

LOCAL MENTION

Mrs. M. L. Blaney
will leave tomorrow for Las Vegas where she will attend the State Normal for the summer term.

Mr. and Mrs. Robt. Poage came up on No. 12 Monday for a visit with Mr. and Mrs. O. S. Stearns and family and the J. E. Hall family at Ancho.

Mrs. Mabel Hunt
of Alamogordo, who was one of our teachers in the Carrizozo schools for two terms, passed through here Monday evening on No. 12, enroute to Oneonta, New York, to visit her mother. She expects to be absent about one month. Mrs. Hunt is the mother of Mrs. C. E. Agnew, who is the proprietress of "Rose Acres," Alamogordo's dream garden for flower-lovers.

During the past two weeks, many inquiries have come to this office concerning "Rose Acres," after reading her ad in this paper. The gardens are so close to Carrizozo that a phone call or wire message will bring any kind of a bouquet of the most beautiful flowers one might want on the next train and at the most reasonable prices.

Carrizozo people may leave orders at Rolland's Drug Store; they will receive prompt attention.

Postmistress

Mrs. Elizabeth Gumm will leave today or tomorrow for San Diego, Calif., where she will spend a month in rest and recuperation, aiming to be back at her post of duty by July 1.

Following the precedent of previous years, the people of Ancho met at the local cemetery on Decoration Day, and put each and every grave in order, cutting and removing them. The men in the party, ably aided by Mr. W. J. Kenyon of Howard Kenyon Dredging Co., and his "boys," who are temporary residents, nearly completed a shelter house for which Mr. Kenyon kindly pledged the donation of a heating stove. The women workers set up a beautiful dinner at the school house for all.

Fine Race Horse Stock at Jenkins' Stables

J. H. Jenkins, whose ranch is near Corona, has always had fine race horse stock, but just now, he has some which is out of the ordinary for fine breeding. He has a horse named "Tipp," which he purchased in New York which is a first cousin to "Gallant Knight," the horse which came out in second place, and a second cousin to the winner of the Kentucky Derby this year.

"Tipp" is also a second cousin to "Man O'War," on that horse's mother's side and also a second cousin on "Man O'War's" father's side. He also has some of the finest ones and two's of baby colts in the state, and is anxious to match them with any colts in the state of corresponding ages. Mr. Jenkins is an ardent race horse lover and is always on the lookout for stock of the best breeding. When in Mr. Jenkins' neighborhood, call and see his stock and barns—He will be glad to show you around.

Bodies of Ruidoso Poison Victims to be Removed

Ruidoso, N. M., June 2—Preparations were being made today to remove the bodies of Dr. C. R. Farmer, Roswell veterinarian and his two small children, Betty, 7 and Billy, 4, to a Roswell mortuary. The trio, with the father clutching his two kiddies to his breast, was found in heavy timber about 100 yards from their camp, victims of poison administered by the father, a coroner's jury found.

The Farmers came here Friday from Roswell with friends for a week-end outing. That he contemplated giving his children poison and killing himself is borne out by the fact that he brought a vial of poison with him from his Roswell laboratory. Mrs. Farmer, his second wife and stepmother of the children, nearly prostrate from grief, was unable to give any reason for his acts.

The Fine Bride

Murder, Most Foul

Tuesday evening about the hour of 7 o'clock, one of the most cowardly and atrocious murders committed in these parts for many years, was brought to light, when the two small sons of Constantino Garde, a sheepman on the old Pennington ranch north of here, came in with the body of their father and said that he had been murdered by a neighbor by the name of Gilbert, who lived on an adjoining portion of the Pennington ranch.

According to information gathered by the officers and Justices of the Peace Harvey, Garde had been missing sheep and lambs and had not only accused Gilbert of taking them, but swore out a search warrant on Gilbert which the sheriff served and it is claimed, found evidence sufficient to warrant his arrest, but could not find their man and came home with the intention of returning, during which time, according to the sworn statement of the two sons, Gilbert, accompanied by another man, whom they did not know, came to the Garde home and Gilbert alighting from his car, shot Garde to death, when he was in the act of making some repairs on his car. Justices Harvey conducted an inquest at the Kelley morgue, at which, the above facts were made evident under oath.

Gilbert came to town Tuesday night after the killing and gave himself up. At the preliminary, Gilbert waived examination and his bail was fixed at $10,000, which, up to the present time, he has not furnished and is still in jail.

Fatal Accident

Last Friday afternoon about 4 o'clock, as Mr. and Mrs. T. E. Welch of the Patos Mountain ranch were preparing to come to Carrizozo to do some trading, Mr. Welch, who had the habit of taking his revolver with him on trips of all kinds, had the gun laying on the dining room table and after putting on his coat, reached for it, when in some mysterious manner, it exploded, the ball entering his stomach, passing through the intestines and coming out at the base of the spine.

He was brought to the Johnson Hospital and an operation performed, which necessitated the stitching up of seven punctures in different parts of the intestines through which the ball passed. From that time on, no hopes were held for his recovery and about 4 o'clock Tuesday afternoon he died. The remains were embalmed by undertaker T. E. Kelley and shipped on No. 12 Wednesday evening, accompanied by his wife, mother, Mrs. Thos. E. Welch, and brother, Kenneth of Emporia, Kansas, who had been here since they received word of the accident. A sister, Mrs. Bell of Los Angeles and Mrs. Welch's brother, C. W. Northrup of El Paso were also here until the end. Another sister, Marion, remained at Emporia.

Thomas Edgar Welch was born in Hartford, Kans., Sept. 21, 1893; received his education at Hartford High School and Kansas Agricultural College. He served overseas during the World War, being wounded in action. Since that time he has been in the cattle business in Kansas and New Mexico. He was a member of the American Legion, Hartford Blue Lodge A. F. & A. M., 98, Lawrence Consistory No. 6 and Abdallah Shrine.

The remains will be laid to rest beside those of his father in Maplewood cemetery, Emporia, Kansas, with the American Legion and Masonic Orders conducting the services.

Come out and see the baseball game at the local grounds next Sunday. Don't stay away just because we lost to the Indians last Sunday, for you must remember that the crack team of Fort Stanton also lost on the same day to Carlsbad with a defeat equally as great. That happens now and then to the best of teams. Don't let that keep you away. The local team has been remodeled somewhat with the addition of a few "old heads" and a close game is expected with Corona. We might beat the boys—if we don't, let's not let them play to an empty grandstand. Let's go, fans!

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

James J. Davis and Pinchot Victors in Pennsylvania Republican Primary.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD
JAMES J. DAVIS, secretary of labor, won the Republican nomination for United States senator from Pennsylvania in the hot fight with Senator Joseph R. Grundy, and his plurality was decisive.

Gifford Pinchot, with his heavy vote in the upstate counties, managed to defeat Francis Rhank Brown for the gubernatorial nomination, his plurality being about 15,000. The returns from the large cities of the state had seemed to give Brown the victory, but this was reversed when the country vote came in, Pinchot winning in 60 of the 67 counties.

William H. Vero with his powerful Philadelphia organization both won and lost, for he was supporting Davis and Brown. Eight years ago Pinchot captured the gubernatorial nomination from Alter, another of Vero's proteges. The nomination of Mr. Davis for senator was said in Washington to be highly satisfactory to President Hoover, and certainly many of the Republican senators were pleased by the defeat of Mr. Grundy.

There were wet candidates for both the nominations, F. H. Bohlen for senator and T. W. Phillips, Jr., for governor; because of help from Philadelphia they cast a large vote. Davis is presumably a dry; Pinchot campaigned as an ardent dry, and Brown urged a referendum on state prohibition enforcement.

There were no contests for statewide offices in the Democratic party. Sogdwick Kistler of Lock Haven becoming the minority party nominee for senator and John H. Hemphill of West Chester for governor.

WARREN E. GREEN of Hazel, "dark horse" candidate, was nominated for governor by South Dakota Republicans at their state convention in Pierre, over four other candidates, including Miss Gladys Pyle, secretary of state.

Miss Pyle led in most of the ballots but was defeated when Brooke Howell of Frederick, her strongest opponent, withdrew. Howell's support then was thrown to Green, who received more than the majority of 55,000, necessary to nomination, on the eleventh ballot.

AFTER many months of work, the tariff bill was submitted to congress for final action, which, it was hoped, would be taken within a week or ten days. The conferees of the senate and house reached complete agreement on the few items remaining after the export debenture and flexible tariff features had been settled. The debenture clause was eliminated as the house demanded. A compromise was adopted on the flexible tariff provision which is closer to the house than the senate plan. Under it the President retains the power to change duties, as in the house bill, but on the basis of differences in costs of production as provided in the present law rather than to equalize competitive conditions as provided by the house bill. The tariff commission will be continued as a bipartisan commission of six members, as provided by the senate bill, instead of a non-partisan commission of seven, as in the house bill.

Leaders of both the Democrats and the radical Republicans have issued statements attacking the tariff bill as it stands.

IN THEIR eagerness to obtain ratification of the London naval treaty the sponsors of that pact in the senate last week looked with some favor on a proposal of Senator Claude A. Swanson of Virginia that there be an exchange of notes by the United States, Great Britain and Japan to close a "loophole" in the treaty which might allow Great Britain 23 big cruisers a year after the United States reached its full treaty strength of 15. The Virginia senator, a member of the foreign relations committee which has been holding hearings on the treaty, said that, unless the "treaty ambiguity" on the point could be cleared up by an exchange of notes, the senate would be justified in adopting a reservation to safeguard the American position.

Several rear admirals, members of the navy general board, told the committee on foreign relations and naval affairs why they objected to the treaty, asserting that it favors Great Britain and Japan at the expense of America. But, as was said a week ago, the critics of the pact in England and Japan are equally sure that it is unfair to their countries. There is little or no doubt that the treaty will be favorably reported to the senate by the foreign relations committee, but whether or not it will be passed on by the senate before the winter session is uncertain.

WITHOUT discussion and without a record vote, the senate confirmed the appointment of Owen J. Roberts of Philadelphia to be associate justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Justice Edward T. Sanford. The judiciary committee had unanimously approved the appointment, and when Senator Joseph T. Robinson, the minority leader, said he had no objection to immediate consideration the question of confirmation was put and carried without a negative vote being heard.

PRESIDENT HOOVER went out to sea aboard the new cruiser Salt Lake City, and off the Virginia Capes reviewed a large portion of the American navy. Fifty-three battleships, cruisers, aircraft carriers, destroyers and submarines took part in the program, which included an aerial attack against capital ships from the flying decks of the aircraft carriers Lexington and Saratoga and the staging of a mimic naval engagement which emphasized this country's shortage in cruisers.

During the eight hours spent aboard the Salt Lake City the President witnessed the launching of planes from catapults, watched a naval plane ditch on to the giant dirigible Los Angeles, and obtained a glimpse of the navy air arm's latest method of attack against surface ships, the diving bomb attack.

CHARGES of stock market speculation, made against Bishop James Cannon, Jr., of the Methodist church, South, by Joseph Daniels and some twenty other laymen, were declared not substantiated by the evidence presented, by the episcopacy committee of the church at its conference in Dallas, Texas, so the bishop was considered exonerated. He told the committee that he had fallen into the hands of "a bunch of sharks," was sorry for what he did and would not do it again.

SCOTT McBRIDE, general superintendent of the Anti-Saloon league, continued as a witness before the senate lobby committee, and was severely hectorated by Senator Blaine of Wisconsin, a wet, during several sessions. McBride, however, frequently held his own in the scrap, and on at least one occasion was loudly cheered by the audience, which enraged Mr. Blaine.

HAVING been revised by the senate commerce committee, the house rivers and harbors bill was reported to the senate, and it was believed it would be enacted into law before the adjournment of congress. As finally agreed upon the bill carries authorizations amounting to upward of $123,000,000 as compared with $110,000,000 as passed by the house. Senator A. H. Vanderberg of Michigan asserted that actual cost of all projects authorized would reach $335,000,000.

The bill includes $7,500,000 for the completion of the controversial Mississippi waterway project, $7,500,000 for beginning the deepening of the upper Mississippi river from six to nine feet, an authorization of $39,000,000 for deepening great lakes channels, and an authorization permitting the government to take over the Erie and Oswego barge canals in New York state. One of the final items added to the measure by the committee was an authorization of $6,000,000 for improvement of the Tennessee river. Senator Vanderberg made unsuccessful efforts to incorporate in the noils waterway section a limitation of 1,500 cubic feet per second upon the diversion of water to be allowed at Chicago.

HANFORD MACNIDER of Iowa, former assistant secretary of war and also a former national commander of the American Legion, was nominated by President Hoover to be minister to Canada, to succeed William Phillips, resigned. Mr. MacNider is forty years old, a banker, and won the D. S. C. when serving overseas with the Second division.

BILLS reported favorably to the house by its judiciary committee provide for the appointment of eleven new federal judges as a step toward relief for congestion in the courts. They would be distributed as follows: New York, Southern district, two; New York, Eastern district, one; California, Southern district, one; Texas, Southern district, one; Missouri, Eastern district, one; Oklahoma, Western district, one; Michigan, Eastern district, one; Louisiana, at large, one, and District of Columbia, Court of Appeals, two.

Previously the committee had reported individual bills for two new judges of the District Supreme court, and one each for West Virginia, Kentucky, and Minnesota.

GERMANY'S big dirigible, the Graf Zeppelin, commanded by Dr. Hugo Eckener and carrying passengers, made a successful and rather uneventful trip from Friedrichshafen to Pernambuco and Rio Janeiro, Brazil, last week. But one stop was made en route, at Seville, Spain. The proposed route of the Zeppelin thereafter will take it back to Pernambuco, to Havana, to Lakehurst, N. J., and thence back to Germany. Owing partly to head winds the speed of the big ship was not unusual, being from 50 to 60 miles an hour.

NATIONALISTS of India made several attempts to raid government salt works, especially those at Dharmsana, and there were violent clashes with the police in which about 600 of the natives were injured. Mrs. Sarojini Naidu, the poetess who succeeded Mahatma Gandhi as leader of the campaign, was arrested, as were many of her lieutenants. The leadership of the volunteers then fell to V. J. Patel, resigned speaker of the legislative assembly. The spokesman of the India office in London said the worst was over and the period of reconstruction would soon begin—which may be optimistic.

OPERATION of the Young plan for reparations and of the Bank of International Settlements at Basel, Switzerland, went into effect officially, the opening being marked by the burning of billions in German war bonds of the Dawes plan in Paris. At the same time the evacuation of the third zone of occupation in the Rhineland was begun by the French, with the assurance that the final zone, including Mayence and the Palatinate, would be freed within a few weeks.

IF THE now completed poll taken by the Literary Digest is a true indication of the nation's sentiment, the population of the country is 40 per cent wet, 29 per cent moist and 31 per cent dry.

A total of 4,900,464 votes were cast in the poll. Of these 1,943,052, or 40.43 per cent of the total, favored outright repeal of the Eighteenth amendment and all that goes with it. Another 1,300,314 cast their ballots for modification of the Volstead law. This was 29.17 of the total. The rest, or 1,657,098, 30.40 per cent, urged strict enforcement of the existing measure.

ON MOTION of Representative Bertrand H. Snell of New York, the house of representatives authorized a sweeping congressional investigation of Communist activities in the United States. A committee of five probably will hold hearings during the summer in several of the larger cities, and it has the power to subpoena witnesses and documents. The resolution has the full support of the administration leaders and was not seriously opposed.

The Affronted Moujik

Theodore Dreiser, talking at a Greenwich village tea about his Russian visit, said that the Russian government has instituted compulsory baths with a view to arresting the typhus scourge. "Well," he went on, "the Russian peasants need baths; there can be no difference of opinion on that point. "I was talking one day to a white-whiskered old moujik. "How old are you? I asked him. "Sixty-six," said the moujik. "Did you ever have a bath?" said I. "The old fellow drew himself up. He was affronted. "Flague take-you, sir," he said. "I have had three baths in my time."

"The doctor's face fell, and it turned out that the young man only had indigestion, after all."

Traces of Ancient Race

Prof. Leo Frobenius believes he has traced a race of sailor pioneers who sailed outriggers from southern Arabia to South Africa at least 4,000 years ago. He announced his theory after studying hundreds of photographs of ruins he discovered recently at Hampt, fifty miles from Charwar. He said the Hampt ruins bore close resemblance to the great Zimbabwe ruins in southern Rhodesia, and were from 4,000 to 6,000 years old. Details of architecture were identical, he said. Frobenius declared he was convinced the Zimbabwe were a seafaring race originating from the Sumerian civilization.

FAMILY DOCTOR LEARNED THIS ABOUT CONSTIPATION

Dr. Caldwell loved people. His years of practice convinced him many were ruining their health by careless selection of laxatives. He determined to write a harmless prescription which would get at the cause of constipation, and correct it. Today, the prescription he wrote in 1855 is the world's most popular laxative! He prescribed a mixture of herbs and other pure ingredients now known as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. In thousands of cases where bad breath, coated tongue, gas, headaches, biliousness and lack of appetite or energy showed the bowels of men, women and children were sluggish. It proved successful in even the most obstinate cases; old folks liked it for it never gripes; children liked its pleasant taste. All drug stores today have Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin in bottles.

Towanda, Pa.—"I was working in a milk mill and got so tired and rundown that I weighed only 89 pounds. I was not well enough to do my work. As soon as I began to take Lydia E. "No str-e-e," Sam went on, too busy with his own ideas, I suppose, to notice my actions, which must have been peculiar...

CHAPTER XVI

The Puzzle

I stayed in my room for half an hour, thinking with all my might that I was thinking. At the end of that time, discovering that I had not turned out one single rational thought...

he thinks that I am. Thinks I don't know—he could get a good horse, the first night—"

"If John thinks you're a fool," I said, "he's paying you too much respect. I can't think of anything much worse, or more dangerous than a fool, but whatever it is, you are it. It turns me all over to look at you. Give me that gun."

I reached out and took it. His fingers didn't stick to it very long. I judged that he was not quite as eager to shoot John on sight as he had been pretending to be.

"Now get yourself away from here," I said. "Get on downstairs, if you know the way, and eat your dinner. I'll look after John."

"If you help that boy to escape—" "Escape your fool!" I slipped into John's room, shut the door in Sam's face, and pushed the new bolt into its slot.

John was lying face down on the bed. I went and sat on the bed beside him and put an arm around his shoulders.

"Mary?" he questioned. "Yes. There, there now, John dear. Try to brace up—"

"You don't know!" "Yes, I do know, dear. I know just what you know."

"My God," he groaned. "It is certain, then? I still had a little hope. I—I can't keep on with life, not after this. When I think of these last weeks— I—I'm filthy, I tell you."

"John, dear," I tried to comfort. "You didn't know—you couldn't. You aren't to blame. You are young—"

I know that I had no comfort for agony such as his, but I could not bear to leave him; so I stayed, hoping, as I suppose foolish women have always hoped, that just plain, quiet loving him might help a little.

After a minute or two, he said, "Mary—if you don't mind, I—I've got to fight this out alone."

I went to my own room and lay on the bed. I was mortal tired from sorrow, and the hurt in my heart for John was sharp as a neuralgia pain, but my mind went working right along, independent of my feelings; straight on, like a phonograph, if somebody had started it, might keep right on grinding out a tune while the ship that it was on was sinking.

When Miss MacDonald came up, bringing me some dinner, which I couldn't touch, I said to her: "It seems true, but I know that it can't be. It is too impossible. I mean—too far fetched."

"Not a bit of it," she said. "The only impossible thing about it is the length of time I have taken us to discover it. Of course—forgive me, Mrs. Magin, I was almost on the trail once, I had at least started in the right direction, and then you threw me completely off."

"If I how?" "I'll how?" She smiled at me. "By seeing something which you did not see. But you are not in the least to blame for that. The fault is all mine."

She went and shut my transom. She looked through my clothes closet. She looked under my bed, saying, as she did so, "The proverbial practice of old maids, you know." She came and sat close beside me, "Now then . . ."

"Listen. Bit by bit it works into the whole, like a picture puzzle—each segment slipping right into place. There is just one hole in it all, and I think your Danny's kindness and unselfishness will supply that necessary bit."

She began then—to use her own way of saying it—to put together the pieces of the puzzle. She was right. Bit by bit it fitted together. Almost at once she came to the place that she had called a hole.

"There is no hole there," I told her. "Under those circumstances, Danny would have been just sweet, and unselfish, and foolish enough to have done that very thing. She did it. That was why she was worried and unhappy, all that day."

"I'm sure of it. Now then . . ." She went on: Danny's calling after Gabby that day—easy to understand now, of course, and leading straight to Gabby's suicide and confessional note, Gabby's fear; Martha's murder; Sam's ashes on the bag; Gabby's note to Danny; each one fitting right into place, until spread in front of me was one of the most hideous pictures that any human being has ever been forced to look at. In all my experience I have never investigated another murder case where the thing was so cruelly, vitally premeditated; so wickedly, cunningly carried out. If this is true, it will be, also, the first time that I have found a really brilliant mind belonging to a dead."

"If it is true!" I echoed. "But it is proven. You have just proven it all to me."

She shook her head. "We have a seemingly perfect fabric-made up, wholly, of circumstantial evidence. As yet, we have nothing else. Now I have a question to ask you. It will seem to you that I should have asked you this at least a week ago. I did not, because I was certain that, unless I shared all of my suspicions with you, your answer would be exactly the answer that you gave me before. Now, thinking as you think, I want a very careful answer to this question."

When she had asked it, I refused my first impulse to answer it, at once, and sat thinking carefully for several minutes. The answer that I was forced to give, then, made me sick with shame.

"No," I said. "I didn't. I thought, honestly, that I did. But now I know that I didn't. That—that," I knew I was chattering it, "puts Cannizzano's murder right at my door—"

"Nonsense," she folded one of my trembling hands into her steady, capable hands. "We can't go poking about like that, into the machinery of fate, and stay sane. The blame in this case is entirely for me. But, if I had not allowed myself to be misled then, but had worked straight on, something equally tragic might have happened. We don't know. What we do know is, that no more time must be wasted."

"I have spent this past week in trying to obtain the necessary proof. I and not by the blink of an eye, not by the ghost of a shiver, must I betray my horrible knowledge.

When I finally did get myself downstairs, I found Sam, seemingly alone in the living room, playing solitaire. I judged, from the look he gave me, and from the way he had his shoulders hunched, that he was still in a right ugly humor.

"Where's everybody?" I asked. "Out committing murders, somewhere, likely. Do you know how much I trust that MacDonald woman?" "No, I don't know. I don't care, either."

"Ah!" Sam barked. "She is head over heels in love with John, that's a part of what is the matter with her."

I said, "I wish I thought so." "Why do you wish that, Mary?" It was Danny's voice. Her white face, with the big, sorrowful eyes, peered around the high back of a chair near the fireplace.

I was too taken aback to answer her. "How long have you been sitting there, eavesdropping, young lady?" Sam asked.

"I didn't mean to eavesdrop," she answered, quietly. "I am sorry. I was reading."

Sam, with his usual helpfulness in embarrassing situations, pushed back his chair and went walking fast out of the room.

"Mary," Danny questioned, "why aren't you my friend any more?" "Lands, child," I said, "if you mean that because I was wishing Miss MacDonald was in love with John, it was only because I've always reckoned that the more women in love with a man the better for him. John loves you. What do you care how many women-love him?"

"John doesn't love me any more." "Nothing like that," I scoffed, and went into the kitchen.

She followed me. I went straight to the stove and picked up the lid lifter, which, as usual, when I'm not there to watch, some one had left sticking up in a stove lid to get red hot. Instead of hanging it on the hook where it belonged, I dropped it with a bowl; and, wrapping my hand in my apron, told her to run and get the linseed oil and limewater, up in the hall bathroom, for me.

I am not saying that I was not to blame. I do say that, if that fool child Zinnia had not jumped around shouting, "Sody! Sody! Wet sody's the best for burns—" and that, if Mrs. Ricker hadn't heard her screeching, and come in, too, and began asking questions, I certainly would not have overlooked the fact that, before she went to minister to my needs, Danny had picked up that lid lifter, from where I had dropped it on the floor, and barehanded, had hung it upon its hook.

She made a quick trip upstairs and down again, with the bandages, and the lotion. She offered, sweet and sympathetic, to do up my hand for me. I had noticed, by that time, that my hand was not smarting much, but I was too excited to account for it reasonably. I asked Mrs. Ricker to attend to the bandages. I had another job for Danny.

"I just came out here," I said, "to make my weekly list to send to Telko for supplies. I can't write with this wadded up hand. Will you make the list for me, Danny? Zinnia, please hand her the pad and pencil from the shelf."

Zinnia brought it. Danny sat down by the table and picked up the pencil. My heart thumped in my throat.

"One crate of Fallon melons," I said. Danny pushed the pad and pencil across the table to Mrs. Ricker. "Perhaps you'd as soon make the list for Mary? I have something to attend to upstairs."

"Go on, now you've started it, Danny," I said. "You write such a neat, pretty hand."

"I presume my writing can read," Mrs. Ricker replied, as she picked up the pencil. "A crate of Fallon melons."

"If it is true!" I echoed. "But it is proven."

have failed. Now, I am going to ask you to help me. Will you?" "I will, and gladly. But you'll have to tell me what you want me to do. I haven't the faintest idea."

She told me. "Lands alive!" I said. "That ought to be easy."

I could see that she was annoyed. "I haven't found it so," she said. "I have made three attempts, as many as I dared make, this week, and have failed. Do you realize that it must come simply, and naturally? You must realize that—"

"See here," I interrupted, "why not do as Sam wants you to do? Why not arrest the criminal now, and force the proof, afterward? This sort of evidence could be gotten then, as well as now, and a lot safer, too, it seems to me."

"Mrs. Magin," she said, "until we have evidence of guilt we have no criminal to arrest. Incredible as it seems, we might still be wrong concerning every bit of this. I once made a horrible mistake. It was on my third case—that is, after I began to work for myself. I don't talk about it. I can't think about it. But I made myself a promise then, a promise that I have never broken, and which I never will break. Except in extreme necessity, proof, positive, and perfect, must come before any accusation or arrest in a case of mine. Twice, as I have said, I have had men arrested because of circumstantial evidence. Each time the evidence was far stronger than anything we have in this case. The first time, the man would have undoubtedly escaped if he had not been put in confinement. The second time was on my third case, which I have mentioned. If you force me to make this the third time—"

"I can't force you to do anything," I reminded her, hoping to cool her down a bit.

"Yes, you can. If you go at this so clumsily that you give the thing away, and so endanger your own life, I shall have to force matters. I must, of course, risk a reputation—I'm not speaking of my own, you understand—in preference to risking a life—again I am not speaking of my own. But, if we are wrong in this, and remember we may be—circumstantial evidence is the trickiest thing in the world—it would be bitterly cruel and wrong. Will you remember that, when you make your first attempt?"

"But—how shall I do it?" "I am going to leave that to you, and to your natural wit. You can do it much more spontaneously if you are not attempting to follow set directions. But do, do be careful. Don't make a mistake."

With that she left me. I am ashamed to say that excitement had made me forget my sorrow. I sat there saying my prayers, planning, and shaking in my shoes, for a good half hour before I could get up enough courage to go downstairs. In all probability, the next hour would bring me face to face with the murderer Sam; did you say?" She wrote it down. I heard Danny running up the back stairs.

I felt flat as rolled dough from my disappointment. In the next minute I had something more than disappointment to bother me.

"I don't see," Zinnia said, "how you made out to burn yourself on that stove, Mrs. Magin. Miss Cannizzano was out here, just a while ago, wanting to make some tea. The fire was dead out. She boiled the water on the electric plate."

I ran to the stove. It was as cold as winter time.

CHAPTER XVII

The End

I suppose it takes more than a minute for one's wits, particularly if they happen to be thick wits, to drain entirely away.

Before mine had completely left me, I had attempted to telephone to Sam, down in the outfit's quarters, and had failed to get a reply to my call. I had told Mrs. Ricker and Zinnia, trying with all my might to hide my fear, to run out and find Sam, or Miss MacDonald, or Hubert Hand, or John—I had forgotten that John was upstairs in his room—and to bring one or all of them to the house as quickly as possible. To this day I don't know why they went, without a question; but they went, running. It was the slam of the screen door behind them, I think, bringing with it as it did the realization of my silliness and the memory of Miss MacDonald's warning, that turned me clear over to terror.

I shall not describe what I did, nor what I thought, during the time that I was alone there, downstairs, before help arrived. The humorously inclined might think such a description amusing. To me there is nothing amusing in the spectacle of an old woman being gripped and wrung by fright. I logged to run from the house; but I felt that I must stay there to explain the situation to the others when they came, if they ever did come, and to do my poor best, since I had made the fatal mistake, to prevent catastrophe. By clock time, it was only thirty-six silent minutes that I had to wait before Miss MacDonald came, alone and unharmed, up the front steps and into the living room.

Still holding Sam's thirty-thirty rifle in my hands—I had known that I could never use it to shoot at any living thing, but I had hoped that it might make me look dangerous—I turned to meet her.

"Don't point that thing at me," she commanded. "Put it down. What are you doing with it? What is the trouble here?"

Before I could answer her, Sam, Mrs. Ricker and Zinnia came clattering through the kitchen.

Mrs. Ricker was wringing her hands and saying over and over, in a voice all broken and mutilated with horror, "I have gone insane, I have gone insane. I have gone insane."

Sam said, "Gabrielle Cannizzano just now waved at us from her window."

Miss MacDonald turned and ran like a wild thing up the stairs. Just as she disappeared from our sight the sound of a pistol's shot cracked through the place.

I followed the others. I ran up the steps. I stumbled down the hall, behind them, and into Gabrielle Cannizzano's room.

I saw Gabrielle Cannizzano, her cheeks painted, her lips reddened, long earrings dangling from her ears, lying on the couch. Over her breast was a widening spot of color, staining the fringes of the soft white silk dressing gown that she was wearing. On the floor was a smoking revolver.

John came. He said, "She told me what she was going to do. I allowed her to do it. I did not want Nevada to have to execute a woman."

Marks Birthplace of Father of Locomotive

At Wylain, on the north bank of the River Tyne, under the auspices of the Institutions of Shipbuilders' and Mechanical Engineers, a tablet commemorates the birthplace of a man who achieved the seemingly impossible, George Stephenson, the father of the steam locomotive engine. Past the front of his cottage, within a few yards of the door, heavily laden and light trains of coal trucks pass today, as did the tiny childron wagons drawn by horses along plateways 150 years ago. The cottage itself is a two-storied house, typical of many of those built years ago by the colliery owners for their employees. It was divided into four rooms, in each of which a different family dwelt. The lower room at the western side of the cottage was the home of the Stephenson family, and it was in this room, which served for sleeping, eating and shelter, that George, the second son of a family of four boys and two girls, was born on June 9, 1781. "Old Bob," George Stephenson's father, was a Scotsman who crossed the border as a gentleman's servant, and then married a local lassie, Mabel Carr, the daughter of a dyer. "Bob" found work as fireman of the pumping engine of the Wylain colliery at 12 shillings (£3) per week.—Edinburgh Scotsman.

Education in America

Compulsory education in the United States occurred first in Massachusetts. As far back as 1642 the selectmen were enjoined to compel parents to teach their children themselves or to procure teaching for them. The following list shows the dates at which the several states enacted compulsory education legislation: Massachusetts, 1852; District of Columbia, 1863; Vermont, 1867; New Hampshire, Michigan, Washington, 1871; Connecticut, New Mexico, 1872; Nevada, 1878; New York, Kansas, California, 1874; Maine, New Jersey, 1875; Wyoming, 1876; Ohio, 1877; Wisconsin, 1879; Rhode Island, Illinois, the Dakotas, Montana, 1883; Minnesota, Nebraska, Idaho, Colorado, Oregon, Utah, 1885-1890; by 1908 almost all states.

Starving the Railroads

The railroads are facing a crisis, says the Manufacturer. Nineteen - twenty - nine was a year of intense industrial activity. Yet the railroads were able to earn a return of but 4.8 per cent, in spite of the fact that, by increasingly economical management, their operating expenses were $1,275,000,000 less than in 1920 and $400,000,000 less than in 1928. It was the first year in railroad history in which total earnings failed to reach a new high mark in a period of great business progress.

Several reasons are responsible for this condition. One of the most important is the revolution now taking place in transportation. In a few years thousands of miles of highways have been built, millions of automobiles have come into use and motor trucks and busses have increased wholesale. As a result, one-third of the passenger business of the railroads has been diverted into other channels, causing a loss of $450,000,000 annually. At the peak of traffic last year the railroads had a surplus of more than 100,000 freight cars.

Added to the above condition is the steadily increasing railroad tax burden and the mania for legislating against the lines. Now the government proposes to build freight waterways, using public funds supplied in part by the railroads, to compete with railroads which must be built and operated with the money of private individuals.

Nineteen-thirty, in contrast to 1929, has been quiet from an industrial standpoint. Consequently, during the first quarter railroad freight business declined about 10% and passenger business about 8.5%. Net operating income was 33% less than last year and yielded the smallest return since 1922.

The railroads cannot be economically supplanted by other kinds of transportation. The fact that they are facing financial starvation should be of vital interest to every American business and individual.

The President Hopes Russia, Italy, Peace Workers Live Longer Cheap at a Billion

President Hoover tells the United States Chamber of Commerce, "While the crash only took place six months ago, I am convinced we have passed the worst, and with continued unity of effort we shall rapidly recover."

That will encourage many. And the banks, reducing interest charges here and abroad, will help. When money is cheap capital looks to new enterprises, which means hiring labor.

Lowering the federal reserve discount rate to 3 per cent in the New York district surprised, all that lack advance information.

In accordance with our custom we followed the British, lowering our rate here when theirs was lowered.

This gratifies England, which feared that a rate lower than ours would cause British gold shipments to this country.

The late W. J. Bryan would be amazed to hear congress discussing tariff protection for silver. He thought silver, at sixteen to one, could stand forever as gold's younger brother.

He did not foresee Chinese wars releasing Chinese silver hoards, or India stopping silver purchases that have stabilized silver mining for many generations.

If it were not for moving pictures, with "silver screens" using tens of millions' worth of silver yearly, more mines would close.

Certainly American screens should use American silver, and the tariff should see to it.

While it lasts, a dictatorship seems the simplest form of government. Everything is peaceful in Russia, where everybody is radical. Russia has a dictator.

Everything is peaceful in Italy, where nobody is allowed to be radical. Italy has a dictator.

In Russia, reversing the theories of Karl Marx, and managed by extremely able men, the people are quiet, obedient.

In Italy, where Karl Marx would not be publicly mentioned, a nation, naturally radical, is told that there has been too much talk about liberty, and people are obedient.

The question is, how long? A Frenchman, falling from the twentieth story, is said to have remarked as he passed the tenth floor: "It's all right as long as it lasts."

How long will it last?

A report published by Mr. Frederick H. Ecker, president of the Metropolitan Life Insurance company, concerning 19,000,000 industrial policyholders in the United States and Canada, shows that workers are living longer than they used to.

Thanks to science and prosperity, the death rate among wage-earners has diminished. Mr. Ecker's statistical bureau shows a new low death rate of 9.4 per 1,000 during March. More adults that live, fewer babies that die, is a good program.

It is said that the new tariff will cost the United States $1,000,000,000 a year. It will, probably, and undoubtedly that tariff contains many jobs, deals and mistakes.

But if the tariff enables only 5,000,000 American workmen to earn $1.00 a day more than they would have earned without the tariff, that would repay the billion with a bonus of 50 per cent, to say nothing of added profit that would encourage business men to build up industry and national prosperity.

Many of our emotions, according to Francis Bacon, make us indifferent to death, anger among others.

Eag Fu Week, sixty-two, and Hag Lay, fifty-one, Chinese, and cowboys, fought with heavy meat cleavers. When the police arrived both had fractured skulls and gashes on heads and bodies, yet the police were compelled to separate them by force. One will die surely, the other probably, and it was all about a blanket.

Cost of travel by air and rail between New York and the Southwest is reduced to less than regular railroad and Pullman car travel.

Flying from New York to Dallas, Texas, or Oklahoma City, you save $2.21 in cash, 18 hours in time. And these cuts are made by the Pennsylvania railroad itself.

Mr. Lambert, our secretary of commerce, called up on the telephone recently by Mr. Henry Thorne, had a pleasant talk.

Mr. Lambert was sitting in Washington. Mr. Henry was traveling at high speed through Canada on the Canadian National Railway system.

Mr. Henry sent his regards to President Hoover and the American cabinet. Heretofore one telephone call were made from that Canadian train as it rilled along.

Jack Barrow establishes a new record in air gliding, remaining up more than fifteen hours in a plane with no engine. The mark isn't official, but the Germans will start in to beat it. Their record is fourteen hours and forty-five minutes.

CHICAGO IS HUB OF WIRED PHOTO SYSTEM

Owing to its central location, Chicago is the hub of the telephoto service maintained in this country by the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, as the transmission of all pictures between the Atlantic and the Pacific Coasts is handled by way of that city. However, the transmission process does not have to be repeated in the Chicago office.

A wire connection is made there and the transmission effected in the same way that a Long Distance telephone call is routed through the city. Incidentally the Chicago office handles the largest receiving business in telephotography of any city on the coast and originates the second largest amount of business, being led only by New York.

Briefly, it provides—

JESUS IN THE SHADOW OF THE CROSS

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 26:1-46.
GOLDEN TEXT—He went a little farther, and fell on his face, and prayed, saying, O, my Father, if it be possible, let this cup pass from me; nevertheless not as I will, but as thou wilt.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus Proves His Love for Us.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus Suffering for Us.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—The Agony in the Garden.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Gethsemane.

I. Plotting the Death of Jesus (vv. 1-5).
Christ with divine insight predicted not only the fact of His death, but its time and manner. The Jewish authorities in secret conclave were plotting to silence His voice by putting Him to death. In spite of themselves they were moving in the line of God's decree.

II. Mary of Bethany Anoints Jesus (vv. 6-13).
1. The meaning of the act (vv. 6, 7). This anointing occurred when Jesus was at meat in Simon's house. Mary was at the keener apprehension of all the disciples. By sitting at His feet in loving fellowship, she obtained a grasp of truth which none of the other disciples had. She saw that His body was to be broken and that His precious life was to go out. She entered into fellowship with His sufferings and the joy of His resurrection.
2. The indignation of the disciples (vv. 8, 9).
The action of the disciples is in strange contrast with Mary's love.
3. Mary defended by Christ (vv. 10-13).

Jesus could not allow His most appreciative disciple to lie under this censure, so He came to her rescue. As a result of Christ's defense, Judas is so stung by rebuke that he hastens away to betray his Lord.
III. Jesus Betrayed (vv. 14-30).
1. The bargain of betrayal (vv. 14-16).
Satan so completely had the mastery over Judas that he sold his Lord for the price of a slave (Ex. 21:32).
2. The betrayal announced (vv. 20-25).
While they were eating the Passover Jesus made this announcement. Who knows but that the reason for the announcement at this time was to give Judas an opportunity to repent? The sorrowful question in verse 22 indicates that the disciples did not seem to suspect one another, but directed personal attention to themselves.

IV. The Disciples Warned (vv. 31-35).
This took place as they walked from the upper room to the garden of Gethsemane. Jesus plainly told them, "All ye shall be offended because of me this night," quoting Zechariah 13:7 as proof. Though He told them of the darkness which was gathering, yet He gave them a glimpse of the coming light. He said, "After I am risen again I will go before you into Galilee."
V. Jesus Praying (vv. 36-46).
1. The place—the Garden of Gethsemane (v. 36).
Gethsemane means oil press. It was a place some three-fourths of a mile east of Jerusalem, where oil was crushed out of the olives.
2. His companions (v. 37).
Peter, James and John. The same disciples who had been with Him on the Mount of Transfiguration are permitted to go with Him into the deep shadow of the Garden. They slept, while He prayed.
3. Jesus sorrowing even unto death (vv. 37, 38).
The cause of His suffering was not primarily physical, but spiritual. The physical is not to be minimized, but the burden of sin—the world's sin—was pressing heavily upon Him. He was being made sin for us (II Cor. 5:21).
4. The prayer itself (v. 39).
"O my Father, if it be possible, let this cup pass from me." What was this cup? It was not prayer to be delivered from the cross. The idea that He desired to escape from the cross and thus stop short of His redemptive work is not to be entertained. Redemption through the sacrifice of Himself was the supreme purpose of His coming into the world. The holiness and perfection of His nature moved Him to shrink from the mountain of sin which was resting upon Him. Though the cup was bitter, He bowed in submission to the Father's will.

An Important Power

Man has one power in particular which is not sufficiently dwelt on. It is the power of making the world happy, or at least of so greatly diminishing the amount of unhappiness in it as to make quite a different world from what it is at present. This power is called kindness.—F. W. Faber.

SCENIC PLAYGROUNDS OF AMERICA

By G. M. KILBOURN

Mountain With a Hippopotamus Mouth

NEW MEXICO, within the last five years, has become the Pied Piper of the nations. Sounding a strange and persistent melody of countless buried treasures for every scenic freebooter on the main, she has drawn from every American state and from many foreign nations a steadily increasing horde who ride hundreds of miles, or even thousands, just to disappear Pied Piper style, for a day, in a gaping, almost bottomless hole in a barren little mountainside. This multitude—jumping from thirteen hundred in 1924 to seventy-seven thousand in 1929—is probably the fastest-growing army of pilgrims that ever stampeded for an American scenic shrine.

Add to that amazing gain the fact that this hippopotamus-mouthed mountainside is far off the beaten tracks of both commerce and travel, remote from any large population center, that ninety per cent of its last year's visitors had to come from some other state, and you will have some idea of the tremendous lure and fascination which has made the Carlsbad cave national monument, southeastern New Mexico, a major national scenic celebrity almost overnight, and which has imparted to most of its visitors not only the convert's assurance but the missionary's zeal. Yellowstone National park of course is the classic western wonderland; but this new rival has drawn more visitors in its sixth season than Yellowstone attracted in its fiftieth!

Although the existence of the cave was long known to ranchers of the locality, it was the interest of Jim White, a cowboy who first visited it in 1901 and who devoted his spare time for years to exploring it, that attracted national attention and led to its designation as a national monument in 1923. Scientific recognition followed in the reports of the late Dr. Willis T. Lee of the U. S. geological survey, which appeared in the National Geographic Magazine in January, 1924, and September, 1925, the latter article summarizing: "Carlsbad caverns, New Mexico, is the most spectacular of underground wonders in America. For spacious chambers, for variety and beauty of the multitudinous natural decorations, and for general scenic quality, it is king of its kind."

The famous big room of the cave is three hundred feet high, six hundred feet wide, and three-fourths of a mile long. But even such a cavern is only a small part of the whole, which is a many-decked, three-dimensional lacework or honeycomb of caverns known to reach back as far as twenty-one miles. Visitors make a seven-mile loop, entering daily at 10:30 a. m. the year round, and spending from five to six hours in the cave. Guide service costs $2 per adult, with children free. (All visitors pay $3 each for the twenty-eight-mile bus trip from the town of Carlsbad, while autoists drive to the cave entrance. Round-trip rail fare on the Santa Fe branch line to Carlsbad from Clovis, N. M., on the Helen cut-off branch of the main line, is $6.62.

No less amazing than the size and variety of the cavern is its dramatic quality. A visit is a one-day trip to Mars or some other distant world; its sights are sculptured poems of Miltonic sweep and ecstasy. And in that huge gateway where daylight meets grayest dreamland, you know exactly how Columbus must have felt.

A War One

Vice Commander John E. Curtiss of the American Legion told a war story at a banquet in Lincoln.
"Bullets and hand grenades weren't the only things," he said, "that passed between the trenches in those days. Wit passed between, too. It was passable. For instance:
"A German shouted in good English one morning from a front line trench: 'Hey, anybody from Chi over there?'
"I'm from Chi,' a young Chicagoan shouted back.
"Good old Chi!' roared the German, 'Give her my love. I used to live there. I got four wives and seventeen children in Chi!'
"Then the Chicagoan came back as quick as a flash with:
"Well, stick yer head up, Heinie, and I'll turn em into four widders and seventeen orphans."

BASEBALL PLAYERS ARE ENTERTAINERS

So Says Art Shires of the Chicago White Sox.

"What is this, a kid?" asked Art, "the Great" Shires, White Sox first baseman, when informed that a baseball fan in Chicago had brought court action to have all base ball players pronounced insane.

"There's a lot of fellows like to kid us. They come out to the ball park and get a great kick out of kidding us. A lot of them don't know what base ball is all about; they just come out to pan us."

"I don't care. I don't mind how much they kid me or razz me. I figure we're out there to furnish entertainment for them. We're actors, after all. If they like to kid us, I'm willing. I'll kid them right back."

"A lot of people just come out to be entertained, and we're supposed to furnish the entertainment for them. I'll bet out of 10,000 fans who come out to the games, there's 600 who don't know what it's all about."

The board of directors of the Arlington Park Jockey club has set $1,500 as the minimum purse for its meeting at Arlington Park June 30, August 2.

Otto H. Lehmann, president of the club, also announced that on days of steeplechasing there will be eight races instead of seven.

It's surprising the way that fellow Danny Boone continues to play good baseball and there ought to be a law against it. Years ago he was a member of a championship St. Paul team and recognized then as one of the most able infielders in the league.

Here he is holding down third base for Columbus, a batter dangerous with runners on base, and a fielder who, despite his aged legs, holds up his end rather well.

Danny always has been a fighter, somewhat impatient of the other's mistakes and making very few himself. There's no telling how long he may last.

Much of the credit for the surprising success of the young University of Illinois ball team this spring belongs to Capt. Jimmie Lymperopoulos of Argo, whose hustling work in the field has made the whole team hustle. Jimmie, who plans to go in for professional baseball, has a great arm and is one of the best fielding third basemen in conference history. Last year he committed his first error in two years of conference competition, and has fielded 1,000 per cent this year.

It is no secret that Manager John McGraw is a close follower of the horses at certain seasons of the year, and is not averse to laying down a few dollars to back his judgment. The following is told by a newspaper man who is a close friend of the little Napoleon:

McGraw, taking a tip, placed a few dollars on a good-looking thoroughbred. The finish was unusually close, and as the horses neared the home stretch it was evident that the race would be decided in those last paces. John McGraw became very excited, and as the horses neared the finish line, he shouted to his nag, "Slide!"

After more than 60 years in billiards Maurice Daly of New York is still active in the game. This veteran billiard-room owner and player, now in his eighties, is acting as billiard instructor at the University club in New York. He has the same keen interest in the game that he had when he first picked up a cue in Civil war days.

Sale of Hugh McMullen, catcher, to Baltimore of the International league, was announced recently by the Minneapolis American association club.

Sport Notes

Sam Leslie of the Giants will spend the summer with the Toledo club.

In 10 shows at Madison Square Garden only four New York boxers appeared in the main go.

In 1923, George Kelly, New York Giant first baseman, in one game was credited with 19 putouts.

Ken Rouse, former star of the Chicago football team, wrestles to keep in shape since graduating.

Jim Ten Eyck, crew coach at Syracuse, is eighty years of age. He has been at the university 27 years.

Last year the White Sox lost 85 games by one run. This year Donle Bush's club is winning one-run games.

If the new golf ball had a diameter of four inches, we figure that our present drive would fetch it about in the middle.

The Boston Red Sox unconditionally released William Bayne, pitcher, to the Chattanooga club of the Southern league.

An interesting process in the sport pages is the one by which the Indian outfielder, Mr. Johnson, is gradually becoming "Ole."

A golfer in India turned up a precious ruby with a nibblek. While he had heard of diamonds in the rough, rubies are unusual.

Within a space of three weeks, Burch Grimes, baseball pitcher, had to pay an income tax, was divorced, and traded to the Boston Braves.

Jockey Laverne Fator has piloted almost 1,000 horses to prizes totaling well above $2,000,000, but has never led the winning list of jockeys for a season.

Frank Nighbor of the Toronto Hockey club has starred as a member of five teams which won the Stanley cup. He started playing more than 20 years ago.

Jack Sharkey has earned more than $750,000 in five years of professional boxing. He received $150 for his contest against Billy Muldoon, whom he knocked out in one round.

Best Over Hurdles

Marian Fitting of the Pasadena Athletic club clearing the hurdles during practice. She will compete for a place on the American team of girl stars, which will go to Prague, Czech, for the international meet this year. United States national championships will be held in July.

little sons Morgan and Frank, Jr. and niece, Miss Annabel Earle were in from the Maxwell ranch Tuesday, doing some shopping and returning home in the afternoon. The lambing at the ranch has been good this year, the yield being past the 90% mark.

Some Hits; Some Runs; Plenty Errors!
Credit must be given our local baseball team for performing the same kind of game as played by the major leagues, although so far away from fans who appreciate a lively ball game. The Mesquero Indians surely must have been on the warpath, as they not only played clean ball, but scalped us 17 to 2.

As Seen From the Sidelines
The boys can produce the goods, if only they would be a little more collective and not get excited so easily. There were times when a little action would have counted, and also times when a little deliberation would have resulted in putouts; in other words, too fast in the wrong time and too slow in the right time. We are not offering this as a word of criticism, but to the contrary, this, we hope, might be of benefit to boys aspiring to play the game. We are still with you, boys, and wish you better luck next Sunday. Corona will come here next Sunday for a game, and we understand that Manager Ryan has altered his line-up considerably to trim Corona. Come out one and all and give our boys a hand.

Painful Accident
Last Sunday morning, at Capitan, the 8-year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Jaime Torres, picked up a fuse while playing out in the yard, and the curiosity of the child led him to strike a match to the same, which exploded, blowing off four fingers of his left hand and burning his face severely. He was hurried here to Dr. Johnson's hospital where up to this writing the little fellow was resting easy, but it was feared he would lose the sight of one eye.

Georgia and Nadine Leaset came in Monday from Wichita, Kansas, and will spend the vacation period with their father, Frank Leaset of Ziegler Bros. Store and grandmother, Mrs. A. E. Leaset. During their stay, they will visit their aunts, Mrs. George Dingwall and Allie Johnson of El Paso, who, like the folks here, always see that the girls have a good time while they remain in this section of the Sunshiné State.

SAVINGS PASSBOOKS SOUGHT BY CROOKS

Use Them to Steal Money by Forged Slips — Should Be Guarded as Carefully as Cash.

Continual vigilance in safeguarding savings pass books, as well as blank and cancelled checks, against theft by crooks, who use this material in forgery operations, is urged on bank customers by James E. Baum, Deputy Manager of the American Bankers Association, in charge of its Protective Department. This department is continually vigilant in promoting means, both among bankers and the general public, to thwart the operation of bank crooks. It annually investigates hundreds of crimes against banks and is responsible for the majority of arrests among this class of criminals.

"In a large majority of cases of forgeries on checks or savings withdrawal orders investigated by the American Bankers Association; stolen blank checks or savings pass books were the forgers' chief stock in trade," Mr. Baum says. "In many instances the temptation presented through the careless handling by depositors of cancelled or blank checks or pass books so that they fell into the hands of others was the immediate stimulus for hitherto honest people to commit their first criminal offense."

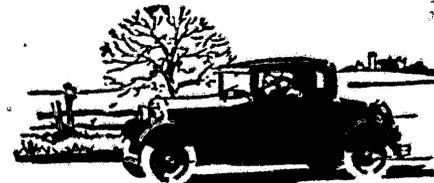

Banks should educate their depositors to exert the same degree of care in handling these instruments and to avoid leaving them about unguarded as they exercise in respect to actual money because they represent money, he declares.

For dealing with the bank robbery situation, Mr. Baum recommends the use of electrical alarms actuated by any tampering with the wires or mechanism and also wider adoption of the plan of state police forces now employed in a few states, declaring that last year in seven eastern states where state police forces were maintained there were only 36 bank holdups as against 144 similar attacks perpetrated against banks in five states in the central and far west, where banks are denied the advantages of the speedy and coordinated action given by state-wide police forces.

"The records of the American Bankers Association Protective Department reveal that for many years the odds in favor of state police protection have been at least 3 to 1 when measured by the experience of banks in states where efficient police protection is lacking in the rural districts," he says.
