

CAPTAN MOUNTAIN AIRINGS

Earl Rountree has let the contract for a dwelling house, filling station and camp yard which will be located on the new highway.

Mrs. Sellers, who has been visiting her daughter, Mrs. Louis Cummins, for the past month, left for Oklahoma Monday for a month's visit with relatives before returning to her home in Los Angeles.

Mr. and Mrs. Koogler and children left Sunday for Las Vegas, where Mr. Koogler will teach at the Normal this summer.

Harry Clemmens of Roswell spent the week-end with the Lumpkins family.

Mr. Hall left Saturday for Smithville, Okla., to get his son and daughters who have been in school there for the past year.

Miss Dorothy Dozier of Carrizozo was here this week, visiting her sister, Mrs. Montie Gardenhire.

Miss Hayalp of Roswell is a guest of Mrs. Hall this week.

Ray Scott, who has been holding services at the Nazarene church for the past week, has had large and attentive crowds every night. These services will be held until Sunday night. Everybody come and hear the good preaching.

Mrs. Riggins, who resides north of town, is seriously ill.

Bob Hale and family of Ancho were here Sunday, visiting relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. S. E. Greison were here Sunday from Carrizozo, the county clerk attending the ball game at Fort Stanton, while Mrs. Greison visited friends.

Bert Provine left Sunday for Abilene, Texas, to get his daughter Jane, who has been attending Business College at that city for the past term.

Bryant Dockery was seriously bitten by a dog Sunday and was taken to Johnson's Hospital at Carrizozo, where after receiving treatment, he was brought back home Monday and is recovering nicely.

Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Rolland will leave Saturday morning for Albuquerque, to take their daughter Helen that far on her return trip to Denver, where she takes up her duties as a graduate trained nurse.

Mr. and Mrs. Boswell Brown, daughter Irene, son W. T. Brown and wife of Shawnee, Okla., came in last Saturday and stayed over until Tuesday visiting their relatives, the G. C. Bigelow and John Brown families. While here, they visited the mountain resorts and also saw "Craven's Bat Cave" or "Billy the Kid Cave" as some call it. They left for home Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. P. C. Hanley, daughter Juanita and son Neal, who have been here for the past 6 months, while Mr. Hanley was the diamond driller on the big Bonito Dam project, will leave tomorrow for Fierro, N. M., where Mr. Hanley will do the diamond drilling for a large mining project.

LOCAL MENTION

Attention OddFellows

The White Mountain Association, composed of the OddFellow and Rebekah Lodges of Alamogordo, Tularosa, Vaughn and Carrizozo, will meet at Camp Lee Robinson, I. O. O. F., on Cedar Creek (Ruidoso) Sunday, June 14. All members of the order and their friends are cordially invited.—Zoe Glassmire, Pres.

Methodist Church

Next Sunday, being the fifth Sunday in May, we will have regular services both morning and evening. Wouldn't it be a fine thing if we would all attend at least one church service on a Sunday? Someone said just the other day, "Every day is New Year, and a good time to make good resolutions." He is right. And Sunday School and church attendance are mighty good things to make resolutions about—and keep.—J. L. Lawson, pastor.

Breaks Limb Second Time

We see by the Santa Fe New Mexican, that Traffic officer Benny Chavez, who had one of his legs broken a short while ago, while in a friendly wrestling prank with another officer at the station, had the same leg again broken in attempting to step from a car on his first trip to the station after being discharged from the hospital. A local surgeon set the bones following an X-Ray examination. Benny was born and reared in Lincoln County and has made an enviable record as a traffic officer in Santa Fe.

Meyer Barnett, daughter Ruth, Miss Ethel Johnson and Chas. F. Gray were week-end visitors at El Paso, Mr. Gray attending the Shrine doings, while Mr. Barnett witnessed the confirmation of his nephew, Edmund S. Barnett, at Temple Mt. Sinia with Dr. Zielonka officiating. They returned Sunday evening.

Mr. Ernest, manager of the new Lyric Theatre, made a trip to Roswell last Friday, conferred with Mr. Trieb, lessee of the Lyric and returned Sunday with a carpenter and painter who want to work in dead earnest with the finishing touches on the new order of things.

Deputy County Assessor L. A. Dow made a trip to Lincoln Saturday and spent Sunday with his family, returning to his duties Monday morning.

O. L. Hinger, photographer, who was here from Silver City and spent about two weeks, during which time he was at his old stand in the building in the rear of Paden's Drug Store, reported a nice business before he left last Sunday. Mr. Hinger has paid Carrizozo a visit each year, and heretofore was accompanied by his wife and little girls, whom we have missed this time, as Mrs. Hinger remained in Silver City for the children to finish the school term.

Dr. Barry, who has located at Timpie, in the lower valley, made a trip to El Paso Tuesday, accompanied by Perry Sears, agent for the City Garage and they returned with one of the latest models of Chevrolet Cabriolet with which Dr. Barry is well pleased.

In Memoriam

The Beckoning Hand

Those who pass through Carrizozo, or even stop here for a short period of time without witnessing the beauties of the nearby mountains and canyons, will never realize what lies in store for the lovers of nature so close to the desert. Only those who have enjoyed the wonderful mornings when the blue lanceheads of dawn are shooting up from the eastern horizon, can appreciate such a scene. As the sun finally drives the sleeping vapor from the canyons and gorges, a sight, beautiful to behold, greets the vision.

From the top of the mountain, you may see silent forests of vivid green spreading as far as the eye can reach in bewitching glory. Then, the evenings; as the sun is sinking in the west, the glories of the scene are unsurpassed. You may see golden hues grow pale, rose tints fade like a blush, till slowly the mountain shadows form into grotesque figures like huge giants standing guard over the peaceful, lumbering valleys and canyons below. Here, the tired business man and the restless health-seeker may find refuge from their cares and trials. Here, after long days of labor, mental or physical, and from nights devoid of rest and ease, nature calls the care-worn and restless to contentment and rest for mind and body, coming like the benediction after prayer. From this paradise, comes the beckoning hand.

Tourists coming over the new highway from Carlsbad to the Petrified Forest, should not fail to visit our wonderland in the White mountains, where scenes, impossible to describe here, may be witnessed. "Know this section of New Mexico" should be our slogan.—Come and be convinced.

Boy Scout Camp News

Scouts of Carrizozo have just received their booklets describing this summer's camp at the Boy Scout Reservation in the Sacramento mountains near Weed, N. M. A new feature of this year's camp is a series of chuck wagon trips. This kind of a hike is designed for those who want an extra thrill and some extended camping experience. At present our plans call for two such trips for each camp period. Each trip will extend through three days and nights. Twenty scouts will go on each trip and first class old campers will be given first choice at the trips.

Camp officials will furnish tents, food, cooking equipment, etc. Each boy who expects to take trips should be prepared to furnish all personal equipment necessary to a good camper. All such equipment will be loaded on the chuck-wagon and driven ahead to camp locations for the nights. The campers, with an expert camper and guide, will make the entire trip via hikes. Taking this trip will be of no extra expense to the scout.

Attention, Masons!

There will be a Regular Communication of Carrizozo Lodge No. 41, A. F. & A. M., on Saturday night, May 30, for the purpose of business.

All Master Masons are cordially invited.
E. M. Brickley, W. M.,
R. E. Lamon, Secretary.

County Officials Indulge In Heroic Exercise

Monday afternoon, a number of boys went to the big pool in the courthouse yard to take a swim, leaving their clothes in the cellarway across the street. On leaving, one of the boys left his clothes in the cellar and hiked up town in his bathing suit. Soon afterwards someone brought the word to the courthouse that a boy's clothes were seen in the cellar, but the boy was nowhere to be found. The ladies at the courthouse nearly went into hysterics—someone said, "break the news to his mother." "No! It will kill her," cried out another.

The Board of Commissioners happened to be in session and as the cry of "drowned boy!" reached their ears, they all started for the pool armed with grab-hooks, rakes, poles and "what have you." They were followed by other officials who happened to be in the courthouse at the time. If ever anyone tells you that county officials can't perform manual labor, just tell that party that he or she has been misled, for they worked like beavers to get the supposed body out of the big pool which is over six feet deep. After the pool had been dragged, the object of their search appeared in his bathing suit, with a broad smile on his face. Wasted effort. But the courthouse force had more exercise than the golfers had that day.

George Dow, son of Deputy Assessor L. H. Dow, was a Carrizozo visitor from Lincoln the early part of the week.

CORONA CLEANINGS

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Kilpatrick announce the birth of a daughter, Joyce Gene, Monday, May 25.

Mrs. M. E. Beaver passed away Wednesday morning at the home of her son, Roy. Burial was made in the local cemetery. Mrs. Beaver is survived by a husband, son and two daughters, Mesdames Will Pruitt and A. L. C. Jones, both of whom are in Arizona and were too ill to come to their mother's bedside. To all of these and to the grandchildren, the sympathy of the community is extended.

O. M. Deming of Denver was in Corona Wednesday on business.

Mr. and Mrs. Tom McCamant drove to Roswell Monday for a short visit with Mrs. A. S. McCamant.

Mr. and Mrs. L. L. Argenbright were Carrizozo visitors Monday.

Mrs. Ruth Long has returned after a visit of several weeks with Mr. Long in California.

Miss Geraldine DuBois attended the annual convention of the State Pharmaceutical Association at Albuquerque last week, where she was elected Vice-President of the Association for the coming year.

Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Greer and son are visiting Mr. Greer's father and other relatives at Frederick, Oklahoma.

Mr. and Mrs. L. S. Van Scoyoc left this week for Manhattan, Kansas, where they were called by the serious illness of Mr. Van Scoyoc's mother.

Miss Bertha Butler, who has been teaching at Estancia, is spending a part of her vacation with her sister, Mrs. Nan J. Stone.

Ryberg-Collins

Harry Ryberg and Miss Effie Collins were united in marriage Saturday, May 23, by Rev. C. C. Hill at Roswell. The only attendant was Mrs. E. M. Collins, mother of the bride. Mr. and Mrs. Ryberg are at home to their friends on the Ryberg ranch east of Corona. We wish them many years of continued happiness and success.

Read the Ads

In this issue, your attention is called to the advertising contained on its pages: Ziegler Bros., Pehm's Bargain House, First National Bank, Rolland's Drug Store, City Garage, Carrizozo Eating House, Star Cafe, Carrizozo Meat Market, B. & B. Service Station, Miller's Service Station, Carrizozo Auto Co., J. W. Harkey & Son, Skinner's Cash Saving Grocery, Mrs. C. O. Davis, Titaworth Co., Inc., Model Cleaners, George Hyde, Mrs. M. I. Hunt, Lucky's Dairy and C. E. Jordan, all of whom solicit the public patronage and guarantee the best of service in return of such courtesies.

Judge Hulbert was here the early part of the week from Tucumcari and after visiting relatives at Capitan and in the Hon-do valley, stopped over with us for a short time on his return trip home.

The New Lyric

The opening of the new Theatre which has been under course of remodeling for the past three weeks, will be announced shortly, according to Mr. Ernest, the local manager. The new large horn and latest design of perforated screen have arrived and are being installed.

The seats, which have heretofore leaned with the gradual descent of the floor, have blocks under the front legs, so that they now are in comfortable reclining positions.

Mr. Ernest hopes to have everything in readiness by tomorrow night or Sunday at the outside. The box office is entirely separated from the theatre, being so, by a door instead of curtains.

A double celotex partition goes across the theater where the curtain hung behind the box office while at either end, large and roomy archways are provided and will be draped with portiers. Finishing touches are rapidly putting everything in ship-shape and the gong will soon sound for the opening—it won't be long now, so hold your horses, the show is coming!

The prices will be within reach of all—35c for adults and 10c for children.

Carrizozo Auto Company Will Hold Ford Show

YOUR ATTENTION is called to the ad on page 8 by the Carrizozo Auto Co., concerning the Talking Pictures of the Ford car and the manner in which they are made, all of which is free to the public. Read the ad and attend the show.

Home-Coming of Students who have been attending the Colleges is near at hand. They will all be home by the middle of next week. Maurice Lemon and Bill Spencer from the Military Institute at Roswell; Ruth Brickley, Glenneth English, Jane Spencer and Margie Rolland from the State "U" at Albuquerque; Helen Frances Huppertz and Billy Nickels from the State College at Las Cruces.

Mr. and Mrs. Marion Hust have moved from Nogal to their ranch claim near Oscura, where they will make their future home.

Mrs. Elizabeth Gumm, our esteemed postmistress, is looking forward to a visit from her son Dean and wife whom she is expecting to arrive from Denver tomorrow or Sunday. Mr. and Mrs. Gumm will remain for a short visit and will continue their journey to visit other places before returning home.

Mrs. Chas. F. Grey, who has been seriously ill since last Sunday, is reported improving nicely at this writing.

Mesdames Wayne Van Schoyok and John Townsend of White Oaks were Carrizozo visitors last Wednesday and made the Gift Shop a pleasant call.

The boys have been wondering what to do, now that the vacation period is on, but they may now organize into clubs to make dinero at odd jobs for picture show money. It won't take long to make the fare, it's only 10c.

Memorials to Our Soldier Dead

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

AT 30 is the day when America honors her warrior dead. On that day we decorate their graves with flowers as our tribute of love and respect for those who gave their lives for their country. But this annual observance is not the only evidence of America's gratitude to her heroic sons and daughters. Since the World War there have been erected in every part of the country memorials of various kinds which recall, not on just one day of the year, but on every day, the service of those who perished during the great conflict of 1914-1918.

Home one has remarked recently that "the realistic temper of our day has affected war memorials in such a way as to convert the memorial to the dead into a benefaction for the living and in its modern tendency the war memorial movement has become a source of constructive effort by which the spirit of dedication is mobilized to produce works of humanitarian, educational and inspirational value."

Among these "works of humanitarian, educational and inspirational value" may be listed some of the state memorials which have already been erected or which are now in the process of construction or are planned, but as yet not brought into being. Outstanding among these projects erected by the citizens of the state as a whole is the new state capitol at Lincoln, Neb. The words which are engraved upon its cornerstone tell its purpose—"The Capitol of Nebraska Dedicated to the Memory of Those Who Fell in the Service of Their Country."

The building is in the form of an exact square, of which each face is 437 feet long, including the terraces. The greater part of the exterior is rather low, broken at the center of each side by a somewhat higher mass, each of which is the termination of a cross-shaped structure, from the center of which rises a great tower, 80 feet square and 400 feet high from the ground to the top of the figure on the dome.

Another state memorial on a magnificent scale is the Indiana World War memorial project in Indianapolis, which, however, will be dedicated to the sole purpose of commemoration. The main building stands in a plaza which is spread down like a long strip of carpet through the city and whose pattern is to be worked out in lawns, flower beds, and clusters of shrubbery.

Although Nebraska and Indiana thus far have the memorials of outstanding magnificence, other states have projects of various kinds either under way or already completed to honor the memory of their sons.

Alabama has provided for a commission authorized to adopt plans for a memorial, the state to appropriate $50,000, conditioned upon the raising of $300,000 by private contributions. Arkansas has given up its old state capitol and grounds and designated them as the Arkansas State War memorial, to be used by the American Legion of the state.

Although California has no state memorial, San Francisco has a memorial project under way. The main features around an ambitious memorial court are to be an opera house, a museum of fine arts and the memorial building. In Idaho the memorial has taken the form of a large armory and gymnasium in the University of Idaho. In this building there is a bronze tablet on which is inscribed the names of all Idaho men who lost their lives in service.

Illinois has a similar memorial in the form of the great stadium at the University of Illinois dedicated to the memory of the Illinois men who died in France, and in the Illinois metropolis, Chicago, plans are under way for a magnificent monument.

Kentucky, with the aid of popular subscription, has erected a memorial building on the grounds of the University of Kentucky at Lexington, and the city of Louisville has also erected a memorial building.

The state of Maryland and the city of Baltimore have combined to provide a structure that is unique in many respects—a magnificent memorial hall, the main floor of which is devoted to honoring the soldier dead. It contains, inscribed on the walls, the names of the battles in which Maryland troops were engaged and the names of Maryland's war dead.

The Massachusetts memorial (illustrated above) is in the form of a huge lighthouse, in keeping with these structures which set as beacons along its "stars and rock-bound coast."

In Missouri the memorials take several forms. Some are monuments, some are arches, some

1. The Indiana Memorial World War shrine which is being erected in Indianapolis. It is 210 feet high and has a base of 190 by 270 feet.
2. The War Heroes memorial in Kansas City, Mo.
3. The Missouri State memorial at Chappin, France, the first of its kind on a World War battlefield. The statue of Victory overlooks the ruins of the town where so many soldiers of the Thirty-fifth and Eighty-ninth divisions, mainly Missouri men, were killed in charging machine gun nests on these heights.
4. The new Nebraska state capitol which is dedicated to the memory of the Nebraska men who lost their lives in the World War.
5. Medal of the Massachusetts War memorial which will be erected on the summit of Mt. Graylock, the highest point in the state, 3,505 feet above sea level. The memorial will be 83 feet high and the ball of light at the top will be 10 feet in diameter.

are parks. The memorial law there provides that the state appropriate a sum equal to that raised by any county up to $1,000 for the purpose of providing county memorials.

Two Missouri cities have made interesting adaptations of the memorial idea. St. Louis has a Memorial Plaza, around which will be grouped the memorial building, a municipal auditorium and the Civil Courthouse.

The Kansas City memorial is one of the most characteristically American of all of the new monuments. Its dominant note is a tall tower, rising from a great sweep of terrace, along the north side of which runs a stone wall richly carved with historic figures. The tower, set between two porticoed buildings, has the appearance of a fluted column. Four rounded piers, which form it, bear aloft in unbroken line, and on the summit bear an altar of sacrifice.

In Nevada the memorial movement has led to the erection of the Heroes Memorial building, which houses the state highway department, the state engineers' department and headquarters for various executive men's organizations.

New Jersey has provided for a France Memorial commission of five members to be appointed by the governor. This commission is required to consult with the United States Battle Mem-ments commission as to the feasibility of erecting a memorial in France.

New Mexico is still engaged in an effort to construct a memorial hall and other buildings in the name of its war dead. At the 1929 session of the legislature an appropriation was made for the purpose of founding, by way of a war memorial, a state library of general scope, as distinguished from the present state law library.

In New York steps have been taken to create a temporary state commission to select a proper site for the erection of a memorial and prepare preliminary plans and estimates of cost.

North Carolina has provided for a memorial building commission and Ohio has appropriated $150,000 for erection of two memorials to commemorate the achievements of the Thirty-seventh division, which was composed largely of Ohio National Guard troops. Out of this appropriation a memorial bridge was erected over the River Scheldt at Eyme, Belgium. In the rebuilt village of Montfaucon, France, a hospital has been built. There is also in contemplation a memorial to be erected in Hatton Chattel, France, for the Ohio brigade of artillery. Within the state itself the memorial movement has taken the form of a statue in the state capitol—an eight-and-one-half-foot figure of a typical American soldier cast in bronze.

In Oklahoma the memorial spirit is reflected in several hospitals and a half-million-dollar state historical building. A large stadium and athletic field are also in contemplation. A public-spirited citizen recently gave $10,000 for a mural decoration in the state capitol. This contains the names of all the Oklahomans who made the supreme sacrifice.

The principal memorial in Oregon is a Court of Honor, built on the campus at the University of Oregon in honor of the men who left their classes for the battlefields.

The Tennessee War memorial in Nashville has been incorporated in the group of capitol buildings and stands on what is now called Victory square. Its portico of double Doric columns opens into an uncovered court from which bronze doors lead into an auditorium on one side and state offices on the other.

As in Illinois, a memorial stadium at the University of Texas recalls the sacrifice of the youth of the Lone Star state.

Virginia has provided for the creation of a war memorial commission which is to consider the erection of a memorial of a monumental or non-utilitarian type. The commission has recommended a carillon to be erected on the grounds of the state capitol at Richmond.

Washington has authorized the construction of a memorial on the state capitol grounds and appropriated $50,000 for that purpose, and at the University of Washington there is a Memorial way—a boulevard lined with a double avenue of trees at the entrance of which are pylons accentuating the official entrance to the campus.

Wisconsin, as part of its memorial program, has constructed a state hospital for veterans at a cost of $1,200,000; also a state institution for the treatment of shell-shocked cases. It has likewise provided a rehabilitation fund for needy veterans and an educational fund for those whose studies had been interrupted by war service.

Southwest News Items

The International Flying Service has asked for a permit to operate airplane passenger and express service between Nogales and Tucson and Douglas, serving Bisbee.

The Public Utilities Consolidated Corporation at Kingman, Ariz., petitioned the corporation commission for permission to sell or abandon portions of its telephone lines in Kingman vicinity.

The 40th annual convention of the Arizona Medical Association was held in Nogales with more than 150 physicians in attendance. The delegates were welcomed by the mayors of Nogales, Ariz., and Nogales, Sonora.

The rehabilitated gas plant and distribution system for Winslow, Ariz., will be completed and in operation not later than Aug. 1, according to H. G. Laub, representing the Chas. F. Stern Co., many purchasers of the plant.

A state-wide conference of industrial, commercial and agricultural leaders called by Gov. George W. P. Hunt to stimulate national interest in obtaining a tariff on foreign-grown copper was held in Phoenix recently.

Sixty-seven candidates, setting a new high mark, took the spring examination held in Phoenix, May 14 and 15 for admission to the bar in Arizona. John L. Gust, secretary of the board of examiners, said this is fifteen more than any previous class in the history of the state.

Development of southwestern Indian arts and crafts with protection to the genuine from imitation and the problem of whether congressional intervention is desirable in an effort to eliminate factional quarrels in some of the pueblos dominated the United States Senate committee hearing in Santa Fe.

State Comptroller Jake Lujan announced in Santa Fe that a new schedule of reduced salaries would take effect as of May 1, in the Motor Vehicle Department and the Gasoline Tax Department of the state of New Mexico. The salaries of nearly all employees were cut $25 a month, but a few reductions were for $15 and $10.

Gov. George W. P. Hunt made public in Phoenix a letter he has written Arthur M. Hyde, secretary of agriculture, in which, explaining his recent protest against granting of a permit to the Los Angeles Museum to carry on archaeological investigations in Arizona, he informs Secretary Hyde, "Arizona objects zealously to the looting of our irreplaceable archaeological material for removal from the state."

For the second straight year, Miss Inez Harding, youthful Globe, Ariz., star, has won the junior girls' tennis title of the state of Arizona. Displaying a cool and consistent game, Miss Harding triumphed over Ark. Torquati, and then subdued Josephine Free of Tucson to successfully defend her title in Tucson. The boys' singles went to Warren McCarthy, Phoenix, when he defeated Robert Kennedy, also of Phoenix.

Non-wearing of the badges to be issued this summer with fishing licenses will not constitute a violation of law, under regulations adopted in Santa Fe by the New Mexico Game and Fish Commission. The badges will be issued with licenses and persons are urged to wear them, the commission decided. Persons, wearing badges and not possessing the corresponding fishing license, however, will be prosecuted.

Reputating his Jules Verne stories of having inherited $2,000,000 and of having been robbed of $250,000 in securities while driving between Gallup, N. M., and Holbrook, Ariz., Pierce S. Halleck, the "millionaire waiter" stands revealed as just a waiter. "It was fun while it lasted," he told reporters in Los Angeles, after he had admitted borrowing $20,000 from friends and strangers during the past year, "but now I'm going back to waiting tables again."

Four men died in a fire which gutted the city jail in Springer, N. M. A fifth man was near death at the Haton Hospital. The dead are: Norman Lester, home address unknown; David Tate, Detroit, Mich.; Glen Armstrong, Peoria, Ill.; James Lawrence, Clayton, N. M. The fifth victim is Jack Sullivan, Clayton, N. M. The fire is believed to have been caused by a cigarette. The blaze swept the interior of the one-room jail.

Arizona copper mining activity, already reduced to less than 40 per cent of normal, will be cut still further. The Magma Copper Company at Superior announced it would cease operations on June 12 for six weeks in observance of its annual "summer vacation." The shutdown will mean the laying off of 600 men but they will be put back to work July 27. The United Verde Copper Company has discontinued production of copper at Jerome and Clarkdale for an indefinite period.

Members of the Winslow Lions' Club have declared a ban on shaves, vowing to let all Lion whackers grow until the big Meteor City Roundup which will be staged in Winslow, Ariz., July 3, 4 and 5.

The Bisbee Gold Hill Production Company filed articles with the state corporation commission in Phoenix recently, setting its authorized capital stock at $400,000 shares. The company will deal with mining claims, mineral, coal, oil and timber lands. The corporation's headquarters will be located at Bisbee.

REGULAR PAINS

The modern Miss needs no "time out" for the time of month. If you've ever taken Bayer Aspirin for a headache, you know how soon the pain subsides. It is just as effective in the relief of those pains peculiar to women!

Don't dedicate certain days of every month to suffering. It's old-fashioned. It's unnecessary. Aspirin will always enable you to carry on in comfort. Take enough to assure you complete comfort. If it is genuine aspirin it cannot possibly hurt you. Bayer Aspirin does not depress the heart, so use it freely.

Headaches come at inconvenient times. So do colds. But a little Bayer Aspirin will always save the day. Neuralgia. Neuritis. Rheumatism. Pains that once kept people home are forgotten half an hour after taking a few of these remarkable tablets. So are the little nagging aches that bring fatigue and "nerves" by day or a sleepless night.

Genuine Bayer Aspirin tablets cost so very little after all, that it doesn't pay to experiment with imitations!

AFTER 40 bowel trouble

Constipation may very easily become chronic after forty. And any continued constipation at that time of life may bring attacks of piles and a host of other unpleasant disorders.

Watch your bowels at any age. Guard them with particular care after forty. Whenever they need any help, remember a doctor should know what is best for them.

"Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin" is a doctor's prescription for the bowels. Tested by 47 years' practice, it has been found thoroughly effective in relieving constipation and its ills for men, women and children of all ages. It has proven perfectly safe even for babies. Made from fresh laxative herbs, pure pepsin and other harmless ingredients, it cannot grip; will not sicken you or weaken you; can be used without harm as often as your breath is bad, or when your tongue is coated; whenever a headachy, bilious, gassy condition warns of constipation.

AUGUST FLOWER

THE SEALED TRUNK

By Henry Kitchell Webster

Copyright by The Bobbs-Merrill Co. WNU Service

Except for the expedition to recover the trunk there was no reason why she shouldn't have gone to work this morning as usual, although it had been fun to pretend to be asleep while Babe was making all sorts of sudden and calamitous noises in her effort to get dressed and get her breakfast in perfect silence, and really to fall asleep again for another twenty minutes after the studio door had slammed behind her.

When ten o'clock passed without bringing him, she began getting cross. Had he just gone off to work as usual and forgotten all about her? At half past ten she stopped being cross and began to be frightened. Had Uncle William done some horrible thing to him to get him out of the way? Or Claire, with a pearl-handled revolver, this time, in her little wristbag? Or Max Lewis, or Conley? He's been making formidable enemies in her cause, hand over fist, during the last twenty-four hours.

When finally a few minutes after eleven she heard a step she thought was his come bounding up the studio stairs and had darted to the door and flung it open, she was so glad to see him that her eyes filled up with silly tears again and she was in his arms before she knew it.

By and by, over on the divan, Martin made a confession. "I'd fully made up my mind," he told her, "that I'd be very calm and brotherly this morning and at least give you a chance to think, if you wanted to, that the whole thing had been a bluff for Uncle William's benefit. I told myself I'd be a dog to take advantage of you. It wasn't the money I minded so much—I mean the chance that you're going to be horribly rich. That was what was worrying Uncle William, of course. But I reminded myself that you'd only known me about a week, and you were a mere child and probably didn't know what love was about, and how much nobler it would be if I showed you I wasn't just greedy and was willing to wait. And I will wait; I'll wait seven years if you want me to. But do you think that could make you any surer?"

"I think," she told him, "that if you'd said that first night at the Alhambra, 'Will you marry me?' instead of 'Do you want to be rescued?' I'd have nodded my head at you just the same. Anyhow, I've known since then."

"Well, then," he said, "that's settled, anyhow," and he let go one of her hands to feel a ring out of his waistcoat pocket and slip it on her finger.

It was a blindingly beautiful thing, and she sat gazing at it, spellbound, for about a minute, trying to realize what it was and what it meant. But when she turned back to Martin to thank him with a kiss, she caught him in the act of looking at his watch. Even without that she could have told from the way his kiss felt that he had something on his mind.

"What is it?" she asked. "Are you thinking about that old trunk? Does it matter if we don't get it this morning? Does anything matter?"

"There's only one thing that matters," he said, getting up and moving away a little to put himself out of temptation, "and that's your father. I think perhaps we can do something if we strike while the iron is hot. I haven't got it clear enough to talk quite good sense about it, but it's a little like the old woman and the pig that wouldn't get over the stile. Do you remember, 'Stick won't beat dog, dog won't bite pig'? You see, the only person who can set your father's memory right before the university world—and that's the only world he cared about—is Uncle William, who is president of the board of trustees out there. Uncle William's the pig, all right. He knows the facts and I think he believes them. But he won't get over the stile until somebody bites him on the leg."

"Who's going to bite him?" she asked. But when he answered, "Forster," she echoed the name in simple astonishment.

"I can't guess what it is, darling," he told her, "but there's something in that little trunk of yours that Forster thinks he can't live without. I want to find out what it is and hurt it at him while he's still frightened. He's frightened half out of his wits. He's making Max marry that Cleveland woman. I saw them, this morning, down at the city hall, she with her face all bandaged up and Max looking as green as if he was waiting to be sentenced to a term in the penitentiary, with Conley on guard to see that he didn't go a bit, waiting for the marriage license bureau to open up."

Gazing at him wide-eyed she saw him flush like a schoolboy, and at that she flew at him and hugged him. She couldn't help it. "Did you get ours, too?" she asked.

He nodded. "I thought it was better," he said, "—just in case of emergency. That's what I told myself at the time. But will you, Rhoda, now? Before we go and get the trunk? St. Timothy's is just around the corner. I know the curate and he'll be there."

"I'll get my hat and coat," she said. And it wasn't more than ten minutes before she found herself being married by a hearty young man who had, it seemed, put out his pipe just before he'd put on his cassock.

She wondered later, when she had time to think things over, about how vague an impression this service made upon her. She was barely able to remember anything about it. On the other hand, every word Martin had said during their walk to the church was etched deep upon her memory. The force of his purpose to set up her father's name again in its proper place, cleansed of the mud of scandal and suspicion; the fact that he had a plan and that until he had set that plan in motion everything else, even love-making, would have to wait, put a new dimension into her love for him.

From the church door they took a taxi to the railway station, found the trunk without misadventure, and took it back to the studio. By that time they were both wildly excited over the mystery of its contents. What they found was just what Rhoda dimly remembered the contents to have been, sheets of yellow paper covered with notes, equations and diagrams. Some of them looked to her like gigantic magnifications of a child's game of naughts and crosses. Pictures of molecules, Martin said he guessed they were, but it was all, he frankly admitted, considerably worse than Greek to him. There was an enormous amount of it, thousands of sheets. Several thousand. They began taking them out reverently, one at a time. Then they took them out by handfuls. There was no sort of order to them, apparently. It wasn't conceivable that this mass of stuff was anything that Forster wanted.

Well, then, what else was in the trunk? They got to the bottom of it at last and gazed at each other with eyes blank with disappointment. It seemed there was nothing in the trunk but those yellow sheets.

Rhoda got up stiffly and announced her intention of getting lunch. "I'm going to cook my husband's first meal," she made coffee and heated up a can of corned beef hash and set the little table while he continued to sit on the floor in a brown study, shuffling his yellow papers.

They were so occupied when Babe, it being Saturday, came home from work, unaware that she was looking at a married couple. Rhoda told her promptly and her exuberant joy over the news combined with her fury at not having been invited to the wedding produced the effect of an active young tornado. She hugged Rhoda and kissed Martin, and berated them both in her best manner all the time.

It was right in the midst of this tumult that Martin announced a discovery. "There are about a hundred of these sheets that are written in lead pencil, but all the others are carbon copies. The penciled sheets aren't different in any other way that I can see from the carbons. They're in the same handwriting, anyhow. Can you make anything of that?"

Rhoda was busy opening the hot can of hash and she said she couldn't. Just after Babe went out she saw him get up in a preoccupied sort of way, and go over to the telephone. He called the Worcester hotel, asked for Uncle William and got him. Then he said, "This is Martin Forbes. Rhoda and I were married this morning. We're going to have a conference this afternoon at three o'clock and we'd like you to be here if you can, and bring the contract between Forster and Professor McFarland with you."

Picture of Molecules, Martin Said He Guessed They Were.

It seemed strange to Rhoda that she didn't see any blue flames from the receiver licking about Martin's ear. Uncle William was even, judging from Martin's fragmentary replies, being polite. "What's happened to him?" she asked as Martin hung up. "Didn't he breathe any fire at all about our being married?"

"Oh, no, he took that all right. I thought he would."

This call was even more astonishing. It was the Worcester again and he asked for Mr. Forster's apartment. He recognized the answering voice, for he said, "Conley? Take this message for Mr. Forster. Say that Miss McFarland has recovered her father's trunk and if the contents of it interest him, as we believe they will now we've examined them, he can come to her studio this afternoon, at three o'clock and discuss what's to be done about them. Find out if we're to expect him, will you?" There was a breathless pause of about a minute. Then Martin said, "All right. Three o'clock," and hung up.

"There was a queer, rather scared look in his face as he turned back to her. "Martin," she cried, "have you found it?—have you found the thing he wants?"

He shook his head. "I haven't found a thing," he told her. "But now, you see, I've got to find it. There's nothing like a deadline to stimulate the wits of a reporter."

As soon as he had swallowed what was on his plate he took his cup of coffee and went back to the floor.

He was still there when Uncle William came; so strangely transformed an Uncle William that Rhoda forgot all about Martin for several minutes. There wasn't a trace of the ogre left about him. He jocosely claimed the right to kiss the bride and did it, said, as he patted her on the back, that he thought she was going to be very happy, and reproached her playfully for having kept him in the dark about something, though what it was she couldn't at first make out. It was not, it seemed, her unpremeditated marriage this morning. He said he quite understood their acting as they had done about that and thought that in the circumstances it had been wise.

Then he began apologizing to Martin. He was afraid his manner last night when he had been quiet in the dark as to who Martin really was, he having merely been told that he was a reporter, hadn't been quite appropriate. "But," said Rhoda blankly, "he is a reporter."

"Yes, yes, of course," Uncle William agreed unhesitatingly at a sudden movement of impatience on Martin's part, "but I want to acknowledge that my momentary suspicion that his interest in you was heightened by his knowledge of the possibility that you might turn out to be, so to speak, an heiress, became grotesque as soon as I looked up what he spoke of on the way home as Mr. Forster's and learned that he had an independent fortune of his own."

She turned a bewildered look on Martin.

"It's nothing to bother about, darling," he said. "I wasn't keeping anything dark. I'd have told you if there'd been time. But there's always been something more important to talk about. As a matter of fact, there is now. Forster will be getting here any minute. Rhoda, what was the date of your father's death? Do you remember exactly?"

She did and she told him.

He looked down at the papers again with an intensity of concentration. After perhaps a minute he drew a long breath. "Look here, darling," he said. "Look at the date on these sheets. They're carbons, you see, of the last notes he ever made. See what he's written on the bottom of this page. It's the last page of all. 'Try this tomorrow. Think it's right at last.' Well, it was right. Those few hours he begged, the doctor for were all he needed, but the doctor couldn't give them to him."

Down at the foot of the long flight of stairs they heard the street door open. Martin turned suddenly to Uncle William. "Have you got that contract with you, sir? Right here in your pocket, I mean? Because if that's Forster coming up the stairs we're going to need it."

Uncle William, speechless for once, felt in his pocket and nodded.

Martin went out into the entry and looked down the stairs. "It's Forster," he said as he came back into the studio. "Conley's carrying him up."

No one spoke after that and the wait while Conley struggled with his burden up those long straight flights of stairs seemed endless.

Forster, by the time he'd been deposited in a big chair, was as breathless and as nearly exhausted—with terror that he'd dropped, most likely—as the man who carried him.

"Well," he panted, "I've come on some fool's errand, I expect. I can't think of anything among the professor's papers that I'd be especially interested in now." But his look, darting rat-like about the studio, belied his words, and when it lighted upon the little hat trunk surrounded by the heaps of yellow sheets, it remained fixed, fascinated.

"I thought," Martin observed, "that you'd be interested in these notes. You must have seen something very like them before—in the laboratory just after Professor McFarland died."

"Possibly," Forster admitted. "I'd been financing him for four years while he was trying to discover an all-process. He died without getting anywhere with it. I hired another man and he discovered the thing almost at once. It was a very valuable discovery and I've made a great deal of money on it. The professor didn't make it. He tried to and he failed. I don't believe that these papers you've got here are worth anything. But if they are worth anything and the professor held them out, they're my property. He was working under contract with me and he had no right to hold anything out."

of the laboratory. And to put it the other way around, there was nothing among the notes in the laboratory that there wasn't an exact duplicate of in that trunk."

"What's that?" cried Uncle William, so sharply that Forster started in his chair.

Martin turned to Rhoda. "Don't you see how it was? Your father safeguarded himself against the very thing that finally happened. During the whole four years that he worked in Forster's laboratory he kept a daily record, a sort of log, of everything he did, of his experiments, of his calculations, even his guesses as they occurred to him. He wrote them all down in tablets which had alternate pages that could be torn out, and he kept a carbon copy of every note and diagram, every pencil scratch that he made. Every night he brought home the dated carbon copies of that day's notes and threw them in that trunk."

"That's what he almost always did, ninety-nine times out of a hundred. But once in a hundred times it happened that what he brought home weren't the carbons but the original penciled notes. From his point of view it wasn't important which he brought home. He had with him in his personal possession all the time an absolutely complete record of all the work he had done, against the chance that Forster might some time try to beat him out of his dues.

"But They're Both Going to Be Good, Now," He Concluded.

"Well, he completed his process right up to the outline of the last confirmatory experiments. He had it right at last, the day before he died."

"You can't prove that!" Forster snarled.

"You're going to prove it for me," Martin answered, "within five minutes." Then he turned back to Rhoda.

"Forster had his process and he didn't doubt that he was safe in stealing your father's share of it. He made his deal and his contracts, collected his royalties. The probable existence of your father's copy of their contract didn't bother him a bit. He could say what he said to us just now and there was, he thought, no proof to the contrary. But at some time or other, not so very long ago I imagine, looking over the log that he'd found in the laboratory, he discovered here and there a carbon sheet in place of the original. And then he knew what your father had done. He knew that if these sheets hadn't been destroyed and ever fell into the hands of any friend of yours who recognized what they were, he could be forced to an accountant and made to pay every cent that the contract called for. When he realized that he began to advertise for the whereabouts of Rhoda McFarland."

Forster's face was shining with sweat but once more he blurted stubbornly, "You can't prove it!"

"I said you were going to prove it," Martin reminded him. "You have proved it to my satisfaction by coming here today. But I'll tell you what I'm going to do. If you insist that the process you are using isn't Professor McFarland's, process but something else, I'll publish these notes of his and make the world a present of them."

Forster sank back in his chair with a groan. "All right," he said. "I'll buy them of you. How much do you want?"

Martin turned to Uncle William. "I think we'll leave the price in money to the legal department," he said. "But Rhoda wants something more out of Forster than the money her father earned."

Still Hope to Locate Savage King's Treasure

A king's treasure—ivory, raw gold, British and Kruger sovereigns and diamonds—valued at £2,000,000 lies hidden somewhere in the Rhodesia bush. It is the buried hoard of Lobengula, the Zulu warrior who founded the Matabele nation, challenged the British king in 1892 and met with defeat. A Johannesburg business man who has already made six attempts to trace the buried treasure, will make a final attempt. The story of the treasure has been told by John Jacobs, Lobengula's one-time "secretary." Lobengula ordered that his ivory and two safes containing a store of diamonds and gold packed in tins were to be rushed into the bush. The leaders of the party were Lobengula, Jacobs, four Indians (native officers), and 14 Matabele, who dug the holes in which the treasure was hidden. One night on their return, Lobengula ordered the Indians to stay all who had taken part in the burial. All save Jacobs and the Indians were assassinated.

Japanese Suicide

Hara-kiri is Japanese and combines hara, the belly, and kiri, to cut. It is a method of suicide by disemboweling. The first recorded instance of hara-kiri, or happy dispatch, as it is sometimes called, is that of Tametomo, brother of Suikou, an emperor of the Twelfth century, after a defeat in which most of his followers were slain.

Disease of Talking

Whom the disease of talking still once possesseth, he can never hold his peace. Nay, rather than he will not discourse he will hire men to hear him.—Ben Jonson.

He paused an instant, then turned to Forster. "She isn't vindictive and she doesn't want any revenge. She won't prosecute you and your nephew's wife for conspiracy unless she's forced to. But she wants a sworn statement from you that to your personal knowledge her father was innocent of the California charges and that they were framed against him for the purpose of forcing him out of the university."

This time it was Uncle William who started to protest. "My dear Martin"

But Martin cut him short. "The two go together," he said. "We'll accept a settlement if the sworn statement goes with it. Otherwise we'll publish the notes and prosecute for conspiracy. We want this thing cleaned up."

There was still some fight in Uncle William but Forster threw up the sponge. "All right," he grunted. "We'll get together next week on the settlement and I'll have my lawyer draw up a statement. I don't mind that. I never had anything to do with it. It was my scamp of a secretary who fixed up the whole thing, and he's dead." Then, to Conley, "Take me out of here."

But at the door just before Conley picked him up he seemed to feel that he had slighted Uncle William. Perhaps he recognized a kindred spirit. "My car is down here," he said. "You can drive back with me to the Worcester if you like."

"I didn't think, last night," Rhoda said after an interval, "that I could ever hate anybody as much as I hated Mr. Forster. But I hate Uncle William worse."

Martin admitted that there wasn't much to choose between them. "But they're both going to be good, now," he concluded.

"Not Uncle William," Rhoda insisted. "He didn't want Forster to agree to tell the truth about father. And if he does, Uncle William will try to suppress it. Why, Martin? Did he always hate father?"

"He probably didn't like him any too well, but that isn't the reason. He wants to suppress the truth because it will show that he made a ghastly mistake. It isn't malice; it's pure vanity. But he's going to have to scramble over the stile like the pig, just the same, and he'll do it without a squeal, too."

He spoke so confidently that she turned a sudden intent look upon him. "Have you thought of something else?" she asked. "Something you haven't told me about?"

"It was the first thing I did think of, but it wasn't any good until the rest of the plan worked out. It's something for you to do. You do it as soon as Uncle William asks you how you want to invest the money he's got out of Forster. I don't know how much it will be but it's sure to be plenty—you tell him that the first thing you want to do is to endow a special fund at the university for chemical research. You'll tell him that there's just one condition tied to it, and that is that it shall be called the Walter Whitehouse McFarland memorial. That will settle Uncle William and all the rest of the scandalmongers. And it'll be news, too."

Rather soberly, as the dusk drew down to dark, they discussed the wonder of this prospect, and other wonders. They'd set off tomorrow, Martin said, on their honeymoon. They'd go to New York and when they got ready they'd sail for Europe. Paris, The Riviera, San Moritz. They'd have a good long play.

"That's what father and I were always going to do," Rhoda said with a gasp, and Martin held her quietly and let her cry as long as she liked.

The jingle of the telephone brought them back to the moment. Martin switched on a light and Rhoda went to the instrument. It was Babe, he made out, and he'd have liked to hear all she was saying. Rhoda's report of it when, a little flushed and startled, she had hung up, was clearly condensed.

"Chicago won. And Babe and Ida Hamilton and two men are going to dinner together and a show. And Babe is going to stay all night with Ida. And she says, why don't you stay here?"

"I'll do," he told her quietly, "whatever you want me to, darling."

"I want you to stay," she decided, a little shakily. "But, Martin, will you do something else? Something, rather silly? After we've had dinner, will you take me to the Alhambra and dance with me a while?"

"Sure I will," he assented with a laugh, "if you'll agree not to let Leander Higgins out in."

Improved Uniform International Sunday School Lesson

(By REV. F. B. FITZWATER, D. D., Member of Faculty, Moody Bible Institute, Chicago, (c. 1931, Western Newspaper Union.)

Lesson for May 31 JESUS IN GETHSEMANE

GOLDEN TEXT—Saying, Father, if thou be willing, remove this cup from me; nevertheless not my will, but thine, be done. LESSON TEXT—Luke 22:39-54. PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus in the Garden. JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus in the Garden. INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Obeying God at Any Cost. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Meaning of Gethsemane.

I. Jesus at the Mount of Olives, (v. 39).

He went from the upper room under cover of the night to the Garden of Gethsemane, a favorite resort on the slope of the Mount of Olives, a short distance east of Jerusalem (Matt. 23:30). It is a place where the oil was crushed out of the olives. Gethsemane means "oil press." Olive oil was precious, being used both for food and lighting. The bruising and crushing of Christ in this Garden has yielded the largest blessings to the world.

II. His Companions (vv. 39, 40).

Peter, James and John, who had been with him on the Mount of Transfiguration, were permitted to go with him into the deep shadows of the Garden (Matt. 26:37). He took those who were best able to apprehend the meaning of the tragic hour to be his sympathizing companions. This was needed to prepare them as his witnesses. Knowing the peculiar trial through which they would soon pass when the Shepherd should be smitten, he needed to prepare them for it. They needed to taste the bitter cup of which he drank and of which they, too, later should drink.

III. Jesus Praying (vv. 41-44).

1. Withdrawal from the disciples (v. 41). Even those members of the inner circle could not now go with him. He tore himself away from them, for he must be alone in this darkest hour. He knelt down and prayed.

2. What he said (v. 42). "If thou be willing, remove this cup from me." The cup did not mean primarily the physical sufferings of the cross, though they were exceeding great. He did not now desire to escape from the cross and thus to stop short of his redemptive work, for this was the supreme purpose of his coming into the world (Heb. 2:14). He was so completely identified with a sinning race that the judgment of a holy God which rightfully would have fallen upon it was about to strike him—the Father's face was actually turned from him. The cup, therefore, meant his death as the bearer of sin. He came to Gethsemane with the full knowledge of what it meant, and consciously brought his human will into accord with the divine will. He bowed in submission to the Father's will. So great was his agony that he sweat, as it were, great drops of blood. In this crucial hour an angel from heaven strengthened him. He won the victory in submission to his Father's will, and from henceforth went with unflinching steps to the cross.

IV. The Disciples Sleeping (vv. 45, 46).

They had boasted of their fidelity (Matt. 26:35), but could not watch with him for an hour. He had issued a word of warning to them (Luke 22:34), but they were so benumbed with sorrow that they failed to keep awake. He gently reprimanded them and commanded that they should arise and pray lest they enter into temptation.

V. Jesus Betrayed (vv. 47, 48).

1. The betrayer (v. 47). It was Judas, one of the twelve. He had enjoyed the most intimate relations with the Lord; eating with him, listening to his teaching, witnessing his marvelous miracles, and enjoying his countenance. These privileges intensify the horror of the deed. He even guided the mob to arrest Jesus.

2. The sign of betrayal (v. 47).

It was a kiss, the token of the most tender affection and friendship.

3. Jesus' tender words to him (v. 48).

These words to the infamous disciple reveal the infinite tenderness of the Lord's heart. Many professing disciples today are proving their discipleship to Jesus and even are betraying him. All who bear the name of Christ, and especially ministers and teachers, who deny the virgin birth, deity, and vicarious atonement of Jesus Christ, are following in the footsteps of Judas.

VI. Jesus Arrested (v. 54).

The multitude led by Judas invaded the sacred precincts of the Garden and arrested Jesus and brought him before the High Priest. Peter followed him afar off. Peter's downfall may be traced to his self-confidence.

Faith a Necessity

The Tangle of the Courts

"America has been dubbed, with much justice, the shyster lawyer's paradise," says the Portland Oregonian.

"Take New York state as an example. Recent studies show that cases in the state supreme court are brought to a conclusion after an average delay of two and a half years. Some of the cases finally disposed of last year had been dragged out for more than ten years. Cases in New York City court averaged slightly under two years.

"No figures are available as to the total annual litigation in New York state, but in Ohio, which did total its litigation, found that it had about half a million cases for each 12 months. "Spectacular failures in criminal justice, such as have been witnessed in Chicago, and widespread corruption, such as has been uncovered in the Magistrate's Court in New York City, appeal to the public imagination and cry for correction. But in quantity, social morals suffer no more from these conditions than the nation's business suffers from the legal delays that hamper it. The judicial council of Ohio, after studying the matter carefully, has published the opinion that if the present Ohio Courts were properly coordinated, that they would be sufficient to handle the legal business of 20,000,000 people—one-sixth of the entire population of the United States.

"Improvement in the Courts and the machinery of the law cannot come soon enough now, no matter how soon it comes.

This legal tangle has been brought about largely by our insane multiplicity of restrictive laws which apply to individuals and industries alike. Less law and better justice—in that direction lies security for society.—The Manufacturer.

Contractors Trying to Use Local Labor

Santa Fe—New Mexico road contractors are making an effort to comply with the New Mexico 85% resident labor law, Ralph E. Davy, labor commissioner said today and conditions are better. Mr. Davy returned today from an inspection visit to 21 highway construction camps. "Some of the contractors," he said, "have not been living up to the spirit of the law, but they assured me that they will do their best to remedy the situation."

"The only serious situation I found," Davy said, "was on a project near Logan. The Lee Moore Construction Company has the contract but the difficulty was with the sub-contractor. I found that the men had not been paid for 70 days, and the Lee Moore Company's representative promised to see that the men are paid regularly hereafter, and at least once a month."

Davy found the average wage to be $6 an hour, with the exception of the "Grubber" or men employed to clear out tree stumps, who receive in some camp 25c an hour. Mr. Davy will leave in a few days for a trip through the southern part of the state.

Notice of Pendency of Action

The State of New Mexico, To:
The unknown heirs of Crescencio Sanchez, deceased, the unknown heirs of Jose Benevides, deceased, and all unknown claimants of interests in the premises adverse to the plaintiff, GREETING:

You and each of you, the above-named defendants, are hereby notified that a suit has been filed against you in the District Court of Lincoln County, New Mexico, wherein Herbert H. Neel is plaintiff, and Alfred E. Hale, impleaded with the following named defendants against whom substituted service of process is hereby sought to be obtained, to-wit: the unknown heirs of Crescencio Sanchez, deceased, the unknown heirs of Jose Benevides, deceased, and all unknown claimants of interests in the premises, adverse to the plaintiff, are defendants, said cause being numbered 3911 on the Civil Docket of said court.

The general objects of said action are as follows:

The plaintiff alleges that he is the owner in fee simple, and in possession of the following described real estate located in Lincoln County, New Mexico, to-wit:

A portion of the Southwest Quarter of the Northeast Quarter of Section Fourteen in Township Eleven South of Range Fourteen East N. M. P. M., described as follows, to-wit: Beginning at the Southwest Corner of said Southwest Quarter of the Northeast Quarter of said Section Fourteen, thence North 1320 ft., thence North 87°51' East, a distance of 840 ft., thence South 87°08' East, a distance of 1820 ft., thence North 89°10' West, a distance of 840 ft., to the point of beginning; except a small tract out of the above tract containing 3.64 acres more particularly described as follows, to-wit: Beginning at a point 67 ft. North and 200 ft. East of the Southwest Corner of the Southwest Quarter of the Northeast Quarter of said Section Fourteen, thence North 40' West 645 ft., thence North 85°15' East 295 ft., thence South 2°15' East 610 ft., thence North 87°19' West 274 ft. to the point of beginning, said last described tract being enclosed by a fence; and the plaintiff alleges that he is credibly informed and believes that the defendants make some claim to said premises adverse to the estate of the plaintiff, and the plaintiff prays that his title and estate be established in him in fee simple against all such adverse claim or claims of the defendants and that the defendants, and each of them, be barred and forever estopped from having or claiming a lien upon, or any right or title to said premises adverse to the plaintiff, and that the plaintiff's title thereto be forever quieted and set at rest.

You are further notified that unless you appear and plead or answer in said cause on or before the 20th day of June, 1931, judgment by default will be entered against you and each of you, and the plaintiff will apply to the court for the relief demanded in the complaint.

You are further notified that the name and Post Office address of the attorney for the plaintiff is George L.

Reese, Roswell, New Mexico.
Witness my hand and the seal of said court on this the 9th day of May, 1931.

A stranger walked into a certain store one day this week and asked the clerk for a pound of the cheapest brand of coffee in the house. "I don't use coffee, but my wife does," he said. The clerk said that had it been his mother-in-law instead, it would not have surprised him so.

Cheese Toast After Tiresome Trip

Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.—WNU Service.

You've been out for an all-day or all afternoon motor trip. Perhaps the whole family was included, and you've all returned hungry, somewhat tired, and a little chilly. You want something appetizingly hot that can be made ready in a jiffy. The speed with which a picked-up meal of this kind can be produced depends, of course, on your previous preparations. A good nucleus for it would be cheese toast, which can be almost entirely prepared before the ride, accompanied by cocoa, reheated, or quickly made tea or percolator coffee, or a hot broth of some sort. The bureau of home economics gives the following directions for making cheese toast with plain American cheese:

- 1 lb. cheese
- 1 cup rich milk or cream
- 2 tbs. flour mixed with 2 tbs. water
- 3 eggs
- a few grains of cayenne pepper
- A little onion juice, if desired
- 1/2 tsp. salt
- 1 1/2 tbs. baking powder

Shave the cheese into thin small pieces. Heat the milk or cream in a double boiler, thicken with the flour which has been mixed with the water, and cook for five minutes. Add a small amount of this mixture to the beaten eggs, return to the double boiler, add the cheese, and the seasonings. Cook slowly and stir constantly until the cheese has melted and the mixture is thick and creamy. Allow it to cool, then add the baking powder.

Toast one side of the bread. Spread the cheese mixture thickly on the untoasted side to the very edge. If the cheese mixture does not come to the edges of the bread, they become brown and hard. Brown the cheese delicately, under a low gas flame or in the oven. The slow heat allows the cheese mixture to heat through before it browns, gives it a chance to become light, and keeps the cheese tender and soft. Too great heat makes the cheese tough and stringy. If desired, place a strip of crisp bacon across each slice of cheese toast. Serve it hot from the oven. This recipe makes enough for 12 to 14 slices of bread. The cheese mixture may be prepared—except for the baking powder—the day before it is to be used. Since the mixture stiffens on standing, heat until soft in a double boiler, let it cool, and add the baking powder. Then spread the cheese on the toast.

Cosmetics Long in Use

The knowledge of cosmetics dates back to remote antiquity and their annals comprise the history of the folly, luxury and extravagance of past ages. The number of simple and compound substances employed as perfumes is incalculable and almost fabulous and the books written by Egyptians, Greeks and Romans on the subject almost constituted a library in themselves.

Firmness and Gentleness

It is only people who possess firmness who can possess true gentleness. In those who appear gentle, it is generally only weakness, which is rapidly converted into harshness.—Rochefort.

Correct Posture Important When Sitting

A Slouching Sitting Posture Induces Fatigue.

Good Sitting Posture.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.—WNU Service.)

Did you ever catch yourself sitting in a slovenly way while you peeled the vegetables or finished other seated work when you felt "just dead tired"? The farm woman in the first illustration gives one an impression of discouragement and fatigue entirely out of proportion to the simple task she is engaged in. Notice how her head, shoulders, and abdomen are slouched forward, while her feet, rather tensely wound around each other, will soon add to the general weariness induced by her bad posture. Perhaps she has been "on her feet" a long time; she has slung herself down to start dinner by peeling the potatoes, erroneously believing that she is relaxing her muscles. In reality, she may be giving them some bad training.

She would feel much better if she sat well back in her chair, leaving the spindles support the lower end of her spine, with her feet firmly on the floor and her shoulder blades flat. As nearly as possible her head should follow the line of her spine, so she will lean forward slightly to see what she is doing without straining. This enables her to keep her abdomen back instead of slacking forward, and results in much less fatigue than the other position.

Farm women in Hampshire county, Massachusetts, made studies of correct posture for doing various household tasks, under the direction of the Home demonstration agent. The photographs were taken by the United States Department of Agriculture. The group studied correct and incorrect posture for dishwashing, mopping floors, handling food at the oven, writing a letter and various other activities that occur very frequently in the ordinary household routine.

Machines That Are Almost Human

By E. C. TAYLOR

The Thermostat

ONE of the most remarkable robots yet produced by scientists has stood guard for many years over the enormously valuable library of the pope in the Vatican at Vatican city, Italy.

It protects the unreplaceable books, documents and other treasures from the ravages of the weather and of time. It is on the job twenty-four hours every day, and since it first was given its instructions and put to work, it has performed its duties without once breaking down or calling for outside help.

The heart of this robot is a thermostat, a device that is highly sensitive to heat and humidity. It automatically controls the humidity and temperature in the pope's library and it has halted the deterioration that Rome's extreme weather had worked on the priceless books for centuries.

Rome is either very dry or very humid, very hot or extremely cold. These sudden changes and wide ranges of humidity and temperature were causing the library to crumble into dust.

The robot is set at the exact temperature and humidity that is best for the library, and when the humidity or temperature reaches beyond that point either way, the thermostat starts a "weather machine" that quickly brings the temperature and humidity back to where they should be.

The thermostat measures heat and cold and is highly sensitive to moisture in the air. It trips other machinery into action. In thousands of cellars throughout the country it is standing guard over the furnace, manipulating dampers and drafts to increase or diminish the heat as it is instructed to do. It has replaced thousands of men from watching boiling caldrons or vats.

The thermostat is used to turn on the phonograph, washing machine, electric lights, and perform many tasks heretofore intrusted only to human beings.

The principle of the thermostat is used in the thousands of automatic refrigerators that have been installed in homes and that are used by food-packing plants.

A thermostat robot signals men in New York city to turn on the street lights when the city is about to be darkened by a storm.

The device is on the roof of a building where the street light controls are located. When an electrical storm is approaching the robot rings a bell to warn the operators to notify the electric generating stations to increase the power over the network of electric lines that carry current throughout the city.

This is done whenever a sudden storm brings on premature darkness, calling for more light than is ordinarily used.

A new development of the thermostat tells builders if their lumber is properly seasoned. It operates on the principle that the electrical conductivity of wood varies with its moisture content. Green wood or wood that is not properly seasoned has more moisture than properly seasoned lumber.

The device consists of a simple indicator and two contact points and a dial. The needle on the dial is set to show the range of moisture content that would be acceptable for the quality of lumber desired for the building operation. If the needle is deflected off the scale for which it is set when the test is made, there is too much moisture in the wood.

The device also is used by painters to determine if a house or other building can be painted after a rainstorm. It shows whether the wood is too damp to hold the paint.

The thermostat robot has a peculiar use in keeping billiard balls alive. Ivory billiard balls "catch cold" when subjected to a temperature of 50 degrees for only a few minutes, and their life is greatly shortened. They can live only three months after "catching cold."

The life of Ivory billiard balls is five times as long if they are kept in a temperature of 70 degrees than if they are forced to live in a temperature of 60 degrees.

Man of Many Hobbies

John Volmer, of Ashland, Pa., is a cabinet maker by trade. He also is the official clockmaker of Ashland. The number of hobbies he indulges in may set a record. By avocation, he is a chemist, botanist, archaeologist, mineralogist, philatelist, photographer, bookkeeper, gardener and astronomer. Only recently he erected a nine-inch reflecting telescope, through which all residents of Ashland were invited to take free glimpses at the moon. And he greets the masses himself. His home is full of equipment and specimens gathered over many years. He has an excellent collection of Indian relics. And when he is not busy at any of these hobbies he likes nothing better than to whittle a pine board with a sharp penknife.—Indianapolis News.

Relics of St. Patrick

The greatest collection of St. Patrick's relics ever assembled will be brought to Ireland for the international exhibition to be held at Cork in 1932. The collection will be made from all parts of the world, as there are now few St. Patrick relics in Ireland.

to the fact that washable satin has been launched for the summer spectator sports frock. Tailored to a nicety are these smart one-piece types. Then, too, the costume which poses a white satin jacket over a dark skirt for daytime wear registers among chic fashions of the hour.

And now a word about the two-piece movement which the evening mode has borrowed from the daytime style program. It's the latest, this idea of a skirt of one color, contrasted with a sleeveless blouse of another, for formal dinner and dance wear.

Food Hints of Interest to All

By NELLIE MAXWELL

Failure is in a sense, the highway to success, inasmuch as every discovery of the false leads us to seek earnestly after what is true, and every fresh experience points out some form of error which we shall afterward carefully avoid.—John Keats.

When making gravy without browned flour, add the flour to the fat and stir until well blended, then add the liquid and a teaspoonful of caramel to give the gravy a little more brown color.

Molasses Biscuit.
—Mix and sift two and one-half cups of pastry flour with one-half teaspoonful each of soda and salt, one-eighth teaspoonful each of ginger and cinnamon, a grating of nutmeg. Three tablespoonfuls of shortening are now added, and when well mixed add three-eighths of a cupful of buttermilk and three tablespoonfuls of molasses. Pat half an inch thick and cut with a small cutter. Bake in a hot oven ten minutes. These are served with butter and marmalade.

Lemon Tart.—Make a rich pastry and bake in fancy-shaped tins about two inches deep. Crimp the edges of the crust and fill with the following: Mix four tablespoonfuls of cornstarch with one-half cupful of cold water and add to one and one-half cupfuls of boiling water, stir and cook until thick. Beat the yolks of four eggs, add two cupfuls of sugar, one tablespoonful of butter, the juice of three lemons and the grated rind of one. Cook over water until smooth and thick enough to stand up in points when stirred with a spoon. Fill the shells and cover with the egg white beaten stiff with five tablespoonfuls of sugar added. Bake in a moderate oven until a delicate, crisp brown.

Meek Duck.—Take a two-pound steak two inches thick and split to hold the dressing. Season well on the inside with salt and pepper. For the dressing take two cupfuls of toasted crumbs, two slices of diced cooked bacon, one-half teaspoonful of salt and pepper to taste, add one egg slightly beaten, two chopped onions, a half teaspoonful of sugar, a bit of garlic and one-half cupful of water or any good broth. Stuff the steak and tie securely with a string. Sear all over until brown. Cook in a Dutch oven slowly until tender.

Lamb Apple.—Make a highly seasoned soup-stock of vegetables, broth or beef extract, using a package of gelatin for each quart of stock, stir until the gelatin is well dissolved. Rinse a mold in cold water and pour in a layer of the apple, keeping the remainder warm. When the jelly is congealed but not hard, cover with thin slices of cold roast lamb and sprinkle with a little mint sauce or spread with the above jelly. Cover with the apple and repeat, leaving the apple on top. Set away to harden.

Convenience Is Needed in the Kitchen

Work Centers Well-Placed in Farm Kitchen.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.—WNU Service.)

Expensive kitchen equipment is not necessary to make the room convenient to work in. It is more important to place each of the major work centers in the best relation to the others so that the usual kitchen tasks follow each other in logical order. Then the housewife does not have to cross her own path repeatedly, taking many unnecessary steps, in doing her work.

Here is a farm kitchen photographed by the United States Department of Agriculture. It is furnished inexpensively, but it is very convenient because careful thought has been given to its arrangement. Light and cross ventilation are provided by windows on two adjoining walls.

This kitchen has only a plain iron sink, which is not ideal, but sufficient at the present. It has running water from a home-made water system, but not running hot water. However, the stove, only a few steps from the sink, has a "water back" or hot water tank, and this arrangement is fairly satisfactory. There is a double drain-board at the sink, and splendid light, the best height for the sink has evidently been considered, as its level is somewhat above that of the table.

The kitchen table has a highly varnished top for easy cleaning. Built-in stools above it take care of seat supplies and dishes. The housewife has a high stool and a comfortable bench for sitting at her work. Further around the room, the refrigerator is close to the stove and of such a height that it can be used like a window seat.

Oatmeal Muffins Are Nice for Breakfast

The best surprise in the breakfast menu for most of us lies in having a different kind of breadstaple. Biscuits or muffins or popovers instead of plain toast, and among the muffins, there are Graham, whole wheat, bran, oatmeal, cornmeal, and many fruited and nutted kinds from which to choose. Here's a simple recipe from the bureau of home economics of the United States Department of Agriculture for oatmeal muffins that every one is sure to like:

- 1 cup the rolled oats
- 1 cup sifted flour
- 1 tsp. baking powder
- 1 egg
- 1 cup milk
- 1 tbs. melted fat

Mix the dry ingredients. Beat the egg slightly, add the milk, and stir with the melted fat into the dry mixture. Bake in greased muffin pans in a moderately hot oven (350 degrees Fahrenheit) for 25 to 30 minutes.

FLY-HIGH

Now Fly-High, you know, is the special bird of the elves. He has a great red body and enormous black wings.

"Come, Fly-High," called Elkie Elf. And from somewhere—no one could hardly tell where—Fly-High swooped down into Elfland.

"Here I am," said Fly-High. For an Elf-High is only a bird of Elfland he can talk, and very often he explains the trips the elves take.

"Hurrah!" shouted Elkie Elf. "You came so quickly. We want to see our cousins, the members of the elf family."

"Will you take us to Ostland?" "My all means," said Fly-High.

"Shall we start right away?" asked all the elves.

"I am ready," said Fly-High. "I am just anxious for a good fly. I want to stretch my wings and feel the wind against them."

"And I want to feel all the little elves on my back."

"That's our wondrous Fly-High," said the elves, dancing happily about.

"Certainly, certainly, by all means," said Fly-High. "Let's be off."

So all the elves and a great many of the gnomes and Bogies climbed on Fly-High's back, and his broad black wings spread way out until every little elf was on his back.

"We're off at last," said Fly-High.

"We're off at last," said Fly-High.

"And let's go quickly," said the elves.

They flew along so very quickly, and as they flew they passed by birds who were chirping and singing.

The birds were not frightened by the enormous size of Fly-High, for they knew he was the bird of Elfland.

"We're off at last," said Fly-High.

"We're off at last," said Fly-High.

Speaking of remote control, have you noticed how other noses in the family turn up when dad's in the process on the gramophone?—San Francisco Chronicle.

and that he would never do them any harm.

At last they all reached the spot where the members of the Elf family were.

All the family joined in the trip and a wonderful, wonderful trip they had.

At the end of it the members of the Elf family asked the Elves to send around word once more that there were no dangerous, naughty little creatures among the Elf family.

So many wondrous stories had gone around about them, and the Elves promised.

In fact they wanted to see the members of the Elf family particularly this time to ask them if they didn't want those messages to go around again.

"And tell them that not a single member of the Bogey family would hurt them," said the members of the Bogey family.

"It's cruel of creatures to say we'll catch children. We wouldn't hurt a single child for anything in the world—whether good or naughty."

—And the Elves knew this was true.

President Hoover Orders Drastic Economics in Departments—Old Military Posts May Be Abandoned—Briand Is Defeated.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

PRESIDENT HOOVER has notified the members of the cabinet that they must introduce economies in their departments wherever possible. The civilian personnel is to be reduced and the overhead expenses cut drastically. The message went out after the President had conferred with Secretary of War Hurler and Secretary of the Navy Adams, and it is evident he expects many of the economies to be made effective in those departments.

Sec. Hurler surveys have been recently made indicating how savings could be made by the sale of old Indian posts, navy shore stations, coast artillery fortifications, and yards and other shore properties of the navy that are no longer needed for purposes of national defense. Secretary Hurler said the other day that the administration desired to remove army posts from the "pork barrel" classification, and it seems that among those considered superfluous are Fort Lincoln, North Dakota; Fort Meade, South Dakota; Fort Missoula, Montana; Fort Eustis, Virginia, and various posts along the Mexican border. Some air flying fields also may be abandoned. How far the expenses of the military establishments can be cut is problematical. The last annual supply bill for the War department carried about $445,000,000, of which approximately $115,000,000 was to be devoted to nonmilitary activities. The latter figure included $90,000,000 for rivers and harbors and $25,000,000 for Mississippi floor control.

As for the navy, it is known that civilian labor cost that department $79,000,000 last year. Some official investigators have estimated the Navy department personnel at Washington could be cut as much as 40 per cent without impairing efficiency. Congressmen in whose states are located the obsolete army posts and surplus shore stations probably will fight against their abandonment, that being their habit in matters of this sort, but if economies are applied throughout all the executive departments their political wrath may be unavailing.

FRED C. CROXTON, vice chairman of the President's emergency committee for unemployment, stated that during the week ending May 9 contracts were awarded for public and semi-public work amounting to $27,904,790. This brought the total since December 1, 1930, to nearly a billion and a half.

FOREIGN MINISTER Aristide Briand was persuaded by his friends to be a candidate for the presidency of the French republic and then some of those friends let him down. The result was that he failed of election on the first ballot and, astounded and broken hearted, he withdrew from the contest. Paul Doumer, venerable president of the senate, was elected. This action by the French parliament was of importance not only to France but to Europe and all the world. It means that for the present at least Briand's policy of peace and conciliation is discarded and the nationalists are in the saddle. It is possible Briand will continue to represent his government in the debates of the League of Nations at Geneva, but if he does he will be subject to daily orders from Paris. More likely it is that he will soon retire to Cocherel, his home. He has been in poor health for many months and it is feared this defeat will break him down badly. Andre Tardieu and Edouard Herriot, leaders of the left, are held mainly responsible for the rejection of Briand.

M. Briand

ANTI-CLERICALS of Spain, egged on by communists and very possibly by monarchist plotters, staged violent riots in Madrid and other cities for several days, and the government was forced to proclaim martial law. The mobs directed their attacks against Catholic churches and other religious edifices and burned many of them. Monks and nuns were beaten and driven through the streets, and in some cases the troops that were called out refused to move against the rioters, telling their officers they would not fire on the people. Angel Galarza, the republic's prosecutor, declared the riots were the result of a carefully laid monarchist plot and that there would be a new trial of captured royalists in which former King Alfonso will be judged, in his absence, for complicity. The Vatican state department instructed Papal Nuncio Tedeschini at Madrid to demand from the government an explicit apology for the attacks on churches, monasteries and convents. The Vatican protest, while not blaming these attacks on the Republican government, asserted that violence against religious orders does not represent a general political tendency, but is the result of the anti-religious odium of a small minority of Spain.

DRAJADHIPOK, king of Siam, underwent a successful operation for the removal of a cataract from his left eye, and is recovering nicely at Ophir hall, the Whitlaw Reid mansion in Westchester county, New York. He was an excellent patient and, being under only local anesthesia, he knew what was going on and cooperated in every way with Dr. J. M. Wheeler and T. N. Johnson, who performed the operation. When the cataract had been extracted his majesty said: "I see the light."

San. Fletcher

FIFTY railway executives have united in asking an increase of freight rates that would bring $450,000,000 more revenue to their roads, but it will not be granted without a fight. Duncan U. Fletcher, senator from Florida and ranking Democrat on the senate commerce committee, voiced the opposition to the plan. He called for lower rates rather than higher carrying charges and said one reason why trucks were moving so much freight today was because of "high rail rates."

"I cannot see how the railroads can expect to increase their revenues by increasing rates," he said. "Some ten years ago an increase of 40 per cent was allowed the railroads and this brought the rates up to the highest point ever reached. They have been revised downward by the Interstate commerce commission in 5,000 out of 6,000 cases brought."

"Today the railroads complain of a loss of business and lay a good deal of that to competition by trucks and to some extent airplanes. Undoubtedly they would increase their revenues by raising the rates provided they could carry the same amount of tonnage, but it is perfectly obvious that one reason why trucks are moving so much freight is because of the high rail rates. Consequently if these rates were increased there would be an inevitable decrease in tonnage."

Freight rates on live stock from western points into Cleveland were attacked by the chamber of commerce of that city in a complaint to the interstate commerce commission asking a reduction.

ONE of the world's greatest scientists, Prof. Albert A. Michelson, formerly of the University of Chicago, passed away in Pasadena, Calif., after a long illness and was laid at rest in Altadena. He was the recipient of all the honors the world of science could bestow, not the least of which was the Nobel prize for his achievement in measuring the speed of light, and it has been said that his discoveries and inventions added billions to the wealth of the world; but withal he was exceedingly modest and unassuming and always declared he carried on his great works in physics because they amused and interested him. Doctor Michelson was a native of Poland but was brought to the United States when a babe and was educated in San Francisco and the naval academy at Annapolis. Two years after his graduation he went back to the academy as an instructor, and it was then he began the experiments and investigations that continued throughout his long life.

Another eminent man, Eugene Yeags, master of the violin, died in Brussels, Belgium, at the age of seventy-two. He is survived by his American wife, the daughter of Dr. Herman Dincin of Brooklyn, N. Y., whom he married in 1927.

Walter A. Strong, publisher of the Chicago Daily News and one of the most forceful figures in American journalism, died suddenly of heart disease. He was only forty-seven years old. He became publisher and principal owner of the News in 1925, after the death of Victor Lawson.

SECRETARY OF State Henry L. Stimson, in an address on United States foreign relations and especially American policy toward Latin America, served notice that our army and navy will not be used to collect debts from foreign nations. At the same time, he made it clear, the present administration would give to Americans who have investments abroad all the protection, counsel and assistance to which they are entitled under international law. Defending the Hoover policies in Nicaragua, which have been attacked,

Sec. Stimson

Mr. Stimson declared the administration was not departing from American traditions, adding that "the United States would continue to be zealous in its concern for the lives of its nationals wherever they may be found." He characterized the current policy toward Latin America as one of removing sore spots which have injured good will and American trade.

Mr. Stimson expressed confidence that the Anglo-French negotiations would eventually be successfully concluded, expressing the opinion that a great stimulus had been given the prospects for success of the league conference on general disarmament to be held next February.

Cultivation of good will between nations was described by him as "the great business of diplomacy."

"Honest people in one nation find it notoriously difficult to understand the viewpoint of honest people in another," he said. "State departments and their ministers exist for the purpose of translating the viewpoints of one nation into the terms understood by another. Some of our most important work and efforts at the present time lies in this direction."

Prince of Wales

SPEAKING before the Manchester chamber of commerce, the prince of Wales harshly admonished British business men for their failures in getting and holding foreign trade. The only way which Great Britain can gain a larger share of the South American market, he declared, was by imitating North American business and advertising methods. The prince is delivering a series of speeches dealing with conditions he found prevalent in South America during his recent tour.

Not only did Wales score British business methods, but he also dipped into politics in a way that caused a sensation. His advocacy of "manufacturing within tariff walls" cuts squarely across the hottest political issue of the moment in Britain—tariff versus free trade—and was an unexpected blow to the free trade labor government.

PRESIDENT HOOVER has appointed George Hastings of New York as a member of the White House secretarial staff to succeed French Strother. Mr. Hastings is given the title of executive clerk and will handle the President's outside social welfare interests, including his contacts with the conference on child health and protection. He will take up his duties about June 1 after 15 years of social welfare work in New York.

THERE is consternation in gangland. And pleased surprise among the decent citizens of Chicago. Al Capone, the redoubtable gangster chieftain, hitherto looked upon as almost unconquerable, has been defied and is seemingly doomed to fall in one of his latest efforts to add to his monetary stores. It is the dyeing and cleaning industry of Chicago, which has been a fruitful field for racketeers, that has done the defying, and in its bold stand it is backed up by the law enforcing agencies of the city and state.

Al Capone

"Scarface" thought the time was ripe for him to take charge of the industry, and through agents he informed the Cleaners and Dyers institute that he would do so for 75 per cent of its annual receipts in membership dues, which would be about $100,000. For this he promised to keep prices up, to police the industry and to bring into line any recalcitrant members. A committee from the institute met Capone in his hotel headquarters in Chicago and he repeated his offer, reducing his demands to 50 per cent but declaring if his offer were not accepted he would take over the industry anyhow. The institute, however, happens to have as its chairman Dr. Benjamin M. Squires, honest and nervy, who had practically freed the industry from the racketeers. He told Capone no gangster associations would be tolerated, and State Attorney Swanson promised to support him to the limit in this stand.

Capone's efforts to take over the cleaning and dyeing industry were regarded by Assistant State Attorney Charles J. Mueller, in charge of racketeer prosecutions, as an indication of the reverses suffered by the gang in recent months.

"There is no question that Capone's mob has been hard hit, and that he needs money," said Prosecutor Mueller. "His gambling racket has felt the force of raids by the police and the state's attorney's office, in connection with the special grand jury, and some of his biggest breweries have been raided by the federal agents. The prosecution of the big shots in the gang by the federal government, and the high bonds required, have no doubt caused Capone to look around for new ways of raising money."

FRANCE'S amateur boxing champions, eight in number, who came over to meet the team of American champions from Chicago and New York in the former city, were defeated but made a good showing. They lost five of the bouts and won three. The tournament was a feature of Chicago's fortnight of "Jubilee."

Learning Made Fun by Modern School Methods

That Egyptian prince—was he an Egyptian?—who suggested to his son that there was no royal road to learning might have to change his opinion if he lived in these days. Radio and silent movies are not any longer new things in the schoolroom, and now one of the London schools is trying an experiment with the talkies. It may be mentioned that cinema companies are giving every assistance.

The tryout is being given in the elementary school, which means before children eleven years of age and under, and the first one is made up of four one-reelers. Number one was a travelogue of the island of Cyprus with a spoken commentary. Following was a trip down a coal mine, and third, the development of a frog from an egg to a tadpole and finally into froghood. Last was a talkie of John Masefield, the poet laureate, reciting his poem, "The West Wind."

The report adds that a portable projecting apparatus is used and the only "capital" change in the schoolroom is the drawing down of the shades.

While it is true that every day adds to the number of things to be learned, it is also true that every day seeks out new ways to make that learning a delightful adventure.

PIMPLES, BAD BLOOD

L. G. Ellsworth

Denver—My son was broken out with pimples all over his face. I was advised to give him Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. He started taking it and in a short time the pimples began to disappear and by the time he had taken two bottles his face was almost clear. I sincerely hope that this testimony will help some of the other unfortunate people who are afflicted with those horrible things."—Mrs. F. Ellsworth, 532 W. Colfax St.

Do-as-You-Like Home

With the motto, "If a child wants to be destructive, let him," the children's clinic has been opened at Holland Park, England. "We believe very much in giving our children an outlet for their desire for destruction," announced Dr. Margaret Loventford, honorary director, "so we model a face on the wall and let the children throw things at it."

Castoria corrects CHILDREN'S ailments

WHAT a relief and satisfaction it is for mothers to know that there is always Castoria to depend on when babies get fretful and uncomfortable! Whether it's teething, colic or other little upset, Castoria always brings quick comfort; and, with relief from pain, restful sleep.

And when older, fast-growing children get out of sorts and out of condition, you have only to give a more liberal dose of this pure, vegetable preparation to right the disturbed condition quickly.

Because Castoria is made expressly for children, it has just the needed mildness of action. Yet you can always depend on it to be effective. It is almost certain to clear up any minor ailment and cannot possibly do the youngest child the slightest harm. So it's the first thing to think of when a child has a coated tongue, is fretful and out of sorts. Be sure to get the genuine; with Chas. H. Fletcher's signature on the package.

English

There is a unique school close to the border where the children of naturalized Mexicans are taught English. These serious little chaps purvey a laugh a minute, but it would be fatal to laugh in their presence, for they are in deadly earnest.

Not long ago, to illustrate how words are coined, the instructor said: "Suppose we take the word earthling—an inhabitant of the earth. Now see what others you can think up."

And here are some of the answers:

"Stardling—an inhabitant of the stars. Inkling—a demon of the ink. Dumpling—some one who lives in a dump."

Dig for Gold in Streets

Residents of Bendigo City, Australia, have been given permission to dig for gold in the streets. When the rich Bendigo gold field first boomed, a city sprang up, and much illicitly ground was covered by wide streets. Now that known veins have been largely worked out, prospectors have turned attention to the city itself.
