Bury Me in Pink Gandhi's Appeal

The King's Maxim If War Did Come Woman's interest in dress, strong and deep, goes back a million years. She started with a necklace, according to scientists. First an ornament around the neck, then one around the waist, then a skirt and all sorts of things.

A woman in California who murdered a man and killed herself asked to be buried in white satin with yellow roses in her hand.

A well-known actress in New York jumps from a twentieth-story window and makes two requests: first, that she be buried in pink satin; second, that her husband keep away from the funeral.

Beautiful in sincerity and humility is Gandhi's appeal to the British government. "On bended knees, I ask you to ponder this phenomenon"—namely, the "impoverishing of India's dumb millions" by Britain.

Gandhi says, "I do not intend to harm a single Englishman." He will only resist passively.

Very touching, but not the attitude that gains independence, not the attitude of a people ready for independence.

Britain set a different example before the Hindus after the Sepoy rebellion.

The British put murderous rebels inside of cannon and blew them to pieces, knowing that religious superstition would make the punishment most horrible.

No rebellion of consequence since then.

One industry marches on to higher and higher figures. In the cigarette business, prosperity reigns. Every body always has money to buy cigarettes.

When employment is lacking there is leisure to smoke more cigarettes and all feel that they must have them, job or no job.

Last year's production was one hundred and nineteen billion cigarettes almost a thousand cigarettes per year for every man, woman and child in the United States.

One thing most important to all business men in connection with the cigarette industry: Cigarette men are the most aggressive, energetic and continuous advertisers in the nation.

The Standard Oil Company of New Jersey sets an example to other oil concerns, voluntarily reducing its refinery operations by one-seventh.

Refining is a continuous process and must continue seven days a week but only six days' actual work will be done, to prevent overproduction.

And most important part of the good example, men will not be discharged or have their wages cut.

An English clergyman reveals King George's six maxims, all hung up on the walls of his library.

The first is: "Teach me to be obedient to the rules of the game."

Excellent for a constitutional monarch, obeying the will of his people. Rulers of a different kind, Alexander, Caesar, Napoleon, had a different maxim: "See that you obey the rules of the game as I make them."

We do not understand management of prisons, or our criminals are different from other criminals.

Weeks ago, Warden Hoffman of Auburn prison, New York, told a reporter: "We are sitting on a powder keg."

Recently, a convict stabbed the head keeper of the prison to death. He knew that the electric chair, nearby, would inevitably avenge that murder. Nevertheless, he committed it.

General Ely, commanding the second corps area, has a plan to defend New York city in war.

He would "mobilize the civilian services."

If modern war came the civilian services would mobilize themselves. And with them the six million population of New York, as many as survived the first gas and bomb attack would mobilize themselves by scattering through the country, abandoning the city as rats leave a ship when it is sinking.

Mrs. T. W. Cardwell was a week-end visitor at El Paso, going down Saturday and returning Wednesday.

The following is taken from a recent issue of the American Legion, Las Cruces, and concerns the organization of a Legion Post at Corona:

"The first of the 1930 American Legion charters was presented to Beaver-Bond Post No. 35 at a large and enthusiastic meeting on Jan. 29, by Dept. Commander Daniel Vaughan. An interesting program was outlined by Leslie V. Lyng, post commander of Joe Quesenberry Post at Las Cruces, who accompanied the Dept. Commander. Benj. H. Roberts, newly installed post commander, received the charter. Bertrand Penix assumed the office of Adjutant. With 25 members already, the post bids fair to become one of the most active in the state. They will have an auxiliary organized soon; then watch their smoke. More power to them!"

Archie Perkins' Chevrolet Sedan which was stolen from main street Monday night, was recovered a short time later by Jack Kilpatrick and Joaquin Anaya, who had noticed the thief enter the car. The full extent of the damage has not yet been determined. Meanwhile, the fellow, who said he was trying to get to El Paso, is lodged in jail to face a charge for car theft and one for being a deserter from the army.

RADIO RUBE'S R-A-M-B-L-I-N-G-S

How many radio fans in Carrizozo and neighboring towns heard the miracle of the century Tuesday morning? Raise your hands. So far, we have heard of one, who had his alarm set for 5:30, arose and tuned in just in time to hear the speaker, who introduced Adm. Byrd and his followers who had been in the frozen regions near the South Pole, far away from the assistance of other human hands for over one year, during which time, they located new lands and some are of the opinion that they found a race of people heretofore unheard of by the civilized world.

The speaker paid a glowing tribute to the commander and his gallant crew of 42 men, spoke of their achievements in flying over the South Pole, making observations, taking pictures, etc. The distance to the southern coast of New Zealand, where the reception took place is over 8,000 miles from here, as the crow flies, or in other words, in a straight line, so you may well call it a miracle to have heard the program from that distance.

It seemed spooky. The local man heard the conversation between Admiral Byrd and a newspaper representative from Schenectady, New York, heard a message of welcome read from editor Pulitzer of the St. Louis Post Dispatch, the familiar greeting of the press representative, who being an old friend of the navigator, yelled out, "Hello, Dick!" and Byrd's answer came back, "Hello, Jack!" Amid the confusion, it was good to hear the "Star Spangled Banner" played on a foreign shore. All kinds of noises and exclamations were heard and above the din and roar, a lady's voice was heard, shouting: "what a nice looking set of men!" which goes to show that women are much alike, the world over. It was cold at 5:30 that morning, but the reception was worth everything.

The program put on from K V O O station at Tulsa, Okla., Wednesday night by Geo. T. Baum's orchestra was a real treat, and the music from real musicians, playing selections from "The Bohemian Girl," "Mikado," and other meritorious selections, furnished by a professional organization of the best musicians in Tulsa, was a credit to the Musician's Protective Association (American Federation of Musicians) in contrast with the much-abused repetition of phonograph records. It would please us to hear more programs of this nature being broadcast by this excellent orchestra and others from different Musicians' Protective Associations.

Last Saturday night in Washington, D. C., Editor Merle Thorpe of the Nation's Business, was host to two distinguished visitors. Not the President and Vice President, not a pair of Senators, nor two national representatives, but Amos 'n' Andy, the famous radio comedians, and the distinguished guests sat on either side of the editor at a 8 o'clock dinner. Mr. Thorpe said that his guests were in a class to themselves when it comes to a matter of business, hence his object in having them for his guests.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Hoover Asks More Economy in Expenditures—Revolt in Santo Domingo.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD PRESIDENT HOOVER started on the week with a plea to the people of the nation to be moderate in their requests to congress for appropriations for projects in various parts of the country. His aim is to keep governmental expenditures down to a figure so reasonable that an increase in taxes will be avoided. Though this should seem a worthy aim, and in stating it the President carefully made it plain that he was not reflecting on the wisdom of congress, he brought upon himself the wrath of some of the senators, notably Mr. Glass of Virginia.

The appropriations situation was the subject of a White House breakfast conference attended by Republican leaders of both houses of congress, Secretary of the Treasury Mellon, Undersecretary of the Treasury Ogden Mills, Col. J. C. Koop, director of the budget, and Walter H. Newton, one of the President's secretaries.

Mr. Newton issued a statement in which he enumerated proposals for increased expenditures totaling $1,725,000,000, which he said if approved would imply an increase in taxes of 40 per cent. The list, however, included many projects that the congressional leaders had either never heard of or knew would not be given serious consideration. Consequently the imposing list did not appear to frighten them.

Senator Glass, reading Newton's statement in the senate, declared that "nothing more shameful has ever emanated from the White House within my thirty years of service in congress." The President, he said, was setting up a straw man merely for the purpose of knocking him down, since, as every one knew, many bills were introduced at every session of congress only for home consumption and with no idea that they would be enacted into law.

Mr. Hoover, meanwhile, had given out a statement obviously intended to pacify congress. In it he said: "It should be understood that the unprecedented drive now in progress for new legislation and for expansion of established services which increase expenditure beyond the budget, only in a small per cent originates with members of congress or heads of government departments. It originates from different sections of the country itself and from various groups and organizations, each vigorously supporting their own projects. Many of these projects are worthy and no doubt can and should be undertaken some time over future years, especially when funds are free by completion of legislation already adopted." And he urged "the people at home" to realize that the government cannot undertake immediately every worthy project.

IMMEDIATELY after the issuance of the President's economy plea the house adopted a senate resolution appropriating $7,000,000 for loans to farmers in the flood stricken areas of fifteen Southern and Western states, though opponents declared the measure was "pork" and "political pie."

Under the resolution, as adopted, the secretary of agriculture may make advances for the purchase of seed, feed and fertilizer, which banks refuse. Loans in only six states, Alabama, Florida, Georgia, North Carolina, South Carolina and Virginia were authorized under the original senate resolution. The house agriculture committee, however, added Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Minnesota, North Dakota, Montana, and New Mexico and the house itself tacked on Missouri and Oklahoma.

Representative O'Connor of Oklahoma said: "Everybody knows the purpose of this bill is to get congressional votes, but so long as you are getting the pie, Oklahoma wants its piece."

THE Dominican republic was in the throes of a revolution last week. Insurgent forces, determined to keep President Vasquez from running for re-election and to assure the free choice of his successor in May, assembled in various parts of the island and marched on the capital city, Santo Domingo. They entered the city firing volleys in the air and were enthusiastically greeted by the populace. There was no bloodshed as the rebels took possession of all the public buildings. President Vasquez took refuge in the American legation and other administration leaders sought the protection of various foreign consulates. Vice President Alfonso resigned. Charles B. Curtis, the American minister, was acting as intermediary between the insurgents and the government and was trying to bring about an agreement whereby the situation could be solved without bloodshed or damage to property. The insurgent leaders had promised to respect all lives and property and made no changes except in the police force of the city.

John M. Cabot of Massachusetts, a young member of the American embassy staff, was most active as the emissary of Minister Curtis and after a swift trip to Santiago to confer with Rafael Urena, chief of the insurgents, he was hopeful that a peaceful settlement of the whole controversy could be arranged.

In Washington it was said by officials that it probably would not be necessary to send marines to the Dominican republic to protect American lives and property. If they are needed, however, there are plenty within easy reach, and the scouting fleet is now in Caribbean waters.

CAMILLE CHAUTEUPS, Radical Socialist, and his government of France lasted only five days. Then they were denied a vote of confidence by the chamber of deputies and were forced to resign. Chateups told parliament he had no intention of following the radical policies of the left wing, except that taxes would be reduced, but would maintain the line of action which Andre Tardieu, his predecessor, had outlined, including his policy in the naval conference at London. The center refused to believe him, and the left wing was displaced. The vote, which was 232 to 277 against Chateups, showed there is no real majority in the chamber of deputies and that any government can survive only through a coalition of center and left groups.

Raymond Poincare was called by President Doumergue but declined to undertake the formation of a ministry on the ground of ill health. So Tardieu was given the job again and Poincare said he would help him, though he could not accept a place in the cabinet. The expectation was that Tardieu would be able to make up his government in time to resume work in the naval conference by March 5.

IN THE absence of the French delegation the chief delegates of the other nations in the London naval conference resumed their negotiations, and it was reported the Americans, English and Japanese were making notable progress in adjusting their differences. The British official spokesman gave out a communique laying stress on the fact that "the five-power pact is still holding the center of the picture" and adding that "any sort of an agreement reached will be purely tentative, will be dependent on French and Italian acceptance and will also depend upon its inclusion in a five-power treaty."

WHEAT raisers and wheat speculators had a lively time last week. Europe had the idea that the United States and Canada were going to boost the price of wheat, so it obtained its supplies in other markets and cut down its consumption. Then Chairman Legge of the federal farm board made the statement that the board would not support the wheat market as to stabilize the price somewhere near the price its purchasing agency was paying and that it would buy only from co-operatives. This was somewhat dispirited and misunderstood in parts of the country and the result was that non-co-operative wheat was dumped on the market and prices fell sharply. The farm board's funds were then used to purchase large amounts of May and March wheat, this led other buyers into the market and prices rallied considerably.

Mr. Legge, after conferring with President Hoover, issued a statement designed to co-ordinate the farm board's program with the government's efforts to stabilize business generally, and asking the co-operation of the grain trade in restoration of the grain markets. Mr. Legge added significantly that the board will stand firmly on its wheat loan policy and that he is confident its co-operative agencies "will get the loan figure out of their wheat," namely, $1.18 a bushel at Chicago.

PIERRE S. DUPONT, chairman of the board of the E. I. Dupont de Nemours company of Wilmington, N. J., was the star witness of the wets before the house judiciary committee and he and others almost as well known argued strongly for modification of the dry laws. The day before the committee heard W. W. Atterbury, president of the Pennsylvania railroad, who urged that the Volstead act be repealed and authority be delegated to the states to determine for themselves what is intoxicating liquor and whether they should enact legislation to enforce the Eighteenth amendment. He expressed the opinion that "a great advance in the real cause of temperance" would be made by properly regulated manufacture and sale of liquor under state and national supervision, similar to the Canadian and Swedish systems, with these modified to suit conditions peculiar to America.

POLITICS in Wisconsin have reached the hot and kettle stage. Members of the La Follette faction of the Republican party are trying to oust Gov. Walter J. Kohler from office because of alleged violations of the election law, and now the Kohler faction has retaliated. A petition asking for the naming of special counsel to start removal proceedings against Lieut. Gov. Henry A. Huber, Attorney General John W. Reynolds and Secretary of State Theodore Dammann was filed with the governor just before he left for a two weeks vacation in Florida. These three men, who are La Folletteites, are accused of pooling their funds in the late campaign and thus conspiring to bring their slings within the limit of $1,500 each, and of otherwise circumventing the election law. The only constitutional state officer not now under charges is State Treasurer Solomon Levitan.

ROMAN Catholics lost one of its most eminent churchmen in the death of Raphael Cardinal Merry del Val, arch-priest of the basilica of St. Peter's and secretary of the congregation of the holy office, and former papal secretary of state under Pope Pius X. The cardinal, who was a member of a noble Spanish family, passed away after an emergency operation for appendicitis. He was sixty-four years of age. In 1903 and again in 1914 he was urged as a candidate for the papal throne but failed to get the necessary two-thirds vote of the college of cardinals. He was prominently identified with the intransigent party that upheld the church's right for temporal power, and was an opponent of modernism.

Only a few days before the death of Cardinal Merry del Val came that of Carlo Cardinal Perosi. The college of cardinals is thus reduced to 23 Italian and 50 foreigners, there being twelve vacancies.

Other deaths of the week included those of Mabel Norman, screen star; Ahmed Mirza, former shah of Persia; Maj. George H. Putnam, New York publisher, and Eugene Byfield, Chicago hotel man and sportsman.

CHARLES EVANS HUGHES was sworn in as chief justice of the supreme court on Monday, the oath being administered by Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes, the Neoter of the bench.

Among the decisions handed down by the supreme court was one declaring constitutional the provisions of the packers and stock yards act authorizing the secretary of agriculture to prescribe maximum rates for the services of commission dealers at public stock yards. THE DESERT MOON MYSTERY

by KAY CLEAVER STRAHAN

Copyright by Doubleday Doran Co., Inc. VANLERSERVICE

SYNOPSIS

Sam Stanley, wealthy owner of the Desert Moon ranch, informs his housekeeper, Mary Magin, who tells the story...

CHAPTER V

An Insight

"That evening, the second of July, the two girls came down, late, together. Danny was paler than usual, and her face had a drawn, hurt look...

I kept watching her, trying to catch her face in repose, to see if any trace remained of that dreadful expression I had seen in the afternoon.

She put "La Paloma" on the phonograph, and did a Spanish dance, clicking her heels and snapping her fingers until she sounded like a tinny orchestra.

Mrs. Ricker was doing some tattling. As I watched her, I decided that, ears or no ears, she was not the woman I had heard talking that afternoon, up in the cabin.

Mrs. Ricker's fingers darted faster, back and forth.

Danny spoke, from the davenport. "You shouldn't talk like that, Martha, dear. It is wrong."

Her voice sounded as if it ached. She looked, lying in a bundle over there, as miserable as I felt.

"Could I do anything for your headache?" I asked. "Get you some aspirin, maybe."

"No, thank you, Mary." There was so much gratitude in her big dark eyes for nothing but common decency on my part, that I felt downright abashed of myself.

"Danny," I said, straight out, never caring much about mincing words, "I know that something is troubling you. Why don't you tell John, or Sam, or even me about it? Just tell us the truth. We'd all go far to help you, if we could."

Her eyes filled with tears. "Bless your heart, Mary," she said. "Bless all of your hearts. You are all so good, here."

I was enough annoyed with John for coming up right then, to have slapped him. I answered his question for Danny.

"There is plenty you could do for her," I said. "You could shut off that screeching radio, for one thing."

Danny wouldn't hear of John's stopping the racket. Every one was having such a good time. Had was the place for her. She couldn't hear any noise in her room, with the door shut, and all the rest.

her eyes, and her voice when she had said, "bless your heart," had convinced me that there was sincerity behind them, and honesty, and good.

In the black days that followed, when all of us were living in the dark shadows of doubts, and confusions, and fears and suspicious, I was thankful, time and again, for those certainties, for that one fleeting but sure insight into Danny's soul.

The morning of the third was biting hot, with that aching, piercing heat that we have, when we have heat at all, in this high altitude. The sixty-mile trip across the deserts to Telco, on a day, like this, would be exactly the same as a sixty-mile trip through an oven at the right heat for a roast of beef.

Nevertheless, before seven o'clock that morning, every man-jack of a puncher on the place, with all of his trimmings and trappings, including wives, squaws, papooses, children and firearms, had got off in clivers or on horseback, bound for the celebration, leaving the place hole-empty, as Sam said, when he came into my kitchen with a gallon of cream from the dairy.

I pulled the stool out from under the table, perched on it, and remarked, "I'm not going to be surprised if we have another visitor, one of these days. The warden of the penitentiary told me that Daniel Cannizzano was to be released on the morning of the fourth of July."

I dropped into a chair, feeling sort of weakened from the news.

"You mark my words," I said, "all these queer actions around here have something to do with that man's release. I know what I'd do about Cannizzano, if he shows up here."

"Yes, I know. But he is Danny's father, and Danny is going to marry John. After all, money is not much good unless you take it to market. If I could come to a decent agreement with the fellow—and if he'd take that Gaby with him. I'm dead certain that her hanging around here isn't going to contribute any to John's and Danny's married life."

"What do you mean by that, Sam?" Gaby asked the question, walking right into the kitchen. I was all taken aback; but Sam didn't seem to be.

"Eavesdroppers, my girl," he said. "Hear no good of themselves. I mean that I don't think any girl who wanted to act right would treat her sister's betrothed as you treat John."

"You," she said, very slowly, to make insult taste each word, "are a d-d old fool, Sam Stanley."

I shook in my shoes. I had not dreamed that there was a living human being who would dare say that, in that tone of voice, to Sam.

He stood up. He put his hands on her shoulders, gently, though, and turned her around.

"You are a bad, wayward girl," he said. "March out of here, now, and get your manners mended before I see you again."

He sobered even her, for a minute. She walked to the door, without another word. There, she whirled around like a crazy thing, and I declare to goodness, I don't know what she said. It was the sort of talking I had never heard in my life; my ears were not enough accustomed to the words to take in their meanings.

But one thing that she kept screaming, screaming so loudly that she could be heard all over the place, was that Sam had threatened her once too often. Sam stood there, paralyzed, I think, as I was, for perhaps a couple of minutes, before he turned and walked off, into the backyard.

own hands, I do not know. A man can give his life. That is what Chad gave.

After dinner John surprised us all by saying that he was going to take the sedan and drive down to Baitall for the mail.

I susploned, right then, that he was up to something. He could not fool me into thinking that he would take a fifty-mile trip—twenty-five miles each way—through the desert heat for no other reason than to get the mail. When Danny seemed hurt and troubled about him going, and when he went riding right off, anyway, I decided that Sam must have sent him, expecting some word concerning Cannizzano. I was wrong.

It was too tartarion hot to do anything but try to keep cool. I stacked the dinner dishes, to wash in the evening, and joined the others, sitting around in the living room with the electric fans going full blast.

I was expecting, every minute, to see Gaby break out again. She didn't. She yawned around, and fussed about, and then went and sat beside Danny, who was looking at the pictures in a magazine, and put her arm around her, and patted her up a little—a most unusual performance for her.

When Chad, who had been monkeying with the radio, got a rip-roaring patriotic program from Salt Lake, the two girls went upstairs together.

A few minutes later I had an errand upstairs—a real one, I wouldn't have taken myself up in that heat to satisfy my curiosity—so, out of habit,

She Whirled Around Like a Crazy Thing.

I stopped at Gaby's door to listen. I heard the girls giggling in there; and, knowing no great harm is afoot when girls giggle, I went on, got my scrap of pongee silk to mend Sam's shirt, and came downstairs again.

Sam and Hubert Hand were deep in a chess game. Mrs. Ricker was tattling. Chad and Martha were playing dots and crosses.

The radio program had just that minute stopped. Martha, who when she didn't forget it, usually fed her rabbits about that time of day, had gone out to do it. Gaby came downstairs, humming a tune.

She had on the tomato soup colored wrap that she had worn on the train, and the hat to match the wrap. She was carrying a beaded bag. She never dressed up like that, to go walking around the place; a wrap, even such a light one, in the heat of that day, was downright ridiculous.

Chad said, "All dressed up and no place to go?"

She tossed her head at him, and hurried straight down the room and out through the glass doors. Chad followed her. They stopped together on the porch. She stood with her back to me. Chad faced me. In a minute, I saw his mouth bend up into a grin of bliss. Nothing would have surprised me more. For this reason.

As that girl had walked through the room, I had seen that she walked in mortal fear, in spite of her humming, in spite of her attempted swagger, fear was in her widened eyes, in her drawn-in chin, in the contraction of her shoulders. Wherever it was that she was going, she was afraid to go. But where could she go? John had the sedan. Except for the trucks, which she couldn't drive, and her pony—which she surely would not be dressed like that to ride horseback—there was no way for her to get off the place. It must be, then, that someone was coming to the place, and that she was going out alone to meet them. Who? Cannizzano? Not unless Sam had been mistaken about the time when he was to be released from prison. Usually, when people think at all, they think quickly. All this had gone through my mind while she had walked the forty feet to the door.

Gaby and Chad stood on the porch talking for two or three minutes—a very short time, at any rate. Then she went down the steps, and Chad, still smiling, came back into the room. As he came in, Danny called down from the top of the stairway. "Gaby—oh, Gaby?"

She knows where Gaby is going, and whom she is going to meet, and she, too, is afraid, I decided, because of the queer, strained quality of her voice.

"Gaby has gone out," I called, in answer. And then, since I could still see Gaby, walking down the path, "Do you want her, Danny? We could fetch her back."

I had to reverse my first decision about Danny's being frightened. At least, her voice was natural enough, now; I fancied, perhaps, a note of relief in it.

It couldn't have been more than ten minutes after that, when Martha came running into the house, laughing and dancing, and wearing the gold bracelet with the monkey clasp. Gaby, she said, had given it to her, just now, out by the rabbit hutch.

While we were all still exclaiming over the monkey, and praising it up, to please Martha, Danny came downstairs. She said her headache was worse again, and she drew the curtains at the windows beside the big davenport, to ease the glare of the light, before she curled up on it.

"Do you know where Gaby was going this afternoon?" I asked her.

"For a little walk."

"Why did she wear her wrap, and carry her beaded bag, just to go out for a little walk?"

Danny sat up straight, pressing her hands to her aching head. "Her wrap—today? Her beaded bag? Surely not."

"That's just what she did. Didn't you see her before she left?"

"I was lying down. She came to my door and said that she was going for a walk, and asked me if I cared to go with her. I said that my headache was too severe. She went into her room, and from there downstairs. I felt guilty about refusing to go with her, after our talk. I thought that I should; so I called after her. But, when you said she had gone, I was afraid she would be annoyed at being called back. I had gotten up; so, since John will surely be home before long, now, I came down. I can't understand her wearing a wrap. It is so silly, on a day like this."

It sounded all right, but I was not quite satisfied.

"Gaby was frightened," I said. "Something was the matter with her when she walked through the room. I'll go bond that, wherever it was she was going, she was afraid to go."

"Mary, it must be that you are imagining this. Unless—Oh, it couldn't be that Gaby has not told me the truth about—about anything. I am sure she was honest with me this afternoon. I am sure—And yet—Dear me, I wonder where she went for her walk?"

"Gaby told me," Martha piped up, from where she was sitting on the arm of Sam's chair, "that she was going to the cabin. She was in a big hurry. She ran."

"Up toward the cabin?" Danny questioned, though we all knew we could not put a mite of trust in anything Martha said.

"Yes. Chad loves me better'n he loves her. Don't you, Chad?"

"You are positive," Danny insisted, and I couldn't see why, for a minute. "That she went to the cabin, or toward it? Are you sure that she didn't go around the house toward the road?"

When she asked about the road, her meaning was clear to me. Danny was afraid that Gaby had gone to meet John, who should have been back from Baitall before this.

"She told me she was going to the cabin," Martha answered. "She ran. She was in a hurry."

Danny stood up. "I think I shall walk up to the cabin and see whether I can find her. You'll come with me, Mary?"

I said not in the heat. She asked Mrs. Ricker to go with her. Mrs. Ricker refused. I wondered why, when neither of us would go, Danny did not go by herself. She did not. Had she, perhaps, guessed at the cause of Gaby's fear? Did she share it? Was she afraid to go to the cabin alone?

CHAPTER VI

Murder and Suicide

At five o'clock the men put up the chessboard. Chad stopped playing the piano, and the three of them went to the barns together.

I went into the kitchen to get supper. Danny, in spite of her headache, insisted upon helping me.

At six o'clock, though neither John nor Gaby had returned, we sat down to supper. Danny was too nervous to touch a bit of food. She kept looking out of the windows, and at her watch, and out of the windows again.

"Don't worry, Danny," Sam said. "John has had his trouble, on account of the heat. They'll come riding up the road any minute now."

"They?" she questioned.

"Gaby toggled up and went down the road to meet John, didn't she?"

"No." Danny's voice curled into a snarl. "No, Uncle Sam, she didn't. Martha saw her going to the cabin. Didn't you, Martha?"

"Martha," Mrs. Ricker astonished us all by saying, "doesn't know where Gaby went. She knows only where Gaby told her she was going."

"But why should Gaby tell her a fib about it?" Danny asked.

"And why?" I questioned, "should Gaby go around the house to get to the road, instead of going right out the front way?"

Again Mrs. Ricker shocked us by speaking. "She would not go out the front way, if she wanted to keep her trip to the road a secret."

"Mrs. Ricker," Danny's voice trembled. "What are you hinting? What is it that you know?"

"I know," said Mrs. Ricker, "that there is not a man living who is not as false as sin."

Sam growled, "Come down to facts, Mrs. Ricker, if you have any."

"I have no facts," she said, "except, that right after dinner today John and Gaby had a private conversation, and he decided, very suddenly, to go for the mail."

At that minute we heard a sound for some cars—the car coming up the driveway. Danny jumped up and ran to look out of the living room window. "He has gone all the way around to the kitchen," she said, when she came back.

She ran into the kitchen. She and John came to the door of the butler's pantry. John was gray with dust. His brows were knitted, as they are whenever he is troubled about anything.

"He hasn't seen Gaby," Danny announced, with an exultation that showed plainly what she had been most anxious about. "He brought up the rock salt. That's why he drove to the kitchen. Come and see, Mary?"

"I'd rather see you two come and eat your supper," I said.

"Good night!" John answered. "I've got to go and get rid of a few tons of dirt before I can come to the table."

"No," Danny insisted. "Never mind the dirt, dear. Supper is all cold now. Please come and eat—"

John patted her on the shoulder, and smiled at her, and, manlike, did as he pleased. He went through the kitchen and upstairs the back way, Danny called after him, asking him to hurry. He didn't.

This Mother Had Problem

As a rule, milk is about the best food for children, but there are times when they are much better off without it. It should always be left off when children show by feverish, fretful or cross spells, by bad breath, coated tongue, yellow skin, indigestion, biliousness, etc., that their stomach and bowels are out of order.

In cases like this, California Fig Syrup never fails to work wonders, by the quick and gentle way it removes all the souring waste which is causing the trouble, regulates the stomach and bowels and gives these organs tone and strength so they continue to act normally of their own accord. Children love its rich, fruity flavor and it's purely vegetable and harmless, even for babies.

Railroaders Strong in Use of Colorful Terms

A brakeman is telling a story of the rails: "Before we leave I take a run up to the callpipe to match watches with the hoghead and find a student tallow pot in the cab, taking orders from the bakehead and spadin' diamonds with his feet together." Substituted locomotive for "callpipe," engineer for "hoghead," apprentice fireman for "student tallow pot," fireman for "bakehead," coal for "diamonds" and it all becomes quite intelligible, says the Bookman. The railroad man has not one but several colorful terms for the men and things that enter into his day's work.

also the "callpipe" and the "boiler." A switch engine, which butts cars about the yards, is the "goat." The engineer is "hoghead," "hogger" and "well head." The fireman is "bakehead." "A snake" is a yard switchman and a "stinger" is a brakeman, while the yardmaster answers to "dinger." A "drag" is a slow freight and the caboose, reasonably enough, is the "crummy."

EDITORIAL COLUMN

William Howard Taft

Among the great statesmen of our country, who have passed the great beyond, another name will be added and in the gallery of national fame, his portrait will have its distinguished place of honor. His remains will occupy an important spot in the Arington National cemetery where others of national fame have found last resting places.

His greatness has not been attributed to his country as a politician, a man of war achievements, an explorer, courageous hero, as others who have rightful titles along these lines, but his greatness was along other channels. While President of the United States for one term, nothing aside from strict attention to the nation's good and welfare was experienced to place him in the limelight, but his great heart of human kindness, his liberal charity, his ardent love for his family and many other traits of true manhood, with no desire to be applauded for the same, won for him the love and admiration of his fellow countrymen. In short, he was an ideal example for the head of the great American home.

He was not warlike, but loved peace. He was not a politician, but a reasoner. After Ex-President Theodore Roosevelt, who was the real cause of Mr. Taft's election to the Presidency, after wards turned against him, ran on the Bull Moose ticket, broke the Republican chain and caused Taft to be defeated, met him in a Chicago hotel, Mr. Taft walked up, extended his hand and said:
"Hello, Theodore." He was met with an answer, "Hello, Will," but it must be remembered that it was Taft, the man who suffered the most from the bitter experience in that election, who first offered his hand as a token of forgiveness.

Taft did not rise from poverty as some of our great men have done, but to the contrary, he came from a wealthy family in Cincinnati and during his lifetime, knew nothing of the hardships of the world, except where he heard and saw these conditions and it may be readily said that a part of his means went to help people less fortunate than himself, which in itself was pure Christianity. His sense of humor was much like the immortal Lincoln, in minimizing himself, as may be seen by a remark he made on his inauguration day in Washington. There was a raging blizzard prevailing on that day, which prevented him from delivering his inaugural address in the open air, to thousands who waited, but he made his appearance for a short time, but being driven back to the Senate Chamber by the blinding storm, he pronounced his inaugural address with the remark, "I always said that it would be a cold day when I was made President." At all functions at the White House and with all help available, he would insist on doing as much of the serving as possible, and would say that he wanted the President could be on such occasions.

With all other nations except ours, only those who have reached the topmost pinnacle of fame from victories in war, explorations and who have proved themselves heroes in various ways, are noteworthy and occupy places in halls of fame, but in this country, while giving all credit due to our heroes in war, aviation and exploration, the fact remains that our public men who have proved their greatness by 11 years of sacrifice and on the whole, by doing good, which is the height of true American greatness.

Dr. Cook is Free

Last Sunday, Dr. Cook, explorer, at one time, world-famed as the first discoverer of the North Pole, afterwards being declined the title and humiliated in the eyes of the world, after which he drifted into the oil game in Texas, where he was industed and convicted for using the mails to defraud, was paroled on a warrant from the department of justice at Washington after serving five years and nine months in the Leavenworth penitentiary. Doc Cook still has many friends in this country who are still of the opinion that he was the first discoverer of the North Pole and that the honor was taken away from him in order to crown Admiral Perry and the Navy with distinction and honor. It is a well-known fact that he endured the hardships of that cold region and penetrated a zone to this coveted spot and they claim that according to his lack of supplies and backing, compared with what Perry had,
and going so far and braving the dangers alone, he was entitled to the credit, as much so as was Perry. In these days of honor-grabbing, there may be some room for their claims, at least, someone and it may be that they both, struck the world just behind the right ear.—Who knows and who cares if we believe that Byrd flew over it.

The above picture shows a sectional view of Samson
"Oil-Rite" Windmill illustrating principle of Pump, also location of Four Timken Roller Bearings

The AUTOMATIC OILING SYSTEM and lubrication of the various parts is accomplished as follows: The oil is poured in to the gear case, which submerges the lower part of the double gears, including the wrist pins when at the bottom of stroke.
The rotation of the gears carries the oil up and floods the pistoms, and the oil running down over the inside of the gears feeds the gear shaft. The trough which is part of the hub of wheel head, maintains a level that submerges the lower part of both front and rear Timken bearings, and the surplus oil is returned to the gear case through a passage in the main frame extension. A felt oil retaining washer and paper gasket prevent any oil from working out around the wheel shaft.

AUXILIARY OIL PUMP

One of the outstanding features of the SAMSON "OIL-RITE" is the extreme simplicity, efficiency, and practicality of the pump.

The main frame on the Oil-Rite mill forms a reservoir that holds a sufficient amount of oil to lubricate the mill for one year. A sheet metal helmet completely encloses the reservoir and covers all working parts thus eliminating waste and making it dirt, rain, sleet and snow proof. No water can get in to flood the oil, no dust can blow in to grind out the bearings.
This construction prevents squeaks, rattles and gear howling brought about by insufficient lubrication, all of which is avoided in the automatically oiled "OIL-RITE" mill. The ball bearing turn table, the constant supply of oil always flooding the moving parts and the Timken roller bearings insure the owner the "OIL-RITE" mill will pump water in the slightest freeze.

Lesson for March 16

THE PARABLES OF THE KINGDOM

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 13:24-52.
GOLDEN TEXT—The kingdom of God is not meat and drink, but righteousness and peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost.
PRIMARY TOPIC—The Whole World for Jesus.
JUNIOR TOPIC—The World for Christ.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—What Our Religion Means to Us.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—What Christianity Means to the World.

The things set forth in these parables only apply to the church in the measure that they permeate that body by virtue of its being formed within this period. It should be observed that they set forth the "mysteries" of the kingdom.

- I. The Wheat and Tares (vv. 24-50, cf. 30-43).
1. The sowers. The sower of the good seed is the Son of Man (v. 37), and the sower of the tares is the devil (v. 39).
2. The growing crops (v. 28).
There is a striking resemblance in the growing crops. The chief peril of the devil is that he transforms himself into an angel of light (II Cor. 11:14, 15).
3. The harvest (v. 30).
There comes a time when the fruit of the crop shall be gathered. The separation is made by the angels under the direction of the Son of Man. For the tares there is a furnace of fire. For the wheat there is the Lord's garner.

II. The Mustard Seed (vv. 31, 32).

- 1. Its unimportant beginning (v. 31).
It begins as the least of all seeds. Not only was Christ, the King, of humble parentage, but His disciples were unlettered fishermen. Likewise, through the centuries, not many wise and not many noble have been called.
- 2. Its vigorous growth (v. 32).
Though small in its inception, the work inaugurated by Christ has become mighty in power.
- 3. Its lodging capacity (v. 32).
The birds which find lodgment in the tree do not represent the children of men who find safety and salvation in the church, but the predatory beings who have found shelter in the church, though they are no part of it.

III. The Leavened Meal (v. 33).

- 1. The meal in Scripture means something nutritious and wholesome. It was used in one of the sweetest and most precious offerings which typified Christ (Lev. 2:1-3 R. V.).
2. The woman.
The woman is the administrator of the home. Her responsibility is to take the bread provided by the head of the home and prepare and distribute it to the children. It means then that the woman, the administrator, has introduced false doctrine and thus corrupted the children's bread.
- 3. The leaven.
In Scripture, leaven is invariably a type of evil (Ex. 12:15; Matt. 13:12; I Cor. 5:6-8; Gal. 5:8, 9). It means that in this age the truth of God would be corrupted by worldliness and unbelief.

IV. The Hid Treasure (v. 44).

- 1. The field (v. 39). Christ's own interpretation makes this the world.
- 2. The treasure. The treasure means Israel (Ps. 135:4, Deut. 7:8).
- 3. The purchaser. No one but the Son of God had sufficient resources to buy the world (John 3:16).
- 4. The purchase price. This was the precious blood of Jesus Christ, God's beloved Son (I Pet. 1:13, 19).
- 5. The merchantman seeking pearls (vv. 45, 46).
The merchantman is Christ. The Son of Man has come to seek and save that which was lost (Luke 19:10).

V. The Merchantman Seeking Pearls (vv. 45, 46).

- 1. The purchase price. Christ impoverished Himself (Phil. 2:6-8) to purchase the one pearl of great price (Eph. 5:25).
- 2. The pearl of great price. This is the church (Col. 1:18).
- 3. The dragnet (vv. 47-50).
1. The sea. The sea in Scripture denotes peoples or multitudes (Dan. 7:3; Rev. 17:15).
- 2. The dragnet. The dragnet cast into the sea means the sowing of the seed by the Son of Man.
- 3. The dragnet drawn to the shore when full means that when God's purpose for the present age is full, account will be taken of the results.
- 4. The separation made by the angels. This will take place at the end of the age.
- 5. The destiny of the bad fish. The angels shall sever the wicked from among the just, and shall cast them into the furnace of fire where there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth.

Seeing Big League BASEBALL

By BILLY EVANS
Sportswriter, Big League Umpire and General Manager of the Cleveland Indians

During the 22 years I spent in the majors, I experienced many a thrill, but if you asked me the greatest one of my career, I would say it happened in the opening game of the 1929 season. It concerned the debut of Earl Averill. He was the young man I was banking on to fill Tris Speaker's shoes and be a most important cog in the effort to make the Indians over from a seventh place club to a first division possibility.

After purchasing Averill from the San Francisco club, the youngster had a disagreement with that team over his share of the purchase price. The two couldn't get together and, since I had $45,000 invested in Averill, I decided it was wise for me to make a hurried trip to the coast and see if I couldn't help iron out the difficulties. I arranged to do so and decided to personally chaperon Averill from Los Angeles to our training camp, so as to be sure he would report on time.

On the long trip from Los Angeles to New Orleans I was thrown into close contact with Averill, and in those three days had a better insight as to his temperament than could have been gleaned in a year through merely occasional contact. It was apparent to me that Averill didn't worry, that he wasn't in the least fussed by his graduation into the big league ranks, that he had confidence in his ability to hit, and that there wasn't a doubt in his mind but that he could play center field to the satisfaction of Manager Peckinpaugh, myself and the Cleveland public. In his quiet manner, Averill made me certain that he had a great chance to deliver when he made a chance remark something like this: "I suppose if I should hit .350 for Cleveland I would get a substantial raise in 1929."

"You certainly would," I replied, "but don't worry on that score, because you are not going to hit .350." "Maybe not, but I'll wager a couple of suits of clothes with you that I finish .320 or better."

"If you can do that, you will make me look like a smart guy in buying you, also .320 will be enough to get the substantial raise you are talking about. You can buy yourself a couple of suits with my compliments out of that." That one speech of Averill's impressed. It wasn't conceit, nor ego, but simply sublime confidence in himself. He more than made good on that .320 speech. His batting average in his first year in the majors was .331. He made 16 homers, more than any Cleveland player has ever made.

But to get back to my greatest thrill, Averill came to the American league well press agented. In spring training he had shown flashes of the great ability that made him an outstanding star on the coast. The critics said he would step right into the picture and deliver. That Cleveland fans would pronounce him almost as good as Speaker, that some might like him as well, or even better.

When Averill stepped to the plate for the first time in the majors, it was at Dunn field, in Cleveland, with Detroit as the opposing team and Earl Whitehall, one of the best southpaws in the game, as the rival pitcher. It was no soft spot for a left hander. Averill walked to the plate with the nonchalant stride that is characteristic of him, stepped into the batter's box with his bat at once bat, the least faint in baseball, resting seemingly lightly on his shoulder. Whitehall wound up to deliver the ball and still Averill didn't seem very much interested. As it neared the plate, he began his rhythmic swing. It was anything but a "Bushman" effort, but the swing was perfect. The ball sailed far over the right field wall for a home run. It was the biggest thrill of my career, for never did I want anyone to make a suspicious start more than I did Averill. He made good on the pitch with the Cleveland fans.

Drink Water to Help Wash Out Kidney Poison

If Your Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers You, Begin Taking Salts

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys and irritate the entire urinary tract. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean, by flushing them with a mild, harmless salt which helps to remove the body's urinous waste and stimulates them to their normal activity. The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In 24 hours they strain from it 500 grains of acid and waste, so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active.

Drink lots of good water—you can't drink too much; also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help clean and stimulate clogged kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in the system so they are no longer a source of irritation, thus often relieving bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink, which everyone should take now and then to help keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this; also keep up the water drinking, and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and backache.

TAKE IT FROM DAD By Frank H. Clesley

Fathers and Sons as Pals

"Dad, what's the matter—are we so different from other people in the way we live and do things?"

Every now and then I hit a snag that sets me just wondering. Last week at school I was made chairman of the committee to arrange for the annual father and son get-together. I got the gang together and told them I was counting on them to be present and they just laughed at me and razzed me terribly and told me I might become cheer leader but that if I thought that I could drag them out to a dad's party I was plumb goofy. Why more than half of that bunch don't want a father and son banquet. They talk about the 'Old Gent,' the 'Governor,' and the 'Boss'—why I never think of you that way at all. We had an awfully good time last year and the year before and last Saturday the guys made all sorts of fun of me because I said I'd rather go to the football game with you than with the gang. Jimmy Craig said, 'Why do you want to always be dragging him around for, aren't you ever going to grow up?' Now why is it, Dad, that some fathers and sons pal together and others do not?"

"I've thought of that very thing myself, Bob, a very great deal, long before you did, kid. Did it ever occur to you that the fine understanding, congenial friendship which we enjoy and have these many years didn't just happen?"

"Why no, Dad, what do you mean?" "Why, I mean, my boy, that sympathy and understanding between folks, that mutual regard of one person for another, even of father for son or son for father never just happens. It has to grow and develop and be carefully cultivated. Fine fellowship between folks is the result of constantly doing things together. Why do you especially like Henry and Chub? Why because you are constantly doing interesting things together. If Henry and Chub just came here week in and week out and sat around you'd soon get tired of one another or even irritable with one another."

"It is a strange and pathetic thing, Bob, that so few fathers, wise and capable in their business and professions, have never discovered that simple fact. There are thousands of dads who while they provide food and clothes and home and school and cash for growing boys, never know them as we know each other because they never do anything together except criticize each other.

"All these years that you have been growing along I've planned things for us to do together Saturdays, Sundays and holidays. We've grown up together in a natural way. I have come to understand and appreciate you and have great dreams for you. You have never been afraid of me; have had confidence in my judgment and have played ball with me in our plans for home and Mother in a way which brings me very great personal satisfaction and, Son, it is because there is no false modesty between us that we have always been able to talk things over freely and frankly.

"I hope with all my heart that nothing will ever happen to destroy that fine fellowship. In no way at all have I sought to dominate you or make your decisions for you. Always have I given you all the liberty you could stand, and sometimes more, in my efforts to have you become a self-propelled individual. It tickles me to death to see you step into responsibility and know that you are ambitious to do something and be something beyond the ordinary, and beyond what your Dad has been able to accomplish.

"Bob, every real dad who is working at the dad business is eager and anxious to be a pal to his boy. Many times he does not know how and many times the son makes it doubly difficult. The dad of one of your pals told me one of the other day that he constantly had to deal with his son 'with gloves on,' he was so touchy. Thank goodness we get on as men to man. I'm sure you need my older judgment and encouragement and expectancy and I know I need your pep and enthusiasm and boundless energy.

"It's mighty difficult in the modern mad race for money and things to take time to live a bit with our children. We haven't got as much worldly goods as some of our neighbors; our car is of a more modest make and we don't 'belong' as much as some we know, but, boy, we have each other in mutual regard and all the money in the city couldn't buy that from either of us. Let's keep on doing things together.

"Boy, I want to make that Canadian canoe trip with you—I want to hunt a little big game in Alaska with you. I want to take some extension courses while you are in college. I want to help you build that first home of yours. Yes, Bob, I want to help you raise a son that will bring you as much joy as you have brought me. So, let's shake again. That's it! What do we care what the gang says. When is this Father and Son banquet to be? I believe I could almost make a speech!"

HIGHER SALARIES FOR CLERGY

By DR. C. G. CAMPBELL, President Eugenic Research Association

CLERGYMEN have superior children and any proposal to increase the size of their families is promising eugenics! There must be a gradual deterioration in the general quality of racial stock unless remedies are adopted. It would be wise to increase clergymen's salaries for the proper rearing of such progeny. This contains the greatest promise of sustaining and increasing our most valuable racial stock.

With the continuance of present conditions of family limitation, a steady diminution in the proportionate ratio of the superior racial stocks from which leaders arise, and the gradual deterioration of their general quality and ability, is about as mathematically certain a prediction as could be made of future racial conditions.

The sole means of forestalling such a racial misfortune is by the increase of offspring in this superior racial stock, or positive eugenics.

We know from reliable factual data that the best quality of leaders rises, and rises in the greatest frequency, from the progeny of the clergy. Knowing these facts, it should not be difficult for us to see that any aid given to such a project would go to secure greater and more enduring human benefits than any other effort we could support.

This is a project which should strongly appeal to every individual who is racially minded. And it would seem particularly fitting that it should receive the ardent support of the sons and other descendants of the clergy.

CHURCH MUST KEEP STEP

By H. AUGUSTINE SMITH, Boston University

Religion in a machine age must keep abreast of progress. As man has grown wings and soared to the sky in airplanes—so religion has outgrown its tendencies of yesterday.

Hymns which delighted the congregations of our fathers and mothers today lull us to sleep. A new era of hymns is coming. The hymn of tomorrow will deal with aviation, the transmission of power, the creation of new, unknown wells of energy.

The early Crusaders went into the Orient to discover great wealth. They brought back from their oriental excursions tapestries, perfumes and ideas of grandeur. These they incorporated into that period, which became known as the Renaissance, and art took its place in religion.

Today, youth is upon a second crusade. A crusade in quest of youth, drama, beauty. The tingling things in life! It is thus that the church will keep step with the machine age and progress.

Yesterday the Crusader went to the Far East and songs of adventure were sung of him. Today, the Crusader goes up in his plane. We should have hymns dedicated to Commander Byrd and Colonel Lindbergh.

JUSTICE FOR JEW DEMANDED

By RABBI STEPHEN S. WISE, New York

The "silent pogroms" are the feeling of anti-Judaism. They have resulted in the barring of Jews from certain banks, clubs and industries by overzealous Christians. The Jew who believes it a splendid thing to damn his own people and voice the feelings of his own race's persecutors deserves the strongest condemnation.

Missionaries working in Jewish fields are to be decried, for we do not sit in darkness—at least we do not think we do. If I were a Christian I should feel ashamed of the reaction of so much of the so-called Christian world to the anti-Jewish deeds wrought in Palestine a few months ago, even though this reaction be abetted or half-justified by the self-betrayal of a few outstanding Jews. The truth is that Christendom for the largest part has given its sympathy and good will to those who have warred against the Jews in Palestine rather than to the Jews who have been warred upon.

A terrible anti-Jewish ill will has been revealed by individual groups and journals, which have borne themselves as if Jews were ruthless invaders and despoilers of Palestine and slayers of its people.

PATRIOTS MUST LOOK FORWARD

By REV. HENRY DARLINGTON (Episcopal), New York

Unless they look forward, instead of backward, patriotic societies may prove to be one of the most pernicious evils a forward looking America may have to contend with. The permanent future of our country today depends upon what you and I do in the generation in which we live, more than upon what was done by our ancestors from which we are benefiting at the present time.

If you have a vision of the future and are willing to act as your progenitors would have acted had they been alive today, you can do untold good. But if your eyes are set on the past and your thoughts dwell only upon what has been done, patriotic societies may then prove to be one of the most pernicious evils that a forward looking America may have to contend with. The times are charged with infinite possibilities for those who have the courage and vision.

The farewell address of Gen. Jan Christian Smuts, the South African statesman, convinced me that the great opportunity for this young country is to lead in a new era into paths of peace, and that it is the youth of the country who should assume leadership and, seeing the vision, carry on the torch.

FEW ABLE TO HANDLE MONEY

By DR. S. S. HUESNER, University of Pennsylvania

Ninety-eight people out of every hundred are "financially incompetent." Man has two great economic disabilities. One is his inability to continue his life; the other his inability to continue his substance.

Only one out of ten men at sixty-five has enough money to assure him an income of even $50 a month.

Only one out of three men who are healthy at thirty dies before he reaches sixty. The burden of support of the others usually falls on the children. This is terrible philosophy. Each generation should take care of itself.

For COLDS

We all catch colds and they can make us miserable; but yours needn't last long if you will do this: Take two or three tablets of Bayer Aspirin just as soon as possible after a cold starts. Stay in the house if you can—keep warm. Repeat with another tablet or two of Bayer Aspirin every three or four hours, if those symptoms of cold persist. Take a good laxative when you retire, and keep bowels open. If throat is sore, dissolve three tablets in a quarter-glassful of water and gargle. This soothes inflammation and reduces infection. There is nothing like Bayer Aspirin for a cold, or sore throat. And it relieves aches and pains almost instantly. The genuine tablets, marked Bayer, are absolutely harmless to the heart.

Fliers Say Courage Varies with the Way they Feel

AEROPLANE pilots tell us that their courage, their whole attitude toward flying, varies from day to day, with the way they feel. If they feel full of pep, healthy, they can try anything—nothing frightens them. Their nerve is unshaken; their skill keeps their flying in machine-like in its perfection.

This is the lesson we can learn from airmen. It is the lesson that points to Nujol—the simple, natural, normal way—without the use of drugs or medicaments to keep the body internally clean of the poisons that slow it up. Nujol is pure, tasteless, colorless as clear water. It forms no habit; it cannot hurt even a baby.

It is an entirely different story, however, if they wake up in the morning feeling sick, down in the mouth. Then flying becomes a real danger.

What is the matter with these brave people when they are not up to par? The natural poisons in their bodies have not been swept away. They are allowing their brains to be clouded and dulled by poisons which should not be permitted to remain in the body.

HAS THE LAXATIVE IN YOUR HOME A DOCTOR'S APPROVAL?

Some things people do to help the bowels whenever any bad breath, feverishness, biliousness, or a lack of appetite warn of constipation, really weaken these organs. Only a doctor knows what will cleanse the system without harm. That is why the laxative in your home should have the approval of a family doctor.

The wonderful product, known to millions as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a family doctor's prescription for sluggish bowels. It never varies from the original prescription which Dr. Caldwell wrote thousands of times in many years of practice, and proved safe and reliable for men, women and children. It is made from herbs and other pure ingredients, so it is pleasant-tasting, and can form no habit. You can buy this popular laxative from all drugstores.

Around the Court House Yard

many improvements are noticeable. Jailer Sam Farmer has had the force of prisoners of the jail engaged in leveling and seeding the lawn and last of all, he has had the banks of dirt that was piled along the edge of the ditches removed and the same scattered over the street, making that thoroughfare nice and level.

When the ditches were dug a few years ago, the dirt was thrown out there and remained in a long pile entirely around the yard, but now since it has been removed and scattered over the streets, the unsightly hills are gone and the place looks much better.
