FORT STANTON NEWS

Two wells, approximately 500 feet deep, are to be drilled at Fort Stanton, to supply the station with an additional amount of water, badly needed, especially during dry seasons.

The water situation at the Fort has been a grave problem for a long time, as the present supply of water is obtained from the Southern Pacific Co.'s Intake on Eagle Creek through an 18-mile-long pipe line, is altogether insufficient to take care of the daily needs.

Proposals for bids to drill these wells will be solicited in the near future by the custodian at this place, which should interest the local well-drillers, who may correspond with the Medical Officer in Charge for necessary forms and specifications.

Eric L. R. Williams, dealer in radios, has installed a Screen-Grid electric radio set with dynamic speaker for Miss Winter, Chief Nurse. This set is the very latest in radios, and the first of its kind to be seen at the post.

Miss Gene Brockwell was operated on for appendicitis Monday afternoon. The following morning, Isaac Brooks was operated on for the same ailment. Both are doing nicely, so far.

The Fort Stanton basket-ball team has been re-organized for the coming season, with all the last year's and three additional players, which is going to make the team one of the strongest in this vicinity.

The following people of the Fort were visiting at Roswell Saturday, on business and pleasure—Dr. and Mrs. Elarbee, Mr. and Mrs. Hebert, the Misses Converse, Hilligas, M. J. Harris, T. Dickey, L. Payman, J. Gentry, Eric Williams, A. Lowey, Mr. "Fat" Johnson and John Gow.

Two dashing young gentlemen from the Fort were Roswell visitors recently, the parties referred to being V. Thomassen and Wm. Gould, and returned in a sporty-looking speedster, a Nash convertible Coupe with a rumble seat available, should the two owners decide to transport some fair passengers.

Kenneth Byrns left for New Orleans last week. He accompanied a patient who was transferred to the Marine Hospital there.

Earl B. Rountree

of Capitan was a Carrizozo visitor Thursday, and informed us that his son, Roland, had his arm broken while playing at school Tuesday, but the little is recovering nicely.

Passed on to Her Reward

Shortly after the hour of 8 o'clock last Sunday morning, Mrs. Matilda Lutz, beloved wife of Henry Lutz, passed on, after an illness of several months, during which time, medical treatment proved of no avail.

The funeral services were held Tuesday afternoon at the Santa Rita Catholic Church with the Rev. Father Francis Mitchell conducting the same, and attended by a throng of friends of the family who had known the deceased for many years and followed the remains to the local cemetery, where they were interred. The floral offerings were many, varied, wonderfully beautiful and were silent expressions of the love and esteem in which the deceased was held.

Mrs. Lutz was a lady of many accomplishments. She was born and reared in German Bavaria. After graduating from the Bavarian schools, she received her musical education and graduated from the leading musical University in her native country with the highest honors. After her marriage to Mr. Lutz, she accompanied him on his return trip, since which time, they made their home in Lincoln County.

She leaves a husband, two daughters, Mrs. O. W. Bamberger of Amarillo, Texas, Miss Belle Lutz of Carrizozo and one son, Henry Lutz, Jr., of Roswell, N. M., all of whom were here at the funeral and to all of whom, the combined sympathy of our people is extended.

TIMELY HINTS ABOUT GOOD THINGS FOR THE FAMILY TABLE

By NELLIE MAXWELL

There's a space for good to bloom in Every heart of man or woman - And however brimmed with ill - Or however brimmed with ill - Never heart may beat without it - And the darkest heart to doubt it Has something good about it After all.

Between seasons when the weather is either unseasonably hot or too cool we need, some days, a chilling, tinkling drink and the next a hot one.

Fruit Iced Tea.—Make one cupful of strong tea, using two or three teaspoonfuls of the tea to a cupful of boiling water.

Pineapple Lemonade.—Make a sirup by boiling one cupful of sugar and two cupfuls of water for ten minutes.

pour over chilled ice in tall glasses. Delicious Punch.—Prepare a sirup of one cupful of sugar, one-half cupful of water, cook until it spins a thread; pour the sirup over three beaten egg whites and add slowly to one quart of freshly made english breakfast tea infusion which has been chilled; add this mixture to one quart of lemon flavored ice cream and mix thoroughly.

Ginger Ale Cream.—Serve ice cream in tall glasses, fill up with ginger ale. Chocolate Ice Cream Soda.—Into a tumbler put a small cone of ice cream, pour over this two tablespoonfuls of chocolate sirup and fill the glass with chilled soda water drawn from a siphon.

Ginger Ale Cobbler.—Fill soda water glasses half full of finely crushed ice, add one slice of pineapple (the small size), then fill with ginger ale. Serve at once.

Muffled Elder.—Put one quart of sweet elder into a saucepan. Add one small stick of cinnamon broken into pieces, one-half teaspoonful of whole allspice, six whole cloves and one small piece of ginger root. Bring to the boiling point, let boil three minutes.

There is nothing more tasty than fresh shrimp, but with the canned variety one may always be sure it is wholesome and ready to eat. Shrimps should be rinsed as soon as taken from the can. Split down the back and remove the black streak, wash and drain and chill on ice if to be used as salad.

Shrimp Salad.—Rinse and chill the shrimps and place on crisp lettuce leaves. The curled leaves of the head lettuce make a most attractive nest. Place five or six shrimps for each serving.

Another salad: Arrange the shrimps around a mound of mayonnaise in the center, on lettuce. On top of the mayonnaise place a ring of green pepper, in the ring, straight up, stick a tuft of tender celery tips, around the pepper on the mayonnaise place six or eight capers. Serve from the table.

Shrimp Wiggle.—Sift two cans of shrimps into two cupfuls of white sauce. When well heated through pour over rounds of hot buttered toast. Sprinkle over each a few hot seasoned peas and serve. Do not arrange the toast around the platter and have the peas in a mound in the center.

"I think they should say: "Children, be clever, like the geese." However, even though I think they should say this, I can't imagine them doing so."

"I can't myself," said Mr. Gander, "and still, I think it should be said." "I don't see why you are worrying," said Mrs. Grey Goose, "about children and grownups and whether we're stupid or not or whether they speak as they do."

"Such things don't bother me. I just leave them alone. If they should bother me I could fight them, but I just leave them alone."

"Ah, Mrs. Grey Goose," said Mr. Gander, "you don't know what geese can be like."

"I know what they are," she said. "That's so," chuckled Mr. Gander, "but I have just heard a great and noble story about geese, and so I don't think they should be thought stupid any more."

"Tell me the great and noble story," shrieked Mrs. Grey Goose. And the other geese asked to hear the story. "Tell us," they all shrieked.

"I am not putting you off," said Mr. Gander, "but I am only adding to the story."

"How are you adding to the story when you haven't begun it?" asked Mrs. Goose.

"Are you adding to it in your mind?" asked Mrs. Grey Goose.

"No, I am not," said Mr. Gander. "I meant that I was adding to it by keeping you waiting to hear it."

"It makes you so eager and you

Mrs. Goose. "That sure is splendid." "No wonder you say that geese shouldn't be called stupid any more," said Mrs. Grey Goose.

"Well," said Brother Bacon, who had come up to listen, "pigs have often given warning of danger, too."

"Both pigs and geese have been brave and have accomplished fine things."

Lemon Sponge Dessert Should Be Prepared Long Before Needed

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Nothing could be daintier or more refreshing on a hot day than lemon sponge. It has the advantage of all desserts made with gelatin, that it must be made several hours in advance of the time it is wanted, thus releasing the homemaker from cooking during the hotter parts of the day.

Lemon Sponge (With Custard Sauce) 2 lbs. gelatin 1 cup lemon juice 1 1/2 cup cold water 1/2 cup sugar 2 cups boiling water 1 egg whites 1 cup sugar

Soften the gelatin in the cold water for five minutes. Add boiling water, sugar, and a few grains of salt, and stir until dissolved.

Heat the milk, sugar and a few grains of salt in a double boiler. Beat the egg yolks lightly, add some of the heated milk, pour back into the double boiler and stir constantly until the custard coats the spoon.

Remove at once, add the vanilla, place the pan in a bowl of cold water and stir occasionally until cool.

NOVELTY WOOLENS ARE LIKED FOR SCHOOL AND TRAVEL WEAR

By JULIA BOTTOMLEY

It is almost uncanny the way youth senses the new and the smart, whether it be in regard to clothes, manners, or what not.

Most of the new flecked woolens are gay deceivers, in that at a casual glance one could never guess how very sheer and dainty are they.

When the girl on the train going back to college waves adieu and "auf wiedersehen" from the platform which is bearing her away from "home, sweet home," she is very likely to be clad either in a natty jacket-and-skirt suit, fashioned after the manner of the model shown to the left in the picture, or her choice may center on a one-piece dress topped with a jacket such as the figure to the right in the illustration is wearing with much satisfaction.

The woollen weaves which fashions the suit shown is only mildly flecked to what some of the materials are, for many of the deep wine, dark green, brown and black fabrics look as if they are smattered with snowflakes.

An entirely new family of woollen weaves are highlighted in the fabric displays for fall. These answer the call for dress materials which are exceedingly lightweight and sheer.

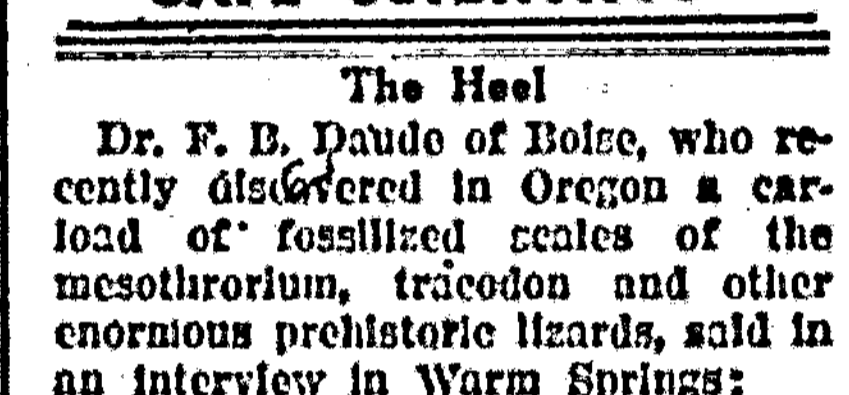

school wear it is thoroughly practical and ever so good-looking, the complete frock being especially smart. For those daytime dresses with jeans to match, both solid colors and tweedlike or novelty mixtures are favored.

"I'm coming to that, now," continued Eccleshare. "I had told Parslave to meet me on the path between High Cap lodge and the Woodcock about eight o'clock. I strolled out to meet him, as soon as dinner was over at Courthouse. That would be about ten minutes to eight. We met a little to the further side—the side nearest the Woodcock—of Relver's den. As far as I can recollect, it would then be just after eight o'clock. We stood a few minutes, talking. Then—"

"A moment, if you please," interrupted Maythorne. He produced a memorandum book, and laying it open on the table before him, drew Eccleshare's attention to a rough diagram penciled on one of the pages. "Here's a sketch that I made the day of my arrival at the Woodcock," he said. "A sketch of the paths across the moor. Now there are two paths that lead from the direction of High Cap lodge and go towards the Woodcock. One leads directly across the front of Relver's den, at the very foot of the rocks—we'll call that the higher one. The other is some fifteen or twenty yards lower down—amongst the heather; we'll call that the lower one. Which path were you and Parslave on?"

Eccleshare bent over the diagram for a moment, twisting it round so as to get a clear idea of its geography. He put his finger on a spot.

"We were about there," he said. "On the lower one. But—I don't know if you've made it quite plain—those two paths (one, the lower one's a mere sheep track) almost meet on the west side, the High Cap lodge side of Relver's den, near Cowie's cottage. They're only separated there by a yard or two. Then the lower one goes away through the heather to the top side of High Cap lodge; the other one passes High Cap lodge on the lower side at fifty or sixty yards distance and breaks into the moorland road to Cloughthwaite."

"Well," said Maythorne. "Anyway—you and Parslave were on the lower one?"

"We were on the lower one—perhaps a hundred yards from Relver's den. And," continued Eccleshare, "as I was saying, we stood there a few minutes, talking. It was then quite dark, but a clear, starlit night. We were just moving away, in the High Cap lodge direction, when we heard a shot fired. It seemed, as far as we could make out, to be in Relver's den, or just beyond it—I think it must have been in Relver's den, because there was a distinct echo from the rocks. We heard nothing follow—no cry, scream, anything of that sort. Neither of us took any particular notice—I think we each had the same idea; that it was a gamekeeper who was after something. In fact, we heeded it so little that we went on talking about our own business for a minute or two after the shot was fired. Then because it was time for Parslave to be getting on to catch his train we moved—coming over to the other path because it leads directly to the moorland road. We had just got on it when we heard steps coming along from the direction of Relver's den. There were some high, thick bushes close by, and—I really don't know why we did it, but we did—we sort of instinctively moved into their shadow, where it was quite dark. And then, a minute later, walking very swiftly, a woman passed us."

"A woman!"

It was Manners who let out this sharp exclamation. Like all the rest of us he had been following Eccleshare closely; now he showed signs of excitement; clearly, some notion had suddenly come to him.

"A woman!" repeated Eccleshare, quietly. "A woman—tall, slender, walking very quickly indeed—we heard her breathing, sharply. She was past and gone, like a flash."

"In which direction?" asked Maythorne.

"Towards Marrasdale," replied Eccleshare.

"And then?" suggested Maythorne after a brief pause.

"Then Parslave and I went on again—he was getting pressed for time. We neither heard nor saw anything there. We passed Cowie's cottage. You say Cowie saw us together. Probable—but we never saw him. We walked quickly across the moor, struck the high road, and parted. I went into High Cap lodge, and Parslave—but let Parslave himself tell you what he did."

We all turned to Parslave, who still sat perched on the edge of a chair near the door, twiddling his thumbs.

"Went straight along the road to Petherby station, then," said Parslave. "Caught the nine-fifteen train—last train that is—to Newcastle. Got to Newcastle at ten-fifty. Put up at a temperance, near the station, for the night. Went to see Mr. Graham, the lawyer, as soon as I'd had my breakfast next morning—about ten o'clock, that 'ud be. When I'd done with him, got a bit of a snack and then caught the twelve-ten express to London. Got to King's Cross at a quarter to seven that evening. Came straight here—and been here ever since."

"Let me ask Parslave a question while I think of it," said Crole. "Parslave—do you mean to say that since you left Marrasdale, you've never heard of the murder there?—from the newspapers?"

"I can't read, sir," answered Parslave. "I've no scholarship. Can't neither read nor write."

"But you've been in the company of Doctor Eccleshare's housekeeper," continued Crole. "Do you mean to say that she's never read anything about it to you—out of the papers?"

Parslave shook his head.

"No, sir—she hasn't," he replied. "Don't seem a paper-reading woman, that. Her reads them story papers—tales—such like. But I ain't seen her a-reading of newspapers."

"Well, but you've no doubt been in the habit since you've been here, of going out to have a glass of ale at some public house or other," persisted Crole. "Have you never heard it mentioned at such times?"

"No, sir," answered Parslave, with solemn assurance. "Never! I always go out to take a pint of ale at the public up the street, but I ain't never talked to nobody—don't understand this London talk—'tis all so much furrin language to me. And I ain't never heard nobody talking of the murder."

"You can take it from me, Mr. Crole," said Eccleshare, "that Parslave never heard of Mazaroff's murder at all until last night, when I returned home. I told him—we had a talk last night about our own experiences near Relver's den that evening—in the light of what we remembered, of course."

"That's just what I want to ask you some questions about, Doctor," said Crole. "It seems to me that we're getting nearer a solution of this mystery than we've ever been before. Now, you won't mind if I ask you a few straightforward questions?"

"Ask me anything you like," replied Eccleshare.

"You were at the inquest on Mazaroff's body at the Woodcock," said Crole. "You gave evidence—"

"Purely professional evidence," interrupted Eccleshare.

"Precisely—as to the cause of death," assented Crole. "Now, why didn't you tell the coroner and the jury what you've told us just now?"

"And—if I may put a word in," said Manners, quickly, "why didn't you tell us—the police—all you've just told us about Parslave, when you knew quite well that we were looking for him?"

"As to your question, Manners, I wasn't aware of the hue-and-cry for Parslave to the extent you think," answered Eccleshare. "My time wasn't spent in the Marrasdale district, so much as on the east side of my host's house. As to yours, Crole—well, I've told you I possibly made a mistake—no doubt I did. But I had reason for silence. They're easily summed up. The person that Parslave and I saw hurrying away from Relver's den, where, presumably, murder had just been committed was—a woman!"

Crole summoned our undivided attention with a swift glance round the table. He went forward to Eccleshare.

"Now, Doctor!" he said. "Don't let's beat about the bush any longer—let's get at the truth, however unpleasant it may be. Did you form any opinion as to who that woman was?"

Eccleshare made a gesture of dislike at the situation. But he bowed his head and replied without hesitation.

"I did!—certainly!"

"Who was she?"

"Mrs. Elphinstone!"

"You feel sure of that?"

"Positive—without doubt. Ask Parslave!"

Crole turned sharply on Parslave. And Parslave threw up his head with a jerk.

"What do you say, Parslave? Who was the woman that passed you?"

"Mistress Elphinstone, sir—no doubt on it! Never had no doubt—myself!"

Crole turned again to Eccleshare.

"You said it was dark, then, but clear, starlit. How did you recognize her?"

"Figure, walk, profile," replied Eccleshare. "I'd no doubt at the time, and I've none now. The woman who passed Parslave and myself just after—at least almost just after—we heard the shot fired, was Mrs. Elphinstone."

"That's why you kept silence!" suggested Crole.

"I thought things out, next morning," answered Eccleshare. "I kept silence—Parslave, of course, had gone. I—well, I didn't want to give a woman away. And after all—there might be explanations."

"Explanations!" exclaimed Crole. "Ex—"

"Here's something that needs explanation," interrupted Maythorne. "Doctor Eccleshare and Parslave agree that they heard a shot fired near Relver's den soon after eight o'clock. Old Mr. Hassendane told us, Crole, when you, Holt, and myself met him there, that he heard a shot fired, about ten o'clock. Now then—which of those shots was it that killed Mazaroff? Remember—neither Eccleshare nor Parslave saw anything of Mazaroff near Relver's den at eight o'clock. And yet, if the eight o'clock shot killed him, he must have been about there when they were. What do you make of that?"

"Don't know—it needs thinking out," answered Crole. "But—to my mind, the pertinent thing is this. Doctor Eccleshare and Parslave are both dead certain they saw Mrs. Elphinstone come away from Relver's den, where, afterwards Mazaroff's lifeless body was found, robbed of money, valuables, papers, and his will. Now then, neither Manners nor Corkerdale know this—and I'm going to tell them, as police officers. A few nights after the murder, Mrs. Elphinstone was found to be in possession of the will! How did she get it?"

CHAPTER IX

Missing!

It needed no more than a glance at the two policemen to see that this announcement produced an effect on their officially trained minds which was equivalent to letting in a sudden flood of illuminating light on a hitherto to dark subject. Corkerdale looked at Manners; Manners stared at Corkerdale; then both turned on the collector.

"A Woman!"

"Mrs. Elphinstone!" exclaimed Manners. "In possession of the missing will?"

But Corkerdale's first remark was in a quieter tone.

"That'll need some explanation," he said, with a significant look. "As I understand matters, the will was in Mazaroff's pocket when he was murdered."

"As far as is, known, it was," replied Crole. "He carried it away from Postlethwaite's office at York, in his pocket, anyway, and it certainly wasn't amongst his effects at the Woodcock, which we examined after his death. Explanation, yes! But I'll tell you how we came to find out that Mrs. Elphinstone got it." He went on to narrate the happenings of the previous night but one, on which Stella came to me with the missing will. "Now," he continued, "the thing of course, is—how, where, under what circumstances did Mrs. Elphinstone get hold of that will? Last night, after Mrs. Elphinstone arrived in London, Maythorne saw her and tried to get an explanation out of her. He got nothing."

"Not a word!" said Maythorne. "She showed nothing but defiance. I pointed out the inference that might be drawn; the suspicion that might be thrown upon her—all no good! She refused to say or tell anything."

"And that makes me think," remarked Crole, a little eagerly, "that Mrs. Elphinstone, after all, may have a proper and reasonable explanation to give. I can't think that a woman of any common sense—and she's a shrewd, clever, hard woman—would be so foolish as to behave in this fashion unless she knew she was safe. You hinted that you'd have to give information to the police, didn't you, Maythorne?"

"I did!"

"And it produced no effect on her?"

"Not the slightest! Her whole attitude, was that of—mind your own business!"

Crole began to drum the table with his fingers, looking round at the rest of us as if he wondered whether anybody had got any suggestion to make. As nobody spoke, he made one himself.

"I wonder of Mazaroff, or Merchlison, as he really was, met Mrs. Elphinstone, or Mrs. Merchlison, as she really is, at any time while he was at the Woodcock before his death?" he said. "Possible?"

"I don't think he did," replied Maythorne, at whom Crole was looking particularly. "There's nothing whatever to suggest it. Of course, if Mrs. Elphinstone could be got to speak it would clear up a tremendous lot."

"From what little I saw of Mrs. Elphinstone at Marrasdale," observed Crole, "she's the sort of woman who will not speak—until it pleases her to do so! A hard woman—a—d hard!"

"Where is Mrs. Elphinstone to be found?" asked Corkerdale.

"Short's hotel," replied Maythorne.

"Then I think Manners and I had better go there and see her," said Corkerdale. He turned to Eccleshare. "You spoke of leaving England, doctor? When?"

"I've not quite settled the exact date," replied Eccleshare. "I thought about the end of next week."

"Better put it off a bit, doctor," suggested Corkerdale, quietly. "As far as I can see, your evidence will be wanted—and so will your man's. Now," he continued, "I suppose Parslave there is a native of this place, Marrasdale? Just so—then he's very well acquainted with the personal appearance of Mrs. Elphinstone?"

"Known her a many years, sir—over since she came to live at Marrasdale tower," replied Parslave.

"You'd be in the habit of seeing her regularly, Parslave?" suggested the detective.

"Most every day, sir—here and there."

"And you've no doubt that it was Mrs. Elphinstone you saw that night, coming away from the place where you heard the shot fired, and where Mazaroff's dead body was afterwards discovered?"

"Not a doubt about that, sir! Take my solemn 'davy' 'twas Mrs. Elphinstone."

"And you've no doubt either, doctor? though you, of course, being, I gather, a mere visitor to these parts, wouldn't know Mrs. Elphinstone so well?"

"I've no doubt," replied Eccleshare. "Although I was only a visitor, I know Mrs. Elphinstone well enough. My host, Mr. Courthorne, is her nephew. He, Mr. Armistead, and myself dined at Marrasdale tower two of three times during my stay. I often met Mrs. Elphinstone out on the moors, or in the village. I'm positive she was the woman Parslave and I saw coming away that night from Relver's den."

Corkerdale turned to Manners.

"I think we'd better go round to Short's hotel," he remarked.

"That's what I think," agreed Manners. "Can't be left where it is."

We all got up. There was a brief silence. Crole was just going to say something when a knock came at the door. Eccleshare's housekeeper put her head inside.

"There's a young man outside, sir, wants to know if Mr. Maythorne is here?" she said. "Come in a taxi, sir, with an old gentleman. The young man said—if Mr. Maythorne's here which his name is Pickles."

"One of my clerks," muttered Maythorne. "Excuse me!"

Of Course Smart Dog Knew Telephone's Uses

Evidently Dynamite is well named—not the explosive, but the six months' old terrier in Denver which was credited with telephoning the police to liberate him from a jewelry store where he had been inadvertently locked in.

It seems that Dynamite fell asleep under a counter when his master was making a purchase. He failed to wake up until after the store was locked for the night. When he did awake, it was to find the place in darkness, and barks and howls proved of no avail. Finally he jerked the telephone to the floor, thus releasing the receiver from the hook and signaling the operator. She heard the dog's bark and notified the police, with the result that the riot squad hastened to the scene.

Ancient Sea Warriors

The word "viking" is not a racial term. It has a twofold meaning, being both locational and martial. The old Norse spelling of this word was "vikings," which literally meant "inlet man," the basic word "vik" meaning "inlet of the sea." "Viking" was also the Norse synonym of the Anglo-Saxon word "wicing," which was composed of "wi" (war) and "cing" (king) by which was meant a sea warrior.

Whether or not the dog knew what he was doing when he "telephoned" for help the police are at a loss to determine, but the owners of smart dogs will believe that he did know what he was doing.

Power From Niagara

The first application of Niagara power was to a sawmill built by a Frenchman in 1723 on the New York bank near the rapids. At present Niagara power is used in Syracuse, 106 miles from its source, and also in Windsor, Ont., 240 miles away. By treaty the amount of water that may be diverted from Niagara for power purposes has been limited to 30,000 cubic feet per second on the Canadian side and 20,000 cubic feet per second on the United States side. The power is used nearby in electro-chemical industries, in the manufacture of aluminum, ferro-silicon, carborundum, artificial graphite, liquid chlorine, calcium carbide, cyanamide and other products.

Eldorado for Jobless

Old coins, semiprecious stones and irregular pieces of metal found in increasing numbers at Tokyo, Japan, may turn the city's "back yard" into an Eldorado for the unemployed.

It all started when a man out of work happened to be wandering over a large tract of land which has been reclaimed by the city since the earthquake and which will be used for factories. The man found about a dollar's worth of coins the first day and twice that amount the next. The news spread rapidly and a miniature gold rush started before the city authorities stepped in and divided up the land for exploitation by the jobless.

The explanation is that the land used for the reclaiming project was taken from districts which were swept by fire following the earthquake of 1923 and which were made over for the construction of roads and parks. Countless pieces of money and other valuables were left by the flames and never recovered. These are now being dug up after being transported to their new location. The record find to date in the exploited area is a semiprecious stone which used to be part of a ring and which the finder sold for $25.

Early Peddlers

Elderly New Englanders living in the rural sections like to recall the old tin-peddler's carts which appeared at their doors every so often with pans and kitchenware. Those earlier day itinerants were invariably shrewd yet kindly Yankees who gave good value and made friends wherever they went.

Although generally called tin peddlers, they carried a large assortment of miscellaneous household utilities. From door to door they roved, collecting old magazines, rags, lead pipe and other marketable metals, giving from their stock in exchange. The carts opened from the sides to display the articles carried.

Skis to Scotland in Summer

In the exchange of school children between nations of Europe during summer vacation a party of German school boys were recently sent to Killybegs, Scotland. Expecting to find snow-clad mountains, instead of the sun-baked fields, the lads took skis with them.

Children's handkerchiefs often look hopeless when they come to the laundry. Wash with good soap, rinse in water with Red Cross Ball Blue, Adv.

Some persons simply cannot save a dollar; and it is doubly unfortunate if they are men.

When a cynic feels benevolent, he doubts his feelings; at any rate he analyzes them.

Untraveled Clergymen

To have lived within 210 miles of the Atlantic ocean for a lifetime without seeing it is an experience that comes to few in these days of automobiles. Yet fifteen of the seven-entire Vermont clergymen who attended the New England rural church workers' conference near Old Orchard, Maine, had never seen the sea, says the Boston Globe.

New Form of Ice

A nonmelting "ice" invented by Max Heinrich Gurth which has been used for skating purposes in Germany was recently demonstrated in New York city. "Opal Ice," as it is called, is made by adding hot water to a secret chemical composition. The ice is not cold and, of course, cannot be used for refrigerating purposes.

Prices

"Have you a nickel watch?" "No; our lowest price on watches is $1."

If our friends will count 10 before they speak, it will give us a chance to say all we want before they begin.

Others don't want you to be "useful" to them; they want you to admire and like them.

There is much comfort to be got out of the thought that nobody is perfect and not much in trying to be.

A big word may attract attention to your thought when a little word won't.

Among other evils folly has also this, that it is always beginning to live.—Seneca.

The man who has been fooled twice by the same woman is hopeless.

Self-control is often just "What's the use?"

A word to the wise is sufficient; and to the stupid, a mere scowl is.

Scandal continues to be the fashionable society game.

Santo Domingo Destroyed by Hurricane—Great Feat of French Flyers.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD
SANTO DOMINGO, capital of the Dominican republic and oldest settlement of the white race in the New World, was almost entirely destroyed by a tropical hurricane which swept the city for four hours. Nearly every building was razed and the number of dead in the city alone is believed at this writing to be about 500. The scenes of horror and distress are described in brief dispatches that came through after communication with the island had been partially restored. President Rafael Trujillo himself took charge of the relief work that was started immediately, and the entire army of the republic was put to work to aid the suffering. Officials and newspapers of Santo Domingo appealed for help to the United States, and the Red Cross was quick to respond, as it always is. American Minister Curtis called the State department at Washington regarding the situation. He said he had not received reports from the interior of the island but that the loss of life there probably was small. In the neighborhood of the capital all bridges were wrecked, roads rendered impassable and telegraph wires had vanished. It was estimated that the speed of the wind was 150 miles an hour. The terrific storm, moving in from the southeast, was headed for the eastern end of Cuba and the Florida straits. Communications throughout the entire region were disrupted for many hours. The Porto Rico liner Coamo, which was on its way to Santo Domingo, had a narrow escape, passing through the very center of the hurricane. It turned back and managed to reach San Juan in a battered and stripped condition. There were indications in reports received by the weather bureau in San Juan that the storm might turn out into the Atlantic and endanger shipping lanes. The Washington weather bureau believed the Florida coast was not endangered.

as was supposed. It was announced that Coste, who is an officer of the Legion of Honor, would be made a commander and that Bellonte, who is a chevalier, would be made an officer. At the same time they are to get army promotion, Captain Coste to become a major and Bellonte, who is a noncommissioned officer, to become a second lieutenant.

FOLLOWING the successful revolution in Peru, there is threat of a similar movement in Argentina, and also reports tell of decided unrest in parts of Brazil. In Buenos Aires extraordinary military precautions were taken, apparently for the protection of President Hipolito Yrigoyen, and the press demanded the reasons. Then the students began demonstrating against the President and they and various leaders of the country demanded that he resign or take a vacation, leaving the executive power in the hands of Vice President Martinez. There was much confusion in the cabinet, from which General Dolleplane, minister of war, resigned, and the government didn't seem to know just what to do. The public was nervous, too, and business suffered severely. Yrigoyen, who remained in his residence, was reported to be seriously ill.

With Col. Sanchez Cerro firmly established as President of Peru, conditions there settled down to approximate normalcy. Leguia, the deposed President, was taken from the warship on which he attempted to escape and put in prison to await trial. A decree by the revolutionary junta created a national tribunal of accounts to investigate all charges of graft made against former government employees, and those with whom they did business. Sweeping economies in the government services were made and all licensed gambling was suppressed.

Lieutenant Commander Harold B. Grow, the American, who was director general of the Leguia government's air force, was still held in prison under threat of court-martial proceedings on charges of violating the military code. Charles W. Sutton, American engineer, was in the national penitentiary accused of mishandling funds on an irrigation project.

The Brazilian trouble centers in the state of Rio Grande do Sul and Dr. Osvaldo Aranha was said to be leader of a discontented faction that threatened a revolutionary outbreak.

action and asked: "What is Senator Nye going to do about it?"

In his reply Mr. Nye called the method and practice of Ruth's agents "shoddy, scabby, unprincipled, unconscionable and contemptible," and he called a special session of his committee in Chicago for the purpose of questioning those same agents. The information they gave only served to make the situation more confused, with charges and countercharges of shadowing, proposed treachery and threats. Nye then announced an adjournment to September 15, declaring that the committee would not be "diverted from its clearly defined duty by any smoke screen laid down through a will to threaten, intimidate and influence."

PROBABLY J. Reuben Clark of Utah, now counselor of the American embassy in Mexico City, will be selected to succeed Ambassador Dwight W. Morrow. He is said to be the only man at the embassy besides Mr. Morrow who is thoroughly conversant with conditions in Mexico, and is in a position to continue the good relations between the two governments. It is believed that his appointment would meet the warm approval of President Ortiz Rubio.

CHAIRMAN LEGGIE of the federal farm board made a speech before the New York state grange at Syracuse that aroused the protests of organized labor. He said the farmers' increased tax rates are due "largely to the advance in labor rates," and added that "on many manufactured articles 50 per cent of the wholesale price can be directly traced to somebody's pay envelope."

President William Green of the American Federation of Labor immediately telegraphed Mr. Leggie asking him to correct the statement because it was "neither justifiable nor correct."

"Since 1914 the cost of wages to employers has changed six tenths of 1 per cent only. In 1913 employers in the United States paid 10.3 per cent of the wholesale price of their products to workers in wages. In 1927 they paid 17.3 per cent.

WARD T. VAN ORMAN, America's leading balloonist, won the International balloon race for the Gordon Bennett trophy with the Goodyear VIII. The contest started near Cleveland, Ohio, and Van Orman landed his bag near Canton, Mass., having traveled approximately 550 miles. Capt. Ernest Denauyter, pilot of the Belgian entry, the Belgica, was second with 455 miles, but it was said he might be disqualified because an assistant left the balloon via the drug rope to give it a longer flight.

SECRETARY of Agriculture Arthur M. Hyde fears the drought in the Middle West is to continue and to spread northward. He called a meeting of the state chairmen of relief for September 10 in Washington.

"The drought is not over yet," said Mr. Hyde. "It seems that a new drought may be starting in the area north of the belt so hard hit in July and the first part of August. Fortunately, a large part of the production of wheat and small grains is harvested."

The rising prices of corn, live stock, and other commodities due to the drought partly has compensated farmers in the central states for their losses, Mr. Hyde said.

MAJ. GEN. HENRY T. ALLEN, retired, who commanded the American army of occupation in Germany after the armistice, died suddenly of heart disease at Buena Vista Springs, Pa. The general was born at Sharpsburg, Ky., in 1860 and graduated from the military academy at West Point in 1882. Soon after this he made an excursion into Alaska as an explorer, and then, in rapid succession, his army assignments carried him to Russia, Germany, Cuba and the Philippines, and into Mexico with Pershing's punitive expedition. He went to France as a division commander, and later was a corps lieutenant in the A. M. F. Distinguished service won for him the coveted honor of leading the American forces on the Rhine.

Fate of Near-Sighted Explorer

ONE of the strangest chapters in the history of the Yellowstone park country is the story of a near-sighted man, a civilian entirely unaccustomed to the ways of the wilderness, who was lost in the present park region for thirty-seven days with neither weapons, food, nor blankets, and who even lost the help of his spectacles in the midst of that emergency. And scarcely less surprising than this wanderer's adventures is the perplexed fate of the places that were, or sometimes weren't, named after him.

Every visitor to Mammoth Hot Springs, where the present park headquarters are located and where Gardner gateway arrivals begin their circle tours, has seen across the Gardiner river a high plateau called Mt. Everts. This "mountain," and also a "Rescue creek" nearby, commemorate the rescue of Truman G. Everts, fifty-four years old and a member of the Washburn party of exploration in 1870—who, as later information showed, had really been found more than ten miles farther east, at a point nearer Tower falls than Mammoth, and a few miles north or northwest of the petrified tree which most tourists today visit by auto. His name continued to grace the wrong mountain, however; and in the southern half of the park the much nobler peak which had originally been given his name (the very night before he was lost from the party) by virtue of his having climbed to its 10,250-foot summit, was never able to claim that name through having been additionally, and permanently, christened Mt. Sheridan (for Gen. Phil Sheridan, who was also a friend of the park).

Rumors of boiling springs along the upper Yellowstone had been current for three-quarters of a century when a party of nineteen, headed by Gen. Henry D. Washburn, surveyor-general of Montana, set out in 1870 to investigate; "a confirmed set of skeptics" they were, they confessed later. One of the number was Mr. Everts, a former United States assessor for Montana. Their route led straight up the Yellowstone river (thus missing Mammoth Hot Springs) and over the commanding summit since named Mt. Washburn, from which they first saw Yellowstone lake and discovered the winding rim of the great yellow chasm which gave stream and park their names. (Auto travelers from Canyon to Mammoth may now ride over Mt. Washburn, and bus patrons may get this superlative added thrill for only $2 extra).

The party continued southward, going to the east of Yellowstone lake and circling the southern shore. It was there that Mr. Everts became separated from the party on September 9, "150 miles from home, without a blanket or a fire, in so high an altitude that there were frosts every night." The next morning his horse got away from him, and soon the loss of his glasses left this extremely near-sighted man as helplessly hobbled in vision as in travel, unable to see even their signal fires at night. After two days of hunger, he learned to live on the redish-like roots of a thistle, which he was able to cook in the boiling springs. Around him was game in plenty, but he had no way to capture it—except when a blinding snowstorm swept one little numb bird into his hands, or the waves washed up a gull's wing that the famished man was able to turn into soup. Succeeding in making a fire with the lens of a small field glass, he attempted to carry a burning brand thereafter; but one night his fire ignited the woods above him, and added the perils of a forest fire to the terrible call of the coyotes or the sneaking threat of a mountain lion that followed him for days. Then a high plateau brought frigid winds—and grew no thistles. He was starving, and wrecked with mental hallucinations as well as fatigue, when two scouts of a rescue party found him, fallen—and the lion near!

But he lived to be eighty-five!

Cosily Approval

He had gone into the library to get the thing up to her father, and she was anxiously waiting on the front porch.

"Well," said the suitor, when he returned, "he asked me how I was fixed, and I told him I had $2,000 in the bank."

"And what did he say to that?"

"He borrowed it."

There May be Poison in YOUR Bowels!

This compound of fresh laxative herbs, pure pepsin and other pure ingredients will clean you out thoroughly—without griping, sickening or discomfort. Poisons absorbed into the system form souring waste in the bowels, cause that dull, headachy, sluggish, bilious condition; coat the tongue; foul the breath; sap energy, strength and nerve-force. A little of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin will clear up trouble like that gently, harmlessly, in a hurry. The difference it will make in your feelings over night will prove its merit to you.

Dr. Caldwell studied bowel troubles for forty-seven years. This long experience enabled him to make his prescription just what men, women, old people and children need to make their bowels help themselves. Its natural, mild, thorough action and its pleasant taste commend it to everyone. That's why "Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin," as it is called, is the most popular laxative drug stores sell.

Lesson for September 21

JONAH: THE NARROW NATIONALIST REBUKED

LESSON TEXT—Jonah 1:1-5, 10; 4:1-11. GOLDEN TEXT—And Peter opened his mouth, and said, "Of a truth I perceive that God is no respecter of persons; but in every nation he that feareth him, and worketh righteousness, is acceptable to him."

In teaching this lesson it will be necessary to sweep into view the entire Book of Jonah. 1. Jonah's Call and Commission (Ch. 1:1, 2).

Jonah, a Jew, was called to go and preach repentance to a Gentile city. (Gen. 12:1, 2). The story of Jonah graphically portrays the history of Israel as a nation. God separated Israel to be the channel through which his mercy and salvation are to be carried to all nations.

II. Jonah's Flight From Duty (1:3). He turned his back upon God and attempted to flee from his presence. In the same way Israel has become an apostate people.

III. Jonah's Correction (1:4-2:10). 1. Overtaken by a storm (v. 4). Trouble soon came upon the disobedient servant of God. So with the Jews, misfortune after misfortune have overtaken them because they turned from God.

2. Cast overboard (v. 15). In their perplexity the sailors cast lots, and the lot fell upon Jonah. According to his own direction they cast him overboard. God had prepared a great fish which swallowed him.

3. Jonah's deliverance (Ch. 2). Jonah in his affliction turned to God and prayed (James 5:13). God miraculously preserved Israel while in the belly of the fish, and he has miraculously preserved Israel in the heart of the nations. The fish could not digest Jonah, neither can the nations digest Israel.

IV. Jonah's Commission Renewed (Ch. 3). His experience made him willing to do God's bidding.

1. His field (v. 3). He was to go to Nineveh, a large city, the people of which were cruel. Israel's field is the Gentile nations. He was instructed to "preach the preaching" commanded by God.

2. His message (v. 4). They believed that God was speaking to them through Jonah about their sins, and was announcing impending judgment.

3. Repentance of the Ninevites (vv. 5-8). (1) They believed a fast (v. 5). They believed that God was speaking to them through Jonah about their sins, and was announcing impending judgment.

V. Jonah's Behavior (Jonah 4:1-11). 1. He repines at God's action (vv. 1-3). He now makes known the real reason for his flight from duty.

2. God reproves Jonah (vv. 4-11). By means of the gourd God showed him his error. This closing scene affords a striking example of the patience and pity of God in contrast with the hard-heartedness of man.

HEARD ABOUT TOWN

"Wampus Cats" Entertain

According to a recent decision the Methodist Missionary Society, between the Wampus Cats and the F. F. O. Cs', each under captains, Frances Spencer and Clara Snow, respectively, the latter making its proportionate ledge to missions to be guests of the other, the F. F. O. Cs' are royally entertained Wednesday afternoon in the cleanest, conceivable manner at the Spencer home. Since issuing the invitation depicting in a sketch of pen and ink, the fine, proportions of a Wampus Cat in gleeful readiness to devour its prey of "Bird," the F. F. O. Cs' harbored a real sense of fear as to what the entertainment might be.

Arriving at the Spencer gate, their fears became more acute, when they saw a bold sign which read, "Beware!" supported by that ever-watchful Wampus Cat. Contrary to custom, the hospitable doors to the Spencer home were closed—weird and uncanny oneliness pervaded the place and upon closer inspection, another warning as to personal responsibility for all who entered, only seemed to further increase the fears of the Wampus Cats' opponents. The tension was somewhat relieved by the appearance of Mrs. Spencer, only to be left in mystery again with a demand for a PASS! This demand was followed by meows, scats and the fur flew in every direction. These demonstrations they gained admission for the guests, but only to be ushered into the presence of another Wampus Cat, which the were compelled to salute in military style. The F. F. O. Cs' were then put to working embroidery belonging to the society, but done under the eagle eyes of the Wampus Cats. Mrs. R. E. Lemon sang, "I Wouldn't Marry a Cowboy", and Mrs. E. T. Collier gave an exemplification of the Dolly Dozen, assisted by Mrs. Spencer and Mrs. W. W. Walker in her nimble steps, met with the pleasure of the feline tribe.

Worms in the form of long, slick spaghetti, were served to the almost exhausted guests and followed by suckers as delicious as anyone could wish. Noting the depression of defeat on the part of the Wampus Cats, the F. F. O. Cs' through the leadership of Mrs. R. E. Lemon, was revealed in a short time with a song to the tune of "The Bear Went Over the Mountain" to identify the work of the F. F. O. Cs'. At the conclusion, all joined in a riot of fun and wholesome merriment. Delicious refreshments were served at the close of the novel affair.

S. Strickland, assistant forest supervisor, is in the Capitan district this week on exchange matters.

Supervisor Arthur and John Kerr, assistant regional forester from Albuquerque, left for Capitan Wednesday in grazing matters.

Supervisor Arthur and Mr. Morris, assistant supervisor returned the first of the week from Calisbad where they were on special grazing matters.

Frank Joyce, manager for the National Livestock Co., with ranges in the Guadalupe country, has recently purchased special machinery consisting of derrick, cables, engine, drag lines and frames, for the purpose of cleaning out many of the company's stock tanks which have become badly silted up. Gus Fischer, of Alamogordo is in charge of the operation of the machinery. It is alleged that the work of cleaning out the tanks can be done at a considerable less expense with the machinery than with horses or mules.

The officials of the Lincoln Forest classified and listed about ten or fifteen million acres of federal lands lying in the Pecos and Tularosa valleys and the Crow Flats during about fifteen days in August. The personnel of the Lincoln Forest engaged in the work were Rangers W. H. Woods, Jr., and Vance Thomas, and Supervisor O. Fred Arthur and Asst. Supervisor R. N. Morris. Through the work of forest officials in the 11 western public land states all of the federal land outside of the forest lands are being classified for the "Hoover Land Commission" which will meet some time this fall and in all probability make a recommendation relative to the handling of the unappropriated public lands in the 11 western states.

W. WHITE ANNOUNCES DISCOVERY OF ANOTHER BIG CAVE

Carlsbad, N. M., Sept. 15.—Discovery of another gigantic cave near the famed Carlsbad Caverns National Park, in which was found remains of an ancient race believed to antedate the primitive basketmakers, was the claim here tonight by James White, veteran explorer of the southwest.

White, the original discoverer and explorer of the Carlsbad Caverns, noted for their natural splendor brought out mummies—those of a man and a woman and two children, a boy and a girl—to Carlsbad for display to bear at his findings.

He said the mummies were found in an almost perfect state of preservation, similar to those of the ancient Egyptians. Besides the mummies, he also brought to Carlsbad a number of other masonry and lighting equipment which he claimed to have excavated in the cave.

Evidence that the basketmakers inhabited the southwest thousands of years ago was unearthed in the labyrinthine underground passages a few years ago by Carl Livingston, scientist and explorer. White said he believed his discoveries would prove the basketmakers were present in this region by an even older race.

White explained it will take considerable time to attempt to trace the origin of the ancient race, and that

ALTERED BRAND ON COW OWNED BY INDIAN SERVICE

From the Alamogordo News: Faustino Salcido, Jr., of San Patricio, Lincoln county, was arrested last Friday by Cattle Inspector Alfred Hunter and was brought to Alamogordo Saturday by Hunter and Fred Crosby, the latter superintendent of livestock on the Mescalero Agency.

There has been a suspicion for some time that cattle and calves were being stolen from the Mescalero Agency. Alfred Hunter Friday looked over stock belonging to Salcido ostensibly to purchase some calves. He had the owner drive his stock up and noted that a brand on one cow "H. D." had been changed into a "W.P.", and also her calf had W.P. freshly branded.

There was a discrepancy in that the marked-over brand was on the opposite hip from which Salcido placed his brand on his other stock. Hunter told the Mexican that he was not interested in the calves but that he was considerably so in the cow that had been re-branded, and thereupon disclosed that he was the cattle inspector, Salcido had claimed ownership of the cow.

He was arrested and brought to Alamogordo as stated above where he had a hearing before U. S. Commissioner Tom Charles Saturday morning. He waived a hearing, plead not guilty to the charge of cattle larceny, and was admitted to bail in the sum of $1500.

Salcido is said to come of a good family, his father being a respected pioneer citizen of the San Patricio community in Lincoln county.

RULERS OF AMERICA

Mr. James W. Gerard, once United States Ambassador to Germany, made public the other day a list of 64 men who he said were the real rulers of America. There was not a single politician or office-holder in the list. It was composed of the men who operate the great industries, banks and newspaper organizations of the nation.

Some of the nation's richest men were on Mr. Gerard's list, of course; but many men of great wealth were not included. The rich men whom he named who actively manage the investment and operation of their own wealth, like Henry Ford and John D. Rockefeller, Jr. But the great majority of these "Rulers of America" are hired men. They work for other people, manage other people's money and property for them.

Gerard calls "Rulers of America" not because they are men of wealth but because they are men of brains and ability. Walter P. Gifford, president of the American Telegraph and Telephone Company, does not own as much as one percent of the company which he manages. Owen D. Young, Chairman of the General Electric Company, is a hired man working for the company's stockholders. Even power as those men and others similarly situated exert is theirs because they have proved their ability to build and operate great organizations of capital and men.

That is the American principle, in which we all subscribe; that a man is entitled to as much as his individual abilities will permit, provided he does not gain power at the expense of others. And it is safe to say that for sheer ability the men whom Mr.
