SCHOOLBOY'S ESSAY

On What is an Editor

The editor is something different. You can tell him from other people. He has a gloomy, forlorn look, as though he hasn't had anything to eat for a month. As to when he first existed is hard to tell, but his first article must have been about the flood, but it was free stuff and he has had wagon loads of it ever since. He never seems to get into trouble with anything else. When anything happens, he must stay at home and write it up while other people go out and have a good time, and if he misspells one name, he gets his foot in it.

If an editor makes mistakes there is a big lawsuit, swearing and a big fuss, and people say he ought to be hung; but if the doctor makes one there is a funeral with flowers and silence.

If the doctor goes to see another man's wife he charges for the visit, but if the editor goes he gets a charge of buckshot. Any college can make doctors to order, but editors "have to be born."

Two Stoves for Farm Kitchen

Electric Range Supplements the Coal Stove.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)
In the roomy farm kitchen illustrated by this picture, taken in New Jersey by the United States Department of Agriculture, two stoves meet all the cooking requirements of the different seasons of the year. Obviously the large coal range is for winter and between season use. It will undoubtedly furnish considerable heat to the kitchen and adjacent rooms whenever it is going. The electric range is primarily for summer cooking, but it is a helpful accessory for quick cooking whenever the fire in the big range is out or banked. There are many times when one would not want to disturb the larger fire for a few minutes' cooking. The current in this case is supplied by a local power company, but in many farm homes there is a complete electric plant which runs the lighting of the house, and various kinds of farm machinery as well as household electrical equipment.

Because the kitchen is used for some meals, as the small sturdy table with four dining chairs indicates, there is added incentive to make it attractive. The neat white kitchen cabinet, the sunny window, the linoleum mat and the gleaming black range are all pleasing to the eye as well as useful.

Story for the Children at Bedtime

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

Now they traveled right along the Milky Way, and of all the wonderful things Harry had ever done in his life, or ever expected to do, this was the most wonderful.

He had seen so many clusters and stars and constellations whose homes had been along here, but now the pilot traveled along this most heavenly roadway without stopping.

"The best times to see it from the earth," Cosmo told Harry, "are July, August, September and October. Don't think it divides the heavens in half, for the northern sky has more of the Milky Way than the southern. It takes a trip, too. It winds its way among the constellations and I've always thought it so nice the way Canis Minor or the Little Dog takes his place right on the border, just as a dog will sit on a doorstep."

Oh, what a sight this was, and what an unbelievable trip!

They passed by millions and millions of stars. In some parts there were not so many which made it look less populated. In fact, it seemed as though there were great cities of stars with their scattered suburbs of stars spread out beyond them.

The pilot was going slowly. Harry tried to think of ways in which to express what he felt about it, but he knew he could never possibly describe it. It was like traveling through a world of stars, or like going through fields of stars, or oceans of stars. Everywhere they gleamed, and twinkled, and shone. Everywhere they seemed to smile. And here and there were cloudy patches—like misty forests of stars!

"Oh, what a sight it is," he said to Cosmo.

"And yet," Cosmo told him, "the sky is so tremendous and the distances are so great that even if the Milky Way could be blotted out there are stars so far off that the news wouldn't reach them for thousands and thousands of years."

"It's too much for me," Harry said. As they sped along Cosmo told him stories and legends.

"Virgo—we passed her—was supposed to have scattered some of her wheat along here. Then a story has it that some magpies built a bridge in the heavens so that two separated lovers could travel over it to see each other, while in some countries they eled. In the ancient days it was believed that the baby Hercules dropped some of the milk he was drinking and that that made the Milky Way. Nor has science changed that name given to it by that old, old legend."

Harry was listening to all that Cosmo was telling him, but so impressed was he by the wonder and the beauty and the tremendous glory of all that he was seeing that he couldn't think of any words at all in which to express what he thought. He was glad that Cosmo didn't seem to expect him to say anything.

"The Greeks," Cosmo went on, "called this the Road to the Palace of Heaven, and they believed that along this road were the palaces of the finest of the gods."

"The Eskimos believed the Milky Way to have been made from snow that fell from the snowshoes of the great raven as he walked across the sky."

The rockets were being shot off rapidly once more. They were speeding along the Milky Way. "How lucky—it was that the pilot knew how to manage such a ride. But even that thought was unimportant, Harry felt. He could think of nothing but what he saw, and what he saw was too wonderful to put into any words.

told the story of two lovers who built the bridge themselves so they could cross over it to see each other.

"Some Indians believed that the Milky Way was the path along which the departed souls traveled and that the brighter stars along the borders were the campfires where the great spirits rested. Other Indians thought it was dust kicked up by a buffalo and horse as they raced each other across the sky.

"The Norsemen believed it was the path up which the great warriors trav-

Hints for Housekeepers

Keeping dust from window sills, porches, steps and walks helps to prevent its entrance into the house.

To keep shoes in good condition, always remove mud at once. If allowed to dry on the shoes, it will stain the leather.

A backyard playground equipped with slides, swings, large boxes, and a sandpile will add to the children's happiness this summer and keep them away from the danger of motor traffic.

Never wring or twist silk or other delicate fabrics in laundering. Instead, roll the garment in a thick towel and gently but firmly squeeze out the water.

A light, clean, well-ventilated clothes closet equipped with plenty of hangers and dress covers helps summer clothes stay fresh and last longer and it helps prevent destruction by moths.

Tomatoes on Toast

Tomatoes, broiled to a delicate brown on top, slipped onto crisp toast, and served with a few rubbers of butter, make the center of an ideal lunch or supper for a warm day. Another easy and appetizing way to cook tomatoes is to cut in half and bake under a sprinkling of buttered bread crumbs. The bureau of home economics tells just how to broil and bake tomatoes.

Some Foods the Family Will Enjoy

By NELLIE MAXWELL

For those who wish to reduce and for those who wish to gain in weight the same rules for both in many things should be followed. Both need exercise, fresh air and daily baths inside and out with plenty of water.

Old Common Sense is the best of regulators. Food fads live for awhile and are forgotten. A few general health rules here will apply to the ordinary individual who need not starve or stuff. Eat moderately of all foods. Drink plenty of water, do not eat too much of any one kind of food, and be sure to eat plenty of vegetables and cut down on the meat. For the thin person, butter, cream, as well as plenty of fresh vegetables are necessities.

Heartily, heavy foods like meat, vegetable proteins and nuts should always be served with fresh green foods. Heavy eaters are prone to have acidosis. Fresh vegetables and fruits counteract this tendency. Citrus fruits are invaluable in the diet.

Lemons if used freely will correct the torpidity of the liver, clear the complexion and help in free elimination of waste products.

A good habit to form, which is as important as brushing the teeth, is the drinking of the juice of a lemon in hot water. A whole lemon is not too much, diluted with hot water to fill a glass. Drink it on rising at least half an hour before breakfast.

Recent discoveries teach us that the use of lemon and orange juice arrest the decay of the teeth and retard and prevent pyorrhea, the much dreaded disease which causes the teeth to loosen.

The best results with any food may be determined when that food is not mixed with others. So it is with citrus fruits—take the lemon, grapefruit and orange by itself. However, an occasional punch of the mixed fruits can be enjoyed without trouble.

All cooks enjoy using the common things in such a manner that an unusual dish or combination is the result.

Pepper Relish.—Take two cups of finely chopped peppers (green and red may be used) and pack the cup solidly full in measuring. Use a food chopper and put the peppers through the finest knife twice. Measure into the kettle, using just enough of the juice to food the cup level. Add six and one-half cups of sugar, one and one-half cups of vinegar, mix well, and bring to a boil, set aside uncovered for 20 minutes. Bring again to a boil and stir constantly, boiling hard for two minutes. Remove from the fire and stir in one bottle of pectin, stir and skim for just eight minutes to cool slightly and prevent floating.

Pour quickly, cover the hot relish with a good cover of paraffin. This makes about nine glasses.

Rolls Orange Wafers.—Cream one-half cupful of butter, add gradually one cupful of sugar and the grated rind of an orange, beat until light. Dissolve one teaspoonful of soda in one tablespoonful of cold water, add to one-half cupful of orange juice alternately with two cupfuls of flour. Beat well and spread on buttered baking sheet in the thinnest possible layer. Bake in a moderate oven. When baked cut into squares and roll each square while hot over the handle of a wooden spoon. Sprinkle with powdered sugar and arrange on a dolly-covered plate.

Banana Butter.—This makes a delicious cake filling. Use ripe, mellow fruit and take three cupfuls of the crushed pulp, add six and one-half cupfuls of sugar, the juice of a lemon and one-fourth teaspoonful of butter. Mix and bring quickly to a boil, boil one minute, stirring constantly over the entire bottom, adding one bottle of pectin. Remove from the heat and stir frequently for eight minutes to cool slightly and prevent floating. Pour quickly into cups and cover with hot paraffin. It sets slowly. Make nine to ten glasses.

Small Spaces Used for Closets

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Sometimes there is a narrow section of a kitchen wall where a shallow closet for cleaning implements can be located. Usually a handy man or boy in the family can utilize this space by building a closet to help make house-keeping more efficient. It is always desirable to keep brooms off the floor to prevent their weight from resting on the bristles, and mops and brushes are also better hung up. Put screws in the handles or make a hole through them for a loop of string or wire to hang them by. Special clips for holding brooms may be bought, or little holders of wood made for them, or heavy hooks used. More utensils can be stored in a small closet by such careful arrangement, and when article is wanted no time is lost fumbling for it.

There should be a shelf, if possible, for cleaning materials, scouring powders, polishers, ammonia, and so on, and some receptacles for dusts and oily cloths. One of the illustrations, both of which were taken in farm homes by the United States Department of Agriculture, shows how four wire corner slat baskets have been used for this purpose in a very small closet. These wire holders permit a circulation of air and avoid the fire risk from closely packed oily cloths. The other closet has a place for a vacuum cleaner, and the additional space alongside of the cleaning closet is utilized for ironing equipment as well as for cleaning materials and for kitchen hoses.

In many large houses it is a good idea to have another cleaning closet on the second floor, equipped with such brooms, dusts, cloths, and other tools as are needed for cleaning bedrooms and the bathroom.

Circular Lines Hold Favor

By JULIA BOTTOMLEY

In the making of the graceful little informal afternoon frocks of dark silk print which have been so very popular and which give every promise of a continued vogue for midseason and early fall, the trend is for one circular ruffle to call for another. In other words, frocks show a tendency to adopt circular-flare movements from necklines to hemlines. The frock in the picture illustrates the idea.

Here we have a very smart styling given to a green-on-black print silk, which carries out a consistent circular movement throughout the capelet, the sleeves and the skirt. This manipulation, which strives to relate the frock or costume through repetition of a given treatment, is observed by most designers. For instance a pleated capelet, let us say, calls for pleated frills on the sleeves, also a pleated flounce on the skirt if the latter be not pleated entire. In case of an ensemble wrap of matching material, it also is likely to be detailed with pleated trimming.

There is quite a rivalry between pleated and circular treatments this season. However, from the standpoint of that which is newest, circular cuts win out. It is interesting to note in how many directions the circular "line" extend. One sees the undulating grace of circular ruffles in the very smart peplum effects which style so many of this season's silk frocks. The sleeve with a circular flare from the elbow is among the many quaint modes which fashion has resurrected from the past.

Even pleated skirts have gone circular that is, while not attaining the extreme mushroom flare, yet they are cut slightly bell fashion so that the pleats are shallower at the top than the bottom. Not pleated skirts are especially handled in this manner. Regarding the new fall mix, they show patterns interpreted in subtle and interwoven effects are conspicuously displayed in the early fabric showings. Also Jacquard effects are sponsored. Little cravat motifs woven in the same coloring as the background are very smart.

Relics of Bronze Age

Workmen engaged upon an excavating job in a Berlin suburban park dug up several old bronze urns, but because they did not realize their value they were not careful in handling the fragile vessels and most of them were ruined. The curator of a Berlin museum examined the pieces and estimated the age of the urns at more than 3,000 years. Some of the urns were filled with ashes, and in view of this it is believed that the park marks the site of an ancient burial ground. Further excavation under the supervision of scientists is now being undertaken.

mean after surmounting the last ledge have been doing their summit grunting and grunting in or near the cabin in the twenty-one years past.

The idea of building an observation and shelter house on Mount Whitney was advanced by Director W. W. Campbell of the Lick observatory, who wished to observe the spectrum of Mars from a point where interference by the water vapor in the air would be least.

The house was built during the month of August, 1903, under auspices of the Smithsonian Institution, by G. F. Marsh of Lone Pine, Calif., and four workmen.

Director Campbell and five other scientists arrived at the shelter house on Saturday, August 23, in a steel storm which did not clear away until the following Wednesday.

Mount Whitney is now a part of Sequoia National park, and the park service is constructing a trail up the west side of the peak.

Lesson for August 3

NAOMI AND RUTH; A STUDY IN RACIAL RELATIONSHIPS

LESSON TEXT—The Book of Ruth GOLDEN TEXT—And hath made of one blood all nations of men for to dwell on all the face of the earth.

I. How Naomi and Ruth Were Brought Together (1:1-15)

On account of famine in Bethlehem of Judah, Naomi with her husband and two sons sojourned in the land of Moab.

II. Ruth's Noble Choice (1:16-18)

Greatly as Naomi loved her daughters-in-law, she would not have them go into this matter blindly.

III. Blessings Which Attended Ruth's Choice

1. She found the true God (1:10).

2. She found friends (ch. 2).

3. A good husband and happy home (chs. 3 and 4).

4. An honored place in the Israelitish nation (4:13-17).

5. She became a link in the chain of the Redeemer's ancestry (4:18-22 cf. Matt. 1:5).

6. The one who fully decides for Christ and gives up all for Him, shall receive a hundredfold in this life and in the world to come eternal life.

7. The story of Ruth is a fine example, first, of right racial relationship.

8. The union of Ruth with Israel was around the true God. And, second, of dispensational truth:

(1) The famine in the land indicates the testing of the Jews in the great tribulation.

(2) The going into Moab indicates the sojourn of the Israelites among the nations.

(3) The sickness and death in Moab indicates the chastisement of the Jews and their sorrows in the present age.

(4) The return to the land indicates the gathering of Israel to their own land, Palestine.

(5) Ruth's decision indicates the gathering of the Gentiles through the influence of the Jews.

(6) The marriage between Boaz and Ruth indicates the union of the church with Jesus Christ.

Adds Charm to Character

Small kindnesses, small courtesies, small considerations, habitually practiced in our social intercourse, give a greater charm to the character than the display of great talents and accomplishments.—Kelly.

Seeing Big League BASEBALL

By BILLY EVANS Sports-writer, Big League Umpire and General Manager of the Cleveland Indians

It seems as if most of the noteworthy incidents of my first couple of years in the American league involved either the St. Louis, Detroit or Chicago teams.

It was a day later that same year—1907. Detroit and St. Louis, hot in the pennant fight, had hooked up in one of those "crucial" games that always draw the crowds and call for special ground rules.

Now—and this little detail had an important bearing on the events of that memorable day—in the extreme corner of the left field fence there was a little hole through which the concession men passed their sandwiches and soft drinks and such.

Late in the game, with St. Louis at bat, Harry Howell, Browns' pitcher, came up. Home runs are unusual for pitchers to make, especially in "tight" games.

Immediately the Detroit players rushed at me—Bill Coughlin, Germany Schaefer, Davey Jones, Hughie Jennings and all the rest of the team.

"Home run! Are you crazy, Bill? Don't the ground rules say that any ball hit into the crowd goes for two bases?"

"Come on now, Hughie, you saw that ball. Didn't it go through the hole in the fence?"

Jennings was nothing if not honest. "Yes, Bill, I did. But it's still a two-base hit."

"Well, if it went through the hole in the fence, then it was hit out of the playing field, and as it didn't go into the crowd, it's a home run. The ball went out of the lot, Hughie."

"All right, but what right has that hole got in that fence?"

At this point many of the fans, seeing the Detroit team clustered around me in argument, began to jeer at Jennings and his players.

Then Jennings, for the first time, seemed to realize that we were in danger, standing out on the diamond a target for the hundreds of bottles that were flying through the air.

And then—"Look out, Bill!" he cried.

I, too, saw it coming, coming straight at me—but too late. Crash! There was a terrible racking sound in my ears as the bottle struck, a few inches away from my temple.

EDITORIAL COLUMN

When Dad Reads Aloud

Christian Science Monitor:

A visitor to a farm home noticed a narrow indentation worn into the white surface of an old colonial mantelpiece. He had not thought to make it a subject of comment until his host stopped and ran his finger across the hollowed trail in the board.

"I suppose you're wondering about this long mark on my mantelpiece," said the farmer. "I'm very proud of it, for on top of this old mantelpiece in the evening my father used to place a flickering oil-lamp when I was a boy, and then he backed up his chair on a slant against the woodwork and proceeded to read aloud to the entire family. He did it almost every night for years until the imprint of his chair left its trace. This mantelpiece always reminds me of my dad."

How many homes today contain memories of the pleasant custom of reading aloud from a choice book, once the chores were done and the shades drawn? What if the sonorous voice of Dad did send a tired boy after a while into sound slumber—with full orchestra accompaniment—or serve only as verbal background for Junior at the table, busy with his arithmetic lesson?

Here was an unbroken home circle, with Dad at the center of it, reading a lively yarn designed to thrill the youthful imagination and start memories certain to linger to the sunset days.

Many a boy of a former generation has acquired his appreciation of good literature from reading aloud.

No wonder that the marked mantelpiece meant so much to the farmer. Every household could well treasure such heirloom as this, and seek to keep intact the comradeship of family life in a day when a thousand distractions tend to lure children away from the protective influence of the home.

Is Employment an 'Outrage'?

The importing, international banking interests, and academic free-traders, opposing new tariff, call the increase of 8 per cent in the duty on pottery an "outrage." Last year, the United States imported more than $50,000,000 worth of pottery, earthenware and glassware from Japan, Germany and Czechoslovakia, where wages for the producers of this material range from one-tenth to four-tenths of the American wage scale.

That is why nearly half the pottery workers in the United States have been unemployed, or on a part-time basis. Protecting the home market for them, and increasing their working time and spending power may, indeed, be an "outrage." If so, American business can stand much more of such outrageousness.

Meeting the Needs of Millions of People

The low-priced automobile has brought greater opportunity and added hours of recreation to millions of men and women.

BECAUSE the automobile is such an important factor in the lives and prosperity of so many people, the purpose of the Ford Motor Company is something more than the mere manufacture of a motor car.

There is no service in simply setting up a machine or a plant and letting it turn out goods. The service extends into every detail of the business—design, production, the wages paid and the selling price. All are a part of the plan.

The Ford Motor Company looks upon itself as charged with making an automobile that will meet the needs of millions of people and to provide it at a low price. That is its mission. That is its duty and its obligation to the public.

The search for better ways of doing things is never-ending. There is ceaseless, untiring effort to find new methods and new machines that will save steps and time in manufacturing. The Ford plants are, in reality, a great mechanical university, dedicated to the advancement of industry. Many manufacturers come to see and share the progress made.

The greatest progress comes by never standing still. Today's methods, however successful, can never be taken as wholly right. They represent simply the best efforts of the moment. Tomorrow must bring an improvement in the methods of the day before.

Hard work usually finds the way.

Once it was thought impossible to cast gray iron by the endless chain method. All precedent was against it and every previous experiment had failed. But fair prices to the public demanded that wasteful methods be eliminated. Finally the way was found.

A better way of making axle shafts saved thirty-six million dollars in four years. A new method of cutting crankcases reduced the cost by $500,000 a year. The perfection of a new machine saved a similar amount on such a little thing as one bolt. Then electric welding was developed to make many bolts unnecessary and to increase structural strength.

Just a little while ago, an endless chain conveyor almost four miles long was installed at the Rouge plant. This conveyor has a daily capacity of 300,000 parts weighing more than 2,000,000 pounds. By substituting the tireless, unvarying machine for tasks formerly done by hand, it has made the day's work easier for thousands of workers and saved time and money in the manufacture of the car.

All of these things are done in the interest of the public—so that the benefits of reliable, economical transportation may be placed within the means of every one.

The increasing cost of living' cry will now have to be placed away in moth balls and saved for the next tariff battle 10 years hence. It proved to be a bloomer 8 years ago when a protective tariff measure was passed and it will be a bloomer again. If commodity prices stiffen it will only be because business is reviving and the people are back at work and consuming again. The new tariff will doubtless help bring the condition about, but no free trader will at that time be found who will be willing to give it any credit.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Progress of Senate Battle Over Ratification of the Naval Treaty.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

OPponents of the London naval treaty, seemingly aware that there are enough of its supporters in the senate to bring about its ratification, spent last week mainly in devising and offering reservations to the pact. Senator Norris, as well as many others, was still deeply concerned about the secret documents which the President refused to give the senate, and Senator Borah visited the White House to tell Mr. Hoover it might be necessary to accept the Norris rider which says ratification is to be with the understanding that there are no secret agreements.

President Hoover was highly indignant over the implications in this Norris reservation. Since he had given the senate his word that no secret agreement existed, he felt that the rider was a reflection on his good faith. Borah said that if the reservation were rejected he could not answer for the fate of the pact. He did not think it likely that the treaty would be rejected, but he regarded it entirely possible that the supporters of the Norris reservation, if defeated, would be able to prolong the fight indefinitely, if not to bring about a postponement of final action until autumn.

THEN Senator Kenneth McKellar of Tennessee came forward with a reservation under the terms of which Great Britain would be required to dismantle her naval bases off American shores.

McKellar offered yet another reservation providing for freedom of the seas, because, as had been admitted by Senator Reed of Pennsylvania, the delegates to the London conference failed to obey the instructions of congress to consider this question before or at the parley. Both these reservations were opposed by the administration senators.

Senator Watson of Indiana, majority leader, in the effort to speed up action on the treaty proposed a unanimous consent agreement that beginning Tuesday, July 22, debate be limited to ten minutes on each amendment and reservation and on the treaty itself, and that each senator be allowed to speak but once on each. He declared that if this plan were rejected a cloture would be revoked, and a petition for this was prepared.

The fact that this petition was signed by not only the 10 names required for its submission, but nearly the two-thirds majority required for its adoption made it certain that the treaty would be ratified with votes to spare.

MERELY for recreation and a much needed rest, President Hoover will start August 15 on a vacation trip that will last only about two weeks. This was announced at the White House, and it was added that the President would make no speeches or public appearances in the various cities he passes through. It is his intention to visit both the Glacier and Yellowstone National parks, but the itinerary has not yet been made out. It was considered likely he would travel by train to Chicago, take a boat from there to Duluth and make the rest of the trip by railway.

Representatives of the Interior department, at the direction of Secretary Wilbur, have selected a number of camping sites in the national parks for the use of the Presidential party.

Notwithstanding the President's evident intention to avoid political contests during his trip, the Republicans of Montana hope that his visit to that state will help the cause of Justice Albert J. Gates, who has been nominated for United States senator to oppose Senator Thomas J. Walsh. Gates is a moderate wet and Walsh has been an active dry. Both are Catholics.

Though, as was said, Mr. Hoover is declining invitations to make speeches, he has tentatively given assurance that he will be present and speak at the dedication of the Roosevelt arch, where the Roosevelt highway crosses the continental divide in Montana. The date of the dedication, which originally was to have taken place the past week, is to be fixed to suit the President's convenience.

SENATOR ARTHUR CAPPER of Kansas wants the farm board to buy 100,000,000 bushels of wheat, in addition to that already purchased, and he put his plan before President Hoover. The Chief Executive, however, had just had a talk with Secretary of Agriculture Hyde who had returned from a trip to the wheat belt and who was understood to be opposed to such a scheme as Capper proposed. So the President declined to approve the plan, though he told the Kansan he was anxious to do anything desirable to relieve the plight of the wheat growers.

Chairman Legge of the farm board made public his correspondence with Governor Reed of Kansas who criticized the board's plan for reduction of wheat acreage and criticized its activities, or inactivities. In his letter Mr. Legge makes it plain that the grain stabilization activities of the board have undergone no appreciable change in policy in spite of the governor's charges of its having broken the market and caused a record breaking slump in wheat.

SENATOR Nyo of North Dakota, chairman of the special senate committee to investigate campaign expenditures, was in Chicago last week holding hearings all by himself on the expenditures in behalf of Mrs. Ruth Hanna McCormick, Republican nominee for senator. Nyo and Mrs. McCormick haggled a lot concerning the factious and organizations that supported her against Senator Deneen, and various witnesses testified to their contributions to her campaign fund. But it was not apparent that anything was brought out discreditable to Mrs. McCormick.

That lady while on the stand demanded that the committee summon her Democratic rival for the senatorship, James Hamilton Lewis, and ask him to explain a statement he made in Springfield to the effect that it cost $1,000,000 to win the Republican nomination. She said Lewis "must have knowledge of expenditures of well over $700,000 more than I have included in my accounting. He should be subpoenaed if he has any knowledge of that sort."

FRANK J. DORGER, majority stockholder in the closed Cosmopolitan Bank and Trust company of Cincinnati, filed a petition in bankruptcy. Immediately thereafter O. C. Gray, state banking superintendent, stated that a shortage of $2,000,217 existed in the bank. The institution closed several weeks ago as the alleged result of the $1,000,000 check kiting operations of A. W. Shafer. Examiners also found Dorger's bank accepted $223,000 in fake securities from Shafer.

Common Pleas Judge Stanley Strubel said he would consider a contempt of court charge against Dorger and his daughter, Martha, who also filed bankruptcy proceedings, because the state had been granted a temporary injunction restraining the Dorgers from disposing of their personal assets.

ACTIVITIES of Communists in the United States are being investigated by a congressional committee which was busy last week in New York city. Most important of the witnesses heard was Charles G. Wood, commissioner of conciliation of the Department of Labor. He said the Communists at work among the labor groups were chronic trouble makers, and described strikes in Passaic, New Bedford and Gastonia, N. C., each of which was either started or influenced by the Reds. He declared the strikes, like other activities of the Communists, were but a means of attacking the government of the United States.

FRANCE and Italy last week reached a "gentleman's agreement" to take a naval building holiday for six months, and there was great relief in European diplomatic circles. The agreement means little from a naval standpoint, for neither nation intended to lay down any more vessels this year, but it was of immense importance psychologically. The statement of both countries now hope to settle most of their problems before the six months are up.

GREAT BRITAIN, still struggling to settle the row in India, has a new trouble on her hands. This is in Egypt, where the Wafd or nationalist party, supporting Nahas Pasha, former premier against King Fuad, is stirring up revolt. The first outbreak was in Alexandria, where a fanatical mob of Wafdists staged a great riot, attacking Europeans and looting shops. Before native troops and police had regained control of the situation 13 civilians, all Egyptians, had been killed, and at least 60 were wounded by gunshot. About 150 others, including 50 police, were injured in other ways. The British battleships Queen Elizabeth and Ramillies were hurried to Alexandria.

Latest developments in the Indian affair indicated that Mahatma Gandhi, head of the passive resistance revolt, would be released from prison and invited to participate in the London round table conference that is to open October 20. As a preliminary, Gandhi is expected to call off the civil disobedience campaign.

It is also reported in London that though Prime Minister Macdonald and his colleagues are eager to shelve the Simon report they may be forced to face it at the round table because of the determination of certain Indian delegations to have the report accepted as a basis of discussion.

MAKING use of dictatorial power conferred on him by President von Hindenburg under the German constitution, Chancellor Bruening put into effect the "emergency finance law" by decree. The reichstag had refused to approve the measure and the government lost patience. The law, which is expected to end the government's deficit, includes an increase in income tax, enforcement of a tax on bachelors and spinsters, a head tax and a special tax on food and liquor served in inns and restaurants.

The reichstag has the right to repeal the law, but the chancellor threatens to dissolve the parliament if a repeal is sought.

GERMANY'S reply to the memorandum of French Foreign Minister Briand proposing a European federation indicates a general acceptance of the plan, though it has almost as many reservations as the Italian reply. The Germans, like the Italians and some others, insist that Russia and Turkey be included in the union, and they make it clear the federation should in no way be directed against the United States. They subtly suggest a revision of the war treaties, but say little of disarmament. The German reply agrees heartily with Briand on the necessity of subordinating economic to political aspects—a view which may prove to be the fatal weakness of the whole scheme.

A "purely tentative" reply from Great Britain was not so encouraging, expressing the opinion that the proposed union is "unnecessary and possibly a dangerous institution." It suggested that the plan be placed on the agenda of the next assembly of the League of Nations.

Greece, Austria and Poland also have accepted the Briand plan, and Russia seems to be fishing for an invitation.

AS USUAL, you can make your own choice as to which faction in China is winning the civil war. Just now things look none too cheerful for the Nationalist government. Dispatches from Peking say fifteen leaders of the Kuomintang signed a manifesto formally ending the long dispute between the right and left wings of that party, and calling a national conference within a month for the purpose of establishing a government "to succeed the false government which Gen. Chiang Kai-shek usurped." It is predicted Gen. Yen Hsi-shan will be head of that new government.

DEATHS of the week included those of Brig. Gen. H. C. Smithey, U. S. A.; Rear Admiral A. H. Robertson, U. S. N.; Henry Sydney Harrison, novelist; Judge Jesse E. Holden, dean of the Chicago bench; James M. Lynch, veteran leader of the International Typographical union; and Leopold von Anco, eminent violinist.

The Mazaroff Mystery

By J. S. FLETCHER W. N. U. Service.

Illustrations by IRWIN MYERS (C. by Alfred A. Knopf, Inc.)

THE STORY

Mervyn Holt is engaged by a man calling himself Mazaroff as a traveling companion. After a short tour they put up at the Woodcock inn on Marrasdale moor.

"You and the deceased gentleman were very close friends, I think?" he said quietly. "Such close friends that he leaves you all his money—a vast fortune!—and appoints you sole executor of his last will and testament."

"I'm sure of something else than my memory!" I retorted hotly. "I know nothing whatever about Mazaroff's will, I never knew he'd made one. And I'm very sure that if his will is found, and I have to handle his money, I shall just transfer it to whom it belongs—to his widow and daughter."

"You're a bit hot-tempered, Mr. Holt," he said. "Come, come—I was only speaking professionally, you know—professional manners, after all, are—"

"Confoundedly offensive, sir, if that's a specimen of them!" I retorted. "You were inferring that—"

"Now, now, I wasn't inferring anything!" he interrupted soothingly. "I've the interest of my client to consider. I say again, it's an odd thing that Mazaroff or Merchlison didn't mention his will to you. But the whole thing's odd, he went on, looking round, 'and what I suggest is that we legal gentlemen and the parties concerned just have a talk, if we can find a place to talk in.'"

Suddenly Crole smote the table at which he was sitting. "Who murdered this man?" he exclaimed, with emphasis. "That's the question! Who murdered him, and why? He was a man of mystery, evidently. And as I've asked before—was he murdered as Mazaroff, or as Merchlison? I think we may have to go back—perhaps a long way. But it seems to me that the murder must be cleared up as a start."

named Parslave, Ralph Parslave, better known as Ratty, who lives in a cottage on the outskirts of Birnside, has never been home since the day of that fair. He's a man who lives by himself and seems to be a sort of odd-job man; occasional drover, game-watcher, rat-catcher.

"Who Murdered This Man?" He Exclaimed, With Emphasis.

seclusively—of his money. They think he slipped out of the barroom, perhaps with no very definite intention; that changing to pass the open door of this private room he saw Musgrave's gun hanging on those hooks, stepped in, took it down and cleared off with it; that he afterward followed Mazaroff across the moor, shot him dead, and robbed him; after that throwing the gun away where it was found, and clearing out with the proceeds of his crime. That, I say, is the police theory.

"And what do you think of it?" asked Wetherby. "It's a good theory—from a policeman's point of view," said Maythorne. "There may be a great deal in it. But speaking for myself, I should like to know more about the dead man's personal, private history, recent as well as past. One matter in particular needs clearing up. He told Mr. Holt that he wanted to see some man here at Marrasdale. Who was that man? Did he see him?"

Nobody of course, could answer that question, and the conference broke up. We hurried Mazaroff—or Merchlison—that afternoon, very quietly, and in the evening Webster drove Crole,

Changes Brought About in Food Associations

Nowhere else, save in these United States, is there such a blend of food resources and contrasting food tastes of different racial strains, writes Muriel Allen King in the New York Herald Tribune. In pre-war, pre-prohibition days, there was great pride in local cookery. Certain dishes were indelibly associated with certain sections of the United States.

Backbone of a Camel

The backbone of the single-humped camel is not curved upward in the middle, as many people suppose. It is as straight as the backbone of a horse or elephant. Humps on all camels are composed chiefly of fat and they vary in size according to the physical condition of the animals.

Maythorne and myself to Black Gill Junction, where we caught the night mail for London. For Maythorne was unusually keen on seeing the officials at the Imperial Banking Corporation of South Africa, and on finding out all he could about Mazaroff in general, and the receipt for the registered letter indorsed "Bl. D. L." in particular.

"I think it was greatly to my credit that I controlled my features and the rest of me when this sudden announcement was made, neither staring nor starting at the mention of Armintrade's name. Even Crole, old and hardened man of law that he was, could not refrain from a very slight start of surprise. Maythorne, of course, showed no surprise; his face, always cheerful and bright, betrayed nothing.

"I know Courthope's—by reputation," he remarked. "Then—you yourself can't tell us anything very much about Mazaroff?"

"I can tell you what I know," replied our informant, evidently quite willing to talk. "We know Mazaroff as a very wealthy man who had extensive dealings in trading affairs, and latterly in diamonds and other precious stones, in the East, and in South Africa. He kept his principal account at our Cape Town headquarters, but for years he has had a smaller account here as well. Lately, he transferred his Cape Town account here; he also realized all his various properties and paid the proceeds in here, with a view to reinvestment in English securities."

"Then you hold a considerable sum of his?" suggested Crole. "We understand that it is about eight hundred thousand pounds?"

"About that, I dare say," assented the manager, almost indifferently. "Rather more, I fancy. Oh, yes—a wealthy man! And the will, you say, is lost?"

"Missing temporarily, we hope," said Crole. "But Postlethwaite has the original draft, in Mazaroff's own handwriting, and signed by Mazaroff. Can you tell us anything of Mazaroff—personally?"

"Next to nothing," answered the manager. "He called here, just once, some time after his arrival in London. I saw him—in this very room. He wasn't here five minutes. He said he was just going for a tour in the north of England, and would look in on his return, a few weeks hence. And—that's all."

A few minutes later we all left. And once outside the great door of the bank, Crole gave Maythorne a sharp glance.

"Um!" he said. "Armintrade!" "Just so!" said Maythorne. "As you say—Armintrade!"

"A man might have reasons, when a man he knows is murdered under his very nose, for not coming forward to say that he knows him," observed Crole. "But—I think, considering everything, that if I'd been in Armintrade's position the other day I should have said, 'I know this man—he's so-and-so, and I'll tell you all I know about him.' Eh?"

"I'll tell you what I think," Maythorne said. "Armintrade is the man whom Mazaroff wanted to see at Marrasdale moor! Now then—did he see him? Holt doesn't know—nobody knows—at least, nobody that we've heard of. But—Armintrade's the man I Armintrade, as we've just heard, did all Mazaroff's business at the bank we've just left—it was into Armintrade's hands that the registered letter of which I've got the receipt in my pocket would fall. We must have a little talk with Armintrade. But before that—" he paused and waved his hand to a passing taxicab—"before that we're going to examine Mazaroff's rooms and belongings at the Hotel Cecil."

The three of us were presently in the rooms wherein I had first met the dead man. Maythorne made some discoveries that were of use, if of no great apparent moment. In an old trunk he found some schoolbooks; on the flyleaf of each was written the name Andrew Merchlison, with dates: these he handed to Crole.

"There's no doubt whatever that he was Merchlison," said Crole, turning these things over. "It's not likely that he'd have kept these books else. These will come in handy to show to Mrs. Elphinstone. But I wish there were more papers."

Maythorne, however, found some papers—in a letter case that lay in a drawer, unlocked, in Mazaroff's writing table. These were letters—private letters, all, with one exception, written recently from Cape Town by a Mr. Herman Kloop, who appeared to be a close personal friend of Mazaroff. There was next to nothing about business affairs in them—they were chiefly filled with gossip, club gossip, personal details, and such matters; the sort of stuff exchanged by old cronies. But they had this value, observed Maythorne—he now had a name and address in Cape Town to which he could cable for certain information about the dead man.

The one letter not written by this Mr. Herman Kloop was in the same case that held the Kloop letters, but in an envelope which bore on its flap the impressed seal of the Imperial Banking Corporation of South Africa, with the address of the London branch. Maythorne immediately drew attention to the postmark and date: the letter had been posted in London on the previous 3rd of January.

"From Armintrade to Mazaroff, without doubt," said Maythorne. Then his face fell.

"Written in cipher!" he exclaimed. The sheet of notepaper was almost filled with writing. But to us it was all so much unmeaning jargon: we could make neither head nor tail of it. There were, however, certain things on the sheet of paper which were plain enough. The paper itself was the ordinary letter paper of the bank, with its title and address engraved at the top of the front page. The letter began in understandable English—Dear Mr. Mazaroff. And it ended in plain English—Yours faithfully, John Armintrade. But all that went between, a hotch-potch of cabalistic words and figures, was so much double Dutch to all three of us.

"A cipher!" repeated Maythorne. "Mazaroff, of course, would have a key. In his pocketbook, no doubt, and therefore stolen. Well—it's more evident than ever that we must have a little conversation with Mr. John Armintrade."

We left the hotel. Maythorne immediately hurried off to the nearest telegraph office; he was, keen on cabling to Mr. Herman Kloop for some highly necessary news of Mazaroff. And as it was then well past noon, Crole and I turned into Romano's for some lunch.

"This is a queer business, Holt," said Crole as we settled down in a comfortable and quiet corner. "I mean—what we've found out this morning. You've seen this man Armintrade?"

"For a few minutes only," I replied. "What sort is he?" he asked. "You'd have thought that he'd have come forward and said that he'd had business dealings with Mazaroff. Instead—not a word!"

"He looks the sort of man who would probably reply to that that Mazaroff's death was no concern of his," I suggested. "He gives one that impression."

"Aye, well," remarked Crole, "we shall just have to find out a few things—leave it to Maythorne."

I left Crole after lunch and went home to my rooms in Jermyn street. I spent a quiet afternoon there, and a quiet evening, and I went to bed early. And at nine o'clock next morning, in came Maythorne.

"Had a cable late last night from Cape Town," he announced. "Mr. Herman Kloop is in London—at the First Avenue hotel. Come along—we'll collect Crole, and interview Kloop at once."

IVY POISONING HANFORD'S Balsam of Myrrh

More and Better Work

When Mind is Orderly Some people have anything but orderly minds, and when you dare to doubt the wisdom of some confused action they are indignant that you should question their manner of doing it.

A mind with no appreciation of orderliness never does the best kind of work. That is impossible. The whole of our life, the universe, the human system are based upon laws which are inexorable in their punishment if we break them.

Besides, there is a great, inexhaustible pleasure in an orderly manner. It adds joy to the job, it saves a lot of wasted effort; which means that, in the general turnover, we can do much more. This saving of time is a very important factor in the development and evolution of the human race.—Exchange.

To Study Humanity

Yale has lately established an institute of human relations. The money for it was given by the Rockefeller foundation, the Commonwealth fund and the Laura Spelman Rockefeller foundation. The first project undertaken will be the study of the family. The study will deal with every phase of the family life that is subject to scientific study: The relationship between parents and children, community influences, education, industry, food, habits, climate and many other signal aspects of a complex living whole.

Plan Hell's Hole Road

Lindbergh plan, named in honor of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, rises from the center of Hell's hole, a tremendous glacial basin of wild grandeur north of the Arapahoe glacier district, Colorado. Plans are on foot for the building of an automobile road as far as possible from Arapahoe glacier toward the basin and then construction of an easy trail to the bottom of Hell's hole.

Tomorrow will be another day.

FARM WOMAN BENEFITED

After Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Likdale, Pa.—"Before I was married, my mother and sister and I did all the farming work on a 64-acre farm for eleven years. I married a farmer and now in addition to my housework and the care of my children I help him with the outside work on our farm. After my last child was born, I began to suffer as many women do. Finally our family doctor told me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I did and now I am a new woman and I know that good health is better than riches."—Mrs. CURTIS L. SHERMAN, R. F. 1, Likdale, Pa.
