THE FORD SHOW

The Ford Show, put on at the Carrizozo Auto Co. Monday, was one of the most wonderful demonstrations of its kind ever exhibited in this section. From the start at 2 p. m., to the close of the show at 10 p. m., interested spectators crowded the storage rooms and the office of the Carrizozo Auto Co. and under a liberal estimate more than 500 people visited the show and afterwards inspected the equipment and working demonstration of the Ford Car, which were fully explained by Mr. Simpson, Mr. Roy Shafer and his assistants.

The pictures were plain, the reception was fine and the music most of which was from the old German Masters, was delightful and marked a strong contrast to umpa-umpu, dumpa-dumpa of the jazz we hear so much and which is so degenerating when compared to real music. The Carrizozo Auto Co. is to be commended on the show because of its educational value to both old and young in the manner of latest and most perfect machinery, the quickness and dispatch with which the work is done, the thousands of men employed by the Ford Company and the perfect reception in the talking pictures which explained matters accurately. On the whole, the Ford Show was a wonderful success.

Clardy's Butter

Shelton W. Taylor, distributor for Clardy's celebrated butter, was here Tuesday, visiting our local merchants in the interest of Clardy's butter, and on this, his first visit, he took some nice orders. Clardy's butter bears the distinction of being 100 per cent pure, and made from cream within a radius of fifty miles of Roswell.

It is a well known fact that where butter is made from cream which must come from far off districts, the cream is of such a mixture, and having traveled so far and been subject to so many transfers, that to be absolutely pure is a strong uncertainty. Clardy's butter, as we have said, is made from cream coming from the fertile Pecos Valley and the distance so close to Roswell, the shipments are fresh and the quality of the highest. Clardy's butter is advertised in this paper, and bears the slogan of "Better Than Just Butter." Ask your dealer for Clardy's butter and you will make no mistake. If it takes a place at your table, it will do so on an absolute guarantee. Try it.

Preaching at Capitán Sunday morning and at Carrizozo in the evening. Sunday School at 9:45 a. m.

The way is simple, isn't it? It is not wise to make it hard with "doubtful disputations" or with words not "easy to be understood."

Sleeveless Dresses for Hot Weather

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.—WNU Service.)

Perhaps you have had a child try Marjorie's solution of hot weather discomfort. Marjorie simply took her mother's big shears and cut the sleeves right out of one of her play dresses! Probably Marjorie was punished for such an act of apparent vandalism. But should she have been? Shouldn't her mother have realized that both Marjorie and the season were several jumps ahead of her preparations for warm weather? And that

Sleeveless Print Summer Dress.

Marjorie probably had no idea that little girls' clothes are not left with raw edges, like doll clothes, or that she was destroying some useful cloth by cutting the sleeves.

If Marjorie's mother were a very wise woman, she might even have been able to explain the matter to her child, so that Marjorie would want to help repair the damage by hemming the cut-off parts, or by helping to hem binding on the armholes. There are ways to use almost any happening in a child's day to give her new ideas and a better understanding of the reasons behind the things that grown-ups do.

The mother who believes in preparedness would, of course, have had on hand a supply of comfortable sleeveless dress dresses for her little girl. She would have made them of lightweight, attractive prints, or cool, smooth cotton broadcloth, or other suitable warm weather washable fabrics. With a lightweight coat or thin sweater worn during the cooler periods of the day and bare arms started on their spring sun baths when the temperature mounted, any little girl of five or so would have been spared the need of taking matters into her own hands.

For the mother who is making summer clothes, here's a sleeveless dress recommended by the bureau of home economics of the United States Department of Agriculture. The body or skirt part is loose and full, so the young wearer can be as active as she likes. The fullness is kept away from the shoulders and face by flat, inverted, box pleats, set on a round, fitted yoke, which serves instead of a collar. The inverted pleats are held in place by fagoting, done in a contrasting thread. The same thread is used to outline the round yoke. It is best to cut the yoke single, binding the neck and front opening, and overcasting the yoke line so that all raw edges are covered. The neck line is rounded out for coolness and freedom, its edge finished by plain stitching. The armholes are bound, also the front opening. Two flat buttons fasten by means of firm crocheted loops. With this little dress the child wears four-button French panties of matching material.

A commercial pattern can be bought from which this little dress can be cut.

All Around the House

Some sweet pickle relish makes raw cabbage a more popular dish.

Plenty of vegetables and fruits help make all-over meals attractive and wholesome.

The meringue on pies will be fluffy and will hold its shape better if it is not beaten too dry and is baked in a moderate oven.

To save time in doing the home laundry fold towels after the last rinsing, run through the wringer smoothly and hang straight to dry; they will not require ironing.

In caring for floors, remember that the less water used on a wood floor the better. The spot on which something has been spilled should be cleaned as quickly as possible.

Some Good Things for the Table

By NELLIE MAXWELL

Search thy own heart: what paineth thee in others, in thyself may be.—J. O. Whittier.

I don't think much of a man who is not wiser today than he was yesterday.—Abraham Lincoln.

There is an old saying that "an apple a day keeps the doctor away," and an onion a day keeps everybody away. A good time to indulge in the odoriferous bulb is at a time when you will not annoy others. Onions are such wholesome vegetables that they should be served at least twice a week in some form during the entire season. An onion soup cannot be excelled for a cough, and a poultice of chopped raw onions, mixed with rye flour with a bit of vinegar to moisten, makes a poultice for any lung trouble. This is not pleasant, but it is very effective.

Baked Stuffed Onions.—This makes a most satisfying main dish. Peel and cook the onions in boiling salted water for ten minutes. Take out the centers, drain well. Parboil a small green pepper and remove the seeds, peel 12 large mushrooms caps, cook in three tablespoonsful of butter with the onion scooped from the centers, finely chopped. Add one-half cupful of bread crumbs, salt pepper and a tablespoonful of butter; mix well. Fill six medium-sized onions, and top each with a mushroom cap. Put into a baking dish with a little water, cover and bake in a moderate oven about one hour. Remove the cover the last 15 minutes and brown. They are delicious without mushrooms, or with a bit of sausage.

Lemon Pudding.—Mix one cupful of flour, two egg yolks well beaten, one lemon, juice and rind, one teaspoonful of melted butter, and one cupful of milk. When well blended fold in the well-beaten whites of the eggs and bake in a shallow baking dish set into hot water. Bake three minutes. Serve hot or cold.

Seasoned Spaghetti.—Cook three cloves of garlic in four tablespoonsful of olive oil, add one cupful of dried mushrooms that have been soaked in water. Add the water to the mushrooms with four tablespoonsful of butter. Now add two cupfuls of stewed veal, two cupfuls of tomatoes, a bay leaf, one-half teaspoonful of thyme, salt and pepper to taste. Simmer for two hours, stirring occasionally. Cook one and one-half cupfuls of spaghetti in salted water until tender. Put a layer of the spaghetti in a buttered baking dish, add a layer of meat and gravy, continue until all the materials are used. Bake in a moderate oven for half an hour.

Walnut and Salmon Salad.—Separate into flakes one-fourth of a cupful of canned salmon. Take one-half cupful of walnut meats coarsely chopped. Shred three-fourths of a cupful of cabbage, let stand in cold water to crisp. Drain, mix with the salmon and nuts, add one cupful of cooked salad dressing and serve on lettuce and you have something good.

Coco-Cheese Balls.—Cream two cream cheeses with enough thin cream to make into balls. Roll each ball in colored or toasted coconut and arrange three or four balls in a nest of lettuce for each serving. Garnish with mayonnaise.

Minerals in Sugar.—The bureau of plant industry says that in raw cane sugar there are traces of molasses in which are found certain salts and minerals. In refined sugar all the molasses, salts and minerals contained in it are removed.

No Doubt About It.—"Our ancestors left us gold, silver and words of wisdom," said Hi Ho, the sage of Chinatown. "There has never been doubt as to which of them have been most valued by each generation."—Washington Star.

example, after a game of tennis the red and white color-dotted shirt-dress in the picture becomes a smart ensemble for the country club porch by adding a little flaring jacket of Lyons-type velvet in bright red to match the dots. The sleeve detail which fastens intricate seamings and the unique tab-fastening at the front which forms a bow effect, contribute in no little degree to the chic of this handsome jacket.

Notwithstanding its frivolous ways the little jacket is really a most economical proposition. With its advent every dress is made to have a two-fold if not a threefold and "then some" mission. Hence it stands to reason that a collection of jackets in the summer wardrobe will pay big dividends in that one frock may be made to serve the purpose of many according to the way it is jacketed.

Some of these little jackets which fashion is highlighting so definitely are made of satin, other of taffeta or crepe and the medium which leads in favor is velvet, either the transparent weaves or Lyons type of a medium weight. Designers are having lots of fun choosing the right colored jacket to go with this or that frock. Black velvet, white velvet, white taffeta for these jackets come first and then follows as fascinating a list of tones and tints from which to choose as fancy ere can picture.

(A. 1931, Western Newspaper Union.)

Guarding Royal Succession.—It has been the custom from very early times to have an official of the state present at the birth of a royal child that may eventually succeed to the throne, to prevent the possibility of any substitution.

Necessary to Succeed.—"When men say to me, 'I have no time to read,' I reply, 'Then you have no time to succeed,'" says JOHN G. Lonsdale, president of the American Bankers' association, in the American Magazine.

Jackets Are Favorite Fashion

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

This little jacket went to a garden party, this little jacket went to a high tea, this little jacket went to a tennis tournament, this little jacket promenaded on the avenue, this little jacket went shopping and this little jacket stayed at home preferring to pose over a gorgeous printed pajama costume and so the hosts of cunning jackets which have invaded the style realm are telling a continuous story of romance as well as a practical tale as they collect the summer program.

Either a costume has a jacket all its own, this season, or else there are several which by clever interchange make the wardrobe seem more extensive than it really is.

When it comes to tuning a costume to occasion, the little hip-length jacket made in a thousand ways and of as many different materials and in as many colors, does just about everything milady wants it to do in changing the character of a costume. Per

Asparagus Should Be Cooked Without Delay

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.—WNU Service.)

Asparagus toughens and loses flavor very rapidly if allowed to stand. It should therefore be cooked as soon as possible after it is cut. In cities, this is not easy, but it is a good plan to buy asparagus on the same day it is to be used, rather than a day or so beforehand, as is often done with other vegetables.

To prepare asparagus for cooking, trim off any tough ends, brush carefully, and scrape off the larger scales. Wash so as to remove all sand and particles of earth which may have lodged under the scales. Fresh, tender, home-grown asparagus does not need scraping.

Cook in slightly salted water, either whole, or cut up in inch lengths. Very young asparagus, cut up, may require only five to ten minutes' cooking; 20 or 25 minutes at most should be enough. Season with salt, pepper, butter, and a little cream, if you have it. Let stand in a warm place a few minutes, and then serve, either as it is or on toast. Hollandaise or white sauce may accompany the asparagus, or mayonnaise or french dressing.

Cooked asparagus may be added to soups, stews, or vegetable salad. It may also be used in making scalloped dishes, croquettes, fritters, vegetable loaf, or timbales. A very good combination is asparagus scalloped with spaghetti. Asparagus with new diced creamed potatoes is also excellent, or asparagus with peas. Smaller amounts of asparagus can be used for these dishes than when the asparagus constitutes the chief vegetable. An asparagus omelet is delicious for luncheon.

CAP AND BELLS

WEARING EXPERIENCE

A man accompanied by his wife visited a tailor to pick out a suit. The wife disagreed with his selection.

"Oh, well," she said, after a lengthy argument, "please yourself. I suppose you are the one who will wear the clothes."

"Well," observed the husband meekly, "I didn't suppose you'd want to wear the coat and vest."

Good Combination of Ice Flavors

Mold of Lemon Ice With Strawberry Ice Cream Center.

If you have a fancy-shaped ice cream mold such as a "melon" or a brick, you may wish to serve an extra festive dessert some day. Molds are often filled with two kinds of ice cream, or with a fruit ice and ice cream combined. A strawberry ice cream center in a shell of lemon ice makes a particularly good combination of flavors.

You might use either strawberry ice cream made by the first recipe, or strawberry mousse, made by the second, in your mold. Both of these recipes, and the one for the lemon ice, are furnished by the bureau of home economics of the United States Department of Agriculture. If you plan to have two flavors in the mold, it will be necessary to freeze each separately and then fill the mold and pack it in ice and salt for several hours before serving.

When both the ice and the strawberry filling are ready, line the mold with the lemon ice to a depth of about one inch, then pack the ice cream into the center as firmly as possible. After putting on the lid of the mold, seal the opening by drawing tightly over it a strip of cloth dipped in paraffin, so that the salty water cannot leak in.

Let it stand in the ice and salt mixture two hours or more.

Strawberry Ice Cream.—1 qt. strawberries—4 tsp. salt, 1/2 pt. double cream, lemon juice, 1/2 cup sugar.

Wash and cap the berries. Chop them and cover with the sugar and let stand in the refrigerator for two or three hours. Press the sweetened fruit through a colander. Add the cream which has been whipped, and the salt and freeze. Use a treating mixture of one part salt and four to six parts of ice, and turn the crank of the freezer slowly.

Strawberry Mousse.—1 cup double cream, 1/2 lb. salt, 1/2 cup sugar, 1/2 cup water, 1 cup crushed strawberries, 1/2 cup white, well beaten.

Combine the sugar and the crushed fruit and stir until the sugar is dissolved. Fold the sweetened fruit into the whipped cream. Fold in the beaten egg whites to which the salt has been added. Pack and freeze.

Lemon Ice.—1/2 cup lemon juice, 1/2 cup sugar, or from 1/2 to 1 lb. more if desired, 1/2 cup water.

Prepare a syrup of the water and sugar and boil for two minutes. When cold add the strained lemon juice and

Story for the Children at Bedtime

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

The red-breasted grosbeak birds were black and white, with handsome vests of rose color, and under their wings they have the same decorations. At least, this is the way Mr. Grosbeak dresses. The ladies do not look so handsome. They wear brown frocks, not unlike those of their cousins, the sparrows.

They have some fine relations, too. There are Mr. and Mrs. Blue Grosbeak, and again this Mr. Grosbeak is very beautiful.

He wears a deep blue suit and his shoulders are trimmed with chestnut-colored feathers.

salt, and freeze with a mixture of one part of salt to four to six parts of ice. Turn the crank slowly until the mixture is frozen. Remove the dinner.

To prepare the mold for freezing: Line it with the lemon ice to the depth of an inch, pressed solidly against the sides; fill the center with strawberry ice cream or mousse.

Cover the contents of the mold with heavy waxed or parchment paper. Put on the lid and seal the edge with a strip of cloth dipped in paraffin or some fat with a high melting point, and let stand in ice and salt for several hours.

Mrs. Grosbeak is of grayish brown and grayish white, having the top side of the second color.

Then there are the evening grosbeak family. Mrs. Evening Grosbeak is paler than her husband but their color

And there are the pine grosbeak families. Mr. Pine Grosbeak is of a wonderful shade of red, while Mrs. Grosbeak is of yellow and gray.

The pine grosbeaks are fond of the winter and are not afraid of the cold. In fact they are not afraid of anything, and they trust people and let them come close to them.

They have long, warbling trills and whistle in a beautiful, clear fashion.

The evening grosbeaks have very large bills and eat many seeds, berries and insects. But they can sing and whistle, too.

The blue grosbeak family sing, too, in a nice warbling fashion of their own.

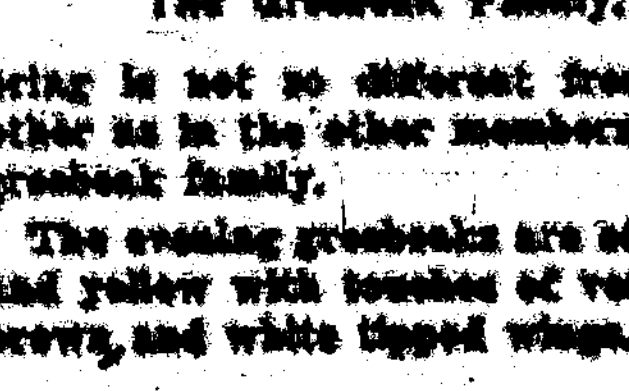

It is a song not unlike the song Mr. Indigo Bunting sings, but Mr. Grosbeak's is a little stronger and louder—a little more of a song.

They probably like to sing songs that are somewhat the same as they are both blue birds, and so they have the same taste in color and in music.

Oh, they are wonderful—all the members of the grosbeak family. They can sing. They eat insects. They have lovely feathers, and they are nice, nice birds.

Do you ever see some of them? (A. 1931, Western Newspaper Union.)

Litvinov, Soviet Commissar, Baits Europe's Statesmen at Geneva—Secretary Doak Denounces Suggested Wage Reduction.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

SOVIET RUSSIA, as personified by Maxim Litvinov, its commissar of foreign affairs, had the time of its young life at Geneva where the international commission of inquiry into Briand's European union project was sitting. Litvinov, as-tounded Arthur Henderson, Briand, Dino Grandi and the rest of the commissioners by the calm statement that their "capitalistic" governments were ruining themselves and the rest of the world by selling goods dear at home and cheap abroad—in other words, by dumping. And he then with equal calmness denied that the Soviet government had been guilty of this pernicious practice, though generally accused of it. Russia, he asserted, had done just a little friendly exporting.

"It is perfectly obvious that low prices cannot be regarded as indicating dumping," he declared. "If, however, by dumping is understood a policy of high monopolistic prices in the home markets and cut prices for export, it will be found precisely that it is the capitalistic countries which are guilty in this respect."

The Soviets, continued the commissar, are eager to help in bringing to an end the present economic depression, and on their behalf he offered two suggestions for the consideration of the commission. The first of these was that the European powers adopt a convention pledging themselves to compulsory sale in the home markets at prices no higher than on foreign markets. The Soviets, Litvinov said, would sign such a convention. He asserted that it would raise the buying power of the masses and help them absorb overproduction.

His second proposal was this: In order to remove the atmosphere of mistrust and jealousy that has been aggravating the crisis, all nations should sign a pact of "economic non-aggression" along the same lines as the Kellogg pact outlawing war. The draft of a protocol of such a pact was submitted to the delegates. It called for a general customs truce, among other things.

In the first sessions of the commission the question of the proposed Austro-German customs accord was brought up, and the pact was vigorously and skillfully defended by Dr. Julius Curtius, German foreign minister, and Johann Schober, Austrian vice chancellor. The British and French insisted that the accord should be submitted to the World Court for an opinion as to whether it violated the post-war treaties, and the council of the League of Nations ordered this done. The council has selected Arthur Henderson as chairman of the 1932 disarmament conference.

THERE has been of late much discussion as to whether conditions in the United States justified a general cut in wages, and what the effect of such a move would be. Secretary of Labor Doak took a hand in the debate with a statement to the effect that any move on the part of industry to lower wages would be considered a violation of confidence by the administration because of the agreement to maintain wage scales which President Hoover obtained from the industrial leaders late in 1929. In the event of wage reductions, he declared, organized labor would be justified in demanding higher pay and in opposing the move by strikes.

Mr. Doak added that so far as he knew, no leader of industry has proposed a reduction in wages. Such suggestions, he said, have come from bankers, and are based on the opinion that workers' pay should be lowered to conform to the low price levels which have resulted from the depression. He attributed the current controversies between workers and employers to the expiration of agreements, and added that in nearly every case the difficulties have been amicably settled. Six impending strikes, which were brought to the attention of the Labor department the previous week, were averted by the department's conciliation service, and in every case a return to the existing wage scale was effected.

IN LONDON the world grain conference was trying to find the remedy for the crisis in the agricultural world brought on by the immense overproduction of wheat. Samuel R. McKelvie, member of the American farm board, told the delegates the first thing was to slash acreage to consumption needs, and submitted the results of a study of the situation at increasing surpluses and falling prices. Speaking from the American standpoint, he said: "We see no possibility of a satisfactory solution of the world wheat problem which does not include, as the most important single element, curtailment of production in exporting countries, individually and as a whole, until a better adjustment between supply and disposition can be effected, and restraint upon fresh expansion of production thereafter."

As a material aid toward relieving overburdened markets McKelvie urged every possible means of consumption expansion and suggested abolition by European importing countries of their protective tariffs, milling regulations and preferential prices for domestic wheat.

WHEN the directors of the World Bank for International Settlements met in Basel, Switzerland, they heard from Gates W. McGarrath, its president, that the deposits of the institution have gone past the $400,000,000 mark. This sum is far in excess of the expectations, and it clearly shows, according to the belief there, that the world bank is becoming something more than a mere depository for the central banks of various nations, so that even if the reparations payments should later be put on some other basis, or cease entirely, the bank would still be certain to continue to function.

The bank has consented to help in putting the Austrian bank, Creditanstalt, back on its feet but it was decided that the initiative must come from the League of Nations committee for control of Austrian loans.

AS WAS predicted, the War Department has decided to abandon wholly or in part 43 surplus forts, camps and reservations. In the list announced by Secretary Hurley are Fort Lincoln, N. D.; Fort Missoula, Mont.; Fort Eustis, Va.; Fort D. A. Russell, Texas; Fort Brown, Texas; Fort Hunt, Va.; Camp Stephen D. Little, Ariz.; Camp Gary J. Jones, Ariz.; Miller Field, N. Y., and Chanute Field, Ill. Of course the abandonment of these posts may be prevented by indignant congressmen.

HOW the American army is to be re-organized, developed and modernized was described in an announcement by Gen. Douglas MacArthur, chief of staff. The plans set forth include extension of mechanization and motorization throughout the army, the retraining of the cavalry arm by the substitution of fighting machines for horses, and the development of powerful tank forces to be attached to army corps or field armies, rather than the infantry, which remains the basic arm.

Some cavalry units with horses as mounts will be retained for use in rough country, but in general the horse as a war weapon is discarded. The mechanized force at Fort Eustis will be reorganized a reinforced cavalry regiment. Combat cars, equipped with machine guns and possibly heavier weapons, which can travel 70 miles an hour on hard roads, are counted on to give the cavalry high mobility.

Despite the more extensive use of machines, the infantry will remain the backbone of the army according to General MacArthur's program.

HOOPER dam across Boulder canyon on the Colorado river is within the law and work on the huge project can go ahead. So ruled the Supreme court of the United States in deciding that the act of congress authorizing the construction was constitutional and dismissing the bill of complaint of the state of Arizona. This court, however, declared that Arizona had shown that it might be injured by the distribution of water from the reservoir to be created and that it therefore has the right to make further appeals for relief should its rights be impaired.

In another case, that of Yetta Stromberg, youthful communist, the Supreme court held invalid that clause of California's "red flag" law which makes it a felony to "display any red flag or other device in any public place or from any building as a sign, symbol or emblem of opposition to organized government or as an invitation or stimulus to anarchistic action, or as an aid to propaganda that is of a seditious character." The finding declared this clause was "repugnant to the guarantee of liberty contained in the Fourteenth amendment."

CELEBRATING the fiftieth anniversary of its birth, the American Red Cross staged on May 21 what it called "the world's greatest dinner party." Every one of its 2,500 chapters held an anniversary dinner in its community, and all of them were connected up by radio with the main dinner in Washington. At this feast President Hoover, who is also president of the Red Cross, was the principal speaker, and the guest of honor was Judge Max Huber of Geneva, Switzerland, president of the international committee of the Red Cross. With them sat cabinet officers and their wives and many other notabilities.

The Post Office department issued a special commemorative stamp on the anniversary date.

DEATHS of two Americans attracted considerable attention. In Tours, France, Brig.-Gen. Robert H. Dunlap, a distinguished officer of the marine corps, was killed by a landmine in a heroic effort to save the life of a woman, Ralph Barton, famous cartoonist and illustrator, committed suicide in his New York apartment, leaving a note that said he feared he was going insane.

Cardinal Segura

POPE PIUS XI, addressing a group of Spanish pilgrims, described the burning of churches and other religious edifices in Spain as "sacrilege against God and holy religion," and added: "While I recognize the abnormal situation in Spain, it cannot justify the outrageous deeds carried out by the enemies of God that were not suppressed by the authorities."

The Vatican, however, is promoting a policy of conciliation and the papal nuncio, Tedeschini, has had friendly consultation with Minister of Justice de los Rios who explained the arrest and expulsion of Bishop Mujica of Vitoria. The nuncio has expressed sorrow over what has happened, and it is understood in Madrid that he places much of the blame for the rioting on the attitude of Cardinal Segura, the former primate of Spain, who was forced to leave the country because he would not accept the republic without protest.

Cardinal Segura and Bishop Mujica got together at Lourdes, France, and proceeded to Rome for an indefinite stay. They will probably be told that the Vatican intends to drop the quarrel with the republic.

Alfonso, the former king, celebrated his forty-fifth birthday with a private family luncheon in Fontainebleau. There was no observation of the anniversary in Madrid.

DESPITE the rebellious Cantonese, Gen. Chiang Kai-shek is still the ruler of China, and when the people's convention closed its twelve-day session in Nanking he made an impressive plea for unity and for co-operation with the government in suppressing banditry and communism.

The principal achievements of the convention were the adoption of a new constitution, which goes into effect on June 1, the declaration of the republic of China with its permanent capital at Nanking, and the mandate given the government to carry out the terms of the manifesto declaring all unequal treaties between China and foreign powers null and void.

FOR many months the world has been reading about the first armored cruiser built by the German republic under the limits imposed by the Versailles treaty. It was described as a wonderful vessel of 10,000 tons so powerful that it was called the "vest pocket battleship." Well, it was launched the other day at Kiel in the presence of a huge crowd of officials and citizens, but the event was marred by a conflict of orders that resulted in the ship's being looked to slide down the ways before President Hindenburg had a chance to break the bottle of champagne on its bows and christen it Deutschland.

The new ship defies the Washington treaty classification. It is neither a capital ship nor a cruiser but is superior to both. Limited to 10,000 tons, it is much heavier armed than other ships of the same size. It is equipped with six 11-inch guns throwing projectiles weighing 600 pounds. In velocity, which is said to be as much as 25 knots, the new ship is superior to capital ships. The hull of the cruiser is of shallow draft and so minutely compartmented as to make it comparatively safe against torpedoes and mines. The usual heavy turbines have been replaced by Diesel motors, which give a radius of action of over 10,000 miles. The cost of the ship was $20,000,000.

FLYING men of the United States army had a chance to show what they can do in mass during the week, for the air forces were mobilized in grand maneuvers at Chicago, New York and elsewhere under the direct command of Gen. H. D. Hapgood, dean of the fighting air men. The planes, of all types, concentrated at Dayton, Ohio, and on Thursday put on a parade and exhibition at Chicago that was the closing feature of the city's jubilee. Then they descended on the Atlantic coast and displayed their ability to defend the metropolis and Boston from hostile attack. A night bombing raid on New York had been planned, but General MacArthur, chief of staff, vetoed this, asserting that the maneuvers represented a real attempt to test out the defensive power of the air arm rather than the staging of a circus. Nearly seven hundred planes took part in the maneuvers, being gathered from all parts of the country.

Machines That Are Almost Human

By E. C. TAYLOR

Electric Fleas

DID you ever watch a circus of trained fleas perform? See them imitating human beings in their stunts beneath a microscope?

Science has trained electric "fleas" to do much more. These electric "fleas" are wonderful creatures; they have been made to put out fires, guard money, turn on street lights and perform other marvelous tasks.

These "fleas" are cheap, too. For a nickel one can buy 230,000,000,000,000 of them and they are easily put to work, according to Dr. Philip Thomas, research engineer of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing company laboratories in Pittsburgh, Pa.

An ounce of these "fleas" represents 100,000 kilowatt hours of energy. You press a button and 100,000,000 of them, a second pass along the wires of your electric toaster at the breakfast table each morning.

Doctor Thomas christened them "fleas." These remarkably energetic creatures of science are simply electrons, the "building blocks of the universe." They are all exactly alike and can be depended upon in their actions. Electric "fleas" made their public debut at the annual meeting of the American Institute in New York in February, 1929. They watched the guests at dinner, counted them and guarded them from a fire.

Instead of speakers, a pall of mixed gasoline and kerosene was placed at the head of the table. Beside it was a device controlled by a photo-electric eye. This is a vacuum tube resembling an electric light bulb and it is so sensitive that it registers the most minute changes in light faster than the human eye can perceive them.

Doctor Thomas struck a match to the pall of explosive mixture. It flamed, but just as the flames leaped high, the new mechanical marvel went to work. It promptly put out the fire.

The light of the flames when it reached the vacuum tube started machinery that brought a fire extinguisher into play, and a blanket of gas poured over the flames quickly smothered them.

The instrument looked something like a hooded camera. It moved around until it pointed at the flames, and then released the streams of fire-extinguisher.

Doctor Thomas predicts that this machine will eventually do away with expensive fire-fighting apparatus.

"It is almost human," he said. "I got too close to the fire while experimenting one day and it squirmed all over me. I'll swear I heard it chuckle. It would be operated from ceilings, with a number of photo cell units and wide area lenses covering the floor. The present sprinkler system needs heat to turn it on. This will need only the light from the fire, and it would operate in the restricted surface of the light."

As another demonstration of what his harnessed electric "fleas" can do, Doctor Thomas presented "Rastus," his mechanical man, with an apple on his head, and re-enacted the William Tell episode.

His bow and arrow were ultra-modern. It shot light rays instead of arrows. The light flashed and the apple fell. Rastus stood up and bowed and spoke a few words to his audience, then sat down again.

All this was done through the medium of the new vacuum tubes, in which the electric "fleas" perform at the bidding of their scientist-trainer.

Scientists are at work perfecting this device for work in the industries on large scale. New intimations are being given continually, said Doctor Thomas, of the vast scope of the tasks the electric "fleas" may perform.

One demonstration showed that it could be made to turn on and off the street lights of a city. The photo-electric tubes, highly sensitive to the fading light of day, turned on a series of street lights as dusk fell, and when daylight approached the next morning, it turned them off.

This highly sensitive device operated by slight variations in light is now at work in many branches of industry. It matches colors, sorts fruit and vegetables and does many other tasks that place it in the class of thinking machines.

Uncompleted Palace

The edifice known as Dick's castle, near Nelsonville, N. Y., was intended for a residence. The building is a massive concrete structure of Spanish architecture, containing many spacious rooms. It was about two-thirds completed, but from neglect and exposure for the past 20 years the concrete has begun to deteriorate and break down. It is completed, this building would have been one of the largest and most beautiful residences in America, or at least along the Hudson.

"Up" and "Down"

It is true that when we throw an object up into the air we are throwing it in a direction exactly opposite to the direction a person on the opposite side of the world throws an object "up." The direction "up" is generally understood to mean "away from the earth" or opposite to the direction in which the force of gravity operates. In that sense, of course, the part of the world on the opposite side of the globe to us is neither "up" nor "down" compared with us.—Exchange.

Advanced Surgery for Physical Ills of Dogs

Wonderful things are done with elderly dogs at the Royal Veterinary college, Camden Town, London. If poor old Towser cannot manage his bones, he can be fitted with a complete set of false teeth which will make his young acquaintances envious. Dogs inclined to baldness can be provided with artificial fur, or, better, still, by means of a special treatment they can be made to grow their own hair again. Both dogs and cats have been fitted with artificial eyes. The legs are jointed and provided with springs so that their owners can trot without any jarring. These things are only minor details in the work of the college. Amongst its greatest work has been the stamping out of the appalling disease of glanders in horses.

Good Bartering

To Brooklyn, N. Y., went Lester Green, fruit farmer, with ten barrels of apples in his horse-drawn cart. The price offered was not to his liking, so he swapped apples for flour, flour for meat, meat for this and that, then drove home in a fly-over, bringing food for dinner, for his wife, a pipe, a pound of tobacco, five gallons of gasoline and 60 cents in cash.

No Wonder

"What comes after I in the alphabet?" inquired the fond grandmother. "M," replied little Albert. "What makes you say that?" cried grandma. "I'm hungry," explained the child.

Exception

"Do you always patch things up after a quarrel?" asked the young married man. "Well, no," replied the old grouch. "Only yesterday my wife broke a vase that nobody will ever be able to mend."

As Usual

"Is the lady of the house in?" "Yes, but she says she has no time to talk about vacuum cleaners."

EDITORIAL COLUMN

The 1932 Problem

In Scribner's Magazine for June, Frank R. Kent, one of the keenest political analysts in the country, has an article under the title, "The 1932 Presidential Sweepstakes" that Republicans and Democrats alike will find interesting.

Conceding at once the nomination of Pres. Hoover, Mr. Kent, himself a Democrat, passes to the consideration of Democratic possibilities and arrives at the conclusion that the next convention of that party will be called upon to choose among three entries—Young, Roosevelt and Ritchie "all wet, all from the East, and all except Roosevelt, conservative."

Mr. Kent believes that the Democratic National platform will be dry—not so VERY dry, but dry to the extent of demanding the enforcement of the law, dry enough to reconcile the dry South to the nomination of a wet candidate.

The nomination and adoption of the platform will not be accomplished though, Mr. Kent believes, without some lively scrapping.

He forecasts a "rip - snorting Convention in which the cleavage in the party will be clean cut and acute and the feelings between the factions bitter and tense." And he saves his reputation as a prophet by making no predictions as to the outcome, either as to the platform or the candidate.

Al Smith

Talking about Democratic presidential possibilities, it should be observed that the political dopesters have by no means rubbed out the name of Alfred E. Smith.

Nobody pretends to quote the ex-Governor as even intimating the possibility that his hat may again come into the ring. But also nobody denies that he is still the most popular Democrat in New York and can control the delegation from that great state in the next convention.

A man with 47 votes in hand is not to be overlooked in the event of a long-drawn convention which everybody expects.

It is not to be forgotten that John J. Raskob is deeply chagrined by his failure to put over the first big political job he ever undertook, and believing to the depth of his soul that this country is in a war, may take it into his head that Al Smith, having been already introduced to the country by one campaign, would be a sure winner if given another chance. So one thing may happen as well as another.

Matchless economy
with six-cylinder smoothness

"Better than 20 miles to the gallon." "Its cost-per-mile is the lowest of any car." "Never have to add oil between crankcase changes." "Drove from Ohio to California on a repair expense of $1.05." "It just runs and runs and runs."

—typical comments from owners of the Chevrolet Six—

Chevrolet's 157" frame supports the body through-out its entire length.

Why is it that Chevrolet—a big, powerful, smooth-running six—actually costs less to operate and maintain than any other car you can buy? The answer lies in five outstanding factors of Chevrolet economy:

1. Efficient Engine Design makes Chevrolet fuel consumption so low that 20 miles to the gallon of gasoline is nothing unusual for a Chevrolet owner.

2. Modern Chassis Design—as evidenced by Chevrolet's long heavy frame, four parallel-mounted springs, and smooth-running six-cylinder engine—increases the ability of the Chevrolet Six to run dependably, day after day.

3. Excellence of Manufacturing also adds to Chevrolet dependability and long life. Chevrolet pistons, for instance, are built so carefully, and held true to such close limits of precision, that many owners have gone 20,000 miles or more without having their motors opened for major servicing.

4. High-Quality Materials are used throughout the Chevrolet car—costly nickel steel, chrome-vanadium steels, chrome-nickel steels—to assure trouble-free, low-cost service for tens of thousands of miles.

5. Economical Nationwide Service, with its low flat-rate charges on labor and genuine parts, is available at 10,000 dealers throughout the country, who also offer the protection of the most liberal owner's service policy ever to back a low-priced car.

Remember—in addition to all these basic economies—Chevrolet offers the extra dollars-and-cents advantage of one of the lowest delivered prices on the market. And this cost may be spread over a period of many months by the liberal G.M.A.C. plan.

Chevrolet's pistons are built to close limits of precision.

Chevrolet's Owner's Service Policy is the most liberal ever offered in connection with a low-priced car.

CIMARRON

Edna Ferber has given to America many great stories.

Edna Ferber.

Great Southwest. You see the description of the great rush of land seekers across the border line between Kansas and Oklahoma of April 22, 1889, you will enjoy Yancey Cravat as land seeker, as editor, as pioneer; you will love his energetic and capable wife and her ability to carry on when Yancey falls. With Yancey she joined the "Oklahoma run." Into this wilderness of rattlesnakes, Indians, bad men, she took her four-year-old son. They saw the wilderness into which they had rushed with thousands of others made populous in an hour, and either numbering thousands of people springing up over night. "There's never been anything like it since creation," said the wife. "Creation! It is!" said Yancey. "That took six days!"

Cimarron is destined to be ranked among the greatest of American historical romances, and as a serial it is a story you are going to appreciate more than any other you have read for a long, long time.

FOREWORD

Only the more fantastic and improbable events contained in this book are true. There is no attempt to set down a literal history of Oklahoma. All the characters, the towns, and many of the happenings contained therein are imaginary. But through reading the scant available records, documents, and histories (including the Oklahoma State Historical Library collection) and through many talks with men and women who have lived in Oklahoma since the day of the opening, something of the spirit, the color, the movement, the life of that incredible commonwealth has, I hope, been caught. Certainly the Run, the Sunday service in the gambling tent, the death of Ishai and of Arta Red Feather, the catching of the can of nitroglycerin, many of the shooting affairs, most descriptive passages, all of the oil phase, and the Oage Indian material complete—these are based on actual happenings. In many cases material entirely true was discarded as unfit for use because it was so melodramatic, so absurd as to be too strange for the realm of fiction.

There is no city of Oage, Okla. It is a composite of, perhaps, five existent Oklahoma cities. The Kid is not meant to be the notorious Billy the Kid of an earlier day. There was no Yancey Cravat—he is a blending of a number of dashing Oklahoma figures of a past and present day. There is no Sabra Cravat, but she exists in a score of bright-eyed, white-haired, intensely interesting women of sixty-five or thereabouts who told me many strange things as we talked and rocked on an Oklahoma front porch (tree-shaded now).

Anything can have happened in Oklahoma. Practically everything has. EDNA FERBER.

CHAPTER I

All the Venables sat at Sunday dinner. All those handsome inbred Venables faces were turned, enthralled, toward Yancey Cravat, who was talking. The combined effect was almost blinding, as of incandescence; but Yancey Cravat was not bedazzled. A son surrounded by lesser planets, he gave out a radiance so powerful as to dim the luminous circle about him.

The Venables, dining, strangely resembled one of those fertile and dramatic family groups portrayed looting unconventionally at meat in the less spiritual of those Biblical canvases that glow richly down at one from the great gallery walls of Europe. Though their garb was sober enough, being characteristic of the time—1889—and the place—Kansas—it yet conveyed an impression as of purple and scarlet robes enveloping these gracie shoulders. You would not have been surprised to see, moving silently about this board, Nubian blacks in loincloths, bearing aloft golden vessels filled with exotic fruits or steaming with strange pasties, in which night-birds' tongues figured prominently. Blacks, as a matter of fact, did move about the Venables table, but these, too, wore the conventional garb of the frontier.

This branch of the Venable family tree had been transplanted from Mississippi to Kansas more than two decades before, but the mid-west had failed to see her bourgeois stamp upon them. Strutted though it was, there still obtained in that household, by some genealogical miracle, many of those charming ways, remotely celestial, that were at the South whence they had sprung. Unwilling emigrants, war-ridden, Lewis Venable and his wife Felice had brought their dear women with them into exile, as well as the superb mahogany oval at which they now sat, and the war-mirrored silver which gave elegance to the Wichita, Kansas, board.

As the family sat at its noonday meal it was plain that while two decades of living in the Middle West had done little to quicken the speech or hasten the movements of Lewis Venable and his wife Felice (they still "you-alled"; they declared to good-naturedly, the eighteenth letter of the alphabet would forever be ah to them) it had made a noticeable difference in the younger generation. Up and down the long table they ranged, sons and daughters, sons-in-law and daughters-in-law; grandchildren; remote kin such as visiting nieces and nephews, and cousins, offshoots of this far-flung family. As the more northern-bred members of the company exclaimed at the tale they now were hearing, you noted that their vowels were shorter, their diction more clipped, the turn of the head, the lift of the hand less leisurely. In all those faces there was a resemblance, one to the other. Perhaps the listening look which all of them now wore served to accentuate this.

Yancey Cravat was talking. He had been talking for the better part of an hour. This very morning he had returned from the Oklahoma country—the newly opened Indian territory where he had made the run that marked the settling of this vast tract of virgin land known colloquially as the Nation. Now, as he talked, the faces of the others had the rapt look of those who listen to a saga.

The men leaned forward, their hands clasped rather loosely between their knees or on the cloth before them, their plates pushed away, their chairs shoved back. Now and then the sudden white ridge of a hard-set muscle showed along the line of a masculine jaw. Their eyes were those of men who follow a game in which they would fain take part. Sometimes a woman's hand reached out possessively, reminding, and was laid on the arm or the hand of the man seated beside her. "I am here," the hand's pressure said. "Your place is with me. Don't listen to him like that. Don't believe him. I am your wife. I am safely. I am securely. I am comfort. I am happy. I am convention. Don't listen like that. Don't look like that."

But the man would shake off the hand, not roughly, but with absent-minded resentment.

Of all that circle of faces, linked by the enchantment of the tale now being unfolded before them, there stood out lambent as a flame the face of Sabra Cravat as she sat there at table, her child Cim in her lap. Though she, like her mother Felice Venable, was definitely of the olive-skinned type, her face seemed luminously white as she listened to the amazing, incredible, and slightly ridiculous story now being unfolded by her husband. It was plain, too, that in her, as in her mother, the strain of the pioneering French Marceys, her ancestors, was strong. Her abundant hair was as black, and her eyes; and the strong brows arched with a swooping curve like the twin scimitars that hung above the fireplace in the company room. There was something more New England than southern in the directness of her glance, the quick turn of her head, the briskness of her speech and manner. Twenty-one now, married at sixteen, mother of a four-year-old boy, and still in love with her picturesque giant of a husband, there was about Sabra Cravat a bloom, a glow, sometimes seen at that exquisite and transitory time in a woman's life when her chemical, emotional, and physical make-up attains its highest point and fuses.

Lewis Venable, in his armchair at the head of the table, was agitated. Curiously enough, even the boy Cim had listened, or seemed to listen, as he sat in his mother's lap. Perhaps it was the curiously musical quality of the story-teller's voice that lulled him, Sabra Venable's disgruntled suitors had said when she married Yancey Cravat, a stranger, mysterious, out of Texas and the Cimarron, that it was his voice that had bewitched her. They were in a measure right, for though Yancey Cravat was verbose, frequently even windy, and though much that he said was dry enough in actual content, he had those priceless gifts of the born orator, a vibrant and flexible voice, great sweetness and charm of manner, a hypnotic eye, and the power of making each listener feel that what was being said was intended for his ear alone. Something of the charlatan was in him, much of the actor, a dash of the fanatic.

No room seemed big enough for his gigantic frame; no chair but dwindled beneath the breadth of his shoulders. He seemed actually to loom more than his six feet two. His black locks he wore overlong, so that they curled a little about his neck in the manner of Booth. His cheeks and forehead were, in places, deeply pitted, as with the pox. Women, perversely enough, found that attractive.

His mouth, full and sensual, had still an expression of great sweetness. His eyelashes were long and curling, like a beautiful girl's, and when he raised his heavy head to look at you, beneath the long black locks and the dark lashes you saw with something of bewilderment that his eyes were a deep and unfathomable ocean gray.

Now, in the course of his story, and under the excitement of it, he left the table and sprang to his feet, striding about and talking as he strode. His step was amazingly light and graceful for a man of his powerful frame. His costume was a Prince Albert of sea black broadcloth whose skirts swooped and spread with the vigor of his movements; a pinstriped white shirt, soft and of exquisite material; a black string tie; trousers tucked into the gay boot-tops; and, always, a white felt hat, broad-brimmed and rolling. On occasion he simply blundered Shakespeare, the Old Testament, the Odyssey, the Iliad. His speech was spattered with bits of Latin, and with occasional Spanish phrases, relics of his Texas days. He flattered you with his fine eyes; he bewitched you with his voice; he mesmerized you with his hands. He drank a quart of whiskey a day; was almost never drunk, but on rare occasions when the liquor fumes heated him he would invariably select a hapless victim and, whipping out the pair of mother-of-pearl-handled six-shooters he always wore at his belt, would force him to dance by shooting at his feet—a pleasing fancy brought with him from Texas and the Cimarron. Afterward, sobered, he was always filled with shame. Wine, he quoted sadly, is a mocker, strong drink is raging. Yancey Cravat could have been (in fact was, though most of America never knew it) the greatest criminal lawyer of his day. It was said that he hypnotized a jury with his eyes and his hands and his voice. His law practice yielded him nothing, or less than that; for being sentimental and melodramatic he usually found himself out of pocket following his brilliant and successful defense of some Dodge City dance-hall girl or rolistering cowboy whose six-shooter had been pointed the wrong way.

His past, before his coming to Wichita, was clouded with myths and surmises. Gospel said this; slander whispered that. Rumor, romantic, unsavory, fantastic, shifting and changing like clouds on a mountain peak, floated about the head of Yancey Cravat. They say he has Indian blood in him. They say he has an Indian wife somewhere, and a lot of papooses. Cherokee. They say he used to be known as "Cimarron" Cravat, hence his son's name, corrupted to Cim. They say his real name is Cimarron Seven, of the Choctaw Indian family of Sevens; he was raised in a tepee; a wickiup had been his bedroom; a blanket his robe. It was known he had been one of the early boomers who followed the banner of the picturesque and splendidly mad David Payne in the first wild dash of that adventure into Indian territory. He had dwelt, others whispered, in that sinister strip, thirty-four miles wide and almost two hundred miles long, called No-Man's-Land as early as 1854, and, later, known as the Cimarron, a Spanish word meaning wild or unruly. Here, in this strange unowned empire without laws and without a government, a paradise for horse thieves, murderers, desperadoes it was rumored he had spent at least

Earliest Use of Horse Probably for Warfare

In Babylonia the first domesticated horse appeared about 2000 B. C. It was introduced into Egypt by the Hyksos, or shepherd kings, who came from the north and east of Syria, and conquered lower Egypt in the Seventeenth century B. C. In both these cases it is to be noted that the horse was preceded by many centuries by the ox and the ass. From these facts and a few other scraps of evidence one may picture the first domestication of the horse as occurring in central Asia. Probably it was accomplished by a people of nomadic herdsmen to whom the convenience of riding would be obvious. Sooner or later the mounted nomad came to realize the measure of his advantage over the man who traveled and fought afoot, and was encouraged to wander farther afield, conquering as he went. In any case, the horse (either as a charger or yoked to a chariot) be-

Old New York Orphanage

The Lenox and Watts orphan home of New York is one of the oldest orphanages in the United States. The home shelters 400 boys and 100 girls who have no homes or who come from broken homes. It was founded by George John Lenox, son of Robert Lenox, commissioner of stores for the English in the French and Indian war.

a year (and for good reason). They said the evidences of his Indian blood were plain; look at his skin, his hair, his manner of walking. And why did he protest in his newspaper against the government's treatment of those dirty, thieving, lazy, good-for-nothing wards of a beneficent country? As for his newspaper—its very name was a scandal! The Wichita Wigwam. And just below this: All the News, Any Scandal Not Libelous. Published Once a Week if Convenient. Wichita, professing scorn of the Wigwam, read it. Wichita perused its maiden editorial entitled, "Shall the Blue Blood of the Decayed South Poison the Red Blood of the Great Middle West?" and saw him, two months later, carry off in triumph as his bride Sabra Venable, daughter of that same Decay. Sabra Venable, at sixteen, might have had her pick of the red-blooded lads of Kansas, all the way from Salina to Winfield. Not to mention more legitimate suitors of blue-blooded stock up from the South, such as Dabney Venable himself, Sabra's cousin, who resembled at once Lafayette and old Lewis, even to the premature silver of his hair, the length of the fine, dolichocephalic, slightly decedent head, and the black stock at sight of which Wichita gasped. When from among all these eligibles, Sabra had chosen the romantic but mysterious Cravat, Wichita mothers of marriageable daughters felt themselves revenged of the Venable ails. Strangely enough, the marriageable daughters seemed more resentful than ever, and there was a noticeable falling off in the number of young ladies who had been wont to drop round at the Wigwam office with notices of this or that meeting or social event to be inserted in the columns of the paper.

During the course of the bountiful meal with which the Venable table was spread Yancey Cravat had eaten almost nothing. Here was an audience to his liking. Here was a tale to his taste. His story, wild, unbelievable, yet true, was of the opening of the Oklahoma country; of a wilderness made populous in an hour; of cities numbering thousands literally sprung up overnight, where the day before had been only prairie, coyotes, rattlesnakes, red clay, scrub oak, and an occasional nester hidden in the security of a weedy draw.

Coat tails twitching, eyes flashing, arms waving, voice soaring. "Folks, there's never been anything like it since Creation. Creation! It—It took six days. This was done in one. It was history made in an hour—and I helped make it. Thousands and thousands of people from all over this vast commonwealth of ours (he talked like that) "traveled hundreds of miles to get a bare piece of land for nothing. But what land! Virgin, except when the Indians had roamed it. Lands of lost gods, and godlike men! They came like a procession—a crazy procession—all the way to the border, covering the ground as fast as they could, by any means at hand—scrambling over the ground, pushing and shoving each other into the ditches to get there first."

They came from Texas, and Arkansas and Colorado and Missouri. They came on foot, by G-d, all the way from Iowa and Nebraska! They came in buggies and wagons and on horseback and muleback. In prairie schooners and ox carts and carriages. I met up with one old homesteader by the roadside—face dried and wrinkled as a nutmeg—who told me he had started weeks and weeks before, and had made the long trip as best he could, on foot or by rail and boat and wagon, just as kind-hearted people along the way would pick him up. I wonder if he ever got his piece of land in that savage rush—poor old devil!"

He paused a moment, perhaps in retrospect, perhaps cunningly to whet the appetites of his listeners. He wrung a breathless, "Oh, Yancey, go on! Go on!" from Sabra.

Ancient Glass

The residents of ancient Pompeii used glass in their windows, but as late as the fourteenth century Richard II issued a writ to scour England to find enough glass to repair the windows in just one castle, and near the close of the seventeenth century all of the great towns in Italy, with the exception of Genoa, used paper in their windows. For centuries glass was regarded as a luxury, and was taxed accordingly, down to recent times. Discovered by the Phoenicians, according to Pliny the Second, modern manufacturing methods have made glass so common today that no one gives it a thought. But the windows of America's first homes were provided only with parchment or oiled paper.

Nature's Provision

There is not one grain in the universe to be spared, nor so much as any one particle of it that mankind may not be the better for the worse job, according as 'tis applied.—L. Shattuck.

"Well, the border at last, and it was like a Fourth of July celebration on Judgment day. The militia was lined up at the boundary. No one was allowed to set foot on the new land until noon next day, at the firing of the guns. Two millions acres of land were to be given away for the grabbing. Noon was the time. They all knew it by heart. April 22, at noon. It takes generations of people hundreds of years to settle a new land. This was going to be made livable territory overnight—was made—like a miracle out of the Old Testament. Compared to this, the loaves and the fishes and the parting of the Red sea were nothing—mere tricks."

Pausing only a moment at the sideboard to toss off three fingers of Spanish brandy, like burning liquid amber, Yancey patted his lips with his fine linen handkerchief. "I've tasted nothing like that in a month, I can tell you. Raw corn whiskey fit to tear your throat out. And as for the water! Red mud. There wasn't a drink of water to be had in the town after the first twenty-four hours. There were, thousands and thousands of us, milling around the border like cattle, with the burning sun baking us all day, nowhere to go for shade, and the thick red dust clogging eyes and nose and mouth. No place to wash, no place to sleep, nothing to eat. Queer enough, they didn't seem to mind. Didn't seem to notice. They were feeding on a kind of crazy excitement, and there was a wild light in their eyes. If you had a bit of food you divided it with some one. I finally got a cup of water for a dollar, after standing in line for three hours, and then a woman just behind me—"

"A woman!" Cousin Armita Greenwood (of the Georgia Greenwoods), and Sabra Cravat echoed the words in a shocked whisper.

"You wouldn't believe, would you, that women would go it alone in a fracas like that. But they did. They were there with their husbands some of them, but there were women who made the Run alone."

"What kind of women?" Felice Venables' tone was not one of inquiry but of condemnation.

"Women with iron in 'em. Women who wanted land and a home. Pioneer women."

From Aunt Cassandra Venable's end of the table there came a word that sounded like, "Huzzies!"

Yancey Cravat caught the word beneath his teeth and spat it back. "Huzzies, hell! The one behind me in the line was a woman of forty—or looked it—in a calico dress and a sunbonnet. She had driven across the prairies all the way from the north of Arkansas in a springless wagon. She was like the women who crossed the continent to California in '49. A gaunt woman, with a weather-beaten face. Rough hair, and unlovely hands, and boots with the mud cakes on them. It's women like her who've made this country what it is. You can't read the history of the United States, my friends, without learning the great story of those thousands of unnamed women—women like this one I've described—women in mud-caked boots and calico dresses and sunbonnets, crossing the prairie and the desert and the mountains enduring hardship and privation. Good women, with a terrible and rigid goodness that comes of work and self-denial. Nothing picturesque or romantic about them, I suppose—though occasionally one of them flashes—Belle Starr the outlaw—Rose of the Cimarron—Jeannette Daisy who jumped from a moving Santa Fe train to stake her claim—but the others—no, their story's never really been told. But it's there, just the same. And if it's ever told straight you'll know it's the sunbonnet and not the sombrero that has settled this country."

"Talking nonsense," drawled Felice Venable.

Yancey whirled on his high heels to face her, his fine eyes blazing. "You're one of them. You came up from the South with your husband to make a new home in this Kansas."

"I am not!" retorted Felice Venable, with enormous dignity. "And I'll thank you not to say any such thing. Sunbonnet indeed! I've never worn a sunbonnet in my life."

"Oh, mamma, Yancey didn't mean—he meant courage to leave your home in the South and come up—he wasn't thinking of—Yancey, do get on with your story of the Run. You got a drink of water for a dollar—dear me!—and shared it with the woman in the calico and the sunbonnet—"

He looked a little sheepish. "Well, matter of fact, it turned out she didn't have a dollar to spare, or anywhere near it, but even if she had it wouldn't have done her any good. The fellow selling it was a rat-faced bomber with one eye and Mexican pants. The trigger finger of his right hand had been shot away in some fracas or other, so he ladled out water with that hand and toted his gun in his left. Beamed up he was, plenty. By the time I got to him there was one cup of water left in the bucket. He tipped it while I held the dipper, and it trickled out, just an even dipperful. The last cup of water on the border. The crowd waiting in the behind me gave a kind of sound between a groan and a moan. The second you hear a herd of cowboys' longhairs are hanging out for water in the dry spell. I tipped up the dipper and had dished a big mouthful—stuffy tasting stuff it was, tea, Oyp water."

WHEN YOU CAN'T QUIT

Fatigue is the signal to rest. Obey it if you can. When you can't, keep cool and carry-on in comfort.

Bayer Aspirin was meant for just such times, because it insures your comfort. Freedom from pains that nag at nerves and wear you down. One tablet will block a threatening headache while it's still just a threat. Take two or three tablets when you have caught a cold, and that's usually the end of it.

Carry Bayer Aspirin when you travel. Have some at home. It will often "save the day."

From a grumbling tooth to those rheumatic pains, Bayer Aspirin is ready with its quick relief and it always works. Neuritis, Neuralgia, Any nagging, needless pain.

Get the genuine tablets, stamped with the Bayer cross. Why experiment with imitations costing a few cents less? The saving is too little. There's too much at stake. But there is economy in the purchase of genuine Bayer Aspirin tablets in the large bottles.

JESUS CRUCIFIED

GOLDEN TEXT—But he was wounded for our transgressions, he was bruised for our iniquities; the chastisement of our peace was upon him; and with his stripes we are healed.

LESSON TEXT—John 1:1-14.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus' Death on the Cross.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus Taking the World's Guilt.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—What We Owe to the Lord Jesus.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Love's Supreme Sacrifice.

I. The Place of Crucifixion (v. 33).

They led Jesus away to Calvary, a hill north of Jerusalem resembling a skull. Calvary is the Latin word and Golgotha is the Hebrew. This is a most significant name for the place where man's redemption was accomplished. The skull is an apt picture of man's condition as the result of sin—life and intelligence gone, leaving only the dark empty cavern which once contained them. Jesus was not crucified in the city for he was to suffer without the gate (Heb. 13:12).

II. His Companions on the Cross (v. 33).

Two malefactors were crucified with him. This was in fulfillment of the Scripture, "He was numbered among the transgressors" (Isa. 53:12). He was sinless, but became sin for us.

III. His Forgiving Love (v. 34).

He cried, "Father forgive them." He not only had in mind the soldiers who acted for the government, but the Jews who in their blindness were ignorant of the enormity of their crime.

IV. The World Revealed (vv. 34-43).

Jesus Christ on the cross is the supreme touchstone of human life. It is at the cross that the world's heart is revealed. Take a cross section of the world at any time since Christ was crucified, and representatives of the various classes therein were found around Jesus on the cross, in a real sense the cross is the judgment of this world (John 12:31).

1. The Covetous (v. 34). They gambled for his seamless robe right under the cross where he was dying. This represents those whose primary interest in Christ is a means to get gain. If they had had eyes to see they could have beheld a robe of righteousness being provided in his death to cover their sinful nakedness.

2. The Indifferent (v. 35). "The people stood beholding." They gazed upon him with indifference. The great mass of the world still gazes upon the Crucified with stolid indifference.

3. The scoffers (vv. 35-39).

The rulers reviled him for his claim to be the Savior (v. 35). They wanted a savior but not a crucified savior. Many today are religious but have only contempt for a salvation which centers in an atonement made by blood. They uttered a great truth when they said, "He saved others, let him save himself." He could not save himself and others, because God's plan was to save others by giving himself.

b. The soldiers reviled him for claiming to be a king (vv. 36, 37). The title "king of the Jews" had been placed over him in bitter irony, but it was true, for by right of the Davidic Covenant he shall one day be King over Israel (II Sam. 7:8-10). Through his death he came into the place of Lordship over all who will acknowledge him. The fact that the superscription was in Greek, Hebrew, and Latin shows that he was to be King over all the world.

c. The Impenitent malefactor (v. 39). This brutal man joined in reviling the Savior, even though he personally was under condemnation.

4. The penitent malefactor (vv. 40-43). This conscious sinner who discerned the heart of the Savior prayed for mercy. He saw that the dying man was the forgiving God. The fact that he acknowledged his sin as against God showed that he was penitent. His request for Christ to remember him when he came into his kingdom shows that he recognized that the One who was dying on the cross was making atonement for sin and that he would one day come to reign as King. The salvation of this penitent thief was immediate. Christ said, "Today shalt thou be with me in paradise."

V. The Death of Christ (vv. 44-46).

So shocking was the crime that nature herself threw around the Son of God a shroud to hide him from the godless crowd. "Darkness was upon the land at noonday. When the price of sin had been paid, he cried with a loud voice, showing that he still had vitality, that his death was not through exhaustion but by his will.

POULTRY

ILLS OF POULTRY ARE DISCUSSED

Opportunities for Spread of Disease Greater.

"Diseases of Poultry" is the title of a new bulletin which has just been published for free distribution to interested farmers and poultrymen, by the Colorado Agricultural college experiment station. Dr. I. E. Newcom, in charge of veterinary pathology at the college, is the author.

"While knowledge of the cause of disease and its control is essential to the poultryman," says Doctor Newcom, "the ideal should always be kept in mind of a system of management that will keep the birds in a state of health. Theoretically at least this is a possible accomplishment, and an outbreak of disease in a flock is evidence that the laws of hygiene have not been fully observed."

"With the increase in the size of flocks, opportunities for the spread of disease are greater, and the difficulties of housing and feeding are greatly increased. With the modern poultry plant of today careful attention must be given to these details or the business cannot be maintained."

Among the subjects discussed in the bulletin in a general way are housing, feeding, water supply, yards, cleaning, disinfection and breeding.

A large number of diseases are discussed in detail. Some of these are nutritional roup, rickets and leg weakness, cholera, typhoid, bacillary white diarrhea, tuberculosis, roup, diphtheria, Canadian flu, turkey roup or sinus disease, chickenpox, paralysis, coccidiosis, blackhead, thrush, parasitic diseases such as lice, mites and scaly leg; round worms, tapeworms, crop bound, cannibalism, constipation, dropsy, broken yolks, egg bound, air under the skin, hump-foot, sad diseases, tumors, botulism poisoning, salt poisoning and arsenic poisoning.

Copies of the bulletin may be obtained on request.

Steel-Cut Oats Favored Feed for Young Chicks

So many poultry raisers lose sight of the fact that oats are lower in price than other grains, and at the same time one of the very best poultry feeds. They are a much better feed during hot weather than corn, being less heating and containing less fattening matter. If oats are boiled, they will be more relished by the hens. One quart of oats will swell into two quarts when boiled. Steel-cut oats also make excellent feed for young chicks. Sprouted oats are extensively used as a winter green feed, and produce good results amongst the laying hens.

Take Good Care of Eggs to Keep Quality Right

At this season of the year it is important that eggs be gathered regularly, and it is a good plan to get rid of the male birds at the end of the hatching season.

Eggs are a perishable product, in fact this is not sufficiently recognized. Exposure to light, and especially to sunlight, has a serious effect on eggs. Heat naturally is harmful, and the producer is inclined to overlook the effect that nest-boxes exposed to the sun on the south side of a fowl-house will have rapid deterioration of the eggs in the hot weather.

Keep Poultry Healthy by Culling Sick Birds

Culling out and isolating or disposing of sick birds is one of the most important steps toward improved health among poultry, says J. H. Claybaugh of the Nebraska College of Agriculture. He suggests that spread of disease may be somewhat controlled by disinfecting the drinking water with chlorinated lime or permanganate of potassium. Two tablespoons of lime to three gallons of water is sufficient. The correct amount of potassium permanganate causes the water to become a bright wine color.

Don't Rush Pullets

Those who hatched some of their chicks early or bought them early doubtless have some of these pullets laying. Many owners of such flocks of early laying pullets are highly elated over the eggs they are getting now and probably have no further plans for these birds than to get "more and bigger eggs." It will pay to give these birds some attention right now and not rush them head-on into high production without considering a few points.

Discard Roosters

June 1 is usually set aside as the day on which to sell, pen, or cook every rooster. This usually marks the end of the hatching season and the males from that time on are a bill of expense.

The production of fertile eggs means a big loss during the summer by rots developing. This cannot occur when the males are sold because an infertile egg cannot rot. It can evaporate and lower the grade, but it is entirely safe food.
