Chevrolet Achievement

Chicago, June 23—An outstanding achievement of the current motoring season was recorded here recently with the arrival of J. M. Griffith from Mexico City, in 138 hours of running time, in a 1922 Chevrolet touring car with five passengers. Although nearing 64, Mr. Griffith drove every inch of the distance without assistance.

After stopping over here two weeks, he proceeded to Detroit, where he inspected several automobile plants and the General Motors proving ground. He then became impatient to be off on a trek home to resume his occupation as a mechanical engineer.

Leaving Mexico City April 30, the party covered the 929 miles to the border, crossed at Laredo and proceeded to Chicago and Detroit with no mishaps other than one stop-over for tire repairs and one at San Antonio for carbon removal and replacement of three exhaust valves in the eight-year-old car. The log of the trip as reported by Griffith, provides statistics of interest to those contemplating lengthy trips this summer.

FORT STANTON NEWS

The championship of Lincoln County for baseball was settled very conclusively on last Sunday afternoon when the undefeated team of Corona invaded our premises all set for a clean up. As it so happened, evidently the Corona team had underestimated the Stanton boys' ability to play ball, for the game proved to be the same as a cat playing with a mouse, as the Stanton boys were in perfect control of the situation at all times. The final score was 35 to 4, and could have been 50 or 60 just as easy, but the boys got tired and hungry and had to get out to go to supper. We trust that the backers of Corona were still able to count a little change in their wallets, after the game.

Word was received last week that the 7th Cavalry Band from Fort Bliss would be on hand July 4th. The big band was a big feature in last year's celebration and everyone expressed a desire to have them again. They will play in front of the hospital in the morning and will go from there directly to the picnic grounds where they will play from 10 to 12 a. m. The committee are finding some good bucking horses in the surrounding country and a number of good riders have announced their intentions to be on hand to ride them. The Trowel Club reports that the fireworks are on the way and that the display will be bigger and better than ever. Plans for the big picnic dinner at noon are going ahead and there will be plenty to eat for everybody. Fort Stanton will have one of the fastest ball teams they have had in years on the field on July 4th. The 82nd plays a great game, so come and see some real action on a ball field on July 4, 5 and 6.

After the honeymoon, Dr. and Mrs. King will be at home to their friends at 8301 Hueco, El Paso, Texas.

Sheer Frocks and Sheer Hats

By JULIA BOTTOMLEY

It is the fashion for over so sheer frocks to company with hats as sheer as their own sheerness. Thus the summer mode is presenting a picture with an illusive and intangible beauty about it—a sort of will-o'-the-wisp effect which is most beguiling.

Many of the new hats are that transparent one is impelled to look a second time to see whether a brim is really a brim or merely a halo of something or other lovely framing the face to a point of enchantment.

Competition is keen between just such flattering openwork straw hats as the one topping the pretty chignon flock in the picture, and the huge transparent half capelinas which are so entrancing, both because of their colors and their picturesque "lines."

The charming lace straw here shown is yellow au naturel, tuning in as it does with the yellow and brown which combines in the chignon print of the frock.

Brown is a color featured throughout the summer mode. The fashion-minded are wearing hats brown in tone—hair or malines transparencies with dressy frocks or brown linenlike straws with informal and sports costumes. Accent is also placed on white kid shoes which are trimmed with brown.

Speaking of the sheerness of things for fabrics especially, sheer is the word. One of the outcomes of this flair for thin, transparent weaves is the revival of dotted swiss. Of the quaint swisses now in vogue, the most flattering compliment that can be paid them is to declare that they are as pretty as ever, and prettier. Organdie also is staging a successful "come-back"; likewise the all-together lovely balliste makes its reappearance in exquisite embroidered effects; cotton nets, too, and chiffons, of course. Frocks made very simply of monotone pastel chiffon is the latest "love" of the ingenue. The beuffled dresses (no trimming whatever except their ruffle ruffles) are flitting about in the summer picture wherever youth dines and dances and attends garden parties.

HELPS FOR HOUSEWIVES

When it is inconvenient to press silk dresses on the wrong side, tissue paper may be used between the garment and the iron.

Parents will be well repaid if they make meals pleasant social occasions which help knit the family together, instead of opportunities for family quarrels.

For long wear wash silk stockings in lukewarm soapsuds and rinsing water. Squeeze to remove soil; do not rub, wring, or apply soap directly to the fabric.

Cutting to Fit Wide Shoulders

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Very often in large-sized patterns and ready-made garments the width of the shoulders has been increased in the same proportion as the bust measure. Because the shoulders are a bony structure and the bust is a tissue structure, the shoulders do not necessarily increase in proportion to the bust. Therefore the garment is apt to be too long on the shoulder and the armscye not in its proper position. This long shoulder tends to give a broad effect to the figure. It is particularly unfortunate when a person has already rather broad shoulders. In cut a dress so that it adds to their apparent width, and makes the wear of the garment look short and squat.

To correct the trouble, says the bureau of home economics of the United States Department of Agriculture, in the bulletin on "Fitting Dresses and Blouses," fold a small lengthwise dart in the front and back of the pattern, through the center of the shoulder, taking out the necessary amount. This allows plenty of fullness in the bust and gets rid of it on the shoulder. Be sure to keep the back shoulder from the neck to the armscye one-half inch longer than the front shoulder. Rip the shoulder seam and recut the armscye from the altered pattern. This preserves the original size of the armscye and is safer than trimming it out. If fullness is desired, make tucks or shirring in the front shoulder to take up the extra width.

To alter a ready-made garment, make a small lengthwise dart or a group of tucks in the front shoulder, and trim out the armscye in the back.

Asparagus Gives Good Flavor to Spaghetti

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Many people seem to know only two ways of serving spaghetti—with cheese or with tomato sauce. The bureau of home economics of the United States Department of Agriculture suggests the following mixture of spaghetti and asparagus. A relatively small amount of asparagus will give an excellent flavor, so this is a good dish for the asparagus season.

- 1 1/2 cups spaghetti broken in small pieces
- 1 pint canned or cooked asparagus and liquid
- 2 lbs. flour
- 2 lbs. melted butter or other fat
- 1 cup rich milk
- 3 or 4 drops tabasco sauce
- 1/2 tsp. salt
- 1/2 cup buttered bread crumbs

Cook the spaghetti in salted boiling water for 20 minutes, and drain. Drain the liquid from the asparagus and cut the stalks in short pieces. Prepare a sauce of the flour, fat, milk, and asparagus water and add the tabasco and salt. In a greased baking dish put a layer of the cooked spaghetti, then one of asparagus, cover with the sauce and continue until all the ingredients are used. Cover the top with the buttered bread crumbs. Bake in a moderate oven for about twenty minutes, or until the crumbs are golden brown.

Other Times Before marriage a man holds an umbrella over his girl to keep her hat from getting wet. Afterward to keep her hat from spoiling.

Attractive Servings From Leg of Roast Lamb

Many people always have a leg of lamb boned for roasting. They say it is surprising how many attractive servings can be made from either a hot or cold boned leg that can be sliced evenly from end to end. Any butcher can bone a leg of lamb for you, or you do it yourself. The United States Department of Agriculture tells how it is done:

In boning, first take out the irregular atch or pelvic bone at the large end. Cut into the meat on the thinnest or "riffle" side and lay back a flap of meat deep enough to expose the leg bone and permit its removal. You will have a pocket here for stuffing or the leg may be sewed together and roasted without stuffing as desired. A good sharp knife is needed for boning.

Anybody can carve a roast prepared in this way and serve it much more quickly than the ordinary leg roast. For sliced cold cuts, the meat is much more shapely than when the leg is carved with the bones in.

Hints About Things Good to Eat

By NELLIE MAXWELL

"Are your shoulders bowed by trouble? Do your worries seem to double? Shift the burden. Of the cares that you are bearing—Responsibilities you're sharing—Not a one is worth the sharing. Shift the burden."

Desserts, cakes and cookies which may be made, put into the ice chest and baked the next day or a few baked during a period of several days will give the family fresh, delightful food at a small cost of time.

Ice Box Cookies.—Roll two and two-thirds cups of sugar, one-third cup of maple sirup and one-half cup of butter; cool, add one beaten egg, two teaspoons of vanilla, four cups of pastry flour, four teaspoons of baking powder sifted several times with the flour to blend it, one teaspoon of salt, one cup of chopped nuts. Mix and make into rolls, lay on a cloth and place in the ice box. Cut and bake as many as are needed for the day. Remove them at once when baked or they will sink to the pan.

Devil's Food Cake.—This is another reliable recipe that will always turn out well: Melt six ounces of bitter chocolate, one cup of brown sugar, one-half cup of milk; melt in the top of a double boiler, adding the sugar and milk; cool. Sift two cups of pastry flour, one teaspoonful of soda three times. Cream one-half cup of butter or any sweet fat, add one cup of brown sugar and beat until light and fluffy. Now add two eggs, unbeaten, one at a time—beat well, then add the melted chocolate mixture and beat well. Add the flour and three-fourths of a cup of milk alternately, a small amount at a time, beating well. Add one teaspoonful of vanilla and bake in layers. This makes three nine-inch layers. Bake thirty minutes. An orange filling for this cake is especially well liked.

Custards are the common summer dessert; one may vary them with different flavors and garnishes. As they are one of the easiest of desserts to digest, they make especially good ones for the little people and the aged.

Cheese Custard.—Take one cup of cottage cheese, mix with beaten egg yolks, two-thirds of a cup of sugar, one-fourth teaspoonful of salt, two-thirds of a cup of sweet milk, one tablespoonful of melted butter, and one teaspoonful of vanilla. Cool slightly and cover with a meringue, using the whites of the eggs and two tablespoonsful of sugar. Bake the custard until firm in the center, placed in a pan of hot water.

When preparing a fish loaf or salad use sections of lemon pulp instead of pickles when called for in the recipe. This will also answer for any acid needed to make the mixture palatable.

Asparagus With Mock Hollandaise.—Take one tablespoonful of butter and two of flour, mix well, add three-fourths of a cup of milk, one-half teaspoonful of salt, pepper to taste, a dash of cayenne, the yolks of two eggs—added after the flour and milk mixture is well cooked. Now add one-fourth of a cup of butter bit by bit, stirring well; then add one tablespoonful of lemon juice. Garnish with pimiento. Serve with fresh-cooked asparagus.

We Need Food Rich in Vitamin C

Various Fruits and Vegetables That Supply Vitamin C.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Nutrition specialists urge constantly that the diet for all ages, but especially for children, should include an abundance of foods rich in vitamins. There are now recognized, however, at least six independent vitamins. As each has its own function to perform in growth and bodily well-being, it is necessary to know what each one does and what foods supply it. Otherwise a diet might supply some, but not all of the different vitamins.

For instance attention is often called to the necessity for vitamin C in the diet. Especially good sources of this vitamin are the citrus fruits, (oranges, grapefruit, and lemons), raw cabbage and turnips and tomatoes, raw, cooked, or canned. Other foods mentioned by the bureau of home economics of the United States Department of Agriculture as supplying this vitamin are apples, bananas, young carrots, cauliflower, garbanzo, onions, peas, pineapples, potatoes, raspberries, spinach, sprouted legumes and string beans.

One reason for insistence on supplying plenty of these foods is that the body has only a limited capacity to store vitamin C. Replacement must go on continuously. Another reason is that this vitamin is very easily destroyed by heat and oxidation. If vegetables are cooked too long they lose their vitamin content. All summer

Instructions on vegetable cookery stress quick-cooked methods. Canning often destroys vitamin C. In the case of acid foods like tomatoes, destruction is not so extensive. Tomatoes seem to retain most of their vitamin content either cooked or canned.

On diets deficient but not entirely without vitamin C, children become irritable and lacking in stamina, do not grow normally, and are less resistant to infectious diseases. Shortage of vitamin C is thought to be an important factor in the prevalence of tooth decay and of much of the so-called rheumatism in children and adults. When vitamin C is entirely lacking, scurvy develops. This used to happen so long sea voyages before present knowledge of the preventive value of lemons and other portable foods containing vitamin C.

In feeding foods for vitamin C in the laboratory, guinea pigs are fed a basal diet complete except for this vitamin, and then given measured amounts of the food in question. If the animal thrives and grows well, the food is probably a good source of vitamin C; if the animal develops symptoms of scurvy—sore, stiff joints, a tendency to hemorrhage, sore gums, loosening of the teeth, and fragile bones—the food under test probably is deficient in vitamin C. Similar symptoms are found in human beings when they have lacked the foods that

Story for the Children at Bedtime

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

As they went along in the plane Harry saw a winding procession of stars between the Great and Little Bear constellations.

Harry was having such a wonderful trip with Cosmo up in the sky.

Cosmo knew all about the sky, and he had granted the wish Harry had made one evening, only a very little while before, when he had said that he wished he could see what it was like up in the sky.

He had longed to visit the stars and to know which one was which, and what they were like when you got closer to them.

Oh, it was wonderful having this trip.

The more he traveled with Cosmo the better he enjoyed himself. He was seeing so much, he was hearing so many legends, he was listening to many fascinating old stories about the creatures he was meeting, and how they were regarded in former times.

He was wondering now about this winding procession of stars at which he was looking.

"That's called the Dragon," Cosmo announced.

Harry looked at the Dragon with great interest. "By the way, Cosmo," he asked after a moment, "how large is Polaris? I meant to ask him."

"Oh, about the size of your eye," Cosmo said.

The pilot had evidently been expected to travel around the Big Dipper, which was part of the Great Bear. The Dragon had said Harry had said.

"The Indians," Cosmo told him, "and the shepherds of the ancient days, too, called the constellation the Great Bear. Did you ever notice her circus act?"

"Circus act? I don't think so. I never saw any circuses act up in the sky."

"Well, you look and you'll see. The Great Bear makes a circle around the Changed a Beautiful Girl into a Bear Pole every twenty-four hours and in the spring she puts her paws in the air and gets upon her back.

"I should say so," Harry agreed. "But that's not all. In the summer she stands, as it were, on her nose. You couldn't do that, could you?"

"No, and I've never seen any circus performer able to do it, and they do wonderful tricks."

"That's still not all that she can do. In the winter she balances on her tail. If you draw an outline of a bear around the stars of the Great Bear you will see that she has a very long tail."

"But bears haven't long tails," Harry remarked.

"That's true, but after all she has always felt that there was little use in being a bear in the sky if she couldn't be different from Earth animals."

"I suppose that's so."

"Then there is the story of how the Great Bear got up in the sky."

"Tell me that, won't you?"

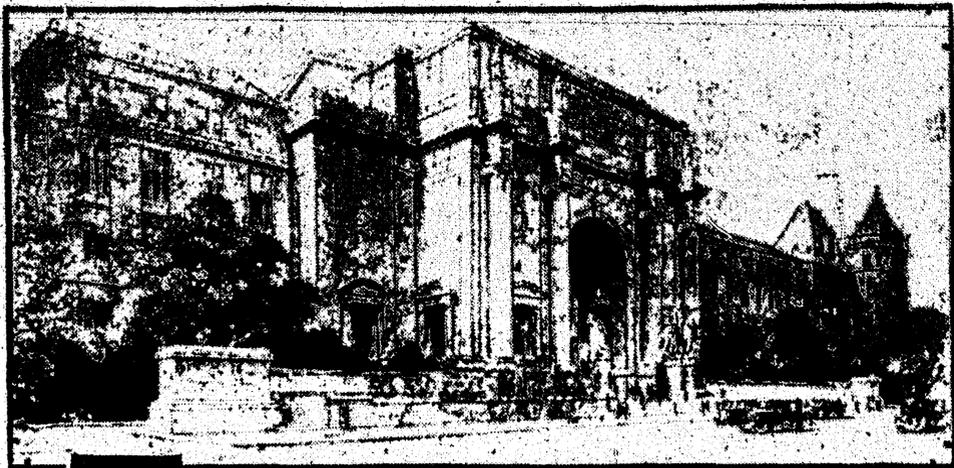

"Indeed I'd like to tell that story. In the old days they said that Jupiter changed a beautiful young girl into a bear. He didn't want Juno, his wife, (who didn't like her) to do her any harm."

"Then he was afraid hunters might shoot the bear if he didn't put her out of harm's way—so he put her up in the sky."

"The Little Bear is supposed to be a near relative of the Great Bear."

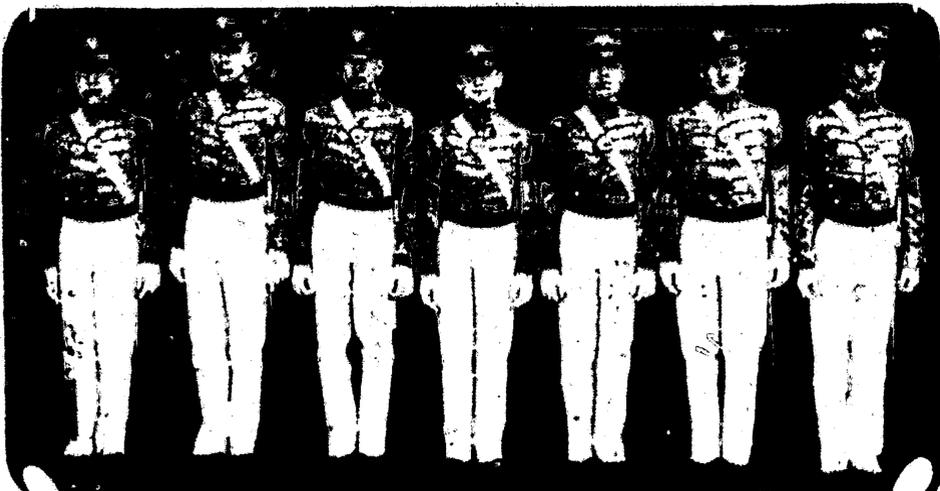

"But now Helen is supposing you. We want not longer any more."

RULE MAKES VETS ROOKIES AGAIN

President of Southern Circuit Makes Odd Order.

A flock of grizzled old guys with graying hair are in the same class with the Southern association's tender youths, John D. Martin, president of the loop, has ruled.

In other words, the old warhorses signed as free agents are classified as rookies under the league's Class B ruling which requires that each club carry five players who haven't had a season's experience in Class A baseball.

Martin's interpretation made "rookies" of such veterans as Lee Meadows, former Pittsburgh pitching ace, now with Atlanta; Milton Stock, formerly with St. Louis and other National league clubs, another Cracker; Jimmy Johnston, ex-Brooklyn infielder, on the Atlanta payroll, and Ivy Wingo, one time Cincinnati backstop, who also graces the Atlanta lineup.

Other "rookies" are Wild Matthews, one time spark plug for Philadelphia and Washington; Frank Walker, Atlanta outfielder who once sold himself from the Sally league to the New York Giants; Frank Brazill, Memphis first sacker, and Jim Poole, Nashville first baseman, who has been in about every class of baseball played.

The model of a new stall starting gate has been shown at Belmont Park. It appears to be an improvement over others of the kind in that it is less cumbersome and can be put in place after the horses arrive at the starting point and can be swung off quickly. It is called the swing quick gate.

The stalls fold up when not in use and are heavily padded. The mechanism is simple and said to be fool-proof. The stalls are mounted on a carriage which swings on a quadrant.

It is planned to build a full sized gate to test the practical operation.

Probably the only truly international links in the world are those of the golf club at Basel.

The club is Swiss, but it is located in France. And the most curious feature is that it is a little customs-free spot, surrounded by customs guards who allow the club members to come and go without examination. Instead of passports, the members merely show their club cards. Some are so well known their faces are their passports.

The club was formed in 1920. The American Consul, Calvin M. Hitch, was the only American. Now there are several of his countrymen among the 175.

The associated students of the University of California have voted $1,500 for further research into possible prevention and cure of "athletic foot."

Gene Sarazen, former open and professional golf champion of the United States, will try again for the British open golf championship. The long-hitting pro, who finished third in the United States open last year, two strokes out of a tie for first place, was runner-up to Walter Hagen in the 1925 British open, completing 72 holes of play with a score of 234 to 232 for the champion.

For some time Sarazen has wavered in a decision to try for the British open.

Ebbets field, home of the Brooklyn National league team, will be enlarged to seat 55,000 fans. The work will start in the fall and the field will be named B'oklyn stadium. The stands will be double-decked.

The world's baseball scoring record was equaled at Fort Wayne when the Fort Wayne Chiefs and the Springfield team of the Central league together piled up a combined total of 50 runs in a wildly sensational ball game which resulted in Springfield winning by a score of 53 to 18.

The combined score equals the world's record made July 21, 1925, by Springfield and Peoria in the Three-I league. Fourteen home runs were made in the game.

For the convenience of office boys in the towns that take up night baseball, we assume that grandmother is now buried in the evening.

The following story was told by a census taker recently assigned to count noses in Indianapolis:
An elderly and somewhat befuddled woman appeared at the door in response to his knock one morning.
"Good day, madam. I've called to get your census," he politely explained.
After a moment's hesitation she said: "Why, mister, I ain't got no census."—Indianapolis News.

Letter Long Undelivered
A letter that had laid crumbling in a mail chute for 42 years was recently recovered in a structure in St. Paul, Minn., which was about to be vacated. The Northern States Envelope company had occupied the premises for a half century, but were compelled to leave on account of the building having been condemned in order to widen the street. As the last of the effects were being taken out the letter was discovered. It had been mailed in February, 1888.

Beware of Forest Fires!

Beware of forest fires! You may be the very bird to cause one. Not that you would intentionally be the cause, but you might forget to put out your fire in your hurry to pack and get away to another camping place. Campers, as a rule, go into the forests fully mindful of the importance of heeding the warnings from the forest service and such newspapers as may be interested enough and can find the time from idle sport, to sound the warning.

Admitting this, yet they cannot be too careful. A little spark left uncovered, a little lack of forethought about scattering water or damp soil over the embers after you are ready to leave the spot, might cause a fire that would result in the destruction of valuable timber, besides creating an enormous cost to have it put out.

Forest Supervisor O. Fred Arthur was here last week and in conversation with this gentleman, he claimed and proved that a large percentage of the forest fires were caused by negligence on the part of well-meaning campers, who made some mistakes, or rather oversights, as indicated above. Mr. Arthur makes it his business to warn people at this particular time of the year to be careful to avoid causing the very things which they might regret—forest fires.

The watchful business man warns his employees to be careful each night before business closes, to see that nothing is overlooked that might cause fire should we not be as like-minded about our forests? The mountains are full of campers, right now and all we can do, is repeat the warning—Beware of forest fires.

TELEPHONE BUILDINGS

By RICHARD STORRS COE FORTUNATE indeed is the traveler who catches his first glimpse of New York from the deck of an incoming ship. As the vessel steams through the Narrows and across the Upper Bay to her North River pier, the New York skyline is unfolded in a changing panorama unique in its groupings of mass and form. The tall buildings that cluster about the lower end of Manhattan Island stand out sharply with pinnacles, pyramids and colonnaded summits outlined against the sky. Here and there a wispy of light gray smoke or steam floats lazily from the top of one of these man-made cliffs. A few low buildings accentuate the height of the skyscrapers. It is a biased traveler who will stay below while his ship is passing the Battery. As she slowly wends her way up the Hudson, escorted by puffing tugs, the vessel leaves behind the lowering range of the downtown office buildings. The city spreads out in a wide plateau of lesser structures over which loom here and there isolated buildings or groups of buildings of heroic proportions. One of the most impressive of these, seen from the river, is the massive pile which a French commentator has described as possessing "a certain barbaric majesty,"—the New York Telephone Building. Alone, dominating the low buildings on the adjoining blocks, it rises by gargantuan steps and terraces and set-backs, drawing the eye irresistibly upward to its massive summit. Deep shadows lurk in recesses half a dozen stories in height, but the sun and the wind from the river have full play on the myriad windows that glitter in the vast bulk surfaces of the structure. It is no mere brick box, like so many of the earlier skyscrapers. It expresses something. It has personality—this telephone building.

Like that other building far away on the banks of the Hudson, this too, stands alone, a giant in comparison with those about it. High it towers above the section south of Market Street, this new Telephone Building, headquarters of the Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Company. And, gazing at it, the traveler cannot but feel that this building, too, stands for more than stone and steel and mortar,—that it represents not unworthily a certain spirit and a certain aspiration. Utily Combined With Beauty These two buildings, separated by a Continent, are representative of the best in modern telephone architecture, but they are not unique. Almost midway between them—at St. Louis—there stands another great castellated pile which houses and typifies the headquarters of the Southwestern Bell Telephone Company. Denver, too, has such a building. So has Cleveland. So has Newark. So has Montreal. In style as well as in size, buildings such as these represent a significant development in the growth of American cities. They are evidence of the fact that the utmost in utility, comfort and convenience can be economically achieved in modern business buildings which are at the same time so beautiful as to be objects of legitimate civic pride to the communities in which they stand. In no field of American endeavor, probably, has there been more marked progress toward the attainment of beauty in recent years than in architecture. Discriminating use of choice woods, face brick, atocco, limestone and other materials gives individuality and distinction to homes and business buildings of the better sort. Progressive architects today seek a style that will harmonize with its surroundings and be appropriate to the climate and perhaps to the historical background of the locality. Developing, modifying, adapting to new conditions the architectural styles of the Old World, our architects are gradually working toward the creation of a distinctively American school, which today finds expression particularly in what has been called the "American perpendicular" style employed in some of our modern skyscrapers. A Distinctively American Architecture briefly described in non-technical language as placing emphasis on perpendicular lines which lead the eye upward unchecked by horizontal interruptions, save where, at intervals, succeeding tiers of stories are set back, leaving terraces which lend to the finished structure somewhat the effect of a gigantic stepped pyramid, surmounted perhaps by a lofty central tower. This type of construction, besides being immensely impressive, has very practical value in admitting an abundance of light and air not only to the building itself but to the street below. New York and other municipalities, anxious to avoid having additional business streets transformed into dim canyons with the perpendicular walls of closely set skyscrapers rising continuously from the building line, have adopted zoning regulations which require the upper stories of high buildings to be set back at levels varying with the width of the street on which they front. With the impetus thus given to the use of this new type of architecture, imaginative artists are already portraying the city of the future as a vast expanse of pyramidal buildings rising step by step to the limits of economical construction. Among the most notable examples of this new architectural style are the group of headquarters buildings completed during the last few years by the telephone companies at New York, Newark, Cleveland, St. Louis and San Francisco. Illustration, the famous French weekly, published an article some time ago on the evolution of the skyscraper in the development of American cities. Out of five representative American skyscrapers shown in full page illustrations in this French publication, three were telephone buildings—those at St. Louis, New York and San Francisco. The other two were the Chicago Tribune Building and the Woolworth Building.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Carol's Romantic Coup Wins for Him the Throne of Rumania.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD
CAROL CARAIMAN, once crown prince of Rumania, then an exile from his country, is now King Carol II after one of the most romantic and spectacular coup d'etat of modern times. Everything being arranged by his friends, he flew to Bucharest in an airplane and was immediately welcomed by the parliament, which voted to give him the crown and to make the little king, Michael, Carol's son, the heir-apparent.
Practically the entire population of Rumania seemed to be glad to have Carol back, though the Liberal party voted his return was a "dangerous adventure" and refused to accept the new order of things. Carol signed a law legalizing all acts of the regency in the name of King Michael and also approved a general amnesty act; but he then proceeded to punish certain prominent politicians who spoke against him after his return. He told correspondents he would work constitutionally through parliament and that he had no idea of establishing a dictatorship. At latest reports he was having some difficulty in forming a government, since the National Peasants' party decided not to participate and therefore Julia Maniu could not accept his former position of premier.
Carol's future family concerns were somewhat doubtful. His mother, Queen Dowager Marie, hastened to Bucharest from Oberammergau to welcome him, and there were confident predictions that he would be reconciled to Princess Helen, his former wife, their divorce having been his annulled. Magda Lupescu, the red-haired woman for love of whom Carol four years ago gave up his wife and claim to the throne, has returned to Rumania, but declared her associations with Carol were ended.

CHICAGO has been agitated by a tremendous anti-crime spasm by the cold blooded murder of Alfred J. Lingie, veteran police reporter of the Chicago Tribune. Rewards totaling $35,100 have been offered for information leading to the conviction of the slayer; the city authorities have been subjected to the severest criticism for not suppressing the gangsters, and the police department is apparently devoting most of its attention to rounding up the known criminals or frightening them out of the city.
Lingie was a remarkably well posted crime investigator and was intimately acquainted with the affairs of both the underworld and the police. Presumably because he knew too much, he was shot down in broad daylight by one of two men, who made their escape in the crowds on Michigan avenue. The press of Chicago and of the entire country looked on the murder as a bold challenge of the gangsters to the press and there was a universal demand for the arrest and punishment of the slayer.
HALF a hundred lives were lost by fire and drowning when the steamer Fairfax of the Merchants' and Miners' line rammed and sank the tanker Pithia, laden with 500,000 gallons of high-test gasoline, in Massachusetts bay off Scituate, in the midst of a dense fog. Two minutes after the collision the tanker exploded and flames swept over the liner. The sea around the two vessels was immediately covered with blazing oil and many panic-stricken passengers and members of the crew who jumped overboard were burned to death. The tanker speedily went to the bottom and her entire crew was lost. About eighteen persons on the Fairfax died in the accident and others were so badly burned that recovery was doubtful.
Federal authorities started an investigation of the disaster in Boston and had for consideration serious charges including the allegation that the Fairfax was harboring at least top speed despite the fog, and that the liner's officers failed to give an adequate idea of the extent of the accident in early radio messages. Capt. S. J. Brooks of the Fairfax asserted, according to a federal steamboat inspector, that D. C. McNell, vice president of the Merchants' and Miners' line, instructed him to send the message to the company's offices in code instead of broadcasting an S O S call.

CONGRESS has finally disposed of the tariff bill after months of hearings, debates and discussions. The measure passed the senate by a mighty slim majority. Senators Reed and Grundy having decided to vote for it despite their belief that it was unfair to eastern industrial interests. The bill's passage through the house was of course much easier.

BISHOP CANNON of the Methodist Church, South, and of various dry organizations, probably will not be punished for contempt of the senate committee on lobbying, but his conduct has been reported formally to the senate. He appeared again voluntarily last week and repeated his refusal to answer questions relating to his political activities in the 1925 campaign. He already had explained that he did not intend to express contempt by walking out of the hearing without being excused. The committee in private conference decided it would be fruitless to attempt to punish the bishop for an alleged contempt committed before less than a quorum of the committee or to seek additional authority from the senate to pursue the inquiry and perhaps force Cannon to testify.

DISCUSSION of the naval treaty was complicated by the President's refusal to let the senate foreign relations committee have all the documents concerning the pact and the London conference on the ground that this would be incompatible with the public interest. Senator Johnson of California was especially insistent that the committee should have these papers since the senate has equal power with the President in the making of treaties. After much talk Senator Reed of Pennsylvania, one of the delegates to the conference, offered to turn over the secret correspondence on the treaty to Johnson on condition that the documents should not be made public. The Californian rejected this offer, and the committee adopted a resolution setting forth the contention that it is entitled to examine all documents relating to the London treaty. Chairman Borah said the dispute would have little effect on the outcome of the treaty debate.

THOUGH the house appropriations committee reported favorably the second deficiency bill carrying an initial appropriation of $10,000,000 for the Boulder dam project, the action was taken only after changes in power contracts had been made which would give greater protection to the government.

MEMBERS of the committee obtained admissions from Secretary of the Interior Ray Lyman Wilbur and other witnesses that while the contracts with the city of Los Angeles and the metropolitan water district required the government to furnish specified amounts of water and power, there was no specific requirements on the part of the municipalities to buy a minimum amount of water or power. Amendments were made in the contracts to meet these objections.

PRESIDENT HOOVER nominated W. Cameron Forbes of Boston to be ambassador to Japan, and reappointed Chairman Taggart and C. C. Teague members of the federal farm board.

REGULAR Republicans of Wisconsin held their state convention in Oshkosh and reelected Gov. Walter J. Kohler for re-election. The delegates adopted a platform embodying what is called the "new progressivism," the aim of which is to provide a common meeting place for both the middle and the real between reactionaries and radicals. It reiterates the position of the Wisconsin legislature seeking compact to authorize a nation-wide referendum on prohibition.

NOBLES of the Mystic Shrine in great numbers gathered in Toronto, Ont., for their annual convention, staged a wonderful electric parade that was almost wrecked by the immense throng of eager spectators, and enjoyed themselves generally in a city where they were not hampered by prohibition laws. Thursday they dedicated a peace memorial, the principal speaker being Senator Joseph T. Robinson of Arkansas. The imperial council elected Esten A. Fletcher of Rochester, N. Y., imperial potentate and selected Cleveland, Ohio, as the scene of next year's convention.

PRESIDENT HOOVER awarded the Charles R. Walgreen prize of $500 for the winning essay in the second annual Gorgas memorial essay contest to Pauline Lodge of Lakewood, Ohio, a high school senior. She captured the prize in a field of 5,000 high school students all over the country. In addition to the five $100 bills handed her by the President, she received $250 for travel expenses to the National Capital.

JULIO PRESTES, president-elect of Brazil, returning Mr. Hoover's visit to Brazil last year, was the guest of the President and the government in Washington last week. Secretary of State Stimson and other high officials met Doctor Prestes at the railway station and he was escorted by marines, cavalry and artillery to a private residence placed at his disposal by the government. The chief feature of his visit was a state banquet Thursday evening.

WHAT may prove to be one of the greatest discoveries of medical science is announced by Dr. J. A. Pfeiffer of Baltimore. He says he has isolated the microscopic organism that is the cause of the common cold which is estimated to cause the American worker a loss in wages alone of two billions a year. With this micrococci a vaccine has been worked out that has proved successful in a long period of tests and that Doctor Pfeiffer and his associates say will immunize people against catching colds for one to three years.

THE first volume of the long-awaited report of the Simon commission on India was published simultaneously in London and India. The first paragraphs declare that Great Britain stands by its promise to grant India self-government within the empire at the earliest moment compatible with the safety and prosperity of the country.

In England the report was most favorably received, but the Nationalists of India and the native press there berated it as an insult to their country. The princes of the Indian states of course indorsed it for they are the warm supporters of the British rule.

SOUTH FLORIDA'S oldest financial institution, the Bank of Bay Biscayne, and three of its subsidiaries in the Miami district failed to open their doors last Thursday. Notices posted on the doors said the action was taken for protection of depositors and because of recent substantial withdrawals. Heavy withdrawals were reported by other Miami banks, but the fears of depositors were allayed by the arrival of $3,000,000 sent by airplane from the Federal Reserve bank at Atlanta. The Bank of Bay Biscayne listed total resources of $17,182,292 and deposits of $15,067,105 as of March 27, 1930, in its last quarterly report.

The Ohio state banking department closed the Cosmopolitan Bank and Trust company of Cincinnati and its seven branches because its $67,577 capital was impaired by the unsuccessful stock market gambling of A. W. Slaughter, discharged district manager of the Henry L. Doherty company, New York, one of the largest depositors. After an initial survey, state bankers said Slaughter was short $200,000 in his accounts with the bank.

Johnson swallowed a concentrated roast beef and potato tablet. "Not like the old days," he said. "Eating is an incident nowadays. It used to be a ritual. I can still hear the musical gurgle of the malted milk mixer and the song of the carbonated water as it fizzed into the glass. ### Locomotive Obeys Orders

The scientific world was startled a short time ago by the invention of a toy dog which issued from its kennel and returned at the word of command. The actions of the canine automaton were controlled by the length of the sounds buried at it; which influenced the passage of the electrical current to make the little animal hop in or out, following the desire of the operator. This same principle has been applied to the operation of a toy locomotive called "Casey Jones," after the hero of song and story by that name. "Go ahead, Casey," starts the engine on its way. The command, "Stop," issued in a sharp, quick manner, brings the engine to a stop at once. These orders are transmitted through the medium of a telephone transmitter.

The Mazaroff Mystery

THE STORY

Mervyn Holt is engaged by a man calling himself Mazaroff as a traveling companion. After a short tour they put up at the Woodcock Inn on Marrasdale moor. They meet, casually, Mrs. Elphinstone and Sheila Merchlison.

"Holt, ladde," he said, with a confidential nod, "you'll understand me, I'm sure—I want to have this day to myself, looking round old spots, you know, alone. And also, there's a man I want to see on a bit of business. So—you'll amuse yourself till evening, when I'll be back in good time for dinner?"

"Of course!" I agreed. "I'll be all right. Don't bother about me." He thanked me, almost as if I had been the first person to consider. Presently, carrying a stout stick, he went out—and I noticed that just before leaving our sitting room he put on a pair of blue spectacles, with some remark about the glare of the sun. He went off in the direction of the village, and I saw no more of him until he turned up again just as dinner was ready at seven o'clock. He was very quiet and thoughtful during dinner, and it was not until he was half way through his after-dinner cigar that he suddenly motioned me to draw my chair close alongside his own.

"Holt," he said, "I've something to tell you. And, man!—it's the strangest tale you ever heard in your life!" I suppose I gave him a wondering, and perhaps a half-uncertain stare, for he nodded reassuringly as he drew his chair still closer to mine.

"Nothing to be frightened about, Holt, my lad," he said. "Just a—coll, as you might put it. But—a bad one! And, as I said just now—as strange a tale as ever you heard. Anyway, one of 'em."

"Yes?" I said. "About—yourself?" "Self and other folk," he replied, with a grim smile. "Other folk—aye, there's the devil of it! If it were only myself, now!—but there's more than one affected."

He turned to the window and for a moment or two sat staring fixedly and in silence across the moor, stretching away in the rapidly gathering twilight. Curiosity got the better of me, and I broke in on his thoughts.

"I'm all in the dark, Mr. Mazaroff," I said. "Am I to listen?" He started—then gave an emphatic nod.

"Aye!" he answered. "You're to listen, Holt, for I've nobody else to tell it to, and I'm wanting counsel on it, and you're a sensible youngster. It's just this—you saw the two ladies that passed this way yesterday afternoon when we were talking to the landlord at his garden gate?"

I nodded an affirmative. "Aye, well!" he continued. "They don't know it, and nobody knows it, only me. But it's just this, Holt, my lad—that's my wife and daughter!"

I was smoking one of Mr. Mazaroff's prime cigars at the moment, and when he said this I started so violently that it jumped from between my teeth and fell to the floor. It seemed to me that a whole age—an eon, if you like—elapsed in the mere act of stooping and recovering it. And I wondered at the calmness and banality of my reply when I sat upright again, looking at him.

"Muzgrave," I said, quite steadily, "Muzgrave called the elder lady Mrs. Elphinstone, and the younger Miss Merchlison—Miss Sheila Merchlison?"

"Muzgrave here, Muzgrave there!" he retorted. "He knows no better and no more. But I'm telling you that that's my wife, ladde, and the lassie's my daughter, and unless I see some way out of the complications there's the devil and all to pay!"

There was a pause between us then. He sat twiddling his big thumbs, and, as he had discarded the blue spectacles a slight cast in his eyes looked, somehow, sinister. I began to sense the mysterious in him, and to realize that his was, to me, an unexplored personality.

"I don't understand," I said at last. "I'm going to make you understand, Holt," he answered. "This is the way of it—you good-looking lassie's name is Merchlison, sure enough. And—Elphinstone though she may call herself, and no doubt think she's a right to call herself—so is her mother's. And—so's mine, Merchlison!"

"Not Mazaroff, then?" I exclaimed. "I've a right to that, too," he said. "Legal right—all correct and proper. It's been my legal name for many years, and I'll remain so. But I was born Merchlison—and not so far from here, too—and I was married Merchlison. And you's Mrs. Merchlison, for all she's married to Elphinstone."

"And I don't understand any more now!" said I.

"Well, Holt," he answered, "I'll make it as plain as I can, and maybe it's not such a tangled web as it seems when you get hold of one end of the thread and pull steadily at it. My father—" youngster, and after that I lived with my grandfather on his farm near Selkirk, across the border yonder. Then he died, when I was just about two-and-twenty, and he left me all he had, a tidy lot of money, and that, put to what my parents had left me, made me a pretty rich man. And I was headstrong and impetuous, and always for having my own way, and there was nobody to keep me from having it, nor from indulging myself in any whims that came into my head. And I came across a high-mettled girl that was pretty much like myself in that respect and we got wed in more than the usual haste, and began to repent as soon as we'd done it!"

"Why?" I asked. "Man!" he answered. "We hadn't a taste in common! We'd nothing in common except obstinacy and self-will! And we found we were the worst pair to pull together that ever was harnesses. I saw in less than a year that things would never do—so I just took matters into my own hands. It wasn't the way I'd take now, with a sober mind and more knowledge of the world. But what I did was this—I went to a lawyer and pledged him to secrecy. Then I realized all that I had—a nice lot!—and divided it into two equal shares, and made one fast to her for life—she'll have had it always; never less, Holt, than fifteen hundred pounds, and all secure for her. I just took my share and cleared out."

"So—you ran away from her?" I suggested. "If you put it that way, I did," he assented candidly. "It was the only thing to do. There'd have been unpleasantness, otherwise. A silent and quiet departure—the only thing for it, in my judgment."

"And—the child?—the girl we saw yesterday afternoon?" I asked, after a pause. "Was she born then?"

"No!" he answered with emphasis. "She wasn't! If she had been, maybe I'd never have gone—indeed, I'm sure now I wouldn't have gone. But she was neither born, nor did I know she was likely to be born. She came eight months after I'd left."

"You heard of it, then?" I suggested. "Never knew of it till today!" he exclaimed.

"Of course, Mrs. Elphinstone—as she's known here—believes you to be dead?" I said. "That goes without saying."

"Oh, to be sure!" he answered. "She married this Elphinstone a few years back; just before he bought this Marrasdale Tower estate. Aye, she believes me dead as Adam—and here I'm alive!"

"What are you going to do?" I asked. "What would you do, yourself, Holt?" he replied, anxiously. "Tell me your plain opinion, man!—I'll not be offended at anything you say."

"I think I should just go away, saying nothing," I said. "For all you left her. And—if you reveal yourself, I'll mean breaking up what's probably a satisfactory settlement. Mr. Elphinstone and the—"

"Oh, by all accounts, they suit each other as well as we suited each other ill!" he broke in. "Aye, this settlement's all right. But—the girl's my daughter."

"She's never known you, Mr. Mazaroff," I remarked.

His bronzed cheeks reddened at that, and he shook his head.

"You're right, Holt, you're right!" he said, almost humbly. "And it's my own fault. Well—up to now, nothing's happened. Nobody knows but yourself."

"After all these years it would be something of a startling revelation," I observed. "It needs some reflection. And—" but then a new idea struck me, and I regarded him doubtfully. "I suppose, if it came to it, you'd have to prove that—"

"That Salim Mazaroff is Andrew Merchlison," he interrupted. "Oh, that can be done. There's the cast in my eye, and a birthmark on my right arm, and there's papers and people—not just at hand, to be sure, but findable—that can substantiate all that."

"How came you to take such an unusual name?" I ventured to ask him.

He laughed softly, as if the reminiscence pleased him.

"I'll tell you," he answered. "When I first went off, it was to India. I knacked about there a good deal, and in the Persian gulf, and in adjacent parts. Then I went farther south—to Durban and thence into the interior—the diamond districts. And in Durban I foregathered with an old man of like tastes to mine—in fact, he and I lived together and traded together. His name was Mazaroff, and he left me all his money—no little—on condition I took it. So I did—why not? At that time I'd no intention of ever coming back to England again. And now—there's the situation!"

"What are you going to do about it?" I asked.

"I don't know," he answered frankly. "Nothing in a hurry. And as I say, nobody knows but you and me. There's no fear of my being recognized. I've talked to a dozen people since I've been in the city, and—"

and in my blue spectacles they hadn't the least idea as to who I really was." He got up then, and went out, to stroll about the front of the inn, alone. That night he said no more on the subject of his revelations, nor did he mention the matter in the morning. We spent most of that day in exploring some ruins twenty miles away; when we returned in the evening there was a good deal of business being done at the inn—men were returning in numbers from a fair. After dinner, Mr. Mazaroff, remarking to me that he wanted to have a good think all by himself, crossed over to the open moor and strolled away across the heather. I never saw him again—alive.

I went out myself soon afterward, and was out until past nine o'clock, when I returned to the inn. He had not come back. Nor had he come at ten—and when eleven struck from the old grandfather clock in the stone-walled hall I sought out Muzgrave and his wife, seated at their supper table after the tolls of an unusually busy evening.

The landlord and landlady were not inclined to any uneasiness or alarm. During our forty-eight hours' stay they had discovered that Mr. Mazaroff was, as they put it, an affable and friendly gentleman, inclined to sociability—their present opinion was that he had dropped in at one of the moorland houses, and was still there, comfortably chatting. But when twelve o'clock sounded, and he was still absent, Muzgrave's face lengthened, and he began to talk about the foolishness of going out in the dusk and dark in strange places. "There's places he could fall over in the dusk, and there's others—bog-land—that he could sink into before he knew where he was, dark or light. Them that doesn't know these moors shouldn't wander about 'em, after dark."

Muzgrave got lanterns for Webster, me and himself; we went out on the moor and dispersed in different directions, listening always for any cry of distress.

We were out in that way until a faint gray light began to show beyond the eastern hills: at that we went back to the inn. None of us had heard or seen anything.

Webster and I got some food and hot coffee, and went out again—he one way, I the other. Mine took me toward the dawn. And suddenly I came face to face with the girl of

Ruins of Ancient City Long Hidden in Jungle

After being hidden for centuries in a tangled-up mass of jungle, the ancient city of Gedi, has come to light only 50 miles from modern Mombasa. Professor Fleure, of the University college of Wales, who has been visiting Kenya colony with the members of the British association, believes that Gedi, known in Kenya as the "buried city," is of Persian origin and at least six hundred years old. The ruins disclose a fine Arabic writing, especially in the mosques and tombs. Professor Fleure thinks that Gedi would well repay investigations by archaeological and ethnological experts. He does not believe these would be difficult in view of the profusion of

CHAPTER II

Youth's Freemasonry

Sheila was sitting by one of the reed-fringed pools that lay amongst the heather and the moss. Unconscious of any presence save that of a solemn-eyed spaniel who sat at her side, she had drawn off her shoes and stockings and was dabbling her feet and ankles in the dark waters.

The spaniel caught sight of me and barked. His mistress looked hastily in my direction, saw me, seemed to realize that she had seen me before, and though she blushed at being caught in a somewhat mystifying situation, accepted it calmly. She gave me a friendly nod—and at the same time began to put on her footgear. I purposely remained in the rear until she jumped to her feet, faced me, and laughed, pointing to the pool.

"There's a superstition about that well," she said, without preface or hesitation. "They say that if you dip your feet in it six times, within an hour of sunrise, any time between Michaelmas and Martinmas, you'll live happy ever after. So—I was trying it."

"I hope it'll come true," I said. "As for myself, I'm not at all happy just now."

A look of concern came into her eyes.

"No?" she responded. "Why?"

"I believe you saw me, yesterday—no, the day before—near the Woodcock, with an elderly gentleman?" I said. "You went by. Well, he's missing—lost! He went out from the inn, last night, after dinner, alone, and he's never returned. You know these parts? Are there places—"

"There are many dangerous places," she interrupted hastily. "Have you searched?"

"Several of us, all night," I answered. "We've seen nothing, heard nothing of him."

"Your father?" she asked, eyeing me half sympathetically.

"No—a friend, with whom I'm traveling," I replied. "I'm awfully anxious about him. It was unusually dark last evening, and I'm afraid he's come to harm—fallen over something or into something." I then told her Mr. Mazaroff's name and my own.

"I wonder if our people—gamekeepers, you know—have heard anything? If you'd walk with me to the house—" She pointed across the moor to where the gables and chimneys of Marrasdale tower showed above the trees.

"We might hear something there," she continued. "We can go there in a few minutes."

We came before long to Marrasdale tower. In the courtyard, talking to a man in velvet, we met Mr. Elphinstone, a tall, thin, gray-haired studious-looking man, who glanced at me wonderingly over the top of an unusually large pair of spectacles. His stepdaughter led me up to him.

"This is Mr. Holt—Mr. Mervyn Holt," she said. "He and a friend of his, Mr. Mazaroff, an elderly gentleman, have motored from London, and are staying a few days at the Woodcock. Last night Mr. Mazaroff went out alone on the moors, and he's never returned. Mr. Holt wants to find him; he's anxious."

Mr. Elphinstone, who looked to me to be one of those men who take in things very leisurely, nodded, and glanced at the man in velvet.

"A gentleman lost on the moor," eh?" he said. "Oh! Parker—go and inquire amongst the men in the stables and in the gardens. Um! Lost all night, eh? Dear me! Er—won't you come in, Mr.—er—"

"My name is Holt, sir," I said, prompting his absent-mindedness.

"Holt, eh?" he answered, with a sudden gleam of interest. "Um! I was at Merton with a man of that name. He and I were great rowing men. He's vicar of some country parish in Buckinghamshire now, I believe—long since we were together."

"I think you are speaking of my father, Mr. Elphinstone," I remarked. "He was at Merton, and he's now vicar of Chellingham, near Aylesbury."

He turned and gave his hand, shaking mine, in evident high delight.

"Bless me!" he exclaimed. "Now just imagine it! This is a great pleasure. Come in—come in!—this is excellent!"

Lesson for June 29

REVIEW: THE GOSPEL OF THE KINGDOM CONTINUED

GOLDEN TEXT—Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Making Jesus Known.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Believing in Jesus. INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—What Shall I do with Jesus? YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Meaning of Christian Discipleship.

The plan of review must always be determined by the teacher in the light of the grade of the school and the aptitudes of the pupils. For senior and adult classes the best method will be to recall that all the lessons of the quarter are from the book of Matthew, which has as its theme Jesus Christ, the Messianic King, and His Kingdom, and to present each lesson in its relation to this central purpose. The lessons have a threefold unity, namely, one book, one theme, one person.

Lesson for April 6. To prepare the disciples for the dark hour of the cross, Jesus sought to lead them to a clear apprehension of His purpose and mission. After Peter's confession of Him as the Messiah, Jesus showed to the disciples that He must come into His place of triumph through the tragedy of the cross.

Lesson for April 13. The greatest in the kingdom are those who possess childlike humility. The condition of entrance into the kingdom is true conversion, or birth from above.

Lesson for April 20. In this lesson we have given instruction as to behavior in case of ill-treatment. Those who are Christianlike shall suffer persecution. Those who have entered the kingdom by birth from above—those who have received forgiveness from God—will forgive their fellows.

Lesson for April 27. Riches are deceitful. Possessors thereof are prone to put their trust in them. It is most difficult for those who are rich to give place to spiritual things.

Lesson for May 4. Those who would be great in the kingdom should, like Christ the King, take the place of self-abasement. In love, Christ gave Himself for others. He substituted "the greatness of love for the love of greatness."

Lesson for May 11. To the nation which rejected Jesus as King and was endeavoring to kill Him, at the appointed time, in the councils of God, He officially presented Himself as King, in fulfillment of prophecy.

Lesson for May 18. Under the figure of a marriage, Jesus set forth the privileges and benefits of the kingdom. He used marriage, the highest ideal of love and friendship known to man, to show the benefits of the kingdom.

Lesson for May 25. In the Olivet discourse Jesus outlined the events in the world to take place in the interval between His crucifixion and His second coming. The parable of the ten virgins shows the right behavior of believers in this present age in view of the coming of the Lord.

Lesson for June 1. By talents is meant whatever faculties and powers one possesses as God's gifts, such as physical strength, reason, knowledge, speech, song, or money. All these should be employed so as to honor God who gave them. A reckoning time is coming when account shall be rendered for their use. This will be at Christ's second coming.

Lesson for June 8. Mary of Bethany, because of her keen apprehension, saw that the Lord's body would be broken and that His precious life would go out at a time when no one could lovingly minister to Him. She therefore anointed Him as against that dread day. When the disciples criticized her act, she was defended by Jesus.

Lesson for June 15.—Jesus did not die as a martyr or as an example, but to make an atonement for man's sin. The supreme value of the lessons for the quarter centers in the cross. Teachers, it is not a matter of getting your children to learn the lessons of a great teacher, but to sacrifice them to have faith in Christ's sacrificial death.

Lesson for June 22. The resurrection of Jesus demonstrated His Messiahship and deity. The command of Jesus to preach the gospel in all the world is backed by His resurrection power.

The Oil of Joy

Christianity wants nothing so much in the world as sunny people, and the old are hungry for joy is very cheap, and if you can help the poor on with the garment of praise, it will be better for them than blankets.—Henry Drummond.

A Moral Pivot

The Hindu professor of modern history in a South India college said to me: "My study of modern history has shown me that there is a Moral Pivot in the world today, and that the best life of both East and West is more and more revealing about that center—that Moral Pivoting is the person of Jesus Christ."—E. Stanley Jones.

SCENIC PLAYGROUNDS OF AMERICA

By G. M. KILBOURN

Yellowstone Borrow

NATIONAL parks, like individuals, have personalities, and a park, like a person, may possibly become too obliging. The average American has plenty of respect for the Grand canyon, because he cannot walk across it, and for Mount Rainier, because he can only stand at the bottom and look up at it; or even for Pike's peak, because when he drives to the top and turns around he has scored only a technical victory and has to go down the same route he came up. But Yellowstone park, somehow, has suffered from being too obliging; its highways are too bounteously distributed, its mountains too gently rounded and too retiringly masked by the forest; far too often, therefore, a Yellowstone visitor leaves the park with a superiority complex slightly overdeveloped, which sooner or later causes him to ignore its distinction as a museum of natural wonders, and compare it with some other rival on a basis of startling scenery alone.

There is an appreciative way to travel, which allows for the personality of every region and makes friends of all of them; and a comparative way, which insists on picking favorites, to the disparagement of all others. This disparagement is often just as unfair as it would be to judge Lindbergh by his batting average or Babe Ruth by his number of flying hours; but many think that the way to play the game, and Yellowstone, by virtue of its particularly exhaustive welcome, has probably suffered from the habit far more than other parks.

Thousands of more loyal Yellowstone fans must have rejoiced, therefore, when the Grand Teton National park was created last year, because the Teton visit is logically a part of a Yellowstone tour—and because the Teton, perhaps more than any other mountains in North America, have that towering, commanding, almost threatening majesty which Yellowstone alone most lacks. Behind Miss Yellowstone's handshake there now glowers a Teton fist—and nobody "pick" on her now!

The new Teton park is small; only thirty-five miles long and but five miles across. But what miles they are. These are porcupine-motel mountains, great jagged wedges of granite which seem to hurl defiance at earth and sky alike. End your Yellowstone trip with a Grand Teton climb, and you'll be a booster the rest of your life.

The Grand Teton National park is located a few miles south of Yellowstone National park, practically on the Idaho boundary of Wyoming. It is reached by stage from Victor, Idaho, a Union Pacific terminus, or from the westernmost extremity of the Chicago and North Western railway at Lander, Wyo. The Union Pacific last year inaugurated a regular tour including the Teton trip with the usual Yellowstone circle, involving entry or exit at the other Union Pacific gateway, West Yellowstone, but applicable in either direction, for about $16 more than the regular all-expense Yellowstone circle. The North Western offered its longer-haul patron the Lander-Yellowstone motor ride at no additional cost. The matter of Teton transportation arose rather suddenly last year; this year it will be interesting to see what is offered after the roads have had time to think things through.

Eventually it is to be hoped that all Yellowstone circle routes will offer the opportunity of an exit climax via the Teton, and that stopover facilities will be provided at or near Jenny lake, under the very shadow of the mountains, and where they tower most magnificently. Any park tour may already include a round trip to Jackson lake, however, at small additional cost, as a midtrip between Old Faithful and Lake camp.

Their Dramatic Action

"The whole drama neighborhood has been quarrelling with the schoolmaster for two, three months, trying to get him to resign," stated Lem Dremm of Eliperry Map.

"And old her" asked Jig Fiddie from Chappard Springs.

"No, so long of shooting him we look and drag the school house in the night over further side of the hill where he couldn't find it."—Kansas City Star.

Last Sunday between Duran and Carrizozo resulted in a defeat for the home team to the tune of 7 to 4. Up to the end of the fourth inning the score stood 1 to 1, but in the next two innings the visitors made a lead and ran in six more, but in the remaining innings, we shut Duran out and made three runs. It was a good game and at certain periods quite exciting.

NEW MEXICO CATTLE GROWERS ASSOCIATION

At the executive board meeting of the New Mexico Cattle Grower Association held at Lordsburg, N. M. June 14, it was found necessary in some way to clarify the intention of the Association in the matter of the payment of the $250.00 reward offered for information leading to the arrest and conviction of any one stealing cattle or horses from its members. The intention of the association when they offered citation when they offered the reward was to pay the reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction in any one case of theft. For instance should two or three men be caught stealing one or more animals it was not the intention of the association to pay $250.00 for each convicted to be convicted of stealing the victim where two or more men became animal or animals. It was decided at the meeting to re-word the offer for the reward which is as follows:
"The New Mexico Cattle Growers Association will pay a reward of $250.00 for information leading to the arrest and conviction of any person or persons of stealing cattle or horses from any member of the association; provided that not more than $250.00 reward will be paid for any one case of theft and in no case will a reward be paid to the owner of stock stolen."

CLUB WOMEN BACK THE FOREST SERVICE IN THE CONSERVATION OF TIMBER

Women's organizations are actively interested in forwarding the forestry movement, the Forest Service, U. S. Department of Agriculture believes. This is indicated by the many request from women's groups for information and aid in developing forestry programs.
Some of the outstanding national organizations of women have created and developed active departments devoted to the study of conservation according to reports to the Forest Service, and have worked for the organization of State forestry departments. They favor securing and setting aside of forest areas for public use, and the general encouragement of the national forestry program.
To aid various women's organizations in preparing programs on forest conservation for club and other meetings, the Forest Service has available Miscellaneous Circular No. 21-M, "A Forestry Program for Women's Organizations." The booklet contains brief statements on Federal, State, Municipal and Private forestry, which bring out what has been done and what remains to be done in forestry in the United States. Other material in prose and verse suitable for a forestry program is included. Copies of the publication may be obtained without charge while the supply lasts upon application to the Office of Information, U. S. Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

STATE WELL AT TULAROSA WILL GO DOWN TO 450 FT.

A new contract has been made between the state engineer, Herbert W. Yeo, and the driller of the state test well west of Tularosa, to sink the well to a depth of 550 feet, instead of the 450 feet as stipulated in the original contract.
Drilling past the 270 foot depth last week, at which depth a flow of about 170 gallons per minute was developed, Harold Kersey, in charge of the drilling, stated that a small stream of artesian water, which barely came over the top of the well, at the rate of about 3 gallons per minute, was encountered at the depth of about 310 to 315 feet. At a depth of 450 feet, water stood in the well within 60 feet of the top, and at that depth it was possible to develop about 267 gallons per minute, according to the test pump used.

WESTERN STATES BOMBARD HOOVER WITH INVITATIONS FOR SUMMER TRIPS

Washington.—Through a virtual deluge of invitations for him to visit almost every state and many cities west of the Mississippi river on his trip this summer, President Hoover, constantly and placidly, gives the same answer:
No itinerary is being considered until congress is ready to adjourn.
Apply Pressure.
Senators, congressmen, governors, mayors, national committee men, chamber of commerce, and individuals have pleaded—many of them in person—with the chief executive to visit the particular locality in which they are interested.
He has been invited to fish, to speak, to parade, to banquet, to rest, and confer from Chicago to Dallas and from Kansas City to Tacoma.
Contingent upon congress adjourning finally by the middle of July, the president expects to leave the capital in a month, to be gone five or six weeks.

Start Near Border

He will pass through Minneapolis and start his tour of Rocky mountain national parks at Glacier park, near the Canadian border, stopping there to fish for about a week, the longest haul proposed for the entire journey of five or six thousand miles.
After that the itinerary is unknown even to the chief executive expects that he expects to make the return trip across the continent by the southern route, probably touring Grand Canyon park and passing through Texas with one or more stops in that state.
Horace M. Albright, director of the national park service, who was instrumental in inspiring the president to make the trip for the benefit of the park, is assisting in arranging details for stops in the preserves.

CLUB MEMBERS LEAVE FOR WASHINGTON CAMP

The Fourth National Boys' and Girls' 4-H Club Camp opened at Washington, D. C. June 17, and ending June 24. Forelight days 4-H club members from almost every state in the Union will assemble, together with chaperons and club leaders, to discuss rural community and 4-H Club problems, and exchange ideas with the end in view of "Making the Best Better."
New Mexico is sending her regular quota, two boys and two girls, accompanied by a chaperon. The girls are Maurine Jones of San Miguel county and Kathryn Woodbridge of Harding county; the boys, Roger Elser of Dona Ana county and Austin Broe of Curry county. Mr. E. C. Hollinger, Assistant Director, will accompany the party and have active part in committee work at the National 4-H Club Leaders' Conference.

While at Washington, the club members will be quartered in tents located next to the Department of Agriculture buildings. The program calls for an assembly each morning in the auditorium of the Smithsonian Institution, where addresses will be given by speakers of national importance. Following this, there will be a conference of club members and leaders. The club members will then take a trip to some nearby place of historical interest while the club leaders remain in session.
In the afternoon, trips will be made to places of national interest, including Mount Vernon, Arlington Cemetery, Smithsonian Institution, Bureau of Engraving, Capitol Building, Library of Congress, Washington Monument and Lincoln Monument. Other places of interest visited will be the dairy and animal husbandry farms at Beltsville, Md., and the plant industry farm at Arlington, Va.
Arrangements have been made for club members from various parts of the country to participate in radio programs. Austin Brooks will give a talk on club work in New Mexico in a program broadcast over the National broadcasting chain at noon June 18. Roger Elser will broadcast an account of the trip over KOB the evening of July 18.

CHARTS GIVE DATA ON NEWER FRUITS IN DIET

In recent years such former fruits as avocados, loganberries, mangoes, papayas, and many other interesting and delicious new fruits have become generally available on the market in their season. As soon as a new fruit becomes common it is desirable to know how much sugar, acid, and other chemical constituents it contains. Doctors and dietitians need such data if they are to include it in their diet lists. The Bureau of Home Economics recently issued tables giving proximate chemical composition of fresh fruits and fruit juices. Averages for new and unusual fruits and for apples, cherries, peaches, and all the familiar kinds shown in terms of carbohydrates, calories, and their chemical units. Separate figures are given for summer, fall, and winter
