Cattle Theft Gang in New Mexico

Gallup — The range country comprising southwestern New Mexico and southeastern Arizona, taking in a part of the head waters of the Gila river, is now in the grip of a band of cattle rustlers.

The sheriff's departments of both McKinley and Catron counties are supplying deputies with Indian scouts to run down the rustlers.

The identity of the gang is known, but kept a secret for the time. It is said to be a band of youngsters, working under the leadership of a few older heads.

Big Reduction in Ladies' Wearing Apparel for Fall

Albuquerque Tribune:

Coats, dresses, suits, in fact all women's wearing apparel will be at the least, 25 per cent cheaper this fall than they were last year. This is the information various proprietors of women's ready-to-wear stores here have received from their New York offices. Albuquerque dress shops are clearing their decks or rather their racks, and getting ready for fall merchandise. Women of our city who are careful shoppers are busy just now, inspecting goods offered in the July sales and preparing to take advantage of the money saving prices compared to last year.

Prints are especially good this time of the year, according to various fashion authorities, and prints, both in chiffons and crepes, are being shown here. Silk suits in pastel shades, with hats to match or delicately contrast, are popular for the late summer season. Suits which last year sold for $32.50 will retail this year at around $16.00.

Coats will be at least 25% cheaper and furs this year are of better quality for the same money. In silk suits, the quality of silk is better than last year. The travel-tweed or silk tweed will be popular this fall, in printed designs in autumn colors.

Coats are princess in styles and dresses have lower hip lines. Many of them are tunic frocks.

Mendenhall sang an appropriate solo, the remains were laid to rest in the local cemetery Tuesday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Austin Wooten

They are laying plans to increase their business and will buy more sheep, which, Jesse says, are at a rather low ebb in price, just now, with prospects of a good and substantial rise in the near future.

Big Reduction in Ladies' Wearing Apparel for Fall

Albuquerque Tribune: Coats, dresses, suits, in fact all women's wearing apparel will be at the least, 25 per cent cheaper this fall than they were last year. This is the information various proprietors of women's ready-to-wear stores here have received from their New York offices. Albuquerque dress shops are clearing their decks or rather their racks, and getting ready for fall merchandise. Women of our city who are careful shoppers are busy just now, inspecting goods offered in the July sales and preparing to take advantage of the money saving prices compared to last year.

Prints are especially good this time of the year, according to various fashion authorities, and prints, both in chiffons and crepes, are being shown here. Silk suits in pastel shades, with hats to match or delicately contrast, are popular for the late summer season. Suits which last year sold for $32.50 will retail this year at around $16.00.

Coats will be at least 25% cheaper and furs this year are of better quality for the same money. In silk suits, the quality of silk is better than last year. The travel-tweed or silk tweed will be popular this fall, in printed designs in autumn colors. Coats are princess in styles and dresses have lower hip lines. Many of them are tunic frocks.

DEBORAH, A LEADER IN A NATIONAL EMERGENCY

LESSON TEXT—Judges 4:1-24.
GOLDEN TEXT—Say to them that are of a fearful heart, be strong, fear not: behold, your God will come with vengeance, even God with a recompense; he will come and save you.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Deborah a Brave Woman.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Deborah a Brave Woman.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Notable Women Patriots.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Woman's Influence in Community and National Affairs.

The book of Judges covers the period from the conquest of Canaan and death of Joshua to the Judgeship of Samuel. While Joshua and the elders of his generation lived, the people in some measure remained faithful to God, but the very next generation went into apostasy. Their declension may be accounted for by:

- 1. Their failure to drive out the Canaanites when they took possession of the land. Their failure to carry out this command of God was their undoing.
- 2. Their amalgamation with the Canaanites. Their tolerance of the heathen about them was quickly followed by union in marriage.
- 3. Idolatry. Their intermarriage with the heathen was followed by worship of the heathen gods.

In order to teach this lesson intelligently it is necessary that the teacher have a grasp of the book of Judges from which it is taken. In chapter 2:6-19 is given a synopsis of the book. Observe (1) The sin of the people (vv. 6-13). (2) God's judgment for their sin (vv. 14, 15). (3) Their repentance (3:9). (4) God delivers them at the hands of the Judges (vv. 16-19). A repetition of sin, oppression by the enemy, repentance and deliverance, is the story of the book of Judges.

I. The National Emergency (vv. 1-3).

1. Lapse into idolatry (v. 1).
Ehud was not only a righteous but a strong ruler. Under his Judgeship, freedom had been enjoyed for many years. As soon as he was dead the people turned away from God.

2. The bondage of the people (v. 2).

The Lord abandoned them to be oppressed by Jabin, king of Canaan.

3. The people cried unto God (v. 3).

Affliction brought them to their senses.
II. The Judgeship of Deborah (vv. 4-10).

The great national emergency confronting Israel was met by a woman named Deborah. Her name means "Dee." As suggested by another, she exemplified her name by her industry, sagacity and great service to the public.

1. The place where she judged Israel (v. 5).

It was under a palm tree. She held an open air court for the administration of justice.

2. Her method (vv. 6-10). (1) Her summons to Barak (vv. 6, 7). Barak means "lightning." Deborah, being a prophetess, was able to select a man whose gifts would enable him to rally the forces needed to gain victory over the formidable foe. Deborah gave definite instruction as to the number of men and the strategy to be employed, assuring him that God would deliver Sisera into his hand. (2) Barak's reply (v. 8). He expressed an unwillingness to go unless Deborah would go with him. (3) Barak rebuked (vv. 9, 10). Deborah yielded to his request, but made it plain to him that it would detract from his honor as a conqueror, "for the Lord shall sell Sisera into the hand of a woman."

III. The Defeat of Jabin's Army (vv. 11-14).

Sisera, the captain, gathered a mighty army and went forth, confident of victory over the ill-equipped and undisciplined army of Barak, but he made one sad mistake—he did not consider that it was the Lord's battle (v. 15). Through supernatural interposition the enemy became panic-stricken (25:20).

IV. Sisera Killed by a Woman (vv. 17-24).

In his flight Sisera took refuge in Jael's tent. In the guise of friendship she committed a most heinous murder after inviting him into her dwelling.

V. The Song of Deborah and Barak (ch. 5).

This song was composed and sung in celebration of the marvelous victory which God had wrought. Deborah set forth in the most definite way that the secret of victory was the help of God.

SCENIC PLAYGROUNDS OF AMERICA

Mountain of Glass

VERY few of the millions of people who have visited Yellowstone National park probably realize that for a time they were riding above a highway of glass. And of all who have whirled past the cliff of black volcanic glass by the roadside, the great majority have never heard the story of how that cliff was beaten back, to make room for the roadway, by heating the glass, and then throwing cold water on it!

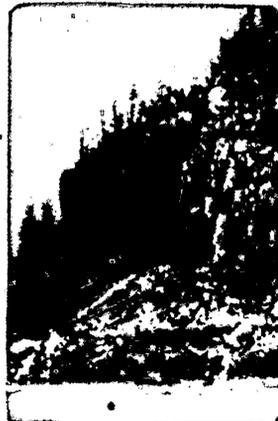

Obsidian cliff, the mountain of black glass, stands in the northwest part of the park, twelve miles by road from the park headquarters at Mammoth Hot Springs, and seventeen miles from the Northern Pacific gateway at Gardiner, Mont. It is not a spectacular sight, and the park busses, unless they have very recently changed their habits, do not even stop there.

But before the white man came, the cliff of glass was sometimes a very busy place—for the Indians often made their arrowheads of this obsidian.

Then at last came the year 1872 and with it the creation of Yellowstone National park. Six years later the story of the Obsidian cliff road-making was told in the annual report of the park's second superintendent, Philetus W. Norris, as follows:

"Obsidian there rises like basalt in vertical columns many hundreds of feet high, and countless huge masses had fallen from this utterly impassable mountain into the hissing hot spring margin of an equally impassable lake, without either Indian or game trail over the glistening fragments of Nature's glass, sure to be severely lacerate. As this glass barricade sloped from some 200 or 300 feet high against the cliff at an angle of some 45 degrees to the lake, we—with the shivered fragments of timber thrown from the heights—with huge fires, heated and expanded, and then men, well screened by blankets held by others, by dashing cold water, suddenly cooled and fractured the large masses. Then, with huge levers, steel bars, sledge, pick, and shovels, and severe laceration of at least the hands and faces of every member of the party; we rolled, slid, crushed, and shoveled one-fourth of a mile of good wagon road midway along the slope; it being, so far as I am aware, the only road of native glass upon the continent."

Superintendent Norris' story is quoted in early editions of "The Yellowstone National Park," by Brig.-Gen. Hiram Martin Chittenden, himself a Yellowstone road builder of perhaps more authority (he was assistant to the officer in charge of roads in 1901-02 and was in complete charge of road construction for about seven years following 1909). In his revised and enlarged edition of 1915, General Chittenden omitted the direct quotation, but restated its substance: "The building of the first road along the base of this cliff has some historic celebrity, owing to the novel method adopted in clearing away the rock. Colonel Norris, the builder, broke the glassy material into fragments by heating it with fires and then dashing cold water upon it."

Time works many changes in Yellowstone, however. The lowland adjoining the cliff is now more of a marsh than a lake—while a few miles down the road, a rounded ridge that was perfectly respectable forest land as late as 1902, has now become a steaming inferno, to win the title of "Roaring Mountains!"

Two well known actors were playing golf and every stroke proclaimed that they were novices at the game. Several fair-haired pieces of turf had been sent skyward and when one unusually large piece departed from its native soil one of the accompanying caddies turned to the other and whispered: "Did yer tell me they were actors. "Yes," answered the other. "Well," was the reply, "all I can say is, they ought to be scene shifters."

The Mazaroff Mystery

by J.S. Fletcher

W.N.U. SERVICE

Illustrations by Irwin Myers

THE STORY

Mervyn Holt is engaged by a man calling himself Mazaroff as a traveling companion. After a short tour they put up at the Woodcock inn on Marrasdale moor. They meet, casually, Mrs. Elphinstone and Sheila Merchlison. Mazaroff tells Holt they are his wife and daughter and that his real name is Merchlison. That night Mazaroff fails to return to the inn and his disappearance is unexplained. Holt meets Sheila and tells her of Mazaroff's disappearance. They go to her cousin's (Verner Courthope) shooting box hoping to find some word of Mazaroff. There they meet Mr. Armitage and Doctor Eccles. Holt is questioned by Police Sergeant Manners and a reporter, Brown. Mazaroff's murdered body is found. Crole, Mazaroff's lawyer, and Maythorne, private detective, arrive. Valuable diamonds that Mazaroff usually carried are missing. Mrs. Elphinstone scoffs at the idea that Mazaroff is Merchlison and produces apparent proofs of his death. A gun, stolen from Musgrave, is found at the scene of the murder.

The scrap of paper was a receipt for a registered letter, dispatched from Cape Town, and addressed to the Imperial Banking Corporation of South Africa, 605 Lombard street, London. Maythorne pointed to the date—January 17—on the postmark.

"Nine months since," he remarked. "How long had Mazaroff been in England when you met him at the Cecil?"

"A few weeks," I replied. "As far as I know."

"I know," said Crole. "He came to England in July—about the end of the month."

"Then the letter, or packet, or whatever it was, to which this receipt refers, was sent off from Cape Town to the London branch of this bank some months before Mazaroff came here," observed Maythorne. He turned the receipt over. "There's an indorsement on the back—letters and a figure," he continued. "See? H. D. L. What's that mean, I wonder?"

"He carefully put away the receipt. "Well just keep the knowledge of that to ourselves, for the present," he said. "If the police come here this afternoon, as they're pretty sure to, after that gun business, and want to examine his effects, let 'em. But I'll keep this scrap of paper to myself—I want to work things up from it."

The police came to the Woodcock a little later. They asked a lot of questions of Musgrave about his gun, and of me and of Webster about our movements on the night of the murder, of Crole about the dead man's identity and position; of me again about the money and valuables he was likely to have on him. And in the course of their investigations a fact came out of which I, until then, had been unaware. It turned out that after dinner on the night of the murder, while I was busied in writing some private letters, Mazaroff, who was naturally a sociable man, had strolled into the bar-parlor of the Woodcock, where a highly diversified assemblage had gathered—farmers, cattle dealers, drovers, idlers, all homeward bound from Clough-waite fair. There he had made himself very agreeable, and had treated the entire company to drinks and cigars, which he paid for with a five-pound note, taken, said the barmaid, from a notecase that seemed to be pretty full, and in open view of anybody and everybody.

This bit of news appeared to give considerable satisfaction and even relief to the police officials, and Manners, who lingered behind when his superiors went away, found it impossible to refrain from communicating to me his belief that they were on the right line of pursuit.

I communicated the police sergeant's notions to Crole and Maythorne. Maythorne seemed to understand Manners' standpoint.

"Following the most probable line," he remarked. "A sensible one, too. Here's an evidently wealthy man, traveling in a luxurious car of his own, puts up at a roadside inn, goes into a public bar-parlor, lets it be seen that he's lots of money on him, and strolls out on a lonely moor after night has fallen. What more likely than that one of the men before whom he's just pulled out his purse should slip after him, murder him, and rob him?"

"With Musgrave's gun?" I asked.

"Nothing out of the way about that little detail!" said Maythorne. "What was easier than for the murderer to take down the gun from those hooks, and slip out after Mazaroff?"

"That would presuppose a knowledge that the gun was there," remarked Crole.

"Precisely," agreed Maythorne. "There was no doubt local characters about who know quite well what was in this room and what hung on that wall. I think Mazaroff has got hold of a good theory—murder for the sake of robbery. But—whether it's the right one or not—um!"

"You doubt it?" I asked.

"He gave us a candid, confidential smile.

"If you really want to know," he replied, "I neither doubt it nor agree with it. At present I don't know where we are. I'd like to know a lot of things yet. In particular—who was the man that Mazaroff said he wanted to see, hereabouts? Did he see him? If so, when—and where? If he hadn't seen him, was he on his way to see him at the time of the murder? Again—does this man, whoever he is, know Mazaroff as Mazaroff or as Merchlison? Was Mazaroff murdered as Mazaroff, an unknown man here, or as Merchlison, a man who had been known here?"

"Ah!" muttered Crole. "My question!"

CHAPTER IV

The York Solicitor

The inquest was duly opened next morning. Crole, as a solicitor whom he had employed in London, and I, as his traveling companion, identified the dead man as Salim Mazaroff, and told what we knew about him: Eccles-shire and the local doctor testified as to the cause of his death: the men who had found the body at Relyer's den gave evidence as to the circumstances under which they came across it. At this stage an interruption came through the entrance of Mr. and Mrs. Elphinstone and Sheila, with whom appeared an elderly man of professional bearing; Manners, by whom I was sitting, whispered to me that this was Mr. Wetherby, Mrs. Elphinstone's lawyer.

Wetherby lost no time in letting the authorities know why he and his party were there.

He said, addressing the coroner, "I wish to make an application to you on behalf of my client, Mrs. Elphinstone, of Marrasdale tower. To support it, I shall have—very briefly—to refer to some past history. Mrs. Elphinstone, as Miss Jean Linton, was married, some twenty-three or four years ago, to a Mr. Andrew Merchlison, who formerly had some connection with this neighborhood. The marriage was not a success, and to put matters plainly, Merchlison, within a comparatively short time and after making due provision for his wife, deserted her, and it was believed, went off to the East. Eight months after he had gone, Mrs. Merchlison had a daughter—the young lady whom you now see here, Miss Sheila Merchlison. Merchlison was never heard of again until some years later, when Mrs. Merchlison received news that he had been drowned off Mombasa, on the East African coast, while on a voyage from Bombay to Durban. From that time forward Mrs. Merchlison believed herself a widow, and in due course she married again, and became Mrs. Elphinstone. Now I come to the cause and reason of my application. Yesterday, Mrs. Elphinstone was visited by two gentlemen now present, who have, I understand, just given evidence—Mr. Holt and Mr. Crole. On the invitation of Mr. Crole, Mr. Holt informed Mrs. Elphinstone that on the second evening after he and Mr. Mazaroff arrived here at the Woodcock, Mr. Mazaroff told him that though he had a perfect right to the name he was now known by, having legally adopted it some years ago, he was in reality the Andrew Merchlison who had married Miss Jean Linton, and had left her, I need hardly say, sir, that this is a very serious matter for my client, and I think it will be well for all parties if Mrs. Elphinstone is allowed to view the body of this dead man, in order that she may see if she can recognize it as that of Andrew Merchlison."

"That seems, obviously, the very thing to do," agreed the coroner. "Perhaps you'll accompany your client, Mr. Wetherby?"

There was considerable hushed excitement in that room during the absence of Mrs. Elphinstone and her solicitor. Some of the older folk amongst the spectators whispered—the name Merchlison had evidently roused sleeping memories.

When Mrs. Elphinstone, followed by Wetherby, reappeared, at the coroner's suggestion, she went into the witness box and gave evidence. It compressed itself into this—she could not identify the dead man as Andrew Merchlison. Had the features remained unaltered, she said calmly, she might have done so, but as things were—impossible!

Crole, in his professional capacity, rose to ask Mrs. Elphinstone a question.

"Mrs. Elphinstone," he said, "had Andrew Merchlison a cast in his left eye?"

"Certainly, he had," she replied. "A decided one!"

"I know whose voice that was before I looked round. Old Mr. Hassendane, whom I had noticed, when Crole and I entered the room, had risen from his seat, and was smiling informally at the coroner.

"Mrs. Elphinstone can't be positive. I may as well say that I am! I know Andrew Merchlison well enough in the old days, when he used to come here, and afterward when he was a young man—I knew him, too, after he'd married Miss Linton, now Mrs. Elphinstone. And my memory for faces is remarkably keen, and I recognized him easily enough when I saw him the other night, Andrew Merchlison, without doubt!"

"Where did you see this man, Mr. Hassendane?" interrupted the coroner.

"I saw him the night on which he evidently met his death," replied the old gentleman. "It was in Birnside village street, near my house."

"And you are quite positive on this matter of identity?"

"I am absolutely positive! The man was Andrew Merchlison, whatever

Crole turned to the coroner.

"Numerous witnesses can prove that the unfortunate gentleman into whose death you are inquiring had such a cast—a squint—in his left eye, sir," he remarked. "He also had a birthmark, in the form of a brown mole, or blemish, on his right forearm. That, however, is not an uncommon mark, I believe, and I don't attach great importance to it. But I am strongly convinced that further proof of the identity of the deceased as Andrew Merchlison will be found, and I should suggest—"

"There need be no doubt about it!" exclaimed a sudden voice from the spectators. "The man was Andrew Merchlison!"

"I know whose voice that was before I looked round. Old Mr. Hassendane, whom I had noticed, when Crole and I entered the room, had risen from his seat, and was smiling informally at the coroner.

"Mrs. Elphinstone can't be positive. I may as well say that I am! I know Andrew Merchlison well enough in the old days, when he used to come here, and afterward when he was a young man—I knew him, too, after he'd married Miss Linton, now Mrs. Elphinstone. And my memory for faces is remarkably keen, and I recognized him easily enough when I saw him the other night, Andrew Merchlison, without doubt!"

"Where did you see this man, Mr. Hassendane?" interrupted the coroner.

"I saw him the night on which he evidently met his death," replied the old gentleman. "It was in Birnside village street, near my house."

"And you are quite positive on this matter of identity?"

"I am absolutely positive! The man was Andrew Merchlison, whatever he may have called himself of recent years."

The coroner glanced at the solicitors gathered about the table at the head of which he sat.

"I think we had better adjourn for a fortnight," he said. "During that time—"

Just then a policeman opened the door of the room, ushering in a young, spectacled man. The coroner paused and glanced inquiringly at him.

The newcomer pulled out a card-case and, advancing to the head of the table, whispered a few words in the coroner's ear. I saw a look of something between surprise and perplexity cross the coroner's face.

"We seem to be dealing with a strangely mysterious matter, quite apart from the death," he remarked. "This gentleman"—he glanced at the card—"Mr. Stephen Postlethwaite, solicitor, from York—tells me that he saw accounts of this case in the papers yesterday, and has hurried here to give some information. I suppose we'd better have it now?"

Mr. Postlethwaite formally described himself as a solicitor. He produced a diary, and exhibited an entry which recorded a call from Mr. Salim Mazaroff.

"Mr. Mazaroff," he continued, "who was a total stranger to me, introduced himself as staying in York for a few days at the North Eastern hotel. He then informed me that he was a very wealthy man; that he had made his money in various trading concerns in the East, and lately in extensive diamond dealings in South Africa; that he had now retired from all this, and had realized his various properties, and lodged all the proceeds in cash at his London bank, the Imperial Banking Corporation of South Africa, pending investment in this country. Then in a rather jocular fashion he remarked that up to then, as he had no children, and no relations, he had never made a will, but he now desired to do so. He produced a sheet of paper on which he had written out his wishes, handed it to me, and asked if I could put it into shape for him. I told him I would have the will prepared for him, and he was to call and execute it at any time after three o'clock that afternoon. He returned to my office at half past three, when the will was ready for his signature. He duly appended that and carried the will off with him. It was not until some days later that I found that I had omitted to give him his own original draft, which I found lying amongst some papers on my desk. I went round to the North Eastern hotel with it, myself, but learned then that Mr. Mazaroff and his friend Mr. Holt had left for Durban and the north, leaving no address. I therefore locked up the draft. Yesterday I read in the newspapers the various accounts of what had happened here, and as I particularly noticed that Mr. Mazaroff had been robbed of his papers as well as his money and valuables, I thought it my duty to come here at once and tell what I knew."

"Much obliged to you, I'm sure, Mr. Postlethwaite," the coroner said. "Now, according to you the deceased man carried off this will in his pocket. It appears from the evidence that everything he had on him—money, valuables, papers—was stolen, most likely by the murderer or murderers; presumably the will has gone with the rest. However, it's something to know that such a document was in existence. You say he told you he was a wealthy man. Did he say how wealthy?"

"Yes. He told me he was worth about eight hundred thousand pounds."

The coroner leaned back in his chair, put the tips of his fingers together, and looked round the court. Then he turned again to the witness.

"I think we'll trouble you to read that draft, Mr. Postlethwaite," he said, quietly.

Postlethwaite read—amidst a dead silence:

"This is the last will of me, Salim Mazaroff, of the Hotel Cecil, London, in the county of Middlesex and of 941 Darling street, Cape Town, South Africa. I desire and bequeath all my estate and effects, real and personal, which I may die possessed of or entitled to unto Mervyn Holt, of 552A Jermyn street, London, absolutely, and I hereby appoint the said Mervyn Holt sole executor of this my will and I revoke all former wills and codicils."

This was all. But I was suddenly conscious that all eyes had turned from the witness to me.

The first thing that I was accurately conscious of after the crushing shock of the York solicitor's announcement was Crole's voice, close to my ear.

"Keep quiet, Holt!" he was whispering intently. "Keep quiet—calm!"

I don't think I did more than hear him—I was watching the coroner, feeling, now, that he, somehow, crystallized in himself all that the various people in that room were thinking and wondering.

The coroner looked around—at nobody in particular.

"I understand that the will has not been found," he said. "The theory is that it was stolen by the supposed murderer, with other of the deceased's papers. Nobody knows anything about it, eh?"

Wetherby was suddenly on his legs, with a sidelong glance at me.

"As Mr. Holt, the beneficiary, is present, sir," he said, "I should like to ask him if he knows anything about it?"

"I know nothing about it!" I exclaimed. "I never heard of it!"

Wetherby gave me another look; there was something cynical in it which I strongly resented.

Scottish Abbey Holds Relics of Robert Bruce

Subject to the fulfillment of certain conditions, the trustees of Professor Noel Paton handed over the following articles to the Kirk-session of Dunfermline abbey: 1. A portion of the skeleton of King Robert the Bruce, namely, the metatarsal or bone of the great toe. 2. A small portion of the outer leaden shroud of King Robert the Bruce. 3. A small portion of the tolls d'or in which the body of King Robert the Bruce was wrapped. 4. The remains of one of the iron nails which were found among the remains of the coffin in which the body reposed. 5. The remains of one of the six iron rings, or rather handles, which had been filled in with lead into the largest of two stones protecting the vault of the Bruce when first discovered on February 17, 1818. 6. Twelve fragments—white marble and alabaster—believed to be portions of the magnificent monument of King Robert the Bruce at Dunfermline destroyed by the Lords of the Congregation. The relics are preserved in an oak glass-fronted cabinet placed alongside of the abbey pulpit erected immediately above the vault of the Bruce.—London Mail.

French Enjoy Fishing

No fewer than 10,000 fishermen took part in a competition and congress which was held at Vichy, writes the Paris correspondent of the London Sunday Observer. The number is not only sufficient to show what a placid person the Frenchman really is—at least when he reaches a certain age—but also that he has a natural passion for sport. I do not mean sport as he usually understands the word, for he does not really care about games, but sport in the sense of shooting and fishing. Game shooting is far more a pursuit of the whole people of France than in England, and there is hardly a middle-aged Frenchman who is not a fisherman.

Old Lady by No Means

Ready for the "Shelf"

Out near Palm Springs, says the Los Angeles Times, an old negro woman, who thinks she is over ninety, and who was a slave at the outbreak of the Civil war, lives alone in a little cabin. One day she got a toothache and sent for a dentist.

The dentist went to the cabin prepared to yank the offending tooth and get away in a hurry but Aunt Sally made him wait until she had fortified herself with a concoction of corn juice and wine. Then when the tooth was out she went into consultation as to whether to have a plate made, or gum it up.

"But why a plate?" asked the dentist. "Remember, you're over ninety."

"What of it?" demanded Aunt Sally. "Maybe you-all don't know it, but I goes to night school and I got to look right."

It Worked

Lewis L. Pierson, chairman of the board, Irving Trust company, was discussing with a friend the hazard of people of limited means pyramiding their profits from stock speculation. He told of a cattle raiser in Montana who was advised by an old associate to come to New York where he could readily make money. The day after the smash he told his advisor: "I am like the man who wrote a letter for publication endorsing a patent medicine."

"Dear Doctor: I had a large wart on the end of my nose and my druggist advised me to use your world famous wart cure. I used only one-quarter of a bottle and now I have no wart—and no nose."—Forbes Magazine.

Great Violin Maker

Vincenzo Trusiano Panormo of Paris and London was born in Monreale bei Palermo, 1733, and died in London, 1813. Like Lupot and Aldric, Panormo was one of the cleverest imitators of Stradivarius violins. Of a wandering disposition, he often changed his residence and worked in London, Paris, and also in Ireland. Some of his instruments have a marvelous finish and his red varnish is of exceptional quality. His instruments are scarce and sometimes branded.

EDITORIAL COLUMN

Thinking Rightly

There are so many crepe-hangers abroad over the land at the present time, more especially those who are opposed to the national administration who would resort to almost anything to hinder the work of President Hoover, that we take pleasure in re-producing a letter sent out lately by the Smith-Emery Co., chemists and engineers of Los Angeles. It follows, in substance:

"Frankly, times haven't been any too good, and like Mr. Micauber, we have been largely sitting around 'waiting for something to turn up.'

"We've been fed up on the truism, 'business depression is a state of mind.' This has been drilled into us by the current press, and by our political and financial advisers, local and otherwise.

Nevertheless, there is no use trying to deceive ourselves. Call our troubles what you may—over-speculation, prohibition, tariff agitation or over-production—we just have a suspicion that they are the culmination of a series of idiocies, overdone—and richly earned by diligent departure from lines of good sense.

"Personally—we are taking advantage of this slack period to spruce up generally around our establishment. Nobody has been discharged, nobody's salary has been cut, and the payment of bills has not been unduly delayed.

"Our employes have been imbued with the spirit of giving the best service possible, and the public has never been better or more promptly served.

"We are also doing a little extra advertising, giving out all the work we can to other concerns, and making a few extra calls on our friends and clients—not to talk 'hard times,' but just to shake hands warmly and cheerily say 'Howdy!'

"While we believe careful consideration should be given to major expenditures, we do not believe it is a time for penuriousness or narrowness in thought or act; in fact, liberal, sound-thinking may be good for us, for the world is moving pretty fast—we are not the only ducks in the national or industrial puddle—we don't want to be side-tracked over night.

"Large concerns and public utilities employing thousands should remember they have the same responsibility regarding the welfare of individual employes as the little fellow—the same responsibility for keeping the wheels of commerce moving, and they have no more license for discharging a lot of people who have faithfully served through good times than have the small concerns. In fact, it is more incumbent upon big business to do its full share in maintaining the employment balance.

CHEVROLET Six-Cylinder Trucks

Bigger, Faster, Sturdier and more economical

In size, speed and durability, the Chevrolet Six-Cylinder Truck is superior to any haulage unit ever built by Chevrolet. Yet, for all these decided advantages, it shows (according to many prominent fleet users) a lower maintenance cost than any other low-priced truck of similar capacity!

These basic facts should be borne in mind by everyone considering the purchase of an inexpensive haulage unit—in these days, when business men are watching transportation costs.

Many important features of the Chevrolet Six-Cylinder Truck are given below. Study them. Use them as a basis of comparison—to prove quality—modern design—and EXTRA VALUE!

"Don't let's wait around any longer for some great political stunt to be pulled off or a spectacular financial movement to scintillate on the business horizon. Let's get busy—each putting his own house in order, thus showing confidence in ourselves and the future, and we will soon forget that business has been out of tune.

ONE MILLION NEW POLES SET A YEAR

Derrick Mounted on Truck and Operated by Power-Driven Winch

To raise a telephone pole by man-power alone requires quite a large gang. The development of the motor-driven truck equipped with motor-driven winch and steel derrick has greatly expedited the work of setting poles. This combination with the earth-boring machine for digging pole holes enables a comparatively small gang to set a great many poles per day. By manual labor alone, a man, under reasonably easy conditions, may dig from three to six pole holes per day. With the derrick and pole-hole digger a gang of three men can dig the holes and set from 25 to 30 poles per day. There are approximately 1,000,000 poles in the Bell System to be maintained, involving moving, removing, resetting and straightening, and 1,000,000 new poles are needed annually.

Afternoon Frock Is in Limelight

By JULIA BOTTOMLEY

The afternoon frock is again important in the fashion world. Was a time, not so long since, when we really forgot, or rather the style program did not demand that we change our clothes for each passing daytime social event.

The real reason we did it was because there actually were no definite luncheon, afternoon and tea fashions. Having reached the point where sports, clothes were accepted even by "the best of regulated" dressers as appropriate as anything, we sometimes became totally resigned, and just wore them on through the dinner hour.

HINTS FOR HOUSEKEEPERS

- Light colored walls in the kitchen reflect and diffuse light and help to make the room a convenient workshop.
Summer clothes for the child should be light, airy, and easy to launder and they should absorb moisture readily.
Frequent turning, sunning, and cleaning with a brush or vacuum cleaner attachment make a mattress last longer and more comfortable as well.
A convenient way to serve raw vegetables to the child is to chop them fine and use as filling in small whole wheat bread sandwiches.

bridge of a warm afternoon, but one would never play golf in it.

All of which goes to show that the clothes question is anything but a "happy-go-lucky" proposition this season. It requires intelligent study as to the appropriateness of things. The new rules are really quite arbitrary—sports for sports, afternoon costumes for afternoon, and formal evening attire for just that and none other. Transgress the law as to what's what in wearing apparel for this or that time, place and event, and you are, well, to say the least, you are simply not fashionable, not modern.

SERVING SALAD FAMILY STYLE

Possibly one reason why the busy housekeeper does not serve salads as often as she might is that it suggests individual salad plates, which often means extra work. Why not use the large salad bowl placed on the table as any other vegetable dish? It can be attractive and garnished. Raw carrots, fresh cucumbers, tomatoes and lettuce can all be served "family style," giving each one ample servings with less work for the home-maker.

One would never play tennis in such feminine attire, but one would eat a summer luncheon in it; or drink iced tea at five o'clock. One would sit on the country club porch playing

Story for the Children at Bedtime

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

"I saw you both in the city not long ago," said the horse whose name was Fred.
And the other horses nodded their heads and neighed as they agreed with Fred.
"Who must have all come about the same time," said Bennie.
"I think you're right," said Kittle.
"I know why we all came here," said Fred.
"Fred, I heard my master talking to your masters about it, and I heard him say anything which I am sure you will both be glad to hear.
"Fred made me very, very happy, for I have tried to do my best and it is nice to hear the good things, isn't it?"
"Fred, I think it is, for I don't think it makes one collected to hear nice things.
"I think it makes one want to live up to them, and it makes everyone happy."
"Fred, I agree," said Kittle. "I think there are so many nice people, men and women, boys and girls, and animals, too, that they should be made happy by hearing that they are liked."
"Fred, you both would like to hear my story then, eh?" asked Fred.
"Fred, we would," said Bennie, "for we are glad to hear you have good news for us."
"Fred, there were a few days when we were quite certain we were going to be sold, and we didn't know what sort of masters we would have."
"Fred, I almost died of joy when I came here," said Kittle.
"Fred, my master and your master," said Fred, pointing to the other two horses, "couldn't bear to have us sold.
"Fred, of course, we have spent our lives on the police force of a great city.

"We have helped the policemen who rode us.
"Fred, we have stopped runaways, we have saved lives of children, and we have done everything we could, always.

possible to save the life of a wonderful child, for I came to the conclusion, which means that I finally decided, that children were about the most wonderful things in the world.
"Fred, how I loved helping them when they came from school. How gay and bright were the hours in the day when their high, gloriously happy voices would reach my ears.
"Fred, my master would whisper to me: 'The children are coming, Fred. We must be on guard to see that they don't get run over.'

Testing Sheets for Endurance

As an initial step in learning what grades and staple lengths of cotton give the most satisfactory service for sheeting, the bureau of home economics of the United States Department of Agriculture is conducting a test of 90 sheets in ordinary use in a Washington (D. C.) hotel. These sheets were made under the direction of the bureau of agricultural economics, which selected the cotton to be used and supervised the manufacture of the sheets. Three different grades of the same staple length—1 inch—are represented in the study now underway.

After making tests of the tensile strength, thread count, and weight in ounces per square yard of these three grades of fabric, the bureau of home economics arranged to place the sheets for service on one floor of the hotel. Each sheet is marked with a number for identification whenever it is laundered. Every morning the used sheets of this lot are collected by themselves and sent to the hotel laundry. There they are washed separately, but in the same manner as the other linen used in the hotel. A specialist from the textile and clothing division is present throughout the laundering process, timing the sheets in the machine and in the rinse waters and checking the numbers on those which are washed. Thus, at any stage of the experiment it is possible to tell how many times a given sheet has been used.

When the first breaks begin to appear in these sheets samples will be withdrawn for laboratory tests, and at the conclusion of the study all the discarded sheets will be examined for areas of greatest wear.

It is hoped that this study will lead to others linking the production of textile fibers more closely with quality and performance requirements in the finished articles. Up to the present very little attention has been given to this aspect of agricultural production of textile fibers.

ASPARAGUS ON BUTTERED TOAST

Cook the asparagus as quickly as possible, but cook it gently, by simmering, to avoid breaking off the tender heads and toughening the stalks. Quick cooking preserves its nutrients, its color, and its flavor. The bureau of home economics of the United States Department of Agriculture says, "Wash the asparagus well, scrape off the little scales with a knife to remove all sand, and trim off the tough lower ends. Leave the stalks whole or cut into 2-inch pieces. Drop into a small quantity of lightly salted boiling water, simmer for from 15 to 20 minutes, drain, and arrange neatly on thin slices of buttered toast. Sprinkle with salt and pepper, pour melted butter or other fat over the top, and serve at once."

LATTICE POTATOES AN ATTRACTIVE DISH

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The attractive appearance of lattice potatoes, their color and crisp textures, makes them unusually pleasing when served with cold meat and salad for lunch or supper. They are not hard to prepare. To make them, a grooved board covered with a piece of tin with a cutting edge can be bought almost anywhere kitchen wares are sold. This apparatus is not expensive.

After the lattice potatoes are cut they should be rinsed in cold running water and soaked for two or three hours in cold water to remove as much starch as possible, says the bureau of home economics of the United States Department of Agriculture. Dip the pieces from the water, and pat them with a clean dry cloth to absorb as much moisture as possible. Heat a kettle of deep fat hot enough to brown a small piece of bread in 30 seconds. Fry about a cupful of the potatoes at a time. Remove them from the fat when golden brown, drain on clean absorbent paper, and sprinkle with salt. Serve at once while hot and crisp.

A man who brags about himself hasn't time to notice your good points.

"And, oh, the parades we have seen! The lives of adventure we have had! Our masters begged that we shouldn't be sold. They said we deserved to have our old age spent in peace and pleasure because we had always worked so hard, and had saved so many, many lives.
"Fred, when the news came that we would not be sold but that we would be brought to this wonderful farm and looked after all our days—well, our masters simply cried for joy.
"Fred, 'They're to be rewarded,' they shouted. 'They're to be rewarded.'
"Fred, so we are to live on this beautiful farm. We will always be looked after.
"Fred, our busy city lives are over, but, oh, how thankful I am, that in my old age I can think of the days on the police force when I could do so much good."
"Fred, and Kittle and Bennie neighed in happiness that this reward had been given to them.
"Fred, this is the essential evil of vice, that it debases man.—E. H. Chaplin.

How to Prepare Fried Chicken

Nothing is more tempting than a plate of Fried Chicken.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

When the subject of chicken, properly tried in true southern fashion, becomes sufficiently important for a mere man to voice his feelings and ideas on the matter in a lengthy magazine article, it is apparent that there must be one right way and many wrong ways of preparing this always delectable dish. The bureau of home economics of the United States Department of Agriculture was therefore asked for a satisfactory recipe, and here it is. The two points important to a good southern cook are "partly cover," so the chicken will cook through, and "drain on absorbent paper" so it will not be greasy. Experience must be depended on to some extent in the matter of cooking time, for even frying chickens differ in size and proportions, but the larger pieces will almost certainly take from 30 minutes to half an hour to become done. Keep the cooked pieces warm until all are ready, but do not let them get dry and hard in a fiery hot oven.

Select young, plump chickens. Remove pin feathers, wash the chicken, draw, and cut into pieces suitable for serving, and wipe dry. Sprinkle with salt and pepper and rub well with flour. In a heavy skillet, heat a generous quantity of well-flavored fat to just below the smoking point, put in the larger and thicker pieces of chicken so that each piece will be surrounded by the hot fat, partly cover, and watch closely to prevent scorching. Turn the chicken as soon as it becomes golden brown, reduce the heat, cook until tender, and drain on paper to absorb the excess fat. As the larger pieces are removed, add the smaller ones and all will be finished about the same time. For gravy, to each two tablespoonfuls of fat in the skillet allow two tablespoonfuls of flour; cook for a few minutes, stir constantly, add one and one-half cups of rich milk, and cook until thickened. Add more salt and pepper if needed, sprinkle finely chopped parsley over the gravy, and serve hot with the chicken.

Ant Aids Geologists The study of ant hills in the little Florida mountains in New Mexico led a party of geologists to a fluor-spar vein. The minerals, though occasionally located at the surface, are generally deeply buried. An examination of the ant hills disclosed bits of minerals that had been brought up to the surface of the earth by the busy little workers. In a region of igneous rocks in Idaho a recent field investigation showed the presence of quartz crystals in the ant hills. In this case the find aided in the identification and mapping of certain mineral deposits.

Some Nellie Maxwell Recipes

During the summer we begin with the luscious strawberry and serve it fresh with sugar and cream, over angel cake with cream, crushed over ice cream, and everyone likes the old-fashioned rich biscuit mixture for strawberry short-cake. The currant and cherry follow with raspberries and blackberries, so that one need not wait for fruit desserts from early in the spring until the delicious later fruits of autumn are ripe.
Blueberry Betty—Mix two cupfuls of soft bread crumbs (packed solidly) with one-half cupful of melted butter. Arrange in a buttered baking dish in alternate layers with two cupfuls of blueberries, sprinkle with two tablespoonfuls of sugar, a pinch of salt and a little lemon juice. Cover the top with crumbs and bake 20 minutes. Remove the cover and continue baking until the crumbs are brown. Serve with hot sweetened cream.
Orange Jelly With Strawberries—Prepare a ring mold filled with orange jelly to the depth of one-fourth of an inch. When set add strawberries cut into lengthwise slices over the jelly, adding more of the jelly to hold them in place; chill, repeat until the mold is filled. Chill, unmold on a serving platter and surround with billows of sweetened whipped cream flavored with orange. Fill the center with whole berries dusted with sugar.

Raspberry Charlotte Russe—Soak two tablespoonfuls of gelatin in one-third of a cupful of cold water, dissolve over hot water, cool slightly and add to one and one-half cupfuls of strained raspberry pulp and the juice, two-thirds of a cupful of sugar, one teaspoonful of orange extract. Set the dish in a bowl of chipped ice and stir constantly until the mixture begins to thicken, then fold in one and one-half cupfuls of heavy cream whipped until stiff. Turn into individual molds lined with thin slices of sponge cake. Chill and serve.
Foamy Sauce—Cream one-half cupful of powdered sugar gradually, then add one egg well beaten and two tablespoonfuls of any fruit juice—orange, pineapple, or of the blackberry will be just the one for the above recipe.
Cocktails are always a refreshing beginner for a luncheon or dinner. During the warm weather the mignon at various kinds make especially attractive cocktails or fruit salads. Scoop out the balls of melon using a small french potato cutter; serve with any sauce that appeals to the taste. A lemon syrup over muskmelon is well liked as is a ginger syrup, using some of the preserved ginger as a garnish.
Red Raspberry Whip—Set a bowl into a pan of cracked ice. Into the bowl put one and one-half cupfuls of ripe berries, one cupful of powdered sugar and the white of an egg. Beat with a wire egg beater until the mixture holds its shape. Pile lightly on a fancy glass serving dish and surround with fresh macarons. Serve with a chilled boiled custard.

Junket in Cups—Heat a pint of milk until luke warm, add one-fourth of a cupful of sugar and a junket tablet, crushed and added to a tablespoonful of water. Flavor with one teaspoonful of vanilla. Turn into sherbet glasses and let stand in a warm place until set. Then chill. When ready to serve top each portion with a raspberry sauce.
Frozen Plum Pudding—Melt three squares of chocolate over hot water, add one-fourth cupful of sugar and one-fourth cupful of boiling water, stir and cook until smooth and glossy. Scald one quart of milk, one cupful each of heavy cream and one cupful of sugar in a double boiler. Add the chocolate mixture and a tablespoonful of vanilla, one junket tablet dissolved in one tablespoonful of cold water. Set the mixture in a warm place until it jellies. Add one-half pound of mixed fruits soaked over night in a thin syrup to cover, seeded raisins, shredded candied cherries, candied pineapple and shredded citron. Drain and pack in a buttered mold lined with lady fingers, cover and let stand in equal measure of ice and salt.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Senate Begins Battle Over London Naval Treaty—"The Papers" Asked.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD
CALLED in special session by President Hoover, the senate last week began consideration of the London naval treaty. Only 58 members—nine more than a quorum—answered the roll call the first day. During the week some more returned to the National Capital, while several others departed on various missions.

A message from the President opened the proceedings. He urged ratification of the treaty, which he explained and defended at considerable length. Mr. Hoover said that on January 1 last the ratios of the three naval powers in ships actually built were: The United States, 100; Great Britain, 113, and Japan, 65, while under the treaty they will be: United States, 100; Great Britain, 102.4, and Japan, 63.6.

With regard to the criticism that the American delegation accepted an agreement providing three fewer eight inch gun cruisers than our navy general board had declared the irreducible minimum, the President said that this objection "revolves around less than 3 per cent of our whole fleet." And the question as to this 3 per cent of tonnage, he added, is whether "30,000 tons of ships armed with eight inch guns are better than 28,000 tons armed with a 6 inch gun," a question upon which "our high naval authorities are divided."

"Every solitary fact which affects judgment upon the treaty is known," said the President in conclusion, "and the document itself comprises the sole obligation of the United States. If we fall now the world will be again plunged backward from its progress toward peace."

THE administration forces continued confident that the pact would be ratified, but they were given much concern by the determined attempt to have the President transmit to the senate the suppressed documents which he had declined to give up. Senator McKellar of Tennessee led this fight and was supported not only by other opponents of the treaty but also by some who had announced their intention of voting for ratification.

"The demand we are making is a demand of right on the part of the equal of the Executive in treaty making," said Senator McKellar, "and consequently cannot be incompatible with the public interest."

On the other hand, Senator Reed of Pennsylvania, one of the delegates to London, who has had access to the secret documents, more than intimated that they contain picturesque animadversions by Ambassador Charles G. Dawes upon Prime Minister MacDonald and other British statesmen, the disclosure of which would necessitate recall of the ambassador and otherwise play havoc with Anglo-American relations.

Senator Robinson of Arkansas, another delegate, hinted the same thing, saying: "Some of these messages contain references to other governments which if disclosed might make us ridiculous. Such resentments might be created in other countries that the treaty would not be ratified by them."

Finally a modified resolution was adopted by a vote of 53 to 4 requesting the President to submit to the senate all documents bearing on the treaty, "if not incompatible with the public interest" to do so. It also asked the President to make recommendations as to their use.

GOVERNMENT activities for the relief of veterans of all wars are now co-ordinated. Under a law enacted by congress just before it adjourned, the President issued an executive order which provides for the grouping of the veterans bureau, which has been an independent agency handling only matters connected with veterans of the World war, the pension bureau, which has been under the Interior department and has handled pensions for veterans of the Civil, Spanish and earlier wars, and the national home for disabled volunteer soldiers which has been under the War department, under a new veterans administration. The President designated Brig. Gen. Frank T. Hines, for several years director of the veterans bureau, as veterans administrator in charge of the new organization at a salary of $12,000. The three agencies which are coordinated will retain their separate identities within the veterans administration and a new director will be appointed for the veterans bureau. Present officials of the pension bureau and of the soldiers home will retain their positions.

BUSINESS may not be appreciably better to most Americans, and there are still a great many on the unemployed lists, but men and agencies that ought to know say the sky is clearing. For instance, the American Bankers' Association Journal asserts that pessimism has been overcome and that the very conditions in trade and industry that have caused most complaint are opening the way for a definite recovery later in the year.

"A study of the history of previous comparable periods of recession indicates that a cycle of improvement is imminent," the journal says. "There is no doubt that the curtailment of production in the major industries has been much greater than the falling off in consumption on the part of the public. This has inevitably led to a marked reduction in the inventories of finished goods all along the line from manufacturer to retailer. Ethelbert Stewart, commissioner of labor statistics, gives out figures and facts that show the business depression has in a way worked to the benefit of the wage earner sure of his job and of the person who has a fixed income.

The wholesale price level of all commodities in May was the lowest it has been since September, 1916. The wholesale purchasing power of the 1926 dollar for all commodities was $1.12 in May. It is greater today. The average cost of living in 32 cities has dropped 20.8 per cent in eight years.

IN THE hard wheat belt many of the farmers are not taking kindly to the efforts of the farm board to bring about reduction of wheat acreage and change to other crops. When the board's reduction mission went to Hays, Kan., in furtherance of its purpose, Gov. Clyde M. Reed of the Sanflower state appeared as a spokesman for the opponents of the plan, which he said was unfair to the hard wheat belt where conditions prevented the growing of other crops to advantage. Charging that present wheat prices are not justified by world conditions, he called upon the farm board to exercise the powers granted it by the agricultural marketing act to protect the wheat farmer.

Replying to Governor Reed's insinuation of farm board "inaction," Chairman Legge said that wheat "already had received in the board's stabilization operations twice its proportionate share" of the $500,000,000 relief fund.

STATISTICS prepared by the old dry bureau under Doran show that prohibition enforcement during its last fiscal year under the Treasury department resulted in the arrest of 68,186 persons and the seizure of 24,373 stills. The figures showed an increase of approximately 4,000 in the number of stills seized. The figures included the number of arrests and seizures for 11 months of the year and estimated arrests and seizures for June.

MRS. HOOVER returned to the White House from the Rapidan River lodge last week greatly improved in health by her weeks in the seclusion of the camp. However, though she seemed to have recovered from the effects of her fall in the Executive mansion more than three months ago, it was said in Washington she planned to go back soon to the camp and remain there most of July. Consideration for Mrs. Hoover's health, it is reported, has caused the President to halt the arrangements for his projected trip through the West, and indeed it may be abandoned altogether in favor of a quiet stay at some place on the New England coast. The home of John Hays Hammond at Gloucester, Mass., has been suggested. It is known that some of the Republican party leaders have advised Mr. Hoover not to make the western trip.

He had been in constant radio communication with patrol boats and one of them was on hand to rescue the flyers and the mail.

CHICAGO paid warm tribute Friday to Rear Admiral Byrd, who was the guest of the Press club, of which he is a member. After a parade and a luncheon at the Press club, there was a huge reception and banquet at the Stevens hotel in which many of the city's leading organizations cooperated. Governor Emmerson welcomed the intrepid explorer on behalf of the state of Illinois.

COMPLETED census tabulations give the population of New York city as 6,935,024, an increase of 1,334,056 since 1920. Issuance of these figures revive the dispute as to the biggest city in the world. London continues to claim the title, although London proper has only 4,605,000 inhabitants. "Greater London," including the surrounding communities that are ruled by the metropolitan police, has a total population of about 7,915,000.

JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER celebrated his ninety-first birthday quietly at Pocantico, the only variation from his usual daily routine being a small party in the evening. The oil magnate's only public expression indicated his great satisfaction in the kind feeling for him displayed by everybody everywhere. Among the messages he received was one from Mother Jones, formerly his fiercest foe, offering her warm congratulations and best wishes.

NO SOONER had the French troops left the Rhineland than the so-called Fascists of Germany broke loose with a series of outrageous attacks on the former separatists there and in the Palatinate and on all who were known to have been friendly to the troops of occupation. Men and women were assaulted and their homes and shops wrecked, despite the efforts of the police. Of course the German government could not be considered directly responsible for the disturbances, but the French ambassador to Berlin discussed with Foreign Minister Curtius measures to suppress the revengeful fury of the German radicals.

GREAT BRITAIN'S administration of her mandate in Palestine is severely criticized in a report of the League of Nations mandate commission which investigated the riots in the Holy Land. The methods of the British are called dilatory and slack and they are said not to have carried out their obligations.

MEMBERS of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's family are in daily expectation of word from him from the spirit world, for that famous writer and spiritualist departed this life at his home in Sussex. The creator of Sherlock Holmes left with Lady Doyle his finger prints and a secret code word so that she and their son Adrian may guard against imposters.

Another noted foreigner who died last week was Cardinal Vanutelli, dean of the sacred college. Maj. Gen. W. C. Neville, commandant of the marine corps, died after an illness of several months. He served with distinction in the Spanish war, the Boxer rebellion, at Vera Cruz and in the World war.

Would Seem to Qualify as Osculatory Expert

Mayor Mackey may not look like Romeo's technique seem simple. His honor was addressing a luncheon to Burton W. Marsh, new city traffic engineer, the other day, and in his discourse told of a recent trip by air to Washington. "There were nine young women in the same plane with me," the mayor said, "and they all seemed to be enjoying my company, when I noticed that one pink-faced young thing in the back of the plane had her eyes shut. She seemed to be dreaming. Mechanically, I stepped up to her and kissed her fair cheek. "O my!" she breathed, still with her eyes shut. "I didn't know I was so near Heaven!" — Philadelphia Record.

Bearded Indians
Most Indians would have a slight to moderate growth of beard and mustache if they allowed the hair to grow. Beards are not wholly unknown among them. Some of the Mexican Indians have full beards. The Guarayos of Bolivia wear long straight beards and Cashibas of the upper Ucayli are bearded.

Restless Children

Children will fret, often for no apparent reason. But there's always one sure way to comfort a restless, fretful child, Castoria! Harmless as the recipe on the wrapper, mild and bland as it tastes. But its gentle action soothes a youngster more surely than some powerful medicine that is meant for the stronger systems of adults. That's the beauty of this special children's remedy! It may be given the tiniest infant—as often as there is any need. In cases of colic, diarrhea, or similar disturbance, it is invaluable. But it has everyday uses all mothers should understand. A coated tongue calls for a few drops to ward off constipation; so does any suggestion of bad breath. Whenever children don't eat well, don't rest well, or have any little upset—this pure vegetable preparation is usually all that's needed to set everything to rights. Genuine Castoria has Chas. H. Fletcher's signature on the wrapper. Doctors prescribe it.

BLACK FLAG LIQUID

THIS LIQUID KILLS FLIES and MOSQUITOES like magic

because "IT PENETRATES"

Black Flag Liquid—deadliest insect-killer made—penetrates. It penetrates the tiny breathing tubes of flies, mosquitoes, roaches, moths, ants, bedbugs, fleas, and kills them quicker. Yet always costs less than other well-known brands. Money back if not satisfied.

They first visited Pike's Peak and on to Denver, where they spent three days with Mrs. Gumm's son, Dean, after which they visited the grave of Buffalo Bill. Their next visit to a scene of interest was at Yellowstone National Park and then to the state of Idaho, where they had a pleasant visit with Mr. and Mrs. Weber, former residents of Lincoln County. They then launched into the state of Utah, visiting Ogden and Salt Lake City. Coming into their home state, they made Gallup and Shiprock, where at the last named place, they paid a visit to Project Engineer and Mrs. T. G. Brown. Many places of interest along the route were visited and while at some points they encountered bad roads, they experienced no troubles aside from two tire punctures in the trip of over 3,000 miles, but they rode in a dependable Buick.
