Bear hunting has been a failure with the local hunters, so far. We hope some of our boys will soon get Mr. Bruin.

Nearly everyone from around Alto attended the Fair at Carrizozo last week, reporting a fine time while there.

On leaving New York, she stopped over at Buffalo, where she encountered that fierce snowstorm we read about, and coming on to Chicago, the same condition prevailed, so Mrs. Tiffany was glad to get back to warm New Mexico Sunshine.

Air Driller Killed in Rock Slide

Last Saturday morning just after the whistle blew for the men to go to work, Flavian Gonzales, 29, an air driller at the Bonito Dam project in the White mountains, was instantly killed by a rock slide, pinning him under over two tons of rock and shale that fell from the side of the mountain.

Gonzales had just started work in drilling, when he noticed the slide coming. He made a start for safety and would have avoided being caught, but in running, one of his feet struck a rock, throwing him down and before he could regain his feet, the avalanche was upon him. The steam shovel was immediately put to work, the debris removed and the body recovered. It was mangled almost beyond recognition. Word of the accident was sent to Carrizozo and Dr. Johnson, Judge Harvey and Wayne Richard hastened to the scene, where an inquest was held, resulting in a verdict as related above. Gonzales had over $400.00 on his person at the time of the accident.

His home was in Morenci, Arizona, to which place the remains were taken for interment by his father, Eduardo Gonzales, who arrived here Monday and returned home with the body.

Highways in Lincoln County Then--and Now

Last week when ex-governor Hinkle spoke here in Carrizozo he made a vicious attack of the Dillon administration and especially on the road system that we have in the state and Lincoln County.

During the past four years of the Dillon Administration, Lincoln county citizens well know that we have had more roads built than was ever constructed in the entire history of road building in Lincoln county. When we compare the work that has been accomplished in the past four years it is only necessary to mention the fact that during the Hinkle administration the only work that was done was the SURFACING ONLY of 2 miles of road of Federal Aid Project No. 20 -A, Picacho Hill. This piece of road was built under the Mechem administration, but the surfacing was done after Hinkle came into office.

During the Hinkle administration Lincoln county had two teams maintaining the road between Carrizozo and the Chavez county line. During the Hannett administration, immediately following Hinkle, this maintenance east was continued and there was added one team to take care of the road between Carrizozo and Corona and one tractor to maintain all of the road between Carrizozo and Tularosa.

At the present time Lincoln county has 217 miles of good dirt road under maintenance which is handled by improved road machinery. Except for the corrugations, which cannot be prevented on dirt roads in extremely dry weather, all of the county roads, in all directions, are as good as are to be found anywhere in the entire state. All the work done under the Hannett Democratic Administration in Lincoln county was to change about six miles of road south of Carrizozo. This was done by clearing the Right-of-Way and a small amount of third rate grading.

Mr. Hinkle made claim to F. A. P. 82, the Hondo-Tinnie-Picacho Road, but the contract for this piece of road, as the records will show, was let under the Mechem administration.

Among other things charged by Mr. Hinkle in his speech here, was that the southeastern district composed of the counties of Lincoln, Otero, Chavez, Eddy, Lea, Curry, Roosevelt and De Baca, had received from the State Highway Department only about two million dollars of the twenty million dollars that has been spent in the state during the Dillon administration. As a matter of fact the total amount expended in the eight counties of the Southeastern District (not including equipment) as shown by the records of the State Highway Department, is a little in excess of $4,900,000.00. This amount of money includes the appropriations that have been made up to December 31st of this year, but do not include any part of the General Office Expense at Santa Fe, the Road Sign Fund and the Highway Service Bureau. If the Southeastern District was charged with their prorata share of these three funds the expenditure in the Southeastern District would be in excess of five million dollars.

In order that the people of Lincoln county may have a better idea of what has been done in our home county, we submit herewith a detailed statement of the Lincoln county expenditures during the four years of the Dillon administration.

ANCHO NOTES

The living pictures, "Sweethearts in Song," presented by the Woman's Club for the benefit of the school, brought out a good crowd and the proceeds exceeded expectations. Much credit is due Mrs. Hightower, the pianist, upon whose unflinching efforts the success of the program largely depended. Of the young ladies who posed in the picture frame, it can be said that each made the choice most lovely, very difficult for the lover, Cap Straley in search of a bride and the singers, though unseen, made their presence tunefully apparent. Little Anayllis Frame sang "Springtime in the Rockies" very sweetly while Miss Edwina Peters in her usual good form gave a recitation, "Our New Mexico." The prologue continued in the Finale presented by Virgil Peters as "Old Man Ancho," being persuaded by Mrs. Drake as "Woman's Club," of the usefulness of the club to a town. Others in the cast were, Mmes. Roscoe, Pruett, Messrs. Drake, J. A. Pruett and Miriam Hightower. Beginning with a delightful overture by Mrs. Frame, the program ended with the appearance of Billy Walsh in a very successful impersonation of John Barrymore, followed by Mr. Walsh's own interpretation of "The Devil."

Owing to the entertainment being given at Ancho on the date set by the Republicans, they postponed their rally until the 28th, which consideration was rewarded by a large gathering. Mr. Kelsey, candidate for Assessor announced that the Republican County Central Committee had authorized him to contribute $10.00 to the fund being raised for running water for the school. The Woman's Club served pie and coffee and added another substantial addition to the fund.

county highways consisting of Patrol No. 27, 217 miles 176,344.85

Total expended in Lincoln County $766,601.45

From the above maintenance, it will be seen that the average cost per mile within Lincoln County has been $203.16 per mile.

Considerable construction has been done out of this fund that has been charged to maintenance where no appropriations have been made to take care of needed construction. The average cost to the State has been $200 to $225 per mile.

From the above it will be seen that the State Highway Department with Lincoln County when it is taken into consideration that there are 31 counties in the State and the total expenditure during the Dillon administration is approximately $20,000,000.00.

The above figures reflect the records of the State Highway Department and are given for the purpose of showing the public and the citizens of Lincoln County that Gov. Hinkle either intentionally misrepresented the facts or did not know what he was talking about.

Botts' Afternoon Meeting Attracts Good Audience

The Botts party, consisting of the candidate for Governor; Livingston, candidate for Attorney General and Governor R. C. Dillon, arrived on schedule time on the good roads, which ex-governor Hinkle said we "had not," and the district courtroom was filled with people of all parties who had left their business interests long enough to pay their respects to the distinguished visitors.

S. W. Kelsey introduced Mr. Livingston and Isidoro Armijo was interpreter. Mr. Livingston showed how Arthur Seligman, candidate for governor on the Democratic ticket had dodged his taxes and paid them off after five years of delinquency, at 28c on the dollar, and admonished the people not to change a certainty for an uncertainty.

Next in order came Gov. Dillon, who presented facts and figures to show that the increase in our educational advantages and our good roads, all of which were made possible by the increase in the gasoline tax, did not cost the taxpayer one cent, but on the other hand it created funds with which to increase the number of our schools and also increased the salaries of our teachers, to say nothing of the good roads we are now enjoying over the state.

Next came Judge Botts, who in his brief talk, made one of the best and clearest addresses we have heard within the walls of the courthouse. His talk was mild and gentle, in language that everyone could easily understand and nothing that could in the least, injure the feelings of anyone. Said he had not asked anyone to vote for him and told the people to carefully consider the matter and vote for what they thought was just and right. After the meeting, people of all political complexions came forward to shake hands with the courteous guest whose time was so limited that he could not remain longer. The party left for Tularosa to hold an early evening meeting and to hold one later on last night at Alamogordo.

Dr. and Mrs. R. E. Blaney had as their guests last week Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Grayson of Riverside, Calif. Mrs. Grayson and Mrs. Blaney were school-mates, and they greatly enjoyed recalling reminiscences of their early days while at school. After the pleasant visit, the Graysons departed for their home in Riverside.

Recommend Apple Compote for Halloween Dinner.

Here's a recipe from the bureau of home economics which you might like to try for a Halloween dinner, as it's gay and seasonable.

4 tart apples Red coloring or
2 cups sugar red cinnamon
2 cups water candies
½ tsp. salt

Select tart apples that will hold their shape when cooked, pare, and core them. In a pan large enough to hold all the apples make a syrup of the sugar and water, add the red coloring or red candies, and salt; put in the apples, cover, and simmer until the apples are tender when pierced with a straw. Drain, and place at once on plates for serving, fill the centers with tart jelly, and on top add a spoonful of hard sauce, grated coconut, or chopped nuts. Or the apples may be served cold with whipped cream.

The syrup may be used in fruit drinks, or more added to it and another lot of apples cooked in it.

Broiled Tomatoes

Wash tomatoes, remove the stem ends, cut in half, put in a greased, shallow baking dish, add salt, pepper, and melted butter or other fat to season, and place under the flame of a broiling oven, far enough from the heat to allow the tomatoes to cook before browning. Broil for 20 to 30 minutes, or until tender and lightly browned. Serve hot garnished with parsley on crisp buttered toast.

Meat Croquettes Are Economical; Help Use Up Leftovers

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Meat croquettes are not hard to make. For they are best mixed and rolled in crumbs several hours earlier. They are economical in the home for the same reason they are economical in a restaurant—they help use up leftover cooked meat that is not shapely to serve as cold cuts or in other ways.

Some important points about making croquettes successfully are noted by the bureau of home economics of the United States Department of Agriculture, which gives the recipe below. Mold the croquettes long enough in advance for the egg coating to set. Fry them in plenty of mild-flavored fat, using a kettle with a basket. Heat the fat to just the right temperature—350 degrees Fahrenheit—and do not let it smoke. Fry only two or three croquettes at a time, and watch them constantly. As soon as they are brown, remove them from the fat, and drain them on absorbent paper so they will not be greasy. Keep them hot in a slightly warmed oven until all the croquettes are fried.

The following recipe is for beef croquettes, made from leftovers, but any cooked lean meat or chicken may be used:

Beef Croquettes.

2 cups ground lean cooked beef
1 cup mashed potato
2 tbs. gravy or stock
1 tbs. onion juice
1 tbs. chopped parsley
1 tbs. butter
Tabasco sauce, as desired
Salt
Pepper
Dry grated sifted bread crumbs
1 egg beaten up with 1 tbs. water
Fat for deep frying

Cook the parsley in the butter, and mix with the meat, potato, gravy, and other seasonings, thoroughly. Mold into croquette shapes. Dip into the egg mixture, roll in the bread crumbs, and let stand an hour or longer to dry the coating. Heat the fat in a deep, vessel to 350 degrees Fahrenheit, or until a cube of bread browns in 40 seconds. Place two or three croquettes at a time in a frying basket and lower slowly into the hot fat for two minutes or until they are a golden brown. Remove the croquettes and drain on a sheet of paper. Serve hot with parsley garnish and tomato sauce.

To make softer croquettes, omit the mashed potato, and either increase the gravy to three-fourths cupful, or use three-fourths cupful of white sauce. To prepare gravy or white sauce thick enough to act as a binder for a croquette mixture, blend three table-spoonfuls flour with one table-spoonful butter, add three-fourths cupful meat stock or milk, and cook in a double boiler, stirring until smooth. Mix the gravy or sauce with the meat and seasonings.

Fashion is decidedly in a black-and-white mood. Every passing moment marks an increasing enthusiasm for this striking combination.

The latest gesture of style leaders is to express the black-and-white vogue in terms of velvet. For evening it is done in some such way as lovely black velvet touched with white bead work or garnished with trimmings of real lace or enriched with novel details of snowy ermine. That which is very new is the wearing of white, especially carved ivory jewelry with queenly gowns of shimmering sheer black velvet, the classic lines of which are of utmost distinction.

However, the lure of velvet as expressed in black and white does not end with the evening mode. In fact the moments of its triumph-supreme are recorded at afternoon bridge party or at five o'clock tea or at any of the smart daytime affairs which crowd the autumn social calendar.

This model is one of the swankiest of into importations. It is a striking example of how completely and how effectively an afternoon costume can go black-and-white this season. It is made of a thin-as-chiffon black transparent velvet which is striped. It is most delectably worked with its own stripes. Black and white buttons are its one item of trimming. By the way, this is a "button season," most everything has buttons on it if there is any possible excuse of putting them there.

The belt which does its part in giving this dress "class" is fastened with an onyx and brilliant buckle. The bore is of black transparent velvet, the shots of black suede.

There are as many types of costumes this season as there are types of women, and the velvet suit is one of them. In their eagerness to play

SOME TIMELY FOOD SUGGESTIONS AND FAVORITE RECIPES

By NELLIE MAXWELL

In many dishes where cornstarch is used for thickening, tapioca may be substituted. Many object to cornstarch largely because it is not well cooked. Any starchy substance needs cooking to burst the starch cells and make it digestible.

The following is something new and worth trying. Cook one-third of a cupful of quick cooking tapioca with one teaspoonful of salt, one-fourth teaspoonful of pepper and two cupfuls of scalded milk in a double boiler until the tapioca is clear. Pour into small deep pan and chill thoroughly. Unmold and cut into one-third inch slices. Fry thinly sliced bacon until crisp. Remove from the pan, dip the tapioca slices in flour and fry until a golden brown. This is served with the bacon.

Cranberry Relish.—Cook one-half cupful of tapioca with one-fourth teaspoonful of salt, one-fourth cupful of raisins and one quart of cranberry juice and pulp strained and heated, for fifteen minutes in a double boiler or until the tapioca is clear, stirring frequently. Add one cupful of sugar, one-fourth cupful of walnut meats and four oranges peeled and quartered. Chill and serve as a sweet relish with fowl or meat.

Lemon Sauce.—Cook three table-spoonfuls of tapioca in two cupfuls of boiling water in a double boiler until clear, stirring frequently. Add two table-spoonfuls of butter, three-fourths of a cupful of sugar, three table-spoonfuls of lemon juice, two teaspoonfuls of grated lemon rind and eight marshmallows cut into small pieces. Serve poured over cake for pudding.

Chicken Croquettes.—Make one cupful of thick white sauce, using chicken stock with milk or cream. Take two cupfuls of minced chicken, one-half teaspoonful each of salt, celery salt and onion salt and one-fourth teaspoonful of paprika. Mix all the ingredients, cool, then form into small croquettes, cone or cylinder shaped. Roll in beaten egg to which two table-spoonfuls of water have been added, then in crumbs and set away to chill. Fry in hot fat and serve with mushroom sauce.

one teaspoonful of salt, one-fourth teaspoonful of pepper and two cupfuls of scalded milk in a double boiler until the tapioca is clear, stirring frequently. Add one cupful of sugar, one-fourth cupful of walnut meats and four oranges peeled and quartered. Chill and serve as a sweet relish with fowl or meat.

Coconut Cream Filling.—Scald two cupfuls of milk, add two-thirds of a cupful of sugar, four table-spoonfuls of flour, one-fourth teaspoonful of salt, one table-spoonful of melted butter, three egg yolks, one-half teaspoonful of vanilla and one-fourth teaspoonful of lemon extract. Cook and cool. Cover with a meringue, using the egg whites and three table-spoonfuls of sugar, sprinkle with one-half cupful of grated coconut. Brown.

Fruit Dessert.—Take sliced oranges, using six; add one cupful of shredded dates and one-half cupful of shredded almonds. Arrange in layers, adding a little sugar, if needed, with a pinch of salt for the nuts.

that he had been dreaming the conversation with the toad.

But the toad was still by him, and from the toad's honest though ugly face, he knew he would be loyal.

And that was just what the little toad companion turned out to be loyal and good! Dick was so grateful that he had been sent to him, and the toad liked his new home and his new master so very, very much, too.

EVENING STORY FOR THE CHILDREN WHEN THE SANDMAN COMES

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

The little toad had been sent to a cousin in the East. The small boy who had sent him had hated to part with him, but his cousin was not very strong and he knew that the toad would be a nice, cheerful companion.

It was a very unselfish thing for him to do after he had tamed his little toad, which was a horned toad, and which was the kind that needed very little in the way of nourishment.

Mr. Horned Toad looked about him after he had arrived.

"It's very simple here," said the little boy, whose name was Dick. "I am afraid you won't like it as well as you did out West."

"We have no oranges growing on our trees—only apples. And our flowers do not grow so high."

Dick was afraid the toad might want to leave him—even after his long journey.

Now, Dick was sitting in a lounging chair in the garden and the toad was

"It is warmer there, too, and you may like it to be warmer. I imagine a toad might like it out there, for I think perhaps a toad likes the warmth."

He was saying all this because he hoped, so much the toad would want to stay, and he wanted him to hear all about it right away so that he would know and not be disappointed later on.

"Tut, tut, tut," grunted the toad. "You really aren't a toad and so you know nothing about it."

"Where I have come from they make a great fuss over us, but we are all thought of alike."

"Here I am a little different, a little odd, I can be considered an object of curiosity."

"I will enjoy it here I am certain. Besides, you can talk all day and all night about the goodies that grow on trees. They mean nothing to me. I wouldn't eat them."

"What do I need of such things when I have air. I am a horned toad! I like air. Nothing is finer than that. All the food in the world doesn't compare to the air."

And the toad grunted again.

"Never fear, Dick, I am going to stay here with you. And while you are growing strong I shall be around to amuse you."

"Because you don't feel strong enough to play this summer, I shall be such a funny little pet that you will get well sooner, and you will be able to join the other boys when they start their games in the fall."

Dick's eyes opened, and he knew

Pumpkin Pie Is Favorite for Thanksgiving

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Of all the Thanksgiving dinner desserts pumpkin pie is probably the greatest favorite. Perhaps the bride, trying her hand for the first time at the family holiday gathering, will have more doubts, though, about making the pie than preparing any other item on the menu. The bureau of home economics of the United States Department of Agriculture suggests that she make it the day before, leaving herself free to attend to the turkey and "fixins," with the comfortable feeling that a good dessert is all ready on the pantry shelf. Let her use whatever recipe for pie crust she has. Already tried, or get one from her favorite cookbook. The shell should be pre-baked, that is, cooked until delicately colored, before the filling given below is put in it. The pie is then cooked in a very moderate oven because of the eggs and milk it contains. When it is done it should be set like a custard. Squash may be used in the same way as pumpkin, but it should be drained of excess liquid.

Filling for Pumpkin or Squash Pie.

1 1/2 cups cooked pumpkin or squash
3/4 cup milk
1/2 cup sugar
1 tsp. cinnamon
1/4 tsp. salt
2 eggs
1 tbs. butter
Pastry

Heat the pumpkin or squash, milk, sugar, spices and salt in a double boiler, add the beaten eggs and butter, and mix well. Pour the hot filling into a baked pastry shell and bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees Fahrenheit) until the filling sets. A spoonful of whipped cream may be served with each portion.

USE OF KITCHEN WALL SPACE SHOULD GET CONSIDERATION

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

One of the tests of convenience in a kitchen is good use of wall space in arranging the various work centers. The "kitchenette" in the modern apartment is the final word in getting all necessary equipment for food preparation into the smallest possible space. The kitchens and serving places on yachts and ships, too, have long been models of efficient compactness. The dining car is another excellent illustration of what may be done with limited, narrow, serving quarters even when meals are provided for a number of people.

Fortunately most of us who live in houses do not need to compress our kitchen workshop into quite such cramped quarters as the average kitchenette, ship's "galley," or dining car pantry. Too large a kitchen means a great deal of walking about in doing the housework, so we are always glad to strike a happy medium with a kitchen floor area ranging from about 64 to 108 square feet. The exact size will usually depend on the shape of the room, the placing of doors and windows, and the wall space required for such large equipment as the stove, sink, kitchen cabinet, and refrigerator. Sometimes a still smaller area can be made convenient by placing the refrigerator elsewhere and disposing with a ready-built kitchen cabinet. The picture, which was taken by the United States Department of Agriculture, shows how this was done in a farm home, by means of a built-in cupboard at one end of the kitchen. A jog in the kitchen wall on this side was utilized for shelves holding the glass jars of dry staple supplies, and for a closet with sections of convenient shape for holding the containers usually put in a cabinet. One of these sections has a sliding panel instead of a hinged door.

An enamel-topped table on casters takes the place of the counter on a kitchen cabinet. Above it are placed racks for the rolling pin and seasonings, and hooks for small utensils that can be hung up.

Of six blacksmith shops remaining in Dodge City, Kan., only two are equipped by shoe horses.

He was a little bit lonely for his home and his former master, but still all this was very new and exciting!

It did seem nice to have much room after the box and the moving train.

"Oh, I feel so sleepy," said Dick, and before he knew it his eyes were tightly shut and he seemed to see the toad hop upon his hand and then to the arm of his chair!

The toad put his head on one side and then on the other. He rolled his queer looking eyes and gave a low grunt.

"You are the strangest looking little creature I have ever seen," said Dick.

"I do hope you won't leave me. I am so afraid you will, because I know how you have oranges and peaches and all such wonderful things growing all about where you lived."

SIMON PETER, FROM WEAKNESS TO STRENGTH

LESSON TEXT—Mark 8:27-29; Luke 22:31-34; John 16:25-27; 1:16-17. GOLDEN TEXT—Now when they saw the boldness of Peter and John, and perceived that they were unlearned and ignorant men, they marvelled; and they took knowledge of them, that they had been with Jesus.

PRIMARY TOPIC—A Weak Man Becomes Strong. JUNIOR TOPIC—A Weak Man Becomes Strong. INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—How a Weak Man Becomes Strong. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—How Christ Gives Strength.

I. Peter Confessing Christ (Mark 8:27-29)

The time was near at hand when Christ should make the supreme offering of himself for sins on the cross. Knowing the tragic experience through which the disciples would pass because of it, he sought to prepare them for it by leading them into the apprehension of the cardinal doctrines of the Christian faith such as: the integrity of his person, atoning death, resurrection, and second coming.

Peter's confession was provoked by two questions of Jesus.

1. "Whom do men say that I am?" Opinions differed, but all recognized him to be a teacher or a prophet with more than human authority and power.

2. "Whom say ye that I am?"

Jesus persistently claimed to be the very Son of God. He would have his disciples to possess a personal and experiential knowledge of himself as to being God manifest in the flesh.

11. Christ Warning Peter (Luke 22:31-34)

1. He told him of Satan's desire concerning him (v. 31). Satan is constantly striving to destroy men.

2. Christ's prayer for Peter (v. 32). He prayed that Peter's faith fall not, nor that he should escape the sittings.

3. Peter's confidence (v. 33).

His fall began when he refused to listen to Christ's words about the cross. Believers begin to weaken when they no longer desire to hear about Christ crucified.

4. Denial announced (v. 34).

This was to take place three times before the crowing of the cock.

111. Peter Denying His Lord (John 18:25, 27)

1. Before the servant maid (vv. 15-18).

Peter blundered in attempting to follow Jesus at this time (John 13:30). Presumptuous boldness frequently leads into embarrassing positions. Under the taunt of the Jewish maid he openly denied the Lord.

2. Before the servants and officers (v. 25).

Peter was now warming himself at the enemy's fire. When questioned, he denied his relation to the Lord. Separation from everything that is opposed to the Lord is necessary in order to have a clear testimony (II Cor. 6:14-18).

3. Before the kinsman of Malchus (v. 26).

This man had seen Peter with Jesus in Gethsemane (v. 10) when Peter rashly cut off the ear of Malchus. He put the question straight to Peter, "Did I not see thee in the garden with him?" At the utterance of the third denial, the cock crew, reminding Peter of Christ's warning (Mark 14:72).

IV. Peter's Restoration (John 21:15-17)

Peter had thrice denied his Lord. Therefore, before his reinstatement in the Lord's service he must thrice confess his love for Jesus. In this reinstatement and commission of Peter is set forth the motive and nature of the service which has Christ's approval in all times. Love for Christ, not primarily love for the sheep, proves the genuine shepherd.

1. "Feed my lambs."

The word "feed" as well as "lambs" signifies that the work here enjoined is that of nurturing babes in Christ.

2. "Feed my sheep."

The word here means to feed, guide, correct, and lead the maturer classes of Christians. It carries with it not alone responsibility of feeding, but corrective discipline. Failure will inevitably follow if this be attempted without love.

3. "Feed my sheep."

This doubtless relates to the care of aged Christians. The word "feed" returns somewhat to the meaning as in the first instance where he says, "Feed my lambs," so that the minister's responsibility to care for the aged is equivalent to that of the young. Peter was to express devotion to Christ by a martyr's death.

Can I Learn to Fly?

by William R. Nelson

Three Point Landing

LITTLE by little the student pilot takes on more and more responsibility in handling the plane. And he learns each step, or half-step, by that lot of all systems—experience.

The next lesson was a continuation of the last one. But, and I didn't realize it at the time, my instructor added a responsibility he had been carrying for me.

After I had taxied out, taken off and was climbing, apparently satisfactorily, to the 1,000-foot level where most of my lessons took place, my instructor spoke through the tube connected to my ears.

"As your altimeter shows 1,000 feet or about that, push forward on the stick and put the plane in level flight. Then cut the motor to 1,450 revolutions per minute. That is cruising speed for this plane. Look at your air-speed indicator. On a normal day it should register about 70 miles an hour at 1,450 r. p. m."

As we rounded the pattern, turning, leveling out, flying straight ahead, again, leveling out, finally making the third turn, he spoke again.

"Now cut the motor and start your glide. Hold the nose down in the glide and remember to gun the motor to clear it. Keep those wings up. That's it. Now relax. This is fun. Let's see you smile," and he turned around and grinned back at me.

My landings were getting a trifle better. I was beginning to "feel" the plane's changes of position and loss of speed, and quickly noticed whenever a wing got "down," which meant we were tipped to that side.

"Watch out both sides and judge your altitude in landing by looking ahead about 100 yards. Don't look straight down. Don't watch out one side only. Keep an eye on that nose. Make it come up but keep the plane from climbing. That's fine. You're getting the idea."

I had made a "three-point" landing (the wheels and tail-skid touching earth simultaneously). "How much my instructor helped I was too busy to notice. But it was undoubtedly "some."

Except for my instructor's occasional help, I was now "flying the ship" completely. I taxied out, took-off, made the turns, reduced the engine speed to "cruising," cut for the glide to earth, "cleared" the motor, and made the landings.

I did all of it, but, the way I felt, I had no desire to do it alone.

Doing It All Himself

TO EVERY aviation student comes that day when he or she vows: "I'll take her off, fly around and land again without help from my instructor." Keeping that vow was just one postponement after another with me.

As it would spoil the accomplishment to ask him not to help, I resolved to make each maneuver so nearly perfect he'd not have to help in any way.

Each trip something was not quite the way it should have been and he'd have to kick the rudder, bring up a wing, yank the stick, gun the motor, or tell me something through the speaking tube.

"Keep a constant lookout for other planes," he had to caution me. "I've been doing it for you but you must learn to do it for yourself. We are moving at high speed and so are the other fellows. We cover distances quickly. See that plane under us? It is your responsibility to keep out of its way."

We made a half-dozen trips around the pattern. My take-offs were smooth and my landings were improving. My judgment of distances was getting better. Judging distance from above is different from anything I had ever experienced. There was nothing I could use as a "yard stick" to measure it. And it is surprising how small common objects—automobiles, telephone poles, buildings, trees—appear from 1,000 feet up.

My instructor may have sensed my desire for a "perfect" trip. He said nothing as we started forward, left the ground, and climbed steadily toward the 1,000-foot level.

I leveled out, reduced the motor speed to 1,450 r. p. m., made the first turn, leveled out, flew straight ahead, turned, flew straight, turned again and cut the motor to idling for the glide back to earth.

My fourth turn was a bit wobbly but he said nothing. I gunned the motor frequently. Probably too frequently. (I was afraid he'd have to tell me to do so).

As we approached the ground I leveled out of the glide and began working the stick back. The plane began to lose speed and I could feel it settling earthward. At last it touched the ground and rolled to a stop. He had not spoken.

"No, I didn't touch the controls that time. Just sat here and enjoyed the ride." Was his answer to my query. (C. 1926, Western Newspaper Union.)

Large animals such as cougars, lynx and even bears very often lose their lives as a result of an attack on a lowly porcupine. Quills lodge in the animal's mouth, swelling it to a size that makes eating impossible and the victim slowly starves to death.

In cold weather motors usually are hard to start, but Conoco Germ-Processed oil actually makes starting easier!

safe starting—and quick starting, even at zero temperatures. Change now to this new oil. Use it all winter for motor safety and economy. You always will find Germ-Processed Motor Oil at stations bearing the Conoco Red Triangle.

There are two good reasons for this. First: Germ-Processed oil is thoroughly de-waxed and does not congeal at low temperatures. Second: Germ-Processed oil does not drain away during periods of motor idleness. The initial "turning over" process is made easier by the protective lubricating film which is on duty before you touch the starter. The usual 40% to 60% of motor wear occurring during the starting period is greatly reduced. Conoco Germ-Processed Motor Oil gives you

The County Republican Ticket

The candidates for County Commissioners, Messrs. Lutz, Mirabal and Salcido are all men of ability and fully capable of handling the different problems that will come before the board in 1931-32. Mr. Mirabal served two terms as deputy clerk of Socorro county and having that experience, he will, if elected, be well acquainted with the problems with which that board will have before them. Mr. Salcido is a ranchman in the lower valley and as the board will have business with which the stockmen are interested, he will be able to know their needs and give them proper service at all times. Mr. Lutz needs no introduction to the people of the county. He is, as we have said before, "the man who does things." His many friends over the county will be glad to see his name on the ticket, for they know he will make the kind of a commissioner the county needs, as will his two associates.

Mrs. Alice M. French, candidate for re-election as Superintendent of Schools, has served the educational matters of the county so well in the past term that she should be re-elected and will be by a large majority as a tribute to her loyalty to education and the zeal she has manifested in the betterment of our school system. Her record is something to be proud of and on that record she asks the support of the voters.

S. E. "Ben" Greisen, is another of our loyal officials who stands on his record in the county clerk's office. Ben has been on the job at all times and the natural courtesy with which he has handled callers at his office seeking information, has won for him the esteem of the people regardless of political followings. With all due regard to past county clerks, Ben has made one of the best and most painstaking officials we have ever had and should be returned by a flattering majority.

As candidates for the offices of Treasurer and Assessor, we have two men whose records in office have been unquestioned. Messrs. R. A. Duran for Treasurer and S. W. Kelsey for Assessor, are men who have served the county in the past and if the people desire officials that will fill the bill, these gentlemen are the ones to vote for.

Johnny Brady, candidate for re-election as County Sheriff, has made a splendid official.

His nerve and firmness in preserving the peace of affairs over the County has made him a host of friends who will remember him when it comes to vote on election day.

To represent Lincoln County, Hilario Mass, a young man of ability, who, if elected would be an able representative for the in the County, taught school for several years, and is in every way capable of attending to the affairs of the office to which he has been nominated.

For Probate Judge, to mention the name of Judge Elerdo Chavez, is a boost for him, from the fact that he has made a splendid record for himself while in office. The Judge's record for active duty is unquestioned and he will undoubtedly be returned to that office with a good majority.

A. H. Harvey for County Surveyor has no opposition, on account of his reliable service and professional ability.

A vote for the Straight Republican Ticket is a vote for Good Administration.

"Albuquerque's Best"

Albuquerque, New Mexico

Let's swat this NOW!

VOTERS of New Mexico, you will be asked on November 4 to express your approval or disapproval of the proposed tobacco tax, amounting to an added two cents on each package of 20 cigarettes, one cent on each five-cent cigar, and various rates on all other tobacco products. This is your first chance to participate in a referendum in this state—and not only that, but it is your golden opportunity to defeat an obnoxious and burdensome piece of legislation.

Mark well what this means:

A "nuisance tax" if there ever was one; a precedent that may pave the way for similar tax burdens on candy, patent medicines, soft drinks or canned goods; a penalty against smokers on top of an already whacking big Federal tax.

SMOKERS, here is your chance to speak your mind in very definite terms.

This added burden on tobacco may seem small to legislators, and doubtless the state needs the money, but the increase will not seem unimportant to the thousands who must watch the pennies, yet who know and value the unfailing solace of a good smoke.

To such men any increase at all is a hardship—and they deserve sympathy!

TAXES ALREADY HIGH

Beyond even the money involved, however, lies a bigger consideration—a principle; in short, a question of common fairness.

Smokers today are already paying the highest revenue in history to the Federal Government for their tobacco.

The little green stamp that you now see on every package of cigarettes, box of cigars, or tin of tobacco represents the amount you pay in to the Government.

For example, the tax you pay on cigarettes alone is SIX cents for every package of 20!

Thus, smokers are already bearing far more than their share.

IS IT FAIR?

Is it not unfair to select, out of the whole population of the state, the one class which is already paying an excessive tax—and then to pile a state tax on top of it?

Does any logical or fair basis exist for thus discriminating against smokers only, and subjecting them to this double taxation?

In plain language, such a tax is beyond all reason. No other commodity, necessity or luxury is so taxed. Why single out tobacco?

WHY PICK ON SMOKERS?

Most other taxes are based on wealth and income—this one is not. It is a daily tax on you because you smoke.

Smokers, are you going to allow yourselves to become tax victims and be penalized day after day for the privilege of enjoying tobacco?

So, if you love a good smoke—and who doesn't—rise up and ACT. Go to the polls and say NO.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Grave Warning Concerning Unemployment Is Issued by the A. F. of L.

UNLESS America's financial and industrial leaders live up to their responsibility to devise a solution for the problem of recurrent periods of unemployment, the present social order cannot be maintained.

Such is the dictum of the American Federation of Labor as expressed by President William Green at the convention in Boston. Labor's combined program for an ultimate solution of unemployment and for immediate relief was favored by Mr. Green and was adopted after a debate in the course of which the federal government and the federal reserve board were severely criticized.

Reduction in hours of work, stabilization of industry, efficient management in production and sales policies, establishment of a nation-wide system of unemployment exchanges, adequate records on employment, use of public works to meet cyclical unemployment, a study of all proposals for relief and education for life.

To meet the immediate problem of relief the delegates instructed the federation's executive council to go to Washington at the conclusion of the convention and ask President Hoover to appoint a national committee which shall recommend measures that may be put into effect at once—such plans to be carried out by private and quasi-public agencies, departments of the federal, state, and municipal governments, counties and school districts.

The executive council was also instructed to call upon all state federations of labor and all affiliated central bodies to request their respective governors and mayors to co-operate with the national committee by state and city committees.

The committee on resolutions reported that in accord with labor's traditional policy, it was opposed to compulsory unemployment insurance, and at its suggestion all resolutions favoring this were referred to the executive council.

DURING the debates Secretary of the Navy Adams was charged with working contrary to President Hoover's policy of maintaining public work at present wage levels, particularly at the Philadelphia navy yard and the Newport torpedo base.

The federation's committee on shorter work day and week reported that the shorter work week was necessary but in view of the tremendous economic and social questions involved in its establishment proposed that the executive council give the matter of the shorter day its immediate consideration, "secure all available statistical information related to the problem," and then report to next year's convention on how short, in its opinion, the work day should be. Labor is already pledged to the five-day week.

While this shortening of the work day may seem a radical change, it falls to parallel the drastic change which has taken place in industry which has so enormously increased per capita production, the committee report stated.

Communists of Boston undertook to stage a demonstration just outside the convention hall where the federation was in session, and when the police tried to disperse them the worst riot the city has had in many years resulted. Hundreds of men and women fought the police desperately.

ures for temporary relief are being taken by many state and municipal governments.

IN GERMANY the unemployment situation is probably more immediately critical than elsewhere. The government is determined to enforce a policy of drastic economy and in line with this the official arbitrator recently ordered a cut of 6 per cent in the wages of the metal workers of Berlin.

Such a move of the relaying were exceedingly stormy. Dr. Paul Loebe, Socialist, was re-elected speaker despite the opposition of the Fascists and Communists. Franz Stoepel, Fascist, was chosen first vice president. The first Fascist threat to the government was beaten off when Ernst Scholz, Fascist candidate for speaker, lost to Loebe on the second ballot. The Fascist might have driven a wedge between the government and the Socialists if Loebe had been defeated, for the life of the cabinet depends largely on support from the Socialists, numerically the largest party in the Reichstag.

BRAZIL'S civil war was marked by fierce and continuous fighting on many fronts. In their communiques both sides claimed victories, but the preponderance of evidence was rather in favor of the revolutionists. The main efforts of the rebels were directed toward the capture of Sao Paulo, and their bulletin said they were getting near that important city. The insurgents also were battling their way toward Rio de Janeiro, winning a battle only 130 miles northeast of the capital city.

The federal forces, according to the official notice, have maintained their lines established in the state of Minas Geraes, in no case are retreating, and in a number of instances are making considerable gains, chief among these being the defeat of Minas Geraes insurgent troops at the Mantiqueira tunnel.

Secretary of State Stimson announced in Washington that the United States would permit the Brazilian government to purchase munitions of war in this country, and that arms shipments to the revolutionists would not be allowed. The cruiser Pensacola left Guantanamo for Brazilian waters to protect American interests.

SPAIN seems to be on the verge of a revolution, the first open signs of which were anti-royalist demonstrations by students of Barcelona university. The institution was temporarily closed. This, however, is said to be merely a symptom of the outbreak that is to come. The military, the republican federals and the Catalan separatists are alleged to have reached an agreement to work together for the overthrow of the monarchy, though the ultimate objectives of these groups are very divergent. Neutral observers in Spain, however, believe that the Berenguer government will succeed in suppressing the insurgents though the monarchy is seriously threatened.

RELIEF for the unemployed farmers and others in the drought stricken regions is forthcoming to some extent through the action of the federal government. At the instance of the national drought relief committee, the government has made immediately available to drought stricken their 1932 allotments of its $125,000,000 appropriation for aid to highway construction.

J. B. Klueber, Agricultural department meteorologist, says the drought has been the most prolonged and widespread in the history of the nation's weather records. The average rainfall of the country between January and September was reduced to 27 per cent of the normal, and during the growing season from March to August it amounted to only 21 per cent.

MODIFICATION of the Volstead act legalizing the manufacture and sale of beer would create an additional market for 100,000,000 bushels of small grain annually, according to B. T. Dow of Davenport, Iowa, president of the Grain and Feed Dealers' National association. He made the statement at the association's annual meeting in Chicago, and then commented on a recent announcement of Fred Pabst, head of a Milwaukee brewing concern, that his company is expending nearly a million dollars on new equipment in anticipation of a possible modification of the dry law.

In the grain men's convention the federal agricultural marketing act was attacked by F. Dumont Smith as futile and unconstitutional. In urging farmers to reduce their production to domestic requirements, Smith said, Chairman Alexander Legge of the farm board made "a complete and abject confession that the whole scheme and purpose of the farm relief act had utterly failed."

DWIGHT W. MORROW, in his opening speech of his campaign for election to the senate from New Jersey, removed himself from the picture as a candidate for the Republican Presidential nomination in 1932—which is disappointing to a considerable number of wets. Said Mr. Morrow:

"I look forward with pleasure and confidence to the opportunity of voting two years from now for the re-nomination and re-election of Herbert Hoover."

The United States Supreme court in effect upheld the Jones five and ten law when it denied two petitions for review of cases from Missouri in which the law was attacked as violating the principles of the Constitution. The court gave no reason for its action. In another case, the Supreme court assured the right of federal agents to act as state enforcement officials where there is no state dry law.

MAL S. DAUGHERTY, brother of former United States Attorney General Harry M. Daugherty, was indicted by a grand jury at Washington Courthouse, Ohio, on fifteen counts containing 27 separate offenses against the laws of the state of Ohio. He was arrested and held for $40,000 bonds, which were arranged for by his brother, Harry, and his mother.

Daugherty was president of the defunct Ohio State bank, into the affairs of which the state has been conducting an investigation since it was closed May 12.

JOSIAH H. MARVEL of Wilmington, Del., president of the American Bar association, died suddenly from a heart attack. Recently he was an unsuccessful candidate for the Democratic nomination for United States senator, losing to Thomas F. Bayard.

Other deaths of the week included those of Milton A. Meltae, one of the founders of the Scripps-Meltae newspaper league; Congressman C. F. Curry of California; Alexander Harrison, an eminent American painter who resided in Paris; Dr. Harry R. H. Hall, noted British archeologist; Rear Admiral Henry J. Ziegemeir, commandant of the Thirteenth naval district at Bremerton, Washington, and Sir Herman Gollancz, internationally known scholar and leader of British Jewry.

CARRYING the document of Japan's ratification of the London naval treaty, Lieut. Irvin A. Woodring, army flyer, flew at top speed across the continent from Vancouver, B. C., to New York. There it was turned over to Pierre de L. Boal, assistant chief of the division of western European affairs of the State department, who sailed for London on the Leviathan to attend the Geneva session of the league commission as an American advisor. The document will be delivered in London to Ambassador Matru-daira of Japan.

Lieut. W. W. Caldwell, also an army aviator, was accompanying Woodring in another plane, but crashed in rough country north of Laramie, Wyo., and was killed.

Two Catholic priests perished when the plane Marquette, recently taken to Alaska for use in mission work, fell and was destroyed.

The Fighting Tenderfoot

LEADING RADIO PROGRAMS

The term, tenderfoot, was applied to every newcomer to the old West and stuck to him or left him according to the degree of his proficiency in assimilating the ways of the country. One essential process in his education was mastery of the use of firearms. If naturally "handy" with a six-gun, he naturally the tenderfoot characteristics more rapidly than his less skillful brethren.

Faithful novelists, such as William MacLeod Raine, who have relied upon true types and authentic backgrounds have not minimized the influence of the six-gun as a civilizing element. The first resort of cowards and ruffians, it naturally became the most potent implement in combating and subduing them. No amount of courage or determination on the part of peace officers available without the assistance and accomplished use of well-oiled "blue hardware." In many sections no man could be considered well dressed for either social or business occasions unless he wore it.

Most novels of the West have dealt with seasoned residents of the country—people equipped to take care of themselves under all circumstances. The heroes generally have been men suited to the life. It has remained for William MacLeod Raine to paint a stirring picture of a hero who was pitched into the midst of a trying environment and who had to learn to fight before he had comprehended any other of the elements of existence in the place of his location.

You will follow the romance of the fighting tenderfoot with rare interest; for they are mainly true records, accounts from historical sources and types of character in one of the most picturesque and colorful eras of the world has ever known.

CHAPTER I

A Desert Greeting

On horse and man the evidence was written plain that they had traveled far. Yellow dust, fine as powder, had sifted into every crease of the rider's trousers. It covered his boots, his black hat, his coat. It streaked the young fellow's face and caked his burning throat. The eyes of the man were sunken and bloodshot. As for the animal, sweat stains blotted flank and withers. Hoofs dragged and head drooped.

Garrett O'Hara nodded in the saddle. The heat of the sun made him sleepy. No pressing engagement awaited him at Concho. Why not throw off among the trees and lie down in the shade for an hour? So, sleepily, he mused, hand on the horn to steady his lax body.

Out of the slumberous heat of the afternoon came sinister greeting. The traveler's hat, tilted to protect the face from the sun's rays, was lifted from his head as though by a sudden current of wind. The sound of an explosion boomed. From the chaparral smoke drifted skyward.

O'Hara's languor vanished—and so did he. Before the booming of the rifle had died, before the first thin shred of smoke had appeared, he had flung himself out of the saddle and was scuttling for the brush. As he ran he stooped to scoop up his hat.

Not till he had dodged past much greasewood and mesquite did he stop to reconnoiter. For one glance had shown him two holes in the hat. A bullet had passed through the side and crown. If the ambusher had fired two inches lower the lead would have crashed through the victim's brain.

The running man pulled up to consider ways and means. The position of the holes in the hat showed him that the shot had come from the right. What was the object of this attack? O'Hara was a stranger. He could have no enemies, not in this frontier land. Since he was unknown, nobody could have acquired a grudge against him. Robbery, then, could have been the only motive. Somebody had tried to assassinate him to get his wallet, or else his horse and saddle. Who? O'Hara meant to find out, if it could be done without too much risk.

Slowly, with the greatest precaution against the snapping of twigs or the rustle of bushes, he moved toward the road, revolver in hand. He stopped. Something of some one was moving rapidly in the brush parallel to him.

A voice, two voices, came abruptly from the left. The first, a rough, heavy one, startled by surprise: "You, by cripes!"

The other high and clear, on a note of excited resentment: "Who did you expect? Who were you trying to kill?"

"Why in Mexico do you ride around in them clothes?" The rough voice held both apology and exasperation.

"Suppose you mind your own business, Shep Sanderson," came swift, sharp answer. "What I want to know is why you shot at me?"

O'Hara, edging forward, could see them now from the cover of a cholla. They were in a draw. One, a light, slender figure, stood against a bank, revolver in hand. The other, the big bulking man, carried a rifle.

The eavesdropper had a swift suspicion, which he verified by craning his neck around the cactus. The one who had spoken last was a young woman. She wore the shiny chaps of a cowboy, plain wide leathers into which she had thrust her skirts.

didn't go for to shoot at you—if I did, I was aimin' at an antelope. I've done apologized. Caln't do anything more, can I?" he wheedled sulkily.

O'Hara slipped quietly forward and stepped down into the arroyo. The young woman saw him first. She stared at him, eyes wide with surprise. Her expression warned the big man, with unexpected swiftness he whirled, the rifle jumping to his hip.

"Who are you?" he demanded. The answer came smoothly and easily: "I'm the antelope you shot at, Mr. Sanderson."

The big man glared at him. Shep Sanderson was that unusual combination, a slow thinker and a fast shooter. He had a one-track mind and had no room in his brain for simultaneous cross currents. Either Barbara Steelman or this man was wrong. He had fired only one shot. As his mind functioned he knew, with considerable relief, that it had been the stranger at whom he had flung the bullet from his rifle. The girl must have been in the brush between him and the road.

And how did this man know his name was Sanderson? What was the best thing to do now?

O'Hara lifted the hat from his head with a bow to the young woman. She caught sight of the holes in it and her eyes dilated.

"Did he do that just now?" she asked. "Just now, miss, with his little bullet."

She felt the blood tbb from her heart as she stared at him. Somehow, in the rush of the moment, she had not been afraid when she thought Sanderson had fired at her. There had not been time for fear. But now, with the evidence that red tragedy had grazed so near, stamped in the hat, she was shaken.

"Why did he do it?" "That's what I've come to ask him." The manner of the young man altered. Brown eyes and voice were no longer gentle. In his bearing was a certain poised inflexibility. Yet he did not raise his voice or change his attitude. The difference was of the spirit. "Why pick on me as a target, Mr. Sanderson?"

"I don't know you, fellow," Sanderson growled. "Which makes your greeting to me all the stranger. Did you mistake me for one of your friends? Or was it my purse you fancied?"

The girl was puzzled at this young man who had dropped down upon them from the sky, as it were. "Tenderfoot" was written all over him. Clothes, manner, bearing, personality, all spoke of the city rather than the range.

She spoke quickly. "You're not Judge Warner?" The statement was a question. "No," he replied.

She turned on Sanderson, and her words almost leaped at him. "I know why you tried to kill this mpp. You thought he was Judge Warner."

Though he denied it in words, the man stood convicted. There was confusion in the blank, amazed look he turned on her.

"Why, I—I— Nothin' to that," he stammered. "I done told you I shot at an antelope."

"Who is paying you for this?" she cried. "Who hired you to do murder to prevent Judge Warner holdin' court tomorrow?"

Sharply she had flung out her questions, but O'Hara noticed that the assurance had died out of her before she finished speaking. Some thought had occurred to her that filled her with fear.

"Tell you I shot at an antelope," the fellow insisted, shifting his feet uneasily.

O'Hara. "I ain't been hired to wrangle for no tenderfoot." "Don't you think, since it was your fault his horse got away, it would be decent to—?"

"For this hombre? Me? Say, I'm Shep Sanderson." This seemed to be answer enough. His cold shallow eyes, light as skim milk, slid from O'Hara to Miss Steelman and back again. He moved away, his face toward the younger man, till he reached a dense clump of prickly pear. Behind this he vanished.

The girl spoke, "First off, we better get our horses." They found hers where she had left it when she slipped from the saddle to take refuge in the brush.

"We'll look for yours," she said, busying herself with a stirrup. She was disturbed that he should find her wearing leathers, using a man's saddle. She wanted to explain to him that in such thorny chaparral one had to wear leathers to protect the clothes and flesh against cruel clutching spikes, that she was no crazy tomboy who raced around the country dressed up like a man. But any approach to the subject was embarrassing.

"We want to be careful," the young woman said in a low voice. "He's a bad crowd, Shep Sanderson is. Which way did your horse go?"

They had reached the road. "There it is, back of that prickly pear," O'Hara said. "I know it wouldn't wander far. Too tired."

He reclaimed his horse and swung to the saddle. "This way," said Miss Steelman, and swung her mount deeper into the chaparral.

For nearly half a mile she led the man silently in and out among the brush. Then she reined up to ride beside him.

Disapprovingly, she looked at his fancy boots. "They'll be ruined in all this cactus," she told him. "You have to wear leathers in this country. It's not a question of how you look."

He understood that this was not so much a criticism of him as a defense of herself. "Yes, miss, I can see it's better," he agreed. "But I was expecting to stick to the road when I started."

"Started where from?" "From Aurora." "For Concho?" "Yes, miss."

She was still puzzled to place him. Though in the mountains, Concho was in the heart of a cattle country. There men talked cows, worked them, lived them. It was the basic occupation upon which all others were dependent. It was an easy guess that this stranger had never ridden out the stampede of a trail herd. Yes, tenderfoot was sure enough the word for him.

She had a feeling that he was headed for trouble quite unconsciously and that he was poorly equipped to meet it. The combination of ignorance and courage is not a good one, not in a hard country like this into which he was riding.

He volunteered information timidly. "My name is Garrett O'Hara. I am a lawyer."

"A lawyer! Oh, you're going to Concho as one of Judge Warner's party." "I'm going to live there."

She drew up her horse and looked at him in surprise. "Live there! What are you going to do?" "Practice law."

"In Concho." A mouthful of white teeth flashed in laughter. "Don't you think I'd make a good lawyer?" he asked, too shy to let her comment pass unanswered.

"I don't know. But why Concho? Who wants a lawyer there?" "Prosperous town, isn't it?" "Then there must be business there—cattle, contracts, real estate, lands."

Abruptly she asked: "Who do you know there? Who sent for you? Whose man are you?" It was the last query that snagged his attention.

"What do you mean, whose man am I?" She did not answer that. Her reply was wholly unexpected. "Better turn round and ride back to Aurora tomorrow."

His eyes flashed interest, and something more than that. "Why, if the court please?" "It's not your kind of a country," she said.

"What kind of a country it is, where men shoot at strangers because they may be law officers?" She flushed. "It's a good enough country, of its own kind. That Shep Sanderson is a low-down killer. You can't judge folks by him."

"I hope not, though I think you suggested that some one hired him." "I don't know whether anyone did or not," she responded, and he noticed that at the thought her face clouded again.

Her next remark seemed to bear no relation to what had gone before. "Do you know Dave Ingram? Or my father, Wesley Steelman?" "No, miss."

Apparently she was a young person of abrupt transitions. "That hogleg you carry! Can you use it?" "Hogleg!"

"Six-shooter," she said impatiently. "Do you carry it for show?" "Mostly," he admitted. "I killed a rattlesnake with it today."

"Can you shoot?" "I can hit a barn if I am near enough." "Could you hit a man who was firing at you?"

"Don't think so, I'd hate to try." "Then don't carry it. You'll be a shinin' mark for some one to bump you off."

"Do what to me?" "Shoot you. I'd throw it away and play I was a preacher while I stayed at Concho. You'll be safe then. The town is full of hard men, quick on the shoot. That's how they settle difficulties."

"I'd say what Concho needed was law," he said drily. "Don't you understand?" she cried. "Men make their own law. They carry it in a holster by their side. Just now trouble is brewing—a lot of it. There's a feud on. Among such men a lawyer's arguments wouldn't last a minute. Go back where you came from."

He shook his head. "I'm headed for Concho, miss." She threw up a hand with a gesture that waved aside responsibility. "All right. It's none of my business, anyhow. I'm intererin' where I shouldn't."

"I'm sorry you want to hand me my hat before I've really started to call on your country," he said. "Anhow, look the ground over before you decide to stay. Talk with Steve Worrall. Say I sent you. He's in the freight business. You'll find him at the Longhorn corral."

"Til do that," he promised. "Steve has a lot of horse sense, and you can trust him." They had left the road and swung to the right. At the summit of a long climb Miss Steelman drew up her horse.

"Our ways part here," she said. "Take that trail to the left. It's about five miles to town. When you come to a creek go right through it. That's Squaw Crossing. You can't miss the road."

He hesitated, trying to find words to thank her for her kindness. He knew the color was driving into his face, the effect of shyness. A quotation from "Fare Shore" came to his mind, and he blurted it out:

... Your bounty is beyond my speaking. But though my mouth be dumb, my heart shall thank you.

She flashed a quick look at him, gave a short laugh, and took the hill trail. Why had she made so much of warning him against staying at Concho?

What was this mystery at which she hinted, one which made it unsafe for him, an insignificant stranger, to practice his profession in the town? No doubt he would find out soon enough.

A steep trail dropped like a crooked rope down the mountain side to a village which nestled at its foot. As he descended he could see that Concho had one business street. From it, up draws and holloys, two or three winding roads started tentatively toward the adobe houses that formed the residence section.

O'Hara drew up in front of the Concho house and tied his sorrel to a snubbing post. With saddlebags over his arm the young man mounted the porch steps and walked into the adobe hotel.

Three or four men were seated in the office, chairs comfortably tilted back. One of them was talking, his heels resting on a drum stove that had not been lit for many months. He continued to talk. Neither he nor any of the others paid the least attention to the entrance of the stranger.

"Is the proprietor in?" O'Hara asked. "I run this shebang." "Can I get a room?" "I reckon you can get a cot somewhere."

"Would you mind showing me where it is? I'd like to wash." "Go down that passage an' turn to the right. There's four beds in the second room. You can roost in one of them unless some guy squawks an' claims it's his. Wash basin back o' the house." His duties as host concluded, he returned to unfinished business.

O'Hara headed down the long hall toward the bedroom of which he was to be part occupant. Upon one of the cots he dropped the saddlebags, after dusting them with a gunny sack which he found in one corner of the room. Back of the house he found a well, a tin wash basin, and a dirty towel. He finished washing just in time to answer the supper bell.

It was characteristic of Garrett O'Hara that he did not call at once on Steve Worrall at the Longhorn corral. He wanted first to get his own impressions of the town. As much as he had seen of the place fascinated him. It was raw and crude, but the yeast of young and exuberant life worked in it. If it had not been wild and untamed he would have been disappointed.

He wandered up the street and his haphazard footsteps took him toward a sound of music. A Mexican ball was in progress. He paid the price of admission and stepped inside. A lithe, bright-eyed girl was doing a fandango with a young fellow in Spanish costume. O'Hara watched the scene eagerly. This was the sort of thing he had come West to see. It had color, the charm of the unusual.

There came a disturbance at the door, disputing voices, an eruption of men, not Mexicans. There were four of them, and at the head of the group one whom O'Hara at once recognized, the fellow whom he had met that afternoon, Shep Sanderson. They were intoxicated, primed for trouble. The Mexicans drew back, scowling at them.

O'Hara took one quick look around the room. There was no way out except by the front door unless he climbed through a window. His revolver was at the hotel in his saddlebags. He grinned, a foolish little smile. Probably he was in for a very unpleasant experience, to put the case mildly.

As yet Sanderson had not seen him. The fellow had seized hold of a girl and was dancing with her much against her will. The natives shouted protests and muttered oaths of anger, but they were not prepared for active resistance.

The music stopped when Sanderson was close to O'Hara. The big man did not trouble to see that his partner reached her seat. He dropped her at once from his mind.

"Feed me a cigarette, fellow," he ordered, and then noticed to whom he was talking. "By cripes, it's the tenderfoot."

O'Hara felt his blood quicken. Danger always had that effect upon him. "At your service," he replied. "Who invited you to this tenebony?" the man demanded.

HEARD ABOUT TOWN

"BILLY, THE KID"

will be here at the Crystal Theatre Nov. 27-28-29 and everybody in the county should see the great picture. This picture was shown at Kansas City last week to crowded houses. In a letter received from Dr. R. T. Lucas Wednesday, he said, among other things, that they saw the picture, in the process of life-size films and it was much enjoyed, more especially when Carrizozo was mentioned. The pictures at the Crystal are exceptionally good and the sound is excellent, and the best way to convince yourself, is to attend.

Mr. Seligman, an Expert Tax Dodger

The Democrats ought to be more careful to pick men for governor who are good enough citizens to pay their taxes.

Two years ago it was Dow who forgot to pay 'em, and now, it seems, it's Seligman. — Magdalena News.

Mr. and Mrs. Ray Warner daughter Mary and Mr. and Mrs. Hijino Warner are here this week from Albuquerque, visiting with the Joe Chavez and Juan Herrera families, the Warner boys being the sons of Mrs. Herrera.

Methodist Missionary Society

The October meetings were largely attended. The hostesses for the month were: Meses. John Lawson and O. J. Snow, with Meses. Boughner, Walker and Miss Melas as assistants. The Society personnel for 1931 is as follows: Pres., Mrs. Boughner; Vice-Pres., Mrs. W. W. Walker; Corresponding Sec'y, Mrs. Lawson; Recording Sec'y, Mrs. Mendenhall; Treas., Mrs. Lucky; Supt. Young People, Miss Davis; Supt. Children's Work, Mrs. Sloan; Supt. Study and Publicity, Mrs. Stimmel; Supt. Social Service, Mrs. C. A. Snow; Supt. of Supplies, Mrs. Lemon; Supt. Local Work, Mrs. Shafer.

The year closing in December marks one of the best in the society's history and it is expected that 1931 will prove equally successful. Much credit is due Mrs. Boughner, who has shown marked executive ability and has given herself untiringly to every phase of the work of the society.

Isidoro Armijo

of Santa Fe, who has been making trips over the County this week, says: "The United States has many wonders. The Niagara Falls, the Grand Canyon of Colorado, and H. B. Holt, the White Eagle of the Rio Grande." Isidoro refers to Judge Botts as follows: "He is one of the greatest Americans; a man with a striking resemblance to Abraham Lincoln, after whom, your County was named. Judge Botts' Lincoln-esque appearance has won for him, the confidence and esteem of people over the state, regardless of political affiliations." He referred to Congressman Simms, as "The Crusader of the Middle Rio Grande."

Mr. Armijo will accompany the Republican County Candidates in their trips over the County until the close of the campaign, and everyone should hear him, for he is one of the most convincing and eloquent speakers, in both English and Spanish, that we have in this part of the country.

Mr. Armijo traveled a distance of 400 miles by car from Raton to Carrizozo in 12 hours, including a stop-over for lunch, and yet the Democrats say we have no good roads!

TO THE VOTERS OF THE THIRD JUDICIAL DISTRICT

During the past 15 years, I have been actively connected with our District Court, 5 years as Court Stenographer, and the past 10 years as District Attorney, representing Dona Ana, Otero, Lincoln and Torrance Counties.

Having been nominated upon the Republican ticket for District Judge, I pledge myself, if elected—

To promptly decide all cases tried by me. Unnecessary delay in decisions often amounts to a denial of justice.

In the selection of jury commissioners, I will select good citizens, and in instructing them as to their duties, will advise them to choose men who are law-abiding citizens and who believe in the strict enforcement of our laws.

In the appointment of members of the county school boards I will select persons who are interested in the welfare of the schools and the school children; and not upon their qualifications as politicians.

If the above mentioned meets with your approval, your vote will assist in carrying out these pledges.

Respectfully,

J. BENSON NEWELL.
