Fatal Shooting Near Ancho

Monday evening between the hours of six and seven o'clock, L. E. Cobb was killed by officers headed by Deputy Pete Johnson, after he resisted arrest on a charge of having stolen property in his possession in the form of two automobiles. The posse had located the cars and had been laying in wait for Cobb for about two days.

When he arrived, he entered one of the cars and attempted to start it when the officers appeared and ordered him to surrender. Instead of obeying the order, Cobb, according to the officers, pulled a gun and fired, the shot striking Ramon Farmer in the groin. The posse then opened fire on Cobb, killing him instantly. The body was brought to the Kelley morgue, where it still remains awaiting the arrival of relatives from Valentine, Texas.

The trouble arose over the receipt of complaints from another source to the effect that two cars had been stolen, and it is alleged that the cars captured by the officers were the ones reported as having been stolen. A search was made by the sheriff and his force who finally located the cars about seven miles northwest of Ancho and as stated above, Deputy Johnson, Ramon and Juan Farmer had camped near the cars and waited to see who would come for the property.

Cobb, at one time ran a grocery store and filling station at Ancho and was well known around this neighborhood. At the time of his death, a case was pending in court against him for the alleged offense of car stealing. Later Ramon Farmer died yesterday about the noon hour as the result of his wound and will be interred today in the local cemetery. The sympathy of the community is extended to the Farmer families.

H. E. Cobb, uncle to the deceased, is here to take the remains back to El Dorado, Texas.

Notice to Taxpayers

The 1930 Tax Roll is now in my hands and I am ready to receive your 1930 taxes.

R. A. Duran,
County Treasurer.

The Misses

Converse, Cotey and Mrs. Harry Ellarbee of Fort Stanton were Carrizozo visitors last Saturday.

John and Barney Wilson were Carrizozo business visitors from their ranches near Ancho the first part of the week.

He's at the Door.

Position of Honor

When the doors open next Saturday on the 21st National Automobile Show at Grand Palace, New York, the Chevrolet Motor Company will occupy the position of honor on the show floor for the fourth consecutive year.

Each year, the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce awards first place at the national automobile shows to that member company doing the largest volume of business during the previous twelve months.

The award is one much coveted within the industry, for in addition to the distinction it conveys it also carries with it the right to choice of exhibition space at the national automobile shows at New York and Chicago. Back in the days of the four cylinder Chevrolet this honor fell to the company. Since that time the margin between the leader and the runner-up has measurably widened, ever since the change-over from a four to a six.

Pageant Service at Glencoe Baptist Church

On Sunday night, Dec. 28, a mid-winter pageant will be presented by Mrs. H. Haywood and trained youth of Lower Ruidoso. This will be followed by a suitable sermon from a former pastor, Rev. Herbert Haywood. The public is cordially invited to the service. It will start at 7:15.

J. H. Kimmons

was here Wednesday from Oscura, attending to business and returning home about the noon hour.

"Barnacles" Will Sing

State Tribune:

Santa Fe, Dec. 24—There is going to be one more republican meeting here before the democrats take charge of the state house.

On the morning of Jan. 1, Gov. Dillon is going to round up the republicans before the state house, he said today.

"I'm going to get all those barnacles together and have them sing 'God Be With You 'Til We Meet Again,'" he promised.

The governor didn't say so, but he expects the G. O. P. to back again in 1933.

Sixteen Christmas commutations, paroles and pardons were extended prisoners in the state penitentiary by Governor Dillon today. He personally delivered the documents bearing executive clemency during the noon hour.

Highway Fund Available

Washington, Dec. 23.—State highway departments were notified today that their respective portions of the $80,000,000 emergency highway construction appropriation is available immediately.

The federal aid money is to be officially apportioned today by Secretary Hyde.

The action will make all of the above named amount available to the states for use in matching their regular federal apportionments including the fiscal year, 1932.

Captain C. D. Curtiss, chief of the bureau of public roads, pointed out that to the extent the states have work planned, nearly twice the amount of the appropriation will be made for the enormous construction projects. He estimated that more than half of the money would go to labor, directly and a large portion of the other half, indirectly.

Of the huge sum mentioned, the state of New Mexico will be awarded $1,303,288.

J. V. and M. E. Edwards

proprietors of the Grand Canyon Hotel at Williams, Ariz., were here last week, being the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Thornton of Oscura. The Edwards family were residents of Oscura when the town first started, but afterwards moved to Arizona, where they have one of the nicest hotels in that part of the state. They left for home last Sunday, after a pleasant visit with the intention of arriving home before Christmas.

Homecomers

Margie Rolland, Evelyn Grumbles, Helen Frances Huppertz, Ruth Brickley, Beatrix Boughner, Glenneth English, Jane Spencer, Walter La Fleur, Jr., Maurice Lemon, Billy Nickles, Mack Shaver, and Bill Spencer are home from their respective colleges to spend the holiday season with the home folks.

E. G. Gallegos

was here from San Patricio Wednesday and told of a splendid program that was carried out at that place Tuesday night, in which all of the school children took part. Eulogio is one of Supervisor Chas. F. Grey's road foremen and makes occasional trips here on business pertaining to road matters.

John Gutknecht

is here from Chicago spending the holiday week at the Albert Ziegler home. Mr. Gutknecht is Mr. and Mrs. Ziegler's son-in-law.

ANCHO NOTES

The school's Christmas tree and entertainment drew forth a banner crowd and the children acquitted themselves nobly, in well-trained parts, to the pride of their parents, teachers and friends. The Xmas tree was very productive, yielding forth candy, nuts and fruit in profusion as well as toys and other gifts. The Woman's Club Treasure Box went to Mrs. S. J. Pruett, who held the winning number, 95. Mrs. Pruett, having several small nieces, proposes to allow them to draw straws for the doll house, while she retains for herself the many pretty articles placed in the box by fellow club members.

Jim Dale left Saturday morning for the S. P. hospital in San Francisco to have his tonsils removed. His health was in such precarious condition that his sister, Miss Effie accompanied him as nurse, guest of the S. P. for the journey. Mrs. Pete Frame and son Billy also accompanied the Dales, to join her husband in Frisco for the holiday season.

John E. Wilson is visiting his wife and daughters at Berkeley, Calif. One daughter, Mrs. Champaigne, is a teacher at Oakland and another, Miss Carol holds a responsible position with a radio company. After spending the Xmas week in Berkeley, Mr. Wilson will visit his mother and other relatives in Phoenix, where he will be joined by his daughter, Mrs. Robert Hilton of Clemenceau, Arizona.

Mrs. Ruth Ware of Corona is now established in Ancho as second trick operator at the S. P. station.

Mrs. Alan Kile, formerly Mrs. Jimmy Knight, returned from El Paso Sunday evening. Mr. and Mrs. Kile were married in Alamogordo on the 14th and are contemplating a wedding trip to New Orleans in the near future. Mr. Kile is in the employ of the S. P. company.

Mr. and Mrs. Price Miller are expecting Mr. Miller's aunt, Miss May E. Taylor of Kansas City for an extended visit.

L. P. Hall returned to El Paso to spend Christmas with his wife and baby daughter. The baby is reported improving rapidly since going to Masonic hospital at that place. Mr. Hall was accompanied by Mr. T. J. Straley, who will spend the holidays with Mrs. Straley, son Tom and daughter, Mrs. Reba Roscoe.

The S. J. Pruett family spent Christmas with Mrs. Pruett's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Grove of El Paso.

The Bert Penix family of Corona entertained Mr. Frame and Mrs. Belknap at a Christmas dinner and the pleasures of their Christmas tree on Christmas Eve.

The L. L. Peters family was host to the Drake family and the D. R. Reagans of Corona at a Christmas dinner.

Mrs. Ruth Ware spent Christmas with her sister, Mrs. Leo Smith of White Oaks. The presence of the Downing family of Corona made of the occasion a family re-union.

Paul Long, who has been spending considerable time at daughters Julia and Beatrice returned Monday evening from El Paso, where they spent the week-end visiting Mary, Mr. and Mrs. Romero's oldest daughter, who is undergoing instructions for a trained nurse at Hotel Dieu and in which she is making rapid advancement.

The A. B. Zumwalt Family

were united on Christmas Day, with the exception of Cliff, who resides in Los Angeles and could not be here. Flossie, who superintends the Malaga, N. M. school came home for the holiday season, as is his yearly custom and together with the other children residing at home, made a happy re-union.

The Carrizozo Bakery Force

took a day off last Sunday and made a trip to Artesia, where they put in the day visiting relatives and returned home, arriving here at midnight.

Mrs. T. E. Armstrong

entertained a number of friends at cards and other forms of amusement on Christmas Day.

Carrizozo

was nearly deserted Christmas Day on account of the social gatherings which always happen on this particular day. Families which have been separated for perhaps years, the children being scattered over wide areas, were united and the re-unions, although brief, will linger fondly in their memories for years to come. Christmas Day was a bright, sunshiny one—it didn't seem like Christmas, it was more like a spring day.

Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Sager

are spending a portion of the yule-tide with Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Spence at their home in Santa Fe.

Mrs. Zoe Glasumire

who was taken to the home of her sister at Lawrence, Kas., a short time ago, is still ill, but her condition shows a marked improvement, according to word received here this week.

Mr. and Mrs. John Hicks of Cuervo passed through here on their way to Phoenix to spend Christmas with Mr. Hicks' sister. They were accompanied by Miss Edna Hicks, Mr. Hicks and Miss Holmes, formerly of Ancho, were married in Las Vegas on Nov. 15.

The Woman's Club will meet with Mrs. Price Miller on the 27th.

Mrs. Charles Peters made a trip to Alamogordo over the week-end.

Mrs. McDonald relieved Mrs. Frame in the Intermediate room of the local school on Monday and Tuesday of this week.

West Coast Gets Its First Nautical School Ship

Here, passing through the Panama canal, is the steamer State of California which is now anchored in San Francisco bay as the west coast's first nautical school ship to train cadets to be officers of the American merchant marine. The school is rated as a junior college and already 120 California youths have registered for the service which is of three years' duration.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

President and Senate in a Wordy Warfare—Relief Measures Passed.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD.

PRESIDENT HOOVER and the senate, or part of that nominally august body, came to verbal blows over legislation. The Chief Executive, who seemingly doesn't feel so restrained now that the election is over, was vexed because of the introduction of measures which would impose an expenditure far beyond the sum he had recommended, "and mostly under the guise of giving relief of some kind or another," as he said to the White House correspondents. He directly accused some members of congress of "playing politics at the expense of human misery."

The President obviously referred to the proposal for immediate payment in cash of the soldiers' bonus and the Shipstead plan, a $500,000,000 bond issue for river and harbor work. His statement also was regarded as directed at Senator David I. Walsh of Massachusetts, who had criticized Mr. Hoover for the inadequacy of his relief program.

When this statement reached the senate the war broke out fiercely, and the President was bitterly attacked by Senators Robinson, Caraway, Glass, Harrison and other Democrats. Next day in a prepared speech Senator McKellar of Tennessee scathingly assailed Mr. Hoover for what he called his "policy of abuse and declared the President owed an apology to every member of the senate. His reputation and his sincerity were impugned.

Senator Reed of Pennsylvania alone came to Mr. Hoover's defense, and he showed little enthusiasm in his task. The senate on Tuesday passed, without a record vote, the drought relief loan fund bill amended to appropriate $60,000,000, which is more than twice what the administration considered necessary and which in that form provided not only for seed purchase loans but also for loans for the purchase of food for the distressed farmers. To this latter feature Secretary of Agriculture Hyde had objected on the ground that it was "perniciously near the dole system," and this elicited scathing comments from the anti-administration senators.

WITHOUT opposition the house passed the bill appropriating $110,000,000 for an emergency public construction fund, which is the administration's chief step in the relief of unemployment. It had been revised to meet the objections of the Democrats, who opposed the granting of blanket authority to the President in the expenditure of the fund, so that he could only transfer funds from one of the specified purposes to another. The senate removed even this authority, added $5,000,000 to the total and passed the bill. Of the total, $80,000,000 is for advances to the states for federal aid highway projects and is to be paid back within five years by deductions from federal contributions. Rivers and harbors get $22,500,000.

SOME leaders in congress, both Republicans and Democrats, expressed a fear that the submission of the world court protocols to the senate would result in a legislative act that might make necessary the calling of an extra session of the new congress in the spring. In his message transmitting the protocols the President asked for early consideration of the question. He said that the protocols as revised "free us from any entanglement in the diplomacy of other nations" and urged that the United States "lead its co-operation in this effort of the nations to establish a great agency for pacific settlements."

are acted on also, and thus an extra session might be forced.

FRANK B. KELLOGG, former secretary of state, received the Nobel peace prize for 1929 in Oslo, Norway, Wednesday, in the presence of King Haakon and a distinguished gathering. At the same time the peace prize for 1930 was handed to Dr. Nathan Söderström, Mr. Kellogg, in acknowledging the award, asserted there was no indication of war in the world, but rather the prospect was for continued peace. Should there be a war, however, he gave warning, western civilization could not withstand it. Among the other Nobel prizes handed out was that for literature to Sinclair Lewis, American novelist, who received it in Stockholm from the hands of King Gustav of Sweden.

HAVING adopted an outline of a general disarmament treaty, the preparatory disarmament commission of the League of Nations ended its sessions at Geneva. This draft convention will be the basis for the deliberations of a world conference that probably will meet early in 1932. Ambassador Hugh Gibson, who represented the United States, in a closing statement told his colleagues that the outline treaty "falls far short of our hopes and expectations," failing to include the various methods which Americans regarded as essential to real disarmament. He said, however, he consoled himself with the belief that the scheme adopted would permit at least the stabilization of armaments, the setting up of machinery to receive and spread information on armaments, and "to prepare systematically for the work of future conferences."

MR. HOOVER transmitted to the house of representatives a formal request for the immediate appropriation of another $150,000,000 to the federal farm board from its $500,000,000 revolving fund. The money is needed, he said, "in order that important operations of the board, now in prospect, may be carried through promptly," and it was understood this meant further outlays for the stabilization of wheat prices.

OPERATION of Muscle Shoals by a co-operative organization of farmers was asked by the American Farm Bureau federation at its convention in Boston. It also voiced opposition to amendment of the agricultural marketing act at this time. The federation also recommended stricter regulation of grain and cotton exchanges; that funds be loaned to farmers in the drought area be made immediately available; that congress appropriate money to insure immediate carrying out of the authorized development projects, and that the federal treasury have a revolving fund to be used exclusively to stabilize federal land bank bonds.

TWO hundred men and women representing thirty-three dry organizations held an annual conference in Washington and asked that congress provide more men and more money for enforcement of prohibition. A convention of wets also was held in the National Capital and agreed on a unified substitute plan for prohibition.

HERE is one record of achievement to brag about. The forest service reports that fire damage to national forest lands this year was held down to $287,470, a reduction of nearly 95 per cent from last year. This despite the fact that the season has been the driest on record. Forest area burned over amounted to 195,900 acres, only one-fifth of last year's acreage.

PROPERTY of the Chicago & Alton railroad, which since the time of the Civil war has operated 1,036 miles of track in Illinois and Missouri, were sold at public auction in foreclosure proceedings of the federal court, the sale taking place at Wilmington, Ill., the first station outside of Chicago actually owned by the company. The railway, valued at $100,000,000, was purchased by the Baltimore & Ohio railroad, which owned a majority of the Alton's bonds.

The Alton company had been in receivership for eight years, brought in that condition by financial difficulties that started with the failure to pay dividends on mortgages imposed by the Harriman interests in the '90s. Strikes and bad business in the bituminous coal region helped the company on the downward path.

RUSSIA'S picturesque trial of eight engineers accused of an anti-Soviet conspiracy in which foreign nations and notabilities were declared to be involved ended as expected in the conviction of all the defendants. It could not be otherwise, since all had confessed. Five of them were sentenced to death and three to ten years in prison, and all the Communists applauded. Next day the central executive committee of the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics commuted the five death sentences to ten years' imprisonment, and two years were taken off the other sentences. The press of London and Paris looks on the whole affair as a put up job.

NO SATISFACTORY explanation has yet been given of the "poison fog" which killed 67 persons in the Meuse valley of Belgium and France. The Belgian authorities tried to belittle the affair but Queen Elizabeth ruled otherwise and appointed a commission of physicians to make an investigation.

HENRY CLAY now stands, in marble, in the center of a wide plaza in Caracas, the capital of Venezuela, and he is labeled the "Apostle of fraternity between the countries of America." The statue is the present of the United States to Venezuela, given in return for one of Gen. Simon Bolivar, hero of South American independence, which was unveiled in New York in 1921. It was dedicated on Tuesday by James R. Sheffield, former ambassador to Mexico, and received by the high officials of the Venezuelan government.

In his address Mr. Sheffield said: "In speaking to the people of Venezuela, I am trying to interpret to all the republics of South America the friendly attitude of my country and its faith in the complete triumph of free institutions and governments in the western world. We aspire to no leadership in your affairs. We only wish to help you in attaining the highest development of your national consciousness and sovereign rights."

SECRETARY of the Navy Adams in his annual report points out the perils for the administration's policy of reducing navy enlisted personnel to a minimum. He says that during last year there were not enough enlisted men to man fully all types of ships in the navy. To operate the navy with the remaining 79,900 men it will be necessary to decommission a number of vessels.

Appearing before the house naval committee, Mr. Adams asked that congress approve a $31,000,000 construction program designed to start our country on the way to having such a fleet as is authorized by the London treaty. Chairman Britten of the committee thereupon introduced a bill authorizing the construction of seven new cruisers and submarines and one aircraft carrier, the only vessels on the navy program not now authorized.

THE annual report of the Internal revenue commission shows that ten states with an aggregate population of less than one-half of the total for the country pay more than three-fourths of the federal tax bill. These states, in their order, are: New York, North Carolina, Illinois, Pennsylvania, California, Ohio, Michigan, Massachusetts, Virginia and Missouri. Few of the southern and western states, except those with large industrial cities, paid tax percentages approaching their population percentages.

The total international revenue receipts for the fiscal year were set by the report at $3,040,145,734, of which $2,410,306,320 was paid in income taxes and $629,839,414 in miscellaneous taxes.

LEWIS OVERMAN, veteran senator from North Carolina, died in Washington after a week's illness. He was seventy-six years old and had served in the senate since 1902.

"Conscience Fund" Adds to Nation's Revenues

The government's conscience fund dates back to the year 1811, when during the administration of James Madison the sum of $5 was received by the Treasury department from a person who did not sign his name. He wrote that he owed the nation that sum. It was credited to "Conscience." Before the close of Madison's administration this fund had reached $250.

Of course, there is no fund known officially as a conscience fund. Such contributions are listed in the report of the treasurer of the United States as "Contributions from known and unknown." The money is entered on the books as other public money, and is expended as though it came from regular channels of revenue.

Reports of the United States treasurer show that there has never been a year since Madison's administration, with the exception of Monroe's administration and the year 1848, when some conscience contribution was not received. The largest came in during the administrations of Roosevelt and Wilson. The total amount received during Roosevelt's administration was $100,100.70 and $104,084.00 during Wilson's administration. The smallest amount ever received was 2 cents, and the largest was $50,000.

The conscience fund has grown to more than $500,000, and is increasing each year. Last year contributions of this nature amounted to $20,000.04.

Gas Wells of Germany Furnish Little Helium

There are natural gas wells in Germany whose output contains helium, writes Kurt Well in Die Umschau, a German scientific periodical, but there is no prospect of the Graf Zeppelin or any of her future sister airships being filled with German helium, for the combined product of all of the four German wells whose gas contains this valuable element would have to be accumulated for 400 years before there would be enough to fill the Graf. As compared with this, Herr Well cites the great American well at Petrolia, Texas, which yields 425,000 cubic meters of gas, with a helium content of nine-tenths of 1 per cent. This would fill a Graf Zeppelin, in a few days.

Home for New Year's
By Helen Gaisford

"HOME for New Year's," the doctor had promised, but of course, thought Drake Harmon, the doctor couldn't know how little home meant to him. He punched his pillow into a lump and propped himself up in bed. Despite everything, Drake Harmon had enjoyed his first real sick spell. His salary would go on just the same, but instead of working he was free to read. Every day he had visitors who forgot to drop in when he was well, and besides—there was Miss Bowen, now that it was time to go home, he realized how much he would miss his cheery little nurse.

"Why, Man, You're Looking Fit as a Fiddle." doctor began, "how's our patient today?" "A little weak—I'm afraid, Doctor," he answered. "I wonder whether I ought to go home just yet." "Why, man, you're looking fit as a fiddle. Here—and let's have your pulse, too." Drake Harmon, thermometer in mouth, looked at Miss Bowen, and tried to make his eyes speak for him. She seemed to understand, for she blushed and turned aside. His heart went pounding.

ON THE THRESHOLD

BY A. H. BALDWIN, in Detroit News.
RING out, O bell! Ring silver sweet o'er hill and moor and fell! In mellow echoes let your chimes their joyful story tell. Ring out, ring out, all-jubilant, the joyous, glad refrain: "A bright New Year, a glad New Year, bath come to us again!"

Ah! Who can say how much of joy within it there may be. Stored up for us who listen now to your sweet melody! Good-by Old Year! Tried, trusty friend, thy tale at last is told. O New Year! Write thou things for us in lines of brightest gold.

"Great guns!" exclaimed the doctor. "Fever, too I can't understand your heart action. Yes, you'd better stay here a few days longer." With instructions for the nurse, he left.

Miss Bowen turned back to her patient. "Doctor says I'm to keep a close watch over you and see that you don't get excited," she said.

He laughed. "I'm all right—now that I know I don't have to go home." "You are lonely?" "Yes," he answered, "and in love, too."

"Oh," Miss Bowen looked away. "But I didn't find it out till just now," he continued. "I wouldn't mind going home if I could take my nurse with me." With starry eyes she turned to him. "There isn't any reason why you shouldn't go home. You're well enough."

At the receiving desk they paused. "Tell Doctor Scott," he said, "to get a new nurse, and say, tell him I never felt better in my life, and am going home for New Year's."

Dealing With the New Year The New Year will be just like the old year unless you have a vivid imagination.

Nancy's New Year
by MYRTLE KOON CHERRYMAN

WISH I knew what New Year's looks like," sighed Nancy.

She was a bright little girl, and knew many things, but was always wanting to know more, and, having a lively imagination, she liked to make pictures of everything. She had seen many pictures of Santa Claus, but she had a different one in her own mind, all sparkling and jingly, with Santa in it, but lots of other things, too. Now, when she said this about New Year's, her small brother, Douglas, shook his head, for he didn't know whether New Year's was a city or an automobile, or just what it was.

Big sister Barbara, who was a great tease, said, "New Year's looks like a hippopotamus with a monkey on its back." Father tried to explain about the calendar, and the maid, Thelma, remembering the household on the first of January last year, said that New Year's looked like sleepy-heads who were cross from eating too much. Even mother didn't have much help to offer, as she was busy getting ready for a party; and when Nancy appealed to Clarence, the man who did things around the place, he just grinned and said, "You'll find out when the time comes."

Her chum, Patricia, who was usually good at explaining things, was so preoccupied with her new ping-pong set, that she only said, "Stilly!" and went on playing. So Nancy went to sleep that New Year's eve, still wondering.

When she woke in the morning, her mother called, "Oh, Nancy, get up and look out of the side window!" And when she ran, in her new Christmas pajamas to do so, she saw Clarence standing beside a beautiful little white pony and holding up a big card on which was printed, "Happy New Year to Nancy."

FAIRY TALE FOR CHILDREN

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

"How are you feeling?" asked Jingo Elephant of Bingo Elephant. They liked their names of Bingo and Jingo and the children called them by these names, too.

"Perfectly well, I thank you," said Bingo. "I had good exercise after the children had left. They did give us a lot today, didn't you feel ill?"

"I didn't get quite as many as you did," said Jingo. "But wasn't it funny to see the children?"

"At first they wanted to throw the peanuts into the yard. We looked so big that we frightened them—so they said.

"But the keeper told them not to mind us. And then they began to give us the peanuts, which we took into our trunks and so up to our mouths.

"They thought it was funny to see us do it."

"I wonder how they thought we fed ourselves?" asked Bingo.

"I'm sure I don't know," said Jingo. "I found out a splendid trick to do."

"What was it?" asked Bingo.

"I held several in my trunk at the same time when they were giving them to me so quickly.

"That was so I wouldn't miss any while I was getting my trunk up to my mouth."

"Oh, dear, oh, dear," laughed Jingo. "What are you laughing at?" asked Jingo.

"Because," said Bingo, "that is an old trick that has been known by elephants for ever and over so long. As long as the children have been children and peanuts have been peanuts and elephants have been elephants."

"That's certainly a long time," agreed Jingo.

"You just thought it was a matter of course, because it's your nature—" as is the nature of every elephant." "It shows I am growing up," said Jingo, "and I like to grow up."

"I think the children had an idea you were grown up enough," said Bingo.

"Oh, yes, in size," said Jingo. "But I like to be old in years too."

It was night time now and they were tired. They started to rest and sleep.

"What Was It?" Asked Bingo.

The next morning more children came to look at them, and again they brought peanuts which they put in the end of the trunks of the elephants and watched them carried up to their mouths.

Now the keeper thought it would be nice for the elephants to show off their tricks.

First Jingo made very handsome bows to the children, who were greatly amused.

Next Bingo carried the keeper on his back and up on his head. Then he let him down again.

Both elephants said their prayers and put their trunks around the keeper.

They let the keeper lie down underneath them in such a way that their big bodies did not touch him.

At the end of it all they were given water and hay for a reward.

It had been fun doing tricks for the children.

Tired Feet Need Hot Bath Every Night

Feet shut up in shoes sixteen or eighteen hours of the twenty-four need a daily bath to keep them in good condition. The best time to give feet their hot-water-and-soap bath is at night. In the morning a plunge in a bowl of cold water will make them hardy and keep the skin and flesh firm. Be sure to dry them thoroughly by vigorous rubbing. A little foot powder dusted over them is soothing and helps absorb excess moisture.

The foundation of education consists of training a child to work, to love work, to put the energy of his entire being into work; to do that work which develops his body, mind and soul; to do that work most needed for the elevation of mankind.—Parker.

Nature has given us a delightful fruit well protected from all outside contamination.

When yellow and still firm it is in its best condition. Flecks of brown on the skin is insurance that the fruit within is ripe. Even dark brown-skinned fruit, if firm, is preferred by many.

Broiled Bananas.—Allow one banana for each person. Cut into halves crosswise, then into halves lengthwise. Dip into melted butter, then into bread crumbs. Grease the broiler and set the bananas in place, broil first on one side, then on the other. Serve hot with a bit of lemon juice poured over each.

Frozen Fruit Salad.—Take five oranges, five bananas, one small can of pineapple, one bottle of maraschino cherries. Dice the fruit, mix well with one cupful each of salad dressing and whipped cream. Put into baking powder cans and pack in ice and salt for five hours. Cover each can with oiled paper before putting on the cover.

Mixed Fruit Salad.—Take one-half cupful each of shredded pineapple, chopped nut meats, orange pulp, grapefruit pulp, maraschino cherries and one and one-half cupfuls of sliced bananas. Mix the fruit, chill and serve with:

Dressing.—Beat the yolks of two eggs, add two tablespoonfuls of butter and one-half cupful of sugar creamed together; now add two tablespoonfuls each of vinegar and lemon juice, one tablespoonful of olive oil, one-half teaspoonful of mustard, one teaspoonful of salt, one-fourth teaspoonful of paprika and three-fourths of a cupful of whipped cream, after the dressing is cooked and chilled.

Banana Fruit Salspicon.—Cut four bananas into thin slices. Peel one orange and cut into slices lengthwise, add one cupful of grated pineapple, one cupful of sugar, the juice of a lemon and a cupful of peeled and seeded grapes. Mix lightly with the sugar and juices and serve in sherbet cups. Strawberries, raspberries, or any berry in the season may be used with the fruit.

Artichoke Ring.—Cook twelve artichokes (the Jerusalem variety) until tender, then rub them through a sieve or colander. Add one cupful each of cream and milk, six well beaten eggs, separating the yolks and whites. Add the yolks and when well mixed one cupful of fresh bread crumbs. Now fold in the stiffly beaten whites and pour into a ring mold. Set into a pan of hot water and bake until firm. Serve with the following for filling: Cook together four tablespoonfuls each of butter and flour, add one pint of cream, stir until thick, add salt to sea-

Cooking Less Expensive Cuts of Meat

Browning a Pot Roast on All Sides.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

When you go to market to buy a piece of beef, you have to think of two points: What cut will best serve as a nucleus for the menu of the day, and at the same time fit the contents of the housekeeping purse?

Among the less tender and consequently less expensive cuts of beef, there are several which will appeal to the family taste if properly cooked. Heat, moisture, and slow cooking help to accomplish the desired result in such dishes as pot roast, braised flank steak, swiss steak, or stew. Meat from the less tender cuts is also excellent when ground and used in various ways.

The method of cooking a pot roast is given in a popular free leaflet on the cooking of beef, prepared by the bureau of home economics of the United States Department of Agriculture. Choose a piece of beef from the chuck ribs, cross arm, clod, round, or rump. From four to six pounds is a good weight. Wipe the meat with a damp cloth and rub it with salt, pepper, and flour. Next, brown the meat on all sides in a heavy kettle, using about three tablespoonfuls of beef fat. Slip a low rack under the meat, add one-half cupful of water, cover tightly, and simmer until tender. The time required for cooking cannot be definitely stated, but it will probably be about three hours. Turn the roast occasionally. When the meat is done, remove from the kettle, skim off the excess fat from the liquid, and measure the remainder. For each cupful of gravy desired, measure two tablespoonfuls of the fat and return to the kettle, add one and one-half to two tablespoonfuls of flour and stir until well blended and slightly browned. Then add one cupful of the meat stock or of cold water and stir until smooth. Season the gravy with salt, pepper, and chopped parsley. Serve the pot roast on a hot platter with buttered carrots and stuffed onions.

If desired, any of the following vegetables may be cooked in the pot with the roast: Carrots, onions, potatoes, and turnips. Add the vegetables during the last hour of cooking the meat if they are to be served whole or in quarters. If preferred they may be cooked longer and mashed and served as puree in the gravy.

KEEP RECORD OF ALL INSURANCE

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Among the necessary fixed household expenditures in most family budgets there are usually those for insurance of several different kinds, with premium payments occurring on definite dates. As the policies themselves are best kept in a safety-deposit box or safe, it is wise to have an accurate record at home, showing each kind of insurance owned, the face value and policy number, the amount of premium payable, and due dates. If there are many such payments to be made, some sort of calendar reminder is also needed, so that the necessary sums will be set aside at the right time.

The bureau of home economics suggests, in connection with planning and recording family expenditures, that a record of all insurance policies be kept on a special page in the household account book. If the household accounts are entered under the "page-to-a-class-of-expenditure" system—food, housing, operating, and so on—insurance will be found listed under at least four and possibly more of the main heads. All insurance does not serve the same purpose. Under savings will come the forms of insurance which represents money set aside for later use in some form—life, endowment, and annuity policies for various members of the family. Savings usually includes also the emergency fund, or money kept in the bank to meet unexpected demands. It therefore legitimately covers expenditures for insurance carried for the same purpose, such as accident, burglary, and health insurance; and extra premiums on life insurance policies for double indemnity and for partial and total disability.

The important point is to have readily accessible information about every policy owned, with inescapable reminders of premiums due in any current month.

Learn to Group Foods in Proper Class

It will be necessary to learn to group foods so as to place them in their proper class, as an example foods that are high in protein, ones high in starch, mineral matters and fats and then plan your daily meals so as to include sufficient amount of the various food elements. It may take a little time to learn these points, but it will be worth while.

The "Plumed Knight"

Robert G. Ingersoll gave James G. Blaine the plumed-knight title in the speech in which he said: "Like an armed warrior, like a plumed knight, James G. Blaine marched down the hall of the American congress and threw his shining lance full and fair against the brazen forehead of the defamers of his country and the maligners of his honor."

Save Fuel

Save fuel, time, and strength by cooking as many foods as possible while the oven is heated.

DRY OUT THE ROOM TO KILL BOOK LICE

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Did you ever open a book and see a tiny grayish insect, smaller than the head of a pin, scurrying across the pages? This was probably a book louse, or "psocid" like the picture from the bureau of entomology of the United States Department of Agriculture, except that the photograph is many times larger than the actual insect.

These insects like to stay in damp, well-shaded rooms or other places which are not in general use. They feed on all sorts of vegetables and animal matter. They may be found in upholstered furniture, and in mattresses stuffed with hair, feathers, straw, husks, or moss. They rarely become abundant enough to do damage, but when they do they may be destroyed easily by sunbaking and dryness. Heat the room where they are found long enough and hot enough to thoroughly dry it out and they will be destroyed. Examination is also recommended in certain cases where book lice have become so abundant as to be a nuisance, but it should be done by some one who has had experience with fumigants.

Lesson for December 28

REVIEW: THE PATTERN OF CHRISTIAN LIVING

GOLDEN TEXT.—Let this mind be in you, which was also in Christ Jesus.

PRIMARY TOPIC.—How Jesus Wants Us to Live.

JUNIOR TOPIC.—Some Examples of Christian Living.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC.—Lessons from the Lives of Others.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC.—Fellowship with Christ.

For senior and adult classes two good methods of review may be used: The first may be designated character study of the principal persons mentioned in the lessons of the quarter; namely, Zacharias and Elisabeth, Mary, Simeon and Anna, Peter, Thomas, Zacchaeus, Stephen, Saul, and Timothy. In using this method assignment should be made the week before. The second method may be designated the summary method in which the salient facts should be noted followed with the leading teaching. In this case also, assignment should be made a week ahead.

Lesson for October 5.

The parents of John the Baptist were noted for their godliness. Zacharias means "Jehovah hath remembered." Elisabeth means "covenant maker." Every indication is that this pious couple wrought together for God. John the Baptist was a great man. Much can be expected of a child born of such parents and brought up in such a home.

Lesson for October 12.

God chose Mary to receive the greatest honor ever conferred upon a human being. To fill this place of honor meant exposure to suspicion as well as much suffering and hardship.

Lesson for October 19.

The ability of Simeon and Anna to discern the Messiah was due to a special revelation of the indwelling Holy Spirit, not merely because they were pure in heart. The grace which they possessed is available to every believer.

Lesson for October 26.

The believer experiences a vital conflict going on within. This conflict is due to the fact that he was once born of the flesh and afterward born of the Spirit. Victory over the flesh is to be obtained through the power of the indwelling Holy Spirit.

Lesson for November 2.

Peter through over-weening confidence fell, even denying his Lord. The occasion of his denial was the sifting to which Satan subjected him. Through the prayer of Jesus Christ he was restored.

Lesson for November 9.

Thomas is everywhere presented in the Scriptures as of a skeptical mind, but he was an honest doubter. The Lord is pleased to be put to the test. No honest skeptic has ever remained in darkness.

Lesson for November 16.

The centurion's faith in Christ brought healing to a very dear servant. Genuine faith links man with Omnipotence.

Lesson for November 23.

A noble young ruler failed to get eternal life because his heart rested on earthly riches. Christ demands man's whole heart.

Lesson for November 30.

Zacchaeus did not allow difficulties to keep him from seeing the Lord. The sight of the Lord moved him to repentance. This is always true. He proved the genuineness of his repentance by making restitution.

Lesson for December 7.

Stephen, while called to minister in the temporalities of the church, witnessed of Christ in the energy of the Holy Spirit. He sealed his testimony with his blood. To those who are faithful unto death a crown of life shall be given.

Lesson for December 14.

The sight of Jesus Christ transformed Saul, the savage persecutor, into a most ardent witness for Christ.

Lesson for December 21.

Through the faith of a godly mother and grandmother, Timothy was nurtured for God. Careful home training is rewarded with pious children.

In Communion With God

As long as we dare to think that the secular life must be a separate existence from the spiritual, that earthly engagements cannot be fulfilled in uninterrupted communion with God, just so long as we live outside the purposes of God, contradicting the majesty of our true nature, and denying the efficacy of the gospel of the Lord Jesus.—Frederick H. W. Webb-People.

The Faith in God's Elect

Neither fear, neither danger, neither yet doubting, nor backsliding can utterly destroy and quench the faith of God's elect, but that always there remaineth with them some root and spark of faith, howbeit in their anguish they neither feel nor can discern the same.—John Knox.

Victory

Victory over sleep in the morning-watch may mean victory all day.—Lae.

Beads Add Glitter to Apparel

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

afternoon frock, beaded design is staging some of its most breath-taking effects.

A charming exponent of the bead-trimmed gown is presented in the picture. This decidedly smart frock is of black chiffon. Its rounded peplum is cleverly manipulated to give soft lines without sacrificing the slender silhouette.

The bead treatment is refreshingly new, as it appears on the yoke and the sleeves of this modish dress. Row-and-row tiny pearl beads are worked in the novel and effective manner portrayed. Which goes to show what a decorative role beads are playing in the mode.

Now that beads are accepted in the realm of daytime fashions even by those of most discriminating taste, style creators are outdoing each other in point of intriguing designfulness. An interesting new theme is the cowl neckline accomplished with a wide border of solidly worked tiny main seed pearls in either white or pastel coloring. This collar effect together with matching wide beaded cuffs adds a charming note of color to any number of the black or dark-toned crepe frocks which are now in the fashion picture.

Since contrasting sleeves and yokes are so important, designers are turning to unique and colorful beadwork as a means of adding to the chic and charm of this smart vogue. Sometimes the yoke extends so deep it takes on the appearance of a sewed-on bodice. The scheme is worked out beguilingly in two colors, let us say, the upper portion of the dress perhaps of pale turquoise (blue crepe or satin or velvet as the case may be, the seaweed skirt in black. It is a matter of fancy whether the beads be worked in neat methods conventionally spaced with border treatments trimming the edges or whether the beadwork be concentrated at the neckline and sleeves.

A wealth of beauty and novelty is expressed in the terms "beaded" or "beadwork" or "bead embroidery" as they are being interpreted in fashions of the hour. Not only are thrilling things being done with beads as they lend their glitter to formal evening modes, but in the realm of the demy

THE STORY

Garrett O'Hara, young lawyer, on his way to practice at Concho, wild western town, is shot at from ambush by Shep Sanderson, who mistakes him for Judge Warner, whom certain cattle interests wish to prevent holding court. Barbara Steelman, who thought the shot was directed at her, warns Garrett not to go to Concho because of the big cattle war. Steve Worrall tells Garrett about the cattle war between Ingram and Steelman, father of Barbara. Bob Quantrell, young killer for Ingram, says Garrett O'Hara and an Englishman, Smith-Beresford, from being shot by Sanderson. The three become friends. Garrett accidentally witnesses a meeting between Barbara and Ingram. They are lovers, Garrett and the Englishman buy a ranch with Steelman as silent partner. Fitch, Steelman man, kills an Ingram follower. A posse including Quantrell and Sanderson, capture and hang Fitch. Sanderson starts a fight at the ranch and Garrett and the Englishman are wounded. Quantrell changes sides and joins with the "tenderfoot." A lull in the cattle war follows. Quantrell kills Sanderson and another Ingram gunman. A tentative peace is patched up through Garrett's efforts.

CHAPTER VIII—Continued

Some one misunderstood. He was either too anxious or he was nervous. A shot rang out from the bluff and the three men below scrambled into instant motion. The one at the creek scudded for the house. The other two ran around the barn to find safety there.

Instantly Quantrell's rifle cracked. Other weapons boomed out. The man running from the bluff stumbled, almost fell, recovered himself, and disappeared limping into the house. The other two vanished into the stable.

Quantrell was disgusted. "You spilled the beans proper, Mac. We had three of 'em salted an' we didn't get a one. Oh, well, no use beefin' about it now. Come on, boys, before they get time to get set."

He slid down into a brushy draw, ran through it, and emerged into the open. Straight for the stable he ran, the others at his heels.

From the ranch house guns spat bullets at the running men. Quantrell reached the stable. Texas Jim and Whitey and Mac were at his heels. The deputy sheriff came panting in twenty yards back of them.

Quantrell sat down on a feed box and cursed bitterly and succinctly. The object of his maledictions was the party of Ingram's gunmen at the ranch house. The adventure he had planned and led had gone wrong. He found his party besieged in the stable, two out of the six wounded, a seventh separated from them by a stretch of four hundred yards that might as well have been miles, and the horses quite out of reach. Quantrell did not need anyone to point out to him how badly he had blundered in charging down the hill. He had acted under impulse like a fool boy.

All firing had ceased. Those at the ranch house made no immediate attempt to molest the invaders. Presently Whitey made an announcement. "Fellow just got on a horse the other side the house an' rode off."

"Gone to let Ingram know," Texas Jim guessed.

"An' after a while Dave will be back here with a whole passle of warriors," Sommers added.

"It'll be a round-up of Hashknife waddies, looks like," Mac said.

"You never can tell till you've ridden circle an' brought the longhorns in," Quantrell contributed blithely. "But none of you fellows have got to stay when you're ready to go. Me, I'm stayin'."

Texas Jim nodded. "Same here," he said briefly.

The deputy sheriff said nothing. In his opinion this enterprise had gone to wreck on Quantrell's folly. If a good opportunity came to get out with a whole skin he intended to do so.

During the next hour or two there was desultory firing on both sides, though it was plain that the men in the ranch house were waiting for reinforcements, before they forced the fighting.

"Coupla fellows on-horses comin' through the willows," announced the white-headed cowboy abruptly.

Quantrell picked up his rifle and went to the door. What he saw was certainly unexpected. Two men were riding along the edge of the creek among the willows. They had with them a led horse.

"Dad-gum my skin if it ain't the belted earl an' his friend the good bad man," exclaimed Texas Jim excitedly. "What in Mexico are they doin' here?"

The young desperado laughed, his voice when he spoke filled with gay and careless mirth. "Where else would they be? Don't they always head straight for trouble, those lads?"

A moment, and O'Hara and his partner were in the stable.

The Circle S O partners consulted with each other.

"Nothing to do but ride over to the Hughes ranch and call off the Hashknife boys. If they've got Ingram's men penned up we'll probably be in time," O'Hara said.

"What shall we do with Garcia?" asked Smith-Beresford.

"Better take him along. He can guide us over the hills and get us there quicker."

The Mexican rode in front of them. He was covered by his own rifle in the hands of Smith-Beresford. Unerringly he led them through a maze of hilltops.

"Quantrell must have left the horses somewhere," O'Hara told his partner. "Juan says they came down from the rim rock on foot. Likely they left some one with the mounts. Hadn't we better swing around that way and see if he's still there?"

"Not a bad idea, Old Top. He could give us the latest developments. It would be deuced awkward if we met Ingram's men before we did our own."

They skirted the edge of the park. Garcia pulled up to listen, lifting a hand for silence. Some one was riding toward them. They could hear the hoofs of horses striking rocks.

Riderless horses came over the brow of a hill. Behind them rode a single man. The man was Joe, one of Steelman's cowboys. At sight of Garcia and the others he stopped and wheeled abruptly, driving in a spur for flight.

O'Hara called to him by name. Joe jerked his horse to its hind feet, so sharply did he check it.

The Circle S O partners joined him. Joe made clear the situation.

"The boys are in the stable. One of 'em is wounded bad, looked like."

"Has there been a lot of shooting?" Smith-Beresford asked.

"Quite a lot. Some one rode away from the ranch hour an' a half ago. Gone for help, I'd say. I'm movin' the horses. Figured they might come up to collect 'em soon as they got around to it."

The partners talked together and afterward O'Hara gave Joe instructions. "We'll leave Juan here with you. Hold him till we see you again. In about half an hour move the horses to the south end of the meadow, to the place where the creek runs out. We're going to try to follow the creek through the willows to the stable. We'll take a led horse along for the wounded man. If our plan works out we'll join you as soon as we can."

"What if I'm jumped by Ingram or some one else?"

"Then you'll have to look after your self. But I don't think he can get here before night."

The partners rode back to the creek, by way of the park rim, dropping down to the meadow land over a pine-clad hill. Smith-Beresford carried the rifle. O'Hara led the extra horse. They moved up the creek, keeping on the far side from the house and using the willows as a screen.

"Getting close to the stable," Smith-Beresford whispered over his shoulder to his friend. "There's a sort of ford where the horses drink just ahead. Think we'd better splash over and make a run for it?"

"Might as well," O'Hara agreed.

The horses waded through the little creek and climbed the slope beyond. They broke into a canter, headed straight for the stable.

Quantrell let out a yell of glee as the two men swung to the ground. "Mado it, by cripes, you doggoned old hell-millers."

O'Hara did not share his enthusiasm. He had come to get the raiders out of trouble if he could, but he did not intend to condone their offense.

"Who has been hurt?" he asked coldly.

"Amen is shot up right bad. I'm carryin' one pill in my leg as a souvenir. How did you find out we was here?"

"Met a Mexican you drove away."

O'Hara walked across to the place where Owen lay on the hay. "Can he ride?" he asked Texas Jim.

The Lone Star state man scratched his head. "I dunno, Doubt it. He's a mighty sick man."

Apparently Owens had been dozing. He opened his eyes. "Sure I could ride, if I was put on a horse," he said.

"Then we'd better get out before Ingram's reinforcements arrive. The rest of the horses are at the entrance to the park. If we slip around and keep the stable between us and the house we might make it."

Quantrell's eyes gleamed. "You're d-n shoutin', O'Hara. You fellows go. I'll stay an' hold 'em back till you cross the creek. Then I'll light out after you."

"That's good medicine," Texas Jim agreed. "I'll stay with Bob."

The deputy sheriff spoke up. "There's an old door boarded up this side. If we break that down we can slip out an' not be seen at all."

Five minutes later the door had been knocked to pieces with an ax. Owen was lifted to the saddle of a horse. He clung to the pommel, teeth clenched.

O'Hara turned to Quantrell. "You take my horse. With that hurt leg you can't make a run for it if you have to. I'll stay with Texas."

"No, sir," answered Quantrell. "It's liable to be hotter'n a-h-1 with the blower on here. I wished this on myself."

"Get on that horse," O'Hara ordered quietly, looking straight at the young desperado. His voice had a ring of command, his brown eyes blazed.

Quantrell laughed. "I'm wagon boss here," says he. All right. Have it your own way. But understand, everybody, I'm not to blame if they collect him." The boy leaped to the horse and pulled himself into the saddle. "Adios," he called back with a jaunty wave of the hand as he rode out of the building.

The deputy sheriff was already on his way. Only Smith-Beresford remained. He was reluctant to leave his friend and he argued the point, but O'Hara brushed aside his objections.

"I've got a better idea than yours, Garrett," he said, consenting at last. "I'll leave my horse here. You two may be in a hurry when you start. He'll carry double (all you reach us)." The Englishman followed the others. Hidden by the stable, the little cavalcade got some distance before it was seen by those in the house. Then men poured out of the house as seeds are squired from an orange. One of them, leading the pursuit toward the stable, gave a yell compounded of triumph and rage. O'Hara recognized him as Deever.

Already O'Hara had given orders to his companion but he reinforced them by a reminder. "Remember, Texas, you're not to hit any of them unless we can't drive them back otherwise."

The firing from the stable took the Ingram men by surprise. They wavered, broke back for the house.

"If we can give our boys fifteen minutes' start they ought to make it," O'Hara said.

"Can't do it," the Texan answered. "Just about now it's gonna strike those fellows to slap saddles on their horses an' swing round to cut the boys off from the mouth of the park."

Texas Jim anticipated their thoughts by less than five minutes. Presently they could see Deever and the others slipping up from the creek to the litch rack by the house.

Easy Method of Escape From Wrath of Tornado

Most tornadoes move toward the northeast, a few toward the southeast, and the rest, with almost negligible exceptions, in some other easterly direction, says the weather bureau of the United States Department of Agriculture. Moreover, the path generally varies but little from a straight line, so that the direction in which a storm is seen to be moving is likely to be the one that it will follow until it dies out.

From these facts it follows that when a tornado is sighted several miles away a person generally has time to escape by taking a course at right angles to its path, and the automobile is obviously a valuable adjunct for escape, provided there is a road leading in the right direction.

One positive proof that a storm is a tornado is the elongated funnel-shaped, or cylindrical cloud dangling from the sky toward the earth. This cloud is not always seen, but the general appearance of the sky in the direction of a tornado is usually very striking. The clouds are thrown into

"Cut for the Creek an' Get Across It," Texas Jim Advised.

"Time to say 'Adios' if we don't aim to be cut off," the cowboy said.

"Right you are," agreed O'Hara.

A moment later he was on Smith-Beresford's horse, with the Texan behind him. They dashed into the open at a gallop. A bullet whistled past them.

"Cut for the creek an' get across it," Texas Jim advised.

O'Hara swung to the left and sent the horse plunging into the young willows. They crashed through, the supple branches whipping their faces. The animal lost its footing as it went down into the creek and both men were swung into the water. Texas Jim caught the 'bridle and dragged the bronco to its feet. The riders were soaked, but O'Hara had managed to keep the rifle out of the water when he made his dive into the stream's shallow depth.

Into the saddle the Texan dragged himself. He stiffened his foot and O'Hara used it for a step to swing himself behind. A moment, and the horse was charging through the saplings fringing the opposite bank.

Glancing back, O'Hara could hear the excited voices of the pursuers. They were too far away for him to make out the words, but he realized that they were already in motion.

Some one shouted to them. O'Hara caught sight of young Quantrell riding down the creek.

"Come back to chey over old times," he called gaily to them.

"Where are the others?" asked O'Hara.

"They're humplin' right along. We can hold these roosters back if we have to. If they get on the prod we'll educate 'em proper."

"We're not looking for trouble, Bob. What we're trying to do is to get away with our skins whole. Don't forget that. I won't have any unnecessary shooting. We've had more than enough."

The voices of the pursuers came closer. Quantrell grinned cheerfully. "What shooting I will do will be necessary, looks like."

"If we can only reach the gateway of the park," O'Hara said, glancing back.

"Sure enough. If my toes only reach the ground when they hang me it won't hurt much," Quantrell jeered.

The riders behind swung into sight. By way of warning O'Hara dropped a bullet in front of them. The Ingram gunmen opened up into loose formation, each man riding wide of his neighbor. But they kept coming. Shots sounded. A bullet cut off the branch of a willow five feet from O'Hara.

"Another half mile, boys, an' we'll make it," Texas Jim said anxiously. "Once we reach the boulder field there we can stand 'em off."

Bob Quantrell slid from his horse. "I'm gonna stop those birds."

He reined his horse across the branch of a willow, took careful aim, and fired. A man tumbled from a horse.

Quantrell let out a "Hi-yi" of triumph. "Got that fellow good!" he called across to Texas Jim. "Guess they won't push on their reins to get any closer."

He was right. The pursuers made for such cover as was available. One object lesson at a time was enough.

The fugitives took advantage of this to increase the distance between them and the Ingram men.

"They ain't such curly wolves as they think they are." Quantrell shouted gleefully to his two companions. "I'll show this bully puss bunch whether they can push me more'n so far."

The hills that fenced in the park grew closer. Not far ahead was the cleft through which ran the creek. Into this the horses galloped. They passed to a boulder-strewn field beyond which was a gulch.

At the upper end of this they found the rest of their party. With them were Joe and the horses he had brought to the rendezvous.

Owen, his face drained of blood, looked like a man ready to collapse and sustained only by a resolute will. "Can you go on?" O'Hara asked him.

Both of his hands clung to the saddle horn. He nodded, not wasting the energy to answer in words.

"We'll try to make the Circle S O," O'Hara said. "It's less than four miles by the mesa."

He rode on one side of Owen, his partner on the other. Quantrell and Texas Jim brought up the rear, watching alertly for the pursuers.

The deputy sheriff and Joe rode in the van of the procession. Joe was an old-timer and picked with a sure eye the easiest way across the hills to the ranch.

Owen succumbed within sight of the ranch, slipping from the saddle into O'Hara's arms. One of the men rode forward at a gallop and brought back a buckboard into which he was lifted. A few minutes later he was carried unconscious into the house.

O'Hara sent a messenger for a doctor and another for Steelman. That the attack upon the Hughes ranch would be interpreted as a challenge he was quite sure. Coming as it did on the heels of the offer to compromise, Ingram would be justified in considering it black treachery. He would retaliate swiftly, probably with deadly efficiency, unless it was possible to get him to see the affair in its true light. Quantrell and the men who had ridden with him on the raid must be discharged. It must be made clear that neither Steelman nor his partners of the Circle S O ranch countenanced in any way what had been done.

He talked it over with Smith-Beresford. The Englishman suggested a difficulty.

"It's all very well talking about getting rid of Quantrell and the other young devils who rode with him on this raid, but let's not go too fast about it, old chap," he said. "The Azryan may come down like the wolf on the fold, and it would be deuced convenient to have a few of these wild hellions around to repel boarders, you know. We can't discharge Quantrell until we know what Ingram means to do, even if he did spill the apple cart for us. Better wait till Steelman gets here."

"If we keep Quantrell we tell Ingram that we're standing back of the raid. No two ways about that, Lyulph."

"I know. Confound the young ruffian! But if we don't keep him and the others we're inviting the enemy to come and wipe us out," Smith-Beresford laughed ruefully. "Queer, by Jove. We thought we could keep out of this feud, you and I. Scattered the word broadest that we weren't in it and didn't intend to get in it, and we're dashed center of the whole show whether we want to be or not. Every move we make turns out wrong, or anyhow it's interpreted wrong. I suppose we'll be blamed for going to the Hughes place to try to stop the row."

"Of course. It's unfortunate that one of Ingram's men was shot after we got there. What luck would I have if I rode to town to see Ingram at once? Would there be any chance of persuading him that the situation got out of hand before we reached home?"

"No go. You'd never get back alive. We'll have to sit-tight till Steelman comes."

Steelman arrived the evening of the next day. He was accompanied by half a dozen armed men.

After he had talked with his partners the owner of the Hashknife sent for Bob Quantrell. That young man came in sheepishly, expecting to be raked over the coals.

"You've certainly spilled the frijoles, young man," Steelman said bluntly. "What have you got to say for yourself? Who asked you to raid the Hughes place?"

"Mal Oh, I was kinda playin' a lone hand. Would you call it a raid when we was a sheriff's posse all sworn in regular an' proper?"

"At the very hour you were pullin' off this fool business my two partners here were tryin' to arrange a compromise with Ingram. What do you suppose he'll think about us?"

"He'll probably onlook his private can of cuss words." The boy put one thigh over the edge of the table and sat on it by way of showing that he was at ease. "What's the use of compromise with him? We've got him whipped, looks to me. The banks are closin' in on him like buzzards on a dead row at a water hole. That's the story I hear. Lemme ask you a question. Say I'd made my play good. Would you have hawled me out then or would you have figured it good medicine?"

For a moment Steelman was taken aback. It was not just the question he wanted asked at the moment.

"Let's say your plans had worked out the way you originally expected, Bob," he said. "You'd have surprised Ingram's warriors early in the mornin'. Say word had reached him while he an' our friends here had been talkin' compromise. What do you reckon he would have done to them? Would they have had a dead man's chance to get out of town alive?"

The Boyhood of Famous Americans

By J. V. Fitzgerald

Chief Justice Chas. E. Hughes

Kindergarten certainly wasn't any place, even for a boy of five, when the lad was able to outline a plan of study for the classics to his father, Rev. David Hughes, Baptist minister in Oswego, N. Y., made up his mind to that effect when his son, Charles, presented such a plan to him shortly after he had been entered in the infant class.

The result was that the boy was taken out of school and tutored by his mother and father. Mrs. Hughes had been a school teacher before her marriage. Few parents were so well equipped to teach a bright lad at home.

Charles Evans Hughes was a precocious child, as his formulation of a plan to study the classics when he was in kindergarten will bear out. He was born in 1862 in Glens Falls, N. Y., where his father had a small congregation. He was delicate as a child and didn't romp and play much with other little boys and girls.

Perhaps because he was not particularly robust his parents devoted more time to him than might ordinarily have been the case. His mind developed rapidly. He showed a decided interest in books as soon as he was able to talk. He was reading nursery rhymes when he was three and a half years old. He was five when his father was transferred to a church in Oswego when Charles was summarily removed from kindergarten.

When he was eight, and the family was living in Newark, N. J., the lad was able to translate the Bible from the Greek. He was also a wide reader of Shakespeare's works at this early age.

He later went to school in New York city where he was graduated from high school in 1875 at the age of thirteen as salutatorian of his class. His oration, because of its scholarly tone and the fine delivery of the orator, surprised a big crowd that attended the exercises in the old Academy of Music in that city.

While attending high school he wrote essays on such subjects as "The Limitation of the Human Mind," "Self Help," and "The Evil of Light Literature." He was marked even then as a deep student and thinker.

The Rev. Mr. Hughes wanted his son to become a clergyman, if the boy felt a real call to the religious life. Young Charles had not made up his mind definitely as to his future career when he entered Colgate at the age of fourteen. He was a slight boy at the time and timid, gave when it came to questions of scholarship. Then he would talk well and enthusiastically, even with his elders. Mentally he was more mature than his classmates.

The boy spent two years at Colgate. From there he went to Brown university, entering as a sophomore in 1878. He immediately showed all the promise indicated in his high school days. He was a brilliant student, but modest and retiring in disposition.

He gained many scholastic honors at Brown. He won the prize for the highest standing in English literature when he was a junior. Upon graduation, at the age of nineteen, he was awarded the prize as the student showing the most all-around promise. He was honor man in his class.

By this time he had finally made up his mind not to become a clergyman. Deciding against following the career for which his father had hoped, he went from Brown university to Delphi, N. Y. There he taught mathematics in the Delaware academy.

He studied law at Columbia university at night after returning to New York city and was admitted to the bar when he was twenty-two years old.

While the young lawyer had been sickly as a child he showed great physical capacity for work in the next three years. He was engaged as a clerk in a law office during the day. At night he acted as a teacher and tutor at Columbia.

Finally his health suffered under the strain. He was ordered to take a vacation. He spent it as a teacher of commercial and contract law at Cornell university.

The upstate climate agreed with him. When he returned to New York city he was able to throw himself vigorously into the duties of his profession as a practitioner. He first attracted wide public attention as counsel for the gas investigation committee. He added to his reputation as an outstanding lawyer by his conduct of the insurance investigation, another New York state inquiry.

Later he was elected governor of New York and re-elected, resigning to become a United States Supreme court justice. He retired from the bench to be his party's candidate for the Presidency. He lost the highest office within the gift of the American people because of a factional squabble in California. Later he served as Secretary of State and is now chief justice of the United States Supreme court.

It has everything desired to produce the mood for this, the one night in every year, when everyone feels the urge to "cut-up."

There will be plenty of comedy, music, eight new songs and dancing, including three ballets and numerous sketches. This picture has a cast of 46, besides Abe Lyman and his band, and features a masked ball aboard a Zeppelin, which tears loose from its mast and cracks up while in mid-air and 500 guests make for the earth in parachutes.

Christmas Day was no exception to the general rule among the little tots from the east side who rise early on this particular morning and go from one end of the town to the other, piercing the crisp mountain air with their glad cries of "Crimes." People who are acquainted with the custom of the little ones, always see that they do not go away without a gift of some nature, for which they pleasantly return their thanks and continue on their way, rejoicing.
