

LOCAL MENTION

Mrs. F. L. Skinner and daughter of Nogal, Mrs. Sam Cox of Fort Stanton, were here Monday, doing some shopping and returning to Nogal in the afternoon.

John Fageros was here from Ancho last week and said that they had been visited by a nice rainfall in that locality lately. John was here to file his papers for the intention to make final proof on his homestead.

Mr. and Mrs. John Dale and son Elmo of Ancho, were Carrizozo visitors from their ranch near Ancho on Monday of this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Johnny Jordan will leave in about one week for Lubbock, Texas, where they will visit with relatives, after which Mrs. Jordan and the baby will go on to visit Mrs. Jordan's parents in another part of the state and Johnny will return to his duties with the New Mexico Light & Power Company.

McDonald's Music-Mixers were here Tuesday and this year the orchestra is augmented by several new members.

This orchestra well billed the town for a big 10-day event at Ruidoso, Aug. 9-18, in which period, there will be a continual round of merriment. It is to be an old-fashioned, wild west affair, attended by everything in the way of re-production of the olden days. Ruidoso is so close to Carrizozo that many should attend at least some of the time during the 10 days. The event will be sponsored by the Ruidoso C. of C., with the co-operation of McDonald's Music-Mixers. Read the bills and see what is in store for you on the dates mentioned.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Neighbauer will leave the latter part of the week for Hot Springs, after a 10-day stay here at the old ranch. On Tuesday, they made a trip across the rocks to take a look at things around the old goat ranch over there.

Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Mirabal were here from Claunch, N. M., Monday, Mr. Mirabal filing his notice of administratorship for the estate of Esperidion Lueras, deceased. They left for home in the afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Mayer came down from their summer cottage at Ruidoso Monday to spend the day with Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Mayer of the Mayer grocery. Mr. Mayer is connected with the Lone Star Motor Co. of El Paso and spends his vacations on the Ruidoso.

Town Council Interviewed Monday night, a party of gentlemen from El Paso, headed by attorney H. B. Hamilton, made a proposition to the Town Trustees for a hearing on a matter of securing a franchise to operate an electric light company within the confines of Carrizozo. After a discussion, it was decided to give them a hearing, which was held last night, where the matter was tabled, to be again taken up on next Wednesday, July 15.

FORT STANTON NEWS

The 4th of July celebration at the Fort was quite a success again this year despite the fact that a heavy rain storm hit the picnic grounds just as the barbecue lunch was being served and continuing for the best part of an hour. A large crowd attended and seemed to enjoy the day. After the storm, a delay of two hours allowed the rodeo events to go on, which in turn was followed by the ball game.

In the wild cow milking, the following teams were in the money: Burch and Hammett, 1st $20, Time 1 min. 3 1-5 sec.; Peg Pfingsten and Boyson, 2nd $10, Time 1 min. 16 4-5 sec.; Forester and Buchannon, 3rd $5, Time 1 min. 24 1/2 seconds.

Calf Roping—Allen, 1st $20, 27 sec.; Flack, 2nd $10, 31 2 5 sec.; Burch, 3rd $5, 50 2-5 sec.

Bronco Riding—Chas. Dean, 1st $25; Bill Dick Browning, 2nd $10; Ray Hawkins, 3rd $5.00. The display of fireworks furnished by the Trowel Club went off according to schedule and were as beautiful a display as could be asked for. The firing committee did a good job, keeping something going on at all times. Set pieces causing considerable admiration were the American Flag 6 x 4 feet and the Masouic Emblem 8 x 8 feet.

The committee in charge of the celebration wishes to take this opportunity to publicly thank their many friends in Lincoln County and vicinity for their co-operation in making the day a success, by furnishing stock, personally helping in the actual work, and through advice, without which assistance the day could not have been what it was.

Fort Stanton won 2 out of 3 ball games against the 82nd Field Artillery. The team has won 14 games and lost 4 this season.

Rev. Ed Smith and Chief Clerk R. S. Fagan are vacationing for a few days in Cloudercroft, El Paso and intermediate points.

Miss Frances Lowrey Curry has arrived here for a tour of duty as staff nurse.

Nogal Notes

Some nice rains have fallen lately, one on the 4th and another one on the eve of the 8th.

Our crops are growing very good; the bean crops are coming along nicely; and the cabbage and potatoes are doing well.

The fruit in the nearby canyons is plentiful; apricots on the Rich Hust ranch are now ripe and are of extra fine quality. They will be sold at the orchard.

The rains we are having are of great benefit to the range cattle. They are certainly getting fat now.

Rich Hust was a Carrizozo business visitor Wednesday.

The Peacock mine is not being worked at present, but will start, it is understood, the 15th. Mr. Peacock is very well pleased with the mine; he says he has good prospects for gold.

Arthur Helms has the mail route from Nogal up to the Dam. He is taking Marion Hust's place who has carried it the past four years. Mr. Helms says he expects to give good service the next four years.

Dr. W. H. Broadus Optical Specialist, will be in Carrizozo Wednesday, July 16, at the office of Dr. Shaver—Glasses fitted. J 11

Southern Cross Makes Westward Flight Across the Atlantic Ocean.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

ONCE again the Atlantic has been conquered by aviators, and this time it was the westward passage, made successfully but once before, that was negotiated. Maj. Charles Kingsford-Smith of Australia and three companions flew the famous plane Southern Cross from Port Marnock, Ireland, near Dublin, and made a safe landing at Harbor Grace, Newfoundland. Their intended destination was New York, but when they neared the Newfoundland coast they ran into dense fogs and for six hours flew blind, losing their course and wandering aimlessly. Meanwhile their fuel was running low and their predicament seemed serious. However, their radio was efficient and the operator, John W. Stannage, kept in constant communication with ships and shore stations. A relief plane was about to take off from Harbor Grace when the Southern Cross came in out of the fog and dropped gracefully to earth.

While Kingsford-Smith, Stannage and their companions, Evert Van Dyk and Capt. J. Patrick Gaul, rested after the two thousand mile flight the plane was refueled, and next morning at daylight the trip to New York was resumed. Major Kingsford-Smith said they would fly later to San Francisco, completing a round the world flight for him and the plane. New York city gave the gallant aviators its customary reception, with pageant, parade, luncheons and dinners. The pilot brought across a letter from President Cochrane of the Irish Free State to President Hoover, which he planned to deliver in person at the White House.

The directors and executives of the National Air races sent Major Kingsford-Smith a telegram of warm congratulation and invited him to remain over in Chicago or to return from the Pacific coast to be their guest during the races, which begin August 23.

COL. ROBERTO FIERRO, now Mexico's air hero, made a non-stop flight from New York to Mexico City in 10 hours and 35 minutes, a new record and ten hours less than the time taken by Colonel Lindbergh for the trip from Washington to Mexico City last December.

PRESIDENT HOOVER last week was compelled by his honest convictions to veto another pension bill, and this time the veto was upheld by the house of representatives. The measure was the World war veterans bill originating in the house and passed by the senate despite Mr. Hoover's warning that he would not approve it. Only six senators voted against the bill, which the President said was "bad legislation," against the best interests of the veterans themselves and placing "an unjustified load upon the taxpayers at a time every effort should be made to lighten it." As soon as the senate had acted, the Republicans of the house held a caucus and enough votes were pledged to sustain the veto. To facilitate action the house accepted the senate amendments and the measure was sent to Mr. Hoover. Then, immediately after his veto message was received, the vote sustaining it was taken. A substitute bill was then rushed through the house, with the prospect of definite action on it by the senate within a few days. The new measure embodies the pension system. Its initial annual cost to the government will be $50,000,000, which will increase to $50,000,000 in three years. It will apply to probably 200,000 veterans (in addition to 245,000 now receiving compensation) whose pensions will range from $12 to $40 a month, depending upon the degree of disability. The vetoed bill, according to Director Hines of the veterans' bureau, would have cost $102,000,000 the first year and ultimately would have added $225,000,000 annually to the present expenditures for veterans.

BY A vote of 10 to 4 the senate foreign relations committee reported the London naval treaty to the senate for approval. Neither Chairman Borah nor the warmest advocates of the pact on the committee submitted any written report explaining and commending it. The four who refused to recommend its ratification were Johnson of California, Moses of New Hampshire, Robinson of Indiana and Shipstead of Minnesota.

President Hoover remained steadfast in his intention of calling an immediate special session of the senate to act on the treaty, although twenty-four senators signed a round robin petition asking him to abandon this plan and allow consideration of the pact to be postponed until after the November elections. The protesting senators declared they were worn out with their public duties, the senate having been in almost continuous session since December, 1923, and that many of them had been compelled to neglect their private affairs.

Administration leaders are confident the treaty will be ratified eventually, but admit the controversy will be long and bitter. The opposition has prepared proposed reservations which would include the following declarations:

That the treaty involves no permanent surrender of the previously claimed right of the United States to build as it pleases.

That under the so-called "escape clause" America can build whatever type of ship it desires in the event of England or Japan building beyond the treaty limits because of the construction programs of nations not signatory to the pact.

That under the replacement clauses Great Britain can replace her 6-inch gun cruisers with ships of that category.

PRESIDENT HOOVER'S vacation tour, plans for which already include visits to some of the national parks in the West, may also take him down to Mexico in August. Both the Mexican government and Ambassador Morrow have invited him, and after a conference in the White House Mr. Morrow said:

"I strongly urged President Hoover to visit Mexico while I am there and I believe that he will do so. His plans to make a trip during August which will bring him to the Mexican border, and I believe that it would go a long way to cement our good relations if he would visit that country. I know that he wishes to do so and has only postponed his visit because of the press of business."

SUIT for triple damages of $30,000,000 was filed in Kansas City by the Grigsby-Grinow company at Chicago against the Radio Corporation of America, the General Electric company, the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing company and others, and the plaintiff complains of the existence of a vast pool of radio patents created in violation of the Sherman anti-trust law, and says the defendants thus illegally compelled the payment of royalties of almost $0,000,000 by the Grigsby-Grinow company.

The petition contains many of the allegations made in a petition filed by the United States government in the federal court of Delaware on May 13, 1920. That petition, they said, asked for dissolution of the illegal combination which this petition also alleges.

ROTARY International celebrated its silver jubilee last week in Chicago, the city of its birth. Members to the number of some 18,000 assembled from all parts of the world, with their families, and the doings included not only banquets and other festive events but also sessions in which the problems of the trades and professions were seriously discussed and many social questions were debated.

CHESTER H. GRAY, Washington representative of the Farm Bureau federation, has given out an analysis purporting to show that agriculture benefits much more from the new tariff law than does industry.

Duties on raw agricultural products have been increased on an average by 51.6 per cent over the rates of the 1922 law, tabulations made by Mr. Gray indicate. The industrial rate increases have averaged 14.6 per cent, the agricultural increases being more than three times as much as industrial increases.

HOUSE and senate conferees agreed on the rivers and harbors bill exactly as it was passed by the senate, and it was sent to the President for his approval. It is estimated that the bill authorizes the expenditure of more than $135,000,000 on projects which if completed will cost in excess of $300,000,000. Actual expenditures must be made from the lump sum annual appropriation of $55,000,000 at the disposal of the army engineers.

AMOS W. W. WOODCOCK was selected to be director of the bureau of prohibition in the Department of Justice to begin his work on July 1, the date of transfer of prohibition enforcement from the Treasury department. Mr. Woodcock has been United States district attorney at Baltimore, is forty-six years old and served through the World war. He will be the chief aid of G. A. Youngquist, assistant attorney general in charge of dry law and income tax prosecutions, in the latter's initial drive to better dry law enforcement.

PUBLICATION of the second section of the report of the Simon commission on India served only to accentuate the rage of the Indian Nationalists. The commission recommends primarily that there be a federal organization of all the Indian states; that the new constitution should, so far as possible, contain within itself provision for its own development, allowing for natural growth and diversity; and that during the period in which India is progressing on the road to complete self-government, there must be full provision made for the efficiency of the fundamentals of government, which means that for many years the presence of British troops, and British officers serving in Indian regiments, will be essential.

Hindus, Moslems and Parsees are united in condemning the Simon report and the Nationalists have renewed their demand that the London round table conference in October be boycotted unless the British government promises to discuss ways and means for demotion status for India.

Prisoners in the central jail of Rangoon, Burma, maintained, armed themselves in the prison armory and fought a desperate battle with the guards and military police. Before they were subdued 45 men were killed, most of them convicts, and 71 wounded.

REPORTS of the serious illness of Pope Pius XI alarmed Rome and the whole Catholic world. It was said he was suffering from an acute bladder trouble and that atomic poisoning was threatened. Sports by Television Near Football, baseball, cricket and other games may be projected by television, according to Sir Ambrose Fleming, inventor of the Fleming valve. In a recent address before the physical society in London he said this could be accomplished by the use of mirrors. Operators could employ a large mirror in throwing a small and very brilliant scene on a scanning disk. Behind this mirror could be placed a photo-electric cell, which would have projected on it a brilliant image spot by spot, as the scanning disk rotated. For this to be successful it would be necessary to make the photo-electric cell much more sensitive than those at present in use.

The Mazaroff Mystery

THE STORY

Mervyn Holt is engaged by a man calling himself Mazaroff as a traveling companion. After a short tour they put up at the Woodcock inn on Marrasdale moor. They meet, casually, Mrs. Elphinstone and Sheila Merchlison, Mazaroff's wife and daughter and that his real name is Merchlison. That night Mazaroff fails to return to the inn and his disappearance is unexplained. Holt meets Sheila and tells her of Mazaroff's disappearance. They go to her cousin's (Verner Courtship) shooting box hoping to find some word of Mazaroff. There they meet Mr. Armitage and Doctor Eccleshare. Holt is questioned by Police Sergeant Manners and a reporter, Bowden. Mazaroff's murdered body is found.

"Shot, doctor?" said the police sergeant. "Why, I never noticed—"

"Perhaps not," interrupted Eccleshare, quietly. "But you noticed that some wild animal or animals had destroyed the features, and it perhaps didn't occur to you to examine the back part of the head. He was shot through the head, from behind; shot dead. And by an ordinary fowling-piece. Look there!"

He held out a plump, smooth white hand, unclothed it, and showed us, lying in the palm, a couple of pellets. "Riddled!" he said, significantly. "That's number twelve shot. And that's how he came to his death. Shot, from an ordinary fowling-piece, at close quarters."

I saw that Manners was considerably taken aback by this opinion, which was corroborated by the local doctor, who just then came out and joined us. It upset the police sergeant's theory, for it was not likely that the cattle drovers whom he suspected would carry a gun.

The two medical men went away. Eccleshare previously turning to me and saying that if there was anything he could do for me, I was to let him know, and Manners, for the first time, betrayed symptoms of uneasiness.

"This is a queer business, captain!" he said. "Shot! That never came into my reckoning. Well!—I must be doing something. But now, about him?—you know where his relations are to be found, of course? They'll have to be communicated with at once. Better telegraph to 'em."

The predicament! There it was—full facing me. But I was not going to tell this somewhat thick-headed policeman that Sallm Mazaroff was really Andrew Merchlison, and that his wife and daughter were within a mile of us.

"I'll look through his papers, upstairs, and see what I can find," I answered, evasively.

That secret of Mazaroff's weighed on me like lead. Ought I to keep it to myself?—or ought I to go straight to Marrasdale tower and tell Mrs. Elphinstone what I knew. It seemed to me that I ought, for there was this about the situation—if Mazaroff was really Merchlison, then his wealth (and I was something more than certain that he was very wealthy) would surely go to his wife and daughter. Yet it was no pleasant task that confronted me. There was Sheila, with whom—it was useless to deny it—I was already in love; I loathed the idea of having to tell her that the father she had never known had been foully murdered at her very door! Yet—

Even then the advice I was longing for was coming to me as quickly as an old horse and a ramshackle fly from the station beyond the hills could carry it. Such an equipage drove up to the Woodcock and from it descended first a keen-looking sharp-featured, middle-aged man, whom I at once set down as either a solicitor or a barrister, and second, a younger man, smart, alert, well-dressed. They hurried into the hall; through the open door of my sitting room I heard my name spoken. I went forward: the legal looking man turned and gave me a sharp inspection.

"Mr. Holt?" he said. "I am Mr. Lincoln Crole, of Crole & Wyatt, solicitors, Bedford row. I heard of Mr. Mazaroff's strange disappearance from the London papers last night, and I caught the night mail here. Now, has Mr. Mazaroff been found—or heard of?"

"Yes," I replied. "He was found this morning. Dead. Murdered."

He gave two successive starts at the last two words—then pointed to the room, which I had just left.

"Let us go in there," he said. "This," he went on, as I led them in and closed the door, "is Mr. Frank Maythorne, whom you may have heard of as one of the cleverest private inquiry agents living. Now Mr. Holt, let me explain—as I said just now, I read about this matter in the papers—your name, of course, appeared—and as I have acted professionally for Mr. Mazaroff since his coming to England, I was much concerned. Finally, I decided to come down here, and to bring Maythorne with me; I knew, you see, that Mazaroff has no friends or relations in this country, if anywhere, and—well, for certain reasons I was anxious about him. Now we know the worst!"

I was unfeignedly glad to see Mr. Crole and his companion: it was a positive relief to be able to share that awful secret with men accustomed to deal with such matters. I ordered breakfast for them, and while they ate and drank, I sat with them, and Mr. Crole and I exchanged preliminaries.

"I'll tell you in a few sentences all that I know of Mazaroff, Mr. Holt," he said. "He introduced himself to me a few weeks ago at my office. He told me that he was an Englishman who had been out of England for many years, and during his absence had amassed a large fortune. He said that he'd now returned to this country, for good, and he wanted to buy a really nice house in London and settle down in it. He had heard of our firm and had come to see if I could help him. I promised to look out a likely house for him—and that's practically all."

"I don't know much more," I said. "I can tell you how I came to know him—"

He interrupted me. "Ob, I know all about that, and about you, Mr. Holt!" he exclaimed. "When Mazaroff put that advertisement in the Times, he brought the applications to me—most of 'em anyway. It was I who advised him to fix up with you. You got on together?"

"Splendidly!—admirably!" I said. "We'd grown to be very close friends."

"Aye!" he replied. "He seemed a likable and kindly man. But now, as you'd got so friendly, I wonder if you'd observed something about Mazaroff's habits—something, to be plain with you, that caused me alarm, and sent me off, up here, with Maythorne there, as soon as ever I read of his disappearance. Had you?"

"I can't say that I had," I answered.

He bent across the table, eyeing Maythorne and myself significantly. "I lunched and dined with Mazaroff two or three times," he said in a low voice. "And I learned a bit about him. Aren't you aware, Mr. Holt, that he carried diamonds in his pockets—loose!—as if they'd been so many half-pence?"

That gave me a genuine start of astonishment. "No, indeed!" I exclaimed. "I never saw him produce any diamonds—never!"

Crole laughed—dryly. "I only hope he left them behind him in London, then," he said. "But I doubt it, even if you didn't see them. He'd made the greater part of his fortune in that sort of thing, and I tell you that he carried 'loose on him, stones that looked to me to be worth—no end! I remonstrated with him, but he only laughed. Now—ask Maythorne there what he thinks, professionally?"

Maythorne smiled. "I think that a man who carries diamonds in his pockets, and pulls them out in public places, as you say Mazaroff did, is asking for trouble," he remarked. "And the probability is that he was followed here. Just give us the plain facts up to now, Mr. Holt—briefly."

I told them of all that had happened from the moment of Mazaroff's going out alone on the moor to the bringing of his mutilated body to the Woodcock that morning. And suddenly, making sure that nobody would interrupt us, I told them, word for word, of all that had passed between me and Mazaroff on the second evening of our stay at the Woodcock.

As soon as I had finished, Crole spoke, sharply and decisively. "I believe all that!" he said. "I felt sure there was a queer mystery about Mazaroff. Well, here it is! And the next thing is—I'll have to be told to Mrs. Elphinstone, who is really Mrs. Merchlison. And at once!"

"The sooner the better," agreed Maythorne. "Because—there are things by which he can be identified, that birthmark, for instance."

"Yes, at once," declared Crole. "He

"I'm So Sorry to Hear This Bad News," She Said Quickly.

CHAPTER III

The Landlord's Gun

Sheila came up to me with genuine sympathy expressed on her pretty face.

"I'm so sorry to hear this bad news," she said quickly. "I suppose it's true?—we've only heard very little."

"True enough," I answered. Then, as she glanced at my companion, I said: "This gentleman is Mr. Mazaroff's solicitor—Mr. Crole. He's just arrived from London—and he's anxious to see Mrs. Elphinstone."

She showed no surprise at this; probably she thought that Crole wanted to ask some questions about the neighborhood. She turned back to the house, motioning us to follow.

We found Mrs. Elphinstone in the morning-room. She gave us an unmistakably questioning look as we entered; it seemed, indeed, not too friendly. Sheila, after her fashion, went to the point.

"Mother!" she said. "It's quite true about this unfortunate Mr. Mazaroff. He's been found dead, on the moor, and this is his solicitor, Mr. Crole, from London, and he wants to see you."

"Merely to be permitted to ask a few pertinent questions arising out of the death of my client," Crole said. "I may mention, first, a fact of which perhaps neither of you is aware. Mr. Mazaroff was murdered!"

"This announcement produced different effects on its two hearers. Sheila made a low murmur of horrified astonishment; Mrs. Elphinstone gave Crole a quick glance.

"Are you sure of that?" she asked. "That is the medical opinion, ma'am," replied Crole, with a frigid bow. "I know of no reason to dispute it. My client was shot—dead."

Mrs. Elphinstone pointed a finger to chairs near her desk. "Won't you sit down?" she said with faint politeness. "You say you want to ask me some questions—pertinent questions? I really can't conceive what they can be! I know nothing whatever about this poor man."

"I think you saw my late client the other day?" suggested Crole, whom I had fully posted in every particular of our stay at the Woodcock. "He and Mr. Holt were standing at the garden gate of the inn when you and your daughter passed by."

"Oh, that!" exclaimed Mrs. Elphinstone. "Yes, I suppose I did see him—tall, bearded man, wasn't he?"

"You didn't recognize him, ma'am?" asked Crole, with a keen look.

Mrs. Elphinstone gave her questioner a particularly freezing stare. "Recognize him?" she demanded haughtily. "Really—what do you mean?"

"What I mean, ma'am, is this," Crole answered, bluntly. "The man whom you saw, though he has of late years called himself Sallm Mazaroff, was the man whom you married some years ago—Andrew Merchlison."

I expected something—say, dramatic—to follow on this. But nothing happened—that is, nothing particular. Sheila's lips opened a little in astonishment, and her eyes turned from Crole to her mother. Mrs. Elphinstone was sitting bolt upright, very stern and dignified, at her desk. Suddenly, and swiftly, a satirical, contemptuous smile showed itself round the corners of her finely cut thin lips, and she rose quietly from her chair. "Follow me, if you please," she said.

She marched us through two or three rooms, into the hall, out of the house, across the grounds, looking neither to right nor left, and so through the porch of the church, and under its fine old Norman doorway into the shadowy nave. Marching up that to the chancel, she suddenly paused; pointed upward, and, giving Crole a frowning look, spoke two words:

"Look there!"

We looked. There, on the north wall of the chancel, was a plain, square tablet of Aberdeen granite, whereupon were deeply incised and gilded a few words:

"In Memory of
"Andrew Merchlison
"Sometime Resident of this Parish
"Drowned in Mombasa Bay, October
"17th, 1890."

I glanced at Crole. His face was inscrutable. He merely looked at the tablet, read the inscription, and turned, with a nod, to Mrs. Elphinstone. "Now come back to the house," she commanded.

Mrs. Elphinstone marched us back to the house, and up the old oak staircase that led from the big hall. She went along one corridor after another until she came to a door. Selecting a key from a bunch that hung by a silver chain from her waist, she unlocked the door, and ushered us into a small room, wherein there was nothing but an old-fashioned bureau, a chair set before it, a bookcase filled with old volumes, and a side-table, whereon lay a much-worn cabin trunk. She went straight to this and laid a hand on it.

"Now," she said, looking at Crole. "I am doing more than anyone has the right to ask me to do! I am only doing it to get at rest, once and for all, the utterly ridiculous idea that you mentioned when you came here—uninvited. You will please listen to me—it is quite true that I married Andrew Merchlison, when he and I were very young and foolish and headstrong. We did not get on. He made full provision for me; shared equally, all he had with me, in fact, and left me. Eight months later, this girl was born. I and my friends did our best to find him, and make him acquainted with that fact: we failed. I never heard anything of him until the early part of the year 1890, when I got a letter from the captain of a steamer which traded between Bombay and Durban. You shall read it."

She produced another key, unlocked the cabin trunk, and from a pocket inside it, took out an envelope, from which she withdrew a letter. She handed it to Crole.

"You and Mr. Holt can read that together," she said. "Read it carefully."

I read the letter over Crole's shoulder. It was from one James Sinclair, who introduced himself as captain of the S. S. General Clive. He said that on his last voyage from Bombay he had taken on board at that port a passenger named Andrew Merchlison, whom he described: Mr. Merchlison was bound for Durban. In the course of the voyage, a stay was made off Mombasa. On the 17th of October, the steamer being at anchor in Mombasa bay, Mr. Merchlison disappeared. The writer's belief was that Mr. Merchlison had had a sudden attack of faintness or giddiness, lost his balance, and fallen overboard, probably striking his head against the side of the ship as he fell. Nothing being discovered about his passenger, he had examined his effects, found Mrs. Merchlison's address in a memorandum book, and therefore now wrote to her and at the same time forwarded Mr. Merchlison's cabin trunk, and all that it contained, with other small matters lying about his cabin.

The solicitor read this letter through in silence, and silently handed it back to Mrs. Elphinstone. She replaced it in the trunk.

"This trunk and its contents have remained intact ever since I received them, now many years ago," she said. "Now you come and tell me that this stranger, calling himself Mazaroff, was in reality Andrew Merchlison! Absurd!"

GOVERNMENT BY PARTY BEST

By EX-PRESIDENT COOLIDGE

IT IS necessary to have parties to maintain our form of government. Free government must be through political parties. The countries which we consider or speak of as backward continue to suffer most because they do not have well-organized political parties. When changes are desired, they are often driven to revolutionary methods to gain what is wanted.

We ought not to expect perfection in our government—certainly not when it is in the hands of the opposition, and certainly the opposition does not expect it of us when the power is in our hands.

I don't know of any other method of perfecting our form of government except through parties. One person becomes ineffective in any effort, and the only method for success is through co-operation.

We have come to believe that the best results come from having two major parties rather than a multiplicity of parties. We have always had two parties, under one name or another.

We are not warranted in expecting perfection in parties, but we must pick out the principles which we believe are the best and go with the party which best represents them.

The success of a President is more or less the success of the country, and unless the people give the President their support, the country will not be a success.

EFFECT OF WOMEN IN INDUSTRY

By REV. DR. SOCKMAN, New York (Methodist).

The entrance of women into business and industry has given them a new respect for their powers and has made a profound difference in their attitude toward marriage. The fact that two-thirds of the divorces in the United States are granted on demand of the wives does not prove that two-thirds of the blame rests with the husbands. The root causes of many divorces runs back into the undisciplined and individualistic freedom of premarital living on the part of both women and men. After a youth spent in indulgence, too many prodigal daughters, discontented with their marriage, says in the words of the prodigal son, "I will arise and go to my father."

The professional and business woman is ceasing to be conscious of her sex or to claim special consideration because of it. While women in politics may still be inclined to capitalize femininity, the novelty will soon be gone.

It is in the less well paid forms of employment like the factory and domestic service that the struggle for women's rights still is chiefly to be fought. Justice in these realms can be secured only by the co-operation and recognition of women among themselves and by a Christianized imagination which can understand the emotional factors involved.

VENGEANCE NOT FOR SOCIETY

By LORD BUCKMASTER, Former British Chancellor

Every single one of the arguments used today in favor of capital punishment as a deterrent was used, and for a long time with success, in the early part of the Nineteenth century when capital punishment was a common penalty for civil offenses.

In each case you deny the sacredness of life. You have taken to yourselves, either as individuals or as the state, the power to take away that which you can never give.

I am not satisfied as to capital punishment being a deterrent. I think that always assumes that a man creates a balance sheet when he is going to commit murder, and puts capital punishment on the debit side against anything he might get on the credit side. There are a few calculated cold-blooded murders, but the bulk of murders are nothing of the kind, but are crimes committed when a man loses control of himself.

I don't think that society has any right to wreak vengeance upon anyone. It is my belief that the real deterrent against crime is social opinion. It is not the police nor the laws. It is the healthy public opinion which affects and surrounds a man from his youth—I am satisfied myself that it is to that more than anything else we owe the lessening in our criminal characters.

PUBLISHERS PROTECT PUBLIC

By W. L. HUMPHREYS, Federal Trade Commission

Publishers throughout the country are to be credited with responsibility for the success of the campaign of the federal trade commission against fraudulent advertising. In the last six months, according to figures I have gathered, publishers have rejected not less than $100,000,000 worth of questionable advertising. As a result, the public has been protected from being robbed of not less than $150,000,000.

The press in this matter has rendered a great public service. I believe that within a year the advertising columns of publications will be practically free of that class of advertisements that are plainly false.

But whether it takes a year or ten years, or however long it may take, the fight is going to continue until these fakers and crooks and scoundrels who live by robbing the unwary and unfortunate are put out of business. In this undertaking we have the support of every honest publisher in America. We have the support of every honest advertising agency in America. We believe that we have the support of every honest and decent American citizen.

LAWYERS MUST "CLEAN HOUSE"

By CHIEF JUSTICE CHARLES EVANS HUGHES

Attempts by lawyers to thwart the administration of justice by delays, sharp practice and chicanery should be unsparingly condemned. They have no place in a profession where skill and honor should go hand in hand.

Even when purged, as it should be, of its delinquents, the bar is only at the threshold of its opportunity to devote its technical knowledge to the effort to adjust the mechanism of justice to the demands of a complex society to which old methods in many respects are unsuited.

While improvement in this direction is necessarily slow, bar associations may immediately perform a great service in strongly insisting on the selection of capable prosecutors, magistrates and judges.

Many "Black Fridays" in Financial Circles

"Black Friday" does not refer to a particular date, as often supposed, but is the name given to several Fridays on which financial panics have occurred. Apparently the term was first applied to the Friday in December, 1745, when the news was received in London that Charles Edward Stuart, the Young Pretender, had reached Derby, only ten days' march from the capital. A financial panic resulted immediately. "Black Friday" was probably suggested by analogy with Black Monday, an old name for the Monday following Easter. The term

"Black Friday" was revived in England for May 11, 1890, when a panic followed the failure of the London firm of Overend, Gurney & Co. In the United States the term is applied to September 24, 1890, when a panic occurred as the result of Jay Gould's efforts to corner the gold market in New York, and to September 18, 1873, when a panic followed the failure of the banking firm of Jay Cook & Co.—Pathfinder Magazine.

EDITORIAL COLUMN

Lost in the Mountains

The glorious 4th generally furnishes some kind of thrills, but a new brand came out on the recent national holiday. A company of vacationists, 20 in number, from Lubbock, Texas, had been camping in the White mountains for about two weeks before the 4th and on that day, the leader decided to form the visitors into groups and make investigations and meet at a certain hour to turn in their reports.

One young man by the name of Price and a young lady by the name of Hawthorne, happened to be together, but when the hour for their return came, they had not reported. After a wait of two hours, it was decided to institute a search for them, but the search proved of no avail and when night fell without their return, the forest service was notified and then the search began in earnest.

All night long, the search continued, during which time, a storm broke over the mountains, but still there was no trace of the missing couple. The rangers sent up rockets, fired guns and did everything they could to find the lost ones, and another day dawned, but still no trace of them was reported. At about 2 o'clock on the afternoon of the 5th, the rangers found them, but a great distance apart. The man was greatly fatigued, but the lady was unconscious from the exposure in the cold rain and the fright at being left alone in the mountains without a morsel to eat. She was carried to a waiting horse and taken back to camp, where after treatment, she revived and was sent home to Lubbock on July 6. The man suffered less, but was about to give up, when the rangers found him.

Carrizozo campers who were located near there, say that had it not been for the rangers, the couple would have died, because of the fact that the men in the party did nothing in the search. Such pretending heroes should be kept tied to Mamma's apron strings, and send real men out who would see that the lost were found, or at least hunt for them. One Carrizozo man said that one of the heroes remained at his camp all night and kept himself and wife awake, instead of being out to assist in the hunt, but such men will be the first to tell of the mountain romance and how "we" found them.

The Intriguing Appetizer

By CAROLINE B. KING
Culinary Expert and Lecturer on Domestic Science

An appetizer—just a mere slice of something especially pungent and tasty, attractively served and made as inviting as possible, is now served by most hostesses as the first course of the dinner whether the latter be just a little dinner for friends, or a more formal affair. The appetizer may be of fruit, fish or vegetables, as one desires. Genuine Switzerland cheese, because of its aromatic alpine flavor and its peculiar adaptability for harmonizing with other foods, makes a most inviting appetizer.

Switzerland Pique in Bismarck
Cut Switzerland cheese in strips one-fourth inch square and two inches long. Brush lightly with mustard and wrap each in a water thin slice of bacon. Place on a hot griddle or under the broiler and grill until the bacon is crisp. Serve on strips of freshly made toast, garnishing each strip with a sprig of watercress.

Cheese and Tomato Canapes
Cut thinly sliced bread into rounds, toast one side and butter the untoasted side. Lay a slice of tomato on the buttered side, cover with a disk of Switzerland cheese, sprinkle with paprika and salt and place under the broiler or in a hot oven until the cheese is soft and slightly brown. Garnish with minced green pepper and pimiento. Fringed Celery: Cut celery stalks into two-inch pieces and fringe each end one to one and a half inch deep. Place in ice water for an hour, then drain and wipe dry in the cavities of the celery place strips of Switzerland cheese which have marinated in French dressing for a few moments. Sprinkle with paprika and serve very cold.

Apple Sandwiches:
Slice a tart red apple very thin without peeling it, and cut each slice across; remove seeds, cut thinly sliced Switzerland cheese in the same way and put together between the apple slices, sandwich fashion, the pale yellow of the cheese showing between the red skin of the apple. Fasten with toothpicks and serve at once.

Toasted Cheese:
Toasted cheese make a tempting appetizer served before a Dutch lunch. Slice Swiss cheese in square pieces one-quarter inch thick, and toast under the broiler. Meantime heat saltines in the oven. Place a square of cheese on each crumb lightly with mustard and top with a disk cut from canned pimiento.

Sardine Rose Canapes:
On six rounds of buttered graham bread, place a slice of tomato and a slice of Switzerland cheese. Skins and bone six sardines, wash well and then add one hard-boiled egg finely chopped. Season with salt pepper and paprika and moisten with mayonnaise. Place this pulp in a pastry bag and press through the rosette tube, placing a sardine rose on each round of cheese. Garnish with chopped parsley.

Telephone Buildings Designed to Harmonize With Residential Areas

By RICHARD STORRS COE
STROLLING through some quiet street of modern homes one comes now and then to a comfortable-looking house, set like the neighboring residences, among trees and shrubs, but with, perhaps, a group of laughing girls running up the steps on their way to work. For work is done in these home-like little buildings, and important work at that. They are the nerve-centers of their communities—the telephone buildings housing the switchboards through which the tide of talk continually ebbs and flows.

Telephone buildings are, of course, as necessary as telephone service, and much thought has been given to making them harmonize with their surroundings. As a result, in many a town and suburb, the telephone building is proudly pointed out as an ornament to the community.
Many of these buildings, moreover, have been designed to conform to a well-defined local architectural tradition, appropriate to the climate and to the historical background of the locality. For example, in the Southwest, the Spanish style of architecture fits into the sunny landscape admirably. It recalls, too, the early history of the region and the Spanish explorers who marched across the deserts of the interior and called up the California coast planting the long chain of Missions from San Diego to San Francisco. They left their mark upon the architecture of this whole vast region, and the telephone buildings in many a Southwestern town have been designed in accordance with this tradition. The ones at Ventura and Montrose, California, and Glendale and Phoenix, Arizona, are examples that might have been transplanted bodily from sunny Spain.

Very different, but equally interesting, are the white-trimmed, red brick Colonial telephone buildings in certain parts of the East. Such is, for example, the brick and limestone Warwood, West Virginia, telephone building with its dignified white Colonial doorway. Another is the Colonial brick structure with white doorway, shutters and roof rail at Silver Spring, Maryland. To all outward appearance it is an attractive private home; and, despite its use as a thoroughly modern telephone office, this building would not have looked out of place to Washington's Continentals, had they passed it on one of their long marches during the Revolutionary War.

Some of the New England telephone buildings in residential districts are particularly happy examples of still another architectural form. Wood is the accepted material for the older New England homes, and in certain Rhode Island and Massachusetts villages it has been successfully applied to telephone buildings. At Schuette, Massachusetts, for example, stands a telephone exchange which looks every inch a comfortable New England home. Its picket fence and weathered shingles fit into the Massachusetts landscape as naturally as the wind-swept wild roses by the New England roadside.

In one of New York's attractive suburbs, Scarsdale, the telephone office is housed in what seems to be a modest but tasteful stucco bungalow. At Hamilton, Ontario, a telephone building adjacent to a church has been erected in the Gothic style of architecture which harmonizes with the surroundings.
Different as these widely scattered buildings are, they are nevertheless alike in that they all contain the thoroughly modern equipment which makes it possible to speed the spoken word by telephone across the street, across the Continent or across the Ocean. They are alike, too, in that they all reflect the determination to make the telephone buildings a credit to the communities that they serve. And they are convincing evidences of how delightfully appropriate a business building may look even in a residential neighborhood, provided it is designed with good taste and in a style appropriate to its surroundings and to the climate and the historical background of the locality.

Some Recipes That Will Be Liked

By NELLIE MAXWELL

If you were busy being kind, before you knew it you would find you'd soon forget to think 'twas true. That someone was unkind to you. —Rebecca Foresman.

The little silvery herring which we call sardine, comes from the coast of Maine.

We do not serve this delightful little fish often enough to learn of the number of dishes which it may add to our list of good things. How about a rarebit? Everybody likes rarebit.

Sardine Rarebit.—Mix two tablespoons of melted butter with half a pound of rich cheese grated or broken into bits. Stir constantly while it melts, then add one egg beaten and diluted with two-thirds of a cupful of cream. Stir until smooth, season with paprika, a small pinch of salt and a few drops of tabasco sauce. Drain a box of sardines, broil them on slices of toast and pour over the hot rarebit. Serve at once.

One may buy the sardines put up in oil, or in tomato sauce, or "done" in mustard, so all tastes may be served and given a variety.

Curried Sardines.—Mix one teaspoonful each of sugar and curry powder, adding a pinch of salt. Put these into a saucepan with one cupful of cream and a teaspoonful of lemon juice. Stir until hot, then drop in a dozen sardines. In another pan heat some butter, and in it saute slices of bread large enough to hold a sardine and a slice of apple. Pour some of the hot apple sauce over each and serve.

Sardine sandwiches are probably the most popular way of serving this little fish, next to serving them as they come from the tin, with a bit of lemon and bread and butter. How would you like to try:

Sardines on Toast.—This is a most delightful dish for Sunday night supper or in fact for any day in the week. Put two tablespoons of butter in a saucepan, add two tablespoonfuls of flour, stir until smooth and browned slightly, then add a half cupful of good soup stock; stir until thick, add a cupful of sardines from which the skin and bones have been removed and serve over rounds of hot buttered toast.

The season is here when porch and garden parties call for all the ingenuity and originality which each hostess possesses, to make the occasion a pleasant one.

A teaspoonful of fresh grated orange or lemon rind added to the pot of tea will add a flavor which reminds one of the rare and expensive blends. Loaf sugar rubbed over the rind of a lemon or orange will absorb much of the essential oil and thus when dropped into the hot tea adds a pleasant flavor. Rub the surface of the lemon or orange with a coarse grater at first to break the oil cells, then use the sugar quickly.

Icebox cookies are always in season, but especially so during the warm weather. Try making them and keeping them in the icebox for a week or more, baking a baking sheet of them occasionally, then they will always be crisp and fresh to the taste.

Graham Fruit Bars.—Mix one-half teaspoonful of salt, one cupful each of white and graham flour, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, three-eighths cupful of cold water, one-half cupful of shortening, one teaspoonful of lemon juice; mors water may be needed to make a stiff dough. Add the following: One-half cupful each of chopped pitted dates, figs, raisins, walnuts, and one-fourth of a cupful of sugar, the grated rind and juice of a large orange; there should be one-fourth of a cupful of the fruit juice. Roll out and fit to the bottom of large baking pans. Make a filling of the nuts, raisins and fruit juice with sugar; mix well and spread one-fourth of an inch thick over the sheet of dough; cover with another layer. Bake 20 minutes in a hot oven. Cut into bars and cool.

Fruit Nectar.—Mix one quart of water and two cupfuls of sugar, boil ten minutes. Cool, add two cupfuls of grape fruit cut into bits, the juice of four lemons and four oranges. Freeze to a mush, add the stiffly beaten white of one egg and one cupful of cherry pulp, continue freezing, then serve from punch bowl or as sherbet. (© 1936, Western Newspaper Union.)

Vegetable Souffles as Main Dish

Vegetable souffles are nice as the main dish of a hot-weather meal. They are made by combining a food material, as cheese, meat, or vegetable with a heavy white sauce and eggs. The eggs should be separated and the whites folded in last. The whole is then baked in a moderate oven until firm. The eggs used furnish part of the protein required in the meal.

Vanilla Mousse With Fresh Fruit

A Mold of Plain Vanilla Mousse With Raspberries or Other Fruit in Season.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

One of the nicest and easiest desserts you can plan for a special occasion is a plain vanilla mousse with fresh fruit in its season—strawberries, raspberries, peaches, blackberries, or other fruits that are good when eaten with cream. The illustration shows a molded mousse served with fresh red raspberries.

The bureau of home economics gives the following recipe for plain vanilla mousse. Leaflet 49, "Ice creams frozen without stirring," also suggests many other ways of varying the flavor of a plain mousse.

1 cup double cream 1/2 lbs. sugar
1 cup rich milk or 2 egg whites
1/2 cup cream 1/2 tsp. salt
1 tsp. gelatin 1/2 tsp. vanilla.

Soak the gelatin until soft in a little of the milk or thin cream. Heat the remainder, and pour over the gelatin. Add the sugar and stir until dissolved, and put the mixture aside to chill. Whip the double cream. When the mixture containing the gelatin has thickened slightly, beat it to incorporate air. Add the vanilla and fold in the whipped cream and well-beaten egg whites. The egg whites reduce richness, increase volume and improve texture. These proportions will make over four cups before freezing, or, if the egg whites are not used, about three cups.

Instead of the gelatin as thickener, you may prefer to moisten one tablespoonful of flour with a little of the milk or thin cream; add to the remainder, heat to boiling and combine with the whipped cream and other ingredients. Or prepare a custard from the cup of rich milk, three egg yolks and the sugar. Cool, beat and add to the other ingredients as described. Or add one-fourth cup of marshmallows cut in small pieces to the milk or thin cream and follow the usual method.

Mousse made by the above basic recipe may be frozen by packing in ice and salt without stirring, or in a mechanical refrigerator. If packed in ice and salt, the container for the mixture should not be too thick. Large baking powder cans are good for small quantities, or fancy molds may be used. Since the mold must be buried in the ice and salt, seal the opening with a tightly drawn strip of cloth which has been dipped in paraffin or some fat with a high melting point, so that the salty water cannot leak in. Use about three parts of crushed ice to one of salt and let stand for several hours, depending on the shape and size of the mold.

HINTS TO HOUSEKEEPERS

Even charming clothes depend upon the posture of the wearer for their effectiveness.

Make breakfast more interesting by the occasional addition of chopped dried fruit to muffins or cereal.

A Turkish towel placed to one end of the ironing board is useful in pressing garments with embroidery or buttons.

Extra rhubarb or strawberry juice left during canning may be canned in jars by itself, for later use in jelly, summer fruit ices and beverages, budding sauces or gelatin desserts.

Small-Town Park With a Big City Air

IN PRESENT size, attendance, and administrative activity, our second youngest national park, Bryce canyon, Utah, is a small affair—so small, in fact, that its doings are suggestive of the adventures of a small-town police or fire department. If parks were inclined to be jealous of each other, its bigger brothers could laugh off the mention of Bryce as easily as a physician of forty years ago could have passed by the name of Rochester, Minn.. But forty years from now—well, you'd better plan to visit this "Art Gallery of the Ages" much earlier than that, because some of these days there's going to be an awful traffic jam, even out there in Utah!

Bryce canyon, which became a national monument in 1923 and graduated into full-fledged parkdom in 1929, is one of the smallest of the entire list of twenty-one, having only twenty-two square miles' area in comparison to Yellowstone's 3,426 or Mount McKinley's 2,345. It is not even big enough to have its own superintendent—in fact having only a minority interest in its superintendent, its supervisor, its chief ranger, and its chief clerk. They are borrowed from Zion national park, 54 miles away by air and 158 by road (although a new and shorter highway is now practically completed). Bryce has no animal life, with the possible exception of a few deer; there were no animals to start with, and so far, apparently, not even the Union Pacific hotel manager has happened to think of borrowing some. The park hasn't even a ranger, except the two temporarily employed in the summer—one to give hikes and lectures, and the other to be policeman for visiting automobile traffic (and to shoo the neighboring ranchers' live stock home, occasionally).

But in spite of these small beginnings, this toddling tot of the park system is dreaming big dreams. Why? Because the place has not only beauty but a fascinating individuality, too; also a touch of drama. There's something about that awesome two-by-three-mile horseshoe-shaped chasm of erosion's most fantastic forms, that grips and holds you; they stand like a petrified march-of-wooden-soldiers-on-dress-parade, and there's a mysterious appeal about them that makes you want to stand guard with them through all eternity! There is no more restless creature in the world, probably, than the American motorist; but of some 17,000 who visited the park last year, at least a third stayed over long enough to be counted at the ranger's evening lecture. And more than one-fourth of the total summer registration actually followed the guide around, and into, the canyon on his daily nature hikes!

The nation is fortunate in that its two newest parks, Bryce canyon and the Teton playground, are of such superlative individuality and therefore of national appeal. There are three or four parks in the system already, unfortunately, which seem to have only a nominal and therefore regrettable claim to that distinction; and congress is constantly besieged with additional demands for park creation which would flatter local pride but which reflect little if any reason for national attention or expenditure. Make state parks out of them, a thousand times yes; and some, like Carlsbad or Mammoth caves or the Great Smoky mountain region, might presumably fit unashamed in the same distinguished family circle with Yellowstone or Bryce or Yosemite or the Grand canyon; but as for the purely local proteges, here's hoping for statesmen with the courage to forget them!

But back to Bryce. "Beg, borrow, or steal," summarized one visitor, "if you must, ride on a pullman, a day coach, or the bampus; go in an auto, a bus, or a buggy, or just plain hoof it. But do not fail to visit Zion park, Kaibab forest, Bryce canyon, and Cedar breaks. Words are inadequate. See them yourself." (© 1936, Western Newspaper Union.)

Evening Story for the Children

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

"Do you like having part of you in swimming all the time?" Harry asked Taurus, known as the Bull, who had told him his sky story.

"Why not?" asked Taurus. Harry thought he was a very odd creature. "When you swim don't you let just your head stick out of the water?"

"Yes, except when I dive." "I don't dive. I have my own ways. I have splendid horns—there are two fine stars at the tips, and the famous Hyades make an outline of my face."

"I know that Aldebaran is your fiery eye."

"I'm glad you know that. I know it, too. Do you think for one moment a bull such as I would have one of your meek, pale, watery eyes? Not for a second."

"I don't like pale watery eyes anyway," said Harry. "Glad you don't," Taurus responded. "You see my eye is no unimportant member—it is a splendid star living right on the Milky Way. Don't you think that's a nice place for a home?"

"Wonderful. I wish I could get my family to spend a summer there! I have a mother and a father and a sister Nancy, but then I like to see my friends in the summer time, too. I don't suppose they could all come. And I suppose it would be hard to get back if my father found he had a business engagement. But how much I will have to tell them!"

"I can understand," Taurus said, in a very quiet, friendly way for a star-creature with the name of Bull, "that you don't want to be without your friends. Even Aldebaran has a companion star. Aldebaran lies right in the path your Moon takes when it travels. Sometimes you can't see

"Aldebaran is Your Fiery Eye."

Aldebaran because the Moon goes between him and your earth. He's not a real member of the Hyades group, as they say, for he has his own kind of motion. We say he hasn't the family ways."

Harry looked about him and now saw five members of the Pleiades which looked, in outline, something like a dipper with a short handle, but they were far away from the other dipper so he was certain he would not get them confused when he got back to the earth.

The Pleiades were in the Bull's constellation (as they always called a family group of stars) and Taurus told him how many names they had been given by different people. Some had called them Many Little Ones, others had called them Hen and Chickens, still others had called them the Seven Sisters and others the Seven Brothers, while in ancient Persia a petition to the king was always granted at the time they were at their best.

"You see," explained Taurus, "six of the seven famous ones are always fairly easy to pick out though there are really several thousand stars in their number."

"Then my Hyades stars are celebrated, spreading themselves out, and yet all traveling in the same direction and at the same pace."

"When you're down on your Earth you can remember that if you look from the Hyades toward the northwest you'll see the Pleiades. Their name means rain and people years ago used to call them the rain stars. But here comes Cosmo. That means you must be off. Well, don't forget your friend the Bull."

"I certainly won't," said Harry as he left him.

"As though I could forget him," Harry told Cosmo afterward, "with the Hyades and the Pleiades as part of him, and Aldebaran, living right in the Milky Way, as his right eye. And such a friendly creature, too!"

"You've heard of Aldebaran a great deal. Well, when you're back on the earth remember that a line from Aldebaran through the belt of Orion

How to Do "Needle Painting"

By JULIA BOTTOMLEY

ladies of the court to have some famous artist paint quaint pictures on linen, they in turn adding a few cunning touches of embroidery.

It is now possible to buy in art needlework sections lovely printed-on-linen pictures (7 by 9 inches) which are that exquisite they look like original watercolor sketches. Several of the subjects available are reproduced in miniature in the illustration. Of course in this black-and-white newspaper print the beauty of the actual coloring of these pictures has to be left to the imagination.

Very few instructions are necessary. You can do as little or as much embroidery as you wish. Just a few stitches imparts a feeling of being handmade, a feature which ever endears and glorifies a gift in the eyes of the recipient.

The quaint Godey's Fashions, 1900, never fails to make an instantaneous hit. Perfectly "darling" to hang in a young girl's boudoir! The diagram in the upper left corner of the illustration indicates type of stitching employed and their placement. For the English garden scenes and other landscapes, the hollyhocks are worked with stitches as sketched in lower right corner, the salutes in "lacy-daisy" stitch, while the bird of brilliant plumage is highlighted with long and short stitches.

After the embroidery is completed, press with warm iron on wrong side. Lay it on the cardboard which comes with the frame of glass ebony with black enameled (gold-stenciled) mat which has been especially designed for these needle-painted water-color pictures. By the way here's nothing smarter in the way of frames than these all in black. They contrast the bright colors of the picture with exquisite accuracy.

if the work must be hurriedly stopped, or for protection during sitting. It often serves as a place on which to pin up partly finished work and various ways have been devised of making such a screen hold small sewing accessories. When not wanted the screen is folded up and put away.

One use of this kind is shown in the picture, taken by the bureau of home economics of the United States Department of Agriculture. Pockets similar to shoe bags were made on a width of material as large as two panels of the screen. Osnaburg, a durable and inexpensive household cotton fabric, which has become widely known, was used for the 80 pleated pockets hang on the screen. Patterns and needles are then stored in a very handy way within reach of the person working at the sewing machine.

Rails Travel Far

According to Henry Faesal, a South African agriculturalist, rails and miles are great travelers. He marked more than 1,000 of them and within a few months they were reported to have crossed the world, and more than 500 of them went as far as England and Scotland.

Dainty Way to Serve Berries

You thought of having strawberry shortcake for dessert—but there wasn't time to make any sort of foundation for it—either sponge cake or biscuit dough, and yet you have plenty of whipping cream, and unusually fine berries. Try this suggestion from the bureau of home economics:

1 quart selected ripe strawberries 1/2 cup or more plain double cream 1/2 cup powdered sugar

Wash the berries well, drain, and cap. Whip the cream until stiff, add the salt and sugar, and continue the whipping until all are well blended. Fold the berries carefully without crushing them into the cream until each berry is coated. Serve at once. If the berries stand after combining with the cream, the juice is likely to be drawn from them and the cream thinned.

Going a vacationing? Planning to take along some sort of "light" fancy work—something simple and easy to do, something that will show up handsomely with little effort? Well, here it is! Just about the simplest, most graceful, most adorable bit of needlecraft that has recently found its way into present-day fancywork departments and specialty shops. It is called needle painting. The art of "painting with the needle" dates back in the time of Queen Victoria. It being the custom in those days for the

JACOB, A SELFISH MAN, TRANSFORMED

LESSON TEXT—Genesis 25:29-34; 28:18-22; 29:18-20; 31:1-4, 18.
GOLDEN TEXT—For what is a man profited if he shall gain the whole world and lose his own soul?
PRIMARY TOPIC—Learning to Be Unselfish.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Learning to Be Unselfish.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—What Does It Mean to Be Honest?
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Learning from Experience.

I. Jacob's Birth (25:21-26).
In answer to Isaac's prayer, a seed was given unto him. Before Jacob's birth God revealed unto Rebekah the fact that he should have the place of pre-eminence. "The elder shall serve the younger." In this God reversed the ordinary law concerning the position of the elder son. The act of taking hold of Esau's heel as he was born, indicated Jacob's nature. The name Jacob means "supplanter."
II. Jacob's Schemes (25:27-34; 27:1-20).
1. He secured Esau's birthright (25:27-34).
It was right for Jacob to have the birthright since it was according to God's plan as revealed to Rebekah, but his scheme to get it was reprehensible. He took advantage of a brother's weakness to drive a sharp bargain.
2. Secured his father's blessing (27:1-20). (1) Was requested to get venison for his father. (2) Rebekah's scheme (vv. 5-33). It was God's plan that Jacob should be at the head, but He did not need the sin of Jacob and his mother to bring it about.
III. Jacob's Flight to Haran (ch. 28).
Jacob's deceit and cunning got him into trouble. He was compelled to flee from his outraged brother. He now began to reap what he had sown.
1. Jacob's vision at Bethel (28:10-15).
Jacob not only had to flee to save his life, but he had to leave home and mother. When night overtook him, he was obliged to sleep in a field with a stone for a pillow. It was under such circumstances that the Lord gave him the wonderful vision at Bethel. (1) He saw a ladder reaching from earth to heaven (v. 12). Jesus Christ is the ladder, connecting earth and heaven for us (John 1:51). (2) He saw angels of God upon the ladder (v. 12). These angels were divine helpers to render needed assistance along life's way. (3) The Lord standing above the ladder (vv. 13-17). To show Jacob that the ladder did not reach merely into space God appeared and talked with him. a. He declared that He was the God of Abraham and of Isaac, thus assuring Jacob that the same favor that was over his fathers was over him (v. 13). b. He renewed the covenant as to the land. Though Jacob was now fleeing from the land, the covenant would not fail. (v. 13). c. He assured him of a numerous seed (v. 14). d. The divine presence with Jacob (v. 15). Though he had sinned, God was with him. e. Jacob should be brought again into the land (v. 15).

2. Jacob's vow (vv. 19-22).
His vow included three things. (1) Dedication of himself to God (v. 12). (2) Establishment of worship (vv. 19, 20). (3) Consecration of his substance (v. 22).
IV. Jacob's Return to Canaan (chaps. 31-33).
1. The Lord instructs him (31:11-21).
Twenty years have elapsed since his experiences at Bethel. These years were spent in Padan-arath with his mother's people. Here he served Laban for twenty years. Though it was the purpose of God for him to return, he took clandestine leave of Laban. Laban pursued him in anger, but God appeared to Laban and forbade him to lay hands upon Jacob.
2. Jacob on the way (Gen. 32).
Though Jacob fled from Laban's pursuit, a more formidable enemy faced him in the person of Esau. (1) Jacob meeting the angels (v. 1). (2) Jacob praying (vv. 9-12). Not receiving a reply from Esau, Jacob cast himself upon God in prayer. (3) The angel wrestling with Jacob (vv. 24-32). He continued to wrestle until the approach of morning, not knowing that it was God in human form wrestling with him. God humbled him by dislocating his thigh. When thus humbled, he quit wrestling and clung to God. He got the blessing when he, conscious of his weakness, laid hold upon God. (4) A new name (v. 28). He was no longer Jacob, the "supplanter," but Israel, a "prince of God." His new name was given him after he had a new nature.

3. Finding God
If we cannot find God in your house or mine, upon the roadside or the margin of the sea, in the bursting seed or opening flower, in the day duty and the night musings, I do not think we should discern Him more in the grass of Eden or beneath the moonlight of Gethsemane.—James Martineau.

Gratitude to God makes even a temporal blessing a taste of heaven.—Romaine.

Not of Much Value as Mother's Little Helper
Lady Heath, who made the first woman's solo flight from the Cape to Cairo, is a firm believer that women should have either homes or careers. She has little patience with those who have neither. "They are parasites," she avers.
"When I returned from my African flight I was tendered a big reception," she relates, "at which I met an old friend of mine, who, on the last occasion when I had seen him, was proudly exhibiting a charming little daughter. I inquired about her."
"I suppose by this time she's quite large enough to be a great help to her mother."
"No!" sighed my friend, "she won't be of any help to her mother until she can play a better game of bridge."

German "Luggies" Ira Scots
Loyal Scots are perturbed over the importation of "luggies," miniature milking pails used for porridge dishes for children. The "luggie" has been distinctly a Scotch institution until the death in Cumberland recently of the last luggie maker of the country. Since then Germany has been shipping into Scotland cheap imitations of the unique bowl.

Valuable Chemical
The statement has been made that barium is worth $12,000,000 an ounce, but not because of its scarcity or value—because of the work it does. Barium is a chemical element that is used to coat the filament of vacuum tubes with a saving of $100,000 per gram of barium used. At this rate an ounce would be worth $12,000,000.

Improvement in the "Talkies" at the Crystal Theatre

We are happy to notice the improvement in the quality of Sound being produced at the Crystal Theatre. The Programs now being shown are good, and in this we believe that all the regular patrons will agree.

Mr. Pittman is gradually correcting the acoustics of the building, and says that when this is completed, they will have Sound as good as the best.

He says that the thing that is causing him the most worry, is the new names and faces on the screen. Our people have not yet had time to become acquainted with them. The producers made a rush to Broadway for their talent when the "Talkies" became popular, and a great many mistakes were made, but generally speaking, they are good, yet strange to us, the old "Silent" Stars continue to draw the best crowds, and we are safe in making the prediction, that all of them that were able to stand the "Talkie" test are safe for years to come.

One new star, and the most talked of singer-on-the screen today, is John Boles. He will be seen and heard here next Saturday and Sunday, in "The Captain of the Guard." This is the first of a series of Specials that will be shown here soon.

Johnny Hall

Ex-Lincoln County Representative to the state legislature, Mrs. Hall and daughter Jeanne came in from the Hall ranch near Ancho, Saturday, accompanied by his father, J. E. Hall and brother, Halley. Johnny had been in Washington, D. C., for the past four years, engaged in the study of law, during which time, he deserted the ranks of Benedicts and was married. They will go to Santa Fe, where Johnny will take the examination for the bar, after which, if he is successful (which we know he will be) he will engage in the practice of law, somewhere in the state, so we may expect to hear of his shingle being tacked up in some thriving locality of his home state in the near future, in which undertaking, we wish him a full and overflowing measure of success.

The Ball Game Last Sunday

was played by our two local teams, after the Mesalero Indians failed to appear, but the fans enjoyed the game between the home teams more than any that had been played this season. The East-Siders played in hard luck after the beginning of the 4th inning, but before that time, the score was 2 and 2.

Then the jinx mixed up with the boys and it only needed a few costly errors on either side to decide the result and the jinx fell to the East-Siders, allowing the Carrizozo's to wind up with a score of 17 to 7. But it was a good game and for a time, the fans were at a loss to know who would come out ahead. Everybody enjoyed the game and cheered each side as the many good plays were made. The East-Siders are practicing daily to go to Lincoln next Sunday.

Carrizozo will travel to Corona Sunday, for a game there.
