LOCAL MENTION

Dr. F. S. Randles

came in the middle of the week from Mammoth, Arizona, where he has been employed by a large mining corporation for several years. He looks well and will remain here until the first of the new year, after which the company will resume operation and Doc. will return to his old position at the mines. As Doc. is a great favorite among the ladies here, they will be glad to learn that he will be with us for at least a month.

T. E. Kelley

reports having seen a badger, or hog-nosed skunk while out deer hunting last week. We wonder if it throws the same delightful perfume as the ordinary kind.

Attention, Masons!

There will be a Regular Communication of Carrizozo Lodge No. 41, A. F. & A. M., on Saturday night, Nov. 29, for the purpose of business and annual election of officers.

All Master Masons are cordially invited.

M. J. Barnett, W. M., R. E. Lemon, Secretary.

Many People

were here yesterday afternoon at the matinee of 'Billy the Kid' and at the showing of the picture last night, the house was crowded at both shows. The picture will be shown tonight and tomorrow night, so don't miss it. Mrs. S. E. Barber, who was a principal in those incidents in early Lincoln County history, was an honored guest at yesterday's matinee. She came down from White Oaks on a special invitation from manager Pittman and was accorded all courtesies at the Theatre. Mrs. A. N. Price and others from the birthplace of "Heart's Desire," were present, besides many others from all over the county.

Shorty Dawson

was here yesterday from the mines in the Nogal district and stayed over to see "Billy the Kid" at the Crystal Theatre. He was glad to meet his old friend and former mine-mate, Doc Randles, who paid Shorty a visit after his arrival this week. Doc and Shorty had a love-feast over the way the state went at the recent election and while we do not agree with the boys, they are friends of ours and it has been so long since they have had a chance to rejoice, we cannot deny them the pleasure.

Mrs. T. J. Pittman

Ida Mae, Felix Hunter and several more were here from Cloudercroft and Alamogordo last night, leaving for home immediately after the picture show. Mrs. Pittman has lately been appointed postmistress at Cloudercroft and we congratulate her. Rambling rumors are afloat to the effect that a double wedding took place at either Alamogordo or Tularosa when the young folks mentioned above, arrived on the return trip, the particulars of which will appear in our next issue.

E. S. Biesel

was a Carrizozo business visitor Saturday of last week from the big dam project on the Bonito.

Slander and Falsehood Aftermath of Campaign

In last week's issue of a local paper appeared an editorial in reference to the absentee ballot in Lincoln County, which was so rotten as to cause ridicule even from people of its own party, so slanderous and unjust was the nature of it.

The article would have the public believe that every absentee ballot cast in this county was fraudulent and that all were voted for the Republican ticket. The facts are that approximately 60 absentee votes were Democratic and 127 Republican, the total being 187.

The Democrats voted every registered Democrat they could get and the only reason the Republicans voted more was because they had more absent Republicans.

An examination of the record will show that ballots were sent to practically every absent Democratic voter and at least one was voted who has not lived or voted in Carrizozo for the past four years or more and others who have not lived here for more than one year and whose families have been absent with them. Claims were made that the Registration lists were padded and no one except the Republicans at the Courthouse knew where the registrants were.

If the lists were padded, the Democratic member of the Registration Board, was a party to such illegal practice, as there was not a division of the board on a single name placed on the Registration books. We do not question the honesty or integrity of any member of the Registration Board, but firmly believe that they lived up to their oath.

After the polls were closed on the night of the election, the chairmen judges of both parties, G. T. McQuillen and A. L. Burke, paid each other every courtesy possible, and when at times there happened to be a chance for a contest on a certain absent voter's ballot, legal authority was called into consultation and from the fact that none were declared illegal, was shown by all of the ballots passing muster, the same being done within eight and hearing of the public outside of the railing.

The article further states by inference, that the signatures on absent ballots were not genuine, and presumably were forged. Such statements are on the same plane as the Democratic campaign was conducted in the last election—a whispering campaign of slander and falsehood.

The article in question insofar as it refers to irregularities or illegalities of the Republican absentee ballot, is without foundation and without a spark of truth to back it up.

In view of the fact that the entire country, with the exception of Lincoln County, New Mexico, and the state of Pennsylvania went Democratic, many counties of this state for the first time in history being caught in the slide, we might infer that there was some crookedness in the Democratic party, either on account of the absentee ballot or other sinister influence.

Odd Fellows Hold Big Meeting

At the regular meeting of Carrizozo Lodge No. 30 I. O. O. F. after the business session, the First Degree of Odd Fellowship was conferred. The meeting was very enthusiastic and marked the beginning of an era of prosperity for the local wing of the order. It is the intention of the lodge to give a big free entertainment in the near future, consisting of a musical program and luncheon.

Mrs. E. G. Buchanan

daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Porter of Corona, is ill at the Johnson Hospital, but her condition was more favorable this morning. Mr. and Mrs. Porter are here and will remain until their daughter's condition improves so that they can return with assurance of her safety.

A Good Christmas Gift

The first electric refrigerator intended primarily for gift purposes is being presented this year by Frigidaire Corporation as the ideal Christmas present for wife or family, according to Frigidaire Frank English, local dealer.

"Designed particularly to appeal to the careful holiday shopper in search of something unusual, said Mr. English.

"The refrigerators are products of the highest engineering skill, backed by the largest electric refrigeration company in the world, with more than 1,500,000 users," Frank said.

at Alamogordo was a great success, according to the many people from here who have attended the big demonstration which consisted of showing just how the car is made, and all of the many new features which it contains. There were about 2,000 people in attendance at the shows, and on the strength of the demonstration, 14 new cars were sold. The big Ford show is now at Las Cruces.

At Rest

Little John Franklin Greer, infant twin of Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Greer, passed away suddenly early last Sunday morning and the remains were interred in the Corona cemetery. Services were conducted at the home of the grandparents, Mr. and T. M. DuBois, with Rev. Johnson officiating. In addition to his parents and grandparents, little John Franklin leaves his twin sister, an elderly brother and other relatives, to all of whom, the sincere sympathy of the entire community is extended.

Louise, beloved 15 months old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Will Pruitt, passed away Thursday morning after a brief illness. Mrs. Pruitt and children had arrived a few days before, from Globe, Arizona, to remain with her mother, Mrs. M. E. Beaver, who has been suffering from a stroke of paralysis. Mr. Pruitt came Saturday and the funeral was held Sunday afternoon. The baby is survived by many relatives who mourn her loss.

Word has been received here of the death of the eight-year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Smith at Portales. The child had been ill for several weeks, and had not recovered from an attack of diphtheria. His parents recently took him to Portales, with the hope that his condition would improve at their old home.

Card of Thanks

We wish to thank those who offered sympathy and assistance in any way, during our recent bereavement.

Respectfully,

RADIO RUBE'S RAMBLINGS

"I always listen to 'Cheerio' over the N. B. C. network every morning from 6:45 till 7 o'clock," speaks a local man. "The program is so different from the rest and it starts the day right; the birthdays being broadcast of old folks, the three rousing cheers given them, and the weird strains of the music for 'everybody concentrate; everybody wish, I can't forget.'" Tune in on some N. B. C. station from 6:45 till 7 in the morning, preferably over W. O. A. I., if you would like to hear something different and want a treat.

D. N. Bonnell of San Patricio, heard this one a short time ago:

An aged woman approached Elerdo Chavez, county judge, and asked:

"Are you the judge of the reprobates?"

The judge smiled and answered: "I am the judge of the probates." "Maybe that's it," answered the woman. "Well, you see my husband died destitute and left five little infidels and I want to get myself appointed as their executioner."

Phil Cook, the original one-man show, is heard over the Quaker Oats 15 minutes on the NBC Network, from 7 a. m. and then early in the evening. Phil has "Wise-Crackles" with him; they tell jokes, sing songs, etc.

bears of a singing barber, that asks the customers, in song, "What will it be, sir, a shave or haircut?" "This is a bright idea" sayeth Oscar. "Guess I'll use it in my business." So don't be a bit surprised when you hear the melodious and cultured baritone voice of Oscar sing, "Shave, haircut, or both, sir?"

SOUTHWEST NEWS

Mrs. Annie Lorentz of Phoenix shot and killed her five-year-old son, Scherer, and then sent a bullet through her left breast.

Skeels and Graham, Tucson, with a bid of $61,679.70 were the lowest of eight bidders for oil surfacing fifteen miles of the Phoenix-Yuma highway near Piedra.

For the first time in several years each of the fourteen counties of the state was represented by exhibits in agriculture, horticulture, livestock and mining at the Arizona State Fair at Phoenix.

Mrs. Frances Belle Allen of Las Cruces and Nicholas Escalada of Santa Fe won in the fourth national radio audition for New Mexico at State College. They will compete in the district audition at Dallas.

E. A. Hughes, chairman of the state tax commission, announced in Phoenix that the annual tax conference between Arizona county assessors and the tax commission of Arizona has been set for Jan. 5 at Tucson.

Gasoline tax receipts in New Mexico totaled $258,740.91 during October, an increase of 15 per cent over the corresponding month of last year, according to the monthly report of the Gasoline Tax Department.

The United Verde Extension Mining Company announced in Prescott that it had obtained an option on the famous Vulture mine, at one time the greatest gold producer in the Southwest. The property is eleven miles from Wickenburg.

Weddings in Arizona increased 5.7 per cent during 1932; the Department of Commerce announced in Phoenix. The increase is attributed to California's three-day marriage law. The department's figures showed 7,405 marriages in the state last year, as compared to 6,400 in 1928.

With an infant mortality rate of 22.4 for 1929, Arizona tied with Virginia for 38th place in the United States, the U. S. Bureau of Census announces. New Mexico and Utah surpassed Arizona in number of infant deaths. New Mexico had the highest rate in the nation with 29.3.

The old Bankhead Hotel at Roswell, built in early days by Pat Garrett, sheriff of Lincoln county, and for years the gathering place for the Pecos valley and all eastern New Mexico, will soon be replaced by a six-story modern hotel to cost $200,000. It will be built by J. P. White.

Standing majestically among the archives and exhibits in the Arizona Pioneer Society's museum at Tucson is the first printing press brought to Arizona. Upon this press, one of the first newspapers of the Southwest, the Arizona, established at Tucson in February, 1850, was published four years before Arizona was cut away from New Mexico territory.

Consideration of the unemployment problem in Arizona was begun at a conference called in Phoenix recently by Gov. John C. Phillips and plans made for appointment of a state committee to carry on the study. Business leaders told the conference they believed steps should be taken to warn laborers elsewhere that conditions are not good in Arizona. "Arizona can take care of her own unemployment," Governor Phillips said after the meeting, "but it will become increasingly hard to care for the transients."

The industrial employment survey report recently issued by the U. S. Employment Service of the U. S. Department of Labor in Denver states that there was an upward trend in practically all major industries in Arizona except metal mining and lumbering activities which continued on a greatly curtailed basis. Harvesting of the cotton crop absorbed a large number of workers who will be employed in the next two to three months. A shortage of cotton pickers developed toward the latter part of October. Harvesting of other crops and other fall agricultural work gave employment to many men. Gold mining increased in the Kingman and Oatman districts. Building and general construction continued quite active and included considerable municipal improvement work, miscellaneous telephone construction, school buildings, churches, and manufacturing establishments. Highway construction offered employment to quite a number of men in various parts of the state. Forces employed in the railroad freight transportation departments are expected to show some increase in November with the supply of railroad labor equal to all requirements. There was a slight improvement in employment in several of the major industries in New Mexico during October; however, the supply of all classes of labor exceeded requirements, largely due to an influx of workers from other states. Harvesting of the fruit and vegetable crops was practically completed.

Raymond Huff, superintendent of schools at Clayton, was elected president in a contest with Miss Lela Mansville of Silver City. The vote was Huff, 344; Miss Mansville, 342.

Gov. R. C. Dillon has estimated the unemployment rate in New Mexico at 15 per cent and suggested to Arthur Woods, head of President Hoover's unemployment commission, that the situation would be materially remedied if the government would start work on federal building projects for which appropriations have already been set up.

United States Contends at Geneva for Real Reduction of Armaments.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

DIRECT and genuine reduction of land and sea armament was proposed by the United States in the sessions of the preparatory disarmament commission in Geneva, the spokesman for this country being Ambassador Hugh Gibson. He was replying to Lord Robert Cecil's speech advocating limitation through budgetary curtailment, and said the United States could not accept this plan for two reasons:

First, because it is inoperative and cannot efficiently and accurately restrict the maintenance of war material;

Second, because the congress at Washington probably would refuse to ratify any such agreement, which, he said, infringes on its rights to make appropriations for national defense.

The British want the budgetary system applied to land forces but not to navies, and they are supported by France, the little entente and some other nations. The American demand is backed up by Germany, Japan, Russia, Scandinavia, Holland and Canada. Maxim Litvinov, Moscow's representative, insisted that a direct system of limitation of arms alone will give results. He went further and insisted on a dual method of limitation with the publication of complete tables of war material, and a graduated decrease in military budgetary expenditures.

N. Sato of Japan declared that the direct method of limiting fighting forces was too difficult to apply and was impossible to impose on all nations. He said: "I think that Japan's view is that we should be content to limit soldiers and not attempt to limit material by any method."

Rene Massigli of France complained that Mr. Gibson was too severe against the budgetary system, but admitted that some countries' military budgets do not reveal the exact amounts spent. He also raised apprehension over subsidized arsenals.

The French delegation then proposed that a committee of experts be named to examine both systems and report to the governments to give them time to make up their minds before the disarmament conference is held.

Its sixty-fourth annual convention in Rochester, N. Y. To this end six suggestions were put forward by National Master Louis J. Taber, these being:

1. Stabilization of values.
 2. A higher price level for farm commodities.
 3. More justly distributed system of taxation.
 4. Extension of the federal farm loan system.
 5. Readjustment of the nation's freight rate structure.
 6. Restriction of immigration and conservation of natural resources.
- Criticizing the speculation in grain on the Chicago Board of Trade, Mr. Taber said:
- "As long as this present system remains with its violent price manipulations it is obvious that there must be a method of protection by hedging for the safeguarding of the buyer and processor, but when hedging and short selling take the form of speculation and gambling in the necessities of life, the public is injured.
- "Unfortunately for the American farmer, our present marketing structure operates with no concern as to the price he receives. It is a sad commentary on our present boasted wheat marketing program, that during the recent period of agriculture's greatest depression, and the grain grower's consequent distress, the Chicago Board of Trade erected a $12,000,000 building, while the producer suffers near annihilation."

SEVEN national leaders of the Democratic party offered to co-operate with President Hoover and his administration in non-partisan efforts to stabilize business, promote business and otherwise improve the national welfare through legislation; and they gave assurance that the Democrats, victorious in the recent election, would not attempt for the present to change the tariff act passed last June.

On behalf of the administration and the Republicans in congress, Senator James E. Watson of Indiana, majority leader in the senate, accepted and welcomed the aid offered by the Democrats, saying the country is faced with a situation where the only patriotic solution lies in co-operative action.

It was learned at the White House that President Hoover will present to congress in December a large unemployment program which will include authorizations for new building projects that may exceed $100,000,000. He already had announced the administration would ask an emergency appropriation, which may reach $100,000,000, to finance an expansion of the government's public works construction program for the relief of unemployment. Removal of time limitations on projects now authorized will be asked, as will new legislation to remove limitations on certain industries that are handicapped in their desires to expand construction efforts.

That promise of co-operation made by the seven Democratic leaders was not taken by Senator Carter Glass of Virginia, himself one of the most prominent Democrats, in so far as it affected the tariff. He asserted that "no group of Democrats, however distinguished or discerning, should feel obliged to pledge their party associates in congress not severely to disturb the most infamous tariff act ever enacted by a legislative body, lest the doing of this might upset the acquiescent activities of those who are thus licensed to prey upon the American consumer."

INDIA'S future status within the British empire is to be worked out, it is possible, at the long awaited "round table conference" which opened in London. King George himself started the proceedings with a speech expressing his earnest desire that the problem be settled in the best interests of all his subjects, and Prime Minister MacDonald was then made chairman.

Seated around a great oval table were eighty-six persons including the prince of India, representatives of all classes and communities of British India and of the kingdoms of Great Britain, and among them were two women delegates, the Begum Shah Nawaz and Mrs. Subbarayan. But there was no representative of the powerful National Congress party which is headed by Mahatma Gandhi, for it had boycotted the conference. The many millions of Nationalists demand complete independence for India, while the other Indians, present at the round table, all insist on full dominion status as a minimum. This the present British government is pledged to grant, and the task of the conference is to work out the multitudinous details.

MARSHAL CHANG, the young war lord of Manchuria who by his intervention ended the civil war in China, went to Nanking last week to confer with President Chiang Kai-shek on a program of reconstruction. The finance problem presents the greatest difficulty, for the Nanking government hopes to persuade the Manchurian faction to surrender the customs and salt gabelle revenues which Marshal Chang is cornering. Chang also is asking Nanking for $5,000,000 monthly for the upkeep of Manchurian troops within the great wall.

WET Republicans are demanding that Senator Simeon D. Fess of Ohio resign as chairman of the Republican national committee because he said that the party must remain dry or face a split and be defeated in 1932. The senator declares that this was merely his personal opinion, and that while he will continue to do all he can to combat efforts by the wets to weaken prohibition, he may be ready to support any recommendations made by the Wickersham commission that would tend to make prohibition more enforceable. He more than intimates he will not give up the chairmanship, but there are those who believe he will soon be forced out and that Robert H. Lucas will succeed him and conduct the next Presidential campaign.

Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia university, says that if the Republican party's platform in 1932 does not call for repeal of the Eighteenth amendment "there will come in the following November the biggest political smash-up that has taken place in the history of any American now living."

As a matter of fact, the leaders of both parties are greatly concerned over the problem of adjusting their platform on the liquor issue so as to retain their respective strengths.

The Wickersham commission, trying to get together on a report concerning prohibition enforcement, continued its hearings and deliberations until Thursday and then adjourned until November 24. Among the witnesses it heard were Dr. William C. Woodward of Chicago, legislative counsel for the American Medical association, and Dr. William M. Mayer of Pittsburgh, Pa. Both doctors were understood to have told the commission that they felt the present dry law provisions are obnoxious to their profession generally and a burdensome interference with the practice of reputable physicians.

GEN. TARKER H. BLISS, who was chief of staff of the United States army during the World War, American representative on the supreme war council and one of the American peace commissioners in 1918, died in Walter Reed hospital, Washington, at the age of seventy-six years. He was buried in Arlington with full military honors.

Thomas Coleman du Pont, former senator from Delaware, financier and for years head of E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co., passed away at his home in Wilmington, Del. Other notable who died included Dr. Julia Holmes Smith of Chicago, pioneer suffragist and philanthropist; John Lee Mahin, noted advertising man; Sidney M. Colgate, soap magnate, and F. M. PRESIDENT HOOVER in an Armistice day address urged his listeners to work continuously for peace with the same zeal with which America's war dead waged war, but he said the time has not yet come when the United States can rest its defense solely upon the Kellogg pact and other peace machinery, and he also made it clear that the United States intends to keep free of political pacts that would bind it to the use of force to maintain peace.

"The purpose of our government," the President said in addressing an audience of 3,000 delegates attending the Good Will congress of the World Alliance for Friendship Through the Churches, "is to co-operate with others to use our friendly offices and, short of any implication of the use of force, to use every friendly effort and all good will to maintain the peace of the world."

General Pershing, Secretary of State Stimson and Secretary of War Hurley, all made Armistice day talks in Washington, and all of them pleaded for adequate preparedness for national defense.

Secretary Hurley said that in event of another war "each farm and factory, each mill and mine, will be required to perform its duty to the country in support of the soldier who faces the enemy at the front. Never again shall one citizen be required to give his life in defense of his country while another is permitted to make unusual profit at his country's expense."

THE STORY

Garrett O'Hara, young lawyer, on his way to practice at Concho, who was in town, is shot at from ambush by Shep Sanderson, who mistakes him for Judge Warner, whom certain cattle interests wish to prevent holding court. Barbara Steelman, who thought the shot was directed at her, warns Garrett not to go to Concho because of the big cattle war. In town Sanderson picks a fight with Garrett and is getting the worst of it when Ingram, cattle baron, interrupts. Steve Worrall tells Garrett about the cattle war between Ingram and Steelman, father of Barbara. Garrett tells Ingram he desires to remain neutral, but the latter declares there can be no neutrality. Bob Quantrell, young killer for Ingram, saves Garrett and an Englishman, Smith-Beresford, from being shot by Sanderson. The three become friends. Garrett accidentally witnesses a meeting between Barbara and Ingram. They are lovers, Garrett and the Englishman buy a ranch with Steelman as silent partner, Fitch, Steelman man, kills an Ingram follower. A posse starts in pursuit and Fitch stops at the "tenderfoot ranch."

CHAPTER V

Garrett Holds the Fort

From the doorway, where he sat smoking a placid pipe, Smith-Beresford drawled comment. "Picture of a young man in a hurry," he said. "Study from life." O'Hara saw a rider coming over the hill. The Britisher had not overstated the case. If ever a man was in a hurry this one was. An arm moved up and down as he quirted his horse. The animal was jaded, but it stuck to a labored lope.

"Fitch," O'Hara said. "Right; by Jove, he's not coming down here. He's heading for the clump of timber up there. Wonder what's up, Garrett."

"Some one is after him. Maybe the posse headed him off." Five minutes later horsemen come into view, a long straggling line of them. O'Hara counted twelve. They rode straight for the cabin. As they came closer he recognized Sanderson, Quantrell, Deever, and a youth known as the Texas Kid.

"We haven't seen anything of Fitch," O'Hara said to his companion. "We've both been in the cabin and didn't happen to look out as he passed."

"Count on me, Old Top." "Think I'd better get my revolver. I don't trust Sanderson." "You're speaking for me, too?"

When they returned to the door at the cabin half a dozen members of the posse were dismounting. They were about a hundred yards from the house. Sanderson shouted to them, "We want that bird Fitch an' we're gonna get him."

"Who?" called back O'Hara. "Fitch. That's who. Send him out to us."

"There's nobody here but us. Come and see for yourself." The men approached cautiously, keeping the two at the door covered. O'Hara kept an eye on Sanderson. He was of the opinion that the man would take this occasion, if he could find any excuse at all, to settle the grudge he held against him.

The Ingram men moved past them, drooping spurs jingling, and poured into the house. Four or five stayed outside to keep an eye on the tenderfoot. Among these last was Quantrell.

"Who is this fellow and what's he done?" O'Hara asked. "Fitch, the bird calls himself. He gunned Two-Ace Burke from ambush. I reckon you know all about it," Quantrell answered.

"We don't. Where did it happen? Is Burke badly hurt?" "He'll never be deader," the lad replied coolly. "We buried him in Boot Hill this mornin'."

Men trooped from the house. "Not there," one of them announced. "No, but he's been there," the Texas Kid announced. "He had breakfast right in that room. Fitch never was thorough. I know that bird. He didn't wash his cup an' plate."

"Some one had breakfast here. You're right about that," O'Hara admitted. "We just go back from the camp where our boys are branding. Whoever this fellow was he's gone before we got here."

"What's the use of foolin' with these pilgrims?" Sanderson cut in savagely. "They know where Fitch is at. They'll tell us or we'll bump 'em off right now."

"Sure they know." This from a freckle-faced cowboy named Buck Grogan. He was a brother of the man known as the Texas Kid.

"They've thrown in with Steelman and his outfit," spoke up a big rangy fellow whose right cheek bulged from a wad of tobacco. "Been livin' up at his place. Betcha the Old Man's backin' this very ranch."

O'Hara looked around on them, brown complexioned men, hard-featured, rickety. They had ridden hard and far for vengeance. He realized that they were not going to be particular where the blow fell. If they could not find Fitch they might strike at the men who they thought were protecting him. Any adherent of Wes Steelman's would do, given a reasonable excuse. He could not understand the psychology of such people. There was Bob Quantrell, for instance. He had been friendly with Smith-Beresford. He had protected them both. But Garrett knew that now he would not lift a hand to save them if Sanderson or the others moved to strike.

Quantrell spoke. "I'm going up to that bunch of timber an' comb it. Three-four of you fellows come along with me. We'll take care of these gents when we get back."

Three men followed Quantrell to the horses. The four mounted and rode toward the grove.

O'Hara caught the eye of his partner and the two edged back toward the cabin. Very soon the riders would make a discovery, one which might have a disastrous reaction in precipitating trouble.

"We've nothing against any of you," O'Hara explained. "We have started here as peaceable ranchers. If we can we want to be friendly with our neighbors. There's room for all of us, a wide range, plenty of grass."

From the timber above a shot rang out, followed by a puff of smoke. "Dad gum it, they've got him!" the Texas Kid cried, and he started up the hill on foot.

Three men followed him. The others stayed to watch the partners. Among those who remained was Shep Sanderson.

Garrett flung a glance toward the battle ground and saw that the attackers were drawing closer to their prey. He heard voices in parley. The shots ceased.

A shout came down to them. "He's give up!" Men emerged from the timber. The one who moved in the center of the little group, the prisoner, walked with a limp. Evidently he had been wounded.

Sanderson chose that moment, before his companions above could reach him to object, for his revenge. He fired from the hip. O'Hara felt the shock of the bullet. It had struck his cartridge belt at the buckle and glanced off, though he did not know until later that he was not severely wounded.

What followed came so rapidly that there was no orderly sequence to it in O'Hara's mind. He could hear the roar of guns, his own among them. A flash of flame seared his shoulder. His companion staggered, leaned against the door jamb, and cried, "I'm hit!" He moved through lanes of fire. Figures loomed up in the smoke and vanished. Some one pushed close against him, striking with a knife. He pressed the revolver against yielding flesh and pulled the trigger. The man gave way with a groan that was half a scream.

O'Hara's revolver was empty. He was in the doorway now, astride the prostrate body of his partner, though how he had got there he did not know. Out of the fog of smoke a face loomed. He flung the empty weapon at it, stooped, and snatched up the six-shooter of his friend. There was no conscious volition on his part. The .45 began to roar.

One moment the day was filled with the fury of battle. The next the sound of it had died away. O'Hara's enemies were falling back, driven into retreat by the steadiness of his fire.

Once more his revolver hammer clicked on an empty chamber. Garrett dropped the weapon, stooped, and picked up his partner. He carried him into the house and laid him on a bed, then swiftly set about putting the cabin into a state of defense. Bolting the back door, he barricaded it with a trunk. He drew the window curtains. Another trunk he pushed into the front doorway, then dragged a mattress there and propped it up in front of the trunk as a protection against bullets.

All this had taken him scarcely a score of seconds. From a rack he drew rifles, a repeating Winchester for one, and two of Smith-Beresford's hunting guns brought with him from England.

From behind the trunk and mattress O'Hara took in the situation. Two men were wounded seriously. He could see them lying on the ground where their companions had dragged them. Most of the others were gathered in a group near the horses. Sanderson, waving a bandanna meant for a flag of truce, had stepped a few yards forward from the rest.

Garrett felt, as he had more than once in the past weeks, that odd lift of the spirit that came with danger. He was wounded in two places. His companion lay helpless on the bed. A dozen desperate men, all heavily armed, were ready to swoop down on him. But he had proved his mettle. He had fought them, one against four, and driven them into retreat. These killers could and they probably would destroy him and his friend. But he knew, with an exultant thrill of racing blood, that he was not afraid of them; and he knew, too, that there would be no safety in surrender. Two of them had been wounded by him, perhaps mortally. The others would have their revenge, Sanderson would see to that.

From the bed came a faint murmur. "Hold the fort, Old Top." "No use to give up. Sanderson would never let us get away alive. . . . Badly hurt, Lyulph!" "About all I can carry, old chap. In the chest!"

"Sorry. I'm hit in the shoulder and the stomach, but I feel pretty strong yet. Wonder if they'll rush the place."

Garrett could see the enemy grouped in consultation. Presently the men scattered. They were spreading out to surround the house. A bullet struck the trunk in front of him. Another plowed into the mattress. The Winchester in his hands barked an answer. Apparently they had settled down to a siege. O'Hara could count at least five foes in the fan-shaped open space in front of him. They were all behind cover, but the flashes of their weapons told him where they lay. Three or four were back of the stable with the horses and the prisoner. The others had disappeared. It was an easy guess that they were making a wide circuit to take him in the rear.

The besieger man slipped back from the doorway, leaving the barrel of a rifle showing beside the mattress. He dragged another of his partner's trunks to the back door and piled it on top of the first one. Lifting the table to the window, he put it on a box and nailed the top of it to the frame in such a way as to cover the glass entirely.

He hurried to his place in the doorway, fired two shots, and withdrew again to give his friend water in a dipper. "How're you feeling?" he asked.

His friend grinned feebly. "Bolter damaged. Can't get up steam." From time to time he coughed up blood.

Garrett went back to his post. There was nothing he could do for his companion and he could not leave the doorway for long at a time. He heard the sound of shots from the rear and the spat of the lead against the logs. The enemy had him completely surrounded now.

He waited for the next billow of smoke in front, fired at it, and put down the rifle. Unfastening the belt around his waist, he looked for the stomach wound. There was nothing there but a bruise where the metal

Two-Dollar Bill Called "Just Darned Nuisance"

The idea that there is something unlucky about the $2 bill—so that many persons fear the corners of them to avert misfortune—occasionally arouses curiosity.

A number of our readers have written in with suggestions to account for the belief in the unfortunateness of this particular note. One, however, a merchant in Pennsylvania, says from his experience as a retailer that "there is no question of superstition in connection with the $2 bill. It is just a darned nuisance."

"There is no compartment provided in our cash register for them," he writes, "and when we are handed one by a customer we have to secrete it away somewhere until we get a chance to pass it on to the bank. We can't very well hand it out to another customer for change, that is if we want to retain their good will."

"The only possible use it has is when some one purchases a 2-cent stamp and hands us a $20 bill in payment. Then we can get back at him by unloading all the $2 bills we have on hand."—Literary Digest.

Somewhat Out of Place
The place was crowded. It wasn't exactly a fashionable wedding, but there was no gainsaying the interest it caused, because both bride and bridegroom had been much in the public eye, she as an actress, he as a conjurer.

Everything went well until they reached the critical stage of the proceedings, and the clergyman asked for the ring.

The bridegroom plunged his hand into his pocket and brought out a rabbit. Then the horrified look in the clergyman's eyes and a startled exclamation from the bride made him realize that something was wrong. He looked down and saw the rabbit.

Whatever foreign language we try to learn, it sounds to the foreigners like their broken English done to us.

"Higher Place" Explained
Jack was the cause of much trouble to his parents. At school he was always at the foot of the class. One day, however, he came flying home.

"Dad—mum, I have got a higher place in the class," he cried.

His father gave him a dollar. "Now, Jack," he asked, "how did you gain promotion to a higher place?"

"Well, it's like this, dad," said the young hopeful. "My desk is being mended."

buckle had been driven against the flesh. Undoubtedly the clasp had deflected the bullet and saved his life.

Hour after hour the siege dragged on. Smith-Beresford became delirious. Garrett bathed his face and chest, gave him water to drink, and left a wet cloth on his forehead.

The young lawyer knew that his own fever was mounting. The wound in his shoulder pained a good deal. It was his guess that the bullet had smashed a bone.

Grimly he recognized the fact that the attackers were paying him a compliment by their caution. They might have rushed the cabin and ended the affair in two minutes. Evidently they counted the cost as too great to pay. The men he had wounded were a sufficient object lesson to them.

What were they up to now? A wagon was being pushed from the back of the barn and headed toward the house. Four or five men were behind it. They were using it as a cover for their approach. Snipers from right and left kept up a steady fire to prevent his concentrating on the wagon.

The wheels of the wagon slewed to the right. A man crept forward to straighten them. Garrett drew a bead on him and fired. The man stumbled over his own foot and plunged to the ground. His body twitched and lay still. The others deserted the wagon and fled for the shelter of the barn.

The shot had been a lucky one for Garrett. But it decided the fate of the prisoner Fitch. One of the log rafters of the barn projected from the roof. The unfortunate man was wed beneath this, a rope around his neck. The other end was thrown over the rafter. Before Garrett's eyes they hanged the cowboy.

It was a thing horrible to see. This boy they were hanging was no criminal. But he was no weakling. There was in him the stiff hardihood that frontier life begets. The rope already around his throat, he borrowed tobacco, rolled a cigarette, and smoked it. His horse was brought. He was helped into the saddle. As they started to lead the animal away he sprang into the air to make the fall of his body more violent.

Garrett turned away, sick at heart. He had to look again, to see what the enemy was about. They were gathered in a group discussing something heatedly. Plainly they disagreed. But the young man in the cabin knew that his affairs had come to a crisis. He heard a voice raised in sudden anger. A man detached himself from the group. "By cripes, I'll smoke the pilgrim out if I play a lone hand. What you birds need is sand in yore craws."

The speaker was Bob Quantrell. He walked to a horse and flung himself into a saddle. He reined the animal around savagely to face the cabin. The bronco went into the air sunshining, came down, bucked up all humped-backed, and landed with legs as stiff as stakes. The rider had not yet found the stirrups. He lost his balance and shot through the air to the ground. Instantly he was on his feet again, running to catch the bridle.

Before he was in the saddle a second time an interruption occurred. Two riders, a man and a woman, galloped across the open toward the stable. The man was Dave Ingram, the woman Barbara Steelman.

Ingram dragged his pony to a halt and leaped to the ground. "What's all this?" he demanded. Deever moved forward. "These pilgrims have done killed Brad Sowers an' wounded three more of us. I don't reckon Pankey will make the grade."

"Who started it?" demanded Ingram. The Texas Kid answered him. The young fellow had a blood-stained handkerchief tied around his arm. "We got to fannin' smoke all together, looks like."

The leader of the faction turned to Quantrell. "What was you aimin' to do, Bob, when you put on this exhibition of fancy ridin'?"

"Smoke 'em out, by cripes! Show this bunch of quittera a tenderfoot can't bluff me out."

Ingram looked with an impassive face at the swaying body of the dead cowboy. "I see you got Fitch. Don't you reckon that's about enough for one gather? Suppose you leave this for me. Before we go any farther I'd like to know who got on the hook first. An' why?"

"They did," Sanderson blustered. "They fixed Tom Fitch up with breakfast an' then they hid him out on us. Soon as we found him that pilgrim O'Hara began to fan smoke right away."

"How many in the cabin?" Bob Quantrell answered, jeering at his companion and himself. "You got a surprise comin', Ingram. One live tenderfoot an' one dead one. The live pilgrim shot up consid'able. Too much for the boys. They're allowin' to crawl off with their tails between their legs."

Barbara waited to hear no more. One of her friends was dead and the other wounded. Her place was with them, not here. She touched her pony with the spur and the animal jumped to a canter. Straight toward the house she rode.

Too late Ingram understood her intention. Her horse had covered one-third of the distance before he could make a move.

"Ladies' choice," murmured Quantrell insolently. "Right hands to yore pardners an' grand right an' left. Everybody waltz. I'll be doggone if I don't begin to like the Haskknife outfit better than the Diamond Tail. No yellow in their stock, looks like."

Ingram looked at the young desperado coldly. "Perhaps you'd like to join them," he said.

Unexpectedly Quantrell's answer jumped back at him, a sharp acceptance of the challenge. "You're d-d whittin' I would. No complaints against you, Ingram, but I don't like the company I'm keepin'."

He backed warily toward his horse, rifle in hand. The boy's buck teeth showed in a snarl as he drew up his lip. The cold light blue eyes passed in little stabling glances from one to another. He was ready at an instant's warning to begin slinging bullets.

No man moved to prevent him from going. They could shoot him down. That was certain. But not without loss. He was as quick, as accurate, and as deadly as a coiled rattlesnake.

"Don't push on the reins," Ingram said quietly. "Think it over awhile."

"No, sir. When I'm through I'm through. Anybody got any objections?" Again his eyes darted from one to another, trying to read and forestall the intentions of these ruffians with whom he was paring company.

If there were any objections none was expressed by anybody except Ingram.

"You're liable to see this, Quantrell," his employer said. "Not none," the boy replied curtly. He had reached his horse. Warily he edged behind it, not for one moment lifting his eyes from the group he had left. His hand felt for the bridle, his foot for the stirrup. He swung to the saddle, latched the horse behind the stable, whirled it in its tracks, and dashed for the pines, looking back as he rode.

Garrett O'Hara watched with amazement as Barbara swung her cow pony and put it at a canter toward the cabin. She slipped from the saddle and moved to the door while he dragged aside the mattress to make way for her.

Once inside, she looked at him, eyes dilating with fear. "Are you hurt—badly?" she asked. "In the shoulder. I'll be all right. Afraid Lyulph is badly hurt. They hit him in the chest."

She looked at the bed where the delirious man lay tossing. "I'll take care of him. Watch out they don't rush the house. I don't think Mr. Ingram will let them, but I'm not sure."

Barbara made preparations to do what she could for the man on the bed. Once more Garrett lay down back of his rampart and took stock of the enemy. Ingram appeared to be issuing orders to his men. They hitched horses to a wagon, put hay in the bed of it, and lifted the two most seriously wounded of the posse into the wagon, after which the team was driven away, followed by most of the riders. One man stayed with Ingram.

Garrett reported the proceedings to Barbara. "Wonder what he's up to," she said, moistening a bandage.

"He's coming toward the house—alone."

The girl ran to the door. "He hasn't even drawn a six-shooter. He wants to talk. Let him come in if he wants to."

Garrett drew back and the cattle man pushed his way into the house.

The Snorting McKinley County Donkey Gets an Awful Reverse

With the Democrats in McKinley County demanding a recount, after having issued election certificates to 5 county officials and claiming that the entire Democratic ticket was elected, and charging Foul Play, a re-count was made, but instead of electing the full Democratic County ticket, they lost all of the offices, and the 5 that were granted certificates, had them taken away and the new certificates issued to the Republican Candidates.

As reports went last week, the Absentee Ballots were responsible for failure of the Democrats to land everything in sight, but it appears after viewing the recount, that the absentee ballots were not brought into question, at all, but the claim of the Democrats was that the vote had been tampered with, else they would have all been elected. The recount was made on the demand of the Democrats, who hoped to gain everything, but in their attempt to prove that charge, they lost it all.

The recount showed that many, many ballots were cast, where the state ticket Democratic candidates were voted for, and the Republican County candidates, but were all counted as S-t-r-a-i-g-h-t Democratic tickets, and enough of these were found to comfortably seat all Republican candidates on the County ticket.

What the hell Bill! Is it possible that what was said in the Democratic press last week that the absentee ballots in McKinley County was the G-r-i-m-e that kept the Democratic Ticket from being elected, must be retracted? Is it possible that the great and pure Democracy of McKinley County could so launch the court into an ocean of grief on a charge of fraud, and have it verified that the case was very much to the reverse?

Coupling the two great names of Lincoln and McKinley together, we were led to believe that the infamous, unwashed, un-terrified absentee ballot law, without which, no Republican in the State could possibly be elected, was responsible for all the failures to secure a full barrel of boiled-down Democracy.

THE NEW CHEVROLET SIX HAS MANY IMPROVEMENTS

The introduction of the new Chevrolet Six marks the most impressive forward step in Chevrolet's twenty-year record of constant progress and improvement.

For this Bigger and Better Six offers new beauty of line and color, new luxury, new completeness and new quality—yet it sells at lower prices!

In every curve and sweep of Chevrolet's modern lines—in every detail of its smart new Fisher bodies, you will see the fine hand of the master designer and the skillful craftsman. And the more closely you inspect it, the more deeply impressed you will be.

The improvements in the new Chevrolet Six begin at the smart new chrome-plated headlamps and extend throughout the entire car. The radiator is deeper and unusually efficient. Due to the increased wheelbase, the lines are longer and lower, giving an air of exceptional sleekness and grace. And the new Fisher bodies combine with this more attractive exterior appearance, a new degree of interior luxury.

The upholstery is of fine quality mohair or broadcloth, carefully tailored and fitted. The number of individual springs in the rear seat cushions has been increased by 25%. The windshield and windows have been redesigned to provide wider vision. And all interior fittings have been made more pleasing to the eye.

The chassis of the new Chevrolet Six has also been refined and advanced in a number of different ways. The frame is heavier, deeper and stronger than before. There is a smoother operating, long lived clutch; a sturdier front axle; an entirely new steering mechanism of the worm and sector type; an easier shifting transmission. In fact, every vital feature of the new car has been made better and more satisfactory to the owner.

Obviously, these many improvements are responsible for a higher standard of quality than before. And they become doubly significant when you consider that they are offered in a car which provides the smooth, quiet, flexible performance of a 50-horsepower, six-cylinder motor—the comfort of four long semi-elliptic springs and four hydraulic shock absorbers—the safety of a gasoline tank at the rear of the car—and an economy of operation not surpassed by any automobile.

AT NEW LOW PRICES

Fine as it is, the new Chevrolet Six now sells at lower prices—making the economy and satisfaction of Chevrolet ownership even more outstanding. We urge you to come in and see the Bigger and Better Chevrolet. Its modern design reflects the spirit of the times—and it represents a value which will command the interest of every buyer in the low-price field.

Buildings Sway in Wind

Tall office buildings that are built of steel are flexible, since the steel has high elasticity. Therefore, in a heavy wind where the total side pressure may amount to hundreds of tons the steel framework will bend ever before it. Wind pressure is not constant, and the building will be bent over in proportion to the strength of the different gusts. Occasionally this swaying is perceptible to the senses, but as a rule in most modern buildings the movement is so very slight as to be unnoticeable, except by instrumental measurement.

ZACCHAEUS THE PUBLICAN, A BUSINESS MAN CONVERTED

LESSON TEXT—Luke 19:1-10.
GOLDEN TEXT—For the Son of man is come to seek and to save that which was lost.
PRIMARY TOPIC—A Man Who Thought Jesus Would Not Care.
JUNIOR TOPIC—A Man Who Righted His Wrongs.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—How Religion Changes One's Life.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Making Business Christian.

I. Jesus Passing Through Jericho (v. 1).

Jericho is noted as the stronghold of the Canaanites, which was miraculously delivered into the hands of Israel in response to their faith (Josh. 6), and also for the faith of Rahab which saved her from destruction with the city (Heb. 11:30, 31). It was thus noted as a city where faith and unbelief played against each other. It was fitting that Jesus should pass through Jericho, faith and unbelief again were manifested. Two notorious sinners, Rahab and Zacchaeus, were saved at Jericho.

II. Zacchaeus Seeking Jesus (vv. 2-4).

1. His object (v. 3).
He sought to see who Jesus was. Though perhaps prompted by curiosity, he eagerly sought Jesus.

2. His difficulties (vv. 2, 3).

(1) His infamous business (v. 2).
He was a tax collector for the Roman government. The very fact that a Jew held such an office under the hated Romans would make him extremely unpopular. Then, since he was rich, it was evident that he had practiced extortion in collecting the taxes. Many men and women have a hard time in coming to Christ because of their questionable business relations.

(2) His shortness of stature (v. 3).
He was too small to crowd his way through to Jesus, and being hated by the people they had thrust him aside.

3. His persistence (v. 4).

He ran before the multitude and climbed up into a tree. What he lacked in stature he was determined should be made up by the height of the tree. Though Zacchaeus' legs were too short to enable him to see Jesus they were long enough to run past the crowd and enable him to climb the tree.

III. Jesus Finding Zacchaeus (vv. 5, 6).

While Zacchaeus was trying to see Jesus, Jesus was looking for him. This is always the case. When desire is stirred up in a heart to see Jesus, Jesus is seeking that one. When Jesus saw him he commanded him to come down from the tree and declared his intention to go home with him. Zacchaeus got more than he expected. Jesus called him by name. He did not utter a word which would humiliate Zacchaeus. Jesus knew his heart's desire and dealt accordingly with him. All souls who earnestly seek Jesus shall be found of him. How wonderful his grace, that regardless of one's past life, Jesus will receive him as a friend and enter into fellowship with him! Zacchaeus quickly responded. He came down and with joy received Jesus.

IV. Zacchaeus' Conversion (vv. 7-10).

His conversion was sudden and thorough. He was converted before he had reached the ground.

1. What the crowd said (v. 7).

They said just what they say today when sinners come to Christ. They call to mind the man's former sins. They also reproached Christ, saying that he had gone to be a guest of this notorious extortioner, the tax collector. That for which they reproached Jesus was his glory. His supreme mission was to save sinners (v. 10).

2. What Zacchaeus said (v. 8).

His conversion was thorough. It took hold upon his heart. His new life began with resolution and restitution. He dedicated half of his goods to the poor. The man who a little while ago was a graffer was now a generous giver. His conversion got hold of his pocketbook. His determination to make restitution wherein he had wrongly exacted taxes shows the genuineness of his conversion. While God forgets the past of a sinner when he comes to Christ, the sinner who is converted will seek to right all wrongs, be they unkind words or unrighteous deeds. Sorrow for sin is not enough when restitution is possible.

3. What Jesus said (vv. 9, 10).

"Today is salvation come to thy house." The publican was now a child of God, a son of Abraham. Salvation is a present reality when one receives Christ.

Widow Millie Filled the Stocking

By Wm. L. Gaston

WIDOW MILLIE lived on a western farm and with the help of a hired man—a slow-going man named Mike—nobody ever heard his last name—managed to grow good crops and maintain the appearance of thrift.

Five years before her husband, Wilson Macy, had died and she had been left alone to carry on the work of the ranch. Mrs. Macy was an attractive young woman whose age would have been guessed somewhere in the thirties. She was plump, good-natured—and generally liked in the community. Somehow she came to be called Widow Millie by the neighbors, who used the name as much to express their kindly feelings as to distinguish her from other people.

Bob Ramsay and Jim Walden were both eligible widowers and each owned a quarter section of good land adjoining Widow Millie's land, one on the north and one on the east. Each seemed a trifle more than anxious to have everything go right on the widow's ranch and neither was backward in the proffer of advice or offers to help. To do this properly required a call and neither was averse to calling.

Tom Moulton was a bachelor—a timid, bashful bachelor who could blush better than he could talk, in the presence of ladies. He owned a good ranch and was one of the most thrifty farmers in the community. He was good looking and very obliging. He was well liked but no one believed that he could ever muster the courage to propose marriage to any woman. He often slipped over to the widow's farm, to see Mike, of course. He gave his farm advice to Mike. Sometimes he exchanged work with Mike and on these occasions there was an extra white cloth on the table and the biscuits had an extra salkiness. Tom liked the biscuits. Tom ate the biscuits but he could not think of a word to say when the conversation was directed to him.

On the night before Christmas both Bob and Jim called and Widow Millie proceeded to entertain both in the parlor. She managed conversation and kept it going in the general direction while the visitors sipped and squirmed, each hoping that the other would soon leave. Millie was sure that Tom was in the kitchen. She could hear the muffled conversation of two slow-speaking men. Millie extended an invitation to both her visitors to come over the next day and have Christmas dinner with her. This was the signal for both to leave.

After their departure Millie went to the kitchen, but Tom had gone and Mike had retired. But hanging on the kitchen wall just over the stove was a pair of ladies' silk stockings. She looked at them in amazement. They were not hers and how could they have gotten there. Going closer she observed a piece of note paper protruding from one of them. She pulled it out hastily and excitedly read:

"Widow Millie: I have hung these stockings up here for you. I want you to fill them and wear them tomorrow. I have hung up a pair for myself at home. I will fill them and wear them over here tomorrow noon. The preacher and his wife will be with me. I fixed up everything else at the courthouse this afternoon. I can farm better if I do not have to cook. You can cook better if you do not have to farm. This is an honest offer, from Tom."

It would be hard to describe the thoughts that raced through Millie's mind. At first she was indignant. She resented it as an impertinence. "He had his nerve," she said almost aloud a dozen times, but she smiled when she thought that nerve was the very thing that Tom was supposed not to have. She liked Tom, and if he had come out boldly and proposed in the usual way she did not know what she would have done. She took up the note again, but she could only see the last line—"this is an honest offer, from Tom." It spoke her with its straightforwardness and simplicity. "He is honest," she said to herself. She resolved first one thing, then another, but always came back to that last line—the honest offer. The last line won.

When Tom, the preacher and his wife arrived, Widow Millie had the stockings filled and dinner was well on the way. The minister's wife finished it. Bob and Jim were in time for the ceremony, and of course they stayed for their Christmas dinner.

"Gerald suffered with his stomach and bowels until he was listless and weak," says Mrs. B. E. Geren, 823 W. Main St., Oklahoma City, Okla.

"Now he's the strongest boy I know. I gave him California Fig Syrup because Mother used it. It increased his appetite, regulated his bowels, helped his digestion."

Nothing could be more convincing than the way thousands of mothers are praising California Fig Syrup to show how it acts to build-up and strengthen headachy, bilious, half-sick, constipated children.

Your doctor will approve the use of this pure vegetable product as often as impure breath, coated tongue, listlessness or feverishness warn of constipation—or to keep bowels open in colds or children's diseases.

When there's distress two hours after eating—heartburn, indigestion, gas—suspect excess acid.

The best way to correct this is with an alkali. Physicians prescribe Phillips' Milk of Magnesia.

A spoonful of Phillips' Milk of Magnesia in a glass of water neutralizes many times its volume in excess acid; and does it at once. To try it is to be through with crude methods forever.

Christmas Gift De Luxe
Of all decorative and exquisite wares shown in the gift shops this season, there is none handsomer than that of ebony black glass with a designful patterning done in sterling silver inlay.

Stage Coach Book-Ends
From all indications Santa is going to make a specialty of giving stagecoach book-ends this Christmas. They are too clever for words, these book-ends, which stand a decorative little coach at each end of a row of books, for the stagecoach, be it of royal lineage like the one pictured or of thoroughly American pioneer descent, is taking the place of the at-one-time favorite ship as a decorative feature in the home.

A Chic Gift Suggestion

Mother, wife, sister, sweetheart, cousins, aunts and friends, there is not one of the fair sex who being style-wise but will enthusiastically welcome a Yuletide gift of one of the new beaded collar-and-cuff sets. The neckwear departments are showing them in fascinating array.

Made-of-Ribbon Gifts

Basket-woven ribbon fancywork is again in fashion. There's going to be many a "Merry Christmas" card tied to everything from sachets to handkerchiefs and glove cases, pillows, dresser mats, and even large cases to hold the "nightie" made of ribbon, as the picture shows. Nothing so expresses heart-to-heart sentiment as the "I-made-it-myself" gift.

Cute Pillows for Youngsters

Here is a Christmas gift-ideal for youngsters—pillows made of satin or percale, appliqued with animal or birds cut out of gingham as pictured. Being washable, mothers will welcome them in the nursery. Santa Claus specially recommends this type for "pillow fights."

Can I Learn to Fly?
by William R. Nelson

Vertical Banks
AIRPLANES and automobiles, as machines of transportation, have many traits in common, the student pilot soon realizes. But they also differ widely. The student who drives a motor car picks up certain phases of flying quickly. Other phases, however, because they are peculiar to flying, are confusing and difficult to grasp.
I encountered one of flying's paradoxes in my lesson on "vertical banks."
"In a vertical bank the controls cross," my instructor explained. "The rudder, being in a horizontal position instead of a vertical position, serves as the elevator and the elevator becomes the rudder. Remember that."
He took the controls at 3,000 feet and told me to follow through while he showed me the vertical bank maneuver. It was not different from any other bank except that he held the stick over longer and, when the plane's wings were almost vertical, brought the stick to neutral and well back. To level out he moved the stick in the opposite direction and held it there until the plane righted itself.
"Bank over until that wire (meaning a diagonal brace between the wings) is parallel to horizon," he instructed. "Then neutralize the stick and pull it back to hold the ship in the turn. If the nose climbs, push the bottom rudder pedal. Remember you will be on your side. If the nose drops, push top rudder."
I banked over sharply and as the brace wire became parallel with horizon, neutralized the stick and pulled it back toward me. That movement "tightened" the circle, the elevator, in a vertical position, acting as a rudder. To increase the diameter of our circular course I allowed the stick to go slightly forward. As it did so my instructor shouted through the speaking tube:
"Hold the stick firmly. If you increase the size of the turn we will lose altitude. Now try bringing the nose up and down with the rudder pedals."
At first the crossed controls confused me. Seeing the earth on one side and the sky on the other, also bothered. But after a half-hour of practice I had apparently mastered the maneuver sufficiently and my instructor signaled for me to return to the airport.

Taking a Ride

SOLO flying began in earnest after the last lesson, and next I was sent out without a preliminary "check flight" by my instructor. That marked the beginning of another stage in my flying course and my graduation from the ranks of the "dual" students. I, however, did get further instruction.
"Where are we going to do today?" I asked as my instructor came in from the field where he had been with another student. "Well," he asked, rather surprised. "You are going to fly. I am staying here. There's your plane. It's all ready for you. I'm going to watch from the window here. Now show me some nice, three-point landings."
My heart was pounding slightly as I climbed, in alone, looked about to see that all was clear and opened the throttle. I had experienced many thrills since starting the course, but none that gave me more satisfaction than that of my first "all alone" lesson.
The take-off was without incident, and as I leveled out at 1,000 feet for the trip around the pattern, I reveled in the thought that I could make those turns as I pleased without fear of being signaled for them if I chose to stretch the course here and there.
The first landing was good, and I immediately roared away again. Around and around I flew. Each time I had no trouble with any of the routine maneuvers. After a half-dozen turns about the pattern and as many good landings, I decided to fly away from the course for a little ride over the open country.
That decision and the ride that followed put more desire to fly into my blood than anything I had done. To be free to make one's own decisions and to have enough confidence in one's ability to have no fear of trouble, kindled a desire to "fill 'er up with gas and roar away" to some distant place that was difficult to control.
At 70 miles an hour one can cover considerable territory in ten minutes, and from 2,000 feet one can see so much farther away that I felt as though I had seen half of the state by the time I returned to the field.
Being away from the "pattern" gave opportunity to "hunt" for the airport as a visiting pilot, a stranger to that locality, would have to do. I found it easily.

The Vagabond's Christmas
by HELEN GAISFORD

CRAINS scarcely slowed as they passed through Brayton, but the hobo was watching and dropped off in the snow. He picked himself up whistling, and approached the crossroads station. How well he remembered that station! Even the group of arguing old men seemed the same. Oh, but it was good to be home again, to spend Christmas where he had been so happy as a boy!
One of the men pointed a finger at him. "That," he said, "is what this country is coming to. Able-bodied men roaming the country in rags and tatters. Likely looking fellow, too! I tell you, it's high time congress—"
The vagabond chuckled and proceeded lightly down the road. Suddenly he checked himself. "George!" he said, "there's old Aunt Agatha's house. Why, Aunt Agatha was another mother to every boy in town. I wonder—" He sprang up on the porch and knocked.
A sharp-faced woman opened the door. "Well!" she gasped; "no, I ain't giving victuals to tramps what can't come to the kitchen!" The door slammed, but he rapped again persistently.
Presently the woman reappeared. "I beg your pardon, ma'am, I'm looking for Miss Agatha Oberman. Do you know where I can find her?"
"She's been dead and buried these eight years. You an old friend of hers?"
"Yes, I'm Ben Martin—used to live in that house on the corner. I'm sure sorry she's gone." He moved down the steps. "Thank you anyway, ma'am, and a Merry Christmas."
A little of the zest had gone out of Ben Martin's return. He recognized the town drug store, just ahead, but now it carried a new sign—"Thompson's Pharmacy"—and in smaller letters, "W. J. Thompson, Prop." Inside

"No, Thanks; Too Used to Freedom," He Said.
—why, of course! "W. J. Thompson, Prop." was Bill!
"Bill," he called, "it's me—Ben Martin!"
"Ben!" Their hands clasped. "How well you look! But what on earth—let me give you a job."
"No, thanks; too used to freedom."
"Jove, Ben, you were a sickly kid—how did you do it?"
"Oh, it's careless sleep under the stars; going where adventure calls and doing what comes; eating plain food and— But what of you and the rest of the boys?"
"Me? Oh, I'm married now and settled down. Tom's our doctor, but I'm away for the holidays. Bert and Pug have both married and moved away, and Fred is studying in New York. I say, I'd sure like to ask you out to Christmas dinner tomorrow, but, well, Martha's queer about some things."
"That's all right. I'll mosey around to the old homestead. My dear cousin still there?"
"Yes. Your uncle's gone, I suppose you know, but otherwise the family is the same as when the black-sheep nephew took off on his own. You'll surprise them."
"No doubt," Ben Martin replied, and made his farewells.
The old house on the corner was much the same. His knock brought a comely young woman to the door. "My dear Cousin Fanny," he said, "it's Ben. Give me a kiss, my dear, and announce to the family that the prodigal has returned."
The family had evidently already learned of his nearness and gathered in the hall. "I was wondering," he said at last, when the first greetings and questions had been exchanged, "whether you could put me up for a few days. I could, of course, sleep outside, if necessary."
"Unfortunately, Benjamin," his aunt replied, "every room is taken, as the family is all home for the holidays. Besides, there is the question of whether or not—a wanderer—might have a proper effect on the younger members of the family, let alone the good name of us all. I think you'll understand—"
"I do." He drew himself up. "It was simply the sentiment. I felt I would like to spend Christmas here. But I shan't impose on you. Glad to have seen you all again."
He strode back up the road. "Hang sentiment!" he decided. "I'm going south." That night's express bore an extra passenger.

ATWATER KENT RADIO with the GOLDEN VOICE

"I know what I want"
"So do I"
... and it's going to be an Atwater Kent. What we want is performance, and so far as we're concerned there's only one choice.
We want the Golden Voice of the new Atwater Kent—good, clear, consistent reception, without a lot of noise. We want power enough to bring in distant stations. We want a dial we can read easily from any position, without straining our eyes—that new Atwater Kent Quick-Vision Dial. We want the new Atwater Kent Tone Control, so that we can bring out the low notes or the high notes as we please.
We want a radio that's always ready to go when we come to the end of a day's work. We want the kind of dependability that Atwater Kent is famous for. We want a radio from the maker who insists that farm people shall have just as good performance as city people.
We want an up-to-date radio, with all the newest worth-while improvements—plus Screen-Grid, from the manufacturer with longest Screen-Grid experience. We want a really good-looking radio—one we can show with pride when friends come in.
We're going to put our money where our faith is, and that means one of the new Atwater Kents. When we go into town tomorrow, we're going to stop at a dealer's and order an Atwater Kent. We know what we want and we're going to get it—NOW.
The new 1931 Atwater Kent with the Golden Voice is built for either all-electric or battery operation. That's another reason why rural families all over the United States prefer the new Atwater Kent.

Man's Never-Ending War on His Insect Enemies

One war that never ceases is that waged by insects upon man. Every year insects cost the human race millions upon millions of dollars by their destruction of growing crops and stored harvests. And they kill or maim thousands of human beings by spreading disease.
Science is constantly engaged in investigating new means of keeping insect foes at bay, and wonderful work has been done.
The stamping out of malaria in large areas once almost uninhabitable, and the checking of the spread of sleeping sickness are examples of what has been accomplished.
Now comes news of a discovery which may open up entirely new lines of attack on insect pests. For a long time past a young Australian scientist, Dr. F. G. Holdaway, has been endeavoring to find a way of dealing with the flour beetle, which does an enormous amount of damage. He has found that the proportion of grubs that turn into males and females can be controlled by regulating their food; starve a hundred grubs for one day and the majority will develop into male beetles.
Now, the female beetle may lay thousands of eggs. If, therefore, he has found a means of decreasing the number of females, the beetle pest may be kept down. Similar principles of sex-control may be found applicable to other insect enemies of man.

Petrified Tree Stump

While blasting out a ledge at Moose River, Maine, a road commissioner blew out a large fragment of rock which had in the center the well-defined remains of an ancient stump that had become almost wholly petrified, small pieces of the wood being easily picked out of the stone. The wood appeared to be a knot, which in some remote age had solidified as the sandstone formation in which it was found gradually hardened into a concrete mass.

Ammonia in Drinking Water

A new use for ammonia is in treating water in combination with chlorine. To insure proper bactericidal action an excess of chlorine is usually added and the water thus treated has a noticeable and rather unpleasant taste. If ammonia is added to the chlorine, forming chloramine, the amount of chlorine necessary is reduced to less than half the usual standard and the bactericidal action is increased and made more thorough.

Fretful DAYS Restless NIGHTS ... give child Castoria

FUSSY, fretful, can't sleep, won't eat... It isn't always easy to find just where the trouble is with a young child. It may be a stomach upset; it may be sluggish bowels.
But when little tongues are coated and there is even a slight suspicion of bad breath—it's time for Castoria!
Castoria, you know, is a pure vegetable preparation especially made for babies and children. When Baby cries with colic or is fretful because of constipation, Castoria brings quick comfort, and, with relief from pain, soothes him to restful sleep. For older children—up through all the school years, Castoria is equally effective in helping to right irregularities. Just give it in larger doses. What a comfort Castoria is to mothers! Get the genuine, with Chas. H. Fletcher's signature on wrapper and the name Castoria that always appears like this:

HEAD THROB?

The woman who knows, would as soon start out without her purse! She always carries Bayer Aspirin.

When your head fairly throbs from the stores and crowds, reach for that little box. Take two or three tablets, a swallow of water, and resume your shopping—in comfort. Relief is immediate.

Most people use these wonderful tablets for something! But do you know how many, many ways they can spare you needless suffering? From the discomfort—and danger—of a neglected cold. From serious consequences of a sore throat. From those pains peculiar to women. From the misery of neuralgia and neuritis. Every drugstore has genuine Bayer Aspirin. The box says Bayer, and every tablet bears the Bayer cross. Tablets thus marked do not depress the heart.

You generally can't shock people without disgusting them. Consider that.
