Fatally Burned

Larry Dow, wife and Mrs. E. C. Dow arrived here yesterday from Santa Fe, where they went Monday in answer to a message to the effect that Mrs. Chavez, wife of patrolman Benny Chavez was badly injured by an explosion of gasoline which she mistook for kerosene, last Saturday. Thinking the fire was out in her kitchen stove and being in haste to light it, she poured the fluid into the ashes, which contained some live coals, whereupon there was an explosion which set fire to her clothing, so badly burning her that she suffered until Wednesday when she died. The remains will arrive here tomorrow, accompanied by the husband and Mrs. Ralph Dow and will be taken to Lincoln for burial. The family in general have the sympathy of this community, as they are all old residents of Lincoln, many of whom still reside there. Mrs. Chavez was Mrs. Larry Dow's sister.

Mrs. Geo. Titworth

of Capitan and Miss Charlotte Rice of Fort Stanton were Carrizozo visitors yesterday, returning home in the evening. Mr. H. F. Decker of Fort Stanton was also a visitor yesterday.

Funeral of Morgan B. Paden

The funeral services over the remains of M. B. Paden, Treasurer of Lincoln County and beloved son of Dr. M. G. Paden, who died at El Paso Sunday, was held at the Methodist Church Wednesday afternoon with Rev. J. L. Lawson conducting the same in the presence of an audience that overtaxed the seating capacity of the church. The pastor preached a sermon full of love, hope and consolation, a choir of ladies sang several selections and eight Rainbow Girls acted as flower bearers of the beautiful emblems which were many and varied, after which, the remains were taken to the White Oaks cemetery for interment.

Morgan Brent Paden was born in White Oaks, N. M., Feb. 24, 1887. He was a graduate of the N. M. Military Institute at Roswell, with exceptional honors. On March 10, 1923, he was married to Miss Elsie Armstrong. At the time of his death, he was Treasurer of Lincoln County, to which office he was re-elected and as an evidence of his popularity, at one time there was a strong indication that he would be endorsed by the party of an opposite political faith. Brent was everybody's friend. His word was as good as his bond and in his official duties it was a pleasure to be served by him. He leaves a wife and his father, Dr. M. G. Paden, to whom the combined sympathy of this community is extended.

Mell of Roswell and gave bonds to the amount of $5,000 for his appearance at the next term of court. He was indicted for 2nd degree murder and the charge is one of the most heinous. His accomplice, Dr. Grissom, who is here in jail, relied on Walker, it is said, to be one of the principal witnesses, but Walker is now facing the same charge.

Before the entertainment in the hall the boys went to Ward 11, where 40 minutes of music was furnished for the patients there. Rev. Swift is to be congratulated on having such a fine group of musicians in his church in Denver.

Funeral of Mrs. W. B. Ayers who died at her home in Klamath Falls, Oregon, April 18, was held at the Baptist Church Monday afternoon, with Rev. Eikins of the Alamogordo Christian Church conducting the services.

As stated in our last issue, Mrs. Nellie Branum, daughter, Mrs. Oscar Clouse and son, Clint went to Los Angeles, met Mr. Ayers and the remains, accompanying the same here for burial. The pastor preached a sermon full of comfort to those left behind and paid a fitting tribute to the Christian character of the deceased. A choir of ladies sang several selections which were favorites of the deceased, after which the remains were followed by a host of friends to the local cemetery and there interred.

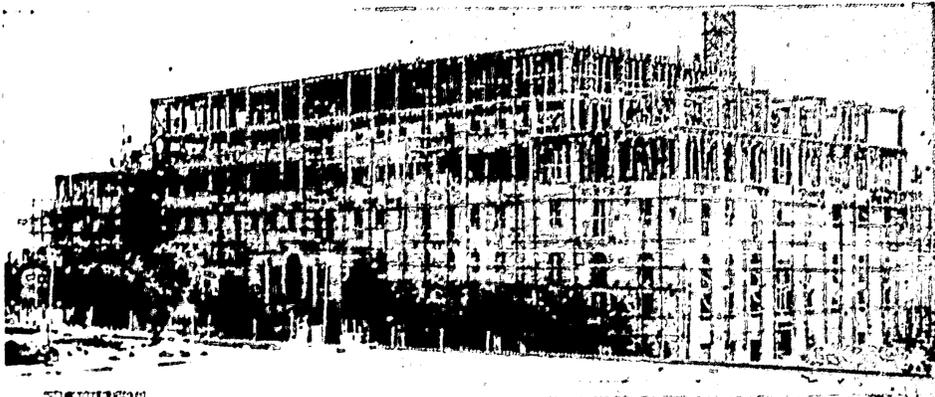

Mrs. Ayers, nee Allie Branum was born at Nogal April 19, 1895 and reared here. She was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lin Branum, and received her high school education in our schools, after which she attended and graduated from State College with high honors. She was united in marriage to Mr. W. B. Ayers about 4 years ago, since which time she had resided at the above named place. She leaves a husband, one child, her mother, Mrs. Nellie Branum, a sister, Mrs. Clouse, and three brothers, Rufus, Linza and Clint and her many friends both at her home town and at the home of her adoption. The love and esteem in which the estimable lady was held by all who knew her, was attested by the many beautiful floral emblems which were tokens of love and tributes to her Christian character and admirable womanhood. The sympathy of the community goes out to the sorrowing loved ones.

PENNANT BATTLE SEEN AS CLOSE

Majority of Clubs in Big League Are Stronger.

This will be a "hard year" in which to win baseball pennants. Twelve of the sixteen clubs in the National and American Leagues have been improved, writes G. W. Daley in the New York World. Some of them have been improved greatly.

There will be keener competition. The National league can expect no runaway race such as the Cubs put on last year. The New York Giants and the Pittsburgh Pirates of last year's first division clubs will be better. The Brooklyn Robins, the Cincinnati Reds and the Phillies of the second division clubs, all will be stronger.

In the American league only Washington and Boston seem to have stood still. The world's champion Athletics and the Yankees, the runners-up, have been braced for another struggle. But in addition three other clubs have been greatly strengthened and they are coming to plague last year's leaders.

The chances against any repetition of the rush of the A's to an 18-game lead seem very remote this season, and except for the Boston club the teams should be well bunched.

Although Yale won 115 athletic events during the indoor season now drawing to a close and lost but 33, the 1929-30 winter will not go down in the Yale records as even approaching the best that Yale has done in the field of winter sports competition.

Jack Doyle, veteran sports promoter of Los Angeles, is considering plans to build an outdoor fight arena to seat 22,000.

Jack Quinn, veteran spitball hurler of the world champion Athletics, is ambitious to set a record for service in big league baseball. Quinn at this time is the only pitcher in either league who was in the majors 20 years ago.

In these days of special trains and luxurious accommodations for traveling college athletes, the Oklahoma Aggies' wrestling team presents a contrast for those inclined to object to over-emphasis in sport.

The Aggies' team, eight contestants and their coach, traveled the 2,000 miles from Tulsa to Penn State college for the national collegiate championships in two inexpensive automobiles.

It may not be an example of cause and effect, but the Aggies won the team title for the third straight year.

By the way of an anecdote or two: Bob Hart, now chief of the New England league's umpire staff, recalls the game at Pittsburgh where Hank O'Day ruled foul on a long fly that went into the stand. Several days later, a fan sued the club for damages and proved the ball landed four feet inside the foul line—he was on the receiving end.

On another occasion, Hart, Bill Donovan and O'Day, behind the plate, called a player out on strikes. Later Donovan ruled the same performer out at first on a close play. Still later he was declared out by Hart at third base, trying to stretch a double to a triple. As he dusted himself off, the player remarked to Hart: "Say, what chance as a Wop got against three Irishmen?"

The Indianapolis motor speedway announces the entry of Juan A. Gaudino, South American racing champion, for the annual 500-mile automobile race to be staged here May 30.

Gaudino will drive an American car which he has used successfully in winter racing in his own country, it was said. He won the last Gran Premio Nacional, an 800-mile road race in South America.

The last South American drivers to compete in the local race were here in 1923.

Dick Harlow, western Maryland athletic director and coach, who is the new president of the Eastern Intercollegiate Boxing association, favors a change in conducting the tournaments. Harlow is against "blind draws" but will consult the officials of the respective colleges before inaugurating reforms he has in mind.

The Rose-Ade stadium of Purdue university, which has been in use since 1924, only partially completed, will receive the finishing touches during the summer. This was the verdict of university trustees and directors of the Rose-Ade Foundation who held their quarterly meeting at Purdue. The new work will give the stadium nearly 10,000 more seats, making a total of 23,800, and will cost approximately $70,000.

ENVOY TO NICARAGUA

WANTS NORRIS' SEAT

Norris for the Republican nomination. Although the aged farmer-barrister has never tasted intoxicating liquor in his life, he is nevertheless running on "a sogging wet platform."

Kindly Dead Remembered

A decision that may prevent the collection of thousands of dollars in state taxes, was handed down by Judge M. T. Phelps in Superior Court at Phoenix. SYNOPSIS

Sam Stanley, wealthy owner of the Desert Moon ranch, informs his housekeeper, Mary Magin, that his former wife's twin daughters, Danielle and Gabrielle, are coming to the ranch to live, their mother being dead and their father, Daniel Canneziano, who had been the cause of Sam's divorcing his wife, in the penitentiary. Sam's adopted boy, John, has grown to manhood, and a girl, Martha, weak-minded, Mrs. Ollie Ricker, Martha's nurse, Hubert Hand and Chadwick Causfield are the other members of the household. The girls arrive. John becomes engaged to Danielle. Gabrielle seeks to win John from her sister, and her actions when she receives a letter from France mystify Mrs. Magin. Sam learns Canneziano is soon to be released from the penitentiary. Mrs. Magin finds Gabrielle, checked to death. Causfield commits suicide. The coroner's verdict is murder and suicide. Sam finds a note left by Causfield confessing he killed Gabrielle, but the rancher proves he could not have done it, and the entire household is under suspicion. A conference is held in an attempt to solve the mystery. It is revealed that the two girls came to the ranch as the proceeds of a train robbery in which their father participated. Martha is found dead. Mrs. Ricker asserts Martha killed Gabrielle.

"Was it written in code?"
"No. You see, the hotel where I was putting up just then was, one might say, over regulated. Letters written in code were not favorably regarded there."

"Could you read a letter written in his code?"

"I fancy I could decipher it, with a bit of study."

"Do they speak Spanish in Mexico?" I questioned; and was rewarded by having all present look at me as if they thought that I had just developed a yearning for cultural, geographical knowledge.

"I am getting at something," I explained. "Was this Baumont man ever in Mexico?"

"Unfriendly persons," Canneziano answered, "insinuate that Mexico is his native land."

"Did anyone ever call him 'Mexico'?"

"To his fury, yes. Is it relevant?" Sam asked, "Where were you, do you know, at the time of the Tonopah train robbery, three years ago?"

"I was in Denver, since you insist."

"This stranger friend of yours told the girls that you and he robbed that train."

Canneziano's face went dark and ugly. "So the girls say, ugly?"

"He told them that," John said. There was threat enough in his voice to make Canneziano come off his perch.

"Is that possible?" he questioned, but pleasantly enough. "I can't see his motive. If he had not included himself in his confession to the girls, I would think that he had some friendly reason for preferring me in captivity. . . . No, I don't get it."

"We think he has denied it, since," Sam said. "We think that the code letter, which none of us can read, is his denial. No matter. Your story tells up straight enough with the one we have."

"Gratifying, I am sure. I wonder whether I might see this code letter? I am rather clever with the things."

I went upstairs to get it. I am not denying that it gave me the creeps to go into Gaby's room, alone at night. When I opened the door, and saw that the light on the table was lit, and that someone was standing beside it, I all but jumped out of my shoes.

It was Mrs. Ricker. She turned to me, and apologized, quietly, for having startled me. "I was looking at these things," she went on. "They know. They were there. If only one of them could talk—"

I was so put out with her, for startling me, and for being in Gaby's room, anyway, poking around—though land knows she had a right to be there, and I might have done the same thing myself, with my lists of names, and so on—that I just picked up the letter, at the same time looking over the other things on the table to be sure nothing was missing.

"Perhaps," she said, "I should not have come in here? I suppose, when the detective comes, he—she would like to see the room as nearly as possible undisturbed. Do you think it would be a good plan to lock it, and to give the key to Sam, until she does come?"

She went around with me, while I locked the doors on the inside. We went into the hall through Danny's room. I looked that door after us. She told me goodnight and went to her own room. I went downstairs, and gave the key and the letter to Sam.

"Wise idea, Mary," he said, when I told him that I had locked the rooms. "I suppose Canneziano would tell you, though, that locked doors do not make a good plan to lock it, and to give the key to Sam, until she does come?"

"Looks rather confessing, doesn't it?" Canneziano said, when he had unfolded and straightened the paper. "What price deciphering it, Sam?"

"No price, to you," Sam answered. Canneziano returned the letter to its envelope and tossed it on the table. "Fair enough," he said. "My proposition, cards on the table, is this: If I beat Lynn MacDonald to it, discover the murderer before she does, will you pay me what you have agreed to pay her?"

"Canneziano," Sam said, "get this. Get it now. I'll pay you not one red cent for anything. Not one red cent."

"Fair enough," Canneziano repeated. "And my mistake. Undoubtedly, I should have worded it differently. For instance—What will you pay me for not to discover the murder on the Desert Moon ranch?"

A week ago, Sam would have got up and kicked him out through the door for that question. This evening Sam sat still and looked him over, sort of sifting his eyes up and down over his smooth dapperness. Finally he drawled, "Go as far as you like, Canneziano. Only—you won't get anywhere you'd like to be, not on that line."

"Presently, perhaps," Canneziano answered. "No hurry."

"I'll be switched if Sam didn't sit there and murmur, mildly, "Said the carpenter," to himself.

CHAPTER XII

Lynn MacDonald.

On Friday afternoon, late, I went with John and Sam down to Rattall to meet the train. Just before it stopped, with its usual roar of protest against Rattall, Clarence Pette swung off it.

"Miss MacDonald is on this train," he said to Sam and me. "Is there anything else I can do for you?"

"Not a thing, if you are positive that she is Miss MacDonald, except to take your fifty—here it is—and vamoose."

"I'm positive. Thanks. Here she comes now."

I looked up to see her coming. I could hardly believe my eyes. I don't know what I had expected; but I surely had not expected anything to get off that smoke-dirty train, in the middle of a Nevada desert, on a sweltering hot July evening, that looked as she did.

In the first place, in her pongee silk dress with coat to match, and perky little green hat, she looked as if she had been fresh picked, in the last nice California garden, and had been kept under glass, on ice ever since. She was tall; taller than most women, and with weight enough to look durable and useful, but not a mite fat. She had eyes that were as gray as pussywillows, and that did no monkey-tricks of changing to green or blue; she had wavy carrot-colored hair, that was so full of life it looked as if it were trying to break the bonds of its neat, boyish, bob and go floating off, on its own, to make maybe a tiny sunset cloud. Her nose was small; her mouth was a mite too large, showing freely in a smile her teeth, little and polished white, like a puppy's.

Her voice was low and pleasant, but there was something brisk and crisp about it, and about all of her, that seemed to say plenty and plenty of times for everything, but not one precious minute to waste.

In the background, during this meeting, John and Danny had been hugging and kissing. At last, to my relief, they came over to join us; Danny, looking paler and more snuffed out than usual, by contrast, maybe, with Miss MacDonald; John beaming with triumph at having her home again.

"You girls get acquainted on the train?" Sam asked.

"We had breakfast together in the diner this morning," Miss MacDonald answered.

"Did you know who I was?" Danny questioned.

"It was my business to know that, wasn't it?" Miss MacDonald smiled.

We got into the sedan and were riding along the Victory highway. Just as I was thinking how much more wholesome everything felt, since I had shaken hands with Miss MacDonald, Danny, who was riding in the front seat beside John, spoiled it all by emitting a shriek; it was not a very loud one, but it was thick with horror and repulsion.

John explained, over his shoulder to us, that he had told her about "that man" being on the ranch.

"Uncle Sam," Danny pleaded, "do I have to see him?"

"Well, Danny," Sam apologized, "I'm right down sorry about it; but, you see, he is staying on the place. We'll keep him out of your way as much as we can."

Danny put her head on John's shoulder and began to cry; weak, choking little sobs that hurt like having to watch a sick baby.

I leaned forward and tried to soothe her; told her that we would all do what we could to keep him away from her, and to make it easy for her.

"It can't be made easy," she answered. "You can't keep him away from me. I want to see him, I tell you. I've been so homesick—and now to come home to this. I can't see him. I won't—"

Miss MacDonald, who the minute before, had seemed all pity for Danny, began, suddenly, to talk right through, and over her sobs, to Sam; to talk in rather a loud voice about stock raising, paying no more attention to Danny's troubles than she paid to the humming of the motor.

I sat and sulked and nursed my disappointment. If I had been a man—which praise the Lord I am not—it would have been a case of love at first sight with me toward Lynn MacDonald. But now I told myself bitterly that I had been a fool to expect real womanly sympathy and kindness from a person in her profession. Forgetting out criminals would make anyone as hard as nails.

Not until Danny had quieted down, and had turned to us with stammered apologies and attempted explanations, did Miss MacDonald ask, "Who is this man?"

"Dreadful as it must seem to you," Danny answered, "he is my father. But he has brought sorrow, and fear and trouble to my mother, and to my sister, and to me, whenever he came near us. He is a wicked man."

But for all the fuss she made about it, I will say that Danny did very well when we all went into the house and she saw Canneziano, standing over by the east windows, smoking a cigarette.

"What-ho, Dan," he said, smiling; his smooth, smirking smile at her. "You are looking seedy. Bad times around here, lately."

She didn't go near him. She edged closer to John; but she answered, looking at him straight and lifting her chin in a pretty, dignified way she had, "Very, very bad times indeed." She and John walked through the room to the stairway, and up the steps, and out of sight.

"Do You Trust Your Housekeeper?"

Canneziano stood watching them, a dark, ugly look on his face. "There's filial affection for you," he said. And then, with a half laugh, as he lit another cigarette, and shook the flame from the match, "The girl is a fool."

Miss MacDonald came down to breakfast in the morning, trim and white as a new candle. When we had finished breakfast, she asked Sam if she might detain him. I stayed on, when the others had left the dining room. She said pointedly, though politely and to Sam, not to me, that she wanted to speak to him alone.

I took myself off. But the open window in the pass pantry was too big a temptation; so I went in there, softly, and stood far back and to the side.

Her very first words took me right off my feet. "Mr. Stanley," she questioned, "do you trust your housekeeper?"

"Mary?" Sam drawled. "Well, now, I don't know as to trusting—but if Mary was going on a long journey, to indefinite foreign parts, and felt the need of my right eye to take along with her, I'd loan it to her for as long as she wanted it—no questions asked. I can't say that I'd go much further than that, though."

I was warm and glowing. Sam, the old nunny, getting his dander up, and to a beautiful woman like that, just because she had asked him a simple question.

She laughed; a cheery, escaping sort of laugh, like something with bright wings suddenly flying loose.

"Come back into the dining room."

Old Inscription Shows "Horse Age" Beginning

To the learned, century-old Academy of Inscriptions of Paris, Professor Hrozy, of Prague, has communicated his long-expected translation of what is perhaps the most ancient Hittite inscription. It is the first in any language that became European and was cut in the rock of Asia Minor not far from what is now Angora, the New capital of Turkey.

The value of the inscription—what we might call its curiosity—is that it gives the date very nearly when tame horses first appeared so far to the west. It was the beginning of the Horse Age in civilization and is of melancholy interest to us who, 4,000 years later, are carting with our automobiles into the Horseless age.

It was supposed that horses were first brought to Egypt, mother of Civilization, about 1,500 years before Christ by the Canaanites from Babylonia.

then, Mrs. Magin, she called to me. "You can hear better in here."

I came in, a mite shamefacedly. "It was my overweening curiosity," I explained.

"I like people with curiosity," she said. "I understand them, too; because, I suppose, I am one of the most curious persons in the world. Another thing, I have never found a truly curious person who was a wicked person. Of course, one has to be able to discriminate between innate curiosity and the slyness of self protection— But, forgive me, Mr. Stanley, I am chattering away your time. Now then."

(Later we became accustomed to that brisk professional opening of her, that "Now then," as a signal for getting right down to business, but it was as surprising, heard for the first time, as biting my tongue.)

"Gabrielle Canneziano was last seen, alive, where and at about what hour?"

We told her. "Did she seem at ease, happy, untroubled?"

I said, "She was unhappy, troubled, and frightened."

"Did she speak to any one of you, as she walked through the room?"

I told her about Gaby's gesture to Chad, and about him following her to the porch and talking to her there.

"Chadwick Causfield? The man who killed himself when the body was found?"

"Yes."

"Did he leave the porch with her?"

"No. He came straight back into the house."

"What other members of the household were in the room, at that time?"

Sam told her. "That leaves her sister, and your son and daughter as the only members of the household who were absent at the time. How long before Martha Stanley returned to the house?"

Sam said, "I was playing chess. But I know it wasn't long."

"It was not more than five or six minutes," I said.

"How long before Danielle Canneziano came downstairs?"

I told her about Danny's calling after Gaby. "It wasn't much more than ten minutes after she called, not fifteen, I am sure, before Danny came downstairs."

She went on with her questioning. We had finished breakfast at eight thirty o'clock. At eleven thirty, I felt that she knew everything that Sam and I knew about the case, and, probably, a deal more.

She had asked Sam to explain, in detail, why he had entirely discounted Chad's note of confession.

Sam said, "The body was cold and stiff when we found it. That is proof, isn't it, that she had been dead more than an hour?"

"If you are certain of that, it is positive proof that she had been dead much longer than an hour."

"I am certain. Well, until seven o'clock the boy had not been out of my sight for one minute, after Gaby walked through the room, alive, for us all to see her, at four o'clock."

Miss MacDonald went on with her questions. They brought us to Martha's death. She took what seemed like a long time asking us questions about Martha's health. Had she ever complained of dizziness? Shortness of breath? Indigestion? And all sorts of other seemingly unimportant things.

"Where," she finally asked, "was this sleeping medicine purchased?"

Sam told her in San Francisco, with a doctor's prescription.

"Have you still some of them left, in the original box?"

"A few, I think."

"Good. Will you get it for me, Mr. Stanley?"

"I'll get it," I said.

I had seen the powder box, left out of place on the table, the morning of the fifth of July, when I had gone into the hall bathroom. I had picked it up, out of habit, and replaced it in the medicine closet. I thought that I could put my hand right on it.

I could not. When I opened the mirror door, the box was not to be seen. I searched and searched. I might have spared myself the trouble. From that day to this, the box, with the remaining powders in it, has never been found.

"I was afraid of that," Miss MacDonald said, when I returned with my information, and nothing else, to the dining room. "Now then; Would it be possible for you to remember who last took one of these powders, and when, with no ill effects?"

"Danny and Mary each took one the night of the fourth, when Martha did," Sam answered. "I've asked them about it, and both of them say that they did not feel queer at all afterwards. They were both wide awake in the morning."

"My word!" said Miss MacDonald. "I think," I offered, "that something was all wrong with Martha's heart before she took the powder. She acted sleepy, stupid, all afternoon."

"Yes. Now then—" She was off again, leading us with her questions, through Mrs. Ricker's confession and her suspicions of Martha.

"After Martha came into the house with the bracelet," she asked, "was she out of the room again within the hour; or even within the second hour, between five and six?"

"She was not out between four and five," I said. "We all stayed right in the room. It was too hot to move around. I know that Martha did not leave the room. She sat beside Chad on the piano bench, for a while. She sat on the arm of Sam's chair, watching the chess game—"

"Hold on," Sam interrupted. "I've got two things to tell you that you are overlooking, and I know that they are both mighty important."

"What are they?"

"The first one is this. Gaby had lived here close to two months. Martha had never harmed her. Does it stand to reason that, on the very day Gaby was afraid she was going to be killed, Martha would do it? There's too much coincidence in that, isn't there?"

"I think so. Though we can not ever discount coincidence. What appears to be coincidence usually proves not to be coincidence at all, in the end. But, Mr. Stanley, unless the other thing you have to tell me is a fact, and not an opinion, I am going to ask you not to tell it to me, at least not until later."

"It is straight-fact—"

"Very well, then?"

"Martha was always trying experiments with feeding her rabbits. I guess she thought that they might like grain. Maybe they do. I don't know. Anyway, she, or someone, had tugged a half sack of grain up there. A lot of it had spilled out under the berry bushes. It is all fresh sprouted, and growing fine. There wasn't a spot out there, except under those bushes, where Martha could have hidden the body. A body, even as small as Gaby's, would have smashed down and broken those fresh sprouts of grain."

"But—the body was never there. Is it possible that you don't know that Gabrielle Canneziano was murdered right there on the stairs, where she fell, and where she was found?"

"How in blazes could I know it?" Sam said.

"My word! Weren't you present when the body was moved?"

"No. I—well, I didn't care about being."

"The fingers of her right hand were clutching the stair tread with the grasp of death. Nothing can disprove that. Dead fingers cannot be made to clutch."

"How to you know that?" Sam demanded. "About her fingers, I mean."

"When I saw the body in the crematory in San Francisco—"

"What?"

"I always do that, when I can. Before I sent you my telegram, I had gone to see the body."

"Did—does Danny know that?"

"No. It might be better not to tell her. It is a necessary part of my profession. The crematory people realize that; but, since people are often very sensitive about it, they prefer that the relatives should not know that they allow it. As I was saying, I saw, then, that the fingers on the right hand had been broken. The undertaker had done that, you understand, in order that they might look natural to fold."

"When I had received your telegram engaging me to take the case, I telephoned to the coroner and the undertaker in Telko. They corroborated the opinion I had formed, from the fingers, about the death clutch, among other things. Those proved that she had been killed on the stairs, by someone who had been coming downstairs behind her. How did it happen that you did not know that?"

"As soon as I realized what had occurred," Sam explained, "I cleared everybody right out and locked the door. I knew that it was necessary for the coroner to examine the body before it had been disturbed."

"How very, very sensible," Miss MacDonald said. But I did not quite like the way she said it.

I looked at my watch and said that it was time for me to be starting to get dinner. She asked if she might help me. I thought that she was trying to be polite, and I was making my refusal just as polite, when she interrupted me.

"Please, Mrs. Magin," she urged. "You mentioned at breakfast that you had only one inefficient girl to help you, just now. I love housework, of all sorts. And I want to get intimately acquainted with this house. The best way to do that is to work in it, isn't it?"

Sam winked at me. "She isn't going to let you out of her sight, Mary," Miss MacDonald tried to smile, but she made a failure of it.

"But you don't need to worry, Mary," Sam went on, "because one thing, now, is dead certain. If Gaby was murdered there on the stairs, it is impossible that any member of the household could have done it. It was, anyway. But now it is sure. The case is all."

Miss MacDonald flushed out, in one of her rarely shown tempers. "What utter nonsense," she said.

PROMOTION IN THE KINGDOM

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 20:17-28. GOLDEN TEXT—The Son of Man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give His life a ransom for many.

PRIMARY TOPIC—How to Become Great.

JUNIOR TOPIC—How to Become Great.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Greatness, Through Self-Denying Service.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Christ's Standard of Greatness.

1. The King Foretells His Death and Resurrection (vv. 17-19).

2. The King on His way to Jerusalem (v. 17).

This is His last journey to the beloved city. He took the twelve disciples aside from the traveling pilgrims to make known unto them what was before them. As they journeyed, he went ahead of the disciples. The courage thus shown by the Lord amazed the disciples who were following in fear (Mark 10:32).

3. The betrayal and death foretold (vv. 18, 19).

He went forward, fully conscious of the awful tragedy of the cross. He for the third time since the transfiguration, tells the disciples of His approaching sufferings and death. But they are so filled with their ambitious schemes that they do not understand Him. The treachery of Judas, the fierce persecutions by the chief priests and scribes, the unjust judgment, the delivery to Pontius Pilate, the mockery, the scourging, the crown of thorns, the cross, the hanging between two malefactors, the nails, the spear—all were spread before His mind like a picture! Though He knew all this, He pressed on, not of necessity, but deliberately. The joyous outlook upon the victory which would be accomplished by the shedding of His blood led Him forward. He went courageously, for He knew the time had come for the accomplishment of His Father's will.

4. The resurrection foretold (v. 19).

Truly, this would have been a dark picture had the resurrection not been made known. The resurrection life beyond is always seen as the issue of the cross. The blessedness of the life beyond this "vale of tears" should induce us to press on. Christ is the grand example, (Heb. 12:2).

5. The Ambitious Request of James and John (vv. 20-23).

1. The request (vv. 20, 21).

This request was made by their mother. The request was for a place of prominence in the kingdom. It is not wrong for mothers to be ambitious for their boys, but they should know that life's pinnacles are exceedingly dangerous. It is desirable that parents should get places for their children near to Jesus, but the vain ambition of the world should not occupy their minds.

2. Jesus' answer (vv. 22, 23).

He spoke directly to the men, not to their mother, declaring that they knew not what they were asking. He showed them that the way to this position of glory was through suffering. The cup which they were to drink was of great agony. The way to the places of glory in the kingdom of Christ is by the path of lowly and self-forgetting service.

3. How to Be Truly Exalted (vv. 24-25).

1. The angry disciples (v. 24).

When the ten heard of the request of James and John, they were filled with indignation against them. Their displeasure did not arise from the fact that they were free from the same selfish spirit, but that these two had thrust themselves to the front.

2. Greatness among the heathen (v. 25).

The rule of the world has always been by the strong hand. The standards have not been moral excellence, but world, station, and power.

3. Greatness among Christ's disciples (vv. 26, 27).

The standard here is in sharp contrast. The way to the place of prominence in Christ's kingdom is the way of self-abasement. To give is greater than to receive. To be serving some one is much better than to be served. There will be degrees of rank in Christ's kingdom, but this rank will be character, not position, or authority. The spirit of Christ substitutes "the greatness of love for the love of greatness."

4. Christ is the supreme example of greatness (v. 28).

All who will be great should study and imitate Christ. Let them forget self and serve others, even to the giving of their lives.

Courage, Unspotted Life

Then said Mr. Holyman, there are two things that they have need to possess who go on pilgrimages: courage and an unspotted life. If they have not courage, they can never hold on their way; and if their lives be loose, they will make the very name of a pilgrim, a sink.—John Bunyan.

Airplanes and the Burro

In these days of fast moving trains, swift airplanes, dashing quick line steamers, we're neglect to give credit to the long-eared New Mexico nightingale who played his important part in the winning of the west. Now that he is relegated to the rear and bids made on him for the glufactory, he goes from one place to another, owned by nobody; comes unheralded and unsung with his long, sorrowful face and heart-rending bray to which little or no attention is paid.

When General Crook was sent from Washington in the early days to subdue an Indian uprising in Arizona, he paid more attention to his burros than he did to his men, for he knew that without the aid of those sleep-disturbers, the work which he was sent out to accomplish, would never be carried out, so where the mule had been beaten and mistreated by men and made to carry burdens too heavy for them to bear, he released all help except those who would carry out his orders to be kind to the animals.

In a short time, a system was perfected through the use of the mules that at that time, was a marvel of the west and in many an isolated outpost in the desert, hard-pressed Indian fighters would cheer themselves hoarse at a distant advance of the plodding burros. To their everlasting credit it may be said that they were never started for a place where supplies were sorely needed, but what they made it, and as with General Crook as with many others, he was able to perform with much success, the task his government had given him to do.

But now he stands as a "relic of old decency," no longer needed, but driven from post-to-post, surviving well during the spring and summer time on fresh growth, while in the winter, on anything he can get, even to tin cans and other trash, while he watches speeding trains over the rails, airplanes overhead and dares not roam on highways for fear of the menacing automobile, but we still admire him for the good he has done. — "Viva la burro!"

The State Dept. of Education is not sending out 8th grade examination questions this year, but has requested that these examinations be given by the Co. Supts. In Lincoln county we are giving a series of Columbian Achievement Tests for this examination. These tests are compiled by the foremost educators of the country. They are standardized tests used by schools both large and small in our most progressive states. A preliminary test of this type was offered last month and both teacher and pupils think it is a big improvement. The 8th grade pupils took the examinations Thursday and Friday of last week.

Stuffed Spareribs With Sweet Potatoes

Appetizing and Inexpensive Roast Spareribs

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture)

Pork spareribs are one of the less expensive meat cuts which can be made most appetizing if carefully prepared.

The meat, like any cut of pork, must be well done without being dry. After browning spareribs quickly in a hot oven, reduce the temperature and cook slowly at moderate heat until tender.

Select well-fleshed rib sections that match. Have the breast bone cracked so that it will be easy to carve between the ribs.

Roast Stuffed Spareribs

- 3 sections of spare ribs
1 cup fine dry bread crumbs
1/2 cup diced onion
1/2 cup chopped parsley
1/2 cup sugar
1/2 tsp salt
1/2 tsp pepper

Lightly browned. Reduce the oven temperature rapidly to very moderate heat (300 to 325 degrees Fahrenheit) and continue to cook for about an hour longer, or until the meat is tender.

Some Welcome Dishes for the Table

By NELLIF MAXWELL

"Anyone who can assemble, prepare and cook an appetizing, wholesome meal should feel that it is an achievement. A well-balanced meal takes information, knowledge, training and application."

These recipes have been gathered from various sources; some will like to try them as they are not common: Salmon With Sauce Piquant.—Take three-quarter inch slices of salmon, place in a saucepan with hot fish broth, adding a touch of fruit juice or vinegar.

Blague of Herbs.—Chop together a handful of lettuce, sorrel, spinach, a small onion, a little celery and chervil and cook with two tablespoons of butter until soft, stirring constantly.

Fresh Perch.—Prepare six fresh perch and marinate them in two tablespoons of olive oil, a sprig of parsley, a little pepper and salt, allspice, bayleaf and other spices. Keep the fish in the marinade for an hour. Remove, roll in crumbs which have been seasoned with spices and cook until a golden brown. Serve with a butter sauce.

Stuffed Egg Plant.—Cut egg plant into halves lengthwise, remove the inside and make of this a stuffing by chopping fine and adding chopped parsley and onions. Stuff the egg plant with the mixture and place in a casserole with plenty of melted butter.

Panama Salad.—Place a slice of pineapple on a bed of lettuce. Lay sections of orange on pineapple slice to form a cone. Garnish with a cherry cut into points.

The first ancestor of the sandwich family was a meat sandwich. They are substantial things, often meant to take the place of a full meal or the main part of a meal.

The meat sandwich is often a dainty affair, but its meant to satisfy hearty appetites and is filling and practical. Ham as the meat for sandwich filling would no doubt receive the most votes, so we'll serve a few as follows: Ham Sandwich.—Mix one cupful of chopped ham, one sweet red pepper chopped, one tablespoonful of olive oil and one-half teaspoonful of made mustard. Spread on buttered bread.

Ham Sandwich Delicate.—Lay thin slices of cold boiled ham on buttered bread and sprinkle with powdered sugar and ground cloves. This has a flavor like the edge of baked ham.

Ham and Egg Sandwich.—Chop equal parts of boiled ham, hard cooked eggs and cucumber pickle, mix with salad dressing and add salt. Spread on buttered slices of any kind of bread.

Ham and Currant Sandwich.—Mince very fine enough cold boiled ham to make a cupful. Mix with one-half cupful of currant jelly and a salt-spoonful of paprika. Work to a paste, adding a tablespoonful of chopped capers and spread on thin strips of whole wheat bread.

Ham Loaf for Sandwiches.—Take two cupfuls of cooked ham, one-half cupful of bread crumbs, one small onion chopped, two canned pimientos, a tablespoonful of chopped green pepper and one-half cupful of tomato soup. Add enough water to moisten. Bake in a loaf. Slice when cold and use as filling with lettuce.

Ham With Chowchow Sandwich.—Mince sufficient boiled ham to make a solid cupful and enough chowchow and mustard pickle to make one-fourth of a cupful. Mix enough of the liquid mustard from the bottle to soften to the spreading consistency. Use on buttered rye or whole wheat bread.

Interesting Ways of Serving Lettuce

Who ever heard of cooking lettuce? The bureau of home economics of the United States Department of Agriculture, among others interested in trying out new ways with familiar foods. Braised lettuce, preferably of the iceberg type, is an excellent change in the way of a green vegetable.

- 2 large hard heads iceberg lettuce
4 lbs. bacon fat
Salt
Pepper

Cut each head of lettuce into four pieces, taking care that a portion of the center stem is left on each section to hold the leaves together. Heat the fat in a large skillet, put in the lettuce, cover, and cook for 30 minutes, or until the lettuce is tender.

Bedtime Story for the Children

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

"You must be careful not to get your feet wet, you know," said Father Turkey.

"Yes," said the little turkeys, "Mother was telling us to be very careful not to get our feet wet for the first four weeks of our lives, for if we do we will never be strong or well turkeys."

"If we're careful—well, then we will be strong and well turkeys." The little turkey drew a long breath, for he had said all that without stopping.

Father Turkey laughed and said, "Well, anyway, you know just what you should do. Your mother teaches you very well."

"Why did you ask us if we were spring turkeys, dad?" asked the little turkeys.

"Didn't you know whether we were or not?" "Yes, I know," said their father; "but I wondered if you had heard of the autumn and of Thanksgiving."

"No, mother hasn't told us about Thanksgiving," said the little turkeys. "Is Thanksgiving something to eat, daddy?"

"No, Thanksgiving is something which eats us. That is, we are supposed to be good food for Thanksgiving and for Christmas, too."

"We are going to be eaten?" asked the little turkeys, in frightened voices. "Cheer up, little turkeys," said Father Turkey. "It sounds quite dreadful to you now, but it won't when I explain it to you."

"And it is best for me to explain it to you. Then some one else won't have to explain it to you—some one else who might not understand the whole thing."

"You see," said Father Turkey, "Thanksgiving Day is a day when they they pay us is the fact that we're fed so well and given so much to eat before Thanksgiving Day that we never have to hunt for our food. We are given all the goodies we want, and we are made fat in the most delightful fashion.

"To be sure, all of us aren't eaten, but it doesn't matter whether we are or not, for we don't know it when we are, and we do know all about the delightful days beforehand, when we eat and eat and gobble and gobble and gobble and eat!"

"When your mother was looking after you I kept watch all the time to see that no harm came to you."

"I warned her whenever danger was near."

"I will teach you now to roost in the trees, and I will teach you how to put your heads under your wings."

"Yes, you're fine spring turkeys, you are!" (© 1928, Western Newspaper Union.)

The bright, attractive coloring and firmness of texture of vegetables often are lost by poor methods of cooking, especially poor methods of boiling. All vegetables become soft or mushy and discolored when cooked a long time.

Spring Suits Are Interesting

By JULIA BOTTOMLEY

Not are you going to wear a suit this spring, but what kind of a suit are you going to wear? That is the question. Now that you know you want a suit—for every style-alert woman does this season—just what type will you choose?

It is not such an easy matter to decide upon the spring suit as it might at first thought appear. Indeed, what with an infinite variety of materials, colors, contours challenging to a final decision the adventure of suit hunting becomes a breath-taking experience. The quest for a suit leads from the strictly tailored to most alluring softly feminine types.

However, whether you choose a navy or black classic, a short-jacket suit, or a three-quarter coat and matching skirt, or perhaps a novelty type feminized with such beguiling details as capelets, peplums, boleros, nipped-in waistlines or belted effects, the fact remains that a chief fascination of this season's suits are the materials from which they are made. Perhaps never in the history of a generation, at least not in the memory of this day and age, have the media of which suits are created offered such a wide range of weaves and winsome colorings.

Outstanding in the list of new suitings are loose-woven lacy tweeds which make a daring play on color, suggesting not only the very bright shades but indescribably lovely pastels as well, also most intriguing mixtures. The suit modeled in the picture is the more striking because of the handsome and unique material of which it is made—a chevron of tweed of wavy but lacy texture in a rich, black and brown mixture, exploding in diagonal pattern. The faced lapel gives graceful movement to the skirt, than the kid extends and a beige hat completes the costume.

look correctly tailored, yet not severely so, this suit of colorful tweed would be just the thing. The several colors intermingled in the weave of the tweed admit of many blouse changes, so that whether enroute to schoolroom or office, one's appearance each day may be refreshingly different. The program, for instance, might include for today a beige blouse or with just-arrived the-hip blouse; for tomorrow a tuck-in of lacquered red shantung, followed later in the week by a carefree model of brown handkerchief linen or plique. Of course each blouse would be complemented with accessories of related colorings. Brown kid shoes, even red ones with hats to match accent the chic of the costume. NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Legge Says Export Deben- ture Would Bring on a Foreign Embargo.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

PRESIDENT HOOVER'S opposition to the export debenture plan as a means of solving the wheat problem, now incorporated in the pending tariff bill, has received the support of Chairman Alexander Legge of the federal farm board. In a radio address broadcast by the National Farmers' union, Mr. Legge predicted the adoption of this plan would have dire results.

"Some persons think a way should be found so that the world market price would apply only to the surplus production and have the tariff effective on the wheat sold at home," Mr. Legge declared. "To my mind this is impractical."

"At the present time you see the situation of France paying a bounty of 20 cents a bushel on the export of certain grades of wheat, of which they have an excess supply, and Great Britain taking measures to retaliate. A few weeks ago, in parliament, Lloyd George made the statement that if the United States tried to ship wheat to England at a price lower than domestic price levels he would not be satisfied with a duty, but that the remedy should be an embargo prohibiting the importation of any wheat from this country.

"All of the consuming countries of the world are watching us closely. I am satisfied that they would take prompt measures to retaliate in the event exporting was done on a basis which they believe would be unfair to their growers, just as we do in this country under such circumstances."

Defending the board's setup of central marketing associations, Mr. Legge stressed the point that these "are not government agencies, as some critics who cry 'Socialism' would have the country believe, but, instead, are the instrumentalities of the producers, who grow crops, to market these crops to their best advantage."

William G. Kellogg has resigned as general manager of the Farmers' National Grain corporation and vice president of the Grain Stabilization corporation, both of which are sponsored by the federal farm board.

Mr. Legge says he believes the farm board is meeting with success in its wheat acreage reduction program. Information received by the board is that in the West and Northwest the farm leaders and farmers themselves are endorsing the plan.

REPLYING to an inquiry from Senator McNary, the chairman of the farm board said that body does not favor the abolition of grain and cotton exchanges by act of congress, as proposed by Senator Caraway, although it does favor better supervision of them.

As for cotton, it appears that the farmers' co-operatives have been turning the tables on the traders and put them into a "squeeze play" that has cost the shorts millions of dollars. The co-operatives, it was estimated, held in May and July contracts or in spot cotton unsold in the South more than a million bales, and it was conceded that the big operators who will have to put up actual cotton will have to pay fancy prices for these bales.

SPEAKING to some six thousand daughters of the American Revolution gathered in Washington for their thirty-ninth continental congress, President Hoover earnestly argued in behalf of American entry into the World court and said he had no doubt that the United States would soon find a way for such action. He declared American adherence would not constitute an "entangling alliance" and that it had been recommended "by every one of our Presidents and every one of our secretaries of state living since its inception."

The daughters, who as a body have evidenced their opposition to American participation in the World court, duly applauded Mr. Hoover. He was more warmly cheered when he advocated national defense forces strong enough to prevent invasion of American shores, when he pledged that during his administration the United States would refrain from entangling alliances in European diplomacy, and when he praised the results of the London naval conference.

Two days later the Daughters adopted reports demanding the maintenance of sufficient military and naval equipment to meet any emergency that may face the United States in the future, and opposing the scrapping of American ships until the major powers sign a limitation treaty. They evinced dislike for the three-power agreement concluded in London by the United States, Great Britain and Japan.

WHILE many of the delegates to the London conference were scattering for the Easter holidays, the drafting committee was hustling to complete the proposed treaty in time for the five nations to approve and sign it at a plenary session set for April 22. The chief difficulty that arose in connection with the three-power agreement was the wording of an "escape" clause allowing any one of the three powers which have agreed on a limitation in all categories of ships to exceed the fixed limits in case any outside power builds so as to become dangerous. This was satisfactorily adjusted.

To meet demands of the Japanese, Secretary of State Stimson and Senator Reed entered into a "gentlemen's agreement" with Reijiro Wakatsuki, head of the Japanese delegation, and Admiral Takarabe that the United States would not build during the life of this treaty the additional tonnage of light cruisers to which it is entitled if it should decide not to build the last three of the 18 heavy cruisers allowed by the pact. Consequently, until the next arms conference, Japan is allowed 74 per cent of America's aggregate tonnage in cruisers, destroyers and submarines.

President Hoover has said that the United States will save a billion dollars as a result of the three-power pact. Others estimate the saving in naval construction at half that amount. Great Britain will save $300,000,000 and Japan $200,000,000. Information in Washington is that the pacifist groups will work for ratification of the treaty and then will campaign against the appropriation of funds to keep it in operation. The pact probably will not be submitted to the senate until next December during the short session.

WHEN it comes to voting on a question that may affect their chances of re-election many of our senators are not very brave. Which explains the long delay in acting on the appointment of Judge John J. Parker of North Carolina as an associate justice of the Supreme court. The opposition to Parker was found mainly in organized labor and among the negroes, because of two decisions handed down by him some time ago. The senators were much concerned and one of them even asked President Hoover to withdraw the nomination. The President flatly refused to do this, and finally Senator Overman announced he would try to get the Judiciary committee to take action on April 21. It was said most of the Southern senators would vote for confirmation of the appointment, knowing that if Judge Parker were rejected the vacancy would be filled by some one from another section of the country.

The President has appointed Roland W. Boyden to succeed Charles Evans Hughes as American member of the permanent court of arbitration at The Hague.

REPRESENTATIVE TINKHAM of Massachusetts completed his presentation of evidence and arguments against the Anti-Saloon league and ecclesiastical lobbies before the senate committee on lobbying. Tinkham devoted most of his attention last week to Bishop James Cannon, Jr., of the Methodist Church, South. He was followed by Henry H. Carran, president of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, who already had refused to surrender that organization's files "except under compulsion of subpoena."

Sharply criticized by Senators Caraway,

Robinson and Walsh, Mr. Carran told in considerable detail of the operations of his association, its growth and resources, and of its plans to oppose at the polls drys who seek election to congress. He said the association spent nothing for lobbying and periodically filed reports of its expenditures and contributors as required by law.

Attorney General Mitchell, appearing before the senate Judiciary committee to oppose the resolution for a senate investigation of prohibition, gave warning that the prison population of the country is so great today that it is inexpedient to stimulate any further prosecutions. He said the federal prisoners had increased during the last nine months by 6,277, including those confined in county, city and state institutions, and that every federal institution was overcrowded. He attributed most of the new prisoners to the prohibition law prosecutions.

"It makes me feel," he said, "that we ought to get our house in order and increase our facilities for handling the criminal business we already have before we start passing any more federal statutes that make things federal crimes that are not at present."

The attorney general proposed increased pay and numbers of district attorneys as a step in improving enforcement.

Action on the law enforcement commission plan and the Bachmann federal judge substitute program to relieve the congestion in federal courts brought about by prohibition was deferred for two weeks by the house Judiciary committee.

PLANS were announced last week whereby the Radio Corporation of America would acquire the radio manufacturing activities and facilities of the General Electric and Westinghouse Electric companies, and official Washington sat up and took notice. Senator Dill of Washington, who has long been interested in radio legislation, called the attention of the senate to the proposed combination, terming it "a new trust monopoly." At the same time the Department of Justice announced that it was "fully advised regarding the proposed affiliation," was "investigating it fully" and was "considerably concerned about it."

Meanwhile, David Sarnoff, the president of the Radio corporation, issued a statement in New York giving the details of the proposed consolidation. He said the authorized common Radio stock would be increased from 7,500,000 shares to 15,000,000 shares, with 6,580,375.1 issued to General Electric and Westinghouse in return for royalties, manufacturing rights and tangible assets.

An increase in the B preferred Radio stock from 813,365 to 1,500,000 shares also is planned, he said, with a part of the increased stock being given over to Westinghouse and General Electric.

FOR three days Washington was swarming with editors, for the annual meeting of the American Society of Newspaper Editors was taking place and members were there from all parts of the country. President Walter M. Harrison of the Oklahoma City Times called the first session to order and Norman Baxter, president of the National Press club, made an address of welcome. The meeting closed Saturday night with a banquet at which President Hoover, H. Wickham Steed, formerly of the London Times, and Andre Gerard (Pertinax), political editor of the Echo de Paris, were the speakers. As is customary in such cases, the remarks of the President were not made public.

REFUSING requests of both sides for modifications, the Supreme court of the United States announced terms of its final decree in the Insko levels case, following substantially the recommendations of Charles E. Hughes as special master.

The Chicago sanitary district, under the terms of the decree, must complete its $175,000,000 sewage treatment program within nine years.

Diversion of water from Lake Michigan at Chicago, which now averages 7,250 cubic feet per second under a War department permit, must be cut to an ultimate annual average of 1,500 cubic feet per second on December 31, 1938. The diversion must be reduced to 8,500 feet next July 1, and to 5,000 feet on December 31, 1940.

Rulers' Futile Effort to Put Ban on Corset

The corset, writes Looker-On in the London Daily Chronicle, which threatens to resume its old whole-bone rigidity with the return of longer skirts and tighter waists, must rank among the articles of dress which, however often denounced, seem invulnerable against attack. Louis XVI of France, though he suppressed the high headdresses of court ladies by a word, could not win obedience to a decree against the corset, and when Charles X, proving once more that the Bourbons are unteachable, condemned it to extinction, it was noted that the ladies merely clasped it about them more tightly than ever. A more subtle move was that of Emperor Joseph II of Austria, who sought to discredit the corset by ordering that women of bad character or convicted of serious crimes should be made to wear them. But even that did not discourage the others!

His "One Big Moment" Recalled by Doughboy

I journeyed to Kansas City, Mo., June 5, 1918, parked in a hotel, ordered a room, then went out and did some shopping on the main drag, salvaging an alarm clock, a pair of pajamas and a sergeant's whistle. Then to my room, tipped the bellhop two francs, gave him the whistle, instructed him to come to my room at 3 a. m., open the door and blow the whistle and to yell, "Outside!"

Now this is where my big moment came in. I threw one of my hobnail shoes at that bellhop and sent him running down the hall. The other shoe I threw at the alarm clock, smashing it, then turned over, covered my head, and slept to my heart's content. Now, that was my big moment.—St. Louis Post Dispatch.

Only Looked Like Cash
A fourteen-year-old Belfast (Maine) boy rummaging in an attic of a century-old house had the surprise and disappointment of his young life. Although he found a barrel of money in $1, $5, $5 and $10 bills, they were presumed to be worthless, says the Boston Globe. The bills are said to run into the thousands and are on the Frankfort bank, state of Maine, signed by B. Shaw, president, and B. Johnson, cashier, dated 1834 and 1837. The history of Maine gives no such bank in its list of Maine banks and it is believed that the script is a relic of a private bank.

Would you like to try this doctor's laxative free of charge?

Every family has occasional need of a laxative, but it should be a family laxative. One that can't form a habit, but can be taken as often as needed. When breath is bad or tongue coated. Or appetite fails. Only a doctor knows the right ingredients. Dr. Caldwell discovered the correct combination years ago. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin combines harmless herbs and pure senna. It starts muscular action and soon corrects constipation. Gently, but surely, it relieves a bilious or sluggish condition. It is mild. Delicious. Effective. All druggists keep this famous prescription ready, in big bottles. Or write Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, Monticello, Ill., for a free trial bottle postpaid.

The Lunenburg Fleet

The famous Lunenburg fleet, as the fine clipper schooners that fish out of the Nova Scotia port are collectively known, now numbers 71. An old Lunenburg custom which endured for years was to give a vessel a name containing the letter "a" three times. Some of the examples in the present fleet are found in the Antauga, Delawanna, Pallatanna and Partana. Today, however, the custom has waned to a considerable extent, most of the Lunenburg vessels being named for the wives and daughters of the port's captains.—New York Times Magazine.

TRIPLE TESTED

CONOCO Gasoline is actually tested dozens of times in the process of refining—but it is called Triple Tested Gasoline because of all of these tests converged into three main tests—for starting—acceleration—power!

These are the things that motorists want—and are entitled to get—from the gasoline they use. A gasoline may be ever so powerful—but if it is not volatile enough to start the motor quickly and give rapid acceleration in traffic—it will not satisfy today's demands. An easy starting, swift acceleration, are mere snares if they are not backed up with power for every need—economical power!

CONOCO Gasoline meets all three of these important practical tests—that's the reason so many people insist on Triple Tested—
