Hudgens Boys Killed at Yuma, Arizona

Last Friday night, a message was received at Capitan for Mrs. Wm. Copeland of Alto, to the effect that her two sons, John and Wm. Hudgens, had been killed at Yuma, Arizona. It will be remembered that several weeks ago, William, who was a lover of motorcycle riding, ran into a yearling steer on the highway near the old A. B. Zumwalt place and suffered injuries which kept him in the hospital until a short time ago, during which time, his brother, John, who at the time of the accident was in California and being notified of the trouble, came here and remained until William could leave the hospital.

Thinking William was strong enough to stand the trip to California, John decided to take his brother with him and both thought it would be well to make the trip on the motorcycle. Everything went well, it seems, until they got to Yuma, or near that place, when they met with an accident and were both killed. The message did not say in what manner they were killed, but on receipt of the sad news, which did not reach the family until Saturday morning, Barney L. Luck, storekeeper at Alto, near where the Copelands lived, volunteered to take them to Yuma in his car and they made the trip. The family arrived here with the bodies on No. 14 Tuesday morning and went on to Capitan and the funeral was held that afternoon, the remains being interred in the Angus cemetery. In their deep sorrow, the family have the sympathy of their many friends over the county.

Sixto Ortiz Dies

Only a short time after being ill with a bad cold, the malady developed into pneumonia, and about 4 o'clock Monday morning, Sixto Ortiz passed away at his ranch home at the head of the Malpais.

Mr. Ortiz came to Lincoln County from Mexico over 40 years ago, was naturalized and became a good, respectable citizen. Before making Carrizozo his home, he and his wife resided for many years at White Oaks, where they reared and schooled their children, two boys, Joaquin and Daniel and a girl, Mrs. Frank Phillips, deceased.

Funeral services were held at St. Rita's Church Wednesday afternoon and interment made in the local cemetery. To the bereaved widow and sons, who were here from Arizona, to attend the funeral, the sympathy of their many friends is extended.

Mrs. Elizabeth Gallacher sent this office word from Yellowstone Park that she is enjoying her vacation.

Stuffed Cymling is a Welcome Dish

Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.
Cymling, eggplant, green peppers, large spanish onions and cabbage, are among the vegetables often served stuffed. Usually the stuffing is made of other vegetables and some cooked starchy material such as bread crumbs, rice, or spaghetti, to give body. Two or three flavors that blend well together are generally chosen from among such vegetables as tomato, corn, celery, cabbage, spinach, string beans and carrots. Onion flavor is desirable in almost every combination. Small amounts of two or three cooked vegetable leftovers may well be used in the stuffing.

Below is a recipe for stuffed cymling, from the bureau of home economics of the United States Department of Agriculture. Vegetables are suggested, but not required.

- 1 large tender cymling
1 1/2 cups dry bread crumbs
1 lb. chopped onion
1 lb. chopped green pepper
4 tb. butter
Salt and pepper
1/2 cup vegetable if desired, such as cooked peas, carrots, beans or celery
Crisped bacon or cubes of salt pork if desired

Wash the cymling. Scoop out the pulp with a spoon, being careful not to break the outer skin. Cook the cymling shell until tender in boiling salted water. Remove and drain. While the shell is still warm, rub the inside with butter so the flavor will go through the vegetable. In the meantime, brown the onion and green pepper in the fat, add the bread crumbs, and stir until well mixed. Also cook the inside of the cymling until tender and dry, add to it the seasonings and the bread crumbs. If any of the vegetables mentioned are used, or the crisped bacon or salt pork, mix with the other ingredients. Place the mixture in the shell and cover the top with buttered crumbs. Bake in the oven until hot through and golden brown on top. Cut in slices and serve at once.

HINTS FOR HOUSEWIVES

Lack of appetite in a child is an indication of something wrong. He may be ill, tired, or upset.

Screens at kitchen windows should cover the entire window and permit opening at top and bottom for ventilation.

Since mildew stains are much more frequent in warm weather, the wise housewife does not leave clothes for any length of time sprinkled and rolled for ironing, or stored in any damp dark place.

Centralize the sewing equipment and save time in making the children's summer clothes. If the sewing basket and machine, ironing board, iron, cutting table, and other supplies are in one room, a great deal of effort is saved.

Sailor Hat in Fashion Picture

By JULIA BOTTOMLEY

Well, well, well, who would 'a' believed it—the sailor hat has come to life again! Not so surprising, come to think of it, rather to be expected seeing that fashion is so frankly delving into the past for inspiration—re-creating, as it were, just one old timer after another and labelling them as 1930 modes.

So it is that the new straw sailors are among the proudest displays in the very most voguish shops. Women arriving from abroad are wearing them, too. Now that the sailor hat is the next play in the game of fashion, it behooves every woman who would lead in styles that are swankiest, to lose no time in choosing (for the types are many) the sailor which becomes her best.

Two of the newest sailors are shown in the picture. The model at the top to the right is in the very smart light-weight rough straw, which though arriving late in the season is proving a keen competitor to the smooth linen-like exotic straws. The sailor below in the illustration features a mushroom brim—watch mushroom brims, they are coming "in," according to latest Paris reports.

Not that the revival of the sailor is in any way retarding the popularity of the little beret. On the contrary, berets of every description are flourishing to the extent that there is no limit to the number finding way into mllady's wardrobe—a beret to match each costume.

Of course every collection includes a crocheted angora beret or two, as pictured, most likely in white, for white accessories are "the thing," although the pastel angoras also are chic with summer sports outfits. Berets crocheted of chenille are very good style. Others of linen thread, being washable, have captured the fancy of the practical summer girl.

Wearing black velvet berets, too! They are ever so jaunty and worn with sheer colorful chiffons and the smart pastel silks, they are as effective as can be. In discussing berets, it will never do to omit the handsome wearable types of fine milan straw. These are certainly good looking worn with the tailored silk suit.

Still there are more to follow. The gardenia beret, for instance, with two snowy gardenias posed perkily at the topmost point of its peaked crown.

Food for the Family Table

By NELLIE MAXWELL

While fresh eggs are plentiful and reasonable in price, the angel cake is more often served. For those who enjoy a delicate cake, not too sweet, the angel food is the most popular. It is a cake which may be given to children freely, and sponge cake is another.

Angel Food.—Sift one cup of pastry flour three times with one-eighth of a teaspoonful of cream of tartar. Measure one cupful of egg whites and one cupful of sugar. Add a pinch of salt to the egg white and one-eighth of a teaspoonful of cream of tartar, beat them until stiff but not dry, add the sugar, a very little at a time, flavor with a teaspoonful of vanilla and fold in the sifted flour and cream of tartar in the same way. Pour into an ungreased tube pan, place in a slow oven and bake at least an hour and a half. The secret of the texture and tenderness of the cake is in the baking. When baked it should be light and almost like an omelet in tenderness.

Melba Pastry.—Take one cupful of oven-dried crumbs, when a golden brown put through a food chopper. Mix well with one-third of a cupful of sugar, one teaspoonful of cinnamon and four tablespoonfuls of butter. Line a large pie plate with the mixture and bake in a slow oven for 20 minutes. Allow the crust to cool, then pour in the cooled filling.

Banana Custard.—Slice three ripe bananas. Cook two beaten eggs, one-fourth cupful of cake crumbs and one cupful of milk two minutes or until the custard lightly coats the spoon. Add two teaspoonfuls of lemon rind and stir in the bananas. Pour into a greased baking dish, set in a pan of hot water and bake until the pudding is set. Cover with a meringue and brown.

Gooseberry Pie.—Cover two cupfuls of gooseberries with cold water, heat to the boiling point and drain at once. Cool, add one cupful of sugar, two tablespoonfuls of flour well blended with it, a pinch of salt. Put into a lined pastry tin, dot with bits of butter, cover with another crust and bake in a hot oven at first, then reduce the heat and bake for about 35 minutes.

A very pretty as well as an appetizing dessert may be prepared by slicing jelly roll and placing a rose of whipped cream, sweetened and flavored, piped in the center with a pastry tube.

The personality in food is supplied in various ways, first its appearance, next its taste, then, of course, its food value, which appeals to the calorie counter. When food is dull, lacking in color, tasteless, is insipid, look to the little spanish pepper to give zest to your dishes.

The flavor of the pimiento is not its only attraction; the color adds brilliance to an otherwise dull dish. The little pepper comes packed in several sizes so that if one serves two, a small bottle is provided, and when it is to be the chief ingredient there is the seven-ounce can. For stuffing, one may use any desired mixture. The peppers should be drained, placed in muffin pans, and they are ready to be filled.

Pimiento Stuffed, With Mushroom Sauce.—Cook one small onion (chopped), one stalk of celery also chopped in two tablespoonfuls of fat

Dyeing Rugs

Rugs may be dyed at home with any of the standard dyes. Clean and dampen the rug first, then lay it flat over newspapers to prevent the dye from staining the floor, and apply the hot dye with a scrub brush. Any color may be used, depending on the shade desired, but the original color must be considered. For example, a soft red applied over a tan rug may make a rich warm shade of brown, or applied over a bright green will give an attractive gray green.

until tender. Add one-half pound of round steak (ground), salt, pepper, and a dash of cayenne to season, and cook five minutes; remove from the heat, add three-fourths of a cupful of cooked rice, one slightly beaten egg; mix well and fill the peppers. Bake until brown.

Pimientos Canapes.—Split the six pimientos after draining, using a seven-ounce can. Sprinkle the inner surface with salt and cayenne. Place a rectangular slice of cheese lengthwise of the pepper and roll up. Skewer with toothpicks securely. Roll in flour, cook in a small amount of fat three minutes or until the cheese melts and the flour browns. Serve on oval slices of toast well buttered and hot.

To Get Rid of Pantry Insects

Cleaning Cavities With a Skewer as a Precaution Against Cereal Beetles.

Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.

There are more than forty different beetles and moths that infest grains and other dry stored foods. Many of them are chiefly troublesome in granaries and warehouses and on railroad cars used for transporting such goods. Some of them occasionally invade kitchens and storerooms in private dwellings. Among those most frequently found are the cadelle beetle, the mealworm beetle, the confused flour beetle, and the saw-toothed grain beetle. These beetles feed on flour, grain products, dried fruits, seeds, nuts, spices, tobacco and other starchy and woody materials. Some prefer one food and some another, while some are quite general feeders.

The bureau of entomology of the United States Department of Agriculture explains that these beetles can live on very small quantities of dry cereal that they find in cracks, corners and crevices of flour bins, pantries and kitchen cabinets. So that to food material is lodged in such places to invite these unwelcome visitors. The girl in the illustration is shown cleaning the corners of a cabinet with a skewer to remove any cereal, including flour or bread crumbs, lodged there.

The Indian meal moth is another of the cereal pests that makes a loose webbing sometimes found in cereal boxes. Cleanliness and heat are the best methods of ridding the kitchen and storeroom of meal beetles and moths. All infested material should be burned. All bags and containers in which foods are to be stored should be sterilized. Clean all lint and dust from shelves where the insects might live. Use plenty of hot water and soap in cleaning. If you are cleaning the house during the warm months, area for a few weeks, it is better to throw away small amounts of cereal than to store it with the likelihood that it may become infested and give trouble all through the pantry or storeroom.

Evening Story for the Children

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

"I hope you know," said the Constellation Perseus, "that my star Algol is the most noted of variable stars."

Harry was glad Perseus did not wait for an answer, for up to this moment, if the truth were known, he was not sure that he had even so much as heard of Algol.

Evidently Perseus thought he knew for he went right on with his talking. "In the old days they thought Algol was rather unlucky in spite of his brightness. Alpha, to be sure, is my brightest star, and Alpha lives in a regular starry meadow."

"Why did they think Algol an unlucky star?" Harry asked.

"You see Algol's name means Demon, and his light varies which is the reason he is called a variable star. Algol has also been called the Double Eye."

"What queer names!" "They are a bit queer," Perseus admitted. "By the way, you know about Medusa, don't you?"

"Yes—but I'd just as soon hear it again." Harry was thinking how many myths he remembered just as soon as they were told to him again. "Medusa," commenced Perseus proudly, "was one of three Gorgon sisters. If you looked at one of them you were turned to stone. That was the old tale. They had snakes for hair."

"I remember. I always thought they were horrible." "Andromeda was the daughter of Cepheus—you'll notice I'm not far from Andromeda and she is just before Cassiopeia whom you've met—I want you to keep your direction. You've heard how vain Cassiopeia was. Well, her daughter was punished, too, for her mother's vanity.

She was chained to a rock so a sea monster could come and capture her."

"I think that was meant to punish a daughter for her mother's vanity."

"I didn't think it was fair, so when I came along with Medusa's head which I had taken without looking at her face, I decided then and there I'd do something for Andromeda."

"I was going to help her in the first place because I felt sorry for her, but do you know that I fell right in love with Andromeda when I saw her? I flung the head of Medusa in front of the sea monster who was just reaching for her so that he was turned to stone. Then I took Andromeda away with me, and here we live in the sky, right near each other and happy."

"That's a peach of a story," Harry said. "Andromeda deserved and I could do," Perseus went on. "Some time when you're down on your hands and up at her fine Nebula—the Great Andromeda Nebula it is called.

"But I've got away from my subject! I was going to tell you about Algol."

"Yes, with all his queer names." "Algol, and some other little stars nearby, make up the Medusa's head which I carried in my hand when I rescued the fair Andromeda. But Algol improved after he got up in the sky."

"Have you time to hear another little story about me?"

"I'm sure I have." Cosmo was asleep and Harry was anxious to hear all he could from this interesting Perseus.

"They said that I made the Milky Way when I stirred up so much star dust in the heavens in my hurry to perform the deeds I had set out to do."

"The brave deeds, you mean." Perseus smiled. "I'd rather the praise come from some one else and not from me. Of course the story that I made the Milky Way is nothing more than a fanciful story, but it is a pleasing one for me to tell."

"I don't want you to think I'm conceited so I'll talk some more about Algol. I don't want you to have a bad idea of him. Nor do I want you to feel sorry for him. He has a companion and they have an excellent time traveling around. Sometimes he is brighter than his companion and sometimes his companion is brighter than he is."

When Food Sours

Lots of folks who think they have "indigestion" have only an acid condition which could be corrected in five or ten minutes. An effective anti-acid like Phillips Milk of Magnesia soon restores digestion to normal.

Phillips does away with all that sourness and gas right after meals. It prevents the distress so apt to occur two hours after eating. What a pleasant preparation to take! And how good it is for the system! Unlike a burning dose of soda—which is but temporary relief at best—Phillips Milk of Magnesia neutralizes many times its volume in acid.

Next time a hearty meal, or too rich a diet has brought on the least discomfort, try—

The Mazaroff Mystery

THE STORY

Mervyn Holt is engaged by a man calling himself Mazaroff as a traveling companion. After a short tour they put up at the Woodcock inn on Marraedale moor. They meet, casually, Mrs. Elphinstone and Sheila Merchlison. Mazaroff tells Holt they are his wife and daughter and that his real name is Merchlison. That night Mazaroff fails to return to the inn and his disappearance is unexplained. Holt meets Sheila and tells her of Mazaroff's disappearance. They go to her cousin's (Verner Courthope's) shooting box hoping to find some word of Mazaroff. There they meet Mr. Armitage and Doctor Eccleshare. Holt is questioned by Police Sergeant Manners and a reporter, Bowman. Mazaroff's murdered body is found. Crole, Mazaroff's lawyer, and Maythorne, private detective, arrive. Valuable diamonds that Mazaroff usually carried are missing. Mrs. Elphinstone scoffs at the idea that Mazaroff is Merchlison.

CHAPTER III—Continued.

"Nothing absurd, ma'am, in my telling you that," retorted Crole, with the least touch of asperity. "Holt," turning to me, "you will just tell us precisely what Mazaroff confided to you, the second night of your stay at the Woodcock. Tell the whole story." I told the whole story, as we all stood there in that little room. But, though I watched Mrs. Elphinstone closely during my narrative, I saw no sign of any wavering on her part.

"The thing's absurd!" she declared in the end. "Utterly, absurd! The man was probably some adventurer who had got hold of certain facts about Merchlison's past history, and wanted to make money out of his knowledge!"

"Um!" Crole said quietly. "Now that, ma'am, if you will pardon me for using plain speech to a lady, is indeed an utterly absurd suggestion! Mr. Mazaroff, or, as we should call him, Mr. Merchlison, so far from being a needy adventurer, was a wealthy man, a very wealthy man! And if you will pardon me still further, I will just put something before you. If this man was, as he asserted himself to be, and as we shall probably prove, Andrew Merchlison, who married you twenty-two or three years ago, your second marriage with Mr. Elphinstone is no marriage at all! You are still, in law, Mrs. Merchlison, and—"

"What is all this leading up to?" demanded Mrs. Elphinstone. "I—"

"To this, ma'am," continued Crole, lifting an admonitory finger, "and a very important point, too, as you will quickly see. Although I have had very little dealing with this unfortunate man, I have had some dealing, while he was in London, and it is my distinct impression that he has died intestate."

"Well—and what has that to do with me?" questioned Mrs. Elphinstone.

"Merely this, ma'am. If he was Merchlison, and you his wife, and this young lady your child, you and she come in, between you, for every penny he's left! And there will be a great many pennies, or I'm a Dutchman! My advice to you, ma'am, is this—before settling on an attitude of incredulity and denial, just step across to the Woodcock, and see if you cannot satisfy yourself that the man lying there, sadly disfigured, but identifiable, was not the man he claimed to be."

With this Crole made one of his old-fashioned bows and walked out, and I followed him, leaving mother and daughter standing looking at each other. As we passed the gates, Crole pulled out a snuffbox and took a hearty pinch.

"That's a d-d flint-like woman, Holt," he said, cynically. "Hard—hard—and obstinate!"

My own impressions of Mrs. Elphinstone were precisely those which Mr. Crole expressed so emphatically. But I was just then thinking of other matters.

"If the real Andrew Merchlison was drowned in Mombasa bay," I said, "how could—"

Crole interrupted me with a sharp, sceptical laugh.

"Aye, but was he so drowned—there, or elsewhere, or anywhere?" he exclaimed. "My own belief is that he was never drowned at all! For all that Sinclair, the writer of that letter, knew, Merchlison had arranged for a boat to come off for him at a certain hour at night—it comes, and he slips off into it and is clean gone. Easy! He could have sent money and things—especially money—ahead of him to wherever he was bound. Didn't you tell me he spoke of Durban?"

"Of Durban, yes," I answered. "It was there he took the name of Mazaroff."

cabin trunk or no cabin trunk, monument or no monument, I believe that Sallie Mazaroff was Andrew Merchlison, and that he was murdered as Merchlison, and not as Mazaroff."

"As—Merchlison?" I exclaimed, pausing in sheer surprise. "But—who knew him, here, as Merchlison?"

"That's got to be found out, my lad!" he answered, with a knowing look.

We found Maythorne standing at the door of the inn, in company with Musgrave. Maythorne gave Crole a sort of informing smile as we came up to them.

"Mr. Musgrave has just made a discovery," he said. "His gun is missing."

"Not three months since I gave twenty pounds for it!" Musgrave muttered. "Very near brand new it was! Couldn't have believed it could have been taken from there, neither."

"And where was it taken from?" asked Crole.

"It was taken from the private sitting room that Mr. Holt there, and the dead gentleman had," replied the landlord, with a glance at me. "Hung on the wall, on two hooks it was, just inside the door—you may have noticed it, Mr. Holt?"

Mrs. Elphinstone.

"Yes, I noticed a gun there, certainly," I replied. "But I hadn't noticed that it had gone."

"Nor me—only I haven't been into that room this last two or three days," said Musgrave. "It was the missis that found it out—she came to me about it just now. Of course, some of them drover chaps poked their noses in there, and seeing nobody about helped themselves to it—easy enough, that would be."

"Was the gun loaded?" asked Maythorne. "I suppose not?"

"Well, it was," admitted Musgrave. "I kept it loaded—you never know what you may want in a lonely place like this."

"Dangerous, though, to keep a loaded gun about, don't you think?" said Maythorne, good humoredly. "By the bye, what sort of cartridges were there in your gun?"

"Kynoch's, number twelves," replied Musgrave, promptly. "Always use those."

"That might help you in tracing the gun," remarked Maythorne. "You should tell the police that." He turned from the landlord towards the moor, motioning Crole and myself to follow him. "I'm going to have a look at this Reiver's den," he said. "Better come with me. Odd, isn't it, that Musgrave's gun, loaded with number twelves, should disappear on the very night on which Mazaroff is shot dead? Didn't you tell us, Mr. Holt, that the doctor showed you some shot which he called number 'twelves'?"

"He did," I assented.

"I suppose this doctor—what's his name—Eccleshare?—knows number twelves from number tens?" he suggested.

"He's a shooting man, himself," I replied. "Staying at High Cap lodge with a shooting party."

"Ah, then he'd know what he was talking about," he remarked, and turned from me to Crole. "Well—and Mrs. Elphinstone?"

Crole told him all about our doings at Marraedale tower as we walked across the moor. He listened and said little. But I noticed that his eyes grew brighter and his whole air more alert when we came to Reiver's den—a black, gloomy, eerie; just the place for murderous deeds. There was a local policeman on guard there; he showed us the place where Mazaroff's body had lain and been discovered. This was amongst a mass of gorse and bramble at the foot of an almost perpendicular rock, some thirty to forty feet in height.

"My mate, what found him," the policeman said, in a confidential whisper. "He says as how when he first come across him, he thought as the gentleman had fallen over them crags in the darkness. But of course he hadn't—and 'cause why? If he'd ha' fallen from there, he'd ha' broken his neck and every bone in his body; big, heavy man like that he was. And there wasn't no bones broken. My impression, gentlemen, is as how he was murdered first, and carried here afterward. Look how these here shrubs is trampled down!"

Maythorne was closely examining the surroundings: I noticed that he, too, was apparently struck by the evident tramping of the gorse and bramble. Once or twice he stopped, as if to look closer at his objects—once I saw him pick something from the ground and thrust it into his waistcoat pocket. Presently he came back to where Crole and I stood with the policeman.

"If a gun were fired in this ravine, those rocks would give back a fine reverberation," he observed. Then he looked at the policeman. "You didn't hear anything that night?" he asked with a smile.

"I heard nothing," agreed the policeman. "Don't know nobody as did, neither. There's a cottage by here—just back o' that clump o' beech—the folks there, they didn't hear nothing. Not—nothing whatsoever!"

"Oh, there's a cottage there, is there?" said Maythorne. "And who lives in it?"

"Old shepherd and his missis—Jim Cowie, his name is," replied the policeman. "I was talking to him about this affair just now—they heard nothing."

Maythorne turned away, toward the clump of beech. We followed him, along a narrow track that ran at the foot of the rocks under the lower branches of the trees, and went up a flagged path to the cottage door; Maythorne knocked; a woman's voice bade us enter.

Inside, at a round table drawn up in front of a turf fire, an old man and an old woman sat. At sight of us, the old woman rose, politely, but the old man stuck to his seat, eyeing us with no friendly glance. He got in the first word, too, surlily, before Maythorne could address him.

"Don't know nothing about that there affair in the den yonder!" he growled. "Tell'd the policeman just now we neither heard nor see'd anything, and don't want no bother about it."

"My good friend!" said Maythorne, soothingly. "We only wanted to ask you where this footpath, that crosses Reiver's den, and goes outside your garden, leads to? We're strangers."

"There now, master!" remarked the old woman, glancing reprovingly at the old man. "You see now! This gentleman's only asking his way. The path, sir—it leads across the moor to High Cap lodge, sir; Mr. Courthope's place."

"Then it makes a short cut to—where, now?" asked Maythorne.

"Well, sir, it's a short cut from Mr. Courthope's to Birside, and to the Woodcock," replied the old woman. "But it's little used, sir—it's little better than a sheep track."

"And we didn't see nobody along it that night, neither one way nor 'other," growled the old man. "Don't know nothing—ain't got nothing to tell—nothing!"

We backed out, closed the door, and went away. Maythorne smiled—inscrutably.

"All the same, Mazaroff followed this path," he said. "Why? Did he want to go to High Cap lodge?—Mr. Courthope's place? Or—had he been there and was coming away from it? Who knows? However, I want to go up to the top of those rocks."

He turned off the path, and began to make his way to the head of the ravine through the scrub and undergrowth. Crole and I followed. We came out on a sort of plateau, overlooking the black depths in which Mazaroff's body had been found. And there, a solitary figure, stood another old man, older, it seemed, than the crusty and ancient fellow we had just left; grayer, more gnarled and wrinkled, but erect and alert, and evidently quick of hearing as a boy, for at the first sound of our approach he turned sharply upon us.

"The place already attracts the curious," he observed, half-ironically.

"We have something more than idle curiosity to bring us here, sir," retorted Crole, almost sharply. "We are the dead gentleman's friends! May I in my turn ask—as you seem interested in the matter—if you can tell us anything to help us?"

The old man smiled, and looked from one to the other.

"Well, I could tell you of something, but whether it will help you or not I don't know. Yet—it might. I heard a gun discharged—hereabouts—on the night this man was missed."

"And about what time would that be?" inquired Crole.

"About what is usually my bedtime," replied the old fellow. "Ten o'clock." Crole looked at Maythorne. "That must have been the shot," he said, musingly.

Just then the policeman at the foot of the rocks, who had been pottering about the bushes, looked up, and waved his hand excitedly.

"Come down here!" he shouted. "I've found something. A gun!"

We began to descend the rocks to the dense undergrowth amidst which the policeman stood. He was gingerly handling a sporting gun, and as we drew up to him, he nodded toward a clump of overgrown gorse.

"Shoved in beneath that!" he exclaimed. "That's where it was."

Maythorne opened the breech—there were two cartridges in the barrels; one, in the choke-bore barrel, had been discharged. He glanced at Crole.

"Odd!" he said. "Why didn't he use the right-hand barrel?"

The old gentleman, who seemed to be fascinated by the sight of a weapon that had doubtless been used by a murderer, laughed a little.

"If that's the gun that was used to shoot this young gentleman's elderly companion," he remarked, "as I, personally, have no doubt it was, there's a good reason why the murderer used the left-hand barrel. Perhaps you're not a shooting man, sir?—if not, I may tell you that the left-hand barrel of a fowling piece is always narrowed in the bore as it approaches the muzzle; the notion, of course, is that the shot, or discharge, is concentrated rather than diffused. If a man wanted to shoot another man dead, at close quarters, as in this case, he'd naturally use the choke-bore barrel in preference to the other."

Then, with a polite nod, he turned and went off. Maythorne watched him for a minute or so; then glanced at the policeman.

"Who is that old gentleman?" he asked.

"That's Mr. Hassendeane, of Birside house, sir," replied the policeman.

Maythorne drew Crole's attention and mine to a name and address engraved on a plate let into the stock—J. Musgrave, Woodcock Inn, Marraedale. "This is the landlord's missing property, sure enough," he remarked. We left Reiver's den, and went back across the moor. Maythorne, as soon as we reached the Woodcock, sought out Musgrave and told him of the discovery of his missing gun. He hurried over his lunch, and as soon as I had finished mine, addressed me.

"The police are sure to come along here after the finding of that gun," he remarked. "And I want to be beforehand with them. I want to examine Mazaroff's belongings."

"Just so!" murmured Crole. "That, of course, must be done."

We went up to the dead man's room. Maythorne did the searching while Crole and I looked on. In the waistcoat pockets of a well-worn tweed suit Maythorne found a number of loose diamonds, large and small.

"What did I tell you?" exclaimed Crole as the diamonds came to light. "He did carry diamonds, loose, on him? Look at those, now—must be a dozen or so stones there, loose in his pocket! Do you suppose those are worth a lot, Maythorne?—You know more about it, than I do."

"Can't say," replied Maythorne, indifferently. He was more deeply interested in a crumpled scrap of thin paper which he found in an inner pocket and smoothed out before us.

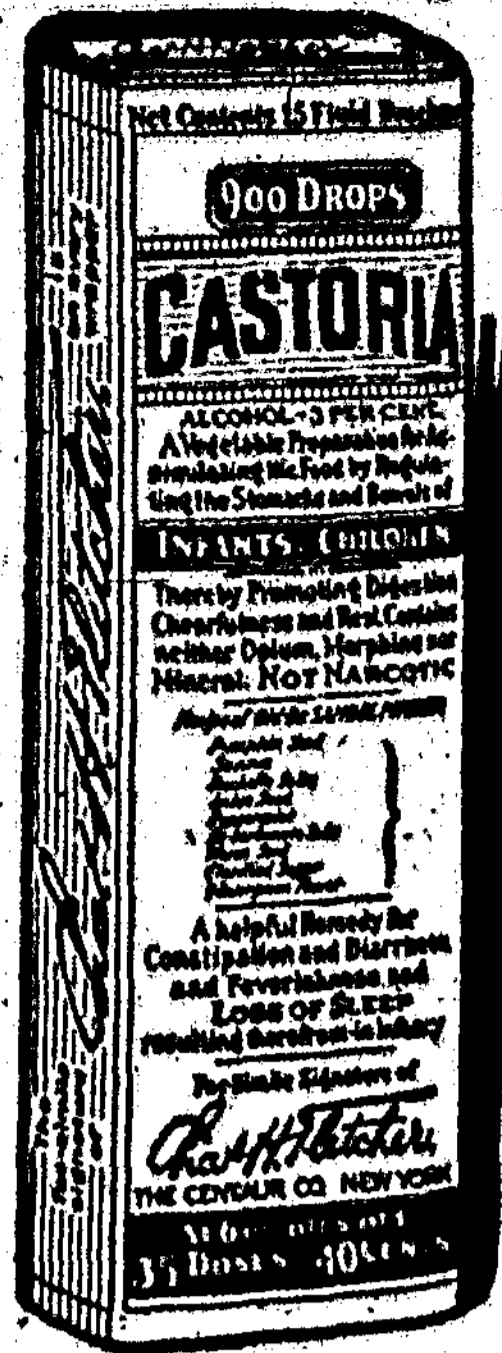

"Look at this!" he said presently. "Here's something, at any rate."

When Babies CRY

Babies will cry, often for no apparent reason. You may not know what's wrong, but you can always give Castoria. This soon has your little one comforted; if not, you should call a doctor. Don't experiment with medicines intended for the stronger systems of adults! Most of those little upsets are soon soothed away by a little of this pleasant-tasting, gentle-acting children's remedy that children like.

It may be the stomach, or may be the little bowels. Or in the case of older children, a sluggish, constipated condition. Castoria is still the thing to give. It is almost certain to clear up any minor ailment, and could by no possibility do the youngest child the slightest harm. So it's the first thing to think of when a child has a coated tongue; won't play, can't sleep, is fretful or out of sorts. Get the genuine; it always has Chas. H. Fletcher's signature on the package.

When Armies Meet in Battle on Chessboard

The principles of chess are based on the struggle of every-day life. It is a battle between two armies of equal strength, fought on a field of 64 squares. Victory usually perches on the more proficient of the two generals in command. In a technical sense, the capture of the opposing king is not permitted, yet when the capture is inevitable, the game is ended. This fact seems to escape the recognition of many players, who direct their entire energies to the capture of pieces or pawns, when consistent play would indicate an easy road to victory through the medium of a checkmate. The temptation to proceed with the attack before all the pawns are in the field is a great one, but such premature attacks are usually abortive and frequently result in disaster. Chess literature abounds in examples of games in which disaster and defeat were a direct consequence of the failure to develop properly one or another of the pieces.—Exchange.

EDITORIAL COLUMN

Chewing of the Rag Versus Merits of the Tariff

The Hawley-Smoot tariff bill, like all other good measures for the protection of American people, as a whole, has been met with condemnation by the Democratic side, but talk is cheap and it takes facts to prove the truth. The first thing said, was that it would work havoc on the farmer. — Let us see. In a letter addressed to State Farm Bureau, Chester H. Gray, official legislative representative for the American Farm Bureau Federation and which has been inserted in the Congressional Record, at the request of Senator Fess, the writer states that the analysis of the new tariff is, "from the agricultural point of view." He defines the objective of the Farm Bureau Federation as not seeking to destroy protection, but to secure it for farm crops so that farmers might profitably enjoy supplying the domestic market. Mr. Gray says that the Farm Bureau's definition of an agricultural product in tariff matters is, one upon which the farmer is the prime beneficiary of a rate of duty and then classifies as an industrial product, one upon which a processor is the prime beneficiary. He says this makes for clearness of comparison. He notes that industrial rates computed at ad valorem rates for the new law have been increased 5.48 points to 11.67 for agriculture, an increase of twice as much in favor of the farmer. The percentage of increase for industrial rates is 14.6 and for agriculture, 51.6, over three times in favor of the farmer. Again, one of their howls is that the prices of shoes will be increased. — All right, let us see. Harold C. Keith, president of the National Boot & Shoe Manufacturers' Association has issued the following statement: "I believe that the law signed by President Hoover is the best compromise that could be effected under present political conditions. We believe that it will be of a benefit to the industry and at the same time be of no increase to the consumer, either on men's or women's manufacture from native American leather." The Department of Commerce reports 1,847 boot and shoe factories in the United States with 208,110 employees drawing wages of $205,080,000 and a production of $944,714,000. This report is for 1927 and since the tariff law was signed, many leather workers are being put back to work in their old positions.

EDITORIAL COLUMN

Chewing of the Rag Versus Merits of the Tariff

The Hawley-Smoot tariff bill, like all other good measures for the protection of American people, as a whole, has been met with condemnation by the Democratic side, but talk is cheap and it takes facts to prove the truth. The first thing said, was that it would work havoc on the farmer. — Let us see. In a letter addressed to State Farm Bureau, Chester H. Gray, official legislative representative for the American Farm Bureau Federation and which has been inserted in the Congressional Record, at the request of Senator Fess, the writer states that the analysis of the new tariff is, "from the agricultural point of view." He defines the objective of the Farm Bureau Federation as not seeking to destroy protection, but to secure it for farm crops so that farmers might profitably enjoy supplying the domestic market. Mr. Gray says that the Farm Bureau's definition of an agricultural product in tariff matters is, one upon which the farmer is the prime beneficiary of a rate of duty and then classifies as an industrial product, one upon which a processor is the prime beneficiary. He says this makes for clearness of comparison. He notes that industrial rates computed at ad valorem rates for the new law have been increased 5.48 points to 11.57 for agriculture, an increase of twice as much in favor of the farmer. The percentage of increase for industrial rates is 14.6 and for agriculture, 51.6, over three times in favor of the farmer. Again, one of their howls is that the prices of shoes will be increased. — All right, let us see. Harold C. Keith, president of the National Boot & Shoe Manufacturers' Association has issued the following statement: "I believe that the law signed by President Hoover is the best compromise that could be effected under present political conditions. We believe that it will be of a benefit to the industry and at the same time be of no increase to the consumer, either on men's or women's manufacture from native American leather." The Department of Commerce reports 1,847 boot and shoe factories in the United States with 203,110 employees drawing wages of $205,080,000 and a production of $944,714,000. This report is for 1927 and since the tariff law was signed, many leather workers are being put back to work in their old positions.

A Puzzle

The following is being reprinted by request—

John Smith went into a drug store and requested change for a $5 bill. The druggist was unable to change the bill.

"Then give me $1 and you keep the bill," replied Mr. Smith. Later in the day Mr. Smith returned to the drug store, gave the druggist $1 and got his $5 bill. — Who was the winner?

It was plain murder, but the boys now feel better and only say, that when the Lincoln — for come here, it will be the reverse.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Congress Finishes Up Much Legislation and Ends the Special Session.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

DETERMINED to bring the special session to a close before the Fourth of July, congress was very busy the first part of the week, clearing up the pending legislation. Taking up the new World War veterans' bill passed by the house, the senate again showed its utter disregard for President Hoover's views and its keen desire for votes next fall. It loaded the measure down with amendments, chief of which was one increasing the pension rates to the Spanish war level. Another would permit veterans who contracted venereal diseases during their war service to obtain disability allowances.

The bill was sent to conference for elimination of the features that would be most objectionable to the President.

Among the bills passed by the house was the Wickersham commission's border patrol bill designed to help in curbing the smuggling of liquor from Canada and Mexico. It establishes an enlarged and unified border patrol service in the treasury under the assistant secretary in charge of the coast guard, increases the number of entry stations, and makes it a misdemeanor, subject to $100 fine, to cross the border except at an entry station, with certain exceptions.

The senate passed the house bill which authorized the President to consolidate and coordinate governmental activities affecting the war veterans.

SECRETARY of the Treasury Mellon announced that the fiscal year 1930 closed with a surplus in the treasury of $184,000,000. This amount represented the difference between receipts and expenditures. The public debt was reduced during the year by $740,000,000. There was a net balance in the general fund at the close of the year of $318,000,000.

While the surplus was substantially the same as in the fiscal year 1929, Secretary Mellon pointed out that it included the abnormal sum of $70,000,000 paid by foreign governments in June in cash instead of in securities of the American government and also included abnormal customs receipts, due to anticipation of tariff legislation.

SENATORS JOHNSON of California, Moses of New Hampshire and Robinson of Indiana fled with the senate their minority report from the foreign relations committee, setting forth their reasons for opposing ratification of the London naval treaty. These reasons are already well known to the public and need not be repeated.

Dispatches from Washington said that the national defense committee of the American Legion had made a report two weeks previously recommending that the Legion declare for rejection of the treaty, and that nothing more had been heard of the matter. One rumor was that administration influences had succeeded in bringing about the pigeonholing of the report.

Over in London two of England's most famous naval commanders, Earl Beatty and Earl Jellicoe, made hot attacks on the treaty, asserting that by signing it their government was throwing away "the sea power by which the British empire came into being and developed into what it is today."

PRESIDENT HOOVER has named as head of the new federal power commission Lieut. Gen. Edgar Jadwin, who in his service as chief of army engineers gained a thorough knowledge of the waterways of the country. His nomination, with those of the other four commission members, will be sent to the senate in special session this summer for confirmation. When the members have taken office the new commission will supplant the old one, which had as its members the secretary of war, interior and agriculture, and which, since 1909, has supervised the expenditures of about $900,000,000 for power development.

In the new commission applications for power plants are to be placed in the hands of five $10,000 a year men who, the act stipulates, may have no other occupation. Nor may they have been connected in any way with, or hold any stock in, power companies. At present 70 applications are pending with the commission.

IN A radio address to the governors' conference which met in Salt Lake City, President Hoover announced that federal, state and local governments had spent or contracted to spend a total of $1,700,000,000 for public works during the first six months of the present calendar year. This figure, he said, exceeded by over $200,000,000 that of the boom year of 1923. He advised the governors that there is still need for "continued serious effort" in every state and community to bring an early business recovery, and to reduce unemployment.

Several of the western governors delivered addresses scoring the federal government for its invasion of states' rights, especially with regard to the public domain, unappropriated lands, and mineral and oil rights.

PROHIBITION enforcement was transferred July 1 from the Treasury department to the Department of Justice, and Attorney General Mitchell became the commander in chief of the federal dry army with Col. Amos W. Woodcock as his chief of staff. It was understood in Washington that the government's limited staff and appropriation will be devoted hereafter to detecting larger commercial bootlegging, while the effort to obtain greater co-operation by the states will be expanded. Many changes have been made already in the force of prohibition administrators, the most important being in the metropolitan areas of New York and Chicago. In the former Maj. Maurice Campbell resigned when ordered to Boston to take charge of alcohol permits and gave out a statement attacking "United States attorneys with political aspirations," and Treasury department officials who "have not been sincere in efforts to enforce this law."

He declared his experience had led him to the following conclusion: "Prohibition is not the logical solution for temperance under our form of government, and I now publicly advocate the repeal of the Eighteenth amendment before the nation is consumed in the fires of its consequences."

Col. John H. J. Herbert became the enforcement boss of Illinois, Indiana and Wisconsin, displacing E. C. Yellowley, who remains in control of alcohol permits in that area.

CONGRESSMAN E. E. DENISON of Illinois, a dry Republican who was indicted on a charge of illegally possessing liquor because of a leaking suitcase, escaped being tried when Justice Gordon of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia sustained a demurrer and held that the indictment failed to particularize the charge against Denison sufficiently to enable the latter to frame a defense and plead an acquittal as a bar to a subsequent indictment.

WITH the stroke of midnight on June 30 the last of the French troops of occupation departed from the Rhineland and Germany was freed from the incubus that had rested on it for almost twelve years. The German people celebrated the event with the ringing of bells, with great parades of singing men and women, with the playing of bands and with fireworks. Especially impressive was the jubilee in the town of Spergau in the Palatinate. Torches and fires lighted the bridges across the Rhine over which marched the town's police force of 600 men and in boats sang "Deutschland über alles."

The final phase of the military evacuation began in Wiesbaden at 9:30 o'clock in the morning. The inter-allied Rhineland commission, which has headquarters at Wiesbaden since September when the headquarters were moved from Coblenz, closed shop. A battalion of French troops lined up on Kaiserstrasse in front of the commission's building where three flags floated—Belgian, British and French.

The regimental band played the "Brabançonne" and the Belgian flag slowly descended. Then the military band played "God Save the King" and the Union Jack slid down the halcyons. It was a tense moment as the strains of the "Marseillaise" burst into the air and the tricolor floated down.

High Commissioner Paul Tirard and the other officials crossed the Rhine bridge in motors and a thousand French soldiers in full war panoply marched to the railroad station and entrained for home.

A proclamation by President Von Hindenburg said:

"After years of bitter distress, after the acceptance of oppressive burdens, we have regained for the Rhineland a freedom that we shall preserve for the welfare and future of our fatherland."

"Therefore, in this solemn hour, let us be united in the pledge, Deutschland über alles."

ALMOST before the outside world knew anything about it, there was a successful revolution down in Bolivia, caused by the alleged efforts of Hernando Siles, resigned president, to regain the office of chief executive and hold it in perpetuity. Troops led by Gen. Carlos Blanco Gallardo occupied La Paz, the capital, after a hot fight, and Siles and his friends fled or took refuge in foreign legations. The military junta took charge of the government and announced financial and other plans for the immediate restoration of the republic to its normal condition on a constitutional basis. It was understood that free elections would be held and a new president designated in such a manner that he cannot perpetuate himself in office.

The populace in La Paz was delighted with the success of the revolutionary movement, and great crowds surrounded the Brazilian legation which sheltered Siles, demanding that he be given up for trial by the courts. Gen. Hans Kundt, German chief of staff of the Bolivian army, who was accused not only of aiding Doctor Siles, but of fraternizing with the Bolivian forces, fled to the German legation. General Gallardo took steps to protect all the former officials from violence.

GREAT BRITAIN is taking relentless measures to end the "passive" rebellion in India. The latest of these was the arrest of Pandit Motilal Nehru, a Hindu and acting president of the All-India national congress, and Sayed Mahmud, a Moslem, secretary of the congress. They were tried immediately and sentenced to six months' imprisonment. These arrests created a great sensation throughout India and a hartal or cessation of all work was proclaimed in protest. In Bombay a "boycott week" was started and housewives were urged to refrain from buying British goods.

The spirit of the Nationalists seems far from broken. In many cities the school students, both boys and girls, have joined the movement, quitting their schools, holding parades and assisting in the picketing of British shops.

AMERICANS of 22 countries gathered in Paris with Frenchmen to celebrate the Franco-American committee's "week of American nations," heard Raymond Poincare, former president and former premier, take the United States to task for its new tariff law. M. Poincare presided at a dinner to national delegates.

"There is a crisis in the friendship of the two nations which if not remedied promptly will grow worse," he said. "Countries that try to antagonize other peoples will find that they are attached to those other peoples by bonds they cannot break."

TWO tests in aviation marked the week. First Roger Q. Williams with two companions made a nonstop flight from New York to Bermuda and back in the Columbia, the transatlantic balloon monoplane, in 17 hours and 5 minutes. Second, John and Kenneth Hunter of Sparks, Ill., smashed to smithereens the refueling endurance record over Sky Harbor airport north of Chicago. They refused to come down until the motor of their plane had worn out.

Appointment of Edwin W. Daley, as postmaster at Christmas, Ariz., was announced in Phoenix recently.

Travis Best, crazed from narcotics, according to Globe, Ariz., police, was being held following the beating of her three small children into insensibility and then attempting to hurl them over a 200-foot cliff.

Fire destroyed the Frolic dance hall at Phoenix, causing damage estimated at $45,000. It was the third dancing pavilion to burn in Phoenix in the last forty-five days. Investigators believe the blaze was of incendiary origin.

Francisco Macias was sentenced to from fifteen to thirty years by Judge Clifford C. Fair in the Gila County Superior Court, after he had pleaded guilty to second degree murder in connection with the killing last March of Romaldo Elizondo in Miami, Ariz.

Johnny C. Wilson, Los Angeles, first class licensed pilot, and Paul Eberlein of Nogales were killed when their plane, driven by Wilson, went into a nose dive and crashed in a small canyon one-half mile north of the Nogales, Ariz., airport, instantly killing both men.

It is believed that the new quarters of the campus of the Y. M. C. A. at the University of Arizona, in Tucson, will fill a definite need next fall. They will serve as a meeting place for the incoming freshmen and will have an important part in acquainting new students with university life.

Both the California Company and the Prairie Oil and Gas Company have agreed to contribute to the public health fund for protection in Hobbs, N. M., Dr. G. S. Luckett, state health officer, stated in Santa Fe. Dr. Luckett had asked ten companies to contribute $450 each.

All advertising signs have been ordered off the highway between Santa Fe, N. M., and Las Vegas, N. M., George Hall of the State Highway Department stated in Santa Fe. Under the signboard law, all that can be done is to keep the boards 100 feet away from the edges of the right of way.

A report prepared by the United States Department of Commerce and released by the clerk of Maricopa County Superior Court in Phoenix, shows 7,405 marriages were performed in Arizona in 1929. Divorces granted in 1929 numbered 1,085, compared with 1,062 in 1928. Yuma led all counties in marriage licenses issued, with 2,180. In 1928 there were only 274 licenses issued in Yuma county.

Five hundred deer, grazing in the Kaibab National forest in Arizona, are about to lose their homes. They will be rounded up this fall and moved to game refuges south of the Grand Canyon for restocking purposes. Last year, 3,216 deer were trapped and transported to other parts of the state, but the increase in the herd is such as to make it necessary to transport another large number.

New Mexico, which with Arizona is the youngest state in the Union, gained 58,573 population during the past ten years, for a new total of 418,923. The increase is almost half a person for each of the 122,634 square miles of this fourth largest state in area. Ten years ago New Mexico had accrued almost three persons per square mile, with a total of 369,359 people, and now it has almost three and one-half persons per square mile.

Ceremonies marking the completion of the Texas-New Mexico railroad into Lovington were attended by nearly 10,000 persons. Gov. R. C. Dillon of New Mexico pulled the throttle of the engine which brought ten Pullmans and company business cars into Lovington. Hugh Williams, corporation commissioner of New Mexico, served as conductor on the train. Both men, former railroad men, carried out their part of the ceremony during the twenty-four-mile journey from Hobbs to Lovington.

The estate of Charles E. Mills, which amounted to nearly $2,500,000, was closed in Maricopa County Probate Court in Phoenix recently. J. E. Curry and Charles C. Rittich, administrators of the estate, gave their final account and report, which was allowed and settled by the court. A decree of distribution was entered, the estate to be distributed equally between the two sisters of Mills, Mrs. Lillian E. Mulford, Los Angeles, and Mrs. Minnie T. Gerlach, Long Beach, Calif. These are the only heirs.

Application for a radio broadcasting station for the city of Winslow, Ariz., made by Frank M. Stegmann, was rejected by the Federal Radio Commission.

Upon assurance by Yuma, Ariz., citizens that the fire hazard eliminated in that city the past six months by activities of an unlicensed "fire-bug" would be "sterilized" through drastic action, the $3 per cent fire insurance penalty rate, assessed on June 15 by the Arizona Workable rating office in Phoenix, has been suspended.

Mark Hanna's Prophecy of Motor Car's Future

One Sunday in the summer of 1902 Mark Hanna rode back from Secretary Hay's house to his rooms at the Arlington with Daniel Hoyt Marvin and took this stranger into his confidence on the subject of motor cars. He saw the motor car revolutionizing commerce.

"It was just like reading," said Mr. Marvin, "one of those articles you see twenty times a year about what the motor car has done, but with everything put in the future tense. His only error was that he counted on a long war between the steam motor and the gasoline motor.

"He said that some one would put a motor on the market at prices suitable to small farmers and change the whole nature of life in the country. I did not believe a word of it, of course. This was my only encounter with Mr. Hanna, and I thought he was going into softening of the brain."—Thomas Beer in the Saturday Evening Post.

It Has One Use
The naval conference brought to the fore the question as to how much the new type of submarine has impaired the value of the battleship. On this point naval experts are by no means in agreement; but there is one budding young seaman who has settled the question for good and all. At a luncheon one day Admiral Madden said to a naval cadet, who was the son of his host: "What is the value of the battleship today?" "No value at all, sir," answered the youngster promptly.

Then he thought a moment, and added: "Of course, there's this to be said, she's got a very nice deck for dancing."—Boston Globe.

English Golfer Heloed Out by Obliging Bird

The London Sunday Chronicle offers two stories which, it admits are queer—but true.

Playing in the Caernaryonshire golf championship meeting at Cricketh, Capt. W. E. Jones, Cricketh, who played his tee shot at the shore seventh hole into the hedge, found the ball resting in a pheasant's nest with the hen pheasant sitting on three eggs.

The bird flew away as the captain approached, and snapped the ball with its wings a yard out of the nest into a playable position.

The captain holed out in four.

A similar incident occurred during the third round match of the London Social club's tournament at Sunningdale, in which the Army and Navy club opposed the Royal Thames Yacht club.

At the eighth hole, a one shotted, the Army and Navy ball landed in a bunker at the edge of the green. J. E. Mellor, of the Royal Thames, then played his tee shot and the ball went into the same bunker.

Duck Clings to Own Idea
Levi Corliss of Rockland found one of his ducks taking an extra long time to lay an egg. He discovered that she was sitting on a broken china cup. He immediately brought forth a nest of eggs and put the duck to work. The next day he investigated to see how the eggs were getting along and found the cup under the duck, the bird insisting on setting on the piece of china and pulling it under her. Mr. Corliss says he admires the duck's ambition, but has no hopes of hatching out a complete dinner set.—Indianapolis News.

Happy Woman Tells How She Lost 19 Pounds of Fat in 27 Days

During October a woman in Montana wrote: "My first bottle of Kruschen Salts lasted almost 4 weeks and during that time I lost 19 pounds of fat—Kruschen is all you claim for it—I feel better than I have for years."

Here's the recipe that banishes fat and brings into blossom all the natural attractiveness that every woman possesses.

Every morning take one half teaspoonful of Kruschen Salts in a glass of hot water before breakfast.

Be sure and do this every morning for the little daily dose that keeps the fat off. Don't miss a morning. The Kruschen habit means that every particle of poisonous waste matter and harmful acids and gases are expelled from the system.

At the same time the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels are toned up and the pure, fresh blood contains Nature's six life-giving salts are carried to every organ, gland, nerve and fibre of the body and this is followed by "that Kruschen feeling" of energetic health and activity that is reflected in bright eyes, clear skin, cheerful vivacity and charming features.

If you want to lose fat with speed get an 85c bottle of Kruschen Salts from any five druggist anywhere in America with the distinct understanding that you must be satisfied with results or money back.

the peak from the south, and from the north by a route which finally loops to an end on the eastern slope. Trails from both roads lead to the southern ridge up which the ascent is usually made.

The crater (unless the most recent eruptions have changed its appearance very radically) is not so much a great bowl, as it is a topy-turvy prairie of hardened lava, much as if a gigantic plow had furrowed a field somewhat less than a quarter of a mile across...

A loop highway which will circle the peak is expected to be completed this year.

Mount Lassen remained dormant for about 200 years just preceding its 1914 eruptions, which continued into 1915 for a total of about 150 eruptions during the two years. In March, 1925, a lava flow covered a part of the west slope for a distance of 1,000 feet down.

The 1915 activity included hot blasts which escaped from under the lid of the crater in a downward direction, with terrific force. On the deep snow-covered northeast slope toward Lost and Hat creeks, "the snow was instantly converted into water, and the mighty onrush of water and hot blast of gases swept everything before it for ten miles, forming a devastated belt from a few hundred yards to a mile in width."

Seeing Big League BASEBALL

By BILLY EVANS

Sportswriter, Big League Umpire and General Manager of the Cleveland Indians

An umpire's job at best is a colorless one, though sometimes made more spectacular and less drab by the "color" of the individual. "Silk" O'Loughlin with his immortal "Strike Tuh!" had lots of "color." There have been and still are others, but he is perhaps our best example.

We have had an abundance of colorful players in recent years—Ty Cobb, Babe Ruth, Tris Speaker, Frank Frisch, Hank Wilson, Stanley Harris—dozens of others. But few umpires are what can be called spectacular. There is little enough of the dramatic in calling balls and strikes and waving them out or calling them safe.

The ball players can shine in the field, at the bat and on the base paths. They have their batting averages, their fielding averages, pitching averages and stolen base records. They may win pennants and world series, hit home runs with the bases loaded and pitch no-hit games. They often become heroes and national idols overnight—as in the case of Stanley Harris, the "boy manager," who won a world's championship his first year as manager.

But the umpire. Who gives a hang about the umpire? All he does is see that the game is played and played according to the rules. Isn't that right? Did you ever hear anybody cheer for an umpire? So Walsh, famous pitcher who tried umpiring after he was through as a pitcher, objected to the job, because as he said, "It was all jeers and no cheers." He had been used to cheers.

No, alongside the player, the umpire is quite a humdrum individual. And yet I liked the job. I'm proud to feel that I am still a part of our great national game. And, I, too—I say it not boastfully—can feel a little pride in my own record, my own "averages," in other words. Besides, as Jack Sheridan told me, and Tim Hurst has more than once jokingly remarked, "You can't beat the hours."

No, you can't beat the hours—three to five—although my own hours of the field were not leisure hours but were spent in pounding the old typewriter turning out sport copy for newspapers.

And back of it all I get a feeling of immense satisfaction that I am a part of this great institution of baseball, and have seen it grow from comparatively feeble proportions to its giant present-day status. And I have learned quite a lot in my twenty-five years in the big leagues. I have learned a lot about human nature and mob psychology and that sort of thing. And I have learned a lot about baseball.

Perhaps an experience as lengthy as mine entitles a man to some opinion. Perhaps you will agree that, although I don't play baseball, my constant contact with it and with the players gives me an opportunity, even greater than the active players, to judge baseball ability. Does it sound illogical when I say that perhaps I am in a better position to judge the merits of a particular star than one of his teammates or one of his opponents is?

For this reason if for no other: As an umpire, my work was pretty evenly divided among the eight teams in the American league. An active player can judge an opponent only on that opponent's performance against him. As umpire, I have had the opportunity of seeing how John Smith performs against seven clubs. Each team plays each of the other teams about twenty-two games in the course of an ordinary season. So that the Washington club, let us say, has twenty-two opportunities during the year of watching Babe Ruth play. I may have more or less games than that to umpire with New York as one of the teams, but I have the opportunity of seeing how Babe Ruth hits in every ball park in the league.

I want to make this clear, because later on I am going to name my all-time, all-star baseball team. And then I am going to give my own conception of the ideal baseball player. It may be argued that my job in the American league prevented my seeing many National leaguers in action. But at various times I have seen them all, both in and out of world series. And this, combined with the figures in the old record books, ought to qualify me in some respect as a competent judge.

MOSES, A COURAGEOUS LEADER

LESSON TEXT—Exodus 1:8-14; 2:1-22; 3:1-4.

GOLDEN TEXT—By faith he forsook Egypt, not fearing the wrath of the king; for he endured, as seeing him who is invisible.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Moses Doing Hard Things for God.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Moses' Call to Leadership.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Daring the Impossible.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Leader, Liberator and Lawgiver.

1. The Enslaved People (1:8-22). After Joseph's death Israel quickly grew into a nation. The amazing growth of the nation aroused the envy and fear of the new king.

1. Heavy measure of service (vv. 10-14).

Cruel taskmasters were placed over the men, forcing them to labor in building treasure cities as well as in field service. However, the more they afflicted them, the more did they multiply and grow.

2. The midwives were ordered to murder the male infants.

This measure also failed, as the midwives feared God and chose to obey Him.

3. Commanded that the male children should be cast into the river (v. 22). In God's providence this mandate failed.

11. Moses, the Deliverer, Prepared (2:1-22).

1. His birth (vv. 1, 2).

Both his father and mother were of Levitical stock. Being of the same tribe, they would have a common bond of interest and sympathy. There was something striking about the child which caused his parents to believe that he was sent of God.

2. His preservation (vv. 3, 4).

Because his mother had faith she did not ignore the proper use of means. She was doubtless familiar with the place where Pharaoh's daughter came to bathe and believed that somehow through her the child would be saved. She placed the ark of bulrushes at the particular place where it would attract attention. Though the hand of God was directing in the carrying out of His plan, the steps in the process were entirely natural.

3. His education (vv. 5-10).

Moses was educated, first at his mother's knee. Here his mind was filled with the word of God and acquainted with the Jewish hopes and prospects. Doubtless here the indomitable purpose was fixed "rather to suffer affliction with the people of God, than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season" (Heb. 11:24-26). Again, he was educated at the Egyptian court where he became acquainted with all the wisdom of the Egyptians (Acts 7:22).

4. His exile and marriage (vv. 11-22).

Moses was obliged to take his flight from Egypt at the age of forty, because he attempted to enter upon his work as the deliverer of his people (Acts 7:25). He was conscious of his mission, but was mistaken as to the time. His rejection by his brethren was a type of Christ's rejection by the Jews. During this time of rejection he secured a bride. Jesus Christ, his great antitype, while now in the place of rejection by His brethren, is getting a bride from among the Gentiles. Just as Moses after awhile returned and delivered his people, so will Christ return and deliver His people, the Jews, who rejected Him.

111. Moses Called to Deliver His People (3:1-14).

1. The Lord spoke from the burning bush (v. 1-6).

It was while keeping the flock of his father-in-law in the desert that the Lord appeared to Moses in the vision of the burning bush. This bush, enveloped in flames, yet unconsumed, symbolized the people of God enswathed in the very fire of God.

2. Moses' commission (vv. 7-10).

In this commission God showed His active interest in His people. Because of His grace He obligated Himself to deliver them out of the hand of the Egyptians and bring them into the chosen land; therefore God commissioned Moses to bring forth the people out of Egypt.

3. Moses' objections removed (vv. 11-14).

Four objections were offered, each one of which God met and removed. (1) Personal unworthiness (v. 11). (2) The difficulty of the people to understand Moses' relationship to God (vs. 13, 14). (3) Unbelief on the part of the people (4:1). (4) Lack of eloquence (4:10).

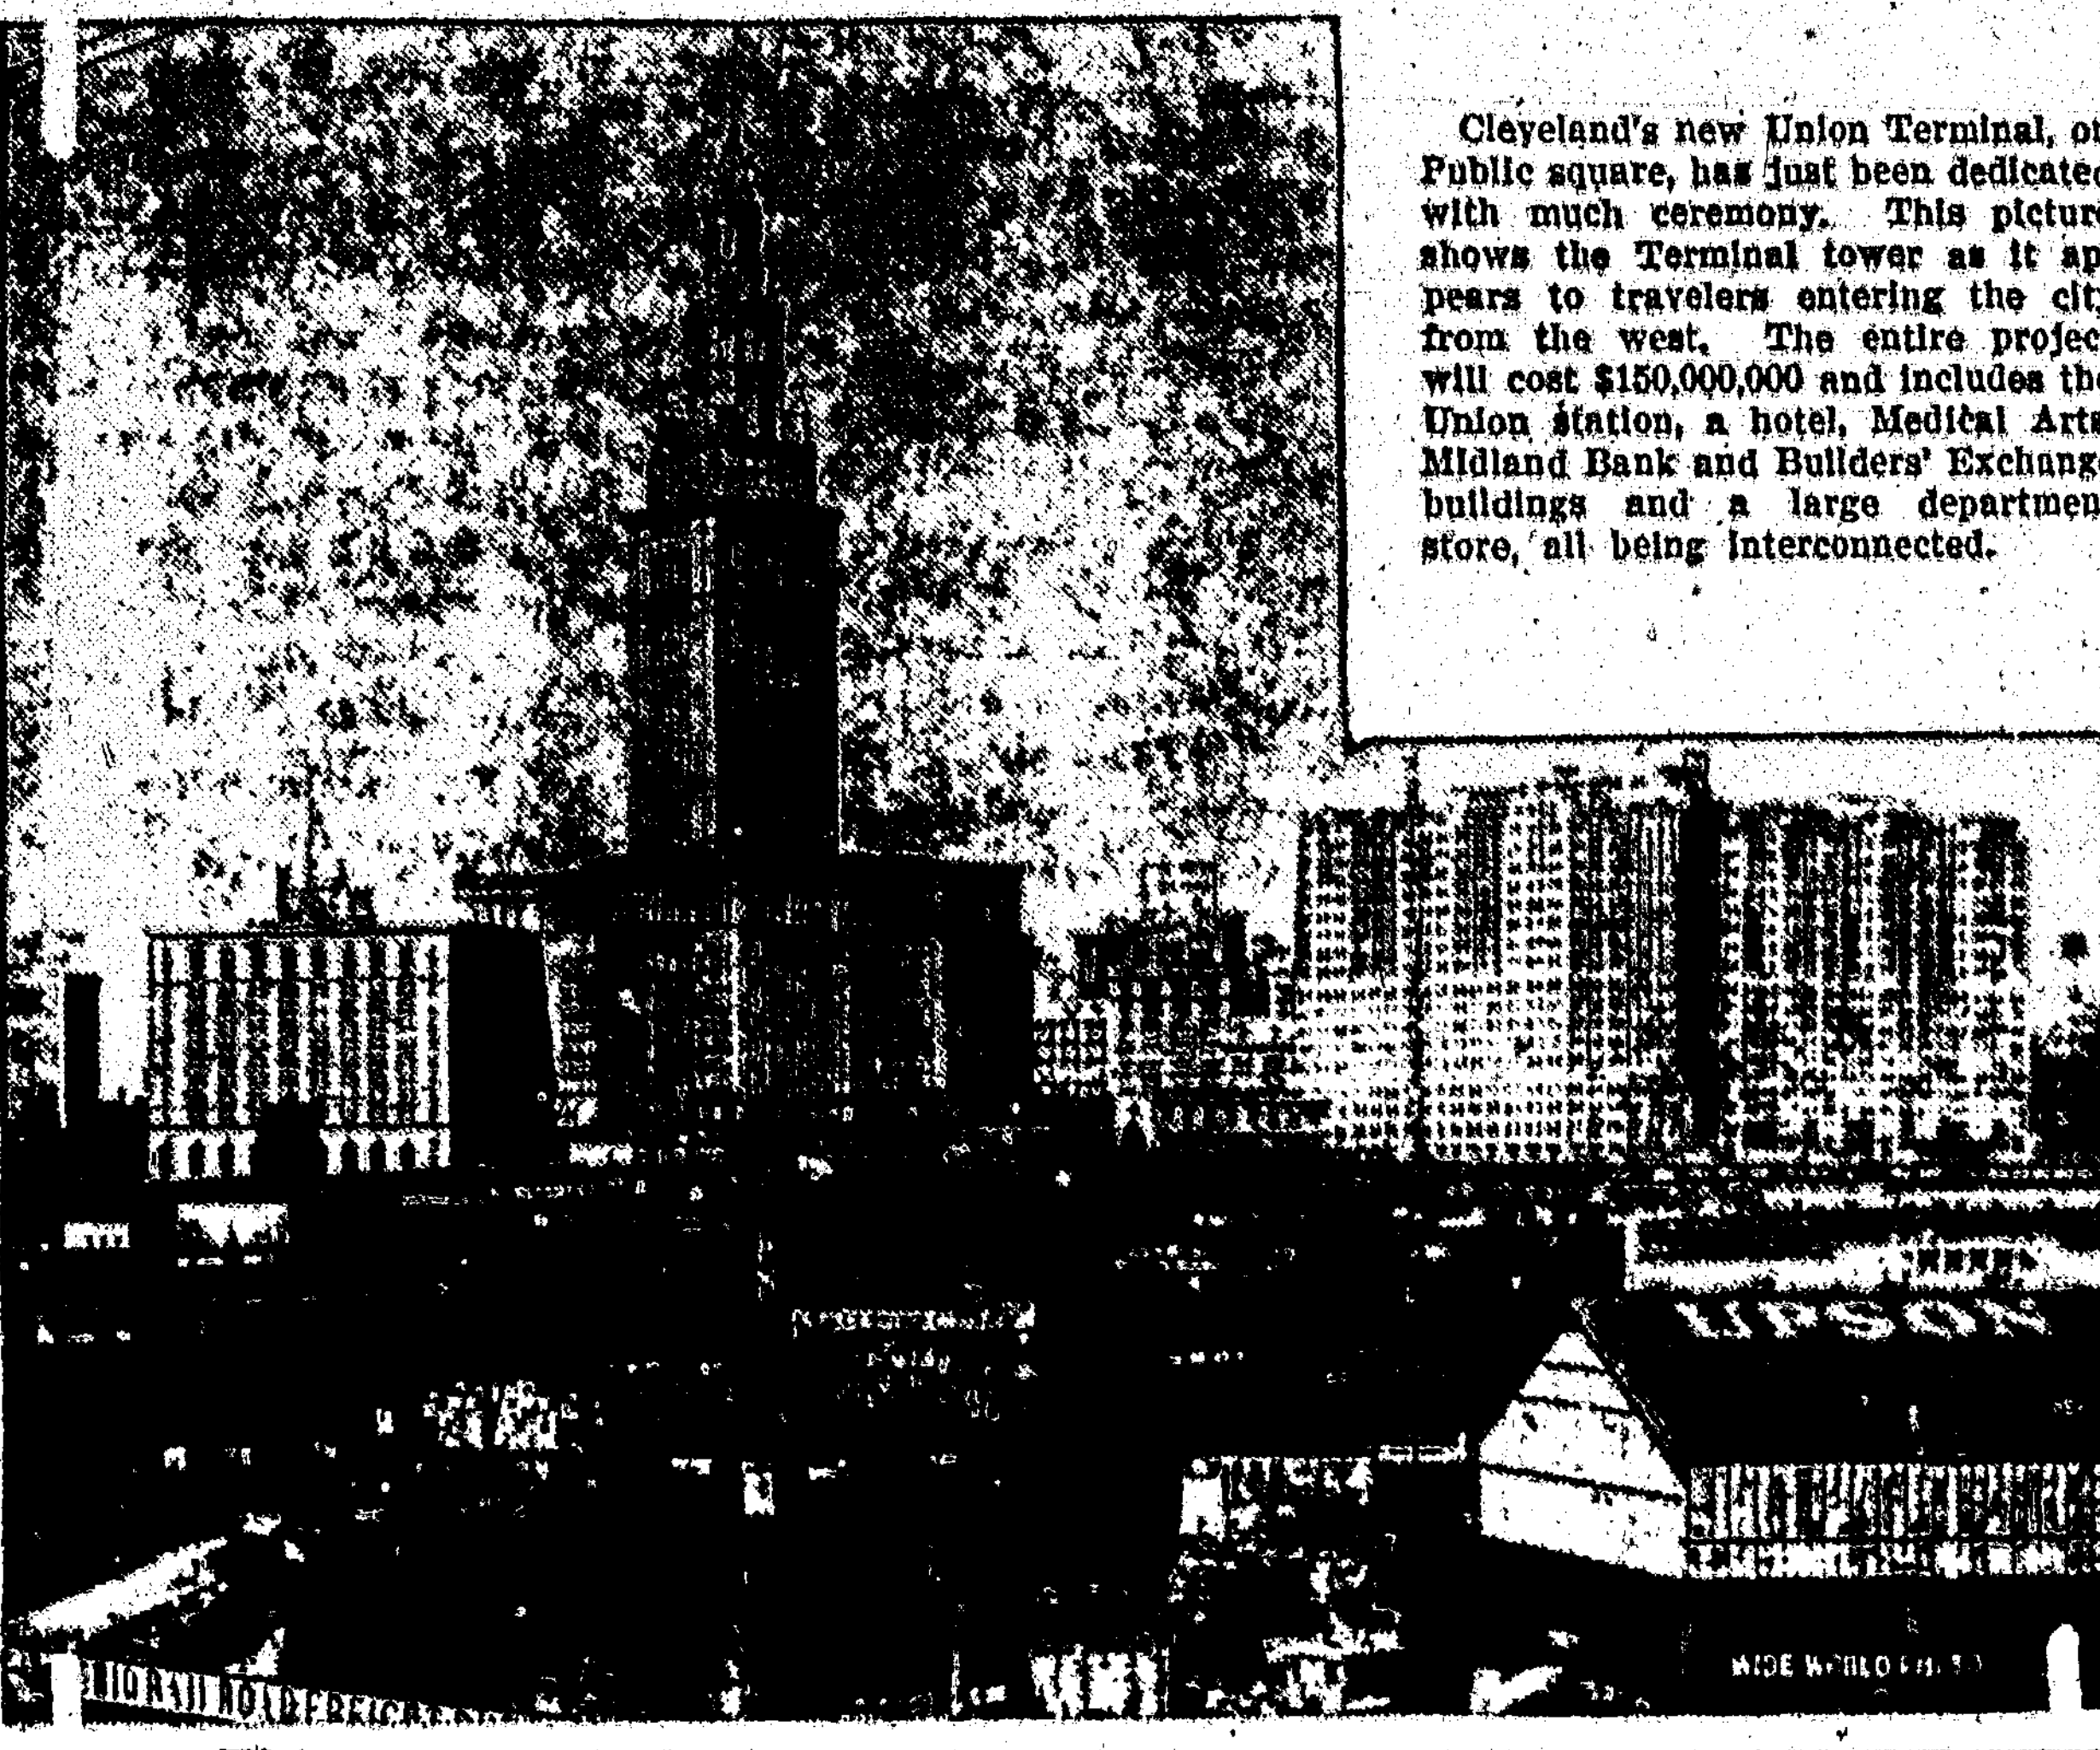

Value of Religious Belief

I should prefer a firm religious belief to every other blessing; for it makes life a discipline of goodness, creates new hopes when all earthly hopes vanish, and throws over the decay, the destruction of existence, the most gorgeous of all lights; awakens life even in death.—Sir Humphry Davy.
