Funeral of William Reily

The funeral services of William Reily, who passed this life last Saturday morning, were held Sunday afternoon at the Methodist Church, with the Rev. Lawson conducting the same. A choir of ladies sang several well selected hymns and the pastor's sermon was full of hope and comfort to the mourning relatives.

The floral offerings were many, varied and beautiful, as they surrounded the casket as silent tributes to the memory of the deceased offered by the loyal friends who gathered at the last sad rites. After the services at the church, the remains were interred in the local cemetery.

William Morgan Reily was born in Baton Rouge, Louisiana, Aug. 21, 1867. On September 21, 1895, he was married to Miss Nellie Gray, to which union, four daughters and one son were born, namely: Mrs. S. G. Allen, Mrs. Will Ed Harris, Mrs. H. G. Jones, Mrs. C. A. Branum and A. M. Reily. He came to Capitan in 1891 and to Carrizozo in 1909. He was principally engaged in the stock commission business and for several years, served as cattle inspector for the War Finance Board. Mr. Reily was always identified in charitable undertakings and was noted for his genial hospitality. He was a good neighbor, a kind and loving husband and father and a man, who never forgot his friends, all of which, made him esteemed by all who knew him. To the sorrowing family, the sympathy of our community is extended.

Results of the Hondo Booster

As is already known, Hondo was placed second in the district basketball tournament and their team has the privilege of entering the state tournament at Albuquerque. Finding themselves financially embarrassed, they called upon the other schools in the district for help and were met with a generous response. Carrizozo contributed by giving the proceeds of a game played for that special purpose, and sent Hondo on their way with about $30.00. Five games were played, the first between Santa Rita and Carrizozo grade boys. Fay Harkey refereed this game and the final score was 8-10 in favor of Carrizozo.

The second game was between Carrizozo and Hondo second teams, Hondo winning 5 to 4.

The third game was the sensational game of the evening, being between the Carrizozo 1st Team and the Runners - Up of the District. There was but little scoring on either side, Carrizozo living up to their reputation and holding Hondo away from their short shots and forcing them to try for long shots, most of which failed to connect in a way that counted. The final score showed a victory for the local boys 6 to 8.

The fourth game was between the Carrizozo girls and the Hondo girls. Although Hondo fought with a determination to win, they were greatly hampered by the loss of some of their very best players and found themselves little more than a match for the Carrizozo 2nd Team Girls.

The High School games were officiated by Mr. Pipkin of Capitan who donated his services to the Hondo cause.

The last game was between the Carrizozo Town Team and the Fort Stanton Town Team, refereed by Mr. Gillette of the local hi. school, resulting in favor of Fort Stanton.

To Organize Baseball Team for This Summer

Hopes are very promising for Carrizozo to have a good ball team this spring and summer, for it is none other than Meyer Barnett who is endeavoring to put one in the field. Meyer has a keen knowledge of the game, and as manager, he should develop a team that will compete with any of the surrounding towns. Aside from himself, Meyer has the following named boys listed for the team: John Jordan, Charley Byrd, Walter Gage, Jim Butler, Candido Martinez, Julian Mireles, Florentino Lopez, Andres Sandoval and Andres Lueras, Jr. Let's all boost for the boys and have a strong team.

Eric L. R. Williams of Fort Stanton was a Carrizozo visitor on Wednesday of this week.

"The Last of the Duanes"

At the last regular meeting of Carrizozo Lodge No. 30, I. O. O. F., it was decided to accept the offer from Manager Pittman of the Crystal Theatre of the picture, "The Last of the Duanes," which he selected. This picture is to be shown under the auspices of the Odd Fellows on Saturday night, April 4.

The author of the story is Zane Grey and it portrays the early life in the west, long before the railroads were laying their tracks toward the setting sun. The characters in the picture have all been selected from actors and actresses who have the best recording voices. The picture, as a whole, is taken from the best of Zane Grey's stories, this being the verdict of the leading critics in the talking picture profession. Tickets will be on sale at many of the business houses, so that everybody will have a chance to see this wonderful picture. It will be a one-night show, and only on Saturday, April 4, as it was impossible to secure it for a longer time.—Don't forget!

Mr. and Mrs. Claud Branum acted as host and hostess to the girls' basketball team during the tournament, taking the team to Alamogordo and return, being the foremost boosters until the close of the occasion.

The week of March 22 to 29 will be observed as Childhood and Youth Week by the Sunday Schools of Carrizozo. There are a number of worthwhile events planned. The schedule will be announced next week. It will be well to be in Sunday School next Sunday to learn something about what is coming. Good attendance last Sunday. No reason why we should not keep right on growing. There are many other good things in store besides Childhood and Youth Week.

A. S. McCamant was here from Corona Monday and from him we learned that Mrs. McCamant, who has been in Roswell for several months in hope of the lower altitude benefitting her health, has not received the amount of benefit for which they hoped, but a longer stay may bring about the desired results.

Sugar Lobby Gift Story Under Investigation, Senator Davis Promising Help—Lame Duck Sessions Probably Will Be Abolished.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

Senator J. J. Davis

IN THE closing days of the session of congress the senate ran into what gave some promise of developing into another lobbying scandal. Mr. Borah read to it an article in a New York newspaper which said, in effect, that a senator, during his former occupancy of a high official position, had received $100,000 from the president of a domestic sugar company in return for his agreement to lobby for a high sugar tariff. Senator Nye of North Dakota had already alluded to the story, deploring the fact that such an unsubstantiated report had been given publicity and credence. Replying to questions, Nye admitted that the campaign expenditure committee, of which he is chairman, had come upon the report of a $100,000 gift to a senator, had incompletely investigated it and had turned over a memorandum to the committee on lobbying. He said he thought the senator in question was entitled to have an inquiry made and the truth established by the lobby committee, which is headed by Senator Caraway of Arkansas.

At the instance of Senator Borah, supported by Senator Robinson of Arkansas, the senate instructed the lobby committee to investigate the story.

Immediately thereafter Senator James J. Davis of Pennsylvania, former secretary of labor, announced off the senate floor that he stood ready to appear before the lobby committee at any time and that he would assure the committee of the presence of several witnesses whom it would desire to hear. Among the witnesses he named was Dr. G. Dahlberg of Chicago, president of the Southern Sugar company. Mr. Davis declared he would assist the committee in investigating the charges "to the bottom."

Appearing later before the lobby committee, Senator Davis declared the charges, if directed at him, were absolutely false.

WITH little or no expectation that his veto would be sustained, President Hoover put the mark of his disapproval on the veterans' bonus bill. His veto message to congress included data provided by Secretary Mellon showing how the bonus loans would aggravate the financing difficulties of the treasury, and also new estimates of the number of veterans who will apply for the loans.

ABOLISHMENT of the "lame duck" session of congress seemed assured when the house adopted the Gifford resolution to that effect and providing for the inauguration of the newly elected President in January instead of March. The resolution, which proposes an amendment to the Constitution, differs somewhat from the Norris measure passed by the senate with the same purpose, but it was believed the differences would be ironed out in conference. It is planned that the terms of the President and Vice President shall end on the twenty-fourth day of January and the terms of senators and representatives at noon on the fourth day of January of the years in which such terms normally would end. Congress would assemble on January 4, and the President would be sworn in on January 24.

ONLY a veto by President Hoover can keep the government from going into the power business, for the senate joined with the house in accepting the conference report on Masella Shoals. The senate vote was 55 to 28. This indicated that a veto would be sustained. Twenty Republicans voted for the measure, eleven of them being of the radical group which has the power question for its chief issue. Another rebuff for the administration was administered when the house passed Senator Wagner's bill setting up federal and state employment agencies, without a record vote. It was believed President Hoover might kill the measure by a pocket veto.

ONE of Oklahoma's lame duck Republican congressmen, U. S. Stone of Norman, put forth a parting gift that aroused little if any sympathy among the national law makers but considerable among the public at large. Mr. Stone had introduced a bill barring relatives of members of congress and of high officials from becoming federal employees, and the other day he called at the White House to ask President Hoover's support for the measure and also to tell what the attack on nepotism was getting him. "I never dreamed," said Mr. Stone, "that a simple, constructive measure on my part could make such a difference. I pass fellow house members in the hallways of the office building and they do not speak to me. My wife is punished for my daring. Even bureau clerks in legislative departments give me the cold shoulder and interfere with my work as a member of the house."

"I have had members whisper that I am right, but that I would not succeed. Others have warned me that I would suffer for my rashness. The reaction against my proposal to make it 'unlawful' for any legislative, ministerial, or judicial officer to appoint any person related to him when the pay is to come out of public funds has been most extraordinary."

The last annual report of the clerk of the house reveals that approximately 100 relatives are now on the pay rolls of members, and a survey shows that many of these have never done a lick of work in the offices for which they got their appointments. One letter to Mr. Stone points out that the daughter of a certain representative signed vouchers for $3,800 last year and spent almost the entire time abroad. Another report which he would like to investigate before a committee is that a southern member has paid his father $10,000 and the man has never been in Washington.

MINNESOTA Democrats announced, through Chairman J. J. Farrell of their state executive committee, that they would try to unseat Senator Thomas D. Schall, Republican, who was re-elected last November in a five-cornered contest. Farrell said Schall would be charged with violating the state corrupt practices act and also with violating federal regulations governing the use of postal franking privileges, and that the state elections committee would be asked to declare the seat vacant so that a new election may be called.

When Senator Schall was told of this in Washington he said only: "That does not deserve comment."

The blind senator's dispute with President Hoover and Attorney General Mitchell over the appointment of a new federal judge for Minnesota continues. After rejecting Schall's choice for the post, Ernest D. Mitchell of Minneapolis, the President named Guhnar B. Nordbye, now a Minneapolis district judge, and Schall immediately announced he would contest the nomination in the senate. His course in this matter, it is said, has led some Hoover Republicans in Minnesota to support the ouster move.

DRY Democrats in congress were exceedingly active during the week getting ready for the meeting of the Democratic national committee scheduled for March 5. Chairman John J. Raakob had announced that the committee would consider future policies of the party, and assuming that he would try to commit it to the wet side of the prohibition controversy, the dries were lining up to fight him to the bitter end. Senator Morrison of North Carolina, one of the most arid ones, said his group had enough votes to defeat any wet resolution. Senator George of Georgia asserted the committee had no right to form party policies, that being the function of the national convention. Other Democratic leaders were anxious to head off any discussion of the liquor issue.

Naturally the approaching committee meeting caused a lot of talk about presidential possibilities. The names heard offest were those of Governor Roosevelt of New York, Governor Ritchie of Maryland and Senator-elect James Hamilton Lewis of Illinois. In Chicago there developed quite a boom for Colonel Lewis as his return home from a sojourn in the Southwest.

PEHR EYVIND SVINHUFVUD, who has just been elected president of Finland, is going to have the prohibition question put up to him promptly. Distinguished women of the country, of all parties, are circulating a petition asking his support of a speedy repeal of the "pernicious prohibition law."

The petition urges mothers to "feel deep concern in the ever increasing intemperance which ruins men, women, and children morally and physically. It is awful to contemplate how alcohol will affect the descendants of the present poisoned generation unless legislators abolish the prohibition system." The petition further points out that women are unable to resist a temperance movement until the de-morralizing prohibition law is repealed and replaced by reasonable legislation.

ONCE again the United States Supreme court has upheld the validity of the Eighteenth amendment. This time the action, which was unanimous, was in reviewing the decision of Federal Judge William Clark of Newark, N. J., who held that the amendment should have been ratified by state conventions instead of by state legislatures. This decision was reversed, the opinion being written by Justice Owen D. Roberts, the newest member of the Supreme court. In a case appealed from Michigan, the Supreme court held that the severe penalties of the Jones "five and ten" law are not applicable to conviction for possession of liquor.

WHILE the conference on narcotics was in progress in Washington, word came that Joseph C. Grew, American ambassador to Turkey, was getting results there in the fight to suppress the illegal exportation of the drugs from that country. Mr. Grew made vigorous representations to the government at Ankara and brought about the sealing of the three big drug factories of Istanbul with their entire stocks, to be effective until the factories present documents attesting the amounts of production and exportation.

Drug exporting from Turkey to countries such as the United States, which do not allow unrestricted entry of narcotics, is henceforth expected to be impossible, as a government official has been attached to each factory to control production and exportation. Factories must report to the government every 24 hours the amount of raw material purchased and the amount of production. The director of the Japanese factory in Istanbul says the new order is so severe that his factory probably will be forced to cease functioning.

THOUGH King Alfonso of Spain told American correspondents that all was calm in his country now and that danger of a revolution had passed, Admiral Juan Aznar, the new premier, was not finding the sailing weather especially fine. This was mainly because the national executive committee of the Socialist party and the labor union decided to boycott the national elections and co-operate fully with the Republican revolutionary committee. This determination was so forcible that some of the moderate leaders among the Socialists resigned from the committee, their places being filled with real revolutionists.

These resignations ended the government's dream of splitting the revolutionary ranks by divorcing the Socialists and their 300,000 workers with their terrible weapon of a general strike from the purely Republican element with their backing among the bourgeois and friendly soldiery.

The government announced that the municipal elections, the first in a series of elections that will end eventually in balloting for an assembly to amend the constitution, would take place on April 12 instead of March 23. Educational institutions, closed by the Berenguer government a month ago, are ordered reopened.

In his talk with correspondents Alfonso said he had done all he could to satisfy his people and that he was willing to give up almost everything but his crown, which, he added, was not his to give away, being his inheritance of which he is only the temporary holder.

BECAUSE of divided opposition William Hale Thompson won reelection by the Republicans for mayor of Chicago after one of the hottest primary contests that city has ever enjoyed. The attack on him was fierce and he would have been beaten by Judge John Lyle, "nemesis" of the gamblers and gangsters, had it not been for the candidacy of Alderman Albert who was supported by Senator Deneen and his dwindling faction. The hope of those Chicagoans who seek to eliminate Thompsonism now rests with Anton Cerzak, who is the nominee of the Democrats.

COUNTER revolution broke out in Peru under the leadership of friends of the deposed president, Augusto Leguia, and threatened the regime of Provisional President Luis M. Sanchez Cerro. The uprising was quelled in Callao but the revolutionists seized Arequipa and set up a government under the name "Southern Junta." They were joined by considerable parts of the army and held control of southern Peru.

To prove the sincerity of his intention in leading the August revolution, Cerro issued a proclamation declaring that he would not be a candidate for the presidency when the elections are held. This, he said, his adherents thought, would pacify the Arequipa rebels and lead to peace through negotiation.

January, 1931, motor vehicle license fee collections amounting to $182,222.83 was distributed recently among the counties of the state of New Mexico. The Trinity Presbyterian Church at Tucson expects to break ground in the near future for the erection of a $90,000 edifice. Plans may be developed for the construction of a new hangar and gasoline system, costing approximately $53,000 at the Tucson airfield. New Mexico Normal University and State Teachers' College were both given the highest classification in the American Association of Teachers' Colleges in the convention at Detroit, Mich. Jesus Macias, who was found guilty of murder in the first degree in Miami, Ariz., by a superior court jury, which recommended life imprisonment, has asked for retrial. Macias was tried for the murder of Enrique Hernandez on the night of Nov. 5, last year. A superior court jury in Globe acquitted John H. Welch, Miami officer, of a charge of murdering Martin Lopez last July 4. Following Lopez' death Welch was exonerated by a coroner's jury but the case was reopened at the request of the Mexican government of which Lopez was a citizen. The seventeenth annual convention of the New Mexico Cattle Growers' Association is to be held on March 3 and 4. An attractive program is being prepared covering all the important phases of the many vital problems which affect the cattle industry at this time. Comparing favorably with the records of the last several years, more than 20 million dollars will be expended in new construction and development projects in Arizona in 1931, according to figures assembled by the Arizona Industrial Congress in Phoenix. Charles R. Foster, youthful hitchhiker of Clayville, Pa., who was sentenced to be hanged in the penitentiary at Florence, Ariz., was saved from death by a Pinal county, Ariz., Superior Court jury which found him insane. Foster was convicted at Tombstone, Ariz., in 1929 for killing Martin Parko of Los Angeles, Calif., near Benson, Ariz. Arizona laid before the United States Supreme Court in Washington its contentions that the court should decide on its merits the state's suit to prevent construction of Hoover dam on the Colorado river. The voluminous brief filed by K. Berry Peterson, attorney general, opposed motions to dismiss the proceedings presented by California, Nevada, Utah, New Mexico, Colorado, Wyoming and Secretary Wilbur. The Tiger's Claw, of the Raton High School, has undertaken a large task in the forming of a New Mexico Scholastic Press Association for school papers of New Mexico. A convention has been called for the 10th and 11th of April to be held in Raton, at which time delegates from the different schools will meet and discuss matters relative to school papers. There will be two divisions in the association, the high school division and the college paper. Dead E. D. Ball, head of the college of agriculture of the University of Arizona, in addition to administrative duties, still finds time to continue his important studies in entomology. Dr. Ball has the largest collection of leafhoppers in the United States and his extensive research work with this group led to the discovery that plant diseases are transmitted by insects. At the present time Dr. Ball is preparing some new publications on the Arizona leafhopper. Arizona births during 1930 exceeded deaths by more than 35 per cent, according to the vital statistics report released by the state superintendent of public health in Phoenix. Births totaled 10,213 over the twelve-month period and deaths numbered 6,418. White children numbered 5,148, 3,853 were Mexican, 741 Indian, 290 were other races, including negro, and 236 were of mixed parentage. The report shows 131 persons were killed in automobile accidents in Arizona last year. Without uttering a sound and with a faint, wistful smile on her lips, Irene Schroeder, 23-year-old "gun girl" and "thrill player," died in the electric chair in Bellefonte, Pa. She was followed to the chair by Glenn Dague, her sweetheart and partner in crime. In January Deputy Sheriff Joe Chapman at Florence, Ariz., was kidnapped by the woman and two men. Arizona officers engaged in a gun fight with the fugitives, Chapman and Deputy Leg Wright were wounded, the latter fatally. Arizona authorities gave over the woman and Dague to Pennsylvania for trial for the killing of Paul. The other man was Vernon Ackerman, alias Joe Wells, now serving a life sentence in Arizona. Fifteen convicts, including one murderer clambered over the state penitentiary wall at Florence, Ariz., while a guard was not watching, and escaped into the sagebrush and cactus of the surrounding desert. Plans are being prepared for a five-story hotel for Silver City, N. M., to cost about $175,000. The growth of mining, farming and livestock business in Grant county, N. M., has been reflected in growth and development of Silver City, the county seat, and the new hotel is a result of expanding conditions.

White children numbered 5,148, 3,853 were Mexican, 741 Indian, 290 were other races, including negro, and 236 were of mixed parentage. The report shows 131 persons were killed in automobile accidents in Arizona last year. Without uttering a sound and with a faint, wistful smile on her lips, Irene Schroeder, 23-year-old "gun girl" and "thrill player," died in the electric chair in Bellefonte, Pa. She was followed to the chair by Glenn Dague, her sweetheart and partner in crime. In January Deputy Sheriff Joe Chapman at Florence, Ariz., was kidnapped by the woman and two men. Arizona officers engaged in a gun fight with the fugitives, Chapman and Deputy Leg Wright were wounded, the latter fatally. Arizona authorities gave over the woman and Dague to Pennsylvania for trial for the killing of Paul. The other man was Vernon Ackerman, alias Joe Wells, now serving a life sentence in Arizona. Fifteen convicts, including one murderer clambered over the state penitentiary wall at Florence, Ariz., while a guard was not watching, and escaped into the sagebrush and cactus of the surrounding desert. Plans are being prepared for a five-story hotel for Silver City, N. M., to cost about $175,000. The growth of mining, farming and livestock business in Grant county, N. M., has been reflected in growth and development of Silver City, the county seat, and the new hotel is a result of expanding conditions.

No Inferiority Complex About Daniel Webster

Undoubtedly the acceptance of Daniel Webster's greatness by his contemporaries was due in part to his own consciousness of it, and his skill in imposing his conception of himself on others. Even as a poor boy at Dartmouth college he had a passion for clothes. For great oratorical occasions he always wore a bright blue coat with brass buttons, and a buff waistcoat. There is more than a suspicion that the stage managed his entrances and exits. Claude Moore Fuess, in his biography, "Daniel Webster," quotes a Dartmouth graduate who remarked that "in the political processions of his youth, he never saw Webster except marching alone in a hollow square, and that without any planning on the part of the authorities in charge." Like other actors, he needed his audience. While Emerson communed with the infinite through his diary, Webster thought of himself in terms of public appearance. Webster directed his deathbed scene with a formality such as attends the passing of a cardinal or pope. After his dying oration he lapsed into drowsiness, but revived to inquire: "Have I—wife, son, doctors, friends, are you all here?—have I, on this occasion, said anything unworthy of Daniel Webster?"—Robert Morse Lovett in the New Republic.

In a recent test, a wooden door, treated with the chemicals, withstood intense heat for a longer time than one of steel. This specially fire-proofed wood has been used as a fire safeguard in the tower of the Chrysler building in New York city.

Lucky Find

When we find some slight help makes a marvelous improvement in a child, we wonder why we hadn't thought of doing it long ago. Here's a good example: "My little girl was doing fairly well," says Mrs. M. Seitenbach, 5805 Emille Street, Omaha, Neb., "but I noticed she didn't eat right and didn't have much energy. Our doctor had recommended California Fig Syrup, so I gave her some. She improved so much I wonder I didn't do something for her stomach and bowels before. She has a good appetite and digestion and plenty of energy, now." To point up a child's appetite, increase energy and strength, assist digestion and regulate the bowels there's nothing like California Fig Syrup. Doctors advise it to open bowels in colds or children's diseases; or whenever had breath, coated tongue, etc., warn of constipation. Emphasize the name California when buying, to get the genuine.

THE STORY

At a public dance Martin Forbes, a newspaper man, cuts in on Rhoda White's dance with Max Lewis, whom Martin instinctively dislikes. He overhears a conversation between Lewis and a woman, which he realizes concerns Rhoda. He recalls a "blind ad" inquiring the whereabouts of "Rhoda McFarland" and senses a newspaper story. He believes that is Rhoda's real name. She refuses to deny or admit it. However, it recalls her childhood in California. Her mother dead, she had been happy until misfortune befell her father, Professor McFarland, associated with the blow is her uncle, William Royce. They move to Chicago, where her father is engaged in mysterious work. Rhoda takes up stenography.

The only qualms of panic she ever felt when going about alone on her small excursions to the shops, the library, a near-by movie theater, took the form of a belief that she had seen him or that he was following her. If he was the source of the money they lived on, then it meant that he knew where they lived and that he was, for some reason she couldn't fathom, biding his time. But she was, as a matter of fact, too healthy and happy, even too well occupied, to think about him much.

Really she'd never lacked friends. But her father's often repeated instruction not to tell who they were or where they came from, to answer no personal questions at all, brought it about that most of her friendships were with members of the staff of the hotel, rather than with residents.

There was one exception among the guests: a middle-aged pretty woman who always wore black—a widow, Rhoda supposed. She didn't ask many questions because she was deaf, so deaf that you had to shout to make her hear. She was going to a school where you learned lip-reading so that you could tell what people said, by looking at them without hearing their voices at all. The school was downtown in one of the big buildings of the loop, and Mrs. George, whose deafness had come upon her suddenly, hated to venture down into that confusion alone. Her need was a godsend to Rhoda, who volunteered to go with her every morning.

She went into the class with Mrs. George, and having nothing else to do, she sat and watched and learned lip-reading herself. It took Mrs. George three months to learn, but in half that time Rhoda was infallible at it.

It made life more amusing. She liked to ride in the elevated and watch people talk down at the end of the car. And when she and her father had dinner in the restaurant, his long preoccupied silences did not leave her restless. She would be sampling conversations from all over the room. It was a real bereavement when Mrs. George left the hotel and went to New York to live.

But the best friendship of those four hotel years didn't begin until after Mrs. George had gone. It was with Miss Bacon, whose rather incredible first name was Florabel, the public stenographer. Rhoda had been saying good-morning to her and sometimes stopping beside her desk for a word or two, for months. But in her loneliness after Mrs. George had gone, she formed the habit of making longer visits when she saw Miss Bacon wasn't busy.

Miss Bacon was not, Rhoda perceived, as old as she had thought; her being rather stout and her wearing spectacles made her look so. But she had a jolly young voice and a nice smile. She didn't ask any prying questions. She talked quite a good deal in a nice friendly way, about her own affairs. Probably she was rather lonely herself. Not that she hadn't any relations, but that they didn't do her any good. Her father, it seemed, had had several wives who had died, one after another, and the children didn't like one another very well, and quarreled. Florabel had been the youngest and she'd had a horrible time until she'd managed to learn a trade that made her independent.

Independence was Florabel's sacred word. Everybody, she said, even a girl who was almost sure to get married, ought to have a trade. Then if anything unexpected happened, she'd got something to tie to. "Of course, not if she's rich," she added. "I'm not rich," Rhoda said. "At least I don't think we are. Father expects to be pretty soon. I wish I could learn stenography. I suppose it's awfully hard."

"It's spelling that is most important," Florabel told her. "Can you spell?"

"Oh, I think so," Rhoda said. "Spelling isn't hard, is it?"

"It was for me, Florabel told her. But Rhoda, as it turned out, was one of those lucky people who simply can't misspell a word that they've ever seen in print.

"I could teach you myself," Florabel volunteered. "I'd like to, first rate. I haven't much to do, hardly ever, in the middle of the afternoon."

There never was a more enthusiastic pupil, and Florabel seemed as excited about it as she was herself. She worked over the preliminary exercises until her hand cramped and then until it came uncramped again. She was determined, at every lesson, to surprise Florabel by how much more she knew—and she never failed.

By the end of two months she could write a clean page if she didn't try to go too fast, and she was taking slow dictation that Florabel read not from prepared exercises but out of the newspaper or anywhere.

Then one day a client appeared at the desk in the middle of the lesson. Rhoda caught up her notebook and fled, but not very far; only to the nearest sofa. When the man had finished dictating his letters and gone away she went back to Florabel. "Let me see if I can't write them from my notes," she pleaded. "He talked loud enough for me to hear him, all right, and I know I've got everything."

Florabel had been rather shocked and she made Rhoda promise not to do it again, but she did let her transcribe her notes on the typewriter and there were only a few small mistakes. What they did after that with clients they knew, was to ask permission for Rhoda to sit beside the desk and take the dictation for practice. They were mostly awfully nice about it.

People were like that, in the main, according to Rhoda's experience—kindly, glad to help one out of a difficulty if it didn't mean taking much trouble—and sometimes when it did.

The thing she couldn't understand was why they had been so cruel to her father. He never could have meant, whatever it was he'd done, to hurt anybody in the world. Yet as she remembered with better understanding some of the things that had happened in the last weeks before they left home to come east, the whole town must have turned upon him as if he'd been a leper. They'd broken him, somehow.

She couldn't believe, any more, that the happy time he'd used to talk about—the long holiday when they'd roam the world doing whatever they pleased—would ever come. But the scheme that was to make it possible obsessed him more and more. He almost never talked to her now; he didn't even want her to read to him. And he couldn't be very well, either. His face had a queer blue color sometimes that frightened her. He insisted it was nothing, and when she found out, accidentally, that he'd been to see the doctor who lived in the hotel he told her it was for a touch of indigestion. Florabel was urging her now to go out and find herself a regular job. She was better fitted for it than most of the graduates of the schools, and as good as she'd ever get until she'd had some actual business experience. Rhoda wanted to do it, but she felt she couldn't without telling her father about the plan before putting it in execution.

So she put Florabel off, saying she would go looking for a job some time, but that she didn't see that there was any hurry.

At the end of one of these conversations she saw something in her friend's face that made her ask, with a catch in her breath, "Is there any special hurry that you know about?"

Florabel visibly hesitated over her answer. "I sort of hated to tell you," she said. "Why, I'm not going to be here very much longer. You see, I'm going to marry Mr. Gage. You know. And of course that means I'm going to Denver to live. And oh, Lamb, I'd like to see you settled before I go!"

Rhoda hated to remember the little scene that followed. She'd said, in her hurt bewilderment, some pretty mean things, about independence and so on, and she'd made Florabel cry. They'd made it up, though, within the hour. She helped Florabel shop and she went to the wedding and saw the couple off on the train.

She liked Mr. Gage, herself. He was fat, like Florabel, and jolly. He looked rather solemn, though, when he said good-by to her. He gave her his card with his address on it and told her to keep it carefully. If anything ever happened to her, he said, and she found she wanted any help, she was to write or telegraph.

She refrained from asking him what he thought might happen. Of course she really knew. When, about a fortnight later, an hour after she and her father had finished their late dinner, the blow fell she hadn't been surprised at all. She had had the doctor there within ten minutes, but she'd known then that it was too late for his remedies to do any real good.

The one thing that it was unendurable to remember and impossible to forget was the way her father had pleaded with the doctor for some more day. He frantically believed that enough of the drug they were putting into his veins would give him the little handful of hours that was all he needed.

They did give him more stuff out of the hypodermic syringe, but this time it was morphine and under it he relaxed, so that for a while he talked to her, comfortably but confusedly. He thought it was just after her mother died, when she five years old.

But a little later after the nurse had come he roused, as from a sleep, stared at Rhoda in a frightened way and tried to speak to her, waving the nurse away as he did so. The only intelligible words she had been able to hear, when he lapsed into unconsciousness, were "papers" and "your Uncle William."

The doctor had been giving some instructions to the nurse. Rhoda intercepted him on his way to the door. "Will he wake up again?" she asked him.

He looked at her steadily a moment before he answered. "No, my dear child, he won't. This is the end." And then, surprisingly, his eyes filled up with tears. "You're only a little girl!" he said, as if it were a discovery. "Won't you let me get some woman here in the hotel to take you in until your friends can come and get you? And won't you let me telegraph now, for them?"

She told him, afraid her voice was betraying her sudden panic, that she would telegraph and that she'd rather go and lie down by herself in her own room. The words must have sounded all right, since he assented, though a little dubiously.

Even with the door shut she could hear her father's terrible breathing. She wanted to think, but she could not. She could only listen. It lasted a long time. When it stopped the cessation brought her bold upright in bed, unable to draw her own breath for a matter of seconds. It came at last with a sob of relief.

She cried, rather peacefully until, after a while, she heard the nurse coming to tell her.—She buried her face in the crook of her arm and lay perfectly still, and the nurse, believing her asleep, went away again, shutting the door after her.

At that, quite suddenly, her mind went to work. What had her father been trying to tell her, in that last flicker of his consciousness? But thinking about that, she decided at last, wouldn't do any good. The fragmentary words worked out to two opposite meanings.

He might, of course, have been telling her to go to Uncle William and that she'd find his address among his papers. But he might have meant that she was to look out for Uncle William and not let him get possession of the papers. And since her uncle was almost as much an ogre to her as he had been four years ago, it was the latter interpretation that she adopted.

What the doctor had said was the thing that frightened her worst. "You're only a little girl!"

That, of course, was nonsense. She was sixteen and lots of people thought she was older than that. She could pass for eighteen, well enough. He'd said that only because he was sorry for her. But sixteen was still a child according to law. You weren't of age until you were eighteen—or was it twenty-one? And if Uncle William knew where she was and learned of her father's death, he'd come and get her, and she wouldn't be able to get away from him. Well then, the only safe thing for her to do was to disappear before he had time to find out what had happened.

Looking back now on those days, after the passage of two years so packed with life that they seemed longer than the four that had preceded them, she wondered that she, a mere child of sixteen, had been able to follow out that resolution so steadily, that no one had tried to put an obstacle in her path.

Except for a telegram, purporting to come from Florabel in Denver, which she had slipped out early that morning and dispatched to herself, she had nothing to show anyone as an indication that she had a friend in the world—and the telegram wasn't much good since if you looked at it closely you saw that it hadn't come from Denver at all.

She couldn't have done it, of course, if she had not had plenty of money, and, likely enough, not then if the hotel people hadn't been accustomed to her paying the bills. She paid everybody in cash, that morning, and when this was done she had a little over three hundred dollars left, fifteen twenty-dollar bills and a few small ones.

The papers her father had tried to tell her something about had always

Cold Chickens Sought Warmth of Footlights

A London actor who toured in his early years, writes Peggy Wood in the Saturday Evening Post, tells a story of a road company of an English pig-and-chicken play—you know, "Shore Acres" and "The County Chairman"—type we used to have in America—where they "traveled" a lot of chickens who were taken from their coops, which were always relegated to the dressing rooms up in the files—and the ones, of course, without heat—and let loose on the stage in Act II to peck about at the corn scattered for them by the property man.

This was for atmosphere and held great advertising possibilities. The only trouble was that their legs were always so cold from their bitter dressing rooms that instead of pecking at the corn so temptingly spread, while the actors said their lines, the hens made a break for the footlights and been kept in a big leather hat trunk that must have been her mother's. She opened it and looked in with the idea of seeing whether her uncle's address was there, but as the trunk was nearly full she decided against going through it. She didn't much want to, anyway. She took it, as it was, along with her own small trunk in a taxi to a convenient railway station. It hadn't mattered much which station except that it had to be one that had a train that went to Denver.

The next day she took her suitcase with her to the funeral and went from the cold little chapel straight back to the station. She spent that night at the Y. W. C. A., where nothing happened except that by inadvertence she picked her new name. She'd had one all chosen, but when they gave her the register card to sign she'd begun writing her old one, Rhoda—Whitehouse McFarland. Half-way through she'd seen what she was doing and stopped. Well, Rhoda White made a good enough name, and she was glad that she hadn't discarded Rhoda. She'd have felt lonely, deprived of that.

The very next day she found a job and met Babe Jennings. The job was at the News, where Florabel had told her they took girls without experience in the stenographic department and trained them, themselves. If you were good you had a chance to be promoted to be private stenographer or even secretary to one of the executives.

The only technical untruth Rhoda told the employment manager was that her name was Rhoda White.

Her acquaintance with Babe had progressed slowly at first, and it wasn't until she'd been working for the paper six months that the older girl approached her with a proposal that they live together. Babe was excited about an ad she'd taken, of a studio for rent cheap; unbelievably cheap, seventy-five dollars a month. It was really a whole apartment; two bedrooms and a kitchenette, beside the studio itself. Her scheme was that they get two other girls and that the four of them should keep house in it, getting, that is, their own breakfasts and suppers. The other two girls were dancers, members of the corps du ballet of the opera.

They taught her to dance—the other girls had a phonograph—and it became a passion with her. She'd dance with anybody, who could dance well, in a perfect oblivion of delight.

She liked her job and wasn't long getting promoted to be special stenographer to one of the younger men on the executive staff. The only imperfection in her whole scheme of life was the little tremor of fear she felt, every now and then, that it was too good to last.

There was no real threat, was there, in Martin Forbes' imaginary discoveries? She didn't know any one named Lewis nor anyone who could be spoken of as "C. J." The only person who could be advertising for her was her uncle. For all she knew he might have been doing it for years; or and sat on the electric light bulbs until they got warm, making pitiful clucks all the while.

The leading lady complained that those wretched chickens were ruining her scenes, but the impresario knew they were worth a dozen leading ladies to the audience.

Japanese Eel Dinners

Eel meals are as popular among Japanese as are Maryland chicken dinners in Baltimore. In some Japanese cities eel houses are nearly as numerous as waiter stands at a county fair. When the diner enters an eel house he is led to a large tub of live eels. He makes his choice of the wriggling creatures, it is speared, split along the back, cut into small pieces and, with soy sauce, is cooked over a charcoal fire.

on ever since she'd disappeared. None of the girls knew her story, and they wouldn't give her away if they did. (The two dancers were away just now on tour with the opera, so she and Babe had the whole studio to themselves.) She wouldn't risk asking Babe any questions, though, about Martin. How well, she wondered, did Babe know him? The thing to do now was to go to bed, and to be sound asleep before she came home.

But she was only half undressed up in one of the little bedrooms that had been partitioned off the loft when she heard the click of Babe's key in the studio door. She listened and felt her skin pringle as she thought she recognized the voice of the man who was urging Babe to let him come in for a smoke. Babe was firm about it and sent him away.

Rhoda put on her bathrobe and slippers and came alighting down into the studio.

"Who was that who brought you home?" she asked.

"You ought to know, dearie," Babe told her. "He's your friend, not mine. When he found out I lived with you I couldn't push him off. He brought me home in his runabout, but it was John Alden stuff I was doing all the time, and I knew it."

"Was it Max Lewis?" Rhoda asked. "None other, darling," said Babe. "I had forgotten you had two of them on, tonight."

There was a silence for a moment after that. When Babe spoke again it was in a different manner.

"He asked me one queer thing about you, Red. He asked if your real name wasn't Rhoda McFarland."

CHAPTER III

Flat Burglary

Martin Forbes told himself firmly as he went to bed that night that he'd had his lesson. Rhoda had treated him not as a friend but as a reporter trying to run down a story. It must be a pretty good story if she was so afraid he'd get it. All right, by golly, he'd be a reporter, and the first thing tomorrow morning he'd go after that story and nail it down.

That maneuver he'd been so proud of at the time—getting rid of Babe Jennings and Max Lewis by introducing them to each other—appeared now as likely to have been a downright idiotic blunder. Babe and Rhoda might inhabit very different spiritual worlds, but wasn't it likely that if Babe knew her well enough to call her Red, and get away with it, she'd also know the crude material facts about her—where she lived, where she worked, and so on—which were all that Max Lewis was interested in? And wouldn't Babe spill anything she knew to anybody who was interested in finding it out? Why the devil hadn't he thought of that last night?

Well, it was probably too late to repair the error now. He'd got to get hold of Babe, though, at the earliest possible moment. The more he thought about the possibilities of his blunder the worse they seemed.

Next morning he dressed, bolted his breakfast and was waiting at the foot of the elevated stairs a good quarter of an hour before Babe could be expected to appear.

By the time he'd finished his second cigarette he felt as if he'd been standing there for hours, as if everybody that came along wondered what he was doing there. And then, so surprisingly that he had to blink and shake his head to make sure that his imagination wasn't deceiving him, he saw Babe, but Rhoda herself coming down the stairs. What would she do when she saw him? Toss her head and walk scornfully by without speaking at all? Or pause to make some other blighting asperation on his good faith in having tried to help her.

She didn't do either of those things. Her face lighted up at the sight of him, and when she came within reach she held out her hand.

"This is an awfully nice way for the day to begin," she said. "I'm sorry I called you a reporter last night."

"I am one," he told her. "Oh, I know you are, but you weren't being one last night. I don't know why I said that. I suppose because I have red hair."

"This is turning out a much better day than I thought it could," he observed. "I wish I'd known last night that this was going to happen. How did it happen? Do you often come down these stairs about this time? Have you got a job near here?"

"The door's about fifty feet away," she told him. "I've worked for the News for two years."

"Look here," he demanded, when he'd digested this fact, "did you know who I was all along—last night, I mean?"

"I thought it might be you. I wasn't sure, though, till Babe called you Marty."

"Honest?"

"Honest."

She answered him quite simply, not seeming surprised at his pressing so minute a point. He didn't quite know himself why it was so important, but it was.

"Well," he said, "we've got a lot of lost time to make up for. If I'll agree not to talk about anything you don't want to talk about, will you have dinner with me tonight?"

1. Jesus in the Home of Friends (Luke 10:38-42).

There is no place where true character is so clearly revealed as at home.

1. His reception (v. 38). Jesus was received by Martha, as she was the head of the home. Jesus must have greatly appreciated the fact that there was one home in which he was welcome.

2. Mary sitting at Jesus' feet (v. 39). She, with fine spiritual discernment, knew that sitting at the Lord's feet and hearing his word was that which would most please him. He was more concerned with opportunity to reveal himself to human hearts than with the eating of well prepared meals. Mary's way of entertaining Jesus was more acceptable than that of Martha.

3. Martha cumbered about much serving (v. 40). Both sisters loved the Lord. It would be impossible to say which loved the more, but Martha was bent on providing a fine meal for him. Because she was trying to do so many things, she was on the verge of distraction, and found fault with Jesus for permitting Mary to leave the kitchen to listen to his teaching.

4. Jesus' answer (vv. 41, 42). (a) He rebuked Martha (v. 41). He did this most tenderly for he knew that she loved him sincerely. (b) Defends Mary (v. 42). He declared that but one thing was needful and that Mary had chosen that good part which could not be taken away from her. The one thing needful for every member of the race is a heart for the Lord which brings the individual to Jesus to hear his teaching.

11. Jesus Among Foes (11:14-54).

1. Charged with being in league with the devil (vv. 14-23). Being unwilling to receive him as the Son of God and yet unable to account for his mighty works, they declared that he was casting out demons through Beelzebub, the chief of the demons.

2. Refusal to believe his miracles (vv. 29-32). They asked for a sign to which he replied that they would have a sign from heaven in his death and resurrection. He reminded them, however, that their request showed unbelief surpassing that of the heathen queen of the South and the wicked people of Nineveh.

3. Wickedness denounced (vv. 37-54). He pronounced six woes upon those who were opposing him and seeking his destruction: three upon the Pharisees and three upon the lawyers.

a. The Pharisees (vv. 37-41). These he denounced for: (1) Punctiliously observing minute rites while at the same time breaking the Ten Commandments. They carefully tithed the small herbs of the garden while practicing injustice with their fellow men and withholding love from God. He pointed out to them their attending to these external acts while their hearts were filled with wickedness. It was as absurd as merely washing the outside of an unclean cup.

(2) Desire for public recognition (v. 43). This is a common sin today. Love for titles of respect and positions of prominence is a very common sin.

(3) Feigning humility (v. 44). He compared their hypocrisy to graves which are on the ground and may be stepped upon unconsciously by some one who would thus be defiled. b. The lawyers (vv. 45-54). The strictures of Jesus on the hypocritical Pharisees aroused the lawyers, one of whom indignantly declared, "Thou reproachest us also." In reply to this Christ pronounced three woes upon them: (1) For placing burdensome requirements upon the people to which they themselves would not submit (v. 46). Religious rites should not be made irksome. (2) For the murder of God's prophets (vv. 47-51). He showed that their attitude toward him was the same as was shown to the prophets by their fathers. Jesus declared that their guilt was the same as that of their fathers and that their generation would be held responsible for all that the fathers had done. (3) For keeping back the knowledge of God by false interpretations of the Scripture (vv. 52-54).

EDITORIAL COLUMN

More Truth Than Poetry

The following, taken from the Public Forum of the Albuquerque Tribune last week, signed by "A Democrat:"

Senator Cutting has been spending his time and money to gain political control of New Mexico for 20 years. Through the weight of wealth, control of the press, catering to the ex-soldier, the native and to organized labor, he has succeeded in gaining control of the executive branch of the state government, the lower house of the legislature and at least one, and probably two votes in the United States senate.

Up until Jan. 1 1931 he has appeared in the role of a critic, bitterly criticizing every state administration. Most of his criticisms have flowed from hired pens and subsidized newspapers. He now for the first time has the responsibility of operating a state government. It finds him wholly unprepared to assume the responsibility.

Constructive Policy

He has never advocated a constructive policy of any kind, knows nothing of the state's problems, taxation, roads, public land, schools, or any of the problems of statecraft. His advisors are immature, little-minded youngsters who are interested in annexing themselves to the payroll, and fourth-rate newspaper men who are more interested in the dubious problem of paying their own grocery bill than the affairs of state.

The situation has its amusing, as well as its tragic aspects — amusing in that it is probably the first time in the history of an American state that a Republican United States Senator can and does control the democratic state organization and dictates by remote control every act of a governor elected on the democratic ticket.

Tragic Angle

The tragic angle to the situation is Seligman is a helpless and spineless pawn in the hands of boys. If he has executive ability—which even his warmest friends seriously doubt—he is afraid to exercise it.

Cutting cares nothing for the state or its government, any more that it is amusing and interesting playground for him and his group. And this group is saying which laws shall or not pass through the lower house of the legislature, and they name every person employed by the state from the comptroller down to the lowliest janitor in the capitol. Seligman signs on the dotted line after the committee has made the dots.

Self-respecting democratic leaders, capable of framing legislative and executive policies have long since been either told to get out and stay out or have become so disgusted with the situation that they shun Santa Fe, the administration of Mr. Cutting, Arthur and all of their works.

More than 73,000 miles in a New Ford

THE substantial worth of the new Ford is reflected in its good performance, economy and reliability. Its stamina and endurance are particularly apparent in sections where bad roads and severe weather put a heavy extra burden on the automobile.

In less than a year a new Ford Tudor Sedan was driven more than seventy-three thousand miles over a difficult route. The operating cost per mile was very low and practically the only expense for repairs was for new piston rings and a new bearing for the generator.

The car carried an average load of 1200 pounds of mail and was driven 250 miles daily. "The Ford has never failed to go when I was ready," writes one of the three mail carriers operating the car. "The starter did the trick last winter even at 34 degrees below zero. The gas runs about 20 miles per gallon. At times I pull a trailer whenever I have a bulky load."

Many other Ford owners report the same satisfactory performance. Every part has been made to endure—to serve you faithfully and well for many thousands of miles.

Unfurred Coats for Spring Wear

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

If it is unfurred, is made of a stunning spongy wool weave, if it has a "tricky" scarf arrangement and an unusual sleeve, then, depend on it, the coat which answers to this description is a brand-new this-season model.

Just such a coat is shown in the illustration—Hita La Roy of Radio Players pictures, posing. Both the coat and the matching beret are fashioned of tweed, the now soft, spongy kind, in mottled beige and brown tones. A scarf collar, cape sleeves and a narrow leather belt are distinguishing features.

Spring coat collections especially emphasize the favor for spongy fabrics of nubbed mixture construction. Skipper blue, tan tones, browns, green and some red are prominent. Gray has come into its own for dressier models and white nubbed black tweed registers smartly for sporty types.

Odd sleeves, now-type scarfs, low-placed big square revers and all sorts of belt treatments ranging from narrow effects to wide soft-fitted girdles of self fabric play their part in achieving coats of distinction.

Button fastening is another accent placed on the new models. In fact, the new and ingenious placement of buttons is a study in itself.

One of the newest gestures is the touching up of the coat with a dash of plaid silk. A coat in light navy, for instance, detailed with a plaid silk scarf collar with plaid facing the elbow-depth cuffs is as nifty as one may hope to see. By the way, scarfs must be worn smartly to be chic. Bright cravat ties are tied close up around the throat, either ascot fashion or in a natty bow with long streamers. As a rule, the scarf is set snugly on the inside of the collar. The chief mission of the scarf is to supply a splash of vivid color.

Peculiar "Beautification"

Native belles of the Sara-Djinges tribe in the Lake Tchad region of Africa stretch their lips for beauty. The process of stretching the lips begins when the girl is about four or five years old, and their lower lips are stretched to the size of an ordinary dinner plate and their upper lips are distended about half as far.

Destroying Troublesome Carpet Beetles

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)—WNU Service.

The larva of the carpet beetle or so-called "buffalo moth" is almost as great a nuisance in some parts of the country as that of the clothes moth. It feeds on much the same thing—woolen fabrics, silks, furs, feathers, and hair in upholstered furniture and mattresses. Carpet beetles are possibly less destructive than clothes moths because they reproduce only once a year and less abundantly. Nevertheless they are troublesome when they once get into a house and may even become so generally established that the only remedy is complete fumigation with a satisfactory fumigant. As fumigation should be tried only by some one experienced in handling fumigants, other ways of controlling carpet beetles are suggested by the United States Department of Agriculture.

or eggs of the carpet beetle that may be present, but unfortunately this cannot be done to the woolen articles that are most likely to be infested.

Furniture which has become infested should be fumigated, either in the house when the entire house is being fumigated, or in the establishment of some firm which maintains a spe-

Filling Cracks With Liquid Filler.

The young woman in the picture is filling up cracks in the floor with a liquid crack filler. Carpet beetles can live in very small quantities of dust and lint in cracks and corners, and one of the first things to be done to get rid of them is to destroy their hiding places. Kerosene may also be used to drench the cracks and kill any live beetles or larvae that may be lodged in them, but it gives only temporary relief, and the filler should be used if possible to close the cracks entirely.

Rugs, clothes, blankets, and other articles likely to be attacked should be protected from damage in just the same ways as they are protected from clothes moths. They should be thoroughly cleaned and wrapped in tight packages with crystals of naphthalene or paradichlorobenzene, or stored in tight trunks or red cedar chests. Washing in hot soap suds and subsequent ironing will kill any larvae cial room for the purpose. Hydrocyanic acid gas is the best known gas for speedily eliminating carpet beetles and other pests that may be present. Where a house has been generally troubled with them, nothing will give greater peace of mind and freedom from worry than one thorough fumigation carried on by a professional fumigator or by an intelligent, careful person capable of following directions.

Evening Fairy Tale for the Children

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

"How can I bother about being appreciative when I can't even bother about being affectionate?" asked Mr. Hairy Armadillo of his mate.

"In fact," he added, "you are the same way. You can't be affectionate."

"I know," said Mrs. Armadillo. "I heard that we were always far from Hairy Armadillo. "Our bodies are covered with a hard, hard shell—even our tails are hard."

"Tails?" repeated Mr. Armadillo. "We haven't more than one tail apiece."

"I wasn't speaking of one of us alone—I was speaking of many of us," said Mrs. Armadillo.

"We have more than one tail among a lot of us—we each have our own tail."

"That's so," agreed Mr. Armadillo. "You are quite right, only you talk so queerly."

"They did not talk for a moment or two. Then Mrs. Armadillo said:

"Tell me some of your adventures." She felt that he would be cheered up if he talked about himself. He had been a little sad of late.

"He brightened up at once. "Ah," he began, "there was the time that I ate a chain. It was a very fine and valuable chain."

"But I thought I would eat a chain as my shell body is covered with rings. "Of course not the kinds of rings that are worn by people but markings that look like rings."

"I've always felt that it was as fine as belonging to a jewelry store to have the rings I have—even if they are so very different."

"Perhaps a jewelry store would like to get hold of some different kinds of rings, but they won't get hold of mine."

"Then there was another time that I ate some birds—and another time I ate some animals."

"Oh yes, I've had some fine and splendid meals in my life."

"Speaking of meals," said Mrs. Armadillo, "wouldn't you like a meal of choice berries today?"

"Would I?" exclaimed Mr. Armadillo delightedly. "Have you some? I'm sure no one would relish and enjoy and appreciate them more than I would!"

So Mrs. Armadillo gave him a splendid meal of very choice berries and he was simply delighted.

Saw End to Invention
It is one of the legends of the patent office, but cannot be absolutely authenticated, that an official offered to resign from the patent office many years ago because he thought everything had been invented. However, Commissioner of Patents Ellsworth in his report to congress dated January 31, 1914, said: "The advancement of the arts from year to year taxes our credulity and seems to preclude the arrival of that period

No Fried Foods
Children should not have heavy, rich foods such as rich puddings, cakes and pastries, or concentrated sweets, and fried foods. Starchy foods and sweets may be cheap and may fill the children, but lack necessary vitamins and minerals.

Many Carbon Compounds
Some 300,000 compounds of carbon are now known.

Variety in Vegetables Is Good Plan

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)—WNU Service.

In our large city markets many of the best liked vegetables are to be had the year around. But this is not the case in smaller places, and sometimes the family gets very tired of the repetition of the few that are available. A little ingenuity, however, will dress some of these up so that they seem like entirely different foods, suggests the bureau of home economics of the United States Department of Agriculture.

Take carrots, for example. Carrots sliced and fried with apples are a pleasant change. Or scalloped in layers with apples. Or mashed carrots. Instead of sliced carrots or carrots in "abocating" pieces carrots served whole with parsley butter are attractive. The flecks of green over the yellow give a pretty color combination and the lemon in the parsley butter adds a pleasing flavor.

Celery need not always be served as raw, crisp hearts, with salt. The outside stalks are often better cooked. They may be cut in inch lengths, mixed with well seasoned meat drippings, put in a shallow pan and baked or "braised" until tender. Celery fritters are another possibility. Have plain stewed celery once in a while, either seasoned with butter, salt and pepper, or served with a white sauce or a sauce made from the liquor in which the celery is cooked. Celery and canned tomatoes are good cooked together in about equal parts, or celery and sliced or diced white turnips.

Cabbage has no end of possibilities. Try it shredded, simmered in milk for five minutes, then thickened slightly with blended flour and butter salt and a little cream added. Scalloped cabbage and apples may be now to you. Cabbage, spaghetti and cheese, covered with buttered crumbs, will appeal to everyone. If you can get red cabbage or Chinese cabbage once in a while, you have what seems like a brand new vegetable. Don't forget cabbage salad. Chopped raw cabbage with cream cheese dressing is delicious and so is pineapple and cabbage salad with mayonnaise. Cabbage slaw, hot or cold, is a form of cabbage salad.

Canned corn should be kept in mind. Besides using it in corn custard and corn fritters, you can combine it with tomato and grated cheese and serve it on toast. Corn chowder is made of milk, potatoes and canned corn, with onion, salt pork and parsley for flavor and color.

Onions we have always with us—boiled, baked, creamed, french fried, stuffed, or combined with tomatoes or fried with apples. There are still other ways in which onions can be used as the main vegetable.

Saltily or oyster plant; parsnips; beets, both stored and canned; Jerubeing affectionate—it runs in our family.

"I mean that it runs in our family not to be affectionate—it doesn't run in our family to be affectionate."

"I understand you. That's all right," said Mr. Hairy Armadillo, in a quiet tone of armadillo voice.

"I can understand it," said Mrs.

salem artichokes; mushrooms; and some of the dried legumes, such as lentils, dried limas, dried navy and kidney beans and peas are among the winter vegetables which vary monotonously. Not all of these furnish vitamins in amounts comparable to the vegetables of green or yellow color, so they are better looked upon as supplements to other foods. With a raw vegetable salad, however, any of the last list may be introduced from time to time for the sake of change.

"BAKED ALASKA" IS AN EXTRA DELICACY

Festive Dessert Can Be Made at Home.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)—WNU Service.

It must have been a courageous cook who first thought of putting ice cream in the oven long enough to set the crust of a meringue spread over it. At any rate, the result, which was christened "baked Alaska," has been considered an extra delicacy by the chefs who have produced it. There is no reason, however, why this festive dessert cannot be made at home.

Ice cream of any flavor may be used. Perhaps vanilla goes best with the sweet crust, or such favors as caramel or macaroon. Any of the meringues made without stirring, frozen thoroughly to hold their shape may be used for baked Alaska. Or ice cream made in a freezer with a dasher may be packed for two hours or more in a mold of a shape that will be suitable for turning out in a compact brick. A flat oblong mold is good, or a melon mold.

Before turning the mold of ice cream out, have ready the stiffly beaten egg whites, to which sugar, vanilla, and a small amount of salt have been added. Two tablespoons of sugar per egg white will give a crisp, crusty meringue. From three to six whites will be needed, according to the amount of ice cream and its shape.

Turn the ice cream quickly onto a thin layer of cake placed on a plank or board that can be put in the oven safely. Spread the meringue over the top and sides of the ice cream, and bake quickly in a hot oven until the meringue browns lightly. Slip the baked Alaska on a serving dish and use at once.

Food Hints of Interest to All

By NELLIE MAXWELL

If the power of evil has never been so manifest in the world before as it is today, the power of God has never been so apparent.—John Jay Chapman.

To the majority a meal is not finished or at all satisfactory unless some form of dessert is served. It may be a few stuffed dates, or a bit of fruit fresh or dried, and a handful of nuts. Whatever it may be, the meal is well rounded and more enjoyed when something sweet finishes it.

Fruit Whip—Pick over, wash and cover with cold water, two dozen prunes. After soaking ten to twelve hours cook in the water in which they were soaked. Remove the stones, and put the pulp through a coarse strainer. To the pulp add one-half cup of sugar, two tablespoons of lemon juice, the grated rind of half a lemon and one-third of a teaspoonful of salt. Now fold in the whites of six eggs which have been beaten stiff.

Turn the mixture into a buttered baking dish, set in a pan of water and bake until firm in a moderate oven. Serve with a boiled custard or with sweet cream.

Toasted Sponge Cakes With Pineapples—Cut stale sponge cake into slices one-half inch thick, then cut with a biscuit cutter rounds the size of pineapple slices. Spread these rounds with butter and sprinkle with sugar, set into the oven until delicately toasted and glazed. Drain the pineapple slices, add to the sirup one-half cupful of sugar, one tablespoonful of lemon juice, the grated rind of half a lemon. Add the pineapple and heat to the boiling point, cook two minutes. Reduce the heat and keep hot ready to serve. Place a slice of the pineapple on each piece of cake and pour over the sirup. Serve at once.

French Fried Onions—Mix and sift one cupful of flour, one-half teaspoonful of salt, two-thirds of a cupful of water, beat until smooth; add two tablespoonsful of cooking oil and fold in one stiffly beaten egg white. Slice ten or more onions one-eighth inch thick and separate into rings. Cook in milk to cover one hour. Drain and dry, dip in the batter and fry until a light brown. Drain on soft paper.

Crescenttes—Cream one cupful of sugar with one-half cupful of shortening, add two well beaten eggs and beat well. Stir in one-half cupful of coconut milk, sift one and one-half cupfuls of flour with two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, one-fourth teaspoonful of soda and one-half teaspoonful of salt. Brown two cupfuls of rolled oats, put through the food chopper, add one cupful each of chopped raisins and grated fresh coconut. Mix well and drop by spoonfuls on a buttered sheet. Bake in a moderate oven.

Cold Night Sandwich—Chop sausage fine and combine with fried onion. Butter bread, spread with the mixture and brown on both sides in a hot frying pan. Serve with a hot drink.

Another one with the chopped sausage is prepared with a little soup and a cupful of grated cheese; stir with the cheese sauce, add chopped plums and a few slices, ripe or green. Serve cold.

The Boyhood of Famous Americans

James A. Farrell
White collar jobs were not easy for boys to get fifty years ago. A youngster had to take what was offered him and at a small wage, too. He worked long hours and he generally did what the boys of today would consider a man's work. James A. Farrell was no different from the run of job seeking boys of his time.

He wasn't quite sixteen when he had to go to work. His father lost his life at sea and the lad's earnings were needed at home. He was husky for his age. He had no trouble getting a job as a laborer in the plant of the New Haven Wire company. He was paid $4.05 a week for twelve hours daily of back-breaking work.

Such a life didn't fit in with the plans young Farrell had made when he was attending grammar school in New Haven, Conn. He was born in that city in 1893, the son of a ship owner who skipped his own craft. His father was in comfortable circumstances. He counted on giving his son the benefit of a college education.

But the elder Farrell met with reverses and went down at sea with his ship before he was able to get his son started in life with the advantages of a higher education. The youngster didn't brood over his changed circumstances. He went out and got a job. He couldn't have found a much harder one. With his sturdy body and good health he was able to hold his end up with the grown men with whom he worked. Tired as he was when he returned home at night he studied and read good books. He wasn't going to be cheated of an education even if he did have to work as a day laborer.

He made such progress in his work that he became a mechanic when he was seventeen years old. Here again he showed an ability to work long, hard and intelligently. By the time he was nineteen he was a foreman over 200 workmen and earning $30 a month.

As a boy he had made several voyages with his father. These trips aroused his interest in geography. He poured over the maps of far away places when he studied at night after a hard day in the mills. He would memorize his self-taught lessons and then draw the maps from memory, filling in the important cities, rivers, mountains and seaports.

In this way he cultivated a memory that was to serve him in good stead later in life. His associates say that he never forgets an important matter that he once files away in his head. Early in his career he was able to call off fact and figures without having to refer to books or statements.

The boy found it hard at first to cultivate a good memory, but he kept doggedly at his plan to remember the facts he thought he might need. Soon the task came easy to him.

He had been quite a trader when he was a little fellow. He swapped marbles, jack-knives and other treasures of boyhood with his playmates. He seldom got the worst of a deal. He had the instincts of a good salesman before he entered the steel business as a lad of fifteen.

New Premium-Quality Gasoline

establishing an advanced standard of motor-car performance in all cars, was announced today by Standard Oil Company of California. It is called "Standard" Gasoline, and although it is a premium motor fuel in quality, it will be sold at no increase over the regular prices.

The new gasoline has been given the company name, the announcement says, because it is the finest gasoline the company has ever produced without Ethyl, and is the result of all the company's 53 years of experience in the refining of motoring products.

Among its advantages to motorists are a higher anti-knock quality, less carbon formation, the elimination of unburned gasoline odors, an all-around improvement in engine performance and a decrease in valve sticking, fouling spark plugs and crankcase dilution, the company announced. "Standard" Gasoline, effective in every car, is particularly adapted to motor cars of high compression. — See their ad on page 5 of this paper.
