaching us in gold reserves.

There is nothing puzzling about it. The French are marvelously thrifty. Their government is intelligent and determined. What they want they mean to have, and they usually get it.

Charles E. Hughes made a good speech recently, demanding more education for the women of the world.

Seven leading women's colleges have not one-tenth the endowment of the seven leading men's colleges.

That is extremely foolish, for the mothers of the human race are at least ten times as important as the fathers.

What women learn they remember and tell to their children. What men learn they forget in business and don't tell anybody.

In September, according to the Travelers Insurance company, 3,000 were killed in automobile accidents, a new record.

Bad whisky accounts for some killings, and "jay-walking," carelessness of pedestrians, accounts for many more.

Adults should know, children should be taught, that every highway is more dangerous than a railroad, automobiles being more numerous than trains, and just as dangerous.

In old-fashioned war, Switzerland land-relied on her mountains, her men, all trained soldiers able to use a rifle, and on the fact that it would cost more than it would be worth to conquer her.

But now, with mountains, rivers or water no longer a protecting barrier, Switzerland orders one hundred and five airplanes. Men used to joke about "the Swiss navy." But Switzerland is now on the shore, the air being the real ocean, and she means to have an air fleet.

Uncle Sam, take notice.

For the first time in twenty years, savings bank depositors have dropped. During the past year savings have diminished by $195,305,000, and the number of depositors by 524,221.

Those that drew their money to buy automobiles, radio sets, vacuum cleaners, electric washing machines, are wise. They got something better than their dollars.

Those that drew out money, safely placed, to speculate in stocks, know now that it is wiser to gamble.

The Woman's Club

held its meeting at Community Hall Nov. 15. The meeting was well attended, there being more than 50 members present. Reports from the chairmen of the different departments showed much interest in the work outlined for the coming months. Three new members were reported by the membership committee making the total membership to date 97. Let's bring it back to 100 before the New Year.

The Public Welfare Department, with Mrs. French, chairman, presented a very interesting program. Mrs. French was fortunate in having Miss Hodgson, chief field nurse of Health Department at Santa Fe, speak. She told of the need of a county nurse and urged the club to support the movement to have a nurse for Lincoln county next year.

The "Toy Orchestra," directed by Mrs. Shelton, played two selections for the ladies, and those who missed hearing these little tots make music missed a real treat. Mrs. Laura Sullivan, nurse at Dr. Johnson's hospital, gave an interesting talk and a practical demonstration in First Aid.

Program: Piano solo, Virginia Fagan of Fort Stanton; Mrs. Haake and her dancing class of 3 little girls was a very interesting number; Mrs. W. C. Hendren of Fort Stanton also favored us with a piano solo. Mrs. Hendren needs no introduction to Carrizozo and always receives a hearty applause.

After the program the committee served refreshments in the club kitchen. Next meeting will be at the home of Mrs. Nellie Branum, chairwoman of American Home Dept. On Dec. 14, the club will hold its annual bazaar and food sale at Community Hall.

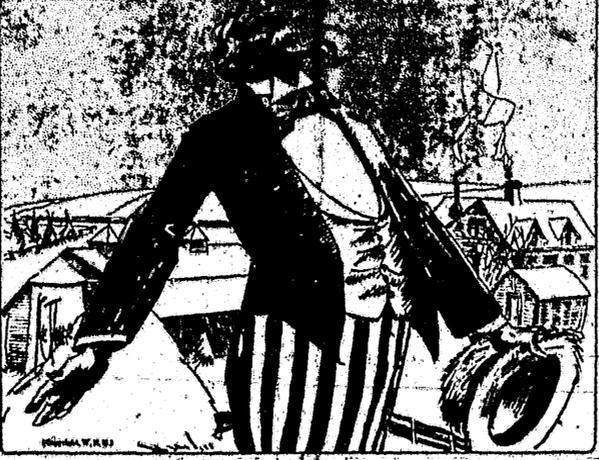

Mrs. McCammon wishes to thank all committees and club members who helped and donated so liberally for the chili dinner.

John D. Rockefeller in 1828 spent more than twenty-one million dollars fighting disease all over the world. Diseases start in different parts of the earth and spread everywhere. Yellow fever must be fought in Brazil, Africa, Central America.

Africa is the home of the most deadly trypanosomes, for which wild game provides an inexhaustible reservoir. Sportmen that kill wild beasts help the human race without knowing or intending it.

Discovery of the Tomb of King Solomon's Favorite Wife

(SCOTTISH RITE BULLETIN)

One of the most interesting discoveries of this age took place recently in Jerusalem—it was the unearthing of the Tomb of the favorite wife of King Solomon; and the finding of many valuable relics, including a document written by King Solomon himself.

Jerusalem is elated over a new discovery such as would thrill the heart of any student or lover of antiquity. An account of this important discovery is as follows: While laborers were engaged in removing some debris from a knoll at the south side of the site of the Temple, they encountered a large stone platform, which when cleaned, proved to be made of beautiful mosaic. In the center of this platform stood a large square stone beautifully ornamented with carving, and attached to it was a large gold handle in the form of a ring.

This find having been reported, a government commissioner was sent to investigate. Under his supervision and that of an overseer, and after all possible precautions had been taken, the laborers succeeded with great difficulty in lifting the massive stone and placing it on its side. Having raised it from its position on the platform, they found that it had covered an opening to an underground chamber.

After purifying the air of the dark recesses below, a ladder was lowered into it and the little party descended. On arriving at the bottom they were astonished to find themselves in a magnificently decorated room, with the ceiling and walls most richly ornamented in gold, ivory and precious stones. In each of the four corners of the room, or tomb as it proved to be, were various objects of personal use belonging to an ancient period, chalices, jars, fans and chairs, each of a richness without equal.

These objects in all their beauty were nothing to compare with what attracted the archaeologists upon their entrance. It was a magnificent coffin of pure gold and with such glittering ornamentation as to illuminate the whole room and dazzle the beholders, despite the long centuries that have intervened since it was placed there.

It was decided to open the coffin, which must certainly be that of a person of high birth. They were astonished when they beheld its contents. A mummy lay there before them, wrapped in cloths of fine gold which were ornamented with every kind of the most precious and brilliant gems. Every finger of the remains was encircled to its tip by unusual and exceedingly precious rings. But that which held the discoverers most in awe was a gorgeous crown encircling the head. It was encrusted with gems of a rare beauty and brilliance, such as cannot be found equalled in the crowns of the highest rulers of modern times. Yet with all its grandeur, there was attached to this magnificent tomb a deep mystery. It bore no inscription upon its walls, no fragment of a word that might help reveal its secret. For what great personage had such lavishness been expended? To the answer, there was no key.

Having revealed the coffin, the little party of men, overawed, silently ascended the ladder and leaving the tomb under guard, made their departure.

On the following day official orders were given that everything in the tomb be transported to the Museum of the city. More than a week elapsed before the task was completed. The transfer of the casket took place last of all. It was then, while searching among the folds of cloth covering the mummy that a folded piece of parchment was found. Restraining their impulse to open it immediately and most likely destroy it, the officials sent it to be chemically treated, whereupon, when unfolded, it presented a document written in ancient Hebrew. Translated, the text of it is as follows:

"Let it be known in this century and in the centuries that are to follow, that:

"I, Solomon, King of Jerusalem, have already given my orders, in this the 36th year of my reign, to inter my beloved wife, Mouti Maris of Memphis, in the room which exists in the entresol of her palace. This is after she chose to die to save my life, the life of her husband, her King.

"I am most profoundly indebted and most profoundly grateful to her for what she has done for me, her great and never-to-be forgotten sacrifice. May that inestimable sacrifice be sanctified.

"I declare also that I myself have placed my glorious crown, which was given to me on the 25th anniversary of my ascension to the royal dignity, on the forehead of my beloved wife, Mouti Maris, and it shall remain there until the Assembly of Notables of my People return to their reason.

"I have chosen to order that the room to be used as her tomb be decorated befitting the remains of a daughter of Egypt.

"Let it be known that:

Lesson for November 24

THE HIGHER PATRIOTISM

LESSON TEXT—Jonah 1:1-3; 2:1-5; 4:6-11. GOLDEN TEXT—And hath made of one blood all nations of men for to dwell on all the face of the earth. PRIMARY TOPIC—God's Love for Everybody. JUNIOR TOPIC—God's Love for Everybody. INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—What is True Patriotism? YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Patriotism and Internationalism.

The lesson committee has rightly suggested the entire book of Jonah as the basis of our study. The topic selected by the committee may seem a little strained. It will hardly do to call the spirit which moved Jonah to preach to the Ninevites, patriotism; rather, we should recognize it as the passion of a missionary going forth with the message of God, calling upon men to repent and turn to Him. Patriotism means love for one's country, while the spirit of the missionary is passionate love for lost men of all countries.

I. Jonah's Call and Commission (1:1, 2). Jonah, a Jew, was called to go and preach repentance to a Gentile city. In a real sense, salvation is of the Jews. In the seed of Abraham all nations of the earth shall be blessed (Gen. 12:1, 2). The story of Jonah graphically portrays the history of Israel as a nation. God separated Israel to be the channel through which His mercy and salvation were to be carried to all the nations of the earth. They, like Jonah, have been recreant to duty. Because of this God has caused them to be swallowed up by the nations, who will one day in the future spit them out upon dry ground, Palestine. After chastisement they, like Jonah, will discharge their obligation and nations will repent and turn to God.

II. Jonah's Flight From Duty (1:3). He turned his back upon God and attempted to flee from His presence. He went in the opposite direction to which he was sent. He did not believe in foreign missions. In the same way, Israel has become an apostate people, and instead of a blessing has become a burden and curse to the nations.

III. Jonah's Correction (1:4-2:10). 1. Overtaken by a storm (1:5). Trouble soon came upon the disobedient servant of God. So with the Jews, misfortune after misfortune, storm after storm have overtaken them because they turned from God. They are now tossed about by the nations. They, like Jonah, are asleep. 2. Cast overboard (1:15). In their perplexity the sailors cast lots and the lot fell upon Jonah. According to his own direction they did this. God had prepared a great fish which swallowed Jonah.

3. Jonah's deliverance (ch. 2). Jonah in his affliction turned to God and prayed (James 5:13). God miraculously preserved him while in the belly of the fish. God has miraculously preserved Israel while in the heart of the nations. The fish could not digest Jonah, neither can the nations assimilate Israel. Jonah repented while in the fish. So Israel will repent as she goes into the great tribulation. God made the fish to vomit out Jonah. So He will at the proper time cause the nations to cast out Israel.

IV. Jonah's Commission Renewed. (3:1-10). Although Israel has been rebellious and failed in the execution of her commission, she will repent and go forward to fulfill her commission in preaching the gospel to the nations of the earth observe. 1. The field of his ministry (v. 3). It was to be the great Gentile city Nineveh. 2. His message (v. 4). He was instructed to "preach the preaching" which God had commissioned him to utter—Nineveh was to be overthrown within forty days. 3. Effect upon the people of Nineveh (vv. 5-10). They repented and sued for pardon. In the time to come the Gentile nations will repent of their sins when the gospel of the kingdom is preached unto them by the Jews. V. Jonah's Behavior (4:1-11). 1. His displeasure (vv. 1-3). He now makes known the real reason for his flight from duty. He knew that the gracious God would spare the people who repented. 2. God reproves Jonah (vv. 4-11). By means of the gourd God shows him his error. The closing scene affords a striking example of the patience and pity of God in contrast with the hard-heartedness of man.

Hidden Gold Found A story is told of a man whose home and will, all that he had in the world, were swept away by floods. But, as he stood on the scene of his loss, after the water had subsided, broken-hearted and discouraged, he saw something shining in the bank, which the water had washed bare. It was gold. The flood which had bereaved him, had made him rich. "Fervent stripes of love's possession, they reveal the treasures of the love of God."

Eyes

EYES differ from ears for the ears are nothing but little receiving sets while the eyes receive and broadcast. The wink, the glance, and the go-go look are evidence of this.

Superstitious people are afraid of what they call the "Evil Eye." I believe that this tradition has a great place in history going way back to the Pyramids, but I can't see in it anything more than the familiar, dirty look.

The angry person gives you that when he can't hand you anything else. If looks could kill—well, a dirty glance that one gets sometimes is meant to be mortal. For some glances are sharp and every one of us gets a cut now and then.

We live in the sound age, the era of the Big Noise. All sorts of sounds are played from records and the rest are broadcast from this station or that.

Then, people seem to be talking more than they used to so that when a man holds his tongue, like Coolidge or Hoover, he becomes famous for what he doesn't say.

But there are other ways of expressing one's self than those of voice or saxophone. One can give a meaningful look or glance an eye-ful. That's what makes the eye such an important organ for subtle broadcasting.

The silent drama, which has been broken up by the talkie movie, shows us how human beings can express themselves by means of glances, with a few gestures thrown in for good measure. The screen folks may overdo this eye-business somewhat, but still they show us what can be done by a glance.

With a woman, this eye-work is especially important. It isn't what one woman says about another that counts so much as the way she glances at her frock or hat. One dirty look and that other woman is killed socially.

The eye is important in the business of sizing people up. It isn't the story that they tell, or the way they sell themselves that counts. It's the way their eyes behave while they are speaking the piece.

We are supposed to be in an age when we should stop, look and listen. Goodness knows we have to stop at every corner to let traffic go by and we are bound to listen in on all sorts of sounds. But the main thing is to let the eye get its work and look.

A Blue Honeymoon

THE difference between a blue moon and a honeymoon is that the blue moon is seldom if ever seen in the heavens. Unfortunately the honeymoon of the cool variety does put in an appearance in a sky where Venus is supposed to rule.

Young people rush into marriage without much idea of what it's all about and with the idea of finding out. They expect the wedding bells to start a tune which will not die out until the morning stars cease singing together. They think that orange blossoms grow on century plants. Very often, before the honeymoon has sunk in the west, they are disillusioned. Then the fun begins.

The failure of the honeymoon may mean something more than "two to Dollywood." It may mean a round trip ticket to Reno. The light of the marriage moon sinks into the gloom of divorce. That makes the blue honeymoon, all right.

My idea is that we should have a court of love. I know that they used to have such things in the day of queens and chivalry, but it wasn't a real court with judges, witnesses and all that. No, it was a poetical affair.

A couple can be married in a court and divorced in the same place, but there should be a love court somewhere between. I'm sure I don't know just how such a court would be made, but I do know that there's need for it.

Probably we expect too much of marriage, which itself is an old institution and which includes countless individuals who are as ill fitted for love as a cow is for roller skates. It doesn't make any difference how bad a reputation marriage has, there are always plenty of people who are willing to try it.

After a business has failed and people have learned that there isn't anything in the manufacture of left-handed monkeywrenches, you can't get anybody to order another one. But with marriage, the more the failure of the thing is advertised, the more anxious people are to give it a try.

That's why the honeymoon turns blue.

The best thing for a couple whose honeymoon is making is to talk it over and find out where they are at. If they have been disillusioned, they can be re-enchanting by reason. If they have lost out on love as romance, they may be able to make up with love as affection.

It isn't the moon's fault, for that gentle orb has nothing to do with love, lunacy, or the weather. The fault lies in the lover's heart. The moon knows enough to be again after it has sunk. Why can't lovers love again after they have grown cold?

STORY FROM THE START

Capt. Lion Fellowes' American merchant ship is sunk by a British frigate off Fortugal in the War of 1812. Fellowes is saved by an English-speaking girl, who conceals her identity. Fellowes goes to Lisbon where he meets an acquaintance, Capt. Chater, of the American ship True Bounty, who offers him a berth as a teacher at Chater's school. Chater is disloyal in trading with the enemy, he refuses. He meets the girl who saved his life, Cara Inglepin, daughter of the owner of True Bounty. She is bound for home and induces Fellowes to sail as mate. He is in love with Cara. The vessel is stopped by the British frigate, Badger, Captain Collishawa. Fellowes is taken aboard the Badger as a "pressed" man. Maddened at what he believes is Cara's and Chater's treachery, he orders Collishawa, who orders him a hundred lashes with the "cat." Fellowes' hatred of the three becomes an obsession. On New York Fellowes escapes from the Badger. He seizes a plot in a meeting to be held at Chater's home and gathers a company of militia to circumvent the plotters. In a fight between the militia and British sailors Collishawa escapes. At Chater's home Fellowes finds Cara, her father and Chater. Fellowes, at the girl's denial of conniving at his kidnaping.

"'Tis my wife tell me we must have documentary proof of all that," the lawyer retorted doggedly. "But argument will carry us no whither. Do you search Inglepin, and I will take Chater."

Their prisoners submitted with an ill grace, both, however, in no wise disturbed seriously—which wasn't odd, for nothing of moment was found on either of them. A search of the house produced a quantity of correspondence, and a map of the country showing the rough division of political sentiment; but not a line of matter more offensive than was openly preached in every Federalist newspaper.

Descending the stairs, very mournfully, they encountered Mrs. Rhodes.

A Search of the House Produced a Quantity of Correspondence.

waiting outside the parlor door, a triumphant smile on her angular features.

"Thar wos jest this," she announced, extending a single sheet of notepaper. "In the lady's bodice."

Fellowes accepted the sheet from her, and carried it to the open front door to examine. Sopher peering over his shoulder. The letter-flap was unaddressed, unsealed and unfranked. On the inner side was written:

H. M. S. Badger, On Station off New York, July 5, 1812

Dearest Cara: If we be denied a word alone, I write this to substitute for the plea I would prefer to offer with my lips. 'Tis the Plea I have been in my heart since we met first at the Rothsays' in London. Will you marry me? I have little to offer, save a fond heart, and I see no chance of coming off the sea short of a General Peace, and God knows when that will be, if ever. But there you are. Prithree be kind, and send me Hope of the future.

Whether you do, or don't, tho', I subscribe myself with All good Wishes, Yr obt. slave, James Collishawa.

Bewildered, reluctantly abashed, Fellowes was yet entirely skeptical. "I'll not believe it," he cried. "Tis a blind! Can't you see that? They are clever, abominably clever."

"I grant you, Lion," returned Sopher, "but 'tis the one piece of evidence we find, and it upholds Miss Inglepin's story."

Fellowes studied the letter through narrowed eyes.

"'Tis honest, but—Do you believe, Nimrod, that the captain of a British man-of-war came ashore, with twenty men and a post-gun, to pay a call on a woman? Do you believe that others will believe it?"

Sopher shrugged his shoulders.

United States Takes High Rank in Healing

At the beginning of the Nineteenth century, according to Doctor Osier, there were only three medical schools in the United States and only two general hospitals. Students who desired a better education than they could receive locally were forced to go abroad.

There were only a few medical journals in circulation in this country and almost no American medical books had been published. Around the middle of the century, many new medical schools were founded, but their standards were low and the education they gave was poor.

The reformation started in Harvard shortly after President Elliot assumed office in 1869 and quickly spread to the other medical schools of the country, stirring them all to new life and activity. We have now eighty medical

"How matters it what we believe—or others? There'll be talk, and people will say Inglepin and his daughter are disloyal. But that is said already. And talk is not legal evidence."

Mrs. Rhodes, listening to their debate, struck in swiftly:

"I dunno 'bout what other folks'll believe, but I can tell ye right now, Nimrod Sopher, Miss ain't happy over what she's done—or ain't done. She didn't want for me to take that letter, nor one bit."

"Ah? I think I'll return it to her," Fellowes said, and walked down the hall to the parlor door.

"Come in," Cara Inglepin answered his knock.

She was sitting on the sofa as when he had first seen her, drinking a glass of wine. The duenna was beside her, dumbly protective. Her father and Chater, talking restrainedly in a far corner, met Fellowes with frankly hostile glances.

"Is it necessary for you to annoy us further, sir?" demanded Inglepin.

Fellowes ignored the question.

"I regret we felt obliged to take this from you, ma'am," he placed the letter in the listless hand she put out for it. "You have my apologies for the intrusion. I am confident Captain Collishawa is too honorable a man to have intended it should be used to cover a political intrigue."

The startled look she gave him was his reward.

"Your confidence does you honor, sir," she acknowledged gratefully. "And, oh, Captain Fellowes—"

"Don't ye talk to him, Miss Cara," Chater interrupted. "I'll thank ye to get out of my house, and stay out, Fellowes. Ye ain't got no excuse for bidin' a minute. I'll have the law on ye, if ye bother me ag'in."

"Try the law, you fool," Fellowes retorted contemptuously. "I'm done with it."

Passing out the parlor door he heard Cara Inglepin catch her breath, and understood she was abashed anew at the spectacle of his scarred back. But he was puzzled that this sign of remorse should inspire him with pity rather than exultation. He resolved to root out all pity from his heart, lest it undermine the strength of his hatred.

Fellowes awakened slowly, conscious of an unaccustomed sense of luxury. Sunshine was warm in his face, soft linen caressed his body. It was very different from the berth-deck of the Badger. He was in his own room at the Manor. A suit of clothes hung on a chair, all brushed and neat. Towels were draped on a rack. Evidently, some one had been busy putting a disused house in order while he slept. He learned who that some one was when the Widow Rhodes' voice drifted in to him through a door that stood ajar.

"Come right in, Nimrod. If he ain't up yet, it's time he was riz. A man can't more'n sleep the clock 'round in comfort."

Fellowes slid out of bed, chuckling, languidly satisfied. The world seemed good after twenty-four hours' rest. And he was home. He strolled to the window, and the world turned gloomy in a moment. Beyond the maples, and the creek fields and the creek, itself, he saw the lane winding from Chater's house to the South Country road, and rolling along in a shower of dust a cumbersome post-chaise. While he watched, it lurched around a corner and vanished under the thick leafage of the trees lining the main road.

His face was so grim that when Sopher entered the room the lawyer nodded understandingly.

"Good morning, Lion, good morning, my dear fellow!" he exclaimed with a patent effort at cheeriness. "You are the better for a proper sleep, I see. And watching our—ah—antagonists' departure. Returning to the city, I believe. Let us hope, a thought chastened by their experience."

"You may hope it," snarped Fellowes, beginning to dress. "I don't. They are on their way to do whatever they arranged with Collishawa."

"Oh, my dear Lion! You are unreasonable. We have no evidence."

"We have plenty of evidence. What we require is a method of exploiting it. I think Joshua Inglepin is the man for my purpose. If he is, and sees it, we'll lay the story before the federal authorities—and the governor. Is Jeff Higgle still in the village?"

"Yes, he waited on the possibility you might wish his services."

"Send word to the General Armstrong we'll drive west in an hour. Have you any money for me? Enough to buy a ship?"

ANYWAY, HE KNOWS HIS COWS

During the World war a very patriotic old lady was passing a farmer's barn one day and observed a young farmer boy milking a cow. He looked to be old enough to be in the army, and she was indignant to find him on the farm. He saw her, but didn't stop milking.

"Why are you not at the front?" asked the indignant patriot, and the quick reply was:

"Cause thar ain't no milk at their end."—Association News.

Night Life Gets You if You Don't Watch Out!

War Vet almost takes count, but pals help.

HOW would you like it if every two weeks you had to give up your good-night's sleep, and work all night instead? This is what happened to W. H. Huggins of 90 Savannah Street, Rochester, New York. When he came back from the War, he took a night "shift" job.

"It certainly shot me all to pieces," said Mr. Huggins. "I was licked before I started. My pals noticed that the night shift got me, so during a 'lunch' period in the middle of one night one of them said to me, 'Hug, I bet I know what's the matter with you. This irregular life gets us all unless we watch out. Why don't you try Nujol? Most of the boys are onto this little health trick. Try it!'"

Just a Little Brown Dog

The finding of the dead body of young Alphonso Sedillo in the mountains southwest of Rowe, N. M., early this week, after being missing for 7 days and 7 nights, revealed a story of dog faithfulness, which equals, if not exceeds, anything that has ever been recorded of that nature.

To all appearances, the boy had been dead for the full 7 days. He was found with his face downward, and sitting on his back was his little brown dog which had remained with him and warded off coyotes and other wild mountain animals through the long, cold nights, without whimpering, but resting content in being able to protect his little master.

The dog had never left him, but remained at his side without food or water and when found was weak and exhausted. Yet with all of this, he forced a savage bark at the first man he saw, thinking him another enemy, but finding him a friend, he gave unmistakable signs of joy. When the body of his little master was removed and he saw that it was in safe hands, he allowed the rescuers to wrap him in warm clothes and ate heartily of good warm food.

He was only a little brown dog, but his loyalty and faithfulness, during which time he suffered from cold, hunger, thirst, and torture should earn for him a badge of honor, a good warm bed and the best of treatment as long as he lives.

It has oftentimes been said, that men may prove false and betray trusts, but a faithful dog will die at his post in defense of his master. This saying would have proven true in the case of the poor little brown dog which although small as he was, defied vicious wild beasts and would have carried on until death relieved him of his sufferings, so great was his love and devotion.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Elections in Virginia and Elsewhere Cause Democrats to Rejoice.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

DEMOCRATS were jubilant over the results of elections held in various states, seeing in them evidence that the split in the solid South made last fall by the Republicans was not permanent; that the people do not like the Republican tariff measure now pending; that the Democrats have a good chance to cut down the Republican majority in both houses of congress next year and pave the way for a real fight in the next Presidential campaign; and, as Chairman Joubert Shouse of the Democratic national executive committee put it, "the country, for the time being at least, is Democratic-minded."

Most interesting was the election in Virginia where the regular Democratic ticket, led by Dr. John Garland Pollard for governor, was easily victorious over the coalition of Republicans and anti-Smith Democrats which was directed by Bishop Cannon, G. Bacon Stemp and Henry W. Anderson and which had William M. Brown for its gubernatorial candidate. The political power of Bishop Cannon in the Old Dominion was completely upset and the use of religious strife for partisan purposes was discredited, and observers generally admitted that Virginia was restored to the list of safely Democratic states.

Kentucky also gave the Democrats cause for rejoicing, for they retained a two-thirds majority of the lower house of the state assembly and a majority of the senate. Last year Kentucky was carried by Hoover and the Republicans elected nine out of eleven congressmen.

Mayor Jimmie Walker of New York city retained his office by virtue of a genuine landslide, his plurality over Florio H. La Guardia, Republican-Fusion candidate, being almost 600,000. George U. Harvey, borough president of Queens, was the only Republican to win in the metropolis. In a dozen other New York cities the Democrats elected mayors.

Indiana voters apparently turned nately against the Ku Klux Klan, for throughout the state the candidates who had Klan affiliations generally were defeated by Democrats. The vote also saw in the results evidence that the people were tired of the domination of the Anti-Saloon league. Reginald Sullivan, Democrat, won the Indianapolis mayoralty by a two to one vote, and in many other state centers, most of them former Republican strongholds, the Democrats were victorious.

Detroit staged an exciting mayoralty contest between former Mayor John W. Smith, liberal, wet, and Catholic, and Charles Bowles, former judge and a Catholic. The Klan, prohibition and religion all figured in the fight and the race was so close that the result was in doubt to the very last. Then it appeared Bowles had won by about 6,000 majority.

SENATOR BINGHAM of Connecticut has received his punishment for charging that the subcommittee on lobbying was packed against the administration, though ostensibly his offense was the employment of a lobbyist to post him on tariff matters, by virtue of which employment said lobbyist gained admission to executive meetings of the Finance committee when it was working on the tariff bill. Bingham refused to apologize and so Senator Norris, chairman of the Judiciary committee, who had named the subcommittee on lobbying, introduced his resolution censuring Bingham for action that "is contrary to good morals and senatorial ethics and tends to bring the senate into disrepute." Twenty-two Republicans voted against the resolution, but a like number lined up with thirty-two Democrats and the measure was adopted, 54 to 22.

THAT remarkably voluble Senator Brookhart of Iowa, after giving fair warning, arose in the senate and told his story of the "Wall Street dinner" given in Washington three years ago by Walter J. Fahy of New York and attended by a number of senators and financiers. It was a fairly amusing old tale but far from exciting. Brookhart said that before entering the dining room each guest was offered a silver flask of liquor, and that he and Senators Smoot and Gooding declined. But he failed to name those senators who accepted the flask, saying that the "boys" could answer for themselves. Beside Brookhart at the feast sat E. B. Loomis, a railroad official and connected with Morgan & Co., and on his other side was Otto Kahn. "During the course of the dinner, Mr. Loomis took his hip flask out of his pocket and he poured out some of that alcoholic stuff," said Senator Brookhart. "I have had enough experience in the chemical laboratory to know that it had a heavy content of alcohol. He poured that in the glass, and then he poured in some water—it was too strong to take raw—and he drank that. A lot of similar operations went along down the table."

The Iowa senator was called before the grand jury in Washington last week and presumably told that body the same story of the Fahy dinner, though he may have given more vital details. In the course of his speech in the senate he berated the administration for the failure to enforce the dry law along the Canadian border and in the best clubs and hotels. He especially attacked Secretary of the Treasury Mellon and said President Hoover should dismiss him from the cabinet.

MORE than the expected success is attending the efforts of the Democratic-radical coalition in the senate in changing the tariff rate schedules. After having their way with a number of chemicals, the coalitionists showed their strength effectively when the first major industrial schedule was reached, that fixing the duty on pig iron. By a wide majority they were successful in fixing this rate at 75 cents a ton, just half that proposed by the administration group and 37½ cents less than the present duty. The vote was 49 to 30. Need of Pennsylvania said this vote could only serve to confirm his contention that the tariff bill was dead and that the house could never agree to the changes which the coalition was making.

CHIEF witness last week before the senate lobby committee was A. J. Arnold, Washington representative for the Southern Tariff association and the American Taxpayers' league. The inquiry revealed some of the methods employed to get tariff protection for products of Southern states and to promote abolition of the federal inheritance tax. A long list of names of more or less prominent men and corporations from whom Arnold obtained contributions was made public, and Arnold sought to justify his collections from them and all his other efforts. He gathered in about $225,000 in the past year but was a trifle hazy as to how this amount was expended.

CHARLES GATES DAWES, our ambassador to Great Britain, on the eve of his return to his post in London spent a day or two in Washington conferring with President Hoover and Secretary Bismson. He was given a detailed account of the conversations between the President and Prime Minister MacDonald and discussed various phases of the naval reduction situation. Ambassadors Dawes and Gurgenhelm were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Hoover at a dinner, as were the members of the senate foreign relations committee, and there was something of a sensation when it was learned that Senator Bingham of California, a member of that committee, was not invited. The newspapers made a lot of the incident, but Mr. Hoover promptly wrote the senator explaining that his omission from the list of guests was wholly accidental and had caused the President great distress.

PRIME MINISTER MACDONALD reported to the house of commons on his visit to the United States and thanked the American officials and people for their cordial welcome and the honor paid him. He gave little information on the agreements reached in Washington but in the course of his speech admitted the matter of Great Britain's fortified bases off the American coast had been discussed. Mr. Mac Donald's government does not face any considerable opposition in the matter of the naval agreement, but in domestic affairs, especially the plans for settlement of labor troubles, its course is not to be so smooth. The question of granting dominion status to India, or rather how soon this should be done, also has given rise to bitter debate. One of the first acts of parliament was to approve the resumption of relations with Soviet Russia.

ANOHE TARDIEU formed a new cabinet for France, a "concentration" government with Briand still in his foreign minister, but there were fears that it would be short lived. The Communists, Socialists and Radical Socialists decided to vote against it solidly, and they would need only fifty right wing votes to overthrow it. Such a result would seriously endanger the success of the Young plan and the Rhineland evacuation.

German Nationalists and Fascists mustered enough votes to call for a plebiscite on the Young reparations plan the result of which shall be binding on the reichstag. The present government has a majority in the reichstag and that body will reject the proposal for a plebiscite, whereupon it will be submitted to the national electorate. To override the reichstag's veto will require 20,000,000 supporters, or half the total eligible electorate, and so the scheme is evidently doomed to defeat.

CONFLICTING reports and claims made uncertain the situation in the civil war in China, but there evidently had been some bloody fighting between the rebel "people's" forces and the Nationalist government troops. There were no important developments on the Manchurian front. The American Red Cross sent over $20,000 for the relief of the white Russians who survived the massacres perpetrated by the Soviet forces in that region.

UP IN Minneapolis the Co-operative Farmers Northwest Grain corporation was organized with capital of $4,000,000, to be owned by the Farmer Elevator and Grain Pool associations of Minnesota, the Dakotas, and Montana and to act in co-operation with and as the agency for the Farmers National Grain corporation in the four states.

FOLLOWING a brief spurt of recovery, stock prices on the exchanges went tumbling again until most of them reached the low figures of the previous week, and each day many more billions of paper values were wiped out. If the New York bankers' pool was doing anything to support the market, it wasn't visible, and none of the bankers would say a word. The bears were just permitted to have things their own way, and the terrified amateur speculators who had survived the earlier debacle submitted their wool to the shearers almost unresistingly. Later came some spasmodic recoveries.

ROSCOE C. McCULLOCH of Canton was appointed by Governor Cooper of Ohio as United States senator to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Senator Theodore E. Burton. He has served three terms in congress and held other public offices. McCulloch's appointment is for a period of one year. He must seek election in November, 1930, for the unexpired two years of the six year term of the late Senator Frank R. Willis.

RECENT deaths include those of William G. Lee, former head of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen; Marquis Inouye of Japan and Maurice Herberts of France. Deaths: Prince Max of Baden, last imperial chancellor of Germany, and George Hanneauer, president of the Boston and Maine railroad.

He expressed an opinion that it would be found limited to not more than 2,000 acres.

Taxes on motor vehicles in New Mexico for 1930 will not be collected as they have been in the past. All taxation on automobiles will be included in the license plate this year. These plates for automobiles will be $18 plus $3.00 for every hundred pounds in excess of 1,500 pounds, provided that the car has not been registered in New Mexico for three years previous to 1930. There is a slight variation in this charge for commercial cars, trucks, trailers and the like.

Seven knives were found hidden in the penitentiary yard and several knives were found on the prisoners.

This Little Girl Got Well Quick

"Just after her third birthday, my little daughter, Connie, had a serious attack of intestinal flu," says Mrs. H. W. Turnage, 217 Caldwell St., San Antonio, Texas. "It left her very weak and pale. Her bowels wouldn't act right, she had no appetite and nothing agreed with her.

"Our physician told us to give her some California Fig Syrup. It made her pick up right away, and now she is as robust and happy as any child in our neighborhood. I give California Fig Syrup full credit for her wonderful condition. It is a great thing for children."

Children like the rich, fruity taste of California Fig Syrup, and you can give it to them as often as they need it, because it is purely vegetable. For over 50 years leading physicians have recommended it, and its overwhelming sales record of over four million bottles a year shows it gives satisfaction. Nothing compares with it as a gentle but certain laxative, and it goes further than this. It regulates the stomach and bowels and gives tone and strength to these organs so they continue to act normally, of their own accord.

There are many imitations of California Fig Syrup, so look for the name "California" on the carton to be sure you get the genuine.

Capt. Myles Standish of Plymouth

Capt. Myles Standish.

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

THANKSGIVING approaches, and as our thoughts turn to the Pilgrim Fathers, none is more worthy of remembrance than Capt. Myles Standish. For he was "the first military commander of our country and the greatest example of protection and preparedness that ever existed. The compact which he and his associates signed on board the Mayflower was the foundation of our form of government. The law-abiding, God-fearing Pilgrims could not have existed without the strong arm of Capt. Myles Standish."

Such was the tribute paid to him recently by Major Myrick, captain of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company of Boston, in dedicating a simple boulder in Duxbury, Mass., which marks the site of Myles Standish's home. Associated with him in dedicating the memorial and decorating the grave of the Pilgrim captain nearby were Myles Standish, eighth lineal descendant of the colonial leader, Winthrop Winslow, a direct descendant of Captain Winslow, of the Pilgrims, and more than a hundred members of the artillery company.

The Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company of Boston was an offspring of the Honorable Artillery Company of London, organized in England in 1537. It was founded in New England in 1638 by Robert Kenne, who had previously been a member of the London company. The only time in its history in which it engaged in war as a unit was in 1645, when it joined Myles Standish and his company in a campaign against the Indians, and today it is the only link which exists between the present United States army and the first colonial company which defended this country from the first Indian attacks.

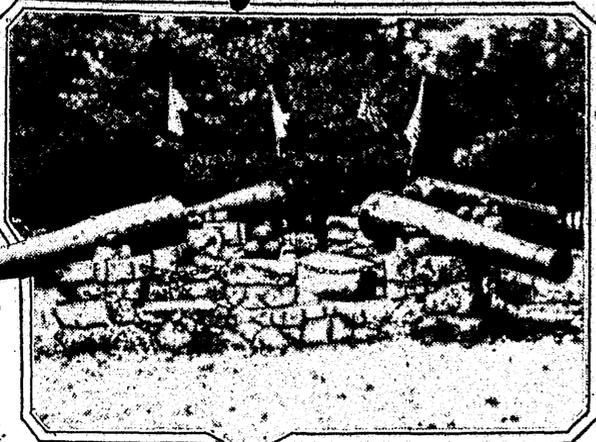

It is probable that most Americans, when they think of Capt. Myles Standish at all, think of him in terms of Longfellow's famous poem, which is unfortunate for, as a recent writer has said "The poet Longfellow has set an example of inaccuracy in dealing with our Pilgrim ancestors, which has been widely followed." Among those inaccuracies are first of all the spelling of his name, which was "Myles" and not "Miles," as Longfellow had it, and calling him a "Puritan leader." There was a difference between the "Separatists," who called themselves "Pilgrims" and who founded the colony at Plymouth in 1620, and the "Puritans" who founded the Massachusetts Bay colony in 1630. More than that, Standish was not a member of the Separatist faith, but he was "a dissenter from the dissenters." But the principal mistaken idea about the captain which the poet has given us is in his having Standish use young John Alden as his mouthpiece in voicing Priscilla Mullins. "There is not a scintilla of evidence that the fearless captain, who was small of stature and red-headed, but every inch a soldier, had any desire to win the affections of Priscilla Mullins," says the writer previously quoted. "It seems too bad that so brave and unselfish a man as Standish was should now be paraded before his descendants as a rejected suitor. He deserves a better fate."

There seems to be considerable mystery about the ancestry, religion and early life of Myles Standish. It is believed that he was born about 1584, the son of the Standish family of Duxbury hall in Lancashire, England. The name is an ancient one and Froissart, describing the meeting between King Richard II and the rebel, Wat Tyler, at Smithfield in 1381, tells how the latter was killed by a "squire of the kynge called John Standyshe," who was knighted for this act. This furnishes some historical basis for the words put in Myles Standish's mouth by Longfellow that "One of my ancestors ran his sword through the heart of Wat Tyler."

Origin of Lacrosse

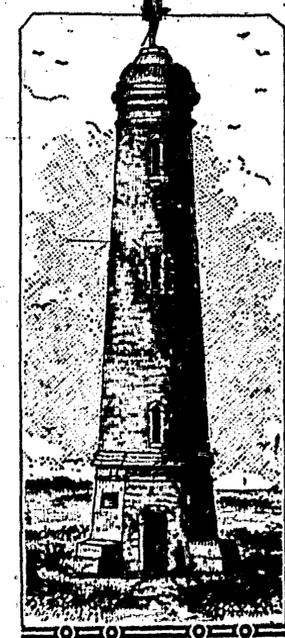

The game of lacrosse can trace its origin to the Algonquin Indians, and its name was first uttered by the Frenchman, Charlevoix, according to Donald W. White, writing in the Sportsman, Boston.

When the explorer was ascending the St. Lawrence he saw the game played by a tribe of Indians near Quebec. The stick used in the game appeared to him to be like a bishop's

UNDERWOOD & UNDERWOOD.

Standish's Grave, South Duxbury, Mass.

Standish Monument on Captain's Hill, Duxbury, Mass.

The association of the name of Duxbury with that of Standish is based upon authenticated copies of deeds of the fourteenth century which show that Ralph de Dokesbury made over his Lancashire estates to his lawyer, Ralph Standish, who took up the mortgages and thereby dispossessed the Dokesbury or Duxbury family. It is significant that one of the later Pilgrim settlements, which became the home of Myles Standish, was named Duxbury. Within the last year the sale of Duxbury hall near Chorley, Lancashire, recalled the fact that in 1816 descendants of Myles Standish in this country subscribed a large amount of money and sent an expert to trade the claim of their ancestor to this estate, of which it has been asserted, he was unjustly deprived when he emigrated from England to America.

In his youth Myles Standish entered the English army and served in the wars on the continent, thus furnishing the authority for Longfellow's having him tell about "the sword of Damascus I fought with in Flanders" and the breastplate which once saved his life from a bullet "fired point-blank at my heart by a Spanish arquebuser." Just how Standish came to join the Pilgrims is not known. He apparently was serving in the Netherlands when the Separatists went there from England, and one historian asserts that the Merchant Adventurers, who financed the Pilgrim emigration to America, expecting them to settle in the region of Virginia, sent Standish as their salaried servant to defend them and teach them to defend themselves. At any rate, Standish joined the Pilgrims at Leyden and sailed with them from Plymouth, England, in the Mayflower on September 16, 1620.

Myles Standish was one of the signers of the Mayflower Compact on November 11, 1620, for the government of the proposed colony, but his military career did not begin until November 21, when the Mayflower was anchored in Cape Cod bay, and the captain with 15 men went ashore. "When they had marched about the space of a mile by the sea side, they espied 5, or 6, persons with a dogg coming towards them, who were salvages." But the Indians "rune up into the woods" and that night Standish and his men camped on the shore "to set out their sentinels." On November 23, sixteen armed men, "everyone his Musket, Sword and Corset. Under the command of Captaine Myles Standish," were sent ashore for a second exploration. They marched through what is now Provincetown, where they saw several Indians, followed their tracks about ten miles and spent the night in the woods. Three more expeditions were sent out later, and on the third near Nauskeket they were surprised by the Indians upon whom Standish fired, but the skirmish was slight.

In February, 1621, Standish was officially made military captain. During that first terrible winter when disease wiped out half of the colony, among them his wife, Rose Standish, who died on January 24, it was to the ministrations of this fiery little fighting man and the gentle Elder Brewster that many of the survivors owed their lives. But he was to prove his worth to the colony in many other ways, and to justify the statement that the "Pilgrims could not have existed without the strong arm of Capt. Myles Standish."

In 1622 the planting of a new settlement at Weymouth angered the Massachusetts Indians, who formed a plot to destroy not only these Englishmen but the members of the Plymouth colony as well. The plot was betrayed by Massasoit and Standish with a force of only eight men marched to the relief of the settlement at Weymouth. Standish enticed the hostile chiefs, Pecksnot and Witwamat, and a half-brother of the latter into a room where the Indians were killed after a desperate fight, marking the first shedding of Indian blood by the Pilgrims. A general battle with the Indians followed but Standish and his men routed the savages. The news of his battle spread terror among the Indians, and as a warning against further depredations, the head of Witwamat was cut off and exposed on a pole in Plymouth.

In 1635 Standish led an unsuccessful expedition against the French who had driven a party of Plymouth men away from Penobscot, Maine. In addition to being the military leader of every exploit of importance in the colony, Standish's counsel was often required in civil affairs. For many years he was treasurer of the colony, and in 1625, when the colony was in trouble with its partners, the Merchant Adventurers, Standish was sent to England to seek relief, bearing a letter from Governor Bradford to the council of New England urging their intervention in behalf of the Pilgrims. On account of the plague in London, however, Standish could accomplish nothing.

After the death of his wife, Rose, the captain married her younger sister, Barbara, and to them were born four sons, Alexander, Myles, Josias and Charles, and a daughter, Lora. In 1632 Standish made his home at Duxbury on Captain's hill. There he died on October 3, 1656. Today a tall monument stands on Captain's hill. On top of it is the statue of a military figure, looking eastward. Its right hand, holding the charter of the colony, is extended toward Plymouth. Its left rests upon a sheathed sword. It is a fitting memorial to Capt. Myles Standish, the first military commander of our country and the protector and savior of the Pilgrim Fathers.

Success in Achievement

The saying, "Nothing succeeds like success" was used in reference to the first operation under ether performed by Dr. John Collins Warren at the Massachusetts General hospital on October 16, 1846.

HOME TRAINING CRIME CURE

By THOMAS C. T. CRAIN, Ex-Judge N. Y. Supreme Court.

THE most effective place to act in prevention of crime is in the home, and preventive measures are most effective when applied to children. Penal statutes are valuable aids in the war on crime when their terms are clear and they are formulated on the basic principles of justice and so in harmony with public conscience that they can be enforced.

But such ordinary and common methods as statutes, police, grand juries and criminal courts, alone can never effect a cure of social ills. We must recognize, just as a doctor does after he prescribes medicine, that directions must be given for rules of life for building up the physical man. Thoughtful men are seeing the need for the betterment of social conditions and recognizing that a change of heart in man is needed in effecting such a change.

In the business of changing men's hearts, it is basic to fix early in the life of a child clarity of thought to determine what is and what is not right.

If the home life of the child is right, parental example will enable him to keep straight with the law. Discord, absence of love and purity in a home, handicap a child. From such a home a child is likely to go to the street corner and there associate with idlers whose career already tends to criminal direction.

In providing right home life, religious training has its place. If a boy can remember seeing his father on bended knee, he remembers his father at his best.

SCHOOLS NEED SPECIALISM

By PROF. JAMES F. HOSIC, Columbia University.

The general teacher of elementary-school education should be supplanted by the specialist. There is no scientific basis for the present custom of assigning forty children to one guide and helper, for a semester or a year, in all classroom activities. The practice evidences tradition, not scientific management. Its validity seems never to have been investigated, although common sense is against it. At home the child enjoys the companionship, care and direction of two parents and often additional relatives. The very fact that every person is individual means that each one of us has something different to contribute to the growing child's experience. The child should not be deprived of these contacts in school.

The distinction between "curricula" and "extra curricula" should not be applied to the modern elementary school program. Art, music, dramatics, cookery, dancing, school publications and other so-called "extra curricula" activities are no longer to be regarded as fads and innovations.

The teachers will constantly join forces in guiding the activities of the pupil, each teacher contributing as she can from her special field. The children will do more than "pursue" courses; they will learn how to live.

SECTARIANISM, GREAT EVIL

By REV. ARTHUR P. S. HYDE, New York.

The evil of sectarianism is responsible for the fact that more than half the population of the United States has no definite religion. When Christians are hopelessly at variance with one another the power to attract is simply not there. The man on the street says, in effect, "When you Christians can agree among yourselves, then it is time to make your appeal to those outside of the fold. Never can your appeal be made convincing under present conditions."

How much more effective it would be for separated bodies of Christians to seek by mutual contacts to understand one another better. Fraternal intercourse, devoid of prejudice and suspicion, would be the first step, perhaps. Then would come conference, seeking first to find agreement to the definition of words, terms and phrases commonly used but at present with widely varying significance. Then when we are agreed as to definitions we are prepared to make the appeal to history, which is not treason, the late Cardinal Manning to the contrary.

FUTURE WARS IMPOSSIBLE

By FRANCIS PATRICK GARVAN, President Chemical Foundation.

Modern chemistry and modern aeronautics have made war impossible. I am convinced that in case of a modern war between great powers it would be foolish and useless for a battleship or cruiser to leave its dock or an army to take the field. The common people of the world as well as the rulers, realize the horrors of war and its tremendous wastage of life and of the means of living.

They are bending every effort to safeguard the peace of the world by treaties and agreements. Should not the terrible powers of chemistry as we know them, and the war messenger, the airplane, on land and on sea, strengthen their hands? Should not the dread possibilities of chemistry support the convictions of the common people that there shall be no war in the future and rule out the politicians and the greedy who are aiming to defeat these high purposes?

WEALTH AND IDEALS CONFLICT

By DR. ALEXANDER MEIKLEJOHN, University of Wisconsin.

We are a newly rich people and we are in serious danger. All agencies of enlightenment are failing because we are rich. Riches and education are in conflict with one another. Material wealth blinds men's eyes. Shall the blind lead the blind?

I would not destroy this new-found wealth. I would destroy confusion it has caused and learn how to use the wealth to make us a truly great nation.

Can we have books which are not written for profit, newspapers untrammelled by influence of money, an art whose only motive is to depict things as they are, a preaching which has neither desire nor need to please, courts of justice whose integrity and impartiality are beyond the shadow of a doubt, institutions of learning which devote themselves to the study of whatever is important for human living and which report their findings with self-respect? I am not sure we can have these things.

FAMILY DOCTOR LEARNED THIS ABOUT CONSTIPATION

Dr. Caldwell loved people. His years of practice convinced him many were ruining their health by careless selection of laxatives. He determined to write a harmless prescription which would get at the cause of constipation, and correct it.

Today, the prescription he wrote in 1885 is the world's most popular laxative! He prescribed a mixture of herbs and other pure ingredients now known as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, in thousands of cases where bad breath, coated tongue, gas, headaches, biliousness and lack of appetite or energy showed the bowels of men, women and children were sluggish. It proved successful in even the most obstinate cases; old folks liked it for it never gripes; children liked its pleasant taste. All drugstores today have Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin in bottles.

Discovery of the Tomb of King Solomon's Favorite Wife.

"Three months ago, Amenatot, father of Mouti Maris, came in good faith to visit me. He brought with him rich gifts, but his heart was full of evil. He secretly desired to dethrone me and take possess of this Holy Land in the name of the King of Egypt. It was for this reason that he strove to bring about my death at the hands of Mouti Maris, by compelling her to tender me poisoned wine to drink."

"We were seated at a table, he and I, alone, for he had succeeded in inducing me to invite him to dine with me, saying that he happily had official secrets to divulge to me.

Although when Mouti Maris entered the room bringing the wine, I noticed that she was exceedingly troubled and quite beside herself, and her face was as white as that of a corpse, still I could not believe that there was treachery.

"She poured the wine in the cups and although I observed that Amenatot did not raise his cup to drink, without the least qualm I took my cup and placed it to my lips.

"Before the wine had reached my lips, Mouti Maris sprang to my side, snatched the cup from me and before I had time to intervene, drank the contents herself, draining it to the last drop.

"Crying out, Amenatot sprang from his chair and dashed from the room headlong. To this day, not again was he seen in my country.

"Mouti Maris made no move for several seconds, while I was as one stunned, and was overcome with consternation. Then without warning, my beloved Mouti Maris was seized violently with a severe convulsion, caused by the poison in the wine she had just imbibed, and was veritably thrown into my arms. There, sinking back against my breast, life departed from her.

"Her lifeless form lying there in my arms brought me to my senses, to the great realization of what had just transpired. My beloved, in devotion to me, and for the welfare of my people had sacrificed herself.

"My enemy, and the enemy of my people, Amenatot, desirous to bring about my death, even resorted to poisoning me; Mouti Maris, his daughter and my beloved wife, to save me, chose to make the supreme sacrifice and imbibed the fatal liquid.

Let there be glory and honor to Mouti Maris throughout eternity!"

The Crystal Theatre was comfortably filled last night to see the program given by the Athletic Association of the Carrizozo High School. Ernie Prehm gave a Spanish dance that made a great hit with the patrons and
