NOGAL NOTES

By "Canyon Cal"

Mrs. Walker White and three children have returned from an extended motor trip which took them to South Carolina and Louisiana. The distance covered on the trip was somewhat over 1,000 miles and Mrs. White should have a medal for her bravery in passing at many times, through strange and desolate regions, but it goes to show that the ladies are oftentimes more brave than the men, in attempting long trips of this kind.

Rich Hust, Ed Comrey and Hal Young are preparing to start a singing class for the fall entertainments. Rich will take the lead, Ed will sing tenor and Hal will take the bass part. If this won't put Nogal on the map, nothing will. A small membership fee will be charged, just enough to pay for the hard cider they will serve to all of the faithful. The first struggle will be held as soon as the fall season sets in.

Mrs. Chas. LeBaron and nephew, Billy White have gone on a motor trip to Phoenix, Ariz., to meet Mr. Walker White and the three will be here by the latter part of this week.

Rumor has it that Nogal is about to experience another religious revival and if this is true, we may expect an avalanche of the old sinners who will be ready to be re-converted as they are at every revival that has been staged here. We have lots of good musical talent in the hills to help out the movement.

Mrs. Blanche White and three little daughters were Carrizozo business visitors Tuesday, returning in the afternoon.

Some work is being done on the Nogal-Mesa county road this week.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Southern Italy Devastated by Quake—Thousands Killed or Injured.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

Southern Italy was rocked and torn by the worst earthquake in that region since the terrible disaster that destroyed Messina in 1908. Death figures on the loss of life may not be known for many days. At this writing it is known that 2,013 persons were killed and twice as many injured. Communications in the stricken area broke down and airplanes were being used for relief and exploration work.

The provinces of Puglia, Campania and Basilicata sustained the worst of the temblor, but it was felt as far north as Abruzzi and Molise. The quake, which started at 1:15 in the morning, centered around the old volcano Mount Vulture, and the city of Melfi, just north of that cone, was destroyed, as were also the nearby towns of Lacedonia, Aquilone, Baccica and Arlano. Many other cities and villages were partly razed, and famous palaces and churches were ruined. Even Rome and Naples were badly shaken, and several persons were killed in the latter city.

Premier Mussolini promptly took command of the situation and rescue and relief measures were put into effect quickly throughout the devastated region, the Red Cross and the army with hosts of physicians and nurses, being hurried to the scene. Pope Pius ordered that aid be sent to places in urgent need and a relief fund held in readiness by the Vatican. Though southern Italy was thronged with tourists, it was believed there were no casualties among the Americans there.

Two days after the earthquake a tornado swept over the Venetia district, killing a dozen persons and causing heavy damage over a stretch of 25 miles.

GERMANY also had its disaster, vastly less in magnitude but shocking enough. During the celebration in Coblenz of the evacuation of the Rhineland, in which President van Hinderburg was the central figure, a pontoon bridge across the Moselle collapsed and about 80 men, women and children were precipitated into the river. Many of them were killed by the falling timbers and many others drowned. The bodies of 23 were recovered and it was feared more might be found by divers. The celebrations, which had been going on gaily for several days, were brought to an end by the calamity.

OVER in England there was an airplane disaster made notable by the prominence of the victims. A Junkers air liner on route from France to Croydon blew up near Gravesend and its six occupants were killed. They were the marquis of Dufferin and Ava; Viscountess Ednam, a noted beauty and close friend of the prince of Wales; Sir Edward Ward; Mrs. Henri Loeffler, well known society woman; Lieut. Col. George L. P. Henderson, the pilot, who was rated as one of England's best flyers, and Charles Shearing, second pilot.

THAT London naval treaty is now in effect so far as American action goes. The senate by a vote of 68 to 9, ratified the pact, and next day President Hoover signed it with the gold pen used by the American delegates to the conference to sign the treaty in London. The document was then sent to London, where parliament was engaged in giving the pact its approval.

In a formal statement President Hoover said: "It is a matter of satisfaction that this great accomplishment in international relations has at all steps been given united support of both our political parties. With the ratification by the other governments the treaty will translate an emotion deep in the hearts of millions of men and women into a practical fact of government and international relations. It will renew again the faith of the world in the moral forces of good will and patient negotiation as against the blind forces of suspicion and competitive armament. It will secure the full defense of the United States. It will mark a further long step toward lifting the burdens of militarism from the backs of mankind and to speed the march forward of world peace. It will lay the foundations upon which further constructive reduction in world arms may be accomplished in the future. We should by this act of willingness to join with others in limiting armament have dismissed from the mind of the world any notion that the United States entertains ideas of aggression, imperial power, or exploitation of foreign nations."

Immediately after the ratification by the senate, the President asked for the names of those who voted in opposition. These were Bingham of Connecticut, Hale of Maine, Johnson of California, Moses of New Hampshire, Odell of Nevada, Pine of Oklahoma and Robinson of Indiana, all Republicans; and McMillan of Tennessee and Walsh of Massachusetts, Democrats.

FIVE senators from wheat states—Capper, Allen, McMaster, Howell and Pine—called on Chairman Legge of the federal farm board in Washington and again urged that the board adopt Capper's plan and buy a lot more wheat in the effort to boost the price. Once more Mr. Legge refused, declaring the scheme would be at best only a temporary expedient and in the long run would make the wheat problem worse. He declared the board, which has 60,000,000 bushels on its hands, would not purchase any more at this time and would sell none until the price advanced.

"What we want," said Mr. Legge, "is something permanent. Stabilization will work admirably on seasonal surpluses, but it cannot be used on an accumulative surplus. We have had an accumulative surplus in wheat for four years. Stabilization will not cure it. I don't say stabilization is a failure, but it won't work at the present time. To follow Senator Capper's plan would only encourage the farmers in Kansas to raise more wheat and make a bad situation worse."

In Kansas the wheat problem is having powerful effect in the gubernatorial primary campaign. Governor Reed, who attacks the farm board plan for reduction of wheat acreage, is up for renomination by the Republicans and is opposed by Frank Hauke of Council Grove, a farmer, who upholds Legge's plan.

DETROIT, which has won an enviable reputation as a vice center in recent years, has begun to clean house. Charles Howles, who was serving his second term as mayor, was ousted from office last week in a special recall election, the majority against him being 30,035. When Howles took office last year he appointed as public works commissioner one Joseph Gillespie who had been forced out as police commissioner in 1910, when vice conditions in Detroit were especially bad. Under Howles, the newspapers declared, gambling houses and speakeasies began running wild open and Police Commissioner Harold Emmons was said to be afraid to close them. Finally, while Mayor Howles was attending the Kentucky derby, Emmons did raid some places, and the mayor thereupon ousted him.

Under the law a new election to fill the mayor's place must be held within 30 days of the filing of the certified returns of the recall election. Under the law Howles is automatically a candidate for re-election and any other candidates may go on the ballot by presenting nominating petitions signed by 14,000 voters.

Only a few hours after the Detroit voters had put Howles out of office, Harold Buckley, a radio announcer who had been delivering addresses describing vice conditions in Detroit and criticizing the mayor's administration, was shot to death in the lobby of a hotel by three men who escaped. This was the eleventh gang murder in the city in sixteen days. Governor Green ordered the state police to investigate the crime independently and said he would call out state troops, if necessary, to stop the assassinations. There were points of similarity between the murder of Buckley and that of Jake Lingo, the Chicago reporter. It was asserted Buckley had been the intimate friend of underworld characters, and the Detroit police said they had in their possession an affidavit purporting to show that he had been extorting money from bootleggers.

PETER A. BOGDANOV, the Russian who heads the board of directors of the Amtorg Trading corporation, which is the official buying agency for the Soviet government in the United States, is much peeved. Grover Whalen, Matthew Wolf and others told the congressional committee investigating Communist activities that Amtorg has been using its powers for propaganda against our government. This Mr. Bogdanov strenuously denies, and he says unless the charges are "thoroughly investigated and found baseless," the continuance of Soviet-American trade "will be an almost impossible task." This was understood as a plain threat that governmental interference with Amtorg will be resented to the tune of more than $100,000,000 a year—the amount of Russian imports from America the company controls, and can withdraw. The committee obtained from Bogdanov admissions that the Amtorg, a million dollar concern incorporated in New York state, is owned by the Soviet bank of foreign trade, which in turn is controlled by the Soviet government, and that high Communist officials have been sent here to head it, and only two naturalized Russians are among its directors. Amtorg has been extended credit of $50,000,000 by banks in this country.

CLAUDIUS HUSTON, after conferring with President Hoover, announced that he would resign as chairman of the Republican national committee on August 7. This greatly relieved the leaders of the party, who had insisted on Mr. Huston's retirement because of revelations made before the senate lobby committee.

DEMOCRATS of Iowa in state convention adopted a plank in their platform calling for "a reasonable definition" of what constitutes intoxicating liquor and advocating a nation-wide referendum on prohibition. The reason for this stand, the resolution says, is the "nation-wide scandal" brought about by dry law enforcement methods. In this way the Democrats accepted the challenge of the Republican state convention, which voted down a resolution urging modification of the prohibition law.

RIOTING by the Egyptian Wafists was renewed last week in Cairo and Port Said, and there were a number of deaths in the battles with the police and troops. Up to date the British had not intervened. Miram Pasha, Egyptian finance minister, declared before the inter-parliamentary congress in session in London that in Egypt today a struggle is going on between brutal autocracy and democracy, and that innocent blood is being shed. For the fourth time in five years, he said, the Egyptian parliament has been suspended and the people goaded beyond endurance.

GLENN H. GURTISS, a distinguished pioneer in aviation, died suddenly in a Buffalo hospital at the age of fifty-two years. He was operated on recently for appendicitis and was thought to be well on the road to recovery. Mr. Curtiss was one of the foremost aviation experimenters and was ranked next to the Wright brothers. He retired from active business shortly after the World war, retaining directorships in several companies that bear his name.

Another well-known American who passed away was James Eads How, "millionaire hobo," who during his life had spent a large fortune in trying to help the hoboes, denying himself even sufficient food and clothing and other necessities of life. He died in a hospital at Staunton, Va.

Harry S. Black, chairman of the United States Realty and Improvement corporation and known as the moving spirit in the modern growth of New York city and the construction of many of its greatest buildings, committed suicide by shooting at his country home at Lloyd Harbor, Long Island. Mule Driver's Remarks Started Big "Ruction"

There had been a fight in an estaminet in Vaucoleurs between some regular soldiers and some members of one of the new divisions. After the M. P.'s had stopped the hullaboo it appeared that Private Sirm Gibbs, who was a mule driver in the Eighteenth Infantry wagon train and did not like recruits, had knocked the new division in this wise:

"Yes, sir," said Sirm, "they landed at St. Nazaire and on their arm brassards was a roarin', tearin' wild animal—a grizzly bear—with claws a foot long and spittin' like a wildcat."

"When they got up near Bar le Duc that animal had lost his claws and he stopped spittin'. When they hit Beaumont, behind Selcheprey, that fierce animal was just sittin' down, lookin' around kind of peaceful like."

"And, soldiers, when one of their motor artillery batteries passed us on the way to the front, that bear had disappeared and they had a dove on their brassards and the words: 'Let us have peace.'"

Then the fight began.—Ted F. Smith in Philadelphia Public Ledger.

War Put Heavy Burden on Women of Esthonia

Women of Esthonia are among the busiest on earth, according to Miss Clara Roe of New York, a recent visitor to that tiny republic.

Between her home, her job and her public duties, the time of an educated woman in Esthonia is severely taxed, she says. Many such women have two or three public duties, a job as homemaker, wife and mother, and another as wage earner. These Esthonian women are carrying heavy responsibilities. Esthonia lost its men heavily in the World war, and in its struggle for independence women must now help to do the work of their nation. They also work in the fields, repair roads, streets and railroad tracks, work in brickyards, lumber yards and in building construction and perform other laborious tasks. If they sought to use their political power to the fullest, they could outvote the men. Every one is public spirited, carrying two or three jobs with pride, instead of complaint.

Fight "Slot Drug Stores"

Medical men of London have started a war on the new "automatic drug stores" which are being placed in railway stations, hotels and other public places. The machines deal out aspirin, bismuth and other drugs. The possibility of children getting the drugs has prompted one pathologist to predict that the machines will undoubtedly cause many fatalities.

Aircrow Train in Germany

Trains operated by a propeller-driven engine are possible as the result of tests made recently in Hannover, Germany. The engine resembled an armored car and the two propellers were driven by motors. The experiments were similar to those being made in Scotland with the George-Bennie railplane, a cigar-shaped car guided by rails built on a series of triples and driven 120 miles an hour by aircraft propellers.

More than 5,000 persons, mostly women and girls, are now employed producing hats and millinery accessories.

THE STORY

Mervyn Holt is engaged by a man calling himself Mazaroff as a traveling companion. After a short tour they put up at the Woodcock Inn on Marraedale moor. They meet, casually, Mrs. Elphinstone and Sheila Marchion, Mazaroff tells Holt they are his wife and daughter and that his real name is Merchlison. That night Mazaroff fails to return to the inn and his disappearance is unexplained. Holt meets Sheila and tells her of Mazaroff's disappearance. Holt is questioned by Police Sergeant Manners and a reporter, Brown. Mazaroff's murdered body is found. Crole, Mazaroff's lawyer, and Maythorne, private detective, arrive. Valuable diamonds that Mazaroff usually carried are missing. A gun, stolen from Muzzgrave, is found at the scene of the murder. Evidence at the inquest proves Mazaroff was Merchlison. His will leaves all to Holt. Herman Kloop, close friend of Mazaroff, is in London.

CHAPTER V

The Diamond World

We found Mr. Kloop at half past ten, leisurely finishing a late breakfast, a little dapper, Hebraic looking gentleman.

He appeared to take unusual interest in me as we revealed our separate identities, and I remembered then that the details of Mazaroff's will had come out in Postlethwaite's evidence at the inquest, and that newspaper reporters had been present.

"I only arrived in London last night," he said, as we seated ourselves. "I read about Mazaroff in the paper. A strange affair, gentlemen—and yet not so strange as it seems. Mazaroff was a careless man. He was too ready—sheer thoughtlessness, you know—to let people see what he had on him. And he carried things that I should have kept under lock and key. However—but tell me—how did you find out that I was here?"

"We found these letters of yours in Mazaroff's rooms at the Hotel Cecil," replied Maythorne, producing the letter case, "and judging from them that you were a very intimate friend of his, I cabled to your address in Cape Town yesterday morning, and received a reply at night that you were here. You have read up the case, Mr. Kloop?"

"All that there is in these papers," replied Kloop. "I see the police suspect some local man—a villager of no very good reputation. May be so—but I should say, knowing what I do of Mazaroff, that there is something deeper in the case than a mere vulgar murder and robbery. Now, as I learn from the newspaper accounts that Mr. Holt was Mazaroff's companion in his north-country excursion, and with him all the time at this Woodcock Inn, I should like to ask Mr. Holt to tell me two or three things—questions that occur to me, you know. Did you ever notice anything to make you think that you—that is to say, that Mazaroff was being followed—tracked?"

"I can't say that I ever did," said I. "You never, for instance, noticed a man, or men, who turned up with some regularity at the hotels you stayed at?" he suggested.

"Well," I answered. "I can only think of this—that seems to have anything to do with your suggestion. We stayed a night at Huntingdon—our first night. I saw Mazaroff talking, evidently confidentially, to a man in the smoking room late that night. Then, one day at York, I saw him in conversation with the same man in York station."

"You'd know the man again?" suggested Kloop.

"Oh, yes—a young, fair-haired, fresh-complexioned man, very smartly dressed," I said. "A man of probably twenty-five, or so."

"Were there any other guests than yourselves at this Woodcock Inn?" inquired Kloop.

"Staying there—no," I replied. "People came in, though, for lunch—people who were motoring north or south."

Kloop folded his hands on the table and looked from one to the other of us.

"What is in my mind," he said, "is that Mazaroff may have been tracked to this place, caught on that moor by the man who had tracked him, and done to death."

"For what he had on him?" suggested Crole.

"That—or something like it," answered Kloop. "I see it's stated in the papers—from Mr. Holt's evidence—that he probably had a lot of money, and his valuables on him. But—do you know if he had anything else—anything that would make a man resort to actual murder to gain possession of it?"

"We don't," answered Maythorne. "The fact is, Mr. Kloop, we came to you hoping that you, as a close friend of his, could throw a lot of light on Mazaroff. What, now, was he likely to have on him?"

"I will tell you what I know of Mazaroff. It may do some good—but I think the secret of this business will be unearched only by getting at Mazaroff's own doings between the time he arrived here in London and his murder at Marraedale moor."

"You have read what was said at the inquest about Mazaroff being in reality one Andrew Merchlison? Very well—do you know if he was Andrew Merchlison?" Maythorne asked.

"I do not," replied Kloop. "But," he added, with a quiet smile, "I dare say he was. In fact, I should conclude he was the Andrew Merchlison spoken of at the inquest. He was a bit of a mystery man. But I never knew him as anything else than Saim Mazaroff, and he never said a word to me about his antecedents, during the whole time of our friendship."

"When he first became known to me, Mazaroff was what you might term a general trader, or general speculator in commerce. But of late years, he had given up all that and had turned his attention exclusively to diamonds. When he retired, and when he came to England he had a certain deal, or venture, or speculation on, and I am inclined to believe that it has more than a little to do with his murder."

"Last winter Mazaroff got hold of a truly magnificent blue diamond. I have seen the famous Blue Hope—Mazaroff's stone was finer, both in size and quality. It weighed fifty-five and a half carats; its color and brilliancy were superb! I don't think—indeed I am sure—it was not seen by anyone but myself in Cape Town; Mazaroff sent it off to England. He—"

"To whom?" interrupted Maythorne. "That I do not know," replied Kloop.

Maythorne produced the receipt for the registered letter posted at Cape Town and passed it over to him.

"Do you think that receipt has anything to do with the sending?" he asked. "Look at the indorsement on the back—in Mazaroff's writing."

Kloop examined the bit of paper carefully, on both sides, and finally passed it back with a satisfied nod.

"Oh, no doubt!" he answered. "That would be about the date. Sent it to the London branch of his bank; to be sure. The indorsement proves it, too—what could be clearer? 'Bl. D. 1.' 'Blue Diamond One,' of course."

"Why, 'Blue Diamond One?'" asked Maythorne. "Is there, or was there, a Blue Diamond Two?"

Kloop smiled knowingly. "Precisely what I am about to tell you!" he answered. "There was—in the end, and I feel convinced that Mazaroff had Blue Diamond Two, and perhaps Blue Diamond One, on him when he was murdered on the moor! After he got hold of that first blue diamond, he developed an almost feverish craze to get a second. I know that he got Blue Diamond One for what you call, I believe—in your English phrase—a mere song. But he was so intent on getting another blue diamond to match it that he told me he was prepared to go to a great length, a big price. In the end he got what he wanted."

"Another?" exclaimed Crole.

"Another. And equally fine," replied Kloop. "I don't know, for he wouldn't tell me, what he gave for it. But he got it—and not very long before he sailed for England."

"You saw it?" asked Maythorne.

"I saw it—yes," asserted Kloop. "So—I have seen both. I don't think anybody else has. Unless—which I suspect—Mazaroff has shown them here, since his coming. He had his eye on buyers in Europe."

"Did he mention any particular buyers?" inquired Maythorne.

"He did not. But he did tell me that he had a man here, in London, who did things for him, and who was in touch with European and American people of high degree that might be inclined to give a very fancy price for the pair."

"And you feel sure that he first sent Blue Diamond One to London, and then brought Blue Diamond Two in his own pocket?" suggested Maythorne.

"I feel sure of that," said Kloop. "I may say—I'm certain of it. And since I have learnt these particulars of his sad fate, I have wondered if Mazaroff did one of two things, or, perhaps, both? The first—did he get talkative on board ship, and show his second blue diamond to fellow passengers; the second, did he show it here in London, amongst the fraternity?"

"The fraternity?" said Crole. "You mean—"

"I mean Hatton Garden," answered Kloop, with a knowing smile. "Where, as you must know, the greater part of the diamond transactions of this country are carried out. It will surprise me if Mazaroff is not to be heard of there! Come, gentlemen, I will walk along the street with you . . . and we will see!"

We made a little procession along Holborn; Mr. Kloop and Maythorne in front, Mr. Crole and myself in the rear.

Kloop greeted a man whose fine cloth overcoat was ornamented by a luxurious fur collar and his black satin stock by a blazing diamond pin. They were evidently well acquainted and met with much enthusiasm and handshaking—after which Kloop drew his man aside. When, a few minutes later, they parted, Kloop came to us, shaking his head.

"That's a man who knows this place from top to bottom, and end to end," he remarked. "And he has not heard of Mazaroff and his blue diamonds. That inclines me to a further belief in what I've been thinking all along—which is that Mazaroff intended, and perhaps had in view—a private deal with those stones—did not intend them to come on the market. This is the market—and that man knows nothing. But there are still other men."

After that he dived into several offices, and spoke to other men whom he met on the street, but we got no news of Mazaroff.

"The fact is evident," Kloop said, as we once more sought the open street. "Mazaroff has not visited these regions during his stay in London. I am convinced now that if he showed his blue diamonds here it was in private."

Then, saying that he must now attend to his own business, Kloop left us. We three went to lunch.

"Well, we've got some information," observed Maythorne as we settled down at a corner table. "We've found out about those diamonds. I figure up the situation in this way: Mazaroff sent the first—Blue Diamond One, as we'll call it—to his London bankers. Now then—did he send it for safety, until his coming, or did he send it that it might be shown to a likely customer? I think, to a likely customer—I also think more, in view of that cipher letter. I think that—probably for some time—Armitrade, then at the Imperial Banking Corporation of South Africa in London, had not only had charge of Mazaroff's correspondence with the bank, but had corresponded privately with Mazaroff. I think that Armitrade took charge of Blue Diamond One till Mazaroff's arrival with Blue Diamond Two, and, probably, during the interval made inquiries for a likely buyer of the pair.

"Were There Any Other Guests Than Yourselves at This Woodcock Inn?" Inquired Kloop.

"From all I hear of him, Mazaroff was an astute man. He probably figured that there was a lot of men here in England who, rightly or wrongly, have made vast fortunes out of the war. Such men—as we well know—want to get up in great style, or, rather, they do set up in great style. And the men have women—there's Lady Midas as well as Sir Gorgions. Now what does Lady Midas want—diamonds! What is a fashionable woman without diamonds? Her hair may be false, and her skin as yellow as parchment—but she's going to have diamonds glittering in one and on the other. Now I reckon that Mazaroff knew all that, and that he considered Lady Midas the customer he was looking for, eh?"

"Well—no doubt you're not far wrong," laughed Crole. "Now, if you've got Lady Midas' address in your pocket?"

"At present," observed Maythorne,

Many Republics Before That of United States

Probably the first government which can be considered republican in form was the ancient Israelitish commonwealth or republic, which lasted from about 1491 B. C. to 1005 B. C. About three centuries after this the Greek states, of which Athens was chief, set up what gradually came to be democratic republics. Ancient Carthage and Rome were for a short period republics. During the Middle Ages many of the free cities of Italy and Germany set up republics. San Marino in Italy is now the oldest existing republic, while Switzerland has existed as a republic since 1291. According to an article in the American Cyclopaedia, the degree of popular sovereignty in republics has varied very widely in the past, most of the so-called republics having been ruled by

Moral Conveyed by Winter

The simplicity of winter has a deep moral. The return of nature, after such a career of splendor and prodigality, to habits so simple and austere, is not less upon either the head or the heart.—Burroughs, in "Touches of Nature."

"Lady Midas is found at a lot of addresses. In the meantime, there's spade work to be done in another corner."

"It strikes me there are several corners," said Crole. "Up to now, we've had no light on that Mombasa affair. There can be no doubt that Merchlison was on that ship, that he slipped away from it, leaving his things behind, and got safely ashore—to disappear as Merchlison and reappear as Mazaroff. Now, why?"

"I should say—because he wanted to cut clear of Mrs. Merchlison, left at home," said Maythorne, dryly. "He wanted her to think him dead—what did it matter as long as he was alive? But I tell you he was always a bit of a mystery man, and I'd give a lot to know where he went, and with whom he talked, and so on, that day after he and Holt struck the Woodcock. He saw somebody that day who gave him some information about Mrs. Elphinstone and Miss Merchlison—he said as much to you, didn't he?"

"He did," I admitted.

"Well—who was that somebody?" he asked. "That somebody who's never come forward?"

Maythorne laid down his knife and fork, and bent across the table to us.

"Suppose," he said, in a whisper, meant to be mysterious and significant, "suppose—eh?—suppose it was his wife?"

This suggestion seemed to impress Crole even more than it impressed me—his mouth opened and he started. But before he could say anything, a young man came threading his way through the crowded room and made for him. He bent down, handed Crole a card, and whispered something.

Crole looked at the card and towards the door. "Outside?—waiting?" he said. "Bring him in here, Rollinson."

Rollinson—one of Crole's clerks—went off, and Crole threw the card on the table for us to look at. It was a very neat, beautifully engraved card, giving the name and address of Mr. Adolf Frobenius, 508 Bond street, W., and a very neat, spick-and-span gentleman followed it.

"Well, jewelers in Bond street," whispered Crole, as Mr. Frobenius, ushered by the clerk, made his way to our corner; "client of mine, and neighbor of mine, too—lives near me at Wimbledon; smart man. Hallo, Frobenius!" he continued as he greeted his visitor. "Delighted you ran me to earth. Let me introduce my friends—Mr. Maythorne; Mr. Mervyn Holt. I dare say," he added, with a shy smile, "you've heard of both, before now."

"Of Mr. Maythorne, often," answered the jeweler, with a polite bow. "And of Mr. Holt—since I read in the newspapers of the Mazaroff affair. Which affair, Mr. Crole," he continued, seating himself by the solicitor, "is what I have come to see you about."

"I thought so," said Crole. "Guessed it at once. We shall be glad of any information. Did you know Mazaroff?"

"I have read a great deal in the newspapers about this affair. And I came along to see you, Mr. Crole, because I am almost sure that not very long ago, under rather unusual circumstances, I met Mr. Mazaroff."

"Good!" exclaimed Crole. "But—you either did or you didn't. Why 'almost?'"

"Because," answered Frobenius, "the man whom I met was not introduced to me by any name. I just met him. However, he was a notable man—and the description of Mazaroff in the papers corresponds with my recollections. But I will give you the facts. During the past twelve months or so, I have had business dealings with a Sir Samuel and Lady Locke. Sir Samuel is a self-made man; to be plain, he made a vast fortune as a contractor during the recent war; he is, I gather, a multi-millionaire. About a year ago he bought Lord Mulworthy's house in Park Lane. He and Lady Locke—chiefly her ladyship—have had extensive dealings with me in jewelry and plate. Lady Locke has bought a good many jewels from me.

HANNAH, A GODLY MOTHER

LESSON TEXT—1 Samuel 1:9-17, 24:48; 2:19.

GOLDEN TEXT—My son, hear the instruction of thy father, and forsake not the law of thy mother.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Hannah's Prayer Answered.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Hannah's Prayer Answered.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—How Can We Honor Our Parents?

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Value of a Godly Home.

I. Hannah's Sore Trial (1:1-8).

Elkannah had two wives in violation of God's law. God's primal thought for man was one wife. Therefore, for Adam he made Eve. Hannah's sore trial grew out of jealousy which naturally springs up between two women, wives of one man. The violation of this law of God concerning marriage has always been attended with trouble.

II. Hannah's Prayer (1:9-13).

She had the good sense to take her troubles to the Lord. This believer should do, even though the troubles result from sin.

1. Her bitterness of soul (v. 10).

Though Elkannah loved her and sought to lighten her burden, he was unable to bring to her the needed solace.

2. Her vow (v. 11).

Hannah prayed, asking God for a son. The name Samuel means "asked of God." In connection with her asking this gift from God, she vowed to give the child back to God. Much can be expected of children born into the world under such circumstances.

3. Hannah misjudged by Eli the priest (vv. 12-16).

The priest observing the motion of her lips and not hearing the sound of her voice concluded that she was intoxicated and demanded that she put away wine. She defended herself against this inference.

4. Blessed by Eli (v. 17, 18).

Following her explanation he pronounced a blessing upon her, joining in the prayer that God would grant her petition.

III. Hannah Gives Samuel to the Lord (vv. 24-25).

For a time she cared for Samuel in the home. Always the best nurse for a child is its mother. According to her vow, at an early age she took Samuel to the sanctuary and gave him over to the charge of Eli, the priest, to minister therein. We thus see in his tender years Samuel's ministering before the Lord.

IV. Samuel's Ministry (ch. 3).

1. His call (vv. 1-10).

(1) The occasion.

From his birth Samuel was dedicated to the service of the Lord. While going about his regular duties the Lord spoke unto him. In Samuel we have a striking pattern of child religion. In the Scriptures we have set forth two types of experience: First, the one who experiences God's saving grace after having lived in sin; second, the one brought up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord from infancy.

(2) His obedience.

When the divine voice was discerned Samuel rendered immediate obedience. He expressed his willingness before he knew what was required. He did not inquire what was wanted and then let his obedience depend upon the agreeableness of the command.

2. Samuel's prophetic message (vv. 11-18).

The time has now come for him to pass from the authority of Eli to that of the Lord. The first message entrusted to him was a most terrible one. He hesitated to tell it to Eli, but being pressed, he manifested true courage. It must have been a bitter experience to Eli to see Samuel recognized and himself passed by. This fearful visitation of judgment upon Eli's house was due to the sins of his sons. Eli was held responsible for not restraining them. He seems to have been a good man but lax in the discipline of his children. Parental laxity is most cruel. To tolerate evil when one has the power to restrain it is to become party to it.

V. Samuel Established in the Prophetic Office (3:19-21).

And Samuel grew, and the Lord was with him, and did let none of his words fall to the ground. And all Israel from Dan even to Beersheba knew that Samuel was established to be a prophet to the Lord.—Little did Hannah know that the boy who had been given in answer to her prayer would one day become the spiritual head of the nation. Truly, he that honors God shall be honored by God.

SCENIC PLAYGROUNDS OF AMERICA

By G. M. KILBOURN

Enchanted Keyholes of Glacier Skyline

A SPECTACULAR trail-balcony that rides like an eagle along the shoulder of the cliffs was completed last summer in Glacier National Park, Montana. Together with the eight-mile Garden Wall route already widely known, this new High trail from Granite park northward past Fifty Mountain camp and practically to the Canadian border gives the trail lovers of America, at last, a chance to ride along the continental divide—as well as over it, in a rapturous three-day excursion that is both beautiful, weird, and magnificent.

Most mountain trail trips have a mutual failing—they climb patiently for half a day or more to some great divide, then begin to drop valleyward again almost immediately, with only the briefest of stops on the pinnacle where views were enriched a thousandfold. The new Glacier trail, though, will make the most of that ecstatic upland, prolonging its moments of triumph not only for hours, but days!

Riders—or hikers already conditioned for a considerable climb—may make the three-day sky trail consecutively as a beginning of the five-day "north circle" route from Going-to-the-Sun chalets on St. Mary lake (whose boarhide, incidentally, is one of the most beautiful in America). Hikers wishing to avoid a very long first day, however, should enter the park on the west side instead, and ride the early morning bus to Logan pass; with the main climb thus disposed of, they will find the remaining eight miles of minor ups, and downs as easy as it is delightful. Lake McDonald, now ten miles west by air line, lies high on the horizon, while by contrast the chasm of Logan and McDonald creeks seem far below it, and the streams seem creeping uphill to reach the lake. Also far below lies the automobile road, which was the first to struggle to the divide in Glacier, and which even now does the motoring public a favor, paradoxically enough, by ending in the pass and therefore adding the psychological climax to their trip that will be completely lacking if the road is ever completed.

Perhaps the most delightful feature of the combined Garden Wall and High trail is the repeated opportunities it offers to climb the hillside yet above, occasionally, and thus peep through the keyholes of a bristling divide that not even the famous Glacier goats could follow consecutively. One of these is Swiftcurrent pass, through which come "north circle" travelers from many Glacier camps to reach the High trail, or "triangle" trippers to reverse the Garden Wall route, back to Sun camp. Two others are the "saddles" in the divide just above the Grinnell glaciers, through which you may look down on these huge double-decked ice banks—and from which, particularly in the after-summer hour, the numerous goat population of Grinnell mountain may be discovered taking an afternoon stroll.

The next day, a few miles north of Granite on the High trail, a tremendous climb brings Ahern pass, and with it the sight of a sullen glacier which disputed the path through the pass in the mining days of thirty years ago, and which sometimes hurled luckless pack trains over the cliff toward Lake Helen far below. Here, too, for strenuous hikers, there is also a well-rewarded fifty-minute scramble up the rock slide to the wild northern rim of Iceberg lake, whose ice-cake population melt serenely in the July-August springtime 1,700 feet down the cliffs; this view from the Iceberg wall is a spectacle not likely duplicated anywhere in North America—and one that probably not fifty people have been privileged to see.

Keen Observer

Four-year-old Johnny was listening with much interest to an explanation of the phonograph in a neighbor's house. He didn't understand where the music came from.

"Johnny, the music comes through the needle and out the horn," said his mother.

"But what does the music come from?" asked puzzled Johnny.

"It comes from these black round records," answered Johnny's mother.

"Oh, then that's why you see so many of them broken up in the alley."

Boosting Home Industries and Resources

PRESS Dispatches daily remind us that delegations of state officials and representatives from the various organizations such as the Chambers of Commerce, Kiwanis Clubs, and similar bodies are making tours of the country, advertising the many advantages we have to induce people to locate and help to bring about the good results which we so much desire.

Each state has its own arguments to offer and the object of the different campaigns are all along the same line, namely to induce people from other states to pull stakes and settle in this, that, and other places within their borders.

This is all right and proper in the sense of protection and maintenance of home industries; also following up the age-old custom of the survival of the fittest, but while zealously guarding their own states, some of these very people are bitter in their denunciations of a protective tariff which will encourage the interests of our nation at large. Is it not carrying out the same system of protection by the nation as the above campaigns are striving for the states? Is it not blind politics to argue to the contrary? What is good for the goose certainly must be good for the gander, and if we strive to protect our states, should we not all the more, strive for the nation in order to protect our own interests and our workers against destructive foreign competition.

In the short time since Pres. Hoover signed the new tariff bill, many home industries are putting the men back to work, because they see in the protective features of the measure, a bulwark of protection that has established confidence to such an extent that they already see what home protection will do for them, by keeping out the overflow of cheap, inferior grade of goods that provide such a menace to our prosperity and growth in our home country.

As we said before, shortly after the new tariff bill was signed, that it would not be long before the good effects of the measure would be felt all over the country.

It is coming sooner than we predicted as will be seen by the General Motors Corporation and the Ford people putting back thousands of men who have been idle for months and who would still be idle had not the tariff bill gone into effect.

If you want to vote in the fall election, remember that you must be registered. If you voted two years ago, you will be automatically registered, but suppose your name was accidentally left off the poll books; you would be out of luck and could not vote, so see that your name is on the books. Don't neglect this important duty and then bob up on election day and raise a rough house with the judges and clerks, because you will have yourself and no one else to blame. Are you registered?

Two Hours From Garden to Can

Canning String Beans in a Steam Pressure Canner.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Each year as the time approaches when the garden surplus must be cared for, the homemaker finds herself wondering whether there is any new and easier way to do her canning and yet have as good results as usual. According to the bureau of home economics of the United States Department of Agriculture, however, the same principles that have been advocated for the past four or five years are still essential for satisfactory home canning of fruits and vegetables. The most important points might be expressed in a few sentences:

"Two hours from garden to can" to insure fresh sound products.

Use the "hot pack" when possible so that the material at the center of the can will reach the necessary processing temperature more quickly. Nonacid vegetables are always more satisfactory if hot packed.

Can nonacid vegetables under steam pressure because they require sterilization at a higher temperature than that of boiling water (212 degrees F.).

Before beginning any canning, it is well to send to the department for Farmers' Bulletin 1471-F, "Canning Fruits and Vegetables at Home," and read it carefully. In addition to a clear explanation of the reasons behind the various recommendations made, the bulletin gives time tables for a number of fruits and tomatoes, which may be canned by the water-bath method, and for most common vegetables, for which the steam pressure canner should be used. The reason why the steam pressure canner is necessary for string beans, peas, corn and other nonacid vegetables is this: The bacteria on these vegetables are very resistant to heat. Though these bacteria might be destroyed by six hours of processing at the temperature of boiling water (212 degrees F.), as in the water-bath canner, in the course of this long continued boiling the flavor and texture of the vegetable itself is ruined. With the steam pressure canner a temperature of 240 degrees Fahrenheit can be obtained quickly at ten pounds pressure. At this high temperature bacteria cannot survive long, and the canned vegetables are easily processed to insure against spoilage without overcooking at the same time. In 90 to 100 minutes can be accomplished at 240 degrees Fahrenheit in the steam pressure canner what would take six hours of boiling at 212 degrees Fahrenheit. The pressure canner is a time saver so far as the processing of all vegetables except tomatoes, pickled beets or other very acid mixtures are concerned.

A dish that is attractive and most tasty and one nice enough to serve on any occasion is: Orange Jelly With Orange Custard.—Prepare a mold of orange jelly and when partly thickened beat well until light and foamy. Turn into a fancy mold and chill. Unmold and serve with:

Orange Custard.—Take two large oranges and arrange the sections in a serving dish. Scald a pint of milk in a double boiler and pour over four egg yolks beaten with four tablespoons of sugar, flavor with a half teaspoonful of the grated rind of the orange, add a pinch of salt and cook until the mixture coats the spoon. Cool, add the orange sections and pour around the unmolded jelly when serving.

Orange-Cherry Frozen Salad.—Soak a tablespoonful of gelatin in two tablespoonfuls of cold water and dissolve over hot water. Whip one cupful of heavy cream, add one-fourth cupful of powdered sugar, one tablespoonful of lemon juice and one cupful of mayonnaise. Mix well and fold in one and one-half cupfuls of orange sections and one-half cupful of chopped maraschino cherries. Pour into a mold and pack in layers of ice and salt, or put in the tray of an iceless refrigerator and chill until firm. Serve garnished with crisp hearts of lettuce.

Combination Fruit Salad.—Take one cupful of orange sections, one small can of diced pineapple, one banana cut into small pieces, and one cupful of halved strawberries. Mix very carefully with mayonnaise to which three times the bulk is whipped cream and serve in lettuce cups topped by a whole strawberry.

Lemon Cream Sherbet.—Mix together one and one-third cupfuls of sugar and one cupful of strained lemon juice, then add one pint of milk and a pint of thin cream. Turn into the freezer and freeze. Serve in sherbet glasses; garnish with a sprig of frosted mint. Dip the mint into white of egg and then into granulated sugar, or powdered may be used if it is preferred.

With the fresh fruits and berries so plentiful each in its season, one may have variety with nearly every meal.

Blackberry Pie.—Line a plate with plain crust. Take two and one-half cupfuls of fresh blackberries, sprinkle with three-fourths of a cupful of sugar, a few grains of salt, two tablespoonfuls of flour, and add two tablespoonfuls of currant jelly previously whipped with a fork. Turn into the pastry lined plate, moisten the rim with water and cover with a top crust of rich pastry. Flute the rim and bake thirty-five minutes in a hot oven at first, then reduce the heat and finish baking.

Fairy Tale for the Children

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

He had just met a new friend—the little boy adventurer whose name was David.

He wondered what the name of his friend might be and he had therefore just asked him.

The friend had told him that his name was Compass.

He seemed very pleased about his name, and as David asked him more questions Compass repeated his name once more.

"Yes, my name is Compass, and I always get the head and tail of everything. You know some never do. They say they can't see the head or tail of anything. But I do because I make it a rule to always keep myself well brushed up on the four most important points, North, East, South and West.

"Beautiful earth, isn't it?" he asked suddenly. "You've no idea how much I'm attracted by it."

He seemed very much excited about this. "Yes, the earth attracts me and it is responsible for making me point with my head to the north and my feet to the south, while to the right of me is always the east and to the left of me is always the west.

"I keep in touch, too, with what is going on, for you may have heard that the first letters of the four points I the sun. I don't want to claim all the glory. Can't, for that matter, anyway.

"The midday sun is south of where you live and it casts its shadows toward the north.

"That is why, you know, the moss upon trees in your part of the world always grows so well on the north side of the trees.

"If you are ever lost in the woods, David, you can tell directions by seeing where the moss is. You know how people choose the cool part of the piazza—so do the mosses choose the cool part of trees.

"Of course there are always things we don't like about our jobs. I always have to look straight ahead and point to the north when I'm on duty.

"No matter how much I should want to turn around and point south I couldn't do that.

"It would confuse people and I'd be a disgrace to the Compass family—I'd be considered a Compass of no use and of no value and a failure."

With that Compass was off and David watched him. He was facing the north and he held out his arms a little to either side as though to show that on the right he was pointing to the east and on the left he was pointing to the west and that back of him was the south.

"Good-by, Compass," David called. "Good-by," Compass shouted. But he did not turn his head. He was on duty now.

Vegetables Liked With Roast Lamb

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Custom has placed special emphasis on two accompaniments to roast lamb—peas and mint sauce. But there is no rule, social, culinary, or dietary, requiring this combination, or preventing the use of other relishes and vegetables. Variety in the menus and contrast in flavor, color, and texture are assured by changing occasionally to other combinations, says the bureau of home economics, United States Department of Agriculture.

Vegetables which in themselves are pronounced in flavor are especially appropriate with a roast of lamb. The same is true of lamb chops, stuffed breast of lamb, and other lamb dishes. In a lamb stew, onion, green pepper, and turnip, all having decided flavor of their own, give zest to the meat flavor. And when roast lamb is reheated there is the fine and unusual relish obtained by making a curry sauce.

For the roast relishes like currant jelly, speeded conserves and pickles, and horseradish sauce are all good, in addition to any vegetables served. English cooks sometimes have caper sauce or mint sauce, both of which are made with vinegar to give a pleasant mild acidity of flavor. American cooks seem to like their mint occasionally in the form of a green-colored jelly made from apple pectin and flavored with mint, or as mint gelatin served as a salad or a garnish.

"My Head to the North."

keep so well brushed up on spell News."

"You must be a great favorite," David said.

"People are always asking each other what the news is."

"I am," said Compass. "And from the East and the North and the South and the West come all sorts of interesting facts and stories which make up the great news of the world.

"But my great job is in telling directions. You can also tell direction by

Sleeveless Garments Liked by Small Boys

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

A small boy likes sleeveless garments on hot days as much as his sister does. Boys of any age will wear their sleeveless jerseys or bathing suits all day long, if allowed to do so. Most children under six, however, it is time for a sun bath he will take the upper part off.

This type of sleeveless coat or blouse was designed for the small boy by the bureau of home economics of the United States Department of Agriculture. The block-shaped trimming down the side front opening gives a tailored finish. Flat neck finishes are recommended on practically all children's clothes, so the trimming is continued as a flat facing around the neck. Three large flat buttons are placed where the boy can manage them himself. An overblouse and suit like this should be made of a fabric with enough body to be laundered without starching so there will be no scratchy seams to irritate a child's tender skin. Plain gingham, percale and broadcloth are good selections.

Boys like colors. Let them have those which are strongly masculine in quality, leaving dainty, delicate shades for the little girls. Never ridicule or ignore a child's likes and dislikes with regard to color or design of his clothes. With a little guidance he will soon develop good taste and have great enjoyment from the colors and kinds of fabrics he has chosen. The mother's part is in producing garments that are well cut and well made, if she wishes her boy to be distinctively dressed. Accurate cutting, followed by straight, fine, close stitching gives that air that accompanies beautifully tailored clothes.

Eradicate Roaches

The standard remedy for eradicating cockroaches is sodium fluoride dust sprinkled in the cracks and crevices. A dust gun or blower is the most effective method of application. The roaches come out, die in a few hours, and may then be swept up and disposed of. Sodium fluoride is poisonous to humans as well, so it is handled with care.

Seen coal dust will be reduced September 1, owing to increased weight of the last year.

Separate Jacket Holds Popularity

By JULIA BOTTOMLEY

A vogue, which has been flourishing since early spring and which is scheduled to carry over through midseason and into early fall, with even greater emphasis, is that of the separate jacket or short coat which gaily contrasts the dress over which it is worn. Throughout the advance fall showings the theme is being interpreted in versatile ways.

Just now jackets in bright red are quite the thing worn over white sports dresses or those of natural colored shantung. The costume in the picture is typical. This outdoor ensemble which tops a white frock with a vivid red jacket is made of a bemberg material especially woven for sports wear. The dress is very simple, to all appearances, but it asserts its chic in such style-convincing details as a fitted-at-the-hipline skirt which develops wide box pleating at the hemline, also the square-cut neckline finished with a soft-tied bow at one side. The gown has short sleeves which is really much smarter than sleeveless. Take note of the narrow red suede belt, the red heels on the white kid pumps, the white beret with a flange made of the same fabric as the dress, and the white washable pull-on gloves, for these are all items which merge into a unit of ultra modishness.

Jackets of most every color will enliven the autumn landscape. A slightly effect is that of the orange-color coats worn over the dress of primrose yellow, and then there are those lovely pastel combinations such as a jacket in Patek pink with the frock of hyacinth blue, bright navy blue with white, the navy coat cut along nautical lines, is ever so popular. Usually the white shoes boast trimming touches which repeat the gay tone of the jacket.

These little paleots which are creating such a furore this season, being so amazingly quaint and old-fashioned, are actually smart. For these, velvet is a favorite medium, toned in relating to the dress with which it is worn. For instance a brown and yellow print dress calls for a paleot of solid brown velvet; if the paleot be lined in beauequin fur, if the sleeves be nothing more or less than shoulder-caps flaps over the arm, so much the better, for it is the novelty of the thing which counts.

CHILDREN CRY FOR IT—

CHILDREN hate to take medicine as a rule, but every child loves the taste of Castoria. And this pure vegetable preparation is just as good as it tastes; just as bland and just as harmless as the recipe reads.

When Baby's cry warns of colic, a few drops of Castoria has him soothed, asleep again in a jiffy. Nothing is more valuable in diarrhea. When coated tongue or bad breath tell of constipation, invoke its gentle aid to cleanse and regulate a child's bowels. In colds or children's diseases, you should use it to keep the system from clogging.

Castoria is sold in every drug store; the genuine always bears Chas. H. Fletcher's signature.

EVENING AS TIME FOR ALL SPORTS

Latest Contributions Come From Golf and Track.

The idea of night as the time for sports is still gathering momentum. The latest contributions toward turning night into day comes from golf and track and field sports. Pennsylvania university, it is said, is considering outdoor spring track and field meets at night, and tentative experiments at lighting up a regulation nine-hole golf course with floor lights and flares have been made.

It is not for anyone to say with authority that this nocturnal business is just a fad, or that some of the gropings of enthusiasts in this direction are doomed to failure. Lighting a nine-hole golf course should not be much more difficult or expensive than illuminating a major league baseball park, under the latest efficient electric flood-light systems. The cost for a ball park is $30,000; and, if the links were located conveniently, night golf might be made to pay.

Night track-and-field events would be the easiest of all to put over. As long as man's daily work forces him to take his leisure at night time, such sports as can be adapted easily to night uses will be successful. Many pastimes which languish in daylight for lack of customers, might really flourish at night time, when all have the leisure to attend.

Jim Wray, coach of the Intercollegiate champion Cornell varsity eight, will lose only two of the crew by graduation. A. B. Butler, No. 2, and N. E. Connie Mack says Lefty Grove is a great pitcher because he beats down all the time. He says: "Grove puts everything he has on every ball and that is one reason he is one of the best pitchers of the day. The batter of today has something on the pitcher and the batter must try to put everything on every pitch."

Notre Dame plays one of the hardest of all its schedules next autumn. The Fighting Irish open at home with Southern Methodist, one of the toughest armies in the Southwest, and follow with Navy, Indiana, Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, Drake, Northwestern, Army and Southern California. The date with Penn at Franklin field will mark the only Eastern invasion of the Irish, who have for the time being also given up their Southern rivalry with Georgia Tech.

The St. Louis Cardinals have a substitute outfield that is constituting the regular trio by a wide margin. Fisher is hitting .433, Watkins, .355, and Orantel, .378. The regulars, Koussit, Hades and Hafey, are hitting .319.

Johnny Ward, former Trojan football tackle, will turn professional this fall and play with the Minneapolis Redjackets, according to an announcement by his father. The big fellow, rated one of the strongest linemen in Troy's history, is now standing in Texas.

It is also planned that Ward will take a fling at professional boxing.

When the late Peogo Joe Castillon was managing Minneapolis, he had Carl Cashion playing right field for several years. Cashion was a powerful hitter, but showed a very great weakness on ground balls. Joe had been "out" Cashion for several days about his captable shortcoming. While playing in Milwaukee, Joe was accompanied by Cashion on the trip to the ball park. Noting the entrance of the park, a youngster asked Cashion for a baseball.

Joe told the lad that he had no baseball, but the youngster was insistent and, following along with Cashion and Cashion, bargained that he would pay a quarter for a ball.

Cashion, seeing that the lad greatly desired a baseball, pointed to Cashion and said to the youngster, "If you want a baseball, come into the park and stand back of this big fellow in right field. You will get a baseball in a hurry."

The proposed Olympic village to be built near the scene of the 1932 games to the Los Angeles coliseum, will be similar to an army camp. Each team will be housed in a separate building with a large dining salon and assembly building available to all. The village will be shut off with an ornamental iron fence. The cost will be $2 per day for food, housing and transportation to the scene of the events.

Tony Cannon, former feather-weight champion, is one of the few fighters who will positively not allow himself to win a bout on a claim of foul. Cannon never complained but kept smiling in with both fists going in reverse.

Ed Brackbridge, now a law student in the University of Oklahoma, made $12,000 playing baseball last season. As a recruit with the Philadelphia Athletics, he received $2,000 salary, $2,000 bonus for signing and $2,000 for the world's series share.

French Glove Industry

For centuries the French glove manufacturer industry has not only supplied practically the entire local demand, but exported to nearly all countries of the world. The average value of the annual exports is 175,000,000 francs, as compared with corresponding imports of about 1,000,000 francs. The principal centers of production are Grenoble, Millau and St. Julien, in the southeastern part of France and Most (Haute Saone) and Chaumont (Haute Marne), United States Department of Commerce reports.

Two Hours From Garden to Can

Canning String Beans in a Steam Pressure Canner.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Each year as the time approaches when the garden surplus must be cared for, the homemaker finds herself wondering whether there is any new and easier way to do her canning and yet have as good results as usual. According to the bureau of home economics of the United States Department of Agriculture, however, the same principles that have been advocated for the past four or five years are still essential for satisfactory home canning of fruits and vegetables. The most important points might be expressed in a few sentences:

"Two hours from garden to can" to insure fresh sound products.

Use the "hot pack" when possible so that the material at the center of the can will reach the necessary processing temperature more quickly. Nonacid vegetables are always more satisfactory if hot packed.

Can nonacid vegetables under steam pressure because they require sterilization at a higher temperature than that of boiling water (212 degrees F.).

Before beginning any canning, it is well to send to the department for Farmers' Bulletin 1471-F, "Canning Fruits and Vegetables at Home," and read it carefully. In addition to a clear explanation of the reasons behind the various recommendations made, the bulletin gives time tables for a number of fruits and tomatoes, which may be canned by the water-bath method, and for most common vegetables, for which the steam pressure canner should be used. The reason why the steam pressure canner is necessary for string beans, peas, corn and other nonacid vegetables is this: The bacteria on these vegetables are very resistant to heat. Though these bacteria might be destroyed by six hours of processing at the temperature of boiling water (212 degrees F.), in the course of this long continued boiling the flavor and texture of the vegetable itself is ruined. With the steam pressure canner a temperature of 240 degrees Fahrenheit can be obtained quickly at ten pounds pressure. At this high temperature bacteria cannot survive long, and the canned vegetables are easily processed to insure against spoilage without overcooking at the same time. In 30 to 60 minutes can be accomplished at 240 degrees Fahrenheit in the steam pressure canner what would take six hours of boiling at 212 degrees Fahrenheit. The pressure canner is a time saver so far as the processing of all vegetables except tomatoes, pickled beets or other very acid mixtures are concerned.

A dish that is attractive and most tasty and one nice enough to serve on any occasion is:

Orange Jelly—Prepare a mold of orange jelly and when partly thickened beat well until light and foamy. Turn into a fancy mold and chill. Unmold and serve with:

Orange Custard—Take two large oranges and arrange the sections in a serving dish. Scald a pint of milk in a double boiler and pour over four egg yolks beaten with four tablespoons of sugar, flavor with a half teaspoonful of the grated rind of the orange, add a pinch of salt and cook until the mixture coats the spoon. Cool, add the orange sections and pour around the unmolded jelly when serving.

Orange-Cherry Frozen Salad—Soak a tablespoonful of gelatin in two tablespoonfuls of cold water and dissolve over hot water. Whip one cupful of heavy cream, add one-fourth cupful of powdered sugar, one tablespoonful of lemon juice and one cupful of mayonnaise. Mix well and fold in one and one-half cupfuls of orange sections and one-half cupful of chopped maraschino cherries. Pour into a mold and pack in layers of ice and salt, or put in the tray of an iceless refrigerator and chill until firm. Serve garnished with crisp hearts of lettuce.

Combination Fruit Salad—Take one cupful of orange sections, one small can of diced pineapple, one banana cut into small pieces and one cupful of halved strawberries. Mix very carefully with mayonnaise to which three times the bulk is whipped cream and serve in lettuce cups topped by a whole strawberry.

Lemon Cream Sherbet—Mix together one and one-third cupfuls of sugar and one cupful of strained lemon juice, then add one pint of milk and a pint of thin cream. Turn into the freezer and freeze. Serve in sherbet glasses; garnish with a sprig of frosted mint. Dip the mint into white of egg and then into granulated sugar, or powdered may be used if it is preferred.

With the fresh fruits and berries so plentiful each in its season, one may have variety with nearly every meal.

Blackberry Pie—Line a plate with plain crust. Take two and one-half cupfuls of fresh blackberries, sprinkle with three-fourths of a cupful of sugar, a few grains of salt, two tablespoonfuls of flour, and add two tablespoonfuls of currant jelly previously whipped with a fork. Turn into the pastry lined plate, moisten the rim with water and cover with a top crust of rich pastry. Flute the rim and bake thirty-five minutes in a hot oven at first, then reduce the heat and finish baking.

Fairy Tale for the Children

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

He had just met a new friend—the little boy adventurer whose name was David.

He wondered what the name of his friend might be and he had therefore just asked him.

The friend had told him that his name was Compass.

He seemed very pleased about his name, and as David asked him more questions Compass repeated his name once more.

"Yes, my name is Compass, and I always get the head and tail of everything. You know some never do. They say they can't see the head or tail of anything. But I do because I make it a rule to always keep my self well brushed up on the four most important points, North, East, South and West.

"Beautiful earth, isn't it?" he asked suddenly. "You've no idea how much I'm attracted by it."

He seemed very much excited about this. "Yes, the earth attracts me and it is responsible for making me point with my head to the north and my feet to the south, while to the right of me is always the east and to the left of me is always the west."

"I keep in touch, too, with what is going on, for you may have heard that the first letters of the four points I

"The midday sun is south of where you live and it casts its shadows toward the north."

"That is why, you know, the moss upon trees in your part of the world always grows so well on the north side of the trees."

"If you are ever lost in the woods, David, you can tell directions by seeing where the moss is. You know how people choose the cool part of the piazza—so do the mosses, choose the cool part of trees."

"Of course there are always things we don't like about our jobs. I always have to look straight ahead and point to the north when I'm on duty."

"No matter how much I should want to turn around and point south I couldn't do that."

"It would confuse people and I'd be a disgrace to the Compass family—I'd be considered a Compass of no use and of no value and a failure."

With that "Compass" was off, and David watched him. He was facing the north and he held out his arms a little to either side as though to show that on the right he was pointing to the east and on the left he was pointing to the west and that back of him was the south.

"Good-by, Compass," David called. "Good-by," Compass shouted. But he did not turn his head. He was on duty now.

HINTS FOR HOUSEKEEPERS

To keep the natural bright color of the fruit in preserves, rapid cooking is necessary.

The coldest place in the refrigerator—just under the ice chamber—should be reserved for baby's milk.

Avoid overloading the washing machine. If the clothes can move about freely during washing, the cleansing action is more effective.

Light, airy clothes closets equipped with hangers for dresses and coats and racks for shoes and hats lengthen the life of clothes and save time and expense in caring for them.

Freshly-picked greens may be canned for meals next winter. Shrink them first; then can either by using a steam pressure cooker or by adding acid and cooking in the cans in a hot water bath.

"People are always asking each other what the news is."

"I am," said Compass. "And from the East and the North and the South and the West come all sorts of interesting facts and stories which make up the great news of the world."

"But my great job is in telling directions. You can also tell direction by

Sleeveless Garments Liked by Small Boys

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

A small boy likes sleeveless garments on hot days as much as his sister does. Boys of any age will wear their sleeveless jerseys or bathing suits all day long, if allowed to do so. Most children under six, however, whether boys or girls, need a great many washable garments, especially in summer time, and for these, cotton fabrics are the best choice. The boy in the picture is wearing a sun suit under his overblouse of sturdy material. The mother thinks

It is time for a sun bath he will take the upper part off.

This type of sleeveless coat or blouse was designed for the small boy by the bureau of home economics of the United States Department of Agriculture. The block-shaped trimming down the side front opening gives a tailored finish. Flat neck finishes are recommended on practically all children's clothes, so the trimming is continued as a flat facing around the neck. Three large flat buttons are placed where the boy can manage them himself. An overblouse and suit like this should be made of a fabric with enough body to be laundered without stretching so there will be no scratchy seams to irritate a child's tender skin. Plain ginghams, percale and broadcloth are good selections.

Boys like colors. Let them have those which are strongly masculine in quality, leaving dainty, delicate shades for the little girls. Never ridicule or ignore a child's likes and dislikes with regard to color or design of his clothes. With a little guidance he will soon develop good taste and have great enjoyment from the colors and kinds of fabrics he has chosen. The mother's part is in producing garments that are well cut and well made, if she wishes her boy to be distinctively dressed. Accurate cutting, followed by straight, fine, close stitching gives that air that accompanies beautifully tailored clothes.

Eradicating Fleas
The standard remedy for eradicating cockroaches is sodium fluoride dust sprinkled in the cracks and crevices. A dust gun or blower is the most effective method of application. The roaches come out, die in a few hours, and may then be swept up and disposed of. Sodium fluoride is poisonous to humans as well, so is handled with care.

These small fleas will be reduced September 1, owing to increased resistance of the last year.

After Nervous Breakdown

"I had a nervous breakdown and could not do the work I have to do around the house. Through one of your booklets I found how Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had helped other women and I went to the drug store and got me six bottles. It has done me good in more ways than one and now I work every day without having to lie down. I will answer all letters with pleasure."—Hannah M. Eversmeyer, 707 N-16 Street, East St. Louis, Illinois.

Ford's Early American Town Seen From the Air

An aerial view of Greenfield, Mich., the historical village near Dearborn, reconstructed by Henry Ford.

What Chicagoans Do When the Mercury Goes Up

During the extremely warm weather the people of Chicago flock to the bathing beaches on the lake shore by the hundred thousand. This is a scene at the Oak street beach on a hot day.

President's Vacation Office

Two Medicine, Lake Chalet, where President Hoover's office work will be done during his stay in Glacier National park. This building will also serve as the dining hall for the Presidential party. Rising Wolf mountain can be seen in the background.

Uncle Sam's New Embassy in Havana

Standing proudly in the broad Avenida de la Misiones, Havana's new "International Street," this structure now houses the United States embassy in Cuba, formerly quartered in a dark, cramped ancient section of the capital. The house is leased from the Marques de la Real Proclamacion, Spanish nobleman.

GRABBED THE MACE

John Beckett, a left-wing labor member for Camberwell, England, was responsible for the worst scene witnessed in the English parliament in 300 years when he seized the golden mace—symbol of parliamentary authority—from the table before the speaker's chair. Holding it across his shoulder with the cry "Mr. Speaker, it's a d—d disgrace!" he marched toward an exit. The indignity to the prestige of the house shocked the members and they booed and hooted the offender and later suspended him by a vote of 320 to 4.

HITCHCOCK RETURNS

With Capt. Tommy Hitchcock back in the saddle after a ten-day layoff, the American polo forces have resumed their practice games to select a team to meet the Britishers.

EVENING AS TIME FOR ALL SPORTS

Latest Contributions Come From Golf and Track.

The idea of night as the time for sports is still gathering momentum. The latest contributions toward turning night into day comes from golf and track and field sports. Pennsylvania university, it is said, is considering outdoor spring track and field meets at night, and tentative experiments at lighting up a regulation nine-hole golf course with floor lights and flares have been made.

It is not for anyone to say with authority that this nocturnal business is just a fad, or that some of the groggings of enthusiasts in this direction are doomed to failure.

Lighting a nine-hole golf course should not be much more difficult or expensive than illuminating a major league baseball park, under the latest efficient electric flood-light systems. The cost for a ball park is $20,000; and, if the links were located conveniently, night golf might be made to pay.

Night track-and-field events would be the easiest of all to put over. As long as man's daily work forces him to take his leisure at night time, such sports as can be adapted easily to night uses will be successful. Many pastimes which languish in daylight for lack of customers, might really flourish at night time, when all have the leisure to attend.

Jim Wray, coach of the intercollegiate champion Cornell varsity eight, will lose only two of the crew by graduation. A. B. Butler, No. 2, and N. E. Scott, No. 7, will be missing when the former Australian sculler calls out candidates for the fall rowing. Wray hopes to keep the Big Red crewmen well up in the rowing races hereafter.

Connie Mack says Lefty Grove is a great pitcher because he bears down all the time. He says:

"Grove puts everything he has on every ball and that is one reason he is one of the best pitchers of the day. The batter of today has something on the pitcher and the hurler must try to put everything on every pitch."

Notre Dame plays one of the hardest of all its schedules next autumn. The Fighting Irish open at home with Southern Methodist, one of the toughest arrays in the Southwest, and follow with Navy, Indiana, Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, Drake, Northwestern, Army and Southern California. The date with Penn at Franklin field will mark the only Eastern invasion of the Irish, who have for the time being also given up their Southern rivalry with Georgia Tech.

The St. Louis Cardinals have a substitute outfield that is outshining the regular trio by a wide margin. Fisher is hitting .423, Watkins, .385, and Orsatti, .378. The regulars, Douthitt, Blades and Hafey, are batting .318.

Johnny Ward, former Trojan football tackle, will turn professional this fall and play with the Minneapolis Redjackets, according to an announcement by his father. The big fellow, rated one of the strongest linemen in Troy's history, is now ranching in Texas.

It is also planned that Ward will take a fling at professional boxing.

When the late Pongo Joe Cantillon was managing Minneapolis, he had Carl Cashion playing right field for several years. Cashion was a powerful hitter, but showed a very great weakness on ground balls. Joe had been "on" Cashion for several days, about his deplorable shortcoming. While playing in Milwaukee, Joe was accompanied by Cashion on the trip to the ball park. Nearing the entrance of the park, a youngster asked Cantillon for a baseball.

Joe told the lad that he had no baseball, but the youngster was insistent and, following along with Cantillon and Cashion, bargained that he would pay a quarter for a ball.

Cantillon, seeing that the lad greatly desired a horsehide, pointed to Cashion and said to the youngster, "If you want a baseball, come into the park and stand back of this big fellow in right field. You will get a baseball in a hurry."

The proposed Olympic village to be built near the scene of the 1932 games in the Los Angeles coliseum, will be similar to an army camp. Each team will be housed in a separate building with a large dining salon and assembly building available to all. The village will be shut off with an ornamental iron fence. The cost will be $2 per day for food, housing and transportation to the scene of the events.

Tony Canzoneri, former feather-weight champion, is one of the few fighters who will positively not allow himself to win a bout on a claim of foul. Tony has proven it on a number of occasions when his opponent took advantage of his vow and let a few punches wander under the belt. Canzoneri never complained but kept smiling in with both fists flying in revenge.

Bill Breckenridge, now a law student in the University of Oklahoma, made $15,000 playing baseball last season. As a recruit with the Philadelphia Americans, he received $5,000 salary, $5,000 bonus for signing and $5,000 for his world's series share.

Exaggeration

Ivy Lee, who visited Soviet Russia in the Rockefeller interests, was congratulated at a luncheon in New York, on the excellent book he has written about his visit.

"My book at least has corrected some exaggerations," Mr. Lee said. "We don't want Sovietism here, of course, but its horrors have been exaggerated."

"Russian Sovietism has been treated like the Russian cockroach. A traveler, you know, said of this insect:

"The Russian cockroach is seven inches long. He is hairy and growls like a dog when disturbed. He drops from the ceiling onto the dinner table, and will carry off a chop, a leg of chicken or a bottle of vodka."

She Lost 19 Pounds of Fat in 27 Days

During October a woman in Montana wrote—"My first bottle of Kruschen Salts lasted almost 4 weeks and during that time I lost 19 pounds of fat—Kruschen is all you claim for it—I feel better than I have for years."

Here's the recipe that banishes fat and brings into blossom all the natural attractiveness that every woman possesses.

Every morning take one half teaspoonful of Kruschen Salts in a glass of hot water before breakfast.

Do sure and do this every morning for "the little daily dose that takes off the fat"—Don't miss a morning. The Kruschen habit means that every particle of poisonous waste matter and harmful acids and gases are expelled from the system.

At the same time the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels are toned up and the pure, fresh blood containing Nature's life-giving salts is carried to every organ, gland, nerve and fibre of the body and this is followed by "that Kruschen feeling" of energetic health and activity that is reflected in bright eyes, clear skin, cheerful vivacity and charming figure.

If you want to lose fat with speed get an 85c bottle of Kruschen Salts from any live druggist anywhere in America with the distinct understanding that you must be satisfied with results or money back.

French Glove Industry

For centuries the French glove manufacturing industry has not only supplied practically the entire local demand, but exported to nearly all countries of the world. The average value of the annual exports is 175,000,000 francs, as compared with corresponding imports of about 1,000,000 francs. The principal centers of production are Grenoble, Millau and St. Julien, in the southeastern part of France and Nîort (Deux-Sèvres) and Chaumont (Haute-Marne), United States Department of Commerce reports.

Whale Leather Gloves Out

Women of Europe are again finding the whale an aid to their wardrobe. Whale "leather" is being used in making fashionable gloves, and style leaders have approved the new material composed of the intestines of the huge swimmers. The new gloves are delicately soft, but so tough that it is almost impossible to wear them out. The whale has not contributed to women's styles since the days of the whalebone for corsets.

Foot Arches

There are four arches in the foot—the long arch at the inside of the foot from heel to great toe, the front arch across the ball of the foot, the arch at the outside of the foot from the heel to the base of the small toe, and the arch across the middle of the foot under the instep.

No photographs will look so ridiculous in future years as those showing the fashions from 1925 to 1929.

THE QUALITIES OF LEADERSHIP

By JOHN G. LONSDALE
President American Bankers Association

Leadership and success, in a general way, are synonymous. They are both founded upon simple codes of thought and action, upon the realization that he who wins the laurels must be a doer, not a waiter, that application of energy, not time or luck, is what counts most. A rabbit's foot is a poor substitute for horse sense.

Both success and leadership, if they be of the highest quality, are the result of service to humanity. Service has been aptly described as "the supreme commitment of life." Analyze the lives and times of all great leaders of history and you will find that those whose names are enshrined in the hearts of their countrymen are those who sought to render a needed service to the populace.

Leadership, like success, need not, however, be international or national to achieve great results. There is room for each of us to be a leader in his community, in his work, in his church, and in various organizations.

One of the indispensable qualities of leadership is the ability to persist steadfastly in the face of discouragement. If George Washington had not possessed the quality of persistence, he and his soldiers would never have survived the hunger and privations which were theirs at Valley Forge.

We have too many young men and young women these days saying a job cannot be done. Too many spend their time explaining why a thing can't be done, instead of saying, with firm resolve, that it can be done, and then going out and doing it. Anything that ought to be done is capable of being done. And anything worth doing at all is worth doing well. The fellow who handles a little job in a big way is always on the road to greater fields.

FOR RENT—Furnished rooms with bath. One, two or three rooms, as you like.—Mrs. J. S. Ross, East Alamogordo Avenue.
