Timely Comment on the Political Situation at Santa Fe

Santa Fe, Feb. 4.—The administration of Governor Arthur Seligman is ending its first month and the bi-partisan legislature its third week. To say that some thousands of Democrats are dissatisfied, would be putting it mildly. The pie-counter brigade is a large one, as it is of any party when it comes into power; but the pie dispensed by the government has been scanty and the frosting meagre. Furthermore, the outlook for speedy relief of the hunger, is not bright.

Governor Seligman recently issued an order that no person was to be employed by the highway department without his personal and written approval. To keep the public roads passable in comfort, requires, at all times, from 1,300 to 1,500 employees. In the rainy season, the number may reach 2,000. To take on such a task as no other governor in any state has ever assumed, can be explained only on one of two grounds. Either it is Governor Seligman's purpose to have present employees replaced very slowly, or he plans to build up a personal political machine from the grass roots. Each day-laborer or other employee will know that his position comes directly from the governor and that he is independent of the district engineer under whom he is supposed to work.

Much comment was heard from Democrats when the old highway board headed by Charles Springer, superintendent the "letting," Wednesday, Jan. 28. It was the largest letting of road contracts ever held in the state, aggregating about $900,000, and made by a Republican highway commission which was made the center of Democratic attack during last year's political campaign. It was even said that if Mr. Springer, who had two more years of his term to serve, did not resign, he would be removed by court action. He tendered his resignation, but his resignation has not been accepted, neither has that of Mr. W. C. Davidson, the highway engineer, who was also under fire. Mr. Springer was the "Raw-Head-and-Bloody-Bones" of the Seligman campaign. But it is now discovered that he was not so bad after all. It is even rumored by disgusted Democrats, that the Republican board and Mr. Davidson are to remain in control until October, when the emergency federal aid funds will have been spent.

Whether a new board shall be named or not, it is quite evident that Governor Seligman believes with campaign exigencies past, it is better to trust men like Mr. Springer than to please his Democratic supporters. Also, there is a growing belief, which may be shown unfounded, that the governor will not send the names of his appointees to the senate for confirmation, although such a course would be in direct violation of the Constitution of the State of New Mexico. Should he not do so, it is quite possible that the senate may refuse to make appropriations for such offices. Should such a contingency arise, the appropriations would be the same as provided by the legislature of 1929, and Governor Seligman's promise of reducing taxes would pass into discard.

The bill drawn by Judge R. H. Hanna for re-districting the State, is having hard sledding. So far, all efforts to secure a majority for it in the Democratic house of representatives have been unavailing. Judge Hanna, himself, appeared before the caucus of the house Democratic members, but failed to get a majority for his bill. For example, De Baca county refuses to be detached from Roosevelt and attached to Guadalupe. Other Democratic lawmakers were equally emphatic against their proposed detachments and attachments. Face to face with the problem, they are beginning to be of the opinion that the present apportionment is not half bad and that something else might be quite bad.

Should this re-apportionment bill fail, the public press quotes Governor Seligman as favoring an amendment to the Constitution to provide for one, and only one senator from each county. It is easy to see that the larger counties would defeat such an amendment. Bernalillo county, with its population of 45,380, would hardly favor granting equal representation in the senate to De Baca county with its population of 2,890. Under the governor's plan, four counties with an aggregate population of 14,605, would have the same strength in the senate as the counties of Bernalillo, Dona Ana, Colfax and San Miguel, with an aggregate population of 122,454.

RADIO RUBE'S RAMBLINGS

Howdy, folks, well here I am again. Let's see if my journalistic propensities and proclivities (doesn't that look swell in print) are functioning correctly.

There is a new radio station at Juarez. The station is 5,000 watt power, and seems to come well at times. Everyone knows where Paw Henderson's station is on the dial—it is about on the same wave length that Henderson's station. Whenever old Paw isn't on the air with his everlasting complaining, belly-aching, and cussing, the Juarez station comes in fairly well.

Bill Langston, of OddFellow fame says — The only fault he finds with the radio, is that you can't ask questions to it; can't cuss anybody out. Outside of this, Bill reports the radio O. K.

During a "Jazz vs. Classics" program — Mr. Average Citizen, "Does your orchestra play Offenbach?" Answer — "Yes, Beethoven, and often, Bach."

There is a special psychologist, hope it is spelled right, that gives talks in answer to various questions put to him about 8 o'clock over the new Mexican station at Reynosa, Mexico. Every question must be accompanied by a check or money order for $1 which gives you the chance to ask one question. The mind reader doesn't guarantee his answers to be truthful, so I'll keep my one buck.

Tom DuBois

of Corona was a Carrizozo business visitor the latter part of the week.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Ziegler left Wednesday for El Paso, to bring their daughter, Mrs. Chas. Coplin and two children to Carrizozo, where they will visit the home folks for a short while.

Henry Lutz

Chairman of the Board of County Commissioners, is spending the week with his son, Charles Henry Lutz, Postmaster at Roswell. During the absence of Mr. Lutz, Chas. Smith is acting as Night Marshal.

The Costume Display

given by the Public Welfare Department of the Carrizozo Woman's Club last Saturday night at the High School Auditorium, was a success both from a financial and social standpoint. The costumes were rich and perfectly displayed by local models. Much credit is due Mrs. J. B. French, chairman of the department, for the success of the undertaking.

Attention, Masons!

There will be a Special Communication of Carrizozo Lodge No. 41, A. F. & A. M., on Saturday night, Feb. 7, for the purpose of conferring the Entered Apprentice Degree.

All Master Masons are cordially invited.

Remarkable Report on the Prohibition Problem Made by the Wickersham Commission—J. A. Farrell Says Prosperity Is Coming Back.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

NEITHER dry nor wet can derive any whoe-hearted satisfaction from the report of the Wickersham law enforcement commission, which was handed to President Hoover and by him transmitted to congress. Nor is it conceivable that the commission itself can have any great pride in the bulky document. The one wholly honest member appears to be Monte Lemann of New Orleans, who refused to sign the majority report. The other ten attached their names to it and gave out statements showing that no one of them agreed with its findings in their entirety.

This majority report is against repeal of the Eighteenth amendment, and admitting that prohibition has not been enforced or observed, recommends that it be given further trial, with an enlarged force of agents. Removal of the restrictions on the prescription of medicinal liquor by physicians is advised. If the dry amendment is to be revised at all, the commission is agreed on certain phraseology which would empower congress to deal with the liquor traffic as it sees fit. Modification of the Volstead act so as to permit the manufacture and sale of light wines and beer is opposed.

In a separate report the plan for revision giving congress the power to regulate or prohibit the manufacture and sale of liquor was set forth in detail by Henry W. Anderson of Virginia, and it was signed by Commissioners Anderson, Kenyon, Leach, Pound, McCormick and Mackintosh. Statements of the individual commissioners appended to the general report showed that of the eleven members, six consider it hopeless to expect that prohibition can be made to prohibit. Two of these six—former Secretary of War Newton D. Baker of Ohio and Prof. Monte M. Lemann of Tulane university, La.—advocate repeal of the Eighteenth amendment. The other four of these six—Mr. Anderson, Adm. L. Comstock, president of Radcliffe college; Frank J. Leach of Chicago, and Dean Roscoe Pound of Harvard law school—favor immediate revision of the Eighteenth amendment to confer the power of regulation on congress.

Five of the members—Chairman George W. Wickersham, United States Judge William S. Kenyon, Paul J. McCormick and William I. Grubb, and former Chief Justice K. M. Mackintosh, of the Washington Supreme court stood out for a further trial. Judges Kenyon, Mackintosh and McCormick said that if the further experiment failed they would favor adoption of the Anderson plan of national regulation of liquor.

In transmitting the report to congress, President Hoover said he was in accord with its stand against repeal of the dry amendment, and added: "I do, however, see serious objections to, and therefore must not be understood as recommending the commission's proposed revision of the Eighteenth amendment which is suggested by them for possible consideration at some future time if the continued effort at enforcement should not prove successful."

Senator John J. Blaine of Wisconsin was quick to introduce a modification amendment on the general lines of the plan offered by Commissioner Anderson but confining congressional power to regulation of liquor traffic. Like the Anderson scheme, it would permit each state to decide whether it desires prohibition or a government-controlled liquor supply.

STANDING by his conviction that the funds of the Red Cross should be obtained by private subscription, President Hoover has named a committee of leading citizens to push the drive for $10,000,000 for the relief of the drought sufferers. Calvin Coolidge, his predecessor, has accepted the honorary chairmanship of this body, and Al Smith, his opponent in 1923, is a vice president, as are John W. Davis, Democratic candidate for the presidency in 1934; Gen. John J. Pershing, and Abel Davis of Chicago. John Barton Payne, head of the Red Cross, is the active chairman of the committee.

In a letter to those invited to serve on the committee the President said that "it is essential that we should maintain the sound American tradition and spirit of voluntary aid in such emergency and should not undertake that spirit which has made our Red Cross the outstanding guardian of our people in time of disaster. The American way of meeting such a relief problem has been through voluntary effort and for many years this effort has been centered in the American Red Cross, created by the people themselves to act in just such emergencies."

OBSTRUCTIONIST tactics in the senate delayed the Interior department bill, to which had been appended the $25,000,000 appropriation for the Red Cross for food but the measure was passed. The senate also had further relief plans. The agriculture committee approved a measure to donate 20,000,000 bushels of farm board wheat to feed the hungry, the cost of the grain to be credited to the board's revolving fund; and the appropriation committee added to a pending deficiency bill $20,000,000 for immediate public improvements.

Wet members of the house engaged in a billbuster against prohibition enforcement appropriations, attacking especially funds for employment of informers, for purchase of liquor evidence and for tapping the telephone wires of suspected law violators.

ELIHU ROOT appeared before the senate foreign relations committee and eloquently defended the protocol for American adherence to the World court which he negotiated. His arguments were forcible and his replies to questions seemed adequate, but his address did not appear to have much effect on Senators Borah, Moses and Johnson, members of the committee and opponents of adherence even with the senate's reservations.

BUSINESS in the United States is now on the upgrade, the peak of the financial depression was passed before the beginning of the year, and the prospects for a restored industrial prosperity are good. Such, at least, is the opinion of James A. Farrell, president of the United States Steel corporation as expressed in an address to the National Canners and the National Wholesale Grocers associations in joint convention in Chicago. He deprecated the suggestions of revision of inter-allied war debts as a measure of relief, and urged that we do the things that we can. "Let us cut down the volume of undigested talk that rarely helps but always hampers," he said.

Granting that unemployment is considerable and that the national income has been reduced, the steel magnate contended it was essential for prosperity to maintain the purchasing power of the working classes, adding: "It is my deliberate judgment that a general reduction of wages in this country would set back the impending recovery by at least two years."

The agricultural situation Mr. Farrell described as a most serious one. But, he said, no lasting gain will be made for agriculture by resort to "quick nostrums and unsound economics."

PRICES of bread, sugar and other foodstuffs are being investigated, on order of the senate, by an agricultural subcommittee of which Senator Arthur Capper of Kansas is chairman. Senators Wagner of New York and Brookhart of Iowa who were the authors of the resolution calling for the inquiry, first appeared before the committee and explained their views and their reasons for thinking current prices to be excessive.

Afterwards representatives of the big bread baking companies and other tradesmen were called in to tell the facts as they see them and to justify, if they could, the maintenance of present prices of bread in view of the low price of wheat.

REPRESENTATIVE FISH'S house committee on communal activities has reported, recommending strengthening the laws which would enable the authorities to curb those activities in the United States. The Russian Soviet press heaps ridicule on the report, declaring it is impudent and insolent and that it indicates the "fright of the bourgeoisie" that the Soviet republic will succeed in its industrialization plan.

Soviet officials announce that Russia is about to resume the dumping of grain on the world markets, her supply largely exceeding the needs of the Russian people.

KEEP away from Las Vegas, is the warning to jobless workers who seek employment on the Boulder dam project given out by Labor, the official organ of railroad labor organizations. The paper says:

"Despite the fact that contracts on the $105,000,000 government project have not been awarded, Las Vegas has been flooded with thousands of jobless and destitute men. Hundreds of these unfortunate job seekers were deceived by roseate reports circulated by unscrupulous employment agencies. In the opinion of Francis I. Jones, general director of the United States employment service—

"Capt. Robert M. Griffin of the Salvation army at Las Vegas recently declared that Las Vegas has the longest bread line in the United States, according to population. More than 7,000 jobless workers were given aid by the Salvation army in one month, Captain Griffin reports."

The first contracts for Boulder dam will not be awarded until March and men who insist on going there in search of employment are advised by the United States employment service to be prepared to take care of themselves for at least four months.

PACIFISTS and advocates of adequate national defense came together in Washington in the sixth national conference on the cause and cure of war. The big meeting was attended by more than 600 delegates from 44 states, and was held under the auspices of 11 national women's organizations whose aim in this respect is to complete the demobilization of what they call "the war machine." One of the speakers on the program was Rear Admiral Mark Bristol, chairman of the executive committee of the navy general board; and his arguments for defense were ably seconded by Admiral William V. Pratt, chief of naval operations and Edward P. Warner, former assistant secretary of the navy in charge of aeronautics. Among the pacifist speakers were Miss Jane Addams of the International League for Peace and Freedom, and Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt.

DISPATCHES from Geneva say that the central opium board of the League of Nations was compelled, by objections from representatives of France and Yugoslavia, to delete from its report caustic criticism of the "abnormal" narcotics consumption in Japan and France, the inference being that drugs supposedly for medical purposes had escaped from regular channels and been made available to the illicit dope dealers. The expurgated report read to the league council merely mentioned "certain countries," but at the same time unfolded to the council the fact that seizures of opium illicitly transported were now in tons where heretofore they had been in junces.

The league commission to study Briand's United States of Europe scheme decided, after a warm debate, to invite Russia, Turkey and Iceland to participate in the discussions of the economic phases of the plan when it is taken up again probably next May.

PAUL VON HINDENBURG, president of the German republic, was the chief figure in the enthusiastic celebration of the sixtieth anniversary of German unity; and the eighty-three-year-old warrior seemed almost as vigorous as he must have been on January 18, 1871.

The ceremonies in Berlin opened with a solemn assembly of all members of the government in the Reichstag where Chancellor Brüning made an appeal for mutual understanding and repeated Bismarck's pledge that the nation would seek wealth through peace, not war. Then President von Hindenburg attended a reunion in the Berlin Sportplatz where about 12,000 former officers and soldiers gathered.

HAVING adopted a skeletonized plan for giving India dominion status, the round table conference in London adjourned with most of the delegates satisfied. However, the Gandhi adherents in India are not at all pleased with the scheme and immediately began attacking it in various ways. National congress newspapers denounce it as a system of camouflaged independence designed to provide safeguards for Great Britain.

BAREHEADED and wearing ordinary street clothes, Col. Charles A. Lindbergh went to a gathering of distinguished officials and diplomats in Washington and received from the hands of Ambassador Claudel of France the cross of commander of the Legion of Honor.

In presenting the cross, Ambassador Claudel said the westward flight of Coets and Bellone last September was a success largely because Lindbergh had mapped the trans-Atlantic course. It was in recognition of this service to the two Frenchmen as well as his own record making flight that the medal was awarded, he said.

Among those at the presentation were Secretary Adams, Senator Murray, Lindbergh's father-in-law, and Chairman Wickersham of the law enforcement commission.

The Boyhood of Famous Americans

John J. Raskob

The boys in Lockport, N. Y., snickered, back in 1900, when they heard that John J. Raskob had put a price of $1,000 a year on his services as a stenographer and secretary. Why that, as they figured it out, was more than $93 a month. Young professional men were lucky to be making as much money in Lockport in those days.

If no man is a prophet in his own country neither is the youngster, with whom we play as a lad, generally conceded to have money making traits or capabilities above our own. That was the case in Lockport when it became known that Johnny Raskob had written to the owner of an Ohio city street railway company for a job as secretary, estimating his value at a figure that seemed absurd to those with whom he had been raised.

But John Raskob got the job and at his own price. The man who hired him was Pierre S. Du Pont, then owner of the traction system in Lorain, Ohio. Lockport residents thought that the youth was lucky in landing such a plum.

Before he left Lockport young Raskob had been making $30 a month. He had asked for a raise to $10 a week. When this was refused he decided that his talents were not appreciated. He made up his mind to seek fields in which he would receive better rewards.

So he wrote to a friend, a young draughtsman, Sterling H. Bunnell by name, asking him if there was any opening for him in Lorain. He received a reply that Pierre S. Du Pont was seeking the right sort of a young man to act as his secretary and aid in the street railway business.

When John Raskob told his friends that he had applied for the job and had asked for a salary of $1,000 a year they thought at first that he was fooling. When they were convinced by the earnest young man that he actually had asked for such pay they were certain that he wouldn't get a reply even. But they were wrong and John Raskob was right. He invariably has been on financial matters ever since.

The boy who surprised his Lockport companions in the matter of getting such a big salary was born in that up-state New York city in 1870. His father, a solid and substantial citizen, was in the tobacco business.

John was an average student in school. His quick smile and pleasant manner made him popular. He early showed a liking for business and an aptitude for figures. His father died when John was in high school. Mrs. Raskob was left with four children.

The future chairman of the finance committee of General Motors didn't try to complete his education by working in his spare time. He decided that the sooner he got a real job the better. He realized that he needed special equipment to get ahead in the business world.

He left high school and took a commercial course in stenography and bookkeeping. He buckled down to his studies and soon qualified to take dictation and to keep a set of books. He got a job at $5 a week. That was considered fair wages for a beginner in Lockport in those days.

After six months he asked for an increase to $7.50 a week. His employer agreed to give it to him, but it was some months before the raise materialized. Following two years' work during which he became an expert stenographer, an excellent typist and a first class bookkeeper, he asked for $10 a week. His employer didn't think the youngster was worth such wages to him.

That was the turning point in John Raskob's life. He wrote to Pierre Du Pont and went to work for him in 1900. The next year he represented his employer as treasurer of a street car line in Dallas, Texas. His salary had been raised to $3,000 a year, proving to skeptical Lockport friends that he hadn't thought too well of his earning capacity after all.

He went to Wilmington, Del., in 1902, as assistant treasurer of the E. I. Du Pont de Nemours company. Later he became treasurer and then vice president of the big chemical concern. Mr. Du Pont joined him in buying General Motors stock and John Raskob soon became the directing financial genius of that vast corporation and one of the country's outstanding business leaders.

Nordic and Latins By Nordic nations is meant the northern nations, the Norse people, such as those of Norway, Sweden and Denmark. Of course, there are so purely Latin peoples, but the nations containing a large Latin element in blood, law, and language are the Italians, the Spanish and the French. These are the leading Latin nations, but in fact they are of mixed blood, like the English speaking people. There is considerable intermarriage between northern and Latin peoples but it cannot be said to be common.

That there has been considerable work in dairying done in New Mexico during the past year is shown by the annual report of E. E. Anderson, extension dairy specialist. The chief effort of the dairy work has been directed toward increased efficiency in production by disposing of cows that are unprofitable and eliminating their contribution to the surplus of dairy products. As a basis for culling herds, an effort has been made to encourage more testing. Mail order testing associations in five counties tested 934 cows.

The special election called by the Holbrook Town Council, to determine whether or not the residents of Holbrook favored the granting of a franchise to the Pacific Public Service Company, a subsidiary of the Standard Oil Company of California, for the installation and operation of a butane gas plant in Holbrook, was called off, following receipt of a telegram from W. M. Hines, representative of the company, at whose request the election was called. In the telegram, Mr. Hines advised the council that his company had withdrawn from Arizona and therefore did not desire a franchise.

Healthiest

"Arthur had a bad case of measles," says Mrs. Clara Gullam, 4137 Bowdoin St., Des Moines, Iowa. "He was having a hard time until I gave him California Fig Syrup. It regulated his bowels, seemed to give him new strength and energy."

"I have since used it for all his colds or 'upsets,' and it has helped make him the healthiest boy I know." For over fifty years, mothers have praised California Fig Syrup. Doctors advise its use when children are bilious, headachy, constipated; and to keep bowels open during colds or upsets. Every child loves its rich, fruity flavor. It is mild in action.

Look for the name California when buying. That marks the genuine.

Manuel himself was usually inclined to agree with this verdict. He did not worry about the morrow. Manana was another day and would take care of itself. But just now he was somewhat disturbed. He was a law-abiding peaceful citizen who liked to work in harmony with the leading Americans in the county. The reappearance of Bob Quantrell made a shadow on the sunny outlook. The young outlaw's popularity was great among the countrymen of Gomez. A dozen times Quantrell had stolen cows or horses, driven them far, and made a present of them to the poor natives who sheltered him. His name was becoming a legend among the poor. Gomez could not, without sacrificing his position as leader, turn his back on the bandit.

Moreover, the relation of Quantrell to his daughter Dolores complicated the situation. The young people were in love with each other, and he knew that there could be no happiness for the girl with such a man.

After Quantrell's escape from the dance hall Gomez reproached Dolores for having hindered the sheriff. It had been neither wise nor ladylike, he told her. The girl's answer ignored argument, went through his protests to the quintessential fact.

"A love him," her low, sweet voice said in liquid Spanish, and against that emotional reaction her father's logic beat in vain.

The natives buzzed like excited bees. Their sympathies were all with the wild young scamp wanted by the law. He must be helped to escape.

Gomez knew he was expected to assist Quantrell. His prestige was at stake. As soon as he had got his wife and daughter home he set out to find Quantrell and to arrange for horses upon which he and his men could make their getaway. The outlaws must be hidden until such time as mounts could be gathered for them and brought to the cabin where they were keeping under cover.

As Gomez moved down the walk in front of his house two men rose from the shadow of a pine tree where they had been lying and confronted him.

"Just a moment," one of them said. The speaker was O'Hara.

Gomez made the most of his English. "You weesh to see me?"

"I want you to take me to the place where Bob Quantrell is hidden."

The Mexican shrugged his shoulders and shook his head. To simulate ignorance of English is an old Mexican trick. O'Hara repeated what he had to say in the best Spanish he could muster.

"But senor, I do not know," Gomez fell back on his own tongue and poured out a flood of protest. Was he not a good citizen? Did he not pay taxes to establish law and order? Had he not campaigned for the election of Senor O'Hara?

Worrall murmured a suggestion to his friend. "No luck, Garrett. You're wastin' yore time. Manuel won't spill a thing."

A quick light step sounded on the hard-packed snow.

The sheriff caught at Gomez' arm, whispered an imperative in his ear, and drew him back into the shadows.

They waited, listening. The crunching of the boots on snow had ceased. Presently they could hear someone wading through the drifts in the orchard. Whoever he was, the man was moving warily. More than once he stopped, as though to make sure he was not walking into a trap. He circled the house toward the rear.

O'Hara gave quick directions to his deputy and vanished. He ran along the walk and around the house in the opposite direction to that taken by the prowler. At the back corner, close to the adobe wall, he once more stopped to listen. Some one, not ten feet from him, was whistling to attract attention. It was the low, shrill whistle of a man who wants only one person to hear.

To the sheriff there flashed a plan. He remembered Pankey's lameness and his stutter.

"B-b-bob," he called, and limped around the corner of the house.

"B-b-bob, the s-s-sheriff."

Quantrell's six-shooter seemed to leap to his hip as he crouched like a cornered wolf. It was the first instinctive reaction to the surprise of the other's presence.

The point of the revolver dropped. "What about him?" the outlaw snapped.

"D-d-delgado's s-s-stable."

"Spit it out, man!" Quantrell's voice showed irritation.

O'Hara had been moving forward as he struggled with speech until he was close enough to touch the other. Not before he plunged at Quantrell did the latter realize his mistake. A startled oath leaped from the killer's lips as he jerked up his six-shooter.

He was too late. O'Hara's fingers closed on his wrist. An arm locked around his body. His feet were awing into the air and he was flung heavily to the ground, the sheriff's weight pinning him down.

Quantrell struggled furiously. He tried to free the hand with the revolver. He thrashed to and fro, using hands and feet as levers to throw off the incubus clamped to him.

Almost he succeeded. In the struggle the revolver went off, ringing a wild shot skyward. O'Hara was not a large man, but he had fifteen pounds' advantage of his opponent, and he needed every ounce of it to keep the outlaw's right arm extended from the body that tossed itself about so violently. The sheriff knew that if for one instant Quantrell could flex the muscles of that arm a bullet would crash into his brain. To keep his place astride of that writhing torso was like riding a bucking bronco. The officer clamped his knees and spread his feet to give him more purchase. He burrowed his face into the sloping neck of his foe and with all his strength clung to the wrist he had gripped.

The man underneath of a sudden relaxed, ceased his struggles. O'Hara became aware that some one had intervened. Siney fingers gripped the outlaw's throat.

A voice said, "I've got the gun, Garrett."

Steve Worrall had heard the shot and had arrived in time to decide the issue. A bony man of great strength, the deputy soon had Quantrell helpless. He held him trussed while O'Hara fastened handcuffs to the prisoner's wrists.

Now that he knew it to be useless Quantrell made no further effort to resist. The fury of fight had apparently gone out of him. He was still panting from his exertions, still swallowing to get breath through the throat Worrall had manhandled, but when he could speak there was no rancor in his voice, rather a note of ironic derision.

"Better—iron my legs—too," he gasped.

"If necessary I shall," O'Hara answered. "Now I've got you I mean to keep you."

"How long, fellow? Those may be yore notions. Different here. I'm with you only for a short visit."

O'Hara did not bandy words with him. "Where had we better keep him?" he asked the deputy.

Worrall considered. The jail would not hold a child. It was built of soft adobe, and the last prisoner had dug his way out.

"How about the Concho house?" suggested Quantrell. "You want to treat me right or I'll not stay."

"There's that log hogan where Two-Ace Burke usta live—only it ain't half furnished. I reckon Bob's idea is about as good as any. We've got to keep him guarded, anyhow. The food would be right handy."

O'Hara nodded. "All right. We'll keep him at the hotel. It won't be for long. I'll take him to Aurora. They've got a new jail there."

"I'm not going to Aurora," the outlaw announced. "Never did like the town. It's a two-bit burg. I'll stay right here till I get ready to say 'Adios.' See you get me a good room."

Gomez came around the corner of the house and joined them. In Spanish he asked Quantrell reproachfully why he had come back when he knew the officers were so hot on his trail.

"Don't worry about me, Manuel," the manneled man answered gaily. "I kinda want to stick around awhile, anyhow. Might as well let the county feed me till I'm ready to go."

A casement window opened above and a head appeared, shadowy in the darkness. A voice murmured a question in soft Spanish. Was anything wrong?

Quantrell lifted his face and grinned toward his sweetheart. "Nothing at all, chachita. I've got a real urgent invite to be Mr. O'Hara's guest at the hotel for two-three days. Suits me fine. I'm right tired of sleepin' with snowdrifts for pillows. Adios, chiquita. Poco tiempo." He raised his hands and flung a kiss at her.

"We'll be going," O'Hara said curtly. "That's the major-domo crackin' his whip," explained Quantrell impudently. "The ill' tenderfoot sheriff blowin' off steam."

He went jauntily to confinement as though it were a joke.

CHAPTER XIII

A Round-Up

Brad Helm eased his massive body up from the chairs he was occupying. His astonishment at the sight of Bob Quantrell in handcuffs had not yet had time to subside.

"Why, I can fix you up with a room, Sheriff. I would of liked to of kinda fixed it up some, but that doggone Chinik is up to the Gold Nugget playin' the wheel."

"A room with two beds," O'Hara said.

"There's that south room. How would that do? The one the belted earl usta have."

"I want a nice, warm, comfortable room, Brad, this best you've got in the house," Quantrell said, with his gay impudent grin. "Price no object. This is particular company you're havin', understand. Guest of the county."

The fat innkeeper grinned nervously. He had no intention of slighting this dangerous guest. "It's a good room, Bob, with a fireplace in it," he wheezed. "We'll keep it nice and warm. If anything don't suit you, just holler."

"Have Charlie cook me some of that rice puddin' tomorrow, with lots of raisins in it. The county has got to feed me good if I stay."

"I'll sure see you get it, Bob."

"No objection to that, Brad," said

O'Hara. "But understand that orders come from me and not from Bob. He's just a prisoner. I'd put him in the jail if it would hold him."

"Just a prisoner, is he?" Quantrell asked with mock politeness, looking down at his slim, long girlish hands. "An' how long will he be one, Sheriff?"

Brad had picked up a lamp to lead the way to the room. He stopped to listen. There had come the sound of shots, a scattered fusillade of them.

"What's up, do you reckon?" he asked.

The sheriff turned to Worrall and spoke quickly. "Take Bob to the room, Steve. Tie him with a lash rope to the bed. If he tries to escape shoot him down. I'll be back soon as I can."

A Startled Oath Leaped From the Killer's Lips as He Jerked Up His Six-Shooter.

He ran out of the hotel and down the street in the direction of the Delgado stable. He passed people emerging cautiously from saloons and gambling houses. One called to him.

"What's the fireworks about, Sheriff?" He did not answer. His business was to get to the scene of action as soon as possible.

Some one in the road halted him. "Hold on there. Not so fast. This road's closed."

O'Hara recognized the voice of Amen Owen and pulled up. "What's wrong?" he asked. "This is O'Hara."

A little group of men were standing in the road back of Owen.

McCarthy spoke. "They tried to get the horses from the stable. Four of 'em. We yelled to throw up their hands an' they started shootin'. Course we let 'em have it, an' when the smoke cleared away two of 'em had lit out. The other two we got. One of the birds is ready for Boot Hill. Pankey has got a pill in his arm."

The sheriff stopped and looked at the face of the dead man. He recognized the man as the cowboy who had been known as Mac, one of those who had been with Quantrell when he raided the Hughes place a year or two before this time.

Pankey spoke up coolly. "D-dead as a s-stuck shot, Sheriff. Yore boys drilled him through. Y-you b-b-kinda out-smarted us that time, looks like."

Some one laughed. Pankey was a bad egg, but he was no quitter. In the current phrase of the time and place, he played his cards the way they were dealt him. The little man walked lame, and would as long as he lived. He owed that to Garrett O'Hara, a memento of the battle at the Cross ranch, but he cherished no grudge on that account. His wound had been given him in fair fight.

Birmingham Man Learns How to Avoid Old Age

"I got fooled by a headline recently," said Banks Talmadge, "for in looking over a magazine I saw 'How to Avoid Old Age,' and while I am not yet worried over the matter, yet I registered attention. Among other ways, to keep from getting old it advised: 'Never stop, look or listen at railroad crossings when driving a car; always race with locomotives to crossings, as it gives engineers a thrill; always pass the car ahead of you on a curve; or a hill; always drive as fast as you can on wet, slippery roads; and be sure to lock your brakes when skidding, as you can often turn your car clean around; always drive fast out of alleys, for if you do it often enough you may have the good luck to run down a traffic policeman; always speed, and demand half of the road, the middle half, just show the other fellow you know your rights and are ready to die for them; always drive fast in traffic, if a new driver, as it is the easiest way to have an accident.'" — Birmingham News.

Sausages Known to Greeks

Sausage making did not, as many believe, originate in Germany, says a writer in the Milwaukee Journal. Its real beginning is unknown, but by 500 B. C. sausage was gracing the tables of the Greek epicures. The "Diogenesoplistas," the oldest cook book extant, which is dated 228 A. D., explains that sausages were prepared "with meat and blood and a great deal of seasoning." Epicharmus, the Greek writer of comedies, mentions sausages, calling them oryza, a name by which he even subtitled one of his plays, the "Oryza." A little later, in 423 B. C., Aristophanes says in his play, "The Clouds," "Let them make sausage of me and serve me up to the students."

Flag at Vessel's Stern

The origin of the custom of carrying a flag at the stern of a ship is obscure. Several theories have been advanced, one of the most substantial being that in the case of old vessels the flag was flown over the captain's quarters, which are aft on board ship.

"Hadn't been so dark we would have got Deever an' Sommers an' maybe Quantrell, too," said Owen casually.

"Almost too casually, in fact. It was Pankey who spoke, after a moment of silence.

"C-clalmun' they were in this, are you, Amen? G-guess again, old-timer."

"We knew who were in it, Pankey. Don't fool yoreself about that. An' in good time we'll round 'em up like we did you an' Mac."

"You don't s-say," jeered the little rustler. "A ill' luck sure goes to some folks' heads."

"Did they get the horses?" asked O'Hara.

"Nary a bronc," replied one of the Browns.

"Good! You and Baldy stay here and make sure they don't come back. Not much chance of that, I'd say."

O'Hara turned to Owen and McCarthy. "Will you have some one get this body? But first we'll carry Pankey to the Concho house if he's not able to walk."

"I can w-walk all right." The outlaw spoke up.

"Good! We'll have Doctor Holloway look after you." Again the sheriff spoke to his allies. "Get together a dozen good citizens and patrol the roads out of town. Maybe we can catch Deever and Sommers as they try to slip away."

"An' Bob Quantrell—what about him? Ain't he worth gatherin' in?" Owen asked with an ironic little grin.

"He's already gathered," the sheriff said quietly.

The look of blank surprise on the faces about O'Hara gave place to amazement. There was a chorus of exclamations.

"How gathered?" asked McCarthy. "Arrested?"

"You mean you've got Bob Quantrell under arrest?"

"That's what I mean."

"An' he didn't kill you? Nor you him?" Baldy Brown asked.

"Nothing like that."

"Didn't put up any kind of a fight?" "We got him to see reason."

"Where's he at now?" "Being guarded by Steve Worrall at the Concho house."

"Well, I'll be feetotally doggoned!" "How did you arrest him?" Amen asked.

"Oh, just explained he was under arrest. We found him outside the Gomez house. Need any help, Pankey?"

"I can m-make out to get along." The little outlaw looked at the sheriff with reluctant admiration. "I n-never saw the b-beat of you, O'Hara. You look about as dangerous as a b-brush rabbit, but you certainly take the watch. When you hit this country you didn't know s-sic 'em, but you sure lit all spraddled out. I got to say you're a top hand."

Though Pankey had declined his offer of assistance O'Hara slipped a hand under the unjured arm of the outlaw. He did not want to have him shot down while trying to escape in the darkness. It was not likely the lame man would be so foolish, but one never could tell.

Inside of half an hour every road out of town was guarded. Men watched the trails that wound over the hills. The houses of suspected Mexicans, those known to be friendly to the rustlers, were searched by a posse of deputies sworn in for the occasion. But no sign of either Deever or Sommers was found. They had not got away on horseback, for no horses were missing. O'Hara, Owen, and Worrall decided that they had probably slipped away immediately after the fracas and were hiding in the chaparral. The one sure thing was that they would try to find some ranch for mounts upon which to escape.

O'Hara could not leave Concho for a few days on account of official business. Judge Warner was holding court and it was necessary for him to be present.

The sheriff knew that Bob Quantrell was slippery as a weasel and dangerous as a wolf. Every moment he had to be watched. Give him a chance and he would find some way to escape. Therefore O'Hara chose his guards with great care. He selected three: Steve Worrall, Amen Owen, and Buck Grogan. They were to divide the day and night into relay periods. The first two men he picked because they were the best available. Grogan was slower witted, and O'Hara hesitated about appointing him. But the man could be relied on not to relax his vigilance. He hated Quantrell too much to give him any opportunity of getting away.

The instructions given by O'Hara to his deputies were definite. He warned them, too, against letting the prisoner for a single instant get his hand near a weapon.

Owen nodded approval. "Do like the boss says, boys. If Bob ever gets a half a chance you're gone. He's a wonder with a six-shooter. I've seen men claim as quick a pull as Bob's. They claim Jesse James was chain lightning on the draw, an' I know Ben Thompson was for I've seen him. Others I've known with as rapid fire, an' still others as accurate. Maybe more so. Take Wild Bill. He was more deliberate in gettin' his guns into action. Fact is, he was so kinda easy about it he looked slow, but, gents, hush! when he onct started nobody could pump lead faster or straighter. He sure was a wonder. But this Kid Quantrell—take it from me that no man ever lived who had the edge on him in combination quick pull, rapid fire, an' straight shootin'.

I'm talkin' about a .44 or a .45, you understand. I can name a dozen fellows in town can beat him with a rifle."

"The long an' short of which is that if any of us throws down on his job he's liable to go to the Happy Huntin' Ground pronto," Worrall said. "Speak in' for Number One, I'll say I think too much of myself to get careless."

O'Hara had further doubts as to the wisdom of his choice of Buck Grogan when he saw the man with the prisoner. The bow-legged cowboy could not keep from gloating over Quantrell.

"Not long now," he jeered. "We're gonna try you down at Aurora for killin' that kid Turner at the Indian agency, an' then we'll hang you by the neck till you're dead. This country's plumb tired of two-gun men who go struttin' around with notches on their six-shooters, so we aim to make an example of Mr. Bob Quantrell right soon."

"That'll do, Buck," ordered O'Hara. "Bob hasn't been tried yet, and anyhow you're not here to devil him. If you can't be civil I'll take you off and put some one else on."

"Let him shoot off his mouth, Sheriff," the prisoner said in his mild way. "Don't hurt me any, seeing as I'm not intendin' to be present at any hangin' with mp as the hangar. You know why he's sore at me. Because I had to kill his brother, the Texas Kid, that time I bumped off Sanderson. It was washed on me. You know that, O'Hara, because that same day you called the turn on the same two four-shooters an' made 'em take water."

Buck Grogan's face and wrinkled neck turned brick-red. "Anyone's a liar that claims my brother was a four-shooter!" he sputtered.

The pale eyes of Quantrell rested on his guard. "Would he call me a liar, Sheriff, if he didn't have a gun in his hand an' I wasn't sittin' here wearin' bracelets an' tied by a lash rope to my bed?" asked the outlaw in his gentlest, most menacing voice.

"It's going to stop, here and now," O'Hara answered. "You know this won't do, Grogan. Either be pleasant to Bob or don't talk with him. If I hear of any more of this sort of thing I'll have to let you go. That's final."

It was final as far as O'Hara was concerned but not with the others. Quantrell was more to blame than Grogan. He enjoyed stirring the anger of the guard. It helped to pass the hours. Moreover, he was watching always for a chance to escape and he felt that Grogan simmering with rage, might offer opportunities that would not be given by the same man unmoved by passion.

So when O'Hara asked the prisoner a day or two later whether he had any complaints to make about the treatment he was receiving Quantrell grinned and shook his head.

"Nary a one, Sheriff. Grab's O. K. I been improvin' my mind with the books you brought. The boys you leave me so's I won't get lonesome suit me fine. Especially Buck here. We're gettin' to be real tifficuns, ain't we, Buck?"

EDITORIAL COLUMN

Higher Tariff Needed to Protect American Metals

Congressman William Williamson in Mining Journal:

The world is just beginning to realize the Five-Year Economic Plan of the Soviet regime of Russia. Confiscated mines, factories and land, combined with forced labor, working at a mere pittance of what is paid to workmen in this country, enable the Stalin government to produce from mine, factory and farm, at a cost which destroys all possibility of effective competition abroad.

Due to the cancellation of all foreign obligations by the Bolsheviks, the Russian government has no credit standing in the world at large. It has therefore become necessary for the Soviets to establish gold credits abroad in order to provide itself with the necessary machinery and equipment for its five-year socialistic program. This can only be accomplished by selling its products and goods in the competitive markets of other countries. So urgent is the necessity for foreign credits, that the Soviets do not hesitate to resort to dumping at any price they can get.

It has become apparent that the 1930 tariff rates are not sufficiently high on a number of products to protect our people against ruinous competition from a country where working men and farmers have ceased to have a voice in the price of their labor and where they have been reduced to a system whereby they are driven to work at wages which barely suffices to keep soul and body together.

As a result of these conditions, various countries have already taken drastic steps to protect their people against the threatened demoralization of their industries. Among these are France, England, Germany, Belgium, Hungary and Rumania. Wheat can be produced in Russia so cheap that it can be landed in New York harbor at from 25 to 30 cents a bushel. What sort of a chance has an American farmer to compete with that kind of production.

During the war, we made a desperate effort to produce our own manganese which is as essential to a successful war, as explosives. Up to that time, 95 per cent of all manganese used in this country was imported. Our annual consumption is about 800,000 tons. By the time the Armistice was signed, we were producing 300,000 tons and rapidly expanding production. Due to inadequate tariff protection, importers soon stangled the industry, but after a hard fight, we succeeded in getting one cent a pound protection in the 1930 tariff act which applies to all ore assaying 10 per cent or more metallic manganese. For a time, the industry looked up, but to the astonishment of everybody, the Soviet regime was soon dumping Russian ore from confiscated mines on the Atlantic seaboard at 25 cents per unit.

paid f. o. b. at Pittsburg, 60 cents per unit as compared with an average price of 68 cents per unit over the five-year period prior to such dumping. At 50 cents per unit, the American manganese industry cannot survive. In fact, the mining and beneficiating of manganese ore are already dead. Going concerns everywhere, have been compelled to shut down. South Dakota, Minnesota and Montana all have manganese deposits and the only hope of saving the industry for this country is by placing an embargo and unless this is done, the industry is doomed.

HISTORY IN THE MAKING

THAT is what is covered in our Weekly News Review feature each week. It is an interpretation of the events of each week that are making the history of the nation and the world.

It is prepared by Edward W. Pickard, one of the highly trained newspaper observers of the nation, and syndicated to a limited number of newspapers in the different states. It is the best feature of this character that goes to American readers from any source. You can make it the foundation of your discussion of world events with friends.

est by the newspapermen over the land and the time spent in digesting the contents of its pages will be well spent. We congratulate the Manufacturer and Industrial News Bureau, which has always been the champion of newspapers of this country, on this its latest and well aimed effort.

By
HENRY KITCHELL WEBSTER

If you haven't experienced Mr. Webster's ability to write sleep-destroyers, find it in this tale. A story that begins with events seen through a child's bewildered eyes; a veritable coil of circumstances; a maze of incidents that, however puzzling, are always merging toward a definite end in the open; in plain words, a mystery story beautifully told.

"The Mystery of the Sealed Trunk"

It was an odd, little old leather trunk and its contents—thousands of sheets of paper, covered with apparently meaningless figures—seemed so promising, that Rhoda McFarland sealed it up and consigned it to a closet. There it rested for several years. But all of a sudden that trunk became an object of importance and the central property of a plot which caused Rhoda to leave her friends, take a position as a stenographer in the city, and attempt to hide her identity under an assumed name. And the possession of the trunk brought other experiences into her life—romance, adventures and acquaintance with oddly assorted persons, some good, some not so good, and others just queer; among them a handsome young man who—but you must read the story yourself. STORY of intrigue and mystery in which the element of charm is as great as the force of excite-are so thoroughly of the present day that they might happen in your neighborhood—might even involve your own friends and acquaintances. An immensely interesting, puzzling and pleasing tale.

First of New Navy Fighting Planes

Fifteen fast Boeing wasp-powered fighting planes, which reached a speed of 350 miles per hour in a 10,000-foot vertical power dive and which will be used as deck fighters and diving bombers by the naval air service, were delivered in Seattle, Wash., to the airplane carrier Lexington by the Boeing Airplane company on its contract for 46 airplanes of this type. They are said to out-speed the navy fighters of any other nation. Special flotation bags keep the plane afloat if forced down at sea. These fighters carry machine guns and bombs.

It possesses 1/2-inch armor and carries a one-pound cannon and 30-caliber machine guns with 2,100 pounds of ammunition.

Delay in Banking Check

Costly to Cartoonist
In these days when every one is talking about the dearth of prosperity in this country, there is food for thought in the story of the cartoonist who received a three-figure check, but was so busy reading a book at the time that he forgot all about it and left it between the pages. Some time later the artist married a widow with a son, and the boy, browsing through the books one day found the check. Not only did he find it, but he deposited it. But in the meantime the firm that had made out the check had transferred its funds elsewhere and the check came back "No funds."

Of course the firm made the check good but informed the artist that inasmuch as he had so much money he would, in future, have the price of his work reduced 50 per cent.—Los Angeles Times.

Hospital Experts See Possibility in Talkies

At the present time many plans that involve the taking of talking pictures are under consideration as a means of aiding hospital work. Three interesting possibilities are the entertainment of convalescent patients, the training of student nurses by the sight and sound method and the presentation of screen entertainment in connection with hospital fund-raising campaigns. One hospital in Stockholm has used films for medical instruction for 35 years. But with the advent of the talking picture, the applications of the talking screen to medical and scientific advancement are increased a hundredfold. The hospital field has been awaiting the development of a portable motion picture sound projector, ready to plug into the electric light socket and to be wheeled from room to room as required.

Castoria... for CHILDREN'S ailments

ARE you prepared to render first aid and quick comfort the moment your youngster has an upset of any sort? Could you do the right thing—immediately—though the emergency came without warning—perhaps tonight? Castoria is a mother's standby at such times. There is nothing like it in emergencies, and nothing better for everyday use. For a sudden attack of colic, or for the gentle relief of constipation; to allay a feverish spell, or to soothe a fretful baby that can't sleep. This pure vegetable preparation is always ready to ease an ailing youngster. It is just as harmless as the recipe on the wrapper reads. If you see Chas. H. Fletcher's signature, it is genuine.

Castoria. It is harmless to the smallest infant; doctors will tell you so.
You can tell from the formula on the wrapper how mild it is, and how good for little systems. But continue with Castoria until a child is grown.

The Good Old Days
(By John L. Lawson)

There are those who look back and regret the passing of "the good old days." And there are those who look forward to the Golden Age. To each of these groups let it be known that this is the Golden Age. We, the peoples of the earth, are responsible for the present age for whatever faults or virtues it has. Its faults and virtues are ours. The world is composed of us. If we condemn the present age we stand self-condemned. This is our Golden Age. He who lives in the past is dead. He who lives in the future does not exist in the present. He who lives and knows that he lives today, helps to make the Eternal Now. We cannot take today out of time without making an impassable gulf between the past and the future. Let us live in the Eternal Now with the Eternal I Am and recognize the fact that "He doeth all things well" and that this is the Golden Age for us.

Say not thou, "What is the cause that the former days were better than these?" For thou dost not inquire wisely concerning this."—Ecclesiastes 7:10.

We do not use all the blessings we have. Are you missing the blessings that come with the study of God's Word? And are you foregoing the joy and peace which comes through the worship of God in His house on His Day? Let us be in Sunday School and church next Sunday morning and at church again in the evening.

and Marshall C. St. John drove to Las Cruces Monday, stayed over for the night at that place and the next day went on to El Paso where they divided their time visiting the border city and Juarez, Mexico. The boys were accompanied from Almogordo by Demacio Garcia, formerly of Carrizozo, and who went along for the purpose of bringing back his daughter who had been visiting relatives at Socorro, Texas, for over two months. They returned home Wednesday night.

Man Hacked to Death

Last Friday evening about the hour of 5 o'clock, at Estanislao Bello's ranch, sheepman from Claunch, N. M., Cleto Gonzales hacked to death Juan Armendariz with a hatchet. Gonzales, after murdering his victim who was about 80 years of age, dragged the body, face downward, about 100 yards and deposited the same in an old trash hole. He then went and told his employer that he had killed Armendariz, but Mr. Bello knowing that the man was mentally unbalanced, refused to give much credence to Gonzales' story at first, but seeing that he was very insistent in his confession, he finally decided to accompany him to the spot where the body lay. Mr. Bello brought Gonzales to Carrizozo where he was jailed to await a hearing. It is thought he will be given a sanity hearing and sent to the hospital for the insane at Las Vegas. Gonzales was a section hand here for a number of years.

Mr. and Mrs. S. W. Hale of Capitan, were Carrizozo visitors of this week.

Judge Hewitt's Residence Burned Last Friday

As we were mulling the Outlook last Friday, the news came down from White Oaks to the effect that the home of Judge John Y. Hewitt, where he has lived for 40 years, was burning. The news spread quickly over town and as many residents as could get away from the regular routine of business, made the trip to White Oaks as fast as possible, but by that time, the structure was a mass of ruins.

The fire originated in the attic over the kitchen, where it is presumed that sparrows had carried straw through some unnoticed opening in the eaves and the nest, being close or perhaps next to the pipe, caused the fire. Most of the furniture was saved and above all that the Judge prized, the paintings of years ago, which was the handiwork of Mrs. Hewitt, were saved, first of all. The loss, we are glad to say, was fully covered by insurance. The Judge is now at the Carrizozo Eating House.

Mrs. S. S. Gillespie was hostess to the Younger Woman's Bridge Club Wednesday afternoon. A good attendance was on hand.

INSECTS NOT ALL PESTS; OPEN BENEFIT MANKIND

To the mind of the layman insects are enemies to be fought at every opportunity—enemies which, if not repulsed, will drive man from the earth. Yet there are many insects aside from the honeybee and silkworm which have lent their efforts to man's cause, says the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

Among the insects contributing useful products to man should be mentioned a group known as lac insects, which secrete a wax used in the manufacture of shellac, and the cochineal insect, which produces the cochineal from which rich scarlet dyes were formerly made. Development of the aniline dye industry has crowded the cochineal dye manufacture into the background.

In Hawaii the latana bug is counted a friend of man as a destroyer of weeds. New Zealand and Australia, overrun with cactus to such an extent that it is considered a serious impediment to agriculture, have called on their entomologists to muster armies of many kinds of insects, chiefly a mealy bug, relative of the mealy bug pest known to Americans, to destroy the cactus. The blackberry, another troublesome weed in New Zealand, is to be fought similarly by insects.

A blister beetle, Cantharis vesicatoria, is dried and ground into a powder, known as the Spanish fly, and used by the medical profession as an irritant to produce blood blisters and stimulate blood circulation near the skin.

As parasites of serious insect pests some insects have proved fully worth their weight in gold. Several county horticultural departments in California have been breeding some such parasites and distributing them to attack pests on the English walnut and citrus trees.

Ladybird beetles long have been identified as effective enemies of various kinds of plant lice. The Federal Bureau of Entomology has propagated and distributed natural enemies of the Japanese beetle, the European corn borer, the gypsy moth, the brown-tail moth, and other pests. Some parasitic wasps are able to force their ovipositors into the burrows of wood-boring insects even through the wood to attack these borers.

PROHIBITION RAISES DRINKER FROM GUTTER INTO SOCIETY SAYS COMMISSIONER

Seattle, Wash., Jan. 24.—Kenneth MacKintosh, a member of the Wickersham commission, said upon his return home here today that seven members of the law enforcement body favored a change in prohibition as soon as possible. He did not name the seven.

MacKintosh said the "four other members having still a hope, which they designate as a pious one, that a change in organization may bring a reasonable degree of enforcement, nevertheless favor revision, if that hope is not fulfilled."

The Seattle member said the commission's report "gave full value to all the good resulting from prohibition, but was more than conservative in reporting the bad features, so as to avoid attack on the ground that we deliberately exaggerated conditions."

MacKintosh, who signed the general report of the commission, recommending further enforcement efforts, said he did so because "otherwise we would have complete nullification, which would mean chaos," before some change could be made.

"We found conditions almost unbearable," MacKintosh said. "There is unquestionably more drinking among young people than before prohibition. Prohibition has raised the drinker from the gutter, and put him in good society. At some functions a person is not welcome unless he has a bottle on his hip."

CONSERVE NEW MEXICO'S ARCHAEOLOGICAL TREASURES

(From Roswell Record.) Conservation of the many treasures of New Mexico should come before it is too late. The shipping of carloads of archaeological and other remains of former civilizations from the state means that eventually the state will be denuded of these things. Properly collected and deposited in New Mexico museums scattered over the state at desirable points, they would become points of great interest, not only for our own citizens but for visitors to the state. New Mexico is a treasure house of these relics. Old ruins are being uncovered and many strange things found. They are valuable not only in telling students of the ancient history of the state before the days of the Spaniards, but they are intrinsically valuable as well. The state should have a carefully prepared law that will govern the explorations in ancient ruins and one that will see that a fair share of all discoveries are left in the state. They should no longer be permitted to leave the state in their entirety.

Another source of regret to many New Mexicans is the looting of our plant life. Tourists carry off trees and plants of all kinds. Certain areas are being left bare of many kinds of plant life. Among the many interesting things found in New Mexico are the many different kinds of cacti. The cactus will become a thing. But at the present rate of denaration plant in the state. Our plants and trees and flowers need better protection.

THE COST OF BAD ROADS

(From the Manufacturer) A survey by J. L. Tennant of Cornell University, shows that the benefits accruing the farmer from year round, surfaced, secondary roads are almost unlimited.

Mr. Tennant summarizes his findings with the statement that good roads add to the farmer's income by saving time, by reducing expenses, by improving marketing conditions—all resulting in a more profitable type of farming. On the other hand, poor roads often cause the farmer expense in actual cash. It costs him more to have his fuel and supplies delivered, to operate his motor vehicles, to go back and forth to town, to summon medical aid. The Iowa State College estimates that the average cost of operating automobiles on high type roads is 5.44 cents per mile; on medium type roads, 6.43 cents; and on low type roads, 7.50 cents. In other words, it costs the farmer two cents a mile more to ride on a poor road than a good one.

Still another benefit is in land values. Farmers living on dirt roads in New York, according to Mr. Tennant, estimate that their land would increase in value to the extent of $15.68 per acre if adjacent roads were surfaced.

Five or ten miles back from the splendid main highways that go from city to city, we customarily find the roads essentially the same as in the horse-and-wagon days. This barrier to agricultural progress must be removed if permanent farm prosperity is to be achieved.

POULTRY WORK GROWS RAPIDLY DURING THE YEAR

Extension Service Bulletin:

A summary of the annual report of the Extension poultry husbandman shows that poultry production has continued to be an important farm enterprise during the year just completed. Work has been done in every county in the state where a county agent is employed and some work has been done in counties having no agent. More than 10 per cent of the agents' time has been devoted to work with poultry and about 10 per cent of the farm visits made were in relation to poultry work.

Concentrated efforts have been placed on accreditation as a means of flock improvement. Rapid growth has been made in this project since the work was started in 1927. During that year, five flocks containing 1,733 birds were accredited. This work has increased until 139 flocks containing 25,299 birds were accredited during the past year. In 1927, when the accreditation work was first started, only two counties were represented; interest has increased to the extent that ten counties, pretty well distributed over the state, cooperated in 1930.

Other phases of flock improvement work which were stressed during 1930 were better males, culling, feeding, housing, and time to hatch. In this connection, reports show that in 17 counties, 144 farmers secured 667 highly bred males to use with their breeding flocks; in 18 counties, 219 farmers owning 25,074 birds were influenced to cull their flocks for the first time; feeding of more economical and better balanced rations has been accomplished in 18 counties and 444 farmers have been prevailed upon to improve their poultry rations. In the housing project, poultrymen have been urged to provide more comfortable houses for their flocks in order to increase production and prevent disease, with the result that 218 poultry houses were constructed or remodeled during the year. Agents in 16 counties report that 413 farmers were influenced to buy or hatch chickens at the proper time in order that they might be grown out and brought in to production in the fall.

Famous Recreation Spot

Coney Island in 1784 came into the possession of Thomas Stillwell. The earliest known hotel was the Coney Island house, erected in 1800. It became an amusement center in 1844 with the erection of a pavilion. By act of the New York legislature of 1890, 5,000 feet of shore frontage was made a public bathing beach.
