Mayer, Young, G. F. Pruett, Marion Pruett, Hubbard, Paul Long and George Straley as special guests. There was a bevy of children "partying" in another room. It was a pleasure indeed to have Mrs. Mayer and her secretary, Mrs. Young, present. A very gracious address was made by Mrs. Mayer, who kindly praised the little club and its work. It was decided to meet at the cemetery on Friday, Mar. 20, for the purpose of setting out hedge. Sides were chosen to save pennies, with Meses. Wilson and Kile as captains. The losing side will entertain the winning side. After the business meeting, a social hour was enjoyed. Mrs. S. J. Pruett, our efficient president, whose birthday fell on that date, was presented with a very prettily decorated cake by the hostess. In the contests, Meses. Wilson, Hightower, Hubbard and Kile won prizes. A St. Patrick motif was featured in decorations and refreshments. Molded "Killarney" salad was served.

The Ancho Woman's Club is small in numbers, but strong in unity, each member individually and collectively proud of her club; ardent in its work and eager to promote the welfare of the community in every possible way and all feel that the visit of Meses. Hannett Says, Cutting is Seligman's "Sugar Daddy"

Speaking at a banquet of the Young People's Democratic Club at the Franciscan Hotel, Albuquerque, Monday night, at which about 250 were present, ex-governor Hannett bitterly scored Senator Bronson Cutting and Governor Seligman on what he said was an agreement between the two officials, whereby Senator Cutting, during the last state campaign, financed Gov. Seligman, thus betraying the interests of the party putting him in the senate. His speech, in substance, follows:

"If the Democratic party is to continue to be the plaything of Bronson Cutting, if it is necessary for the continued existence of the party that he should finance, own and run, then the party emblem should be changed from the American Eagle, to the Dollar Sign.

"If it is necessary for the continuance of the Democratic party to have a 'SUGAR DADDY' to finance it and to have it for his plaything when the party comes into power, then the usefulness of the party is destroyed and it no longer deserves to exist."

In opening his speech, he said: "There are 55,000 Democrats in the state, but there is neither a Democratic party or a Democratic organization. The Democratic organization was sold and delivered to the junior Republican senator of this state." He said that many prominent Democrats had refused to truckle and bend the knee to the arrogance of the senator's wealth, and in return, had been driven from the party councils. Such men, he said, were, Jim Hinkle, Carl Hatch, Clyde Tingley, George Hunker, Hiram and Bob Dow, Judge R. H. Hanna and John B. McManus.

Other speakers were equally as strong in their denunciation of the methods used to control political matters in line of the above speech, all of whom belonged to the disgusted portion of the Democratic party, referred to by Mr. Hannett.

Childhood and Youth Week

The Sunday Schools of Carrizozo are sponsoring Childhood and Youth Week. The week of March 22 to 29, inclusive, has been designated for that purpose. All Sunday School pupils, their parents and all interested in Sunday School, are not only cordially invited, but also urged to take part. We want all of Carrizozo and vicinity to be Sunday School minded. Beginning with the Sunday School period at 9:45 Sunday morning, Mar. 22, let all Sunday School pupils and teachers be in their respective Sunday Schools and classes. Following the class period all are invited to the preaching service at the Methodist Church. The pastor will have a special sermon for young people. Young people of all ages from a day to a century are welcome. Surely, you are not too young nor too old for that classification.

Monday night, Mar. 23, at 7:30, the various music teachers of Carrizozo will sponsor a musical recital and reception for the parents at the Methodist Church. This is for the Sunday School pupils and their parents, but every one is invited.

On Wednesday night, at 7:30, P. A. Smoll, Supt. of the New Mexico School for the Blind at Alamogordo, will deliver an illustrated lecture in the High School Auditorium, showing nature study pictures. The Carrizozo Woman's Club saw these pictures at Alamogordo some time ago and all praise them very highly. There is something worthwhile for all and every one should enjoy it. No charge, except a free-will offering to defray expenses.

On Saturday night at 7:30, the Sunday Schools will give a big party for the pupils at Community Hall and we want all pupils to be present.

NOGAL ITEMS

About 12 men began work on the new pipeline from the Lake to Nogal Canyon this week. This will help a few of the unemployed men around here. A few teams were also put to work.

Willie Hole and son just arrived from points in California and Arizona and state that conditions are bad there. They probably will go to Ruidoso for the summer.

N. P. Greuffell, mining man of El Paso was here this week, looking over mining possibilities, and says that there is no reason for the mines to be lying idle. Mr. Greuffell expects to have things going here soon, providing that he can get in touch with the owners and also get connected with the business.

Sam Johnson of Hagerman was here this week after a man to operate a pumping plant near that place for irrigation purposes. Jesse Peacock, who has operated a plant near Hagerman for two seasons, went to look the proposition over and will likely accept the job.

Homer Haley, who has been here for the past two months, left this week for his home in Oklahoma.

Chas. LeBaron is doing some improvement work on his home this week.

J. M. Hurley, who has leased the Vega place for the year, is preparing the soil for a bumper crop. Conditions were never better for farming.

The big Bonito Dam is almost completed; it's a wonderful piece of work and furnishes a beautiful view.

We understand that the contract for the Carrizozo - Capitan Highway is to be let soon and that the road will follow the rail road up Indian Canyon, leaving Nogal off the highway, which we think is unfair and unjust to Nogal, one of the oldest towns in the county and in the center of the mining district, where thousands of dollars have been taken out from the mines and still have very bright prospects. But our highways are cut off and entirely miss our town, the operation of these mines will be delayed, if ever worked again. Again, the highway will miss the beautiful scenery of the Lincoln National Forest. The writer believes that if some man of interest and influence would take this matter up with the government and explain the conditions, fact and the bad effect it might have on the district, the road would remain where it is.

Mr. Ellis, manager of the Fisher Mining Co., in the Bonito mining district, reports that the mill will soon have their mill up ready for business. They have bot gold and silver property.

For Sale—Fresh, mountain grown cabbage, at Burnett's Grocery in Carrizozo, supplied by Jesse May of Nogal.

For Sale—1926 model Ford Sedan; good rubber; ready to go cash or terms.—See Jesse J. May, Nogal, N. M.

K. T. Byrne and Carl Mamer of Fort Stanton, were Carrizozo visitors on Wednesday of this week, and while in town, Kenneth paid this office a pleasant call.

Alfred Eminger of Mishawka Ind., an old-time friend, is here paying Mrs. J. H. Fulmer a short visit.

Posture While Sleeping Is Important

One Picture Shows Bad Sleeping Posture Produced by Poor Bed Springs, the Other How Much Better It Is to Lie on Firm, Level Springs.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.—WNU Service.)

Good posture should be maintained during the whole of the twenty-four hours, in standing, sitting, walking, sleeping, working, and playing. Extension workers of the United States Department of Agriculture and state agricultural colleges are constantly showing farm women through home demonstration clubs, the effects of good and bad posture, and the points that characterize good posture at any occupation. It may be thought that because one knows nothing about what is going on during the hours devoted to sleep, and because the body is in a relaxed state, that posture while sleeping has no connection with posture during the waking hours. When it is realized, however, that seven or eight hours out of every twenty-four are usually spent sleeping or lying on a bed, and

Evening Story for the Children

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

Whenever Mr. Crow was feeling sad and mournful, as he sometimes felt, Mrs. Crow always treated him as though he were a child crow instead of a grownup Mr. Crow.

"They still put the scarecrows in their fields; they still do," he said. "You mean those creatures made out of sticks and things which are dressed up like men with guns, eh?" asked Mrs. Crow.

"Yes, they are called scarecrows," said Mr. Crow. "They are put in the fields to scare away the crows, and that is why they have such a name—you see—scarecrows, or let us scare the crows."

"It's foolish of them," said Mrs. Crow. "We may not be perfect but we have our good points."

that no other occupation of the twenty-four hours keeps a person in one place for any period as long as this, the importance of sleeping in a good position, which will improve the posture in the daytime, is quite easily perceptible.

Sagging bed springs can do a great deal of harm. Whether the person sleeping on them lies on the back or the side, the tendency is to produce an unnatural curve in the spine, and if the same position is always maintained, this may become permanent. The shoulders and head are also thrown out of position on a bed that sinks down in the middle, or that causes one unconsciously to twist about in order to be comfortable. Another less direct effect of bed springs on bodily posture is caused by fatigue. One does not rest well in an uncomfortable position, and when the muscles and joints are tired, posture is affected unconsciously.

"Yes," said Mr. Crow, "we have. It is true that we do steal the grain and corn."

"We love corn—all crows do."

"And many of us are thieves—in fact, most of us are thieves, I believe. "But we must eat and we must live, and if we can't go to the markets and put down pennies, and nickels, and dimes, and quarters for our food, we just have to take it as we can."

"Yes," Agreed Mrs. Crow.

"We can't shop as people can. We have no money, no pocketbooks, no bank accounts at our disposal. "The squirrels have savings banks where they save nuts as children do their pennies."

"But we are without all these things. Nor can we grow food as the farmer can do."

"So it makes me sad to hear myself complained of all the time. As you have said, we have our good points."

"Although I will admit that our family does steal and that we do rob the farmer of some goodies—all the harm we do doesn't half come up to the good we do."

"We eat grubs and different kinds of worms which would destroy the corn, and we really save the crops for the farmer many, many times."

"Yes," agreed Mrs. Crow, "what you say is true. And I do wish you would take some comfort knowing that you have good points."

"And, too, you are such a good mate, and so kind to the children, that I think everything of you."

"Caw, caw," said Mr. Crow. "That is indeed pleasant to hear. Caw, caw, I think that is fine."

So Mr. Crow comforted him a great deal, and they spent a lovely afternoon talking about their good points.

It was a fine subject and they enjoyed it immensely. And I can understand that, can't you?

Good Things for the Family to Eat

By NELLIE MAXWELL

"This world is a difficult world indeed. And people are hard to suit. For the man who plays the violin, is a bore to the man with a fute."

Soups are enjoyed in any season. There is such a variety of canned soups from which to choose that the busy housewife or business woman may serve herself and family a different soup every day of the month.

The home prepared soups of fresh meat and bones with plenty of marrow are much more enjoyed when nicely prepared. Long, slow cooking, with meat and bones put on in cold water to draw out all the flavor, will give a most tasty and nourishing broth. Adding rice, barley, or vegetables of different kinds will vary the flavor as well as the enjoyment. To prepare and serve a good vegetable soup is an accomplishment which is worthy of praise.

Tons of American confections go to every part of the world. From America last year from June, 1921, to June, 1920, eighteen million pounds of candy was shipped. The world is growing conscious of the value of candy.

The scientists of the United States Naval Observatory who went to the Pacific Island of Nihoa to see the total eclipse of the sun have proved that lillipups are a valuable asset in gaining the confidence and help of savage tribes. Since money means nothing to such semi-barbaric people, candy buys their good will.

A box of candy is always a most appreciated gift from youth to very old age.

Peanut Brittle.—One may make candy in her own home; it is not much work nor does it take a great deal of skill to make the pan candies. Take a pound of peanuts, shelled, remove the brown husks and roll with a rolling pin until the nuts are like coarse crumbs. Take one pound of sugar, place in a thick iron or heavy aluminum pan over heat and stir until the sugar is well melted, stirring well from the sides of the pan. Add the nut meats with one-fourth of a teaspoonful of salt, mix well and pour onto a buttered baking sheet.

Creamy Fudge.—Place three cups of sugar, one-fourth cup of milk, one-half cup of milk, two squares of chocolate cut fine, in a saucepan and stir over a slow fire until the sugar is dissolved and the chocolate melted. Cover and cook one minute, remove the cover and cook without stirring until a soft ball is formed in cold water, 233 F. Add two tablespoonfuls of cooking oil, half a teaspoonful of salt, and one teaspoonful of vanilla. Set into cold water, cool until the mixture is barely warm, then beat until creamy and it loses its shine. Pour into well-buttered pans and mark off into squares.

Iceing.—Into a double boiler place one and three-fourths cups of sugar, add one-third of a cup of boiling milk; when the sugar is dissolved add one teaspoonful of lemon juice and one-half teaspoonful of baking powder, and the last thing, after adding two unbeaten whites of egg and beaten with an egg beater over hot water until the egg is slightly thick, add the lemon juice and baking powder after the saucepan is removed from the heat. When cool enough to spread add coconut and served on the cake.

Put a tablespoonful of salt and a tablespoonful of soda in an aluminum saucepan, cover with hot water and immerse your flat silver when needed cleaning. It will remove the tarnish in a few moments.

Oklahoma Oil Several small oil fields existed in what was known as Indian territory, but it was not until the Bartlesville field was developed in 1903 and the building of the Prater Oil and Gas company pipe line into that district followed immediately by extension of the line to Chicago—that Oklahoma began to have a marked effect in oil production.

Fur Used Like Fabric on New Coats

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

As to fur or no fur on the spring coat, it is entirely a matter of preference. The fact that many of the smartest furs are as supple, as lightweight and as easy to manipulate as the fabrics they trim has accomplished wonders in doing away with the prejudice which may have existed with some in regard to fur trims in the rainy springtime and now they can be worn any time.

Indications are that there will be as many fur-trimmed coats seen this spring as unfurred. In order to be distinguished looking, however, the fur must be styled along entirely new and original lines. Smart in every detail is the fur-collared and cuffed coat which is here illustrated. Rita La Roy of Radio pictures, who poses for this illustration, wears this model with its wide cuffs and generous collar of beige lapin to perfection.

As to fur cuffs you never can tell these days where they will end and the sleeves begin. Nevertheless, regardless of the fact that most of the sleeve in this instance is fur, swing to the extreme bulkiness or ugliness about it. Notice the diagonal fastening of this coat, also the adroit seaming of the cuffs.

Fashion is particularly kind to the woman who is apt one day to be in a mood to wear fur on her coat and the next day wishes her spring wrap were bits of the new sort without an inch of fur on it. The problem has been worked out very cleverly via adjustable collars which are so fashioned that cunningly devised seams of the flat fur are made to be pulled through slots in the cloth, or perhaps the fur buttonholes, the seams to be slipped over decorative buttons on the coat.

Which brings us to a vastly important subject, that of buttons on the new coats. Double-breasted, coats which call attention to two rows of

Big buttons are the "best word" for style, and will be worn by many this spring. Coats which button in a single row down the front are also good

CHILDREN NEED STORM-PROOF PLAY CLOTHES

THIS SUIT TAKES PLACE OF OVERCOAT, SWEATER AND LEGGINGS.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.—WNU Service.)

The winter play suit illustrated was carried out in a new, shower-proof, wind-proof cotton fabric. The intention is to shut out wind and rain or snow so that a child dressed in one of these suits and gaiters can play out of doors in any weather. Several pattern companies have patterns that can be adapted to the special features of this play suit, which was designed by the bureau of home economics of the United States Department of Agriculture.

The straight collar fits snugly up to the neck. A soft knitted collar may be used equally well. The sleeves are straight, and have the width at the wrist confined by a loop and button. This is a good plan when a sweater is worn underneath as the close-knit wristband of the sweater will keep out wind.

Part of the fullness of the legs is taken out by a dart extending from the knee to the bottom. This leaves less bulk to be slipped under the gaiters. Patch pockets with one corner turned down and caught by a button are placed near the waistline in a convenient position for the child. The upper edge of the pockets is cut on a slant so that child can get his hand into them easily.

A suit of this kind takes the place of an overcoat, sweater, and leggings.

France and Italy Reach Agreement as to Their Naval Strength—Seventy-First Congress Comes to an End.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

DIPLOMATS and financiers, working steadily and persistently, have brought about an accord between France and Italy on the question of relative naval strength, and the probable result will be that the three-power London naval treaty will become a five-power pact. Thus the French and Italians will give up the idea of starting a building program that would compel Great Britain to increase her naval forces under the "escalator" clause of the treaty, and the United States and Japan would be relieved of the fear that their relative strength would not be maintained without a lively resumption of building.

Arthur Henderson, British foreign secretary, was most active in the final stages of the negotiations between France and Italy, making trips to Rome and Paris, and in given credit for excellent work. But it is admitted that the groundwork for the agreement was laid by Hugh S. Gibson, American ambassador to Belgium, who for several months had been laboring to bring the dispute to an end. Acting under personal orders from President Hoover, he held a series of private talks with Mussolini, Tardieu, Briand and others, and transmitted their various proposals to Rome and Paris and finally to the British.

The financial end of the accord consists in a long term loan to Italy, to be made by French and American bankers, which will really be a war debt moratorium in disguise. The Fascist government will receive perhaps three and a half billion dollars, which sum, it is said, will "save Italy from bankruptcy and put the country on its feet." Specifically, the loan will be used to retire and convert internal debt obligations, $1,520,000,000 of which fell due on October 1 last. Mussolini's previous efforts to obtain long term loans from American and French bankers had failed because, largely, of the naval dispute with France.

While the terms of the Franco-Italian agreement were temporarily withheld from the public, it was learned in Paris that it provides that French naval superiority over Italy be reduced from 240,000 tons to 100,000 tons, most of the reduction coming from projected submarines and super-submarines. It was agreed that the battleship tonnage allotted at the Washington naval conference would not be used for ships of more than 25,000 tons. France obtained the right to build three 23,500-ton vessels of the super-cruiser type.

In return for superiority in global or total tonnage, it is believed that France gives Italy a slight superiority in light cruisers and torpedo destroyers, but retains supremacy in submarines. It was understood that Italy demanded the sacrifice of super-submarines in the French program and that France made the concession because its coastal submarines are sufficient for its present needs. France and Italy, it is understood, agreed on parity in 10,000-ton cruisers.

LEAL proceedings are under way in Washington in the contest between President Hoover and the senate over the right of Chairman George Otis Smith of the power commission to hold that office, and the senate is represented by John W. Davis, who was Democratic candidate for the Presidency in 1934. He was selected for the job by a subcommittee of the Judiciary committee composed of Senators Norris, Walsh and Steiwer. The proceedings are expected to add another chapter to the history of constitutional clashes between the executive and legislative branches of the government.

Selection of Mr. Davis as counsel for the senate assures a spectacular court test, with the former Presidential candidate on one side and possibly Attorney-General Mitchell on the other. The final decision probably will be rendered by the Supreme court.

WITH a filibuster in the senate and rather uproarious gaiety in the house, the seventy-first congress came to an end at noon, March 4. During its life it carried out fairly well President Hoover's program of legislation, despite frequent acrimonious clashes with the Chief Executive since last December. It is unnecessary to recount these disputes, for every one is familiar with them. In only two major affairs—the nomination of Judge Parker to the Supreme court and the recent veterans' bonus loan act—was the President defeated.

The important items of legislation during the third session included these: Routine annual appropriation bills carrying more than $6,250,000,000. Emergency construction program, providing $116,000,000 for speeding up public work, including rivers and harbors, highway construction and other federal improvements.

Relief for drought-stricken areas, including $20,000,000 for food loans, provided in measures embodying a $65,000,000 loan fund; $2,000,000 for rural sanitation activities; and $3,500,000 of unexpended balances in funds for relief of food-stricken states.

Program of federal public building construction increased by $100,000,000. Series of unemployment relief measures enacted, contemplating federal unemployment census, long-term planning of public construction to meet emergencies and federal co-operation in unemployment agency activities.

Additional soldier hospitalization facilities afforded in $20,000,000 program. Naval modernization bill, authorizing $30,000,000 to remodel battleships Louisiana, Idaho and New Mexico, to meet standards prescribed by the 1922 Washington arms conference.

The seventy-first congress earned the one distinction of being the heaviest spending of all peace time congresses. In all, it appropriated approximately $10,000,000,000 for government uses.

IN ITS closing days the congress enacted the Muscle Shoals legislation which would put the government into the power business, but President Hoover vetoed the measure, sending in a long and well argued message. The senate sustained the veto, the vote being 49 to 34, and the bill was dead. Mr. Hoover had predicted he would be accused of favoring the power trust, and members of congress did accuse him of this, and the incident, it was said, made it certain that the power controversy would be one of the major issues of the next Presidential campaign.

Mr. Hoover also failed to sign the Wagner bill for federal co-operation with the states in establishing a national system of employment exchange. It was understood he would "pocket veto" this measure, which would bring the number of his vetoes to fifteen.

IF YOU are to take the word of Henry H. Curran, president of the Association Against Prohibition, a majority of the people of the United States are now ready and willing to vote for the repeal of the Eighteenth amendment. In his annual report to the directors and 300,000 members of the association, Mr. Curran declared that the dry cause had not advanced an inch during 1933, while the wet movement had registered important gains. He asserted that the November election doubled the wet representation in the house, and raised the senate wet group from 15 two years ago to 22 at present. He said the house now has a wet vote of 100, compared with 70 in 1933.

SECRETARY of Agriculture Hyde denies that he is to blame for delay in distributing the $20,000,000 drought relief fund. In a letter replying to a resolution introduced by Senator Caraway asking why Mr. Hyde had not begun the distribution, the secretary said: "I have the honor to inform the senate, that because of the extended debate upon the appropriation of $20,000,000 contained in the Interior department bill, and because of the uncertainty as to the provisions of the act, it was not possible to work out the administration and accounting problems entailed until the act was finally passed and its provisions definitely known."

He explained the machinery which the department had set up in order to distribute loans through intermediate credit organizations and directly to the farmer.

"There exists now no reason why application for loans may not now be received and payment made shortly thereafter," he concluded.

MAJ. Ralph Royce of the army air corps is being congratulated on the announcement that he has been awarded the Mackay trophy for 1933. This is in recognition of the "Ardie patrol" which he led through severe winter weather from Selfridge field, Michigan, to Spokane, Wash., and return, in January, 1933. It was a severe test of the skill and stamina of the pilots and the stability of the planes and was successfully carried through.

The trophy, which is competed for annually by United States army officers under War department rules, was first presented 18 years ago to the Aero Club of America by Clarence H. Mackay. The National Aeronautical association, successor to the Aero Club of America, is present custodian of the trophy for the War department.

CHAIRMAN RASKOB told the Democratic national committee at its meeting in Washington all about the wet policy which he thought the party should adopt, but said he would not ask action on his suggested platform until the next meeting. Dry members from the South vigorously opposed Raskob's views or any consideration of them by the committee. It was decided that a $10,000,000 campaign fund should be raised.

LOW bid for the general contract on the Hoover dam and power plant in Boulder canyon was submitted in Denver by a combination of western construction firms—the Six Companies, Inc., of San Francisco, and the government engineers recommended that this bid of $48,800,005.50 be accepted by Secretary of the Interior Wilbur. Work on the project, the biggest engineering job ever undertaken in this country, probably will be started before the end of March.

Government officials, although asserting work would be hastened so unemployment conditions in the Southwest would be relieved, warned workers against a general migration to the Nevada-Arizona line dam site as there were 10,000 laborers on hand at Las Vegas, Nev. Estimates for construction forces ranged from 2,000 to 2,500 men at work at one time when the program gets into full stride.

ONE of the most eminent engineers of the American army, and indeed of the nation, passed on when Lieut. Gen. Edgar Jadwin, retired chief of the army engineering corps and chairman of the interocean canal commission, died at Gorgas hospital in Panama City, while in Ancon preparing to go to Nicaragua to survey the possibilities of a Nicaraguan canal, he was stricken with apoplexy, and a cerebral hemorrhage ended his life.

General Jadwin, who was born in Honesdale, Pa., in 1863, was graduated from West Point in 1890 and had a brilliant career in the engineering corps for nearly forty years, retiring in 1923.

He served in the Spanish-American war and the World war, but was best known for his peacetime work in the United States and in the Canal Zone. The Jadwin plan of flood control formulated after the disastrous Mississippi valley floods of 1927 was the army officer's most important work. The plan called for expenditure of $225,000,000 and was opposed in congress, but finally passed with administration support.

VICEROY LORD IRWIN and Mahatma Gandhi, both making concessions, reached an agreement for peace in India, and the civil disobedience movement that had lasted for a year came to an end. The Nationalists looked on the pact as a triumph for the doctrine of non-violence. The British government, though it yields considerable, probably gets none the worst of the bargain. By the terms of the agreement, it is understood, the Nationalists abandon their resistance movement and will work for qualified dominion status in the second round table conference. In return, their imprisoned members will be released and most of the confiscated property will be returned; they are permitted to conduct boycotts that do not aim specifically at British goods, and the poor natives along the coast are given the right to make their own salt.

The most important gain for the British was the point in which the Nationalists agreed to confine themselves at the next round table conference to the specified scope of constitutional questions elucidated by the first round table meeting in London. This commits Gandhi to the principle of a federation of Indian responsibility, but with British safeguards covering finance, defense, foreign affairs, the position of minorities and the discharge of India's national debts.

SIR OSWALD MOSLEY, wealthy British socialist, and his wife, Lady Cynthia, have broken with the Laborites and formed a new party of their own which asks for 400 candidates in the next election. The Mosleys especially attack the unemployment policy of the MacDonald government.

AL CAPONE, Chicago's public enemy No. 1, did not fare so well when he ran afoul of the federal judiciary there. Judge Wilkerson sentenced the notorious gang leader to six months in jail for contempt of court in excusing his non-appearance in court some time ago by pleas of illness at Miami. The case was appealed, Capone being released under bond.

SENATOR Arthur Capper's committee on food prices reported that it found "an alarming tendency toward the monopolistic control of the food of the nation by a small group of powerful corporations and combinations," the tendency being especially strong in the case of bread and milk. A careful scrutiny by the federal trade commission and the Department of Justice was recommended.

TWO new governments within a week for Paris! First a navy group forced Sanchez Cerro to resign and named Chief Justice Ricardo Elias provisional president. Then along came a bunch of officers and troops loyal to Cerro and out went Elias and his friends. The new army junta was headed by Col. Gustavo Jimenez.

Blending makes it better

IN the test kitchen of a great soup maker, the gifted master-chef creates the blend of ingredients to produce the perfect soup. In a scent-laden room in a corner of France an expert blender of perfume invokes his highest genius—that our sense of smell may be gratified. In a work-room fragrant with the aroma of many types of coffee beans, a highly-paid specialist concentrates his energies that we may be provided with a coffee blend to please our palates. Whether it's soup or soap, tobacco or tea, music or mustard... blending is vital to the production of the best of each. Equally as vital, if not first in importance, is the knowledge and genius of the blender. He must know how. The best gasoline, too, is blended. In the processes of a modern refinery three types of gasoline are produced. They are, Natural Gasoline, Straight-run Gasoline, and Cracked Gasoline. Each possesses certain desirable qualities necessary for perfect motor operation... but... no one of them possesses all these wanted characteristics. So CONOCO Gasoline is a blend of the three. There is Natural Gasoline, to give quick starting. There is Straight-run Gasoline, to give power and long-mileage. There is Cracked Gasoline, with its desirable anti-knock quality. Just as carefully as the perfume blender at his delicate task, CONOCO refiners have developed their balanced blend of these three ingredients. Theirs is the gift of knowing how to merge the qualities of the three gasolines to create a balanced, triple-test fuel. One brand of coffee outsells all others because of the expertness of its blender. And so, with CONOCO Balanced-Blend Gasoline, the skill of the blender accounts for the popularity of the product. Stop today at the sign of the CONOCO Red Triangle and have your gas tank filled with this better motor fuel.

WHAT a relief and satisfaction it is for mothers to know that there is always Castoria to depend on when babies get fretful and uncomfortable! Whether it's teething, colic or other little upset, Castoria always brings quick comfort; and, with relief from pain, restful sleep.

And when older, fast-growing children get out of sorts and out of condition, you have only to give a more liberal dose of this pure vegetable preparation to right the disturbed condition quickly. Because Castoria is made expressly for children, it has just the needed mildness of action. Yet you can always depend on it to be effective. It is almost certain to clear up any minor ailment and cannot possibly do the youngest child the slightest harm. So it's the first thing to think of when a child has a coated tongue, is fretful and out of sorts. Be sure to get the genuine; with Chas. H. Fletcher's signature on the package.

"First Aid—Home Remedy Week" Coming
Chicago.—First Aid-Home Remedy Week, Sterling Products' "better merchandising and greater advertising baby," celebrates its tenth anniversary March 15-21. Druggists everywhere will co-operate. "Fill That Medicine Chest Now!" is the slogan of action. The National Association of Retail Druggists sponsored the event in 1923, and with the National Wholesale Druggists' Association and National Association of Retail Drug Clerks have, with other organizations, massed their energies for success of this movement for the abolition of much needless suffering and often the salvage of life. Dr. W. E. Weiss was first to okay the idea as a splendid aid to preparedness for unexpected illness or accident. This is stressed as essential insurance for immediate relief. The every-spring festival of sales is a fixture of housecleaning time. Sterling Products is giving a tenth anniversary surprise party to every druggist in America—for the Dominion as well as the States endorses this idea of a more intensive advertising effort in drugdom. Replacing the old streamers there has been adopted a colorful poster representing a filled medicine chest displaying the slogan of each part success: "Fill That Medicine Chest Now!"

What the Railroads Do For the Nation

The Manufacturer:

The strong relation that exists between the railroad industry and general prosperity is shown by statistics covering operations in 1929.

In that year the lines paid about $1,086,802 in taxes each day--$755 a minute. Their bill for materials and supplies totaled $1,329,535,000. Twenty-three per cent of the nation's output of bituminous coal, 19.2 per cent of fuel oil, 20 per cent of timber cut and 17 per cent of iron and steel were purchased by the railroads.

About 20,000,000 persons--a sixth of the total population--are directly or indirectly dependent on the lines for their livelihood. There are 1,000,000 railroad bondholders and more than 800,000 stockholders. To these must be added the vast army of persons who own insurance policies, as insurance companies are large purchasers of railroad securities.

Facts such as these vividly demonstrate the seriousness of the present railroad situation. The lines, due to over-taxation and unregulated competition from other transportation agencies, have watched their profits dwindle almost to the vanishing point. The inevitable result must be decisive retrenchment and decline in standards of service.

No other agency can yet replace the railroads in the mass-transportation of commodities. The time is ripe for the complete overhaul of railroad regulatory laws, and an unprejudiced inquiry into the entire transportation situation. The public will be the principal sufferer if our suicidal railroad policy is maintained much longer.

Tumbleweed Ladies

E. S. in San Jon Acantha:

There are no brown leaves out on the plains
To dance when the March wind blows;
But Tumbleweed Ladies, all dressed in brown,
Whirl 'round and 'round on their toes.

I know they are dancing out there tonight
With billowy skirts thrown wide--
Their ballroom floor the new-plowed fields
Where ghosts of Ute warriors ride.

Out there where the wind plays requiem
To trail-herds of bygone days
Tumbleweed Ladies dance 'round on their toes
To the music the March wind plays.

W. O. W. of New Mexico and Mexico to Meet in Artesia, April 1-3

Head Consul G. C. Smith Announces Large Gathering of Members to be Held

THE head camp meeting of the Woodmen of the World of New Mexico and Mexico will be held at Artesia, New Mexico April 1, 2 and 3, according to announcement today by Head Consul G. C. Smith of Las Cruces, New Mexico.

The head camp meetings are held every two years and, according to Head Consul Smith, delegates and members of their families will journey from all parts of New Mexico and Mexico for the meeting this year at Artesia.

The Woodmen of the World is exceptionally interested in Mexico and New Mexico because the national association owns more than $300,000 worth of municipal, county and state securities in Mexico and New Mexico.

Head Consul Smith stated that many new members are now being obtained and will be initiated in one large class at the time of the head camp meeting.

The Honorable W. A. Fraser is president of the Woodmen of the World Life Insurance Association. He is one of the leading fraternalists of the world. He has had more than 39 years experience in the fraternal insurance field. He has been associated with the Woodmen of the World since 1897. For many years Mr. Fraser has been active in the field of public and community service. During the World War he was connected with the bureau of conservation of natural resources and chairman of the advisory board for the division of military and naval insurance.

Last June 6 the Woodmen of the World celebrated its fortieth birthday.

Climbing steadily the Woodmen of the World now is the strongest Fraternal Organization in existence, recently being declared 104.6 percent solvent, holding total investments in securities of over $98,000,000 with gross assets amounting to over $192,000,000.00. The membership of the society is estimated over 500,000. Since its organization in 1890 the Woodmen of the World has paid in death losses and disability benefits more than $203,000,000.

W. A. Fraser

Two of the largest enterprises that have placed the Woodmen of the World in the fore ranks of progressive Fraternal Insurance societies, and made it nationally prominent are the War Memorial Hospital at San Antonio, Texas and Radio Station WGW at Omaha, Nebraska.

At the present time the Woodmen of the World is constructing a $150,000 Chapel and Bird Sanctuary at San Antonio, on the grounds of the Memorial Hospital.

Iowa Brothers Set New World's Record in Ford

IOWA state officials and civic leaders witnessed the establishment of a new world's non-motor, non-wheel stop automobile endurance record recently, when Ralph and Roland Davis, brothers, brought their Model A Ford to a halt at the east entrance of the state capitol in Des Moines after 2,775 hours and 46 minutes of continuous driving.

When Governor Hammill, standing with Walter Farrell, executive secretary of the Iowa Chapter of the American Automobile Association, gave the signal to stop, the Ford had traveled a total of 47,153.3 miles over all sorts of roads in all sorts of weather and had exceeded by 23,877 miles and more than 2,225 hours the American non-stop endurance record which, theretofore officially recognized, was made by a much heavier car under almost ideal conditions on the Indianapolis speedway last year. In the course of the endurance run, the car, known as "The City of Des Moines," covered practically the entire state of Iowa.

Engineers who examined the Ford at the conclusion of the run asserted that neither engine nor chassis showed evidence of the grueling strains to which they were subjected during the 118 days of continuous driving. Both apparently, according to the engineers, would have been good for another 50,000 miles or more.

Lesson for March 22

THE USE AND ABUSE OF GOD'S GIFTS.
(Temperance Lesson)

GOLDEN TEXT—And he not drunk with wine, wherein is excess; but be filled with the Spirit.

LESSON TEXT—Luke 11:13-18.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus Tells Us How to Use God's Good Gifts.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus Tells Us How to Use God's Good Gifts.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—The Sin of Drunkenness and Gluttony.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Enslaving Power of Strong Drink.

1. Warning Against Covetousness (vv. 13-15).

1. The occasion (v. 13). The occasion of this warning was the request of one of the company that Jesus be the umpire regarding a disputed estate. Two brothers were in trouble over an inheritance.

2. Jesus' reply (v. 14). He said, "Man, who made me a judge or a divider over you?" He refused to enter the sphere of the civil law. Christ's mission was pre-eminently spiritual.

3. The warning (v. 15). The clear implication is that if due attention is given to inculcating right principles in the hearts of the people, civic and economic problems will largely adjust themselves.

II. The Parable of a Rich Fool (vv. 16-21).

The parable of this rich planter shows clearly that to be concerned with earthly riches while neglecting God is the height of folly. Observe:

1. The increase of his goods (v. 16). This clearly implies that his riches were rightfully obtained, for the ground brought forth plentifully.

2. His perplexity (v. 17). His land was producing more than his barns would hold. He was at a loss to know what to do. No thrifty man wants to see the legitimate fruits of his toil perish. If he had possessed right views of life and a sense of stewardship before God, he would have seen that his barns had enough for his personal needs and then have distributed the surplus to the needy.

3. His fatal choice (vv. 18, 19). He chose to enlarge his barns and give up his life to ease and luxury. He made plans without consulting God.

4. His awful indictment (vv. 20, 21). God called him a fool. His plans were cut short by an immediate death sentence.

III. The Certain Cure for Anxiety (vv. 22-34).

Having shown the folly of rich men who gained gold and lost God, Jesus now urged the disciples to trust God and dismiss all anxious care.

1. The argument (vv. 22, 23). It is summed up in one brief sentence. "The life is more than meat and body is more than raiment."

2. The illustrations (vv. 24-29). (a) God's care for the fowls (vv. 24-26). The ravens do not sow nor reap. They have no storehouse nor barn yet they live, for God feeds them. If God does not forget the fowls, certainly he will do more for his children. (b) God's care for the flowers of the field (vv. 27, 28). If God is so careful of the flowers which appear but for a day, how much more will he clothe his children?

3. The exhortations (vv. 29-34). (a) The getting of food and clothes should not be man's chief concern. (b) Seek the kingdom of God (v. 31). Those who make God's kingdom first shall have all their needs supplied (Phil. 4:10). (c) Be not afraid (v. 32). God's good pleasure is upon his own, and all good things he will give. (d) Practice self-denial in order to be able to give to those in need (vv. 33, 34).

IV. Be Ready for the Coming of the Lord (vv. 35-48).

Having warned the disciples against the acquisition of worldly goods while forgetting God, and shown them the needlessness of anxiety for food and clothing, he showed them the blessedness of being in a state of readiness when the Lord shall come. This attitude of heart he made clear by two parables:

1. That of the returning lord (vv. 35-37). The Lord will be so pleased with those who are waiting for him that he will take delight in sitting at the banquet with them and even serving them.

2. The thief in the night (vv. 38-40). This parable shows that the time of the Lord's coming is not known. The proper thing is to be ready.

3. Reward will be given to the faithful (vv. 41-48). The faithful servant will be promoted at the coming of the Lord. A awful judgment will be meted out upon the unfaithful servant.

WOMEN SHOULD LEARN USES OF MAGNESIA

To women who suffer from nausea, or so-called "morning sickness," this is a blessing. Most nurses know it. It is advised by leading specialists: Over a small quantity of finely cracked ice pour a teaspoonful of Phillips' Milk of Magnesia. Sip slowly until you are relieved. It ends sick stomach or inclination to vomit. Its anti-acid properties make Phillips' Milk of Magnesia quick relief in heartburn, sour stomach, gas. Its mild laxative action assures regular bowel movement. Used as a mouth-wash it helps prevent tooth decay during expectancy.

Average man who is granted a two weeks' vacation is satisfied if he can make it three.

Was a Problem

"Mary Jane caused me many anxious moments," says Mrs. G. G. McDowell, 4035 Wentworth Ave., So., Minneapolis, Minn. "She was listless, weak, had no appetite."

"She suffered a lot from colds until I began giving her California Fig Syrup. It made her strong, able to avoid colds; gave her a good appetite and digestion. She is the picture of health, now."

"For over 50 years, California Fig Syrup has been helping bilious, weak, headachy, constipated babies and children. Doctors by thousands recommend this pure vegetable product. Children love its flavor. It acts gently to open the bowels in colds or children's diseases. Bowels become regular with its use and remain that way."

Cold in Head, Chest or Throat?

RUB Musterole well into your chest and throat—almost instantly you feel easier. Repeat the Musterole-rub once an hour for five hours . . . what a glorious relief!

Those good old-fashioned cold remedies—oil of mustard, menthol, camphor—are mixed with other valuable ingredients in Musterole to make it what doctors call a "counter-irritant" because it gets action and is not just a salve.

It penetrates and stimulates blood circulation and helps to draw out infection and pain. Used by millions for 20 years. Recommended by many doctors and nurses. Keep Musterole handy—in a tin, tube, or jar.

THE STORY

At a public dance Martin Forbes, a newspaper man, sits in on Rhoda White's dance with Max Lewis, whom Martin instinctively dislikes. He overhears a conversation between Lewis and a woman, which he realizes concerns Rhoda. He recalls a "blind ad" inquiring the whereabouts of "Rhoda McFarland" and senses a newspaper story. He believes that is Rhoda's real name. She refuses to dance or admit it. However, it recalls her childhood in California. Her mother died, she had been happy until misfortune befell her father, Professor McFarland, associated with the blow in her uncle, William Royce. They move to Chicago, where her father is engaged in mysterious work. Rhoda takes up stenography. Her father dies suddenly, vainly trying to give her a message about "papers" in a trunk. Rhoda goes to live with a fellow-worker, "Babe" Jennings.

Babe sang out a rather knowing hello to the two of them, but even if it was late, came on unheeded.

Rhoda called back over the intervening heads, "Martin's coming to supper with us tonight," and then with a nod vanished into the entrance to the building.

The implication he'd perceived in that last remark of Rhoda's disturbed Martin so much that he forgot to be polite.

"Look here," he said to Babe as she came up, "did that bird Lewis that I introduced to you last night find out where Rhoda lived from you?"

"You two make a pair, all right, you and Max. It seems you both went gaga about Red last night. Why, Max took me home, and since I told him she and I lived together, I suppose he knows. Why shouldn't he?"

"He was too d-d anxious to find out, that's all. He's a bad boy if I know one when I see him. How much more did you tell him about her?"

"Why, we talked of little else, dearest," said Babe. "He wanted to know all about her, and I tried to be accommodating—like I am now. Look here, who elected you Red's guardian? I've known her about seven hundred times as long as you have and I'm not trying to get her in dutch with anybody."

He didn't know what to say to that, but the look in his face must have answered for him, for with a complete change of manner, she went on. "What is it, Marty? Is there anything wrong with him? Do you know anything about him?"

"No," he told her, as they entered the building together. "But I think he's up to something queer and I'm going to try to find out what it is. And if you happen on anything that gives you a line on it let me know." He thought she hesitated as though she had something on her mind, but all she did was to nod assent and say as she walked off that they'd see him for supper tonight about seven.

Martin's own day's work was yawning for him in the local room, but he didn't go there. He went into the "morgue" instead, on the chance that he'd find there some scrap of information about Max Lewis. The search was much better rewarded than he'd expected it to be.

Max had had his promenade in the public eye by virtue of a breach of promise suit for one hundred thousand dollars that had been brought against him by a chorus girl. He had written her the usual half-dozen imbecile love letters. All that gave them interest, either to the public or to the chorus girl herself, had been the fact that Max, though it wasn't clear that he had any property of his own, had a vested right, so to speak, in an authentically rich bachelor uncle who might be expected to come down and settle the girl's claim.

The only direct lead for Martin in the mess was the uncle's name and address. It was "Charles J. Forster," and he was spoken of as a capitalist with large oil interests in various parts of the country—Charles J. Forster, "C. J." That practically tied it up, but not quite. Not well enough for Martin, who was a good reporter.

He went downstairs, stopping on the way to copy the want ad in the personal column for the address of Rhoda McFarland.

"I think I'm on a story," he told Rhoda in charge of the advertising file. "I'll promise to be discreet about it, and you find out for me who the X-man is who's been running this ad." Rhoda thought he might do that and went off to look it up, coming back within five minutes with the name written on a slip of paper. X-man was C. J. Forster, just as Martin had thought he would be. His address was the Worcester hotel.

The next step would be to interview Mr. Forster and try to persuade him to tell why he was advertising for Rhoda McFarland. This was a step he didn't want to take without Rhoda's permission. So he made his way to the local room and went to work for the newspaper.

At half past five that night he arrived at the address Rhoda had given him and paused for a survey of the premises from the outside. It was a remodeled dwelling with a converted basement which was now an antique shop, and a first floor, guessing from the sign painted on the glass, that housed a dressmaking establishment. It served some commercial purpose during the day, anyhow, but it was now dark. It must be a rather lonely place at night, he thought.

Something had happened in the studio; at least something had happened to one of its tenants since he'd seen them that morning. He sensed it the moment they let him in, and he grew surer he was right as time went on. There was no lack of cordiality about their welcome. They were trying hard, he saw, to keep up the festive spirit of a party. They'd got up a really good supper—creamed sweetbreads with fried bacon was the foundation of it. The studio was an attractive place to live in, once you'd got inside the door, and it was plain the girls were proud of it. But tonight something had gone wrong. It might, of course, be nothing more than some small domestic quarrel that had flared up between them, but it didn't seem like that.

All that Rhoda betrayed was a lack of the buoyancy he'd felt in her last night and again during their brief encounter this morning. He noted that when he and Babe were keeping things up between them and she went, so to speak, off duty, she seemed to be listless and depressed. As for Babe, she seemed to be bursting with something. She was excited and she was trying to be mysterious.

Martin found himself getting rather imaginative. One minor episode while they were at supper made him wonder whether he was imagining the whole thing.

The bell rang from downstairs and the rather nondescript visitor whom Babe admitted announced himself as a name-taker for the new city directory. He wanted to get the names and occupations of everybody who lived in the apartment. Babe recited them while he wrote them down in a little leather-bound notebook. He had to have Rhoda's name spelled for him.

There was no real reason for doubting that he was what he pretended to be, yet Martin did doubt the man almost to the point of asking him to show his credentials. Also he thought the man turned a rather penetrating look on him. But he didn't want to do something officious every time he was with Rhoda, nor to do anything tonight that would add to her disquiet. It was probably nothing but imagination.

It wasn't, though, imagination that something had happened to upset the girls. Babe eventually gave out that away completely. It transpired that she had a fairly heavy date at nine o'clock and she seemed worried over the idea of leaving Rhoda in order to keep it. She even offered, in what she meant for a confidential aside, to break this date so that Rhoda, if Martin went home early, should not be alone in the studio.

Rhoda vetoed the proposal with a vigorous shake of her red head and the cloud over Martin's spirits lifted as he realized that she meant to let him stay on and have a visit alone with her after Babe had gone.

The last thing Babe did before, in full panoply, she left the studio was to go to Rhoda and hug her. "Don't you worry any more about it, precious," she said. "Something nice is going to happen soon that'll make you forget all about it. I've got a hunch about that that's strong enough to bet money on."

Martin bit down the question he wanted to ask the moment Babe had really gone and said something nice about her instead: what a good loyal sort she was.

"Oh, she is!" Rhoda assented with a shaky laugh. "But she's about as easy to see into as a goldfish bowl. She promised she wouldn't let you suspect that anything had happened here, and she's gone off now without the faintest idea that she's given anything away." Before Martin could think of anything appropriate to say to that, she went on, "I'll tell you what it was: there was a burglar here this afternoon."

"Did he get away with anything—important?"

His choice of that word seemed to strike her but she didn't comment upon it then. "He got three hundred dollars of mine," she said. She went on in response to Martin's start of astonishment, "I'm ashamed to admit I was so silly as to keep a lot of money like that in cash in my room. I'd had it a long time and I thought it was safely hidden."

Martin asked if they had any idea when it had happened or how the man had got in.

"It would be an awfully easy place to get into any time during the day," she admitted ruefully. "The dress-making people like to leave the outer door unlocked so that their customers can come right in. Our door wasn't broken, but I suppose a burglar could have picked the lock easily enough."

"Was the three hundred dollars all he took?" Martin asked.

"Wasn't it enough?" she countered with a sober smile.

He was afraid it was thin ice, and he didn't want to get her angry with him again, but he ventured to answer, "No. That is, I wasn't surprised at the burglary but I was surprised that he took money. Haven't you missed anything else? A document of some sort, or a letter—or perhaps a photograph? I'm just guessing, you see."

She remarked, "I don't think you're exactly guessing. You're thinking about Mr. Lewis and the things you heard that woman telling him, last night. But I haven't any document or any letter—I mean I haven't lost any—and I don't own any photographs, except of Babe and Doris and Isabel."

"I was thinking about Lewis," he confessed. "I know a little more about him than I did last night. I wanted to find out what he was up to, especially after Babe told me he'd taken her home last night and asked her a lot of questions about you."

He saw her face flame at that and he thought she held her breath while she waited for him to go on. "He isn't what anybody would call a valuable citizen but, at that, he doesn't seem like the man to break in here and steal your three hundred dollars. He wrote some indiscreet letters to a chorus girl once, and she sued him for a hundred thousand. Probably she wouldn't have done it if he hadn't had a rich respectable uncle she hoped would buy her off. His name's Charles J. Forster. He lives at the Worcester hotel. Did you ever hear of him?" Apparently she uttered no importance to the question for she answered it with a mere absent shake of the head. Her thoughts were somewhere else.

"I want to tell you one other thing I did this morning, Rhoda," he went on, and this brought her focused inquiring look back to his face. "I got them to look up, in the want-ad file, the real name of the man who's been advertising for the address of Rhoda McFarland. It's the same man, Charles J. Forster—'C. J.' do you see? The man they were talking about last night."

The flash of incipient pain he'd seen in her face changed to a look of mere perplexity before he finished speaking. "But I don't know who he is!" she told him vehemently. Then, suddenly silent, she asked, "Did you do anything else?"

"There was only one thing left to do, and that was to look him up and ask him why he was advertising—for her. And—and I didn't want to do that unless you said you wanted me to."

"You might have asked him," she said. "After what I told you last night you might have argued that it was no affair of mine what you found out about her. But I'm glad you didn't. Please don't do it, Martin. Let me tell you a little, and then don't try to find out anything more."

"I'm Rhoda White now but I used to be Rhoda McFarland. The only person who'd try to find me would be my uncle, William Royce. Mr. Forster must be working for him. He frightened me so when I was a little girl that I've never got over being afraid of him. He was cruel to my father and wanted to take me away from him then. We ran away so that he couldn't."

"I was only sixteen when my father died and I was afraid that if Uncle William heard about it and knew where I was, he'd get me, then. There wasn't any one else, you see. So I changed my name and pretended I came to Chicago from Denver, and got a job on the News."

"And, Martin, I've loved it. I've loved it all. The whole two years. I've been happy. And I don't want anything changed. You won't do anything to change things, will you?"

She was looking rather blurred and he blinked in order to see her better. "No, I won't do anything you don't want me to," he said. Then he did a little rudimentary arithmetic. "If that was two years ago you're only eighteen now."

"Do you mind?" she asked him seriously.

"No," he said. "I don't mind at all." After a while she said, "You must have worked awfully hard today, to have found out all that about Max Lewis and the chorus girl. How did you do it?"

"It was all in the 'morgue,'" he told her. "It took about ten minutes." She'd been working for the paper two years and she didn't know what the "morgue" was. Martin, with a true reporter's pride in the whole news-gathering side of the organization, told her all about it. He was startled when a sudden movement of hers, a sort of shudder, roused him to look around into her face. "What's the matter?" he gasped.

"I think it's horrible," she said shakily. "It means that there's no forgiveness at all. Anything that anyone has ever done—or that people think he has done—is kept there, waiting to be got out and told all over again. Anyone who wants to go and open a drawer can find it. And they call it the 'morgue.' Martin, I didn't know anything could be as cruel as that!"

"But you've got it all wrong," he protested. "A newspaper doesn't keep a 'morgue' for the purpose of intimidating people with their pasts. Nine times in ten the file's used for writing handsome obituary articles. When a man dies they want to be able to tell how important he's been."

But nothing he could say on the subject seemed to change her feeling about it. "Let's try to forget about it," she said at last.

On his agreeing to that—and he'd have agreed to almost anything just then—she pushed her advantage a little further. "Let's forget about everything that's mysterious and depressing, will you? Will you agree that the burglar was just a plain burglar who was perfectly satisfied with my three hundred dollars, and that Mr. Forster and Mr. Lewis were only trying to find me—so settle a bet, or for some silly reason like that? And then, Martin, will you take me somewhere for the rest of this evening; where we can dance?"

"You bet I will," he said. "I'll agree to the whole program—for the rest of the evening—if you'll let me say just one thing first."

She considered this request a little dubiously, but finally said, "All right; just one, though."

"If you're really eighteen years old . . ."

"I really am," she interrupted, "—almost. My birthday's in two weeks—October thirty-first; Halloween, it is."

"Horrah!" he said. "We'll have a party! Well then, on Halloween you'll come of age and you'll have no more reason to be afraid of your uncle than I have. He'll have no more authority over you than he'll have over the king of England. And even in the meantime I don't see that he could do very much. That's all. Now let's go to the Alhambra. And heaven help Leader Higgins, or anyone else who tries to cut in on us tonight!"

Downstairs in the tiny vestibule she noticed that there were some letters in their mail-box. The postman had come, she remembered, while they were so excited about the burglar that they both forgot to go down and get the mail. She didn't want to be bothered with it now, though. All she wanted to do was dance.

She forgot the letters again when she came home from the Alhambra, but Martin remembered them and went downstairs with the key to bring them up. When he came back he'd merely said, after looking at her a minute, "Good night, Rhoda," and gone away, although the idea of a kiss had hung palpably between them for an instant. She wouldn't have minded his kissing her good night, but she got a real thrill out of the fact that he didn't, although he evidently wanted to. She realized that when he did kiss her he'd mean more by it, and there was a touch of real Scotch thrift about Rhoda that appreciated the economy.

It was the same quality in her that made her put off letting herself drift away into a pleasant day-dream over the hours just passed until she should have finished her evening tasks and got into bed. Otherwise she wouldn't have looked at the letters at all.

One of them was addressed, in an angular feminine hand she didn't know, to her, "Miss Rhoda White." It was with a rather indifferent feeling of perplexity that she sliced open the envelope. But with her first incredulous stare at what was written on the stiff folded sheets of newspaper it contained, she felt a frightened wish that Martin hadn't gone home, for the thing began: "Dear Miss McFarland,"

She was trembling so that she went over and sat down on the couch before she read any further. She felt as if things were closing in on her somehow; the way a bird feels, perhaps, when the hunters are driving it toward the wall behind which a man is waiting with a gun.

"I hope I haven't frightened you, beginning like that," she said, "but you do not know me—you may never have even heard of me—and I wanted to make sure that you would read this letter, because it is important to me whether it is to you or not."

"I am going to ask you a great favor. It has got nothing to do with money. I have got money enough, thank heavens! to put this through even if it costs a whole lot. But I am simply desperate for something I am sure you can help me find. It was a paper that I asked your father to take care of for me when I was working for him in his laboratory."

"It makes too long a story to tell this way and I want you should have my whole confidence in this matter. Will you come to lunch with me tomorrow in the Tip-Top Inn? I will be there from twelve o'clock on, at the table to the right of the door in the Dutch room. I will be wearing a black hat and a dark blue dress."

"Yours most sincerely,

"CLAIRE CLEVELAND."

"P. S. I want to say this in addition. I think it will be as much for your advantage as mine if you come. The man who treated me so shamefully is the same man who played a mean and treacherous trick on your father and practically ruined his life in order to make himself rich; and I think if you and I work together we can force him to make things right for you as well as for me—at least as far as money can make anything right. Let me warn you of one more thing, and I hope it is not too late. Do not answer any communication of any sort from any stranger until you and I have had our talk. I have reason to believe he now has designs on you, too. You may not have found out yet what some men can be like, but believe me (not slang) I know!"

"Yours, CLAIRE."

Simple Old Method of Evading Penalty of Sin

Every one unacquainted with old English customs is interested by the story of the Sin-eater in Mary Webb's novel, "Precious Bane." Sin-eaters did not constitute a religious sect. They were employed in some counties of England and in Wales in connection with funeral rites. Their office was to eat bread and drink ale which had been placed on the bier, and thus symbolically take upon themselves the sins committed by the deceased person. Having done this, the sin-eater pronounced the "vase and rest" of the dead person and asserted that to procure this he had pawned his own soul. There were not wanting men to perform this rash office, but it was not so rash as might appear; for the sin-eater could see to it that the same means of acquiring impunity was invoked for him at his decease, so that no matter what accumulation of sin he had made himself responsible for, the whole burden would be lifted by a subsequent sin-eater. The custom seems to have lingered in Wales until the forties of last century.—Montreal Family Herald.

Diamond in History

India was the original home of the diamond as a jewel. For centuries India remained the sole source of Europe's diamond supply. About 1730 diamonds were discovered in Brazil. In 1867 diamonds were discovered in South Africa. South African diamonds constitute more than 90 per cent of the world's supply. From their discovery to the present time they have yielded 90,000,000 carats. The diamonds of the world probably represent a value of $5,000,000,000. There have been some diamonds found in the state of Arkansas. The Arkansas diamond mine in Pike county has produced several thousand diamonds equal in color to the best produced in other parts of the world and 1 per cent harder than the hardest from other parts of the world.

"It's not like that in Russia," he declared. "Things are cheap in Russia. Why, at the present time, you can get a divorce in Russia for a dime!"

"Yeah? But I bet it's from a Russian!" snorted a skeptical bystander. —Los Angeles Times.

Hi Girls Lost to Corona

Saturday night, Mar. 14, 18 to 28 Even so, the game was good and was refereed by Raymond Lackland. Our girls did their best, but they seemed to be playing well enough to match the Corona girls, who showed that they could win as graciously as they could take the defeat handed out to them on three different occasions by the Carrizozo girls. The local girls, under a strain in working up a play the previous week, had neglected their practice and coupled with the absence of Marguerite English who was ill with tonsillitis, they were in no condition for the game, but were cheerful and showed their usual good sportsmanship.

This being the last game, the team has completed a very successful season, having won nine games, losing four and tying 2, the total score of the season being 825 against 282 points for the opponents; 93 personal fouls against 96 for opponents; 57 technical fouls against 87. Girls receiving letters this year, were: Dorothy Dozier, Captain; Frances Charles, Georgia Peckham, Katherine Kelt, Marguerite English, Mary Lewis and Willie Kelt, first sub. Marguerite English received her third and last letter this year as she is a Senator. Dorothy Dozier, Katherine Kelt and Georgia Peckham received their second letter, they being Juniors. Willie Kelt, a Junior, Mary Lewis and Frances Charles, Freshmen, received their first letter. The six remaining of the team plan to win all their games next year.

Raymond Lackland, popular hardware clerk of the old Hedrick & Co. store, will be retained by the present proprietor, F. A. English.

The delegation was composed of the following ladies—Madames May English, Anna Stimmed, Uta Mayer, Ina Mayer, Miss Ella Brickley, and Mrs. Elizabeth Gallesher. They were accompanied by E. H.

"Standard" Gasoline

Something of the spirit of Paul Revere, or the Pony Express riders, was brought up to date recently by the Standard Oil Company of California, whose private fleet of airplanes rode the skies by moonlight to announce the company's new "Standard" Gasoline to Northwest motorists. Taking off from Seattle at 7:15 p. m., Standard Oil Pilot H. W. Loeff, settled down 8 hours and 5 minutes later at Medford, Oregon, where advertising announcement material was taken over from Pilot Shirley E. Brush arriving from San Francisco.

Loeff then took off at 8:40 a. m. for a circuit of Portland, Tacoma, Seattle, Walla Walla and Spokane, completing his race with time at 5:33 p. m. the same day, after bucking headwinds and dust storms in eastern Washington. By commissioning its own pilots to carry advertising to newspapers, service station posters, labels and other material for relaying to hundreds of distant towns in the northwest, the company was able to time its announcement concurrently with deliveries of the new fuel to motorists elsewhere throughout the west.

Henry Stutz Dies

Henry Stutz, father-in-law to Henry Silva, Sr., of the Tucson mountain district, and an old pioneer of this section of the state, died at the home of his son-in-law Monday, at the age of 88 years. Mr. Stutz came here from Switzerland something over 60 years ago and engaged in mining and the stock business, and was at one time, foreman of the Bar W and other ranches in this part of the state.

He was a great friend of Chairman Henry Lutz of the Board of County Commissioners and was highly esteemed by the many who knew him. The funeral was held Tuesday and attended by many of his old friends over the county, all of whom, tender their sympathy to the surviving relatives.
