

NOGAL ITEMS

N. P. Greufelt and another mining man from El Paso are here, looking into the mining business and will try to get the mines going again.

Mrs. V. T. Welch is here this week from El Paso, visiting relatives and friends.

Mrs. W. H. Grey and family left Tuesday this week for Bisbee, Arizona.

Sam Cox and wife left for points in the east this week, Sam having a two weeks' vacation from his work at Fort Stanton and will spend a portion of that time with his folks in Texas.

Albert May got something in his eye while working on the pipeline this week and has suffered considerable. He is still confined to his room away from the sunlight.

Murray Zumwalt is suffering from a badly crushed hand from the effects of handling heavy pipe.

Dr. Johnson was a visitor here this week from Carrizozo.

Marion Peacock was elected school director for a 3-year term for precinct No. 11, Nogal.

Officer Henry Lutz Nabs Stolen Auto

Monday afternoon, Marshal Henry Lutz noticed a large car standing on the curb at the Masonic Temple and when he went on his night duties, the car was still there. He thought it might belong to one of Dr. Blaney's patients, but on consulting the Doctor, he had no knowledge of it, whatever. This aroused suspicion and the Marshal took the car in custody and examined its contents.

He found it to be in good running condition, but was at a loss to know how to proceed in order to locate the owner. On raising the cushion on the front seat, he found a letter from the Amarillo Drug Co., and as an experiment, he wired the Chief of Police at that place and had a quick answer to the effect that a car answering the description of the one captured by Mr. Lutz, had been stolen from a certain resident Sunday. Then followed communications until it became a certainty that the captured car belonged at Amarillo. It is a Chrysler, in the best of running order and one of the latest models. Mr. Lutz is now awaiting the arrival of an officer from the above city, who will reward him for his capture.

Ben Sanchez contracted rheumatism at Tino's dance Wednesday night. How long had it been since you danced, Ben? Yes, Ben was so excited he went and kissed the fiddler.

Commissioner Salcido occupied his usual seat on the Board of County Commissioners held on Monday of this week.

Mrs. D. Mosier, wife of Mr. Mosier, bookkeeper at the Carrizozo Auto Co., left last Sunday for Chanute, Kans., after receiving word to the effect that her mother was very ill. She was to have wired her husband in case her mother's condition did not improve, but no word so far has arrived, bearing out the old saying, "that no news is good news."

LOCAL MENTION

Mrs. T. J. Pittman and Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Hunter came over from Cloudercroft last Saturday evening and were guests of T. J. Pittman and son Hugh, leaving for home Sunday afternoon. Mrs. Hunter will be remembered as the once Miss Ida Mae Pittman, when the family as a whole resided in Carrizozo. There is still a touch of winter left at Cloudercroft; it's good and high up there, you know.

Mrs. Geo. Simpson and daughter Mary were here from Corona Wednesday, staying over as guests of Mr. and Mrs. Brack Sloan and leaving for home late in the afternoon. Mrs. Simpson is a sister to Mr. Sloan.

Ray Sale has purchased the Pace property, next door to the Lutz residence. Mr. Sale purchased the residence from Mrs. Clara Stidham of Tempe, Ariz.

Mrs. Frank Maxwell and small sons, Mrs. Mildred Argo and son Bill, who are visiting the Maxwells, were Carrizozo visitors Tuesday. Mrs. Argo's home is in Trinidad, Colo., but she likes our part of New Mexico and especially its perpetual sunshine.

Mr. and Mrs. Billy Norman are here this week from Tucuman and will remain for an indefinite period, as Billy, like other men in the railway service, are unemployed just now.

Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Ross, who have been residing at the Pace residence, now the property of R. R. Sale as mentioned in another article, will move to the Stidham cottage on Capitan avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. I. D. Baker and children arrived here from Phoenix, Ariz., Wednesday, for the Woman's Club program at the Hi School Auditorium last night, in which their 4-year-old daughter, Baby Peggy Farley, was the prominent feature.

Mrs. J. H. Skinner left Wednesday of this week for Las Vegas, to join her husband, Rev. Skinner, who is visiting their daughter, Mrs. Chloe White at that place.

Otho Lowe, formerly bookkeeper at the City Garage at this place, but now of the Bank of Mountainair, spent several days of this week, visiting Mrs. Lowe at Capitan and relatives and friends at both this place and at Capitan.

Morgan Reily of El Paso spent several days of this week here, visiting his mother, Mrs. Wm. Reily and sisters, Mmes. S. G. Allen, Will Ed Harris and Clint Branum.

Ziegler Bros. Store has a brand new coat of paint — looks like spring, the way they are sprucing up.

The Carrizozo Hardware Store, formerly Hedrick & Co., has just about finished their re-decorating and kalsomining. The store presents a nobby appearance.

Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Farley came up from Alamogordo to be present at Woman's Club entertainment held last night, featuring their granddaughter, Baby Peggy Farley.

Woman's Club Entertainment Meets With Merited Success

The program as published in this paper last week, sponsored by the Woman's Club was carried out to a successful termination before a large and appreciative audience. The curtain parted on the scene of "Those Husbands of Ours," the characters all being well taken and the Playlet from start to finish, brought rounds of applause as they poured it on the poor defenseless "Lords of Creation," who were compelled to take and like it, but we'll get even, won't we boys?

Then followed Baby Peggy Farley, who was introduced by Mrs. Blaney. The little Miss, slightly over the age of four years, sang and performed like a seasoned professional and to pay her the tribute which she so richly deserves, would take up more space than a small country paper has to devote, but on the whole, let us say that she is nothing short of wonderful and to have responded to repeated encores would have tested the strength of the sweet little one, to its capacity.

Mrs. Ziegler added much charm to each number, with her accompaniments on the piano.

Others on the program performed their parts with becoming accuracy and to say that the big audience was more than well pleased, would be putting it lightly. As we have said before, so we say again, that when the Woman's Club attempts anything, it is well done to the extreme.

Methodist Church

One hundred and seventeen in Sunday School last Sunday morning. Fine! Let's keep it up. Through the generosity of the Rolland Drug Store each pupil received a treat of candy easter eggs. Mr. Brack Sloan took Mr. J. E. Hall's class of boys across the Malpais where they had a campfire dinner. There are more good times in store for them and it won't be long now for the big Sunday School picnic.

There was a large attendance at the combined Rainbow Girls and Easter service Sunday night. Raymond Lackland sang the Holy City, accompanied by Miss Louise Sweet on the violin and piano. That was, indeed, a treat and we hope for more of it soon.

Services both morning and evening. Mr. Crnkovich will sing a solo in the evening service.

The new roof is on the church building and workmen are brightening up the interior this week. Let's have another big day Sunday. Be at Sunday School and church service in the morning and at church again in the evening.

Return to Their Studies

The following Carrizozo students who are attending the different state educational institutions and were home to spend the Easter vacations, left Sunday so as to be on hand at roll call Monday morning: Margie Rolland, Jane Spencer, Glenneth English, Ruth Brickley and Mack Shaver from the Albuquerque University and Helen Frances Huppertz and Billy Nickels from the State College. They all expressed themselves as being highly pleased with the college and university. They will all be home for the summer vacation at the close of the term. Miss Alice Keller, who is attending the Albuquerque "U" from Columbus, Ohio, was guest of Miss Ruth Brickley during the homecoming.

H. V. Johnson and George Friedenbloom were down from Hollywood last Sunday, staying over to attend to some business matters with the Board of County Commissioners.

Adolph Sultemeier and Harry Ryberg were business visitors from Corona last Saturday, remaining over to see "The Last of the Duanees" at the Crystal Theatre that night.

J. T. Jolly was a visitor from Corona on Wednesday.

"King of the Forest" Loses His Last Battle

Last week, John W. Harkey & Son erected five large tanks for watering sheep on the Frank Maxwell ranch about 20 miles this side of Mountainair. The last tank to be built was to be located near a reserve tank with a 5 foot rim and it being situated several miles from the others, Mr. Harkey took his men to the reserve tank in order to make sure that it was holding well, before setting the small tank, to which the reserve contributed. Imagine the surprise of the men when they found a large buck occupying the tank. He had from all appearances been imprisoned in the tank for several days, during which time, the tank had not been visited. He had been to the tank for a drink and reaching too far, lost his balance and had fallen in.

In his frantic efforts to escape from his prison, he had exhausted all his strength. It was a difficult task to liberate the big fellow, but with due patience and a crudely erected derrick, he finally was given his liberty—but too late, as being so weak from standing in the icy water and without food, he failed to respond to the kindness of the men who offered him food and in a short time he died. Mr. Maxwell called for the forest ranger in the Mountainair district, who came, skinned the deer and took it to his cabin in order to make his report on the case. Thus did the "King of the Forest" lose his last battle.

Miss Ula Edmiston is here from Dallas, Tex. and will visit with her mother for the week, after which she will return to Dallas, where she is still with the Public Utilities Co., of that city. On Wednesday, Ula received word that her sister Ruth was married to Royal Ferris, who is from one of the oldest families of Dallas.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Taylor came in Wednesday from a trip which took them from their home in Las Cruces over the northwestern part of the state. On the trip, they stopped over for a visit with Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Eaker at Pastura, N. M., where Elmer is an operator for the S. P., Mrs. Eaker being a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Taylor. They were here, but a short time and we were glad to meet our former residents and old friends. They left for home yesterday morning.

ANCHO NOTES

Mr. and Mrs. Don Downing of El Centro, Calif., passed through here Saturday enroute to Corona to visit relatives.

Leonard, young son of L. P. Hall, is in Albuquerque for medical attention.

R. E. P. Warden was here this week from Santa Fe.

Ralph Hall, student in the Carrizozo High School, spent Easter with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Hall.

Mrs. R. E. P. Warden, daughters Maudie and Mary Pickett, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Sweet, Alex Fambrough and others attended the party at the Wm Gallacher ranch home on April 1st.

Mrs. Barney Wilson and Miss Edwina Peters went to Alamogordo last Saturday.

Mrs. L. L. Peters spent a few days in Carrizozo last week.

The school is preparing an Arbor Day program for the 16th, at which trees donated by various friends will be planted.

The Woman's Club met at the home of Mrs. Elbert Brown at Coyote, April 4, with a good attendance. Three new members, Mmes. Weathersbee, G. Pruett and Hubbard were added to the club. The meeting opened with roll call, to which each member responded with a short description of some recent invention. After a lengthy business discussion, the meeting adjourned to enjoy the elaborate social distractions provided by the hostess, who used the Easter motif in decorations, games and refreshments. Mrs. L. L. Peters won first prize in the word contest and Mrs. S. J. Pruett, who found the largest number of Easter Eggs, was also rewarded with a prize. Mrs. Brown entertained the club with an interesting account of her recent visit to the Carrizozo club, which she found both interesting and instructive and from which she brought home several ideas for the inspiration of the Ancho club. After a hilarious game of "Coo-Coo," the members departed assuring the hostess that they had never more thoroughly enjoyed a club meeting.

Among the various business matters discussed and voted upon was the examination of the manuscript for the Year Book which was passed with enthusiastic approval and the committee highly complimented. By the next meeting, the books, attractively bound in green and white, the club colors, will be in the hands of the members.

The fence for the schoolhouse is now an assured fact. The wire has been ordered. Thanks to Mr. C. M. Harvey of El Paso, the Chas. Ilfeld Co., of Santa Rosa and the Titworth Co., of Capitan for their liberal donations and interest they have taken in Ancho. The posts are being donated by the patrons of the school and as soon as the wire arrives, a day will be set for the fence building, at which the club women will serve a good, hot dinner to the workers.

Chas. L. Hodgkin spent the week-end with John and James Dale.

John Brickley was down from Luna last Saturday night, staying over Sunday and returning home Sunday evening.

CRYSTAL THEATRE

T. J. Pittman, Mgr.

Evening show starts at 7:45
Matinee Sundays at 2:30.

Friday-Saturday—James Hall and Anita Louise in "The Third Alarm." Also comedy.

Sunday—Monday—Tuesday—"Aloha," with Ben Lyon, Raquel Torres and Thelma Todd. Benefit High School Orchestra. They will give a concert Monday night. Also News Reel.

Wednesday-Thursday-Friday-Ruth Chatterton in "Anybody's Woman," with Clive Brook. Also Voice of Hollywood.

A Standing, Working Demonstration

Residents in the vicinity of the Court House who were continually annoyed with the creaking, groaning old windmill last year, may now sleep in peace without being disturbed by that sort of noise, for, since the installing of the new "Oil-Rite" Samson windmill, there is no noise of any kind to test the nerves of those who are desirous of passing a peaceful night's slumber. The new Oil-Rite Samson windmill, as will be seen by the ad on page 8, has an oil reservoir which holds enough oil to last the machine for one year. Its automatic oiling system, together with its ball-bearing turn table and Timkin roller bearings, make the machine so complete and being constructed so firm, makes it the easiest running and most durable windmill by far on the market. It runs as easy and makes as little noise as a sewing machine. Ranchers, especially, should investigate the merits of the new Oil-Rite Samson, before buying. John W. Harkey & Son are the agents.

"The Last of the Duanees" Proves to Be a Success

The program sponsored at the Crystal Theatre last Saturday night by the local OddFellows, proved to be a success. A good attendance greeted the three-bill program which was the Universal News, Musical Fantasy featuring Creator's Band, and ending with "The Last of the Duanees," a Zane Grey picture.

Everybody was well pleased and the OddFellows wish to thank the public for their liberal patronage; also the business houses for courtesies extended in handling tickets for the show.

City Service Station Opens

H. A. Miller is now ready for business at his City Service Station, located on his lot directly across from the roundhouse. The building was the quickest erected of any we have seen at this place, seeming to grow like a weed.

The building is all pebble-dashed and made fireproof, as much as possible. Mr. Miller will carry Continental and Texico products and Quaker State Oil. He also carries a complete line of tires, tubes and accessories, and is equipped to wash, polish and grease your car. Mr. Miller invites you to give his establishment a visit.

Mayor G. T. McQuillen, M. U. Finley and T. E. Kelley will attend a meeting of the State Fish & Game Protective Association at Albuquerque tomorrow, as delegates from the local Association.

Evening Fairy Tale for the Children

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

When Mrs. Coal had been given to Joan, she had taken the kitten into her arms, and had said: "Oh, you precious black kitten. Why, you are as black as black, as well—as black coal."

"I know, I shall call you Mrs. Coal. That will be your name."

And so the name had always stuck to the kitten, and now that she was a big cat the name seemed to suit her very well.

Whenever anyone asked the name of the cat and heard that she was Mrs. Coal, no one was in the least bit surprised, the name almost seemed made for her.

And another thing, which Joan said showed how much Mrs. Coal did approve of her name, one of her favorite places in the house was in the old coal bin.

Often Joan would go to look for Mrs. Coal and there on top of the coal bin she would be sitting, her green eyes the only part of her showing a color different from the coal.

And of course no one could tell if Mrs. Coal was dirty or not from sitting in the coal, but just looking at her—though Joan naturally suspected that if she had been sitting in the coal she would be pretty dirty.

But Mrs. Coal was very fussy about herself and kept herself looking fine and clean.

Now one morning Mrs. Coal was missing. Poor Joan did not know what to do.

She looked in the coal box, and there was no Mrs. Coal. She called through the house.

"Mrs. Coal, Mrs. Coal," and then she burst out crying.

Never before had she called for Mrs. Coal that from somewhere or and so that was why she had always come to Joan when she called.

Besides Mrs. Coal loved her little mistress and how she would purr when she was stroked! Joan kept thinking now of all these things as she looked, in vain, for Mrs. Coal.

It was getting late afternoon when Joan was eating her supper. Nothing tasted very good and she was feeling so mournful. As a rule Mrs. Coal had come to sit by her side during supper time, and had always had a nice bowl of warm milk.

"Me-ow, me-ow," came a little sound.

Joan gave one cry of gladness.

And what do you suppose had happened?

Mrs. Coal was behind the closet door of the dining-room and with her—

Guess! Guess! Guess!

Yes, with her was a lovely family of dear, dear, little kittens—Mrs. Coal's new family.

Oh, how happy Joan was, and Mrs. Coal was so happy too.

Mosarch's Prerogative

The king of England receives the nominal stipend of one guinea a year in virtue of the fact that he is a minor canon of the cathedral of St. David's. He has the right to preach once a year from the cathedral pulpit.

"Obeyammergau"

"Ammer" is the name of a river; "ober" means "upper"; "gau" means "district." "Upper district of the Ammer river" is a translation of the name Oberammergau.

For a most tasty luncheon dish, try the following when it is convenient:

Casserole of Noodles and Tuna Fish

Take two cups of uncooked noodles, one pound can of tuna fish, one-fourth cup of chopped pimiento, two cups of drained, canned peas, two cups of thin white sauce and buttered crumbs. Cook the noodles until tender in three quarts of boiling water to which one tablespoonful of salt has been added. Drain and place a layer of noodles in the bottom of a buttered baking dish, then a layer of fish, pimiento and peas. Season well and repeat until all the ingredients are used. Pour over the white sauce and top with a thick layer of buttered crumbs. Bake until brown.

Chicken Pie Supreme.—Cut up a cooked chicken and arrange in a large casserole in layers with uncooked rice, add small onions, broken mushrooms and a few peas. Dot each layer with butter, using two layers of chicken. Pour over well-seasoned chicken broth, season well, cover and cook until the rice is done. Uncover and place very small baking powder biscuits over the top or well-browned croutons.

Orange Tapioca.—Take four tablespoonfuls of quick cooking tapioca, one-fourth teaspoonful of salt, one and one-half cups of boiling water and cook in a double boiler for 15 minutes, or until the tapioca is transparent, stirring frequently. Add one-half cupful of sugar, and when well mixed a cupful of orange juice and the grated rind of half an orange. Stir until cool. When cool fold in one-half cupful of whipped cream. Pile in sherbet glasses and serve.

Macaroni Nut Crisps.—Grind one cupful of uncooked macaroni through the food chopper, using fine knife; measure after grinding. Cream together two cupfuls of light brown sugar and one cupful of shortening, add one-half teaspoonful of salt, one-half teaspoonful of cinnamon, one-fourth teaspoonful of nutmeg. Beat the yolks of three eggs and mix well,

Globe Artichokes Served With Sauce

How to Serve and Eat a Globe Artichoke.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.—WNU Service.)

Perhaps you have seen in food stores a curious looking green, cone-shaped vegetable, covered with scale-like leaves, called a "globe" or "French" artichoke. You may have wondered what to do with it. Until comparatively recently, in this country, globe artichokes were considered expensive delicacies, served chiefly in hotels and restaurants, although they have been well known in France and other European countries for a long time. An increased supply and more widespread distribution has now brought them, like many other foods that were unknown a short time ago, into our everyday markets.

People are asking whether or not globe artichokes have value as food, and how to cook and serve them. The globe artichoke, says the bureau of home economics of the United States Department of Agriculture, supplies vitamins A and B and carbohydrates in amount similar to young peas, as well as other nutrients. It is not to be confused with the Jerusalem artichoke, which is a tuber, growing profusely in many parts of the country. The characteristic flavor of the globe artichoke is liked very much by many people.

In purchasing globe artichokes, plan to serve one to each person unless they are very large, when the individual artichoke may be cut in half. See that the artichokes are fresh, with a good green color and plump leaves, not dried up or brownish in tinge. As the edible portion is the base of the leaves and the heart to which the leaves are attached, a good artichoke should be thick and broad at the base.

To prepare globe artichokes for the table, wash them in cold water, trim off the stems and remove a few of the outer leaves. Drop them into lightly salted boiling water and cover and simmer for 20 or 30 minutes, or until the central part is tender. Test by pulling off a leaf. Artichokes are usually served with drawn butter or hollandaise sauce in a small individual dish beside each plate. As the leaves are pulled off they are dipped in the sauce, one by one, and eaten from the fingers. The flower center or hairy portion growing on top of the heart is discarded, but the bottom or "cheese" is considered by many the choicest part of all.

Little Girls Like Short Sleeves

"Mother, can't you cut the sleeves off this old dress? It's so hot today, and all the girls are wearing short sleeves."

Even a five-year-old may be stimulated to make a protest like this about her clothes when the first warm break comes after the bleak windiness of March. You may try to point out that all the cool days are by no means over, but more likely you give thoughtful consideration to the long-sleeved winter dress your child is wearing. To begin with, some kinds of sleeves might possibly be cut off halfway before last year can only be counted on for part of the season. With foresight the new spring wardrobe can be made ready for the really warm days of April and May, when short-sleeved styles and lower necklines will be in order.

The bureau of home economics of the United States Department of Agriculture has designed a great many children's dresses with a view to the child's normal activities, easy making and easy laundering. The design shown in the picture is made up in plain light green chambray. Cotton broadcloth or other firmly woven cotton fabrics would have done equally well. It has rather wide set in sleeves, hemmed invisibly, by hand. Four inverted box pleats, two in front and two in back, take up the fullness at the shoulder that is needed in the skirt. These are stitched down on the underside for about two inches and pressed in place before the shoulder is cut out by the basic pattern. The plainness of the front coat-style opening is relieved by three square tabs for the buttonholes, lapsels of white at the neck in front, and a colored decorative edge. This is made by first finishing the edge with a very short blanket stitch and then whipping this edge with a thread of another color.

Certain details of making should be mentioned. All seams are "French"—stitched first on the right side, trimmed, and stitched on the wrong side—with the exception of the sleeve seam. This is flat, on account of its curves, if first stitched on the wrong side, and then double overcast, or finished by turning in the edges of the seam and stitching again. The hem is very deep—to start with, to allow for letting down and is put in by hand. The first turn in the edge of the hem is stitched on the machine to keep it firm and make the hand-hemming easier. The hem itself looks better when the stitches do not show on the outside, and it is easier to rip for letting down.

The collar lapsels are double. The back of the neck is finished with a narrow shaped facing and an edge of colored thread like the front opening. The underfacings of the front edges are not stitched down but are held in place by the buttons and buttonholes. On the extreme inside edge of this facing a quarter-inch turn-in is made, like the top edge of the skirt hem, and stitched on the machine to prevent raveling.

Practical Spring Dress for Little Miss.

between the elbow and the shoulder and finished with an invisible hand-sewn hem. That would give the child more freedom for climbing and playing ball and other games in which she uses her arms.

Then you observe that your little girl's dress is several inches too short—a condition which is bound to grow worse as time goes on. The hem must come down, perhaps to its very edge. Obviously a few new and larger dresses will be needed very shortly, for this and other let-down dresses

Aged War Veterans

Daniel C. Dakeman was the last pensioner of the Revolutionary war. He died 80 years after the close of the war at the age of one hundred and nine years, eight months and eight days on April 5, 1880. Hiram Cronk was the last surviving pensioner of the War of 1812. He died on May 13, 1905, at the age of one hundred and five years and sixteen days. Owen Thomas Edgar, last surviving pensioner of the Mexican war, died in Washington, September 3, 1929.

Narrow Thoroughfare

The narrowest street in the United States is said to be Treasury street in St. Augustine, Fla. It is 6 feet 1 inch wide. This street was shown as a street on the map of St. Augustine in 1737, and called Treasury street because the old treasury was on the corner of this cross street and St. George street. Carriages used to drive through it, and a stone was placed at the entrance on Bay street to prevent this. The old treasury building is still standing.

Not Much Difference

The words fort and fortress are often used interchangeably. In the United States all permanently garrisoned places, whether fortified or not, are termed forts. In fortification fort is usually applied to a work entirely enclosed by defensible parapets. Fortress generally designates a fortified city or town, or any piece of ground so strongly fortified as to be capable of resisting an attack. It is a permanent fortification.

Famous American's Nickname

"Old Man Eloquent" was one of the nicknames of John Quincy Adams during the latter years of his life while he was a member of the house of representatives. Milton applied the phrase to Isocrates, the famous Greek orator, who is said to have died of mental shock and grief when he learned that Phillip of Macedon had defeated the Greek allies at Chaeronea.—Pathfinder Magazine.

Here's Resting Place

George Rogers Clark is buried in Cave Hill cemetery in Louisville, Ky. General Clark founded the city of Louisville in 1770 after returning from his military expedition to the Northwest. He spent most of his declining years in Louisville, Ky., and Clarksville, Ind., across the Ohio river from Louisville. This town was also founded by General Clark.

Had Enough of the Sea

On account of a shipwreck in his teens when he was emigrating from England to South Africa, Mr. Clark of Boshof, Orange Free State, made his way inland, and vowed that he would never cast eyes on the sea again. He settled at Boshof, where he built up an extensive general dealers' business, and left a large fortune at his death.

HEADACHE

When you feel a headache coming on, it's time to take Bayer Aspirin. Two tablets will head it off, and you can finish your shopping in comfort.

Limbs that ache from sheer weariness. Joints sore from the beginning of a cold. Systemic pain. The remedy is real. But immediate relief is yours for the taking; a pocket tin of Bayer Aspirin is protection from pain whenever you go.

Get real aspirin. Look for Bayer on the box. Head the proven directions found inside every genuine Bayer package. They cover headaches, colds, sore throat, toothaches, neuralgia, neuritis, sciatica, lumbago, rheumatism, muscular pains, etc.

These tablets do not depress the heart. They do nothing but stop the pain. Every druggist has Bayer Aspirin in the pocket size, and in bottles. To save money, buy the genuine tablets by the hundred. Don't experiment with imitations.

Bolero Suits in Fashion Picture

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

The woman coveting "lines" which are youthful, yet not too youthful, will find in the bolero suits, which are so up in vogue this season, just what she is looking for—a young-figure silhouette.

It is indeed a far cry from the severely tailored masculine suit to types such as the little cloth costume in the picture the soft feminine styling of which is its charm. The tendency for the silhouettes to tread away from stereotyped form to lines of gentle grace is notable this season, especially in the suit realm where the jaunty bolero in all its versatile moods is injecting a refreshing note of youth.

The promotion of the cape theme is also exercising a marked influence figures a sum-total of chic for the spring suit as ultra, according to the model in the picture, as any college girl might envy. The fact that the capelet and brief jacket are scalloped, all the more emphasizes the departure from the severely tailored.

Very interesting and style-significant, too, is the skirt which achieves its smart flare via many sections of the material which are skillfully seamed together. Skirts which are fitted snugly about the hips with the flare starting about the knees lead among the new silhouettes.

No less important than the jacket suit itself is the blouse which is worn with it. An every woman knows, there's magic in a blouse. In the twinkling of an eye it can change a suit of tailored aspect into an dreary looking costume as one may have need of during the daytime-hours and vice versa. This season, more than ever, designers are playing up blouses with vim, vigor and intriguing artistry.

The sleeveless blouse worn with the suit pictured is of aquamarine georgette. The assortment of blouses for spring are bewildering in their diversity of color, fabric and styling. Two types are, however, outstanding—those of plaid or stripes and those of lace. The necessity of acquiring a whole wardrobe of blouses this season is obvious.

As to the lace blouse it may be as frilly and frivolous as fancy can picture, and this type is adorable with the youthful bolero suits. Designers are also very enthusiastic in regard to the new linen lace. Many of the handsome blouses in the season's collections are of this type of lace in either natural that or in any of the pastel colorings.

Farm Board to Abandon Efforts to Stabilize Wheat Prices — Austro-German Customs Union Stirs Protests.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

SAM H. THOMPSON
NO MORE attempts to stabilize the price of wheat by large purchases on the open market will be made under the auspices of the federal farm board after the 1930 crop is marketed, which probably will be done by May 31. This was the announcement of the board, whose new chairman, James C. Stone, and new member, Sam H. Thompson of Illinois, have just taken office. In making its decision known, the board pointed to its past purchases of large wheat stocks and asserted that "it cannot indefinitely buy more than it sells nor indefinitely hold what it has bought." Farmers must know, the board continued, that "it cannot follow a regular policy of buying at prices above the market and selling below cost."

No definite sales policy for its present big wheat holdings was announced by the board. There were indications, however, that should the farmers display a tendency to help themselves by restricting wheat acreage, the disposal of the 1930 crop holdings would be spread over a long period and sold slowly.

In the market the immediate effect of the announcement was of course a sharp break in prices. On the Chicago Board of Trade wheat deferred futures reached the lowest levels since 1923. July touched 59 1/2 and September went down to 60 cents.

There was quick recovery, however, when the stabilization corporation announced this plan: Effective April 1, the corporation will quote a selling price of 62 1/2 cents a bushel f. o. b. No. 2 hard winter wheat at Chicago for ordinary quality, with premiums asked for grain of high protein and quality. This price will be advanced 1/2 cent a bushel on April 10 and 1/4 cent a bushel every ten days thereafter until June 30, the date which marks the expiration of the current crop year.

In Washington it was asserted that it was now certain that farm relief legislation would be a major issue during the next session of congress, and something new in this line may be devised. Senator Borah is still urgently supporting the export debenture plan, and Senator Watson of Indiana prefers the equalization fee scheme. Senator McNary also likes the latter program but says he cannot see how it will help solve the present problem in the face of the world wheat surplus. President Hoover is opposed to both these plans. Borah suggests that the present wheat surplus in this country be sent to China or destroyed. The European powers will not let it be dumped on their markets.

MAYOR JIMMY WALKER of New York has been given the opportunity to examine and reply to the charges of misfeasance and negligence in office filed against him. Gov. Franklin Roosevelt found himself in a difficult position when asked to oust the Mayor Walker or refer the matter to the state legislature for an inquiry, but he extricated himself by the simple expedient of forwarding the charges to Jimmy at his retreat in Palm Springs, Calif., and asking him to make answer when he returned to New York.

However, the affairs of the metropolis are to be thoroughly investigated, and Tammany may be approaching one of its emporia eclipses. The state senate, by the strictly party vote of 26 to 24, adopted a resolution for an investigation by a legislative committee consisting of three senators and four assemblymen, and after a protracted debate the assembly concurred with the senate, the vote being 76 to 70. The action of the senate was a surprise to the Democrats, for Maslick and Westall, the two Republican Westchester senators who had formerly blocked such a resolution, suddenly shifted their votes and went along with their colleagues. Their change of mind occurred when William L. Ward, Westchester Republican leader, dropped his opposition to the inquiry following telephonic conversations with prominent Republicans of New York city. The investigation is to include all departments of the municipal government and the inferior courts.

National importance is given this New York scandal by its possible effect on the Democratic party's action in the national convention next year. It may greatly promote the chances of Franklin Roosevelt for the presidential nomination, or it may ruin them. He would be favored by those parts of the country in which the Democrats are politically dry if he were freed from the Tammany brand. But Al Smith is said to be cold to his candidacy, and National Chairman Rankin is reported to be strongly in favor of giving the nomination to Owen D. Young. Tammany itself is split into two factions, one headed by Mayor Walker and John F. Curry and the other by Al Smith.

FOR two years the Treasury department has been investigating charges that European safety match manufacturers were disposing of their products in this country at low prices to the injury of domestic producers. Evidently the charges were found to be true, for Secretary Mellon issued an anti-dumping order against the importation of safety matches from eight countries.

Such action previously had been taken against Russian matches. The latest nations affected are Finland, Norway, Estonia, Sweden, Latvia, Austria, Holland and Poland.

Secretary Adams

THROUGHOUT the battle maneuvers of the American fleet in Panama waters Secretary of the Navy Charles Francis Adams was a deeply interested observer. He returned to Washington with the firm conviction that, notwithstanding the development of aviation, the battleship is still the backbone of modern fighting fleets. "These big surface vessels are essential cogs in our naval fighting forces," said Mr. Adams, and his opinion coincides with those of the leading naval officers who participated in or watched the maneuvers.

In reports filed at the Navy department, such officers as Admiral William V. Pratt, chief of naval operations; Rear Admiral Joseph B. Reeves, and Rear Admiral Mark A. Bristol, chairman of the executive committee of the navy general board, agree that without battleship strength the United States would be powerless to prevent a major hostile movement across the ocean directed at this country.

GERMANY and Austria have announced that they are about to consummate a customs union, and have caused great disturbances in the so-called "chancelleries of Europe." Great Britain, France, Italy and especially Czechoslovakia have protested against the move and according to report some of them have warned the two nations not to go ahead with their plan. The British position is that it is a violation of the protocol of 1922 in which the League of Nations reorganized Austrian finances and Austria agreed to give equal tariff to all countries. The French, Italians and Czechs fear the proposed union is the first step toward the political union of Germany and Austria, which would violate the peace treaty. The Czechs are trying to bring the other countries of the little entente to their point of view, and the two Germanic nations have invited Czechoslovakia, Rumania and Yugoslavia to enter the economic combination with them.

When the French, British and Italian ambassadors questioned Foreign Minister Curtius in Berlin, he replied in effect that Germany would not back down in its determination to put the tariff union into effect, but he assured them that this in no way heralded an eventual political unification with Austria. It was tolerably evident that Germany was willing to carry the matter to the world court at The Hague.

Briand, French foreign minister, was placed in an embarrassing position for the Austro-German plan is really a start toward his great scheme of an economic union of all Europe in which there shall be no tariff walls.

REPEAL of the Illinois prohibition law and the search and seizure act was completed by the state senate by a vote of 20 to 24. The house had previously passed the repeal act, 91 to 50.

ORGANIZED LABOR in the United States is prepared to fight, with all the strength it possesses, any attempts to reduce wages. Such is the assertion of William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor. In a statement issued in Washington, he said: "Reductions in wages have been favored and encouraged by bankers and some employers whose desire for standard profits has overcome their better judgment. If they are persisted in, a return to normal conditions will be delayed for two years or more. It is only through the development of the purchasing power of working people to the highest possible point that a market can be found for the goods which we are producing in an ever increasing volume."

"In the light of these facts the American Federation of Labor conceives it to be its duty to resist, with all the influence and power at its command, any attempt on the part of employers to reduce wages. Furthermore it will be the policy of the American Federation of Labor to direct its efforts when favorable conditions permit, toward compelling those employers of labor who have reduced wages during this period of unemployment, to restore them."

NATIONALISTS of Porto Rico received no encouragement from President Hoover when he landed at San Juan and delivered his first address, which was made to the island legislature. On the contrary, he dwelt on the innumerable benefits the island had derived from its rule by the United States, predicted fine things for its future, and pledged the support and co-operation of his administration toward continued Porto Rican progress.

The island, said the President, has in the course of a single generation emerged from stagnation to a high place in the march of progress, and constitutes now "a magnificent example of what a capable and intelligent people may accomplish under free institutions." Mr. Hoover praised the efforts of Gov. Theodore Roosevelt to secure new channels of livelihood for the island's increased population.

President Hoover's reception in San Juan and everywhere else his automobile tour of the island took him was enthusiastic.

Wednesday was spent at St. Thomas, capital of the Virgin Islands, where the people welcomed him respectfully and told him plainly the needs of the little group that has just been placed under the control of the Department of the Interior. That night the Arizona began a leisurely return to Norfolk.

M. Norman

MONTAGU NORMAN, governor of the Bank of England, came to the United States Friday on one of his frequent quiet visits, having little to say to the press, as usual. His arrival interested bankers deeply, for it was believed he would go to Washington and that then or soon thereafter President Hoover would issue the call for the international silver conference which was given authorization by the last congress. Silver has been in a parlous state for many months, for, while production has not greatly increased, the sales by India on its return to the gold standard, and by other countries for the purpose of lessening the silver content of their coinages, have glutted the market. In 1920 its price was 62 cents an ounce, and it now sells for about half that.

It was thought Mr. Norman might discuss the plan offered by Francis H. Brownell, chairman of the board of the American Smelting and Refining company. This scheme proposes that the United States, England (including India, France including Indo-China, and as many other governments as possible), arrive at a "gentleman's agreement" that "no sale will be made, for a stated period—say three years, or until further notice—of any silver now or hereafter owned by each government, at less than some fixed price, say, for example, 50 cents per ounce. "Second—an understanding that those governments will purchase the amount of silver they are now authorized by law to purchase for subsidiary coinage, whenever the price of silver in the open market is below the figure to be agreed upon as above (50 cents per ounce, for example). "Third—as compensation for agreeing... and to prevent too rapid a rise—an understanding that the governments, and particularly India, may sell government owned silver whenever the price is more than, say, five cents above the figure agreed upon as above."

SECRETARY of the Treasury Andrew W. Mellon celebrated his seventy-sixth birthday on Tuesday, and the day was made notable by the joint award to him and his brother, Richard B. Mellon, of the medal of the American Institute of Chemists. Though neither of them is a scientist, they are thus honored as pioneer patrons of science who have given millions of dollars to promote it during the last score of years. Much of the practical results of the Mellon gifts have come from the Mellon Institute of Industrial Research which they established at the University of Pittsburgh in 1913. There all industry and many branches of science are furnished a place to make discoveries. The Mellons do not usually pay for these researches, nor receive any credit for them, although they furnish an important part of the scientific machinery.

Andrew W. Mellon

"The Mellon Institute," says Dr. Frederick E. Brestlin, president of the Institute of Chemists, "is the West Point of our industrial system, assisting the United States to attain and hold its foremost position amongst the industrial nations of the world. Its activities have assisted in bringing to the United States the largest chemical industry in the world. "What Andrew W. Mellon and Richard B. Mellon have done has become more or less a part of our industrial fabric and technological organization but it required great vision and courage to see this 20 years ago when research was still merely an unwelcome stepchild in most of our industries."

Lesson for April 12

THE PRODIGAL SON

LESSON TEXT—Luke 15:11-24. GOLDEN TEXT—Likewise, I say unto you, there is joy in the presence of the angels of God over one sinner that repenteth.

PRIMARY TOPIC—What to Do When We Do Wrong.

JUNIOR TOPIC—What to Do When We Do Wrong.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—The Father's Welcome to the Wandering Son.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Church and the Repentant Sinner.

The center of interest in this parable is not the prodigal nor his brother, but the "certain man who had two sons." He who fails to see the heart of our Father God will miss the purpose of the story.

I. The Son's Estrangement From the Father (v. 12).

There is every indication that this was a happy home, but a demon entered it and stirred up discontent in the heart of the younger son. He became tired of the restraints of home. His desire for freedom moved him willfully to choose to leave home—to throw off the restraints of a father's rule. Sin is essentially the desire to be free from the restraints of rightful authority and for selfish indulgence. At the request of the son "the father divided unto him his living."

II. The Son's Departure (v. 13).

Having made the fatal decision, he went posthaste to the enjoyment of his cherished vision. He quickly got his goods in portable shape. Having thrown off the restraints of his father's rule, he eagerly withdrew from his father's presence. This is always the way sin works. Adam and Eve after they had sinned hid themselves. The son could not now stand the presence of his father so he hastened away, having "gathered all together."

III. The Son's Degeneration (vv. 13, 14).

He had a good time while his money lasted, but the end came quickly. The indications are that his course was soon run. From plenty in his father's house to destitution in the far country was a short journey. The sinner in such haste to realize the fadings when such powers as administered to his pleasure are burned out.

IV. The Son's Degradation (vv. 15, 16).

Having no friends to help him when his money was all gone, he was driven to hire out to a citizen to feed swine. It was a tragic change from being a son in his father's house to feeding swine in the far country. It is ever so. Those who will not serve God are made slaves to the Devil to do his bidding (Romans 6:16). How vividly this portrays the history of many men and women about us, and yet it is the picture of the inevitable consequences of sin.

V. The Son's Restoration (vv. 17-24).

1. "He came to himself" (v. 17).

'Twas reflection he was made conscious that though he had wronged his father and ruined himself, he was still a son of his father. In the days of his sinning he was heathen himself. The sinner continues in his sin because he is insane. The world calls the sinner who leaves off his evil ways crazy, but in reality he has just become sane.

2. His resolution (v. 18).

His reflection ripened into resolution. The picture of his home, where even the hired servants had a superabundance, moved him to make a decision to leave the far country and go home.

3. His confession (vv. 18, 19).

He acknowledged that his sin was against heaven and his father, that he had forfeited his right to be called a son, and begged to be given a place as a hired servant. The sinner not only should make a resolution—he should confess his sin.

4. His action (v. 20).

Action was needed. Resolution will not avail unless accompanied with action. When the confession is genuine, action will follow. Good intentions will not avail.

5. His reception by his father (vv. 20-24).

The father had not forgotten his son. His unchanging love followed the son all the time he was away, and longed for his return. He must often have looked for him, for he saw him when he was a great way off. So anxious was he for him that he ran to meet him and fell upon his neck and kissed him. So glad was the father that he did not even hear his confession through, but ordered the tokens of honor to be placed upon him, receiving him back into a son's position.

Boundless Resources

He is the God of boundless resources. The only limit is in us. Our asking, our thinking, our praying are too small. Our expectations are too limited. There is but one measure given for his blessing, and that is "according to the power that worketh in us."—A. B. Simpson.

Prayer Opens the Way

Prayer opens the soul to God. Prayer opens the life to the workings of infinite grace.—J. H. Jawett.

Wakeful restless CHILD needs Castoria

WE can never be sure just what makes an infant restless, but the remedy can always be the same. Good old Castoria! There's comfort in every drop of this pure vegetable preparation, and not the slightest harm in its frequent use. As often as Baby has a fretful spell, is feverish, or cries and can't sleep, let Castoria soothe and quiet him. Sometimes it's a touch of colic. Other times it's constipation. Or diarrhea—a condition that should always be checked promptly. Just keep Castoria handy, and give it promptly. Relief will follow very promptly; if it doesn't you should call a physician.

All through babyhood, Castoria should be a mother's standby; and a wise mother continues it in more liberal doses as a child grows up.

Readily obtained at any drugstore, the genuine easily identified by the Chas. H. Fletcher signature and the name Castoria on the wrapper like this:

Nothing New in Idea of Power From Ocean

So far as the dispatches indicate, a power machine that has been set up by Prof. Georges Claude at Matanzas, Cuba, with its gigantic pipe for bringing up cold water from the bottom of the sea, does not involve any principles unknown to science. It was shown long ago that water, if confined in a vacuum, will give off steam at temperatures far below its ordinary boiling point, and also that cold water will condense the steam and restore the vacuum. So that when Professor Claude takes advantage of this and uses warm water from the surface to produce the steam and cold water from the bottom to condense it again, he is not exactly an innovator. The main question, then, is whether his invention is commercially important, and on this one would like to have more expert opinion, formed after thorough observation on the spot. According to the dispatches, the apparatus generated enough power to light 40 500-watt bulbs, but whether this power was in excess of the power needed to pump cold water up from the bottom is not stated, and it is a very vital point.

To the layman the whole device looks like a second cousin to a perpetual motion machine, and therefore not very promising; but this objection was raised to the locomotive, the steamboat and the airplane when they were in the experimental stage. That any of these could possibly carry enough fuel to propel itself was held to be a prima facie absurdity; yet they did propel themselves, and at a pretty lively clip. The very least that can be said for Professor Claude is that he has tackled a project that men have often speculated about, and brought it to a point where its possibilities can be definitely determined. It may prove to be as impractical as schemes to utilize the latent power of the ether. But it may eventually be lighting our cities.

FOR COLDS—ALKALINIZE YOUR SYSTEM

Doctors everywhere are prescribing this new treatment for colds: Begin when you feel a cold coming. Take a tablespoonful of Phillips' Milk of Magnesia, morning, noon and night, the first day. Do the same second day. Then only at night. Colds reduce the alkalinity of your system. That's what makes you feel achy, feverish, weak, half-sick. Phillips' Milk of Magnesia is alkali in harmless, palatable form. It checks the symptoms of colds by restoring the alkalinity of your system. Relieves sour stomach, indigestion, gas, over-acidity. All drugstores.

Lose Fat Safely and Quickly

Kruschian Salts—a perfect combination of the six mineral salts your body should have to function properly—purify your blood of harmful acids, aid the kidneys and bowels to throw off waste material—the continual formation of which is probably the cause of your fat. In this modern age of living, it's impossible to get these salts from the food you eat. You must get them from Kruschian Salts. Take a half teaspoon every morning before breakfast in a glass of hot water—little by little that ugly fat disappears, you'll feel better than ever before—years younger, more energetic. You'll enjoy more of life's enjoyable beauty, clear skin, sparkling eyes, superb figure which only perfect health can impart. An 8c. bottle (fills a week) at any progressive drugstore in America. Money-back if Kruschian doesn't convince you that it is the safest, quickest, easiest way to lose fat. A Hartford woman writes: "I'll tell the world—Kruschian Salts is wonderful stuff to reduce." An Ohio woman lost 10 pounds with one bottle.—Adv.

EDITORIAL COLUMN

James Hamilton Lewis vs. Chairman Shouse

Displaying considerable wisdom and no mean understanding of human nature, James Hamilton Lewis, Democrat of Illinois, in a recent interview said: The great heart of humanity resents the assaults that have been made on the President of the United States by people of opposite political faiths. They have even assailed him as being lacking in intelligence and wanting in integrity and conduct.

Senator Lewis did not say that his remarks were meant principally for Mr. Shouse, chairman of the Democratic National Executive Committee, who recently made such statements concerning the President, but Mr. Lewis went further and said that they, the people, were prepared to defeat any party, Republican or Democrat, which will forget that the office of the President of the United States is the people's office and as such, should be treated with the high dignity it deserves. The people placed him in that office and aside from likes and dislikes, he is the representative of the people who placed him there.

Mr. Shouse has begun something which he believes will help the Democratic party to win the next election and his first move is to attack the President as being ignorant, lacking in intelligence and even wanting in morals, all of which will act as a boomerang, because the thinking, reading people of the land, know better and it will cause people to flock to the President instead of having the reverse effect which Mr. Shouse expects.

The day is past when dirty, filthy mud-slinging will carry a National election, more especially when attacks are made on so great and good a man, as the President of the United States, Mr. Hoover. The difference between chairman Shouse and Senator Lewis is, that the Senator expresses patriotism in his utterances while chairman Shouse expresses nothing short of ignorance, lack of character and full of everything that goes to belittle him in the eyes of an intelligent public. Through his efforts, little, tinky, sarcastic poems and ridiculous articles have found places in some country Democratic papers, but it only shows how small some people can be and how little judgment they exercise. The more of these attacks, the greater the President will be.

March Production of the Chevrolet Motor Company was 79,808 cars and trucks and brings the number of 1931 models built up to April 1, to in excess of 828,000 units, W.S. Knudsen, president and general manager, announced today.

March output was larger than in any month since May, 1930, and final figures for March exceed preliminary reports by more than 4,000 units.

The March performance represents a gain of better than 18 per cent over February production of 67,000 units and represents an increase of 1,000 units over the number originally scheduled for March production.

ANOTHER EXAMPLE OF FORD VALUE

Bright, enduring RUSTLESS STEEL is used for many exposed bright metal parts of the Ford

WHEN YOU BUY a Ford you buy enduring beauty.
 The body finish is made to last for the life of the car and practically all exposed bright metal parts except the bumpers are made of enduring Rustless Steel.

This Rustless Steel has great tensile strength.
 It is the same bright metal all the way through. A salt test equivalent to forty years' service under the severest weather conditions failed to have any effect on its brilliance. It never requires polishing. All you do is wipe it with a damp cloth, as you do your windshield.

This is just one of many features that show the substantial worth of the Ford. In speed, comfort, safety, economy and long life—in the richness of its finish and upholstery—it brings you everything you want or need in a motor car at an unusually low price.

Call or phone for demonstration.

Lecture - Program

(SCHOOLS)

On Tuesday, April 14, 1931
 At High School Auditorium

The people of Carrizozo will be given a musical treat from the distinguished young El Paso violinist, Samuel Martinez, who has not only delighted people of our own state, but those of other states. Press comments from Chicago papers especially, give the young artist the highest of praise, and from our own state, such papers as the Roswell Dispatch and Record, the Las Cruces papers, Rio Grande Farmer and Citizen, and in our sister state, Texas, press notices from the El Paso papers also give graphic accounts of his talent.

The program will be of especial interest to all school children as well as to adults who are lovers of music. The prices of admission are reasonable, when we take into consideration the excellent program which will be rendered. It will be educational from a musical standpoint for both old and young. The programs for afternoon and evening, together with prices of admission, follows:

Nearly all of the labor force in eastern New Mexico has found employment on the five projects, the contractors said. The work totals approximately $24,000 and must be completed by Sept. 1.

The Boyhood of Famous Americans

Patrick E. Crowley

Cattaraugus was a railroad town on the Erie line. It was the ambition of most of the boys born and raised there to learn railroading. A conductor in his natty uniform, an engineer, fireman or mechanic in work-stained overalls was a common enough sight to the boys thereabouts. Still it always gave them a thrill. They hoped to rise that high in the world themselves some day in the future.

Patrick E. Crowley shared the ambition of his playmates to become a first-class railroad man. He was born in a house near the tracks of the Erie in 1894. His father had worked on the Erie for years. He was the station agent at Cattaraugus and as such was a man of authority and prestige in the little railroad community.

The youngster knew the language of the railroad almost as soon as he was able to talk. His ears would tell him when the puffing engines were in need of repairs or overhauling before he was ten years old. He could tell at a glance the condition of the rolling stock as it passed through Cattaraugus. He was inquisitive and friendly with the train crews from the time he was able to get around alone.

He was a wiry youngster, rather on the smallest size. While he played in the fields with the other boys, he managed to spend much time around the station and in his father's little office. He took particular interest in the work of the train dispatcher.

His mind was made up while he was in grammar school that he would seek a job on the railroad as soon as his father would permit. In those days the generally accepted way to learn the business was to begin young and work your way up. The boy's father thought that as long as he was so anxious to start railroading he might as well pass up a high school education.

So the lad left school when he was fourteen years old and went to work as a messenger and odd job boy for the Erie in his home town. Each month his pay envelope contained $5. While that wasn't much financial incentive the youngster was satisfied and proud of being a wage earner. He was learning the business he liked, getting a lot of fun out of it and being paid in the bargain.

Getting up at 5:30 in the morning, going to work at seven o'clock and not finishing the day's tasks until nine o'clock at night, might not seem so much fun to boys of the present day. But young Crowley thrived on the hard grind. His thin legs carried him over many a mile in the course of an average day's work as messenger.

When he wasn't on the jump he sat and watched the telegraph operator at his work. There was something in the click of the instrument that seemed to fascinate the lad. The train dispatcher, noting his interest, helped him to learn the Morse code. The boy proved to be a mighty apt pupil. By the time he was sixteen he was a full fledged operator.

Most boys would have gone to bed as soon as they arrived home from such a hard day's work as this youngster put in. But not young Crowley. He was a great reader of history and technical books dealing with railroad problems. Often he remained up reading until midnight or later. In this way he continued the education that was halted, so far as school was concerned, when he finished his grammar school course.

Long before he was able to vote he was known as a boy who always was on the job, who studied it thoroughly until he knew his particular work better than anyone else. It wasn't so strange, in view of this, that when he put his mind to it he became an expert telegrapher at the age of sixteen.

The Erie sent him to Custer City, Pa., as telegraph operator. There were only a couple of trains a day at the little way station, but it was a start for the boy. He didn't remain there long. Soon he was transferred to Buffalo and became a train dispatcher at an important point.

He continued to be a wide reader of good literature in his spare moments, burning the midnight oil to improve his mind. He worked as hard as he had done on his first job. He was gaining a thorough foundation in railroading. He went with the New York Central in 1900 as a train dispatcher. Next he became chief of the department and then chief train master. He was already a man marked for promotion.

When he was offered the place of superintendent of the Pennsylvania division of the Central system, he refused it at first. He was so modest he didn't think he deserved such an important post. Friends persuaded him to change his mind.

From then on his promotion was steady and sure until he was named president of the vast Central system. His thoroughness in mastering every job as it came along has paid him and the New York Central big dividends.

Odd Reason for Haste to Finish That Letter

He was an old man from the country and, seeing his first typewriter in an office in the live stock exchange at Kansas City, he was entranced when Gladys Wilson, a pleasant young employee in the place, volunteered to write a letter for him on the machine if he would dictate to her. He started at a regular, measured pace but, as the end of the page approached, raced to so fast a finish that Miss Wilson barely could keep up with him. "Whew!" she said, breathing hard as she delivered the completed manuscript to him. "What was the grand rush at the end?" "I had to hurry before that contraption ran off the page," he answered simply.

Stomach Troubles Headache and Dizziness

If your stomach is sick, you are sick all over. If you can't digest your food, you lose strength, get nervous and feel as tired when you get up as when you went to bed.

For 10 years Tanlac has restored to health and activity many thousands who suffered just as you do.

Let Tanlac help you. It corrects the most obstinate digestive troubles—relieves gas, pains in the stomach and bowels, restores appetite, vigor and sound sleep.

Tanlac is made of roots, barks and herbs. Costs less than 2 cents a dose. Get a bottle from your druggist today. Your money back if it doesn't help you.

Immense Wistaria Vine

A floral spectacle which has taken 37 years to perfect is blooming at Sierra Madre, Calif., at the home of Mrs. T. H. Fennell. It is a wistaria vine, which is more than 500 feet long and believed to be the largest of its kind in the world. It completely encircles the Fennell home, and during the last decade has extended its twining branches on neighboring tanks and three large arbors constructed to accommodate its amazing growth.

Locarno Pen Missing

It was recently stated that the gold pen, in the form of a goose quill, which was used to sign the Locarno treaty, had disappeared. This pen was lent by the Locarno municipality for The Hague exhibition last February. It was supposed to have been unpacked with a number of other objects lent by the Locarno municipality for the occasion.

THE STORY

At a public dance Martin Forbes, a newspaper man, cuts in on Rhoda White's dance with Max Lewis, whom Martin instinctively dislikes. He overhears a conversation between Lewis and a woman, which he realizes concerns Rhoda. He recalls a "blind ad" inquiring the whereabouts of "Rhoda McFarland" and senses that is Rhoda's real name. She refuses to deny or admit it. However, it recalls her childhood in California. Her mother dead, she had been happy until misfortune befell her father, Professor McFarland. Associated with the blow is her uncle, William Royce. They move to Chicago, where her father, engaged in mysterious work, Rhoda takes up stenography. Her father dies suddenly, vainly trying to give her a message about "papers" in a trunk. Rhoda goes to live with a fellow-worker, "Babe" Jennings. Their apartment is broken into and $200 of Rhoda's money taken. Martin learns that "Babe" of the "blind ad" is Charles J. Forster, uncle of Lewis. Rhoda admits her name is McFarland. A mysterious "Claire Cleveland" asks Rhoda for an interview. She asks Rhoda for a certain paper belonging to her which, she claims, was in McFarland's possession. Rhoda's trunk is stolen and she suspects Claire. She trails Claire to the Worcester hotel, where Forster lives.

CHAPTER VI

Stealing an Idea

Martin had got one thing out of his otherwise barren encounter with Rhoda that morning, and this was his day's story for the paper. At least he wouldn't have got it if he hadn't been standing at the curb to see the limousine that Babe and Rhoda arrived in drive up. The license plate on that car caught his eye and fixed itself in his mind by virtue of a small oddity that he noticed about it. It was a four number arrangement of nines and eights which would make just as good sense upside down as right side up, only it would make different sense.

Probably it was his exasperated determination to dismiss Rhoda and her wrong-headedness and her red hair completely from his mind that caused this notion of an inverted license plate to fructify swiftly into the amusing sort of tale of misadventure that he specialized in. It was what the editor liked, and the fact that he made it up out of whole cloth didn't matter a bit.

When it was done, since he knew it was good, he found himself in a plausible enough humor to turn back to the Rhoda incident and consider dispassionately what had gone wrong with it.

Under his eye, as he sat musing, was the scribbled sheet of scratch-paper on which he'd drawn the license plate right side up and upside down in figuring out his story. It had been a handsome car, all right, that the girls had had a ride in, even if they had had to sit on the little folding seats. Rather comic, that was, now he thought about it. And a bit queer, too. What had the old billygoat stopped his car for, if not for the sensation of having a nice young thing sitting close beside him?

He was still staring at the license number of that car. Suddenly, under an impulse too fanciful to bear arguing about, he decided to look up the owner. It wouldn't do any harm to find out who the old bloke was.

When he found a few minutes later that the car was registered as the property of C. J. Forster he felt for a few seconds as if he must be a victim of a practical joke. What the devil!

He telephoned up to Rhoda's department to find out if or when she'd gone out to lunch and when, if they knew, she was expected back. When they told him she wasn't coming back that afternoon at all, he crammed on his hat, squirmed into his overcoat as he ran downstairs, and started out for the Tip-Top Inn.

Martin, considering his plan of action on the way over, had decided to wait in the lobby until Rhoda came out. He hadn't yet settled down to his wait on the sofa—he was at the cigar stand buying some cigarettes—when a woman came up beside him and bought a telephone slug. He'd been a reporter long enough to repress the start her voice gave him, though it was a voice he knew, and he checked his impulse to turn and look at her, much as he'd have liked to. He never had a really good look at her. Luckily she'd never seen him at all, nor heard his voice.

On the strength of that reflection he bought a telephone slug, too, went into the next booth to hers, dropped his ticket and called his own telephone number, which, of course didn't answer.

He hoped he'd be able to hear what she said. If she'd left Rhoda in the middle of their lunch to come out and telephone, it was likely to be something interesting. The sort of voice she had rasped right through the thin partition wall of the telephone booth. He hadn't got there in time to hear what number she called; indeed he was barely in time for the beginning of her conversation, for she'd got her party at once. Some one, he guessed, who'd been waiting for the call at the instrument.

"Yes, of course it's Claire," Martin heard her say. "Were you expecting a call from somebody else? Now listen, Max: you'll have to go and get it yourself. I can tell you how to find it. Listen, it's in a trunk. Everything; all the dope. I don't know, but you can tell because it's sealed up. Don't try to open it. Bring it right along. The whole thing. Bring it right up to the flat and wait for me if I ain't there. I'll see that you have plenty of time but you don't want to waste any. . . . Why, of course you'll do it. It's easier now than it would have been yesterday because you know what to look for. . . . For Pete's sake, don't go yellow now when I'm putting it right in your hands. All right. Good-by!"

Martin stayed in his booth until he'd seen her go back into the restaurant. Then he came out and turned a little uncertainly to the telephone directory. Max wasn't in it, he knew, for he'd tried to look him up. Rhoda had told him the woman's last name had been Cleveland, that was it. He'd gathered from the talk that the pair were living together. Probably that's where Max was now.

His thoughts were racing as he turned the pages of the directory. He'd have to be quick, but he mustn't waste time making any false moves. He couldn't have misunderstood the purport of the woman's message. Heavens, he'd seen the trunk himself. That little hat trunk under Rhoda's bed with the lid gummed down with strips of paper—to keep the moths out, he'd thought.

Here the address was—Claire Cleveland. That was one of those streets out near the Alhambra. That's how she'd happened to see Rhoda turning in. Lucky, just now, it was so far out. He could get to Rhoda's flat before Max could, provided Max was starting from out there. And Rhoda's flat was the place for him to go. Just what he'd do when he got there wanted a little thinking about. But he could decide that in the taxi. He'd done quite a various lot of more or less unlawful things since he'd begun being a reporter, but housebreaking hadn't been one of them. It looked now, though, as if that was what he had to do. He couldn't hope to deal with Lewis except from inside Rhoda's flat.

He hoped he had the start of Max. It might turn out a little awkward if he were digging away at the lock when Max came up the stairs. And it would be just like him to come armed with a gun and, if he were desperate enough, to use it.

Would he be shrewd enough to guess the question was, that Martin was as much a lawbreaker in that flat as he was? It might turn out an ugly sort of encounter if he did. Was there any way to avoid it? Suppose he stole the trunk—got away with it before Max arrived, and left him to search in vain. No, that wouldn't do. He couldn't be sure of getting clean away. He might meet Max on the stairs. And even if he did get away he'd have no means of guarding or of warning Rhoda. She might come in and find Max there.

No, he'd have to break in and then he'd have to trust to luck to being able to bluff Max out. Max hadn't liked the job very well, himself. That had been plain enough from the way the woman had talked to him. Then, she'd spoken of his being yellow as if it were a phenomenon she was acquainted with.

But why had Max been eager to do the job yesterday? Martin sat forward on his seat and thumped his knee with his fist. Max had tried it yesterday, that was why. He'd gone there in defiance of Claire's orders looking for "it"—whatever it was. He hadn't found it and he'd been afraid to tell Claire. But then it was he who had found Rhoda's money and taken it. That was a queer thing for a rich man to do.

His taxi turned the corner of Rhoda's street and he dismissed his train of thought with a jerk, though he was aware he hadn't quite got to the terminus. A hundred yards up the long block and, as well as he could guess, right in front of Rhoda's number, another taxi was pulled up at the curb. Had Max got here ahead of him after all?

"Pull up here and wait a minute," Martin told his chauffeur. It was not, he was aware, the heroic order to give, but, being no hero, only a thoroughly pragmatic reporter, he required time to think.

If Max was already in the flat there was nothing to be gained by following him. Even unarmed, Max could beat him to a pulp and would be able to identify him, besides, as one of Rhoda's allies. Call a policeman? That was no good, either. Police intervention meant a story in the papers. And this, for some reason he could only half guess, was a horror to Rhoda.

Would Max have the nerve to ask a taxi driver to assist him in his burglary? Well, he might if he were smart enough. Martin had just reached that point in his speculations when they were confirmed by Max's emergence from the doorway, accompanied by the chauffeur lugging the trunk.

Martin said to his chauffeur, "That's the man I want. And I think I know where he's going, but I can't be sure enough to risk it. Follow him, will you?"

It made him feel frightfully cheap to give an order like that. But the heroic alternative offered no chance at all of success. He could think of nothing better than to tag along, make sure where the trunk went, and try to invent some way of bluffing this pair of conspirators out of their booty up in Claire's flat after she'd joined Max there.

Automatically, of course, he'd been watching the other taxi: Now as they approached the drive he was astonished to see it turn south instead of north; down town instead of up. That wasn't the way to Claire's flat. Yet her instructions to Max had been explicit that he take it there. Was Max starting something on his own account—betraying his ally? Or had he observed that he was being followed and was he trying to throw off pursuit?

"I'm a reporter for the News," Martin told his driver, "and that chap with the trunk is a peach of a story if I can get it. He isn't going where I thought he would though."

"Probably going to one of the depts, isn't he, with that trunk?" the chauffeur suggested.

"I believe you're right," Martin agreed. "If he is, the story is even better. But I've got to find out where he's going."

His quarry showed no signs of consciousness that it was being followed. Its destination proved to be the Union station.

"Where will he go with that trunk if he wants to check it?" Martin asked.

"It depends on whether he's got his ticket," the chauffeur told him. "If he

First Flying Wedge on Football Field, in 1869

As far as history goes, the first intercollegiate football game of all time was played November 6, 1869, at Brunswick, N. J., between Rutgers of that city and Princeton, from 25 miles away.

The New York World published the story of the game, as told by John W. Herbert—Rutgers, '72—a participant. The teams numbered 25 players each.

Rutgers, it appeared, was having a tough year. Princeton had won at baseball and had succeeded in obtaining the Revolutionary war cannon, which had been stolen back and forth, by burying it several inches deep in concrete. Football was becoming common as an intramural sport, and Rutgers challenged its rival to three games. The first was played at Brunswick.

"Receiving the ball," Mr. Herbert writes, "our men formed a perfect interference around it and with short, skillful kicks and dribbles drove it down the field. Taken by surprise, the Princeton men fought valiantly, but in five minutes we had gotten the ball through to our captain's of the enemy's goal, and S. G. Ganó, '71 and G. H. Dixon, '73, neatly kicked it over. None thought of it, so far as I know, but we had without previous plan or thought evolved the play that became famous a few years later as 'the flying wedge.'

Rutgers won, 6 to 4. Princeton won the second game, 8 to 0, on its home grounds. The faculty called off the third game because feeling was running so high between the student bodies.—Detroit News.

hasn't, he'll stop and get it half way down the ramp. If he has he'll go all the way down to the lower level."

Evidently Max hadn't his ticket, for his taxi stopped half way down, pulling up a little before the entrance to the concourse. But the person who left the cab to buy the ticket was the chauffeur. Max apparently didn't want to leave his precious trunk until it was safely checked.

Martin slipped out of his cab and followed the chauffeur boldly up to the ticket window and stood at his elbow while the man bought a ticket and a lower berth, the number of which Martin noted, to New York on the Pennsylvania limited that afternoon. He returned as inconspicuously as he could to his own taxi. The other cab had already started down the ramp.

At a safe distance Martin followed and saw Rhoda's little hat trunk checked, saw Max drive away—unchecked, down him!—with, no doubt, what was left of her three hundred dollars in his pocket. Those identical, twenty-dollar bills that Martin had seen paid for the ticket had been very likely a part of the hoard in her bureau drawer. And he had stood looking on and not done a mortal thing! Well, what could he have done? What could he do now?

One thing he'd better do, without loss of time, was to pay off his taxi while he could. He'd left the paper in his haste this noon, without stopping to get some money that he needed. After he'd paid the sum the meter had been adding up so industriously, and tipped the driver he had just sixty cents left—and you could have bought him, as he stood at the curb watching the cab drive away, for just about that.

The obvious duty before him was to telephone Rhoda at the studio and tell her what he had seen happen. The only plan in his mind was that he and Rhoda go around together to the city hall and swear out a warrant for Lewis' arrest, along with a writ of replevin for the trunk, and then be on hand with a plain-clothes man when Lewis came to the station to take the train. There was time enough for that and it would be easy enough—except for the one fact that Rhoda herself would veto the plan.

He hadn't the faintest doubt of that. He remembered how she'd looked last night when he had been telling her about the "morguo"; they dug into that only, he had said, when something in the current news called for a reference to it. He didn't know—he'd deliberately avoided trying to find out—what file it was she was afraid might be looked into now, exactly, what sort of secret it contained, but he remembered the deep earnestness in her voice when she'd begged him not to try to find out any more than she had told him and not to do anything that might change the life she'd been so happy in during the past two years.

He had been drifting aimlessly along the street in the general direction of his newspaper office, though he had no conscious reason for going back there, and presently he found himself standing outside a little movie theater, staring in a sort of trance at the lurid poster on its billboard.

It represented the so-called eternal triangle, a guilty pair surprised by the man's virtuous wife. She was defending the sanctity of the hearth with a small revolver and you could see from the way they cowed before her that they recognized the cogency of her argument. She had the same colored

Face Powder From Sea

In both salt and fresh water live countless millions of microscopic creatures known as diatoms. These little thin shells of almost incredible thinness, and when they die their empty husks form a deposit known by the rather forbidding name of diatomaceous earth. Experiments have shown that from this earth can be made a powder which is ideal for toilet purposes.

When dry, diatomaceous earth is easily reduced to very light powder, finer and more porous than that made from rice or starch. At present, all good toilet powders are made from one or other of these two substances. Before long diatom powder made from material collected from the seashore or the beds of lakes and rivers is likely to make a strong bid for popularity.

hair as Claire Cleveland—and a little of her looks, too.

Martin's abstraction grew deeper and deeper. The girl in the cage cast sharp little glances his way and wondered whether she hadn't better have him move on. But before she came to this decision he came to one of his own. He looked at his watch and went off to the nearest drug store to telephone to Claire.

CHAPTER VII

How the Plot Worked Out

The simple, but really rather thrilling one-act play which had its only performance at a few minutes past five that afternoon in the concourse of the Union station, paid no royalties to the stark screen drama which was being exposed six times daily in the little movie theater.

The theft of that plot was the only crime that Martin had to commit that day. Strictly speaking there was no audience, for Martin did not dare come close enough to hear the lines—and Babe Jennings, who heard everything, was herself one of the important actors.

Babe had undertaken the part, though at short notice, with enthusiasm, once she'd convinced herself that Martin had not gone suddenly mad and after she had got the main lines of the scenario through her head. She had dashed out to the studio in a taxi—all expenses were guaranteed by Rhoda—and, thanking goodness that Rhoda wasn't there to have his messages passed on to her, made a toilet as much like a million dollars as her street things ran to.

Her major respiciendences were calculated for the evening, of course, but even in her lesser glory she looked good to Max Lewis when he caught sight of her in the station—good enough to be going to Hollywood. He told her that while he sentimentally prolonged their handshake.

Her answer to this remark about Hollywood was that she was headed for a better place than that. She was starting off on the limited to the big town. She burst into raptures about her trip. "What are you looking so funny about?" she concluded, closing in on her victim. "Are you going to hate to lose me as much as that?"

"I'm not going to lose you at all," Max told her. "That's the joke. I'm going to New York on the limited, myself. What car are you in? Let's see your ticket."

Babe cheerfully gave credit to Martin that this property was in place. She'd never had thought of the detail herself. She opened her handbag and got out one of those railway envelopes that they enclose tickets in. It had some stuffing in it too. But it didn't require to be opened, for on the face of it was written in indelible pencil, "Pennsylvania Limited—5:30—Car 408, Lower 10."

She held it out for him to see without, however, letting go of it. "Let's see yours," she said excitedly.

He got a similar envelope out of his breast pocket, but it had no car and berth numbers written on it and he had to get out his pullman tickets for a look. She saw that he had a trunk check in the envelope.

"Why, Max," she cried, with a squeal of excitement, "we're in the same car! Look—408! Can you beat it?"

"I'll tell the world you can't," he proclaimed enthusiastically. "Look here, Babe, what do you say? Can I swap my lower for the upper in your section?"

"Well," she told him judiciously, "you never can tell till you try."

Out of a corner of her eye Babe thought she saw where a woman stood watching them, "Max," she said, sharp and low, "is that your wife looking at us?"

"Wife!" he echoed. "Say, Babe, where do you get that stuff?"

But he looked, and she, looking up at him, saw his face drain to the color of an unbaked pie. The woman swept down upon them and stood glaring from one to the other.

"Babe, eh?" she said with a ferocious grin. "I thought so."

She didn't say it very loud, though. Evidently she didn't care about attracting a crowd, herself.

"You yellow dog!" she went on to address Max. "Trying to double cross me, were you, and get away with a skirt? Well, you aren't smart enough, see? Give me the check of that trunk."

"I tell you there wasn't any trunk," he asserted frantically. "I went to find it and I couldn't. It wasn't there."

"Look here," Babe struck in, "I've had enough of this. Sorry to get you in Dutch, Max. Goodby!"

She made as if to move off toward the gate, then darted back to him, crowding in front of the woman as she did so.

"Gosh," she panted, "I almost forgot! Give me my ticket."

He swallowed hard and said, "your ticket?"

She flickered a wink at him, "Don't you remember? I gave it to you when you checked my trunk. Why, you've got it right in your hand."

HEARD ABOUT TOWN

Mickey McNeff of Fort Stanton was a Carrizozo visitor last Saturday to see "The Last of the Duanes" at the Crystal Theatre that night.

Henry Silva, sons Fred, David and wife were week-end visitors at the Gregorio Pino home, returning to their home in the Tucson mountains on Sunday.

Barney Luck was a business visitor from Alto last week. Barney said that everything looked promising for a fine summer up in the White mountains.

W. B. Payne was here last week from his home near Capitan and while here, paid this office a pleasant call. W. B. said that grass is coming up fine and stock looks well in his locality.

W. H. Broaddus, Optical Specialist, will be in Carrizozo on Wednesday, April 15, at Dr. Shaver's office. Eye glass service of the better kind.

A meeting of vital importance will be held at OddFellows Hall next Tuesday night. All Odd-Fellows are urged to be present. S. E. Greisen, N. G. Wm J. Langston, Sec'y.

Abu Sanchez was a week-end visitor at El Paso and San Elizario, Texas, spending the time with friends and relatives. While in El Paso, Abu was a guest of Leopoldo Parada, an intimate friend of his and better known in prizefight circles as "Batting Chico." He expressed a desire to visit here with the Sanchez family in the near future.

Walter LaFleur, Jr., was here and spent Sunday with the home folks. Walter is in the employ of the state highway commission and is located near Santa Fe, where the boys may, with a short drive, come in to town, enjoy an evening of pleasure and return to camp at ordinary bedtime.

Mrs T. J. Grafton and son Hugh of Angus passed through here Tuesday on their way to Hot Springs and will return the latter part of the week, accompanied by Mr. Grafton, who has been taking the baths at that place for the past three weeks. He is much improved and has gained relief from an attack of rheumatism.

Lopez-Vega

On Wednesday morning, April 8th, at the St. Rita Catholic Church, Florentino Lopez and Miss Petra Vega walked to the altar and were united in marriage by the Rev. Father Francis Mitchell, pastor of the church.

Mr. Sabino Vidaurri served as best man and Mrs. Vidaurri as bridesmaid.

A big dance was given at Community Hall that night, where the many friends of the young couple showered them with congratulations and the very best wishes on their future voyage in the sea of matrimony.

The bride is the charming daughter of Mrs. Josefa S. Vega, being born at the old Vega Ranch near Nogal and reared in Carrizozo, where she received all of her schooling and became one of the most popular among the young ladies of the young Spanish-American set.

The groom, like his esteemed wife, was reared here and graduated from the local high school with the class of 1929-30. He was a member of the high school orchestra and also captain of the basketball team, at which game, he gained a large popularity for his good playing. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Juan Osorio, and is employed at the store of his uncle, Sabino Vidaurri.

Their many acquaintances extend to them best wishes.

Funeral of Mrs.

Josephine Russell

The funeral of Mrs. Josephine Russell, who died at the Hotel Hilton in El Paso on April 2, was held here last Sunday afternoon, the services being conducted at the Methodist Church with Rev. Lawson officiating.

It will be remembered that her husband died here on Dec 3, 1930, and her brooding over the sad occurrence contributed largely to her death. The funeral was attended by many who knew her during her brief stay, before Mr. Russell passed away. The floral offerings of respect and esteem were many and beautiful. After the services, the remains were interred by the side of her husband in the local cemetery.

Mr. and Mrs. F. V. Thompson, who accompanied the remains here, Mr. Thompson being a brother of the deceased, wish to thank the people of Carrizozo for acts of kindness, words of sympathy and floral offerings.

Mrs. George B. Barber, who for the past year has been a resident of Aberdeen, Washington, is now in Llano, Texas, where she will reside for an indefinite time, according to a letter received from her this week.

Mrs. B. D. Garner was here from Pecos Monday, attending a meeting of the County Board of Education of which she is a member.
