BUSINESS ON THE UPGRADE

By POWELL CROSLY, JR., President Crosley Radio Corporation.

IT HAS been said that good or bad business is largely the result of a state of mind. When every one believes that business is good, people buy freely and prices go up. All along the line there is buying in anticipation of requirements, and price advances, rather than actual needs.

The United States has unexcelled production facilities and our factories keep pace with the growth of business optimism, instead of being governed by the fundamental law of supply and demand. When business is good we all think it is a lot better than really is the case, and when it is bad, we likewise think it is much worse than is really true.

When something happens to change the state of mind of people, conservation and pessimism rule. The public thinks hard times exist and buys only when there is the direst need for merchandise. Production drops and prices are reduced in an effort to stimulate business that does not exist.

As the world's greatest individual market, this country soon absorbs surplus stocks when there is a sharp decline in production, such as occurred last winter and spring. Every sign points to the fact that business in the United States has met the turn in the road and is on the upgrade.

There should be rapid improvement, and I, for one, feel most optimistic about the future and anticipate a more rapid come-back than might be hoped for had the depression of the past few months come more gradually instead of abruptly, as was the case.

CRIME WAVE REVOLT OUTCOME

By DR. RALPH M. CRISSMAN, Detroit (Presbyterian).

Our American Christian civilization is jeopardized by the modern revolt against authority and we are reaping a whirlwind from the seeds of unbelief that have been sown. The present wave of crime is a direct result of the revolt against authority. For the last 25 years there has been in America an assault on the very fundamentals of Christianity—weak and negative at first; bold, strong and arrogant now—and this assault has developed to an alarming point.

It is a revolt against God, and the logical outcome is a cyclone of crime, dishonesty, impurity and indecency. We have so far forgotten God and his ideals that today our record stands as a disgrace to decency and righteousness.

The church, which has been going into dry rot spiritually, must renew itself. America stands at the parting of the ways. Only an old-fashioned revival of religion can put gangland out of business overnight.

In the revolt against authority many have been teaching a personal God, the Bible is made light of, and the cross of Christ is reduced to kindling wood.

Actually the revolt is a revolution against morality. Today, man's rights are in collision with God's. Possibly a little more home punishment, school discipline and even capital punishment would strike a deadly blow at our modern lawlessness.

MUST HAVE WORLD MARKETS

By JAMES M. MATTHEWS, Director Babson (Mass.) Institute.

The business depression is one of international scope in that it involves the sale of surplus American goods in the only place left to sell, Europe. Goods must be paid for in goods, not loans.

We have in general a falling scale of prices and an American commodity surplus, either actual or potential, which is making us groggy. We refuse to admit that Europe can pay her debts. Europe cannot buy our goods until she can sell a reasonable amount of her own commodities. We lend her more money and increase her debtor obligation in the hope that she will purchase American surplus and be doubly in debt to us, but goods must be paid for with goods, not with loans.

From now on world markets are essential to American prosperity. Now that we are the greatest creditor nation on earth, we are following the same policies of trade restrictions today that have been used for the past 100 years when we were a debtor nation and we wonder why we feel bad. If we do not capture our fair share of the international markets, we are in for years of difficult and unsatisfactory business.

MODERN GENERATION ALL RIGHT

By HENRIETTA ADDITON, New York Social Worker.

We are told that the youth of the country are in revolt against their elders, but replies I received from more than 1,600 girls in Brooklyn who were asked to answer anonymously a series of questions about themselves show that only 13 of them fail to ask their parents' permission to go places. More than 90 per cent spend time on home study. The majority attend church or Sunday school.

This information gives us a direct clew to the behavior of girls, for the answers to the questions came in such a way that there was no chance of identification or need for defense. Family control seems to be typical, according to the girls themselves when we give them an honest opportunity to talk about themselves and what they like to do and want to become, we find them a sane generation not much different from the previous one.

POSSIBLE TO BANISH POVERTY

By ERNEST G. DEAPER, National Social Worker.

Despite the obvious losses to more than 200,000 manufacturing concerns of the country when economic depressions occur, less than half of 1 per cent show any active interest in the problem of industrial idleness. Amazing results have been achieved by the national social workers in their efforts to stabilize industry. Apparent miracles have been brought about in tiding over seasonable periods of demand for certain products.

Society at large is almost as much to blame for depressions as is industry. Individual employers, regardless of the size of their concerns, cannot prevent such catastrophes, but by skillful forecasting and shrewd management they can mitigate the effects. We look forward to a time when poverty will be banished and opportunity for work will exist for every one at all times.

SCENIC PLAYGROUNDS OF AMERICA

By G. M. MILBURN

Mountain of Lace-Work Cascades

IF YOU love waterfalls, and have but one day left to live, spend that day at Gunsight Lake, in Glacier National park, Montana.

Gunsight, like Lake Louise in the Canadian Rockies, is a type of the perfect picture. It lacks the overwhelming majesty of the Lake Louise horizon, but in turn it boasts a color richness, and an indefinable air of kindly, neighborly welcome, that even the jewel of the Canadian cliffs can hardly equal. Both are an invitation to sit and dream—but at Lake Louise you cannot escape a certain sense of futility in dreaming, while Gunsight makes you want to keep dreaming—forever!

Behind Gunsight lake rises Gunsight mountain, bacon-streaked with nature's never-gaudy reds and browns and grays until it seems a priceless heavenly hammock, not just a painted fortress of the clouds and snows. Down from the hammock troop long, playful cascades, chattering idly to their sober forest neighbors on the ledges. From the leisure of the hammock-mountain, vain though queenly snowbanks toss their likeliest portrait into an obliging mirror-lake which relays them with just the slightest quivering, as if she fears some trust betrayed. Even the slender cascades swim calmly on the mirror too, for this lake plays 'no favorites.

Such is the picture from the foot of the lake. But from there, however fascinating the complete image, there is little revelation of the more amazing waterfalls far across, above the mirror's handle. To see the cascades in their finer glory, you must climb the trail a mile or more toward Gunsight pass for the map-like broadside view across the lake.

This box seat view works wonders. Across the lake those cunning color-strata of the mountain, tilted earthward, tempt each long snow-born streamlet to glide instead of tumble, and the cascade, respondingly but timidly, splits into a collage, again dividing when new lures conflict. The result is a unique pattern of thread-like fans and deltas on the cliff; watery lace-work, cobwebs, even seeming white street-intersections on the color-cliff that seem to openly defy all laws of gravity instead of merely out-scheming them. A domestic-relations judge vacationing on the Gunsight trail could find marriage, flirtation, divorce, elopement, child-desertion, or possibly a dozen other human emergencies very picturesquely patterned in this waterfall carnival-ground whose visible truth makes the rest of the world seem faraway or false.

Gunsight lake is located eight miles west of Going-to-the-Sun camp, on the east side of the park, and the traveler who would see it best should get as early a start on the trail from Sun as possible. The reflection is most beautiful in the early morning; and by mid-afternoon the sunlight comes flooding through the pass with a blinding glare that suggests even the heavens must be jealous of such a picture-treasure.

Through travelers on the Gunsight trail spend the night at Sperry camp, on the west slope of the divide, but 3,300 feet above Lake McDonald. Sperry neighborhood is a favorite of the mountain goats; until temporarily banished by the blasting for a new horse trail to the Sperry glacier the last two years, the goats came clattering down across the front porch of the chalet nearly every night! Equally contemptuous of human invasion were the snows of the Gunsight region, which, whether by sheer weight or by sudden avalanche from stalwart Mount Jackson, absolutely demolished a chalet built on the lake shore some fifteen years ago.

Old European Cities

The exact dates of the settlements of London and Paris are not recorded. London first rose out of obscurity early after the Roman occupation of Britain in the First century of the Christian era. Caesar makes no mention of the town, but Tacitus refers to it as having been a place much frequented by merchants in A. D. 61. Paris was formerly known as Lutetia. Caesar describes in his "Commentaries" how it was burnt during the First Gallic war, 52 B. C. During the First century there was reference to Lutetia as a Roman town.

"You think that, Maythorne?" I asked as we paused at the door of the elevator.

"Of course!" he exclaimed. "Doesn't need half an eye or an ounce of brain to be dead certain of that! She knows—knows! And, as I said in there—who is it? Here's one thing certain, Holt—if she won't speak, I'll have to tell the police. But between now and tomorrow she'll have time to reflect. And in the meantime—"

He broke off abruptly. We went down and into the street, and in silence walked quickly down Edgware road. I knew what he was after—Cottingley. And Cottingley suddenly appeared before us in Praed street, as if he had shot out of the earth.

"He's come!" said Cottingley. "Alone. They're both in the house, now. All's arranged." Maythorne nodded; they whispered together a moment; then Maythorne and I turned away.

"Did he mean that Eccleshare had come?" I asked. "And that—they'll watch him?"

"Eccleshare, of course," answered Maythorne. "Who else? Watch him?—Aye, they'll watch him—they'll watch both of 'em!"

I went back to my rooms thoroughly muddled in mind by the day's events. It seemed hopeless to try to piece them together, and yet I could scarcely refrain from the attempt. And underneath everything lay an uncomfortable suspicion, which forced itself upon me however much I fought against it—was Mrs. Elphinstone an accessory to Mazaroff's murder, and if so, after or before? Out of all speculations one clear fact emerged—she had come into possession of that will, which, without doubt, was in Mazaroff's pocket, when his murderer shot him.

All this was still seething in my mind when I met Maythorne next morning, at Crole's office. We were shown into Crole's private room at once; there, by Crole's desk, sat Mr. Herman Kloop. He gave us a knowing look as we walked in, and Crole nodded at him, as much as to say that whatever was to be said first was to come from the diamond merchant.

"News?" remarked Crole, inconspicuously. "Another development?"

We sat down and turned on Kloop. "I came round to Mr. Crole as soon as I had breakfasted—to tell him," he said. "Now I tell you. It is what I learned last night—late. From some of my friends in our trade, Mazaroff's pair of blue diamonds have been sold! They have been sold to a syndicate of three well-known dealers. A fancy price, too!" he added, with a chuckle.

"What price?" I asked Maythorne.

"It is said—and I dare say it's quite correct—two hundred thousand pounds," Kloop replied. "Of course—they're worth that—and more. Sufficiently more to give the buyers a nice big profit—when they sell. As—equally of course—they will."

"Well?" Maythorne asked. "But—who sold?"

Kloop laughed, glancing at Crole.

"To be sure!" he replied. "A pertinent question! Armintrade sold. No concealment about that. Armintrade—the bank man."

"Armintrade only returned from the north last night," said Maythorne. "Where and how was this deal carried out?"

"Yes," answered Kloop. "I can tell something of that, but not precise details. I should say—by correspondence."

Maythorne looked at Crole: Crole shook his head.

"What concerns us," he remarked, "is the fact that Armintrade sold these things—Mazaroff's property. We know that Armintrade was in possession of what we'll call Blue Diamond Number One, and we also know that Mazaroff had Blue Diamond Number Two on him when he went north. So—Mazaroff must have met Armintrade and handed over to him the second diamond. They must have met—unknown to anyone—at Marrasdale."

Maythorne turned to Kloop.

"Armintrade's name was openly, freely mentioned to you in connection with this?" he asked. "Was Mazaroff's name mentioned?"

"Oh, to be sure! As the source from which the diamonds came."

Maythorne got up from his chair and began to button his overcoat.

"There's only one thing to be done," he said, glancing at Crole. "You and I and Holt must see Armintrade at once. We want an explanation. As far as I'm aware, those diamonds, since the moment of Mazaroff's death, have been the property of Mr. Holt here. Isn't that so, Crole?"

"Yes," answered Crole, laconically. He got up from his desk, crossed over to a safe in the corner, and unlocking it, took from some inner receptacle an oblong envelope. "Here's the will," he said. "I'll take it with me. But I think Armintrade will be found to be all right. By that I mean that he will have acted within his rights. How, I don't know. But—come along."

We parted from Kloop in the street outside: Crole, Maythorne, and I got into a taxicab and set off for Centurion's bank. Maythorne seemed to be thinking hard. He looked up at last. "It seems pretty clear—now!—that Mazaroff wasn't murdered for the sake of those diamonds," he muttered, as if somewhat dissatisfied at the new turn of affairs. "In that case—what was he murdered for?—what was the motive?"

"He'd other valuable property on him, you know," observed Crole. "And there are other people to question when we've done with Armintrade. Eccleshare, for instance, and that man Parslave."

We entered Courthouse's bank together and sent in our cards to Armintrade. He took small notice of Maythorne and myself; his attention gave itself to the solicitor.

"Well, Mr. Crole?" he began. "What can I do for you?"

"You can give us some much-needed information, Mr. Armintrade," replied Crole, promptly. "You are aware, of course, that, having acted as the late Mr. Mazaroff's solicitors here in London, I have employed Mr. Maythorne to inquire into the mystery of his murder. Now, we have ascertained from Mr. Herman Kloop of Cape Town, a close personal friend of Mazaroff's, now in London, that Mazaroff possessed two extremely valuable diamonds, one of which was in his possession when he went north, to Marrasdale, and the other of which had been in your keeping, as Mazaroff's agent, for some months. Kloop tells us that you have sold these two diamonds to a syndicate for two hundred thousand pounds. Is that correct?"

Armintrade, whose smile, sardonic and inscrutable, had never left his eyes, nodded. "Quite correct!" he answered.

"Do you mind telling us all about it?" Crole asked. "I gather the whole thing is plain enough—when explained."

"Plain as a pikestaff," replied Armintrade, with a laugh. "I have acted as agent or intermediary, or whatever you like to call it, for Mazaroff for some time. Well, now, as regards these blue diamonds—great rarities. I have had the first in my hands for some time. The second he handed to me personally at Marrasdale the day after he arrived at the Woodcock."

"Ah!—you met him there?"

"Certainly I met him there!"

"Well? And what happened?"

"We discussed the sale of the diamonds, and came to an arrangement."

"May I ask what it was?"

"Certainly! He gave me an option on them."

"Ah! I see! An option? Just so. You were to have them at a price?"

"Of course. But I'll show you the terms, in Mazaroff's handwriting. He had brought me this, already written and signed—there you are!"

He produced a sheet of letter paper and handed it to Crole, who took and read it attentively. "I see!" he said, handing it back. "He gave you the option for one month of buying the diamonds for a hundred and seventy-five thousand pounds. And—you have taken it up. Then—what about the option money? Which, of course, should and would have been paid to Mazaroff?"

"Exactly! The money is at the disposal of the late Salm Mazaroff's rightful heir or heirs, beneficiaries, residuary legatees, or whoever has a proper and legal right to it."

Crole pointed to me.

"Mr. Holt there is Mazaroff's residuary legatee," he said. "He comes in for—everything!"

Armintrade laughed, and gave me a shy smile.

"Lucky for Mr. Holt!" he remarked. "But—are you sure of that? I understand that the will made at York is lost?"

"The will is here!" said Crole, holding up his envelope. "You can see it and read it."

Armintrade's face underwent a change as he took and read the will. He gave a long, careful look at the signature; another at Crole as he handed back the paper.

"What," he asked, "what do you, a solicitor, say about that will?"

"That nothing whatever can upset it," answered Crole, promptly. "It won't be contested, either. Everything that Mazaroff died possessed of belongs to Mr. Mervyn Holt. So—"

"So I owe Mr. Holt one hundred and seventy-five thousand pounds," said Armintrade with a laugh. "Very good!—shall I send the check and the papers along to you, Mr. Crole? Just so—it shall be done at once. Glad you've found the will."

We all rose. For the first time Maythorne spoke—addressing Armintrade.

"You didn't think it necessary to give evidence at the inquest?" he suggested.

"What evidence had I to give?" asked Armintrade. "My affairs with Mazaroff had nothing to do with his murder."

"Have you any theory, yourself, about his murder?" continued Maythorne.

"I have had two. One was that he may have been followed from London by somebody who knew that he had the second blue diamond on him—he was a very careless, thoughtless man—the other that it was just a common, vulgar murder for the sake of robbery by one or other of those men whom he had been treating at the Woodcock. For instance, where is that man who disappeared—Parslave? So far, I believe, the police have failed to track him. Possibly he murdered Mazaroff, robbed the body and cleared out. Anyhow—he's vanished."

CHAPTER VIII

Fresh Links

We took our departure—silently and unceremoniously, as if we had been very ordinary customers, doing very ordinary business. But outside, in Mincing lane, Maythorne halted, and looked questioningly at Crole.

"Satisfied?" he asked.

"As far as that goes—yes," replied Crole. "There's no doubt about the option—that's clear enough. No getting past Mazaroff's own handwriting, and own terms!"

"Very well—if you're satisfied," said Maythorne. He moved forward a few yards and against stopped. "I wish we knew a bit more about Mazaroff's movements on the day following his arrival at the Woodcock," he muttered. "It's all vague, shadowy, uncertain—and yet bits keep coming out. Well—the next job is Eccleshare and Parslave. If we can't get some light through those two—"

He paused, looking round for a taxicab; as he signalled to one a little distance away, Crole spoke.

"My impression is that Eccleshare will have as straight a tale to tell us as we've heard from Armintrade," he exclaimed. "We're off the track, Maythorne!—or, rather, we've never been on it. I've got an intuition that neither Armintrade, nor Eccleshare, nor Parslave know anything about nor have anything whatever to do with Mazaroff's murder."

"All the same, we're going to have things out with Eccleshare and Parslave," answered Maythorne. "We may get a hint; a bit of a clue; anything. Perhaps," he added, as we settled ourselves in the cab, "perhaps I've got a pretty good idea of how things are, myself. Crole—but I want all the contributory information I can get. And I want to know why Parslave has been lying safely hidden in Doctor Eccleshare's house in London ever since this affair happened."

At Maythorne's bidding we got out at the corner of Conduit street and walked along to his office. Outside his door stood a fine, obviously brand-new Rolls-Royce car. Crole smiled at the sight of it.

"One of your aristocratic clients, eh, Maythorne?" he observed challengingly. "A duke or a duchess at least—what?"

"On the contrary, if you want to know," answered Maythorne, who had given car and chauffeur a sharp glance, "that's Sir Samuel Locke's car—or one of 'em—and his livery. And

Humble Ax Revealed as Instrument of Romance

The ax is a tool of romance. In almost every age it has played a major part in man's struggle for existence.

From earliest history, on down through the Stone age, the Bronze age and the Iron age, and more especially during the time of America's early pioneers—the ax has been the indispensable friend of man.

With the building of primitive log cabins went the building, too, of strong characters and stout muscles. Washington, Boone, Lincoln, Roosevelt, Gladstone of England, and many other great names in history are associated with the ax.

Sanity in the Madhouse

I should imagine that a madhouse would be an excellent place to be sane in. I'd a long sight rather live in a nice, quiet, secluded madhouse than in intellectual clubs full of un-intellectual people, all chattering nonsense about the newest book of philosophy; or in some of those earnest, elbowing sort of Movements that want you to go in for Service and help to take away somebody else's toys.—From "The Feet and the Lunatics," by G. W. Chesterton.

I've a pretty good idea as to whom we shall find upstairs."

"Who?" asked Crole. "Lady Locke?"

"No—but her nephew, Mallison," retorted Maythorne. "A thousand to one on it! Come in!"

We went upstairs. One of the girl clerks came forward as we entered the outer office.

"Mr. Mallison—waiting to see you, sir," she said.

We went forward to Maythorne's private room. There stood, examining a picture, the young man whom I had seen Mazaroff talking to at Huntingdon and at York. He turned sharply as we walked in, and a flicker of his quick eyes showed that he recognized me. He instantly picked out Maythorne.

"Oh—er—Mr. Maythorne?" he said. "I—er—just dropped in to see you, don't you know—this Mazaroff affair. Queer business, ain't it?"

"What do you know about it, Mr. Mallison?" asked Maythorne. "We're anxious to get any information we can. And if you can tell us anything—"

Mallison sought inspiration in his cigarette.

"Oh, well, I—I scarcely know anything at all!" he said. "Of course, I met Mazaroff in Park lane, and I saw one of the blue diamonds, and heard about the pair of 'em—the other was in the hands of a chap named Armintrade—something—not Armstrong, though—a banking man. And between you and me, Lady Locke was jolly keen about getting hold of the pair, though she didn't say much about it just at the time. But I know, she was all for Sir Samuel buying 'em there and then. That's what I gave Mazaroff the tip about when I met him as I was going north."

"I see!" said Maythorne. "You were both going north about the same time, eh? To be sure. And what were you going north for?"

"Inspect some shootings," answered Mallison, promptly. "Looked over a lot while I was up there—both sides the Tweed."

"Capital idea!" agreed Maythorne. "And you met Mazaroff—accidentally? At Huntingdon, first; then at York. Exactly. But—did you ever meet him again?"

"Oh, yes," replied Mallison. "I met him at Gilchester."

"At Gilchester, eh? That's the market town for Marrasdale—a few miles from the Woodcock. How did you come to meet him there?"

"Accident!" I motored over from Jedburgh to look at a shooting near Gilchester. I went into the hotel there to get some lunch, and stopped a bit afterward. Mazaroff came in—I had a drink or two together."

"You met Mazaroff at Gilchester. Did you talk about the diamonds again?"

"Of course! He told me what he'd done. He said he'd seen this agent of his—Armintrade—something—"

"The man's name is Armintrade," he said. "That's it—Armintrade. He said he'd just seen Armintrade, who was shooting in the neighborhood, and they'd come to an agreement. Mazaroff had given Armintrade an option—for a hundred and seventy-five thousand. He believed Armintrade would take it up. But, if he didn't, then, Mazaroff said, Lady Locke should have the pair at the price first named—a hundred and sixty thousand."

"That corroborates Armintrade," remarked Maythorne in an aside to Crole and myself. "Well," he went on, turning again to his caller. "I'm much obliged to you for calling."

"That's all right," replied Mallison, artlessly. "Thought I'd just drop in, you know—always glad to be of help."

He went away presently, and the three of us looked at each other. Crole spoke first.

"As you said just now, Maythorne, that corroborates Armintrade," he remarked. "And I'm beginning to think that this is a simple case of murder for the sake of robbery."

"That's no new theory," observed Maythorne. "It's the original one—but it may have all manner of variations. Well, now—Eccleshare and Parslave! That's the next—"

The door opened just then—a girl clerk appeared.

"Sergeant Manners and Detective Sergeant Corkerdale to see you, sir," she announced.

BRAINY PITCHER EASIEST WINNER

Harvard Coach Has High Opinion of Slow Ball.

Fred Mitchell, Harvard baseball coach, who managed the Cubs and the Braves for several years after serving in the big league ranks both as a pitcher and catcher, hands out an authoritative line of chatter about pitching that young twirlers would do well to ponder.

"The hardest thing to teach a young pitcher," says Mitchell, "is the value of a slow ball. They all want to breeze it by the batter. They can't understand why a batter can't hit a slow one. As the secret of hitting is timing, it follows that the secret of pitching is breaking up the batter's timing. By mixing them up a pitcher can keep a batter from getting set. The slow ball makes the fast one seem faster and the first you know the batter is breaking his back trying to connect with either one. Dick Rudolph had no real fast ball, but the opposing batsmen often thought so because he misled them up so skillfully they couldn't gauge his speed."

"The greatest arm in the world will get a pitcher nowhere unless he learns to use his head with it. He must constantly study batters, their strong points, weaknesses and mannerisms at the plate."

Mental hazard in golf, indeed! A New York player, entered in a state amateur tourney, was arrested just as the round started. Did it throw him off his stroke? It did not. He arranged with the arresting detective to caddy for him, and won the match.

Charles A. Stoneham, president of the Giants, speaks often against the lively ball, but this time it's along a new angle:

"The New York club is spending $10,000 each season for official National league balls. If you go to a tailor and order a new suit of clothes, you pick out the material and tell him how you want it made. But we don't seem to have anything to say about the balls we buy."

When a British scientist explains that "in a four-dimensional world it would be possible to turn a tennis ball inside out without cutting it," a matter that has been a little obscure is made perfectly plain to all of us.

Big Ed Walsh, quite a pitcher in his day, has something to say against the lively ball:

"Years ago the first thing a boy wanted was the pitching job. They fought for it. Now they shun the box. If the lively ball stays much longer, there will be a keen shortage of pitchers."

All Italian sport clubs and teams belonging to the national federation must have duly licensed "sporting doctors." The conditioners, in turn, must pass rigid physical examinations, and enroll in a federation of their own for disciplinary and administrative purposes.

Buck Weaver, one-time idol of Chicago baseball fans, now is employed as a mutual clerk at Hawthorne, selling $2 show tickets.

Weaver, who was banned from organized baseball after the "Black Sox" 1919 world's series scandal, still protests his innocence and would like to return to baseball.

"I was an innocent victim of the scandal," said Weaver. "I had nothing to do with throwing the series, but I guess my baseball days are over. I'd sure like to get back in the game. I think I can still play short or third base better than a lot of the boys that are getting' big money for it now while I'm holding down a cheap clerk's job."

"Gee, but it would be nice to hear the fans cheering Buck Weaver just once more!"

Only eleven letter men are included in the list of forty-nine gridgers invited by Coach Lud Wray to participate in the University of Pennsylvania's preliminary football training at Capo May.

If the big league home-run hitters do not slacken their paces, 1,000 homers are due to be hit by both circuits this year.

They have been averaging one and one-third home runs per game this season.

There is a possibility that both big league individual records for home run hitting also will be broken. For the pace setters are now ahead of any past schedule.

Managers and seconds are to blame for much of the present-day fouling, in the opinion of Latrobe Cogswell, veteran chairman of the Maryland boxing commission. He says the fighters claim fouls only when instructed to do so.

One of the columnists thinks it is strange that Bobby Jones hasn't been mentioned for the Presidency. The columnist should have patience. The "mentioning" season is not really open yet.

The first man to receive pay for playing baseball was Albert J. Beach. That was in June of 1864 when Beach was a member of the Philadelphia Athletics.

Burleigh Grimes has been with the Dodgers, Giants, Pirates, Braves and Cards.

Opening of School

The school bell which had been silent since the vacation period set in, heralded the opening Monday morning. To the girls, more especially, the sound of the bell was music to their ears, but to the boys it was not so interesting, for boys will be boys as long as time shall exist and the beginning of school takes them away from the playground, the visits to the mountain canyons and from the many pastimes they enjoyed during vacation and brings them back to sober thought and hard study. We are not condemning the boys for this attitude, it is just natural with them, pretty much as it was with us when we were boys and as long as you cannot put old heads on young shoulders, the condition will remain the same forever. But after the boys get settled down to business, they go into the work with courage and determination which results in success.

Prof. Helm and his able staff of teachers have the enrollment completed, the classifications all arranged and the school started in a business-like manner. With all plans drawn to completion, the school has begun with greater promise than in years before, which reflects credit on Professor Helm, the school board and all parties concerned. But the school needs the encouragement of the community. It should not be treated as 'a matter of course' proposition which should not receive the encouraging word, the regular visit and the kindly interest it so justly deserves.

People should bear in mind that the superintendent and his assistants are drilling a young army that will prove to be the ladies and gentlemen of the future; in other words, the boys and girls of today, will be the men and women of tomorrow and it is our business to help and encourage them in this important undertaking, by visiting the school, not with the eye of criticism, but to show them that we appreciate their work. Also let us welcome back the old teachers and welcome in the new ones. Let's do it, now, and we will sleep better over it, because we owe it to them in a sense of appreciation.

BANKERS REPORT DROP IN SAVINGS

Lure of Stock Market Partly to Blame, but Slackened Speculation Expected to Bring Return to Thrift.

The first recession in the nation's savings account in banks in the twenty years during which records in this field have been kept by the American Bankers Association was disclosed for last year in the recent annual compilation prepared by its Savings Bank Division. The shrinkage amounted to over $195,000,000, on the basis of figures for the year ending June 30, 1929, whereas a year earlier the reported increase was over $2,306,000,000, the largest ever recorded. The number of savings depositors also decreased during the year covered by more than 500,000 accounts. The lure of the stock market and affiliated activities are cited as part of the explanation for these changes.

The association's statement says that savings deposits in banks and trust companies of continental United States on June 30, 1929, stood at $28,217,656,000. The recession in savings, it declares, indicates a fundamental change in the savings situation, irrespective of whether it is temporary or not.

How Savings Used to Grow

"In 1926 savings deposits increased $1,562,000,000, in 1927 almost $1,400,000,000 and in 1928 over $2,300,000,000," it says. "It appears now that some influences in one year have taken the gain that might reasonably have been expected in savings deposits for 1929 and lowered them from the high mark of the preceding year. This recession is not one coming as a result of drought, famine, unemployment or conditions outside of the United States."

"A year ago it was stated: 'The year closing June 30, 1928, registered the largest gain in savings deposits in banks and trust companies of continental United States ever recorded in the history of this country.' What a difference one year makes! From a gain of more than 2 1/2 billions of dollars in savings deposits to a loss of almost 200 millions!"

"The loss in savings deposits is reflected also in the loss of savings depositors. The year 1929 showed a total of 62,664,127 depositors, against 63,188,348 for 1928, a loss of 524,221."

"Industrial production was much higher last year than the preceding year. Factory payrolls were considerably greater. In production, employment and trade, advances were made over the preceding year. In the farm areas the improvement noted for 1929 did not recede in 1929 and the livestock industry in all its branches was prosperous."

The Causes of the Drop

"The causes of the recession are possibly multiple. There is scarcely any reason to doubt that one of the important factors draining away savings and decreasing depositors has been the lure of profits to be made in stocks. For a number of years the people have been regaled with stories of profits made in stocks in all types of companies. During the last few years there has been a specious philosophy preached that panics such as formerly occurred were no longer possible."

"If it was the lure of profits in stocks which caused the recession in savings, then a factor in future savings will be the success attendant upon this venture of savings depositors in stocks. If the experiment did not prove generally successful, then another year will doubtless witness an increase in savings deposits as well as in savings depositors."

HELPING YOUNG FOLK TO BECOME BANKERS

Through the American Institute of Banking, which is the American Bankers Association's educational section, the banking profession is educating 35,000 bank men and women in the technical and scientific departments of their work. These students are enabled by this institute, which is entirely non-commercial in its operations, to obtain a grasp of the finer points of banking without interrupting their employment or interfering with their earnings, in their bank jobs.

The courses given, including banking economics and law and bank administration in all the departments, have been worked out under the direction of senior college educators and the lectures are always given by practical men, such as lawyers in the legal courses, experts in banking operations and college professors in the economics courses. There are chapters with meeting rooms in over 200 cities and also a number of smaller study groups are fostered with correspondence aid.

It has been said that the A. I. B., as it is familiarly known throughout the banking field, is the greatest adult educational organization in the world and is supplying the banking business with the largest supply of trained workers each year that any comparable line of business is receiving. The organization holds an annual convention attended by hundreds of young bank workers as well as senior bank officers actively interested in furthering the institute's educational work, at which numerous technical subjects of practical banking application are presented and discussed. This year's convention will be held at Denver, Colorado, June 16 to 24.

New Ford Truck With Closed Cab

NEW Ford Model AA trucks and Model A light delivery cars were announced this week by the Ford Motor Company and are on display in the show rooms of Ford dealers.

Changes in the trucks are principally in the front end, which has been completely redesigned, and in the cab. The radiator is higher with more cooling surface, fenders are wide and flowing, and a black cowli strip adds a note of distinction.

The new Model AA trucks with the four-speed transmission introduced several months ago may be had with enclosed or open cab. The enclosed cab, shown above, is all steel, it is low in appearance yet with ample head room. The open cab is of black rubber top material and is easily removed. Both cabs are equipped with windshields of Triplex shatterproof glass and vacuum type windshield wipers.

Model AA trucks may be had with a platform body, which can be equipped with stakes or a panel body. The chassis has many improvements, including the four-speed transmission, larger front brakes, stronger springs, power take-off opening and optional dual rear wheels.

The Model A line of new commercial cars comprises a light delivery truck with pickup body, a deluxe delivery truck, a small panel truck and a station wagon. These cars have the smaller wheels and larger tires of the new Ford passenger cars.

Patrick Henry's Sister Buried in Kentucky

Bowling Green, Ky., Aug. 12—Every school child has studied the life of the early American patriot, Patrick Henry, but few know that his sister, Susannah Henry, wife of Gen. Thomas Madison, lived in Kentucky and is buried in the Cowles family lot in the Smith Grove cemetery, off the Dixie Highway in Warren County, near Bowling Green. The family in whose plot the remains are buried are descendants of Mrs. Madison.

Susannah Henry was originally buried near the farm on which she lived, and for many years her grave was neglected, not even having a headstone to mark it. Nearly a hundred years after her death, in 1916, through the efforts of Eugene Cowles, of Shelbyville, and his brother, J. H. Cowles, the remains of the sister of the noted patriot were moved to their present resting place and a suitable stone erected over the grave. The stone bears the inscription: "Susannah Henry, wife of Gen. Thos. Madison and Sister of Patrick Henry, the Patriot. D'ied—1831."

Billy the Kid

The motion picture of the life and activities of Billy the Kid will be shown at the Crystal Theatre, some time during November.

Only two towns in this section will have the showing of this All-Talking production, and arrangements will be made for day and night shows during the three days that the picture will be here, in order to take care of the many hundreds of people that are expected to attend from outside territory.

The picture is in the Special class and produced on an elaborate scale, with King Vidor, the man who has made more big pictures than any other director.

The largest town ever reconstructed for a picture, was built for this picture. The town of Lincoln, as it was in the days of Billy the Kid, was reconstructed, and in detail.

Mrs. Mary Hvass, of Kennan, Wis., Wins $1,250 in National Canning Contest - Gives Pressure Cooking Credit.

America's champion canner is a Jack lunchroom. She is Mrs. Mary Hvass of Kennan, Wis., who won this title and a grand prize of $1,250 in the National Canning contest, conducted by the Sears-Roebuck Agricultural Foundation, just ended in Chicago, for the best jar of home-cooked food submitted in the nation-wide contest in which 25,000 women participated. Her contribution, which eminent domestic science judges selected as the premier jar, was a can of peas.

Mrs. Hvass is a pioneer who has been winning prizes ever since she and her husband, John Hvass, set out to win a livelihood from their Wisconsin land. Prizes at the county and state fairs for chickens, bread and cakes, and canned goods.

America's Champion Canner - Mrs. Mary Hvass of Kennan, Wis., putting up can of peas in her pressure cooker with which she won grand prize of $1,250 in the National Canning contest in Chicago for the best jar of preserved food.

She first saw the Wisconsin prairie as three-year-old Mary Jensen. It was her job, as she grew up, to help her father and mother win bread and butter for nine small Jensens and themselves. She was her mother's helper on the farm until all the children were well on their way to growing up. Then she yielded to the glamour of the trading town called Minneapolis. At Minneapolis she became a cook at a lumberjack lunchroom, where she met and married lumberjack John Hvass. They moved to Wisconsin first to a small farm, later to a larger one, where they are living today. There Mary Hvass helped her husband fell trees, build barns, fences, and their house. For nearly thirty-three years they struggled together.

When Mrs. Mary Hvass heard that one jar of peas that she had canned was worth $1,250, it seemed incredible to her. It was just one jar out of hundreds that were canned all as part of a summer's work. And it was simple business to put them up. She followed directions in a government bulletin.

"I used a pressure cooker, as the government advised, because I've tried every other way and I know it's best," she explained.

"First, I blanched the peas for 30 minutes in scalding water. Then I dipped them in cold water, poured them in a mason jar with seasoning, and put the jar in my pressure cooker for 50 minutes at 240 degrees."

"That's all the work it took to make them ready for the contest. I wouldn't want anything more certain and simple than my Kook-Kwick pressure cooker for canning peas and all kind of food."

Judges of the contest who declare the peas canned by Mrs. Hvass to be perfect in flavor, color and general appearance, were Dr. Margaret Justis, president of the American Home Economics association; Dr. Louise Starley, director of the United States Bureau of Home Economics; Mrs. Josephine Bakke, home economics director at Iowa State Agricultural college; Miss Elaine Massey, director of girls' club work in Mississippi, and George Earle, director of extension in the Middle West for the Department of Agriculture.

There are canned peas and canner peas that win prizes, but those that were canned by Mrs. Mary Hvass go even further. They are going to pay for their own creaming and buttering. The grand prize check of $1,250 is going to set up Mrs. Hvass in the dair business.

Her ambition for many years was to own a herd of pure-bred Holstein cattle and to extend her prize winning into wider fields. Now her ambition will be realized with the purchase of the nucleus of such a dair herd.

ICED TEA IS A POPULAR REFRESHING BEVERAGE

Iced Tea Refreshingly Served.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)
In cold weather Americans undoubtedly justify their reputation as a coffee drinking nation. But our summers in most parts of the United States are hot. We have a habit of being our beverages of all flavors, and iced tea is rapidly gaining headway as a refreshing drink. Nothing else quite takes its place on a warm day, especially for a sociable porch gathering in the afternoon.

There's all the difference in the world, however, between just cold tea and a dainty, tempting pitcher of golden brown liquid, thickening with tea and garnished with colorful green leaves and thin slices of lemon. The mere appearance of a tray set attractively for serving iced tea is enough to revive spirits that have been wilted by a combination of heat and work, or traveling, or sports. (A better understanding of the selection of teas may help in producing acceptable and refreshing iced tea.) Good hot tea must always be properly made first, poured off the tea leaves, and chilled, some time before the iced tea is wanted.

All the tea used in the United States is imported. Those who handle it in our wholesale markets say that there is a distinct preference in most sections of the country for the heavy-bodied, fully fermented black teas of East India and Ceylon, rather than the green teas of China and Japan and the oolong teas of Formosa and China. One reason for this is that these heavy bodied East India teas resemble coffee in color and body. They are liked for iced tea because even when somewhat diluted by melting ice they still have considerable flavor and a delightful color.

Choosing black, green, or oolong tea, however, is a matter of personal taste. After deciding which flavor is preferred, the housewife should select a brand that is sold in a proper kind of package which will preserve the quality of the tea. This is very important. Teas that are packed in tin, or cartons lined inside with aluminum or lead, or transparent or light material are generally in containers that will well preserve the product. Tea packed in unlined cartons deteriorates rapidly.

After brewing tea, if the housewife will examine the wet leaf, she can learn much about the quality. The appearance of dry leaf after brewing has the bright color of a copper coin, it is of better quality than a dull colored leaf. The leaf of green tea should also be bright and free from any discoloration as it is left in the teapot. The term "Orange Pekoe" does not indicate a certain kind of tea, but only a leaf grade. As a rule, blends of leaf grades have more body than a single leaf grade.

Green teas and oolong teas are often preferred for serving plain or with sugar and lemon. The fully fermented black teas from the East Indies, when served hot, are better with cream or milk, although they can be served without either. Sweetening is also a matter of taste. If these heavy-bodied teas are served clear it is better to brew them from three to four minutes only for hot tea, and from four to five minutes for iced tea.

The United States Department of Agriculture gives the following directions for brewing perfect hot tea. When it is ready it can be strained into another earthenware pot or pitcher and chilled for use as iced tea.

Use a teapot, preferably of earthenware, china, or glass. Heat it by scalding with boiling water. As the strength of tea is partly a matter of individual preference, the amount of tea used may be varied after experiment, but the standard quantity is usually "about a teaspoonful to each cupful desired." This may be interpreted as an even or a rounded teaspoonful after you have made tea from your chosen brand once or twice. If tea bags are used, one per cupful is ordinarily allowed; in some cases the bags may contain more tea than in others, so it is well to test the strength of the brew for yourself for the brand you use. Always use freshly drawn water for tea making. Measure it and bring it to a bubbling boil before pouring it on the tea leaves. Water boiled too long makes tea flat. If the water is not actually boiling it will not bring out the full strength of the tea.

Try Peach Cobbler With Hot Sauce

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The difference between a cobbler and a deep dish fruit pie with a biscuit crust seems to be that in the former the dough is under the fruit, and in the latter the fruit is under the dough. When made with peaches a cobbler is fine served hot with hard sauce. A good dessert for one of those unexpectedly cool summer days, or one when rain has cast a bit of gloom over the household. The directions for making it are given by the bureau of home economics of the United States Department of Agriculture.

- |                                |                        |
|--------------------------------|------------------------|
| 1 pint sifted soft-wheat flour | 1/2 cup milk           |
| 1/2 cup sugar                  | 1 quart sliced peaches |
| 1/2 tsp salt                   | Sugar to taste         |
| 1 lb. sugar                    | Spice if desired       |
| 2 tps baking powder            | Butter                 |
| 6 tbs fat                      |                        |

Sift the flour, salt, sugar, and baking powder together. Cut in the fat, add the milk, and mix well. Roll the dough into a thin sheet, cover the bottom and sides of a deep baking pan with it, and spread on the peaches in even layers. Sprinkle with the sugar and spice and dot with butter. If desired, put thin strips of the pastry across the top. Bake the cobbler in a hot oven (about 400 degrees F.) until the peaches are tender. Serve hot with hard sauce or cold with plain or whipped cream.

USE WASTE OIL TO GET RID OF BOTHERSOME CRICKETS

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

In spite of a certain amount of sentiment attached to the merry chirp of a cricket that has found its way inside a house, these insects do some damage to furnishings, and if very prevalent are really destructive. They eat curtains, garments, book bindings and rugs, especially if these are wet or moist. Their continuous and noisy chirpings are a great annoyance. Crickets often breed in great numbers in the garbage dumps near residences.

The most effective way to get rid of them permanently is to have such spots cleaned up entirely or treated with waste oil. Infested rooms may be relieved of the presence of some of these noisy visitors by the use of poisoned baits.

What has been facetiously referred to as "a banana split for crickets" is the formula for poisoned bait recommended by the bureau of entomology of the United States Department of Agriculture. Dissolve one tablet of bichloride of mercury in one-half cup of water and then add one-half cup of flour and mix into the paste and then spread small quantities on cardboard and place about the infested room. Care should be taken to keep the bait out of reach of children and pets.

Those who are closing summer cottages in the fall would do well to look out for the presence of crickets in the house before leaving. As a precaution poisoned baits may be placed in suitable locations. Bed clothing and wearing apparel should be carefully packed away in tight boxes.

For a warm day try the following cooling and delightful dish:

Jellied Consomme.—Dissolve two tablespoonfuls of gelatin in one-fourth of a cupful of cold water. Dissolve in one quart of hot consomme. Pour into bouillon cups and chill, or pour into a shallow pan and when chilled cut into cubes or beat with a fork, before serving in the cups.

Lemonade.—Extract the juice from six lemons, add sugar to taste, three-fourths to one cupful; stir well, add six cupfuls of cold water, chill and serve with ice, garnished with lemon slices.

Mushroom Soup.—Take one-fourth pound of fresh mushrooms, chop them, stems and all if they are not hard. Cook in two tablespoonfuls of butter until well browned. Make a cream sauce with two tablespoonfuls each of butter and flour and one cupful of thin cream, salt and pepper to taste. Cook until smooth and thick, then add the mushrooms, one quart of milk and salt and pepper to season. Serve hot.

Olives and Nut Sandwiches.—Chop olives and nuts very fine, mix with mayonnaise to make of spreading consistency, spread on thinly sliced bread, cover with a crisp lettuce leaf and top with another buttered slice.

Prune and Walnut Sandwich.—Affix together one-half cupful of chopped nuts with one cupful of chopped prunes, add one-half cupful of chopped ripe olives. Moisten with mayonnaise dressing and spread on buttered whole wheat bread.

Peanut Butter and Jam Sandwiches.—On a thin slice of lightly buttered white bread spread peanut butter. Cover with a slice of bread buttered on both sides. On top of this spread a layer of jam and top with another slice of bread buttered side down. Cut into quarters and serve.

As the banana is a fruit always on the market it is a constant source of comfort in time of emergency when a hurry up dish is necessary.

Banana Whip.—Cook three mashed bananas in a double boiler with one-third of a cupful of sugar and one tablespoonful of lemon juice until scalded. Add a few drops of vanilla, a pinch of salt and cool. Whip one cupful of heavy cream until firm, then add the banana mixture gradually. Set aside to chill. Serve piled high in sherbet glasses with chopped pistachio nuts for garnish.

Boston Banana Cream-Pie.—Break a large egg into a measuring cup, add softened butter (two tablespoonfuls), fill the cup with milk. Turn into a mixing bowl and beat with one and one-half cupfuls of flour sifted with two teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Bake in two layer pans. Whip a cupful of cream, sweeten to taste, flavor with almond and spread over the layers, cover with sliced bananas. Top the upper layer with cream sprinkled with chopped nuts.

Roast Beef and Tomato Sandwich.—Lightly butter thin slices of whole wheat bread, cover with thin slices of roast beef, spread lightly with mayonnaise dressing and put a slice of tomato on top. Season well with salt and pepper, cover with a crisp leaf of lettuce and top with another slice of bread.

STORY FOR THE LITTLE ONES AT BEDTIME

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

During the last speech of Great Salt Lake David had noticed a sign which read:

"Geysers in Yellowstone Park in the Rocky Mountains in the State of Wyoming. Admission free to Living Map adventurers."

It didn't take David long to get started in that direction after a word of farewell to Great Salt Lake. David found it was "only a short Living Map distance. He walked straight along a narrow path, one side of which was being guarded by Patrolman Idaho and his workers, with Patrolman Utah and his workers on the other side.

Soon he came to the Wyoming Patrolmen, and they told him to go directly north and at the very tip-top, left-hand corner of the state he would find the park.

"It wanders off a bit into the neighboring states," they told him. "That is just as it should be," Patrolman Wyoming added. "Our boundary rules are also such that we mustn't keep all our mountains and rivers and wonders in one state. We like to share them.

"Then, too," he said, in a low voice, "it's hard to keep rivers still and mountains down."

As he approached, a great fountain of hot water seemed to be shot out of the earth and high into the air, and a great voice shouted:

"The Geyser of Yellowstone Park welcomes you, David! Don't let me make you nervous. "The earth about gets so nervous when I speak. It trembles, actually, with nervousness. But with all the wild animals about here attracting attention, I've got to do something sensational to make myself known. "The hot rocks in the earth from which I spring are very obliging. I suppose that's because of their ever-warm natures. "They let the water steam and shoot right through them, and it is because of this help that I am the Geyser. Not afraid?"

"I'm not afraid of anything," David said.

"Good," said the Geyser. "There are some who like the quiet hot pools better. There are a number of them around and you can have a hot bath without having to wonder whether the boiler is hot or whether much of the hot water has been used.

"Where have you been adventuring, David?"

David told of all he had seen and heard, of those he had met, and of the strange, amazing wonders of nature he had seen.

When he spoke of the great red-wood forests of California, Geyser burst forth with admiration.

"I admire California. She is not only a look after her beauty and to be rightfully proud of it, but she works hard at her lumbering business, too. She's a good, thriving, hard-working business state, too.

"I don't believe there is any lumbering firm in the world which does any more work than the firm of Oregon, Washington, and California together.

"Now my mother state is, on the whole, a lover of quiet farm life. Perhaps having an often-excited child such as I am, she is pleased that she can lead a quiet life with her sheep. "My mother and Montana—our neighbor on the north—have gone into the wool business. A most excellent business, but not for a Geyser."

David laughed. "No, it would hardly do for you. You'd get the wool all soaked."

"It wouldn't interest me," Geyser said, "and I've always said people must be in the business which is their liking.

"Otherwise they won't make a success of it. I'm a successful Geyser, because I like Geysering."

"That word's a new one to me," David said.

"You'd better not become any too well acquainted with it," Geyser warned David. "It has never really been admitted into Map society."

Just then two voices were heard shouting just outside the park.

"I do believe two of the Living Map people want to see me," David said.

He wanted to appear of some importance before Geyser and, too, he wanted to find out who were the owners of these voices.

He said a hurried good-by to Geyser and rushed away.

Cheap Cold Storage

Satisfactory results have been obtained by the North Dakota Agricultural college in the formation of an ice well for cooling and storing milk. The ice was made during winter months by running a small quantity of water in the well every day. The gradual freezing formed a large cake of ice which lasted through the 1929 summer. This experimental well was eight feet square, nine and one-half feet deep, with boarded sides and gravel bottom.

Puzzled

Mary Elizabeth had moved with her parents to a small town, and the family milk supply was obtained from a woman who kept a cow, living at the edge of the village. It was the little girl's duty to go after the milk each evening. One evening when she came home she said to her mother: "The woman where I go for the milk always acts like I am two people, instead of one."

"Mother did not understand what she meant, until one evening when it was getting late, she went with Mary Elizabeth. On knocking at the door they were greeted in this manner: "Good evening, good evening, come in, come in."

SATIN FROCKS ARE FAVORED FOR EARLY AUTUMN SEASON

By JULIA BOTTOMLEY

Lustrous or dull, in color or black with special emphasis on white, for evening wear, satin is making a conspicuous entry among "first" fashions for fall.

The new satins have a color range such as the world of fashion has not seen for many years. A high regard for black is also maintained and especially black with a touch of color or white.

Satins in the new off-black shades are as interesting as were the off-white shades during the summer. Rich dark plum tones, garnet reds, browns from African to rust, handsome greens, and black, of course, briefly outline the color program for fall frocks.

The artfully tailored satin gown in rich autumn hue worn with shoes in matched color is a favorite theme with fashionists for immediate wear. As a reminder of the importance of shoes the same color as the frock, leading booties are stressing displays of exquisite kid shoes in wine shades in dark green and a whole list of browns.

Typical of the autumn trend is the bronze-brown satin dress in the picture. It is finished at the neck and wrists with the same satin weave in a bright rust tone. The brown kid shoes worn with this smart gown are a perfect color match to it.

Many of the couturiers are combining soft pastel tints with dark shades. Indeed the effectiveness of monotoones used in contrast is stressed throughout all costume design for the coming season.

Touches of turquoise blue on black or on brown are especially noted. Green and brown, beige and brown, green and beige, deep garnet with beige, plaid with black, also black and white are but a few of the color combinations which are enlivening the mode.

Another point about the new satin dresses is their lavish amount of detail. That is, their styling is complex because of an endless amount of seaming, tucking, going, together with intricate yokes, insets, bandings and such. All this manipulation, however, results in an appearance of extreme simplicity.

When the satin gown is not trimmed in satin of another color at the neckline, it is almost sure to take on a lace collar and cuff set for lingerie touches appear on the majority of daytime frocks this season.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

American Bar Association Upholds Referendum on the 18th Amendment.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

PROHIBITION laws and their enforcement were to the fore at the opening session of the fifty-third annual meeting of the American Bar association in Chicago. George W. Wickensham, chairman of the President's enforcement commission, was the chief speaker of the day, and naturally he spoke mainly on that topic; but what he said would give small consolation to the dripping wets of the country.

"Good citizenship," said Mr. Wickensham, "must acquiesce in the law as it is, for the time being. A society which has adopted the inventions and applied science of the last quarter of a century and has taken into its midst millions of aliens from every country in the world, must resort to legislation in order to regulate its life, preserve order, and, so far as possible, suppress acts and habits injurious to its welfare."

"That the individual and minority groups must accept and abide by the restraints so imposed is obvious. Otherwise lawful government breaks down and we have anarchy. The remedy of those who object is to appeal to the same authority as that which enacts, for rescission or modification. There can be no individual right to elect what laws one will or will not obey."

The commission, said its chairman, had opposed the Jones law and the Dyer act, believing "that a speedy prosecution of minor offenses and the imposition of penalties having some relation to the character of the offense would be more likely to induce respect for law than the creation of penalties so disproportionate to the gravity of the offense as to induce resentment in reasonable minds."

MORE exciting than any speeches was the battle over an attempt by some of the members of the association to halt the referendum vote on the Eighteenth amendment. Secretary W. E. MacCracken, Jr., reported that the executive committee had rejected a petition to recall the postcards sent out for this vote. Judge James F. Allshie of Idaho offered a resolution that the submitting of the question was not in accord with the objects and purpose of the association and contrary to its constitution and by-laws, after the committee's report had been accepted. President Henry U. Sims sustained a point of order that the right of the executive committee to take such action was specifically granted in the constitution and ruled that the action of the committee could not be recalled by the delegates. An appeal from this decision was voted down by a majority of about fifty to one.

The convention also upheld the executive committee in rejecting the report of the American citizenship committee which contained a bitter attack of the federal farm board, declaring its appointment was the first step toward state socialism and that this effort to aid the farmers was foredoomed to failure. The section on criminal law and criminology also refused to adopt a report on "lawless enforcement of law" and ordered the committee to continue work for another year.

In his opening address President Sims asserted that constitutional liberty in this country is in no danger whatever, "and that the visions of social strife supposed to be impending are but phantasmas of morbid brains."

The sessions of the association were attended by a number of distinguished lawyers and jurists from foreign countries, and many American notables were among the 2,000 delegates.

GENEROUS rates fell over much of the corn and wheat belts, but they were too late to save the crops from at least partial ruin, and the plans of the government and the states for relief of the farmers in the drought areas were not halted. President Hoover appointed a federal relief committee, headed by Secretary of Agriculture Hyde and including Chairman Alexander Legge of the federal farm board; Paul Bestor, chairman of the federal farm loan board; Roy Young, chairman of the federal reserve board; John Barton Payne, chairman of the American Red Cross; Under-secretary of the Treasury Ogden Mills; Henry M. Robinson, president of the First National Bank of Los Angeles, and R. H. Ashton of Evanston, Ill., president of the American Railway association.

Governors of the various states reported to Washington that they were moving rapidly in the creation of their organizations.

FIRST action of the federal committee was to lay plans for financial relief with the federal intermediate credit bank system as the principal unit. The plans called, first, for the creation of state and local credit corporations by bankers and business men through which farmers may obtain need and feed loans. The corporations will sign the notes over to the credit banks, which will advance the capital obtained from the flotation of debentures on the investment market.

Secretary Hyde estimated roughly that a maximum of $20,000,000 will be required of the credit banks, whatever more is needed coming from private sources.

Mr. Hyde announced that the Department of Agriculture will make available for seed loans approximately $500,000 remaining from a $3,000,000 appropriation provided by congress. The use of this money, however, is limited to specified areas and will be distributed largely in Indiana, Ohio, Virginia, Missouri and Montana.

John Barton Payne, chairman of the American Red Cross, said that his organization has $5,000,000 available for emergency work and does not contemplate an appeal to the public, at least until the fund is exhausted.

In order to furnish employment for farmers without livelihood as a result of the drought, the Department of Agriculture has made immediately available to the states $121,537,000 in federal aid road funds which ordinarily would not have been apportioned until January 1. This action was taken at the urgent request of President Hoover.

The federal farm board announced the extension of $5,000,000 credit to the Inter-Mountain Live Stock Growers' association, which will facilitate the shipping of live stock to pastures.

INTEREST in aviation centered in Chicago, where the national air races opened and toward which men and women contestants in the air derbies were racing from various parts of the country. Nearly every prominent American aviator was there, and so were some of the best flyers of Europe. A varied program of speed contests, stunt flying, and other exhibitions was offered the immense throng of spectators that flocked to Chicago from all parts of the Union.

Before the races began, the first national air conference was held for three days on the downtown campus of Northwestern university, with the nation's chief authorities on aeronautics in attendance. The conference recommended the adoption by the states of federal laws regulating airports, airplanes and air transportation, in order to secure uniformity. The states also were urged to authorize municipalities to purchase, maintain and police airports.

The conference recommended the establishment of a comprehensive system of national airways, giving equal consideration to all sections without regard to population density, but giving greatest consideration where topographical conditions are unfavorable to flying.

DALE JACKSON and Forest O'Brien, St. Louis endurance flyers, didn't stay in the air for a thousand hours, as they threatened, but descended when they had established the new mark of 647 hours 25 minutes and 30 seconds. Their motor developed trouble, forcing them to alight.

GALLANT work by officers and crew and quick response to radio calls by other vessels saved the 217 persons aboard the British steamer Tahiti from death in the middle of the Pacific ocean. The vessel's port propeller shaft carried away, tearing a hole in the ship and permitting water to flood the engine room and two holds. She was kept afloat for a time by the use of emergency pumps and wireless appeals for aid brought the Matson liner Ventura and the steamer Penobscot to the rescue. All aboard the Tahiti were transferred to the Ventura in safety, despite heavy seas. About half were disembarked at Pago Pago, American Samoa, and the rest were taken to San Francisco. Many other vessels on the Pacific answered the radio SOS but their help was not needed. The Tahiti went to the bottom soon after the passengers and crew left her.

UNITED Spanish War Veterans held their thirty-second annual encampment in Philadelphia and had a fine time fighting over again the battles in Cuba. The feature of the affair was the parade on "preparedness day." Edward S. Matthias, former judge of the Ohio Supreme court, was elected national commander, and New Orleans was awarded next year's encampment.

PRESIDENT HOOVER has decided to go to Boston on October 6 to deliver an address before the American Legion. He will then take a special train for the South and speak again next day at the celebration of the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the Battle of Kings Mountain. Though his vacation plans are still unsettled, it may be that he will take a trip in October either to Mexico or on the Caribbean. Among the tasks now on his hands are the selection of the five members of the tariff commission and the completion of the 1932 budget.

VAN LEAR BLACK, wealthy publisher of the Baltimore Sun and Evening Sun, was drowned at sea in the night, having evidently fallen from his yacht Sabalo when it was steaming outside the outer New York harbor on the way to his summer home on the Chesapeake. When it was discovered he was missing from the boat, the alarm was sent out and for two days vessels and airplanes and the navy dirigible Los Angeles searched for him, but in vain.

Mr. Black, who was fifty-five years old, was an enthusiastic aviator, and in 1927 began a series of flights that took him around the world, all over Europe, to the Dutch East Indies and to South America.

Other notables taken by death were Thomas B. Slick of Oklahoma City, known as the richest independent oil operator in the world; and Louis Bourgeois of Chicago, noted architect and sculptor.

CHINESE press dispatches reported the slaughter of 4,000 Communists by provincial troops in western Kiangsi province and the capture of 2,000 rifles. The Communists, however, gained possession of Wusueh in Hupeh province, an important Yangtze river port 25 miles above Kinkiang. The terrified inhabitants of the town abandoned their property and fled.

IF GERMANY asks the League of Nations next month for revision of the Versailles treaty in regard to Germany's frontier, France will put up a strenuous opposition. Herr Trevelyan, German minister for the occupied regions, recently made this demand in a speech, and soon thereafter the German ambassador to Paris hustled back to Berlin to warn his government that the Stresemann policy of conciliation was being jeopardized.

It is reported that the French foreign office bluntly told the German envoy that France does not regard as acceptable proposals for revision of the Polish corridor. At the same time France is urging Poland to abandon her belligerent attitude and to drop the tariffs in force along the borders of the corridor, preventing free passage between Prussia and the rest of Germany.

The name of Frank B. Kellogg, former secretary of state, was presented to the League of Nations by the American group as candidates for justice of the World court. (N. Y. Western Newspaper Union.)

Warm weather and changes of food and water bring frequent summer upsets unless healthy elimination is assured. You will find Feen-a-mint effective in milder doses and especially convenient and pleasant for summertime use.

Electric Light Helps Wheat

The Canadian agriculture department, at the Ottawa experiment station, is conducting experiments in the direction of improving the wheat crop of the country and by crossing the grain and producing hybrids, it is hoped to produce harder varieties and possibly a grain which will grow two crops a year. Some trials of stimulating the growth of the seed by the use of banks of electric lights have resulted in the production of the hybrids in one-half the usual time. Thus experiments which usually require eight years are being done in four. The element of time in this work is very important.

Gull Ornaments Flagstaff The Yacht club at Santa Barbara, Calif., has a living emblem on the free end of its flagstaff. It is not a golden eagle which tops the flag, but a dun and gray gull which perches atop the knob. The same bird roosts there almost motionless nearly all day unless disturbed. It usually takes its post in the late morning and maintains it until evening.

Modern Wife Finds Way to Make Hubby Useful

"The woman of today not only has all the privileges of man, in addition to most of those which have always been hers exclusively, but uses the poor boob for a catspaw besides," declared Governor Allen of Massachusetts at a Boston banquet. "One of these modernists had been indulging in the hospitality of friends far too often to please her husband and he finally ventured to speak to her about it. 'My dear,' he said, 'I think this makes the twelfth time you have visited the refreshment buffet.' 'Oh, that's all right,' she replied carelessly, 'I tell them I'm getting it for you.'"

WHEN THE CONOCO MAN ASKS "ETHYL?" say Yes! and you'll say it again . . .

THE next time you drive into a CONOCO station, the man at the pump will ask you a one-word question. "Ethyl?", will be his query.

And in justice to yourself and the car you drive, we urge you to answer, "Yes!"

For Ethyl, added to CONOCO, the gasoline we're proud of, is like seasoning added to food. As seasoning brings out taste and deliciousness, so Ethyl brings out the qualities which have made CONOCO Gasoline famous.

Ethyl stops the knock that makes the foot retreat from the accelerator when you would rather "bear down" harder. Ethyl stops the knock that forces you to shift gears on hills. Ethyl stops the knock that embarrasses you when you let in the clutch in traffic.

So when the CONOCO salesman asks, "Ethyl?" . . . Say, "Yes!" . . . and you'll say it again.

And for a nation in which ninety old men out of a hundred die worth less than $100, this is valuable: "A man may, if he knows not how to save as he gets, keep his nose to the grindstone."

These wise things were said by Benjamin Franklin, born 224 years ago. There is material for a thousand good sermons in Franklin's common sense talks.

Mr. Brown, postmaster general, suggests a $76,000,000 program to build a fleet of North Atlantic superhips for American passengers and mail. The postmaster demands a service which could compete with any foreign flag service on the North Atlantic.

Americans will congratulate Postmaster Brown and President Hoover on that proposition, and hope that they will not only compete with but eclipse every foreign service on the North Atlantic and everywhere else. Why should a country with the best engineers, from the President down, and with more money than anybody else, ever play second fiddle on the ocean or in the air?
