

FORD SALE, SUCCESS

There's no one in this section of the state who would not be amazed to learn that the Carrizozo Auto Co. sold 29 used cars and 1 new car during the first 2 days of their big used car sale which opened Tuesday, June 9, with the gross sales amounting to better than $4,000 during the early part of the sale.

The sale running 3 more days with only 10 used cars remaining out of 39 to start with, under the direction of Mr. Simpson of the E. R. Simpson System of Memphis, Tenn., with offices also at Temple, Texas, will expect to close out the entire number left from the first two days of the sale. Extra special reductions have been made by Mr. Roy Shafer, manager for the Carrizozo Auto Co., anticipating that the extra inducements offered prospective buyers, numbering three scores, will help Mr. Simpson to close out the entire stock Saturday, the last day of sale, which will enable the salesman to take on new deals and sell more new cars to prospectives with trade-ins.

One would hardly expect, the sale to go over in such a big way even in normal times, with our city small population and the entire ranch section of Carrizozo's trade territory so thinly settled. Nevertheless, one will more than appreciate the advertising drawing folks for 70 miles away, when it is known that Messrs. Crawford from Cloudcroft, came over and bought 3 used cars in the early part of the sale. This makes the 4th sale personally handled by Mr. Simpson, namely: Clovis, Las Cruces, Artesia and Carrizozo.

The Outlook, from the publicity standpoint, is mailing out large circulars for a radius of 70 miles by the Carrizozo Auto Co. wishes to extend Mr. Shafer congratulations for his success in bringing buyers from such a great distance and also Mr. Simpson on his fast-selling methods, with advertising cost and mailing expense amounting to $101.

One Flag, One Nation Evermore

High-Lights in Safford's Address

Charging that the Republican organization in New Mexico was entirely responsible for the party's defeat in the last election, Chairman Ed Safford of the Republican State Central Committee told the State Republican Executive Committee at its meeting last Saturday, to muster their common sense and close the book of the past. The high-lights of his address are given briefly as follows:

"About all the Democrats had to do, was to put a ticket in the field and make promises. For that defeat, we have ourselves to blame, and for the result of that election the Democrats are now sorer that they won, than we are that we lost.

"Our State-Democratic Administration is making a Republican victory easy for the next year.

About Taxes

"Reform of the tax laws and reduction of taxes were to be brought about by the business-like economics to be inaugurated if the people would only elect a business man for governor. Mr. Seligman, the candidate, had a fully developed plan. He named as Chief Tax Commissioner a man who, by the governor's own admission, knew nothing of taxation, and at the governor's request for an attorney, employed and was paid for by the Santa Fe road, was given the task of writing tax bills.

Those bills came in so late that they could not be considered.

"Mr. Seligman, the candidate, denounced the incompetency of Republican boards and officials. They were a lot of barnacles on the ship of state which he would scrape off at once. But Mr. Seligman, the governor, retained those barnacles until the complete setup of his administration had been made and some millions of dollars in road contracts had been awarded. He was afraid to trust anybody in his own party in matters of importance.

The Wool Situation

"Good New Mexico wool is now selling for about 15 cents a pound. 11 cents of that price is due unquestionably to the Republican protective tariff of 34c a pound on scoured wool, which is 11c on our gross wool. I use as an illustration quotations from the London wool market for the week ending May 1, and the Boston wool market, for the week ending May 2.

"Inferior to bad grades of New Mexico wool—sells all the way down from 14 to 11c. But for the tariff these grades would be selling today at from 1 to 3c a pound. In other words, the protective tariff is getting for the wool grower from 8 to 10 times the price he would be getting under any Democratic tariff bill that has been within 70 years. I do not have to tell any man in the sheep industry that he could not exist a year without the tariff on his wool and $3 a head protection on his sheep.

"The man who now sells 500 800 pound steers or cowa receives just $10,000 more than would be possible were the Democratic tariff law still in effect. "Due to the protective tariff, the American wheat grower received 22c a bushel more, for May, than was had by the Canadian grower, and 17c a bushel more than the Liverpool market price.

About Financial Depression "The Democrats have never failed to bring or the Republicans to end a financial depression. Seligman's Economic Pledges. "The pledge of economics became a joke when the governor himself began to ask for increased expenditures of the taxpayers' money without offering anything valuable, therefore. He wanted the attorney general's office expenses increased by about $12,500 a year, but without closing the door against the employment of special attorneys in any number for any purpose at whatever remuneration agreed upon. He sought to have the salary of the adjutant general increased from $2,400 to $4,000, a $1,000 more than the pay of the land commissioner who administers a hundred million dollars' worth of state lands and collects therefrom nearly two million dollars annually. He asked for and got $5,000 for rehabilitating the governor's mansion and $3,000 for the purchase of table ware.

"As a result of it all, we find we are paying more taxes on real property than ever before in our history. Hoover Not to Blame "Let us now turn and see how New Mexico is faring at the hands of a Republican congress and administration. Millions of dollars of federal money are going into the construction of government buildings and roads. This is only a small part of the vast program for the useful employment of labor. The dole system, by which Britain is pauperizing her millions of unemployed, has no part in the plans of President Hoover.

They Gave Us "The Star Spangled Banner"

Base of Key Memorial Monument at Fort McHenry

The Key Bridge, Washington, D.C.

House in Baltimore where original "Star Spangled Banner" was made

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

THE other day a group of people gathered in the crypt of the magnificent Washington cathedral in our National Capital and unveiled a bronze tablet which was presented by the District of Columbia chapter of the United States Daughters of 1812. The principal speaker on that occasion was Maj. Francis Scott Key-Smith, great-grandson of Francis Scott Key. Thus there was erected another memorial to honor the name of the man who gave to the American flag, whose birthday we celebrate on June 15, the name of America its national anthem.

"The Star Spangled Banner" and who gave to America its national anthem.

There are three other imposing memorials which perpetuate the name of Francis Scott Key. One of them is the monument which stands over his grave in Mt. Olivet cemetery in Frederick, Md. On it is a tablet inscribed "Written by Francis Scott Key, Born August 9, 1780; Died January 11, 1843" and there follows the lines of "The Star Spangled Banner." Another is the huge two-million-dollar Francis Scott Key bridge across the Potomac river which connects the cities of Washington and what was once Old Georgetown, now known as West Washington. The Georgetown end of this bridge is on the site of Key's old home in that city. While the bridge was under construction, a bill came up in congress for an appropriation for the maintenance of the "Georgetown bridge across the Potomac river"—a name which had been given its predecessor there in 1820. Through the efforts of patriotic societies, who declared that "the nation should honor the American poet-patriot Francis Scott Key, instead of King George of England" (since Georgetown is named for the British monarch), the name of the bridge was changed and under its present name it is a perpetual reminder of the connection of the author of our national anthem with the history of our National Capital.

Perhaps the most imposing of all the Key memorials is the one which was dedicated by President Harding in 1922 at Fort McHenry, near Baltimore, where occurred the incident which gave to Francis Scott Key his enduring fame. Topped by the symbolic statue of a musician playing a lute, which is said to be the largest single cast bronze statue in existence, this monument has on its stone base a frieze bearing a bas-relief portrait of Key surrounded by other symbolic figures and bearing these words: "Francis Scott Key, Born 1780; Died 1843. To Francis Scott Key, author of The Star Spangled Banner, and to the soldiers and sailors who took part in the Battle of North Point and the Defense of Fort McHenry in the War of 1812."

The story of how Francis Scott Key came to write "The Star Spangled Banner" and thus give a new name to our flag is familiar to all Americans. But not many of them know much about the man himself. Key was born on an estate in Frederick county, Maryland, known as Terra Rubra, August 9, 1780. One of his sisters, Anna Arnold Key, was married to Roger Brooke Taney, a prominent Maryland lawyer, who later became secretary of the treasury, but more famous as chief justice of the United States—a fact which may have had something to do with Key's turning to the study of law.

Soon after his graduation from St. John's college at Annapolis, Key was married to Mary Taylor Lloyd and began the practice of law in Frederick. But in 1801 he moved to Georgetown in the District of Columbia, where he formed a partnership with his uncle, Philip Barton Key. Most of his life was spent in Georgetown where his home, from 1808 to 1823, was at 3518 M street, but a short distance from the foot of the Key bridge. It was in this house that he was living when he wrote "The Star Spangled Banner" and it was this house which a patriotic organization, the Francis Scott Key Memorial association, of which Admiral Dewey was president, tried unsuccessfully to save from destruction. Here were born Key's eleven children, six boys and five girls.

Key was a lawyer of high reputation in Georgetown and rated as a leading citizen of the community, so it was only natural perhaps that he should be appealed to to secure the release of Dr. William Beanes of Upper Marlboro, Md., who had been arrested by Ross, the British general, as Ross retired to the British fleet in Chesapeake Bay after the burning of Washington. In a letter to his mother, under date Georgetown, 24 September, 1814, Key wrote: "I am going in the morning to Baltimore to proceed in a flag to Gen. Ross. O'M Deet. Beanes of Marlboro is taken prisoner by the enemy, who threaten to carry him off. Some of his friends have urged me to apply for a flag to go and try to procure his release. I hope to return in about 8 or 10 days, though it is uncertain, as I do not know where to find the fleet." Then followed Key's historic vigil which ended "by the dawn's early light" when he saw "that our flag was still there" and his inspiration for the poem which made him forever famous. It is not commonly known perhaps that Key was also the author of another notable song. He was an Episcopalian, a vestryman for St. John's church in Georgetown and he wrote for the church hymnal a hymn bearing the title "Lord, With Glowing Heart I Praise Thee." He also wrote numerous sonnets, but it is said that his wife showed such indifference to his poetic gifts that she frequently used the papers upon which he wrote them for curl papers!

Although his principal fame rests upon one song, Key had a distinguished public career as the result of his legal profession. During the administrations of Presidents Jackson and Van Buren he was three times appointed United States district attorney and held that position at the time of his death.

If we remember Francis Scott Key as the man who gave us the name of "The Star Spangled Banner" for our flag, we should also remember with him the woman who made the flag which inspired his famous poem. She was Mrs. Mary Young Pickersgill, who was living in Baltimore in 1814 when the news came that a British fleet was on its way to attack this "nest of hornets at the head of Chesapeake bay," as the British called it, because Baltimore-annan government vessels and Baltimore privateers had been harassing British shipping more than had the vessels of any other American city.

While preparations were under way to strengthen Fort McHenry, Baltimore's principal defense, it was discovered that the fort had no suitable flag to run up to the top of its spigots. Flags were not sold in stores in those days. When one was wanted it was necessary to employ some woman to make it. Upon hearing inquiries as to who in Baltimore could make a flag, Commodore Barney and Gen. John Stricker, men whom everybody knew and respected, stepped forward. They announced that there was a woman in their city who was beyond doubt, the best flag maker in all America, having inherited the art from her mother, who had made flags during the Revolutionary war.

"Who is this woman?" inquired those present. "Her name is Mary Young Pickersgill." Further conversation developed the fact that she was related to both Commodore Barney and General Stricker. These two officers were deputized to call upon Mary and see what could be done. Soon all was haste and bustle in the Pickersgill home. All household duties were suspended until the great flag was completed.

Direct evidence of the making of the flag is handed down to us by Caroline Pickersgill, daughter of Mary, who says: "The flag being so very large, my mother was obliged to obtain permission to spread it out in a neighboring main house opposite the mansion of Charles Carroll of Carrollton, signer of the Declaration of Independence, who was still living. I remember seeing my mother down on her knees placing the stars in position and sewing them fast. And then after the completion of the flag she superintended the topping or heading of it, that is, having it fastened in the most secure manner to prevent its being torn away by balls. The wisdom of her precautions was shown during the engagement—many shots piercing it, but it still remained firm on the staff.

"Colonel Armistead, who commanded Ft. McHenry, declared after the battle that no one but Mary Pickersgill should mend it. The flag, I think, contained 400 yards of bunting, and my mother worked many nights until twelve o'clock to complete it in the given time."

So it was this flag of Mary Pickersgill which flew over Fort McHenry on that eventful September day, which inspired Francis Scott Key and which is the original "Star Spangled Banner," long preserved by Colonel Armistead's grandson, Eben Appleton, which now is exhibited in the National museum in Washington. Doctor Wakcott, the late secretary of the Baltimorean institution, declared the old flag to be "the most valued treasure we possess." At the request of the Star-Spangled Banner Centennial commission, in 1914, it was carefully backed with Irish linen, and it is now good for another hundred years or more.

Mary Pickersgill came from famous Revolutionary stock. One of her uncles was Col. Benjamin Flower, commissary general of the Revolutionary forces in Philadelphia. He was a friend and associate of General Washington. "Her mother, Rebecca Flower Young," according to good authority, "made the first flag of the Revolution under General Washington's direction."

The "first flag of the Revolution" was no doubt the Grand Union flag under which Washington took command of the American army at Cambridge, Mass., January 1, 1776. It bore the thirteen red and white stripes, signifying the thirteen united colonies, and in the upper left-hand corner, the British Union, the red vertical cross of St. George of England, and the white diagonal cross of St. Andrew of Scotland. This was to signify that the colonies were still loyal to England and if her oppression ceased they would not separate from her.

Six weeks later, in February, 1776, Rebecca Young gave birth to a daughter destined to be the maker of the original "Star Spangled Banner!"

Congress had taken steps as early as October, 1775, to establish a regular American navy. Commodore Hopkins was appointed commander in chief, and John Paul Jones, the senior of the five first lieutenants, declared he hoisted the "Flag of America" on board his flagship, Alfred, when Hopkins came on board, "the first time it was ever displayed on a regular man-of-war." This flag had, however, already appeared in Baltimore, which was a noted shipbuilding place. This had been seen by Hopkins to Joshua Barney, second officer on the 10-gun sloop, the Hornet.

Whether Rebecca Young was the maker of the first flag of the new United States navy we cannot now tell, but as Caroline Pickersgill, her granddaughter, emphatically stated later on, "My grandmother, Rebecca Young, made the first flag of the revolution under General Washington's direction, and for this reason my mother was selected by Commodore Barney and General Stricker to make the Star-Spangled Banner," it would seem there could be little doubt on that score.

Not only is the original "Star Spangled Banner" preserved, but the house in which it was planned and made is also still standing. Thanks to an organization of patriotic men and women, known as the Star Spangled Banner Flag House association, money is being raised by popular subscription to preserve the historic home in which Mrs. Mary Young Pickersgill lived from 1776 to 1867 as a shrine to which Americans may make their patriotic pilgrimages.

Life and Habits of Pocket Gopher

The Growing of Leguminous Crops Make Life Easy for Little Rodent.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture. — W. W. Service.)
 "Habits and Economic Status of the Pocket Gopher" is the title of a new technical bulletin just issued by the United States Department of Agriculture. The author, Theo. H. Scheffer, is an associate biologist of the bureau of biological survey stationed at Puyallup, Wash., and has had many years' experience making scientific observations of pocket gophers and other rodents, especially in their relation to agriculture.

"Rodents Widely Distributed."
 "The extent to which pocket gophers affect the interests of agriculture is becoming more apparent each year," says the new bulletin. "Scarcely any group of native rodents is more widely distributed in the United States, and certainly none has shown more readiness to adapt itself to the changed conditions introduced in its habitat by the farmer. The growing of such crops as alfalfa and clover has made life easy for the pocket gopher, since these plants furnish an abundant food supply in their roots and are usually maintained on the same ground for a period of years. Reclamation of desert lands also has furnished new food supplies and harbor for these rodents and has assisted their local wanderings." Such changes have favored the pocket gopher's rapid increase in many agricultural sections until, according to the bulletin, it has become one of the most destructive mammal pests of the country.

The bulletin discusses the appearance and general habits of pocket gophers, their disposition and senses, the sounds they make, the burrows they dig and the mounds they pile up, their active seasons, and their breeding habits. Sections also are devoted to the food of these rodents, their natural enemies, and their damage to agricultural crops, including alfalfa and clover, natural grasses, root crops, horticultural crops, irrigated crops, and pasture and range forage.

Control of Gopher.

As for the control of the pocket gopher, the bulletin suggests that this is not extremely difficult but requires persistence and co-operative effort. Details of control methods are not discussed, but it is stated that the methods tested and variously employed include fumigation of the burrows of the pocket gopher, trapping with especially designed traps, shooting and poisoning, all either individually or in general campaigns of community co-operation.

Copies of the new publication, Technical Bulletin 224-A, may be obtained at 10 cents each from the Superintendent of Documents, Government Printing Office, Washington, D. C.

Soil Treatments Help Crops on Worn Out Land

Sweet clover on land medium to low in fertility will not usually grow without expensive soil treatments. Red clover on such soils will grow only fairly well, and if the land is both poor and sour, costly treatments are usually necessary for successful production. Whether the farmer should go to the expense of growing red or sweet clover, or should use Korean lespedeza as a substitute, can be determined only after considering the conditions of the individual case. Korean lespedeza can be grown to advantage on many soils where production of the clovers is difficult or impracticable. It may be sown in small grain crops, in grass-clover mixtures for temporary or permanent pasture, or on idle and waste land not now affording any profits and yearly becoming less valuable.

Family Berry Patches Being Re-Established

Research dealing with diseases of small fruits and development of new varieties has made possible the re-establishment of the family berry patches, according to A. E. Colby, University of Illinois.

"Both local and distant markets for quality fruit are expanding rapidly. Even more important to consider is the fact not generally recognized, that a patch of raspberries, strawberries and other small fruits may be cared for easily on a small piece of ground in connection with chickens, a vegetable garden and even a cow, a combination which will help to make a family self-supporting and pay big dividends in health and happiness as well." Illinois circular No. 305 will help you.

Nothing Replaces Manure for Soil Improvement

Cover or green crops in the rotation of garden vegetables cannot replace manure for soil improvement, according to results of a six-year trial of the two methods by Dr. J. W. Lloyd, University of Illinois. Doctor Lloyd presents his figures in a new bulletin "Fertilizing Tomatoes, Sweet Corn and Muskmelons in a Three-Year Rotation."

Manure and humus are applied to the soil starting with the mowing crop, next year bean meal or dried blood is added before the tomato crop. The third year sweet corn is grown without any fertilizer, the best results.

You can get a copy of this bulletin free by writing the university.

PATENTS

Parasite Imported to Fight Japanese Beetle

A real foe of the Japanese beetle, a go-getter type of foe, has joined the ranks of the United States Department of Agriculture's army which is campaigning against the beetle, one of the most serious of the insect pests to harass the agriculturist of the eastern section of the country.

Tiphia popillivora, to give the ally its right name, was one of the parasites imported from Japan to fight the beetle, having been introduced in New Jersey in 1920. The parasite seemed to be a slow starter, but once it obtained a foothold it joined enthusiastically in the campaign. The few original colonies have spread now to cover an area of three and one-half square miles and have assumed such numbers that recruits for new and advanced colonies are now available.

The parasite attacks the beetle when it is down, so to speak, burrowing down in the soil until it finds the grub of the beetle. Stinging the grub, the parasite lays an egg on the grub. When the larvae of the parasite is hatched it lives off the body fluids of the grub until it attains sufficient size to consume the body of the grub.

Because of their social prestige and freedom of expression, the Norwegian teachers as a class have furnished a larger quota of leaders and distinguished men and women than any other class of people in Norway, says the United States office of education. Many of the prominent lawmakers served at some time as teachers in country or village schools. Many of the ministers and bishops in the state church were teachers in their younger days. Cabinet members, ministers of state, and several of the premiers of Norway have come up from the ranks of the pedagogues. The teacher is an active and important factor in the entire social and political order of the country, says the office.

EDITORIAL COLUMN

Protect the Young Trees and Shrubbery

For the past several weeks, mischievous vandals have been guilty of attempting the destruction of the young, tender trees that have been planted in front of the different residences over town. Why anyone, man, woman, boy or girl, as the case may be, should be even a party to such an act as that, we are at a loss to know. People should remember that we are located here in a desert and the work, pains we take, to say nothing of the expense of planting and caring for the young trees, is a great undertaking and as this is done to help improve and beautify the town, those who seek to destroy such valuable improvements, should be prosecuted to the fullest extent of the law.

The parties who have been guilty of these misdemeanors are known and unless this practice stops at once, prosecutions will follow; therefore, the warning is sent out and the citizens mean business. They are not going to allow the work of their hands to be destroyed unless the guilty are made to suffer for their acts. If it is the work of boys, they must remember that there is nothing funny about such acts and the Town Council stands ready to prosecute those against whom information is filed. Save the trees!

Supreme Court Bars Reservations to Oath of Allegiance—Economy Plans for Post Office Department Are Announced.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

Justice Sutherland refused to swear allegiance without limiting his obligation to bear arms, and therefore is denied the right of naturalization. The same decision was made in the case of Miss Marie Averill Blund.

Chief Justice Hughes, joined by Justices Holmes, Brandeis and Stone, dissented from the majority opinion.

TWO other decisions of the Supreme court during the week are of great interest. One reversed the judgment of the Circuit Court of Appeals sustaining the patent granted Dr. Irving Langmuir in 1925 on vacuum tubes used in radio and other speech-reproduction processes.

In the second decision the powers of the federal trade commission to regulate advertising are restricted. The commission had ordered the Radio company of Detroit to cease advertising an obesity remedy as "safe" unless accompanied by a statement that it should be taken under advice of a physician.

PROF. AUGUST PICCARD, Swiss scientist, and his assistant, Charles Kipfer, established a new record by ascending 52,500 feet in a balloon. They are convinced they reached the stratosphere and that their observations will be of considerable value.

EVERY time President Hoover takes some cabinet member to the Rapidan camp for a week-end, further plans for reducing the government's overhead are concocted. First came the Army and Navy departments, and then it was the turn of the Post Office Department.

SECRETARY OF AGRICULTURE Hyde seems to be fortifying the Rapidan camp operations by planning considerable economies in his department's expenditures, though this is difficult without curtailing important services.

emergency items—drought relief and highway construction. These totaled $160,000,000, providing aid for stricken farmers and jobs for the unemployed. Drought loans will be collected from farmers next fall, when their crops are harvested.

THIS year's Memorial Day address by President Hoover was delivered in the memorial park at Valley Forge, Pennsylvania, where George Washington and his ragged troops spent a terrible winter 153 years ago, and where more than 3,000 of those patriots are buried.

EXPERTS from many lands were present when the international labor conference opened in Geneva; but the United States was not represented. Secretary of Labor Dock appointed Miss Mary Anderson, chief of the woman's bureau, as the American delegate and she sailed May 12, with the special hope that the conference might adopt an agreement banning night work by women.

MRS. HARRY PAYNE WHITE's memorial typifying the heroism of the men who went down with the Titanic in order that women and children might be saved was unveiled on the banks of the Potomac in Washington in the presence of President and Mrs. Hoover, and many other prominent persons.

MICHELÉ SCHIRRU, an Italian born naturalized citizen of the United States, was executed by a firing squad in Rome after being convicted of plotting to kill Mussolini and of other activities against Fascism. Schirru admitted his guilt, but said his plans had been abandoned and he was about to return to America when arrested.

INVESTIGATION of the building material industry, especially those phases of it involved in the letting of contracts for government buildings, has been begun by the federal trade commission. It is believed that the inquiry will throw a lot of light on the long existing fight between the Indiana limestone men and the granite and marble men of New England.

CHINA appears to be on the brink of another civil war. President Chiang Kai-shek bitterly denounces the Communist rebels of Kwantung and Kwang provinces and says the Nationalist government is forced to choose between accepting Communists into the party, which it will not do, or resorting to war.

LAYING changed his mind about a bill applying from his conviction and sentence for bribery. Albert M. Bell, former secretary of the Interior, has asked the Supreme Court of the United States to reverse the decision of the District Court of Appeals. His brief attacks the validity of the indictment and the admission of certain evidence.

Queen Helena of Rumania and her family from the royal family of that country is the fate arranged for Queen Helena, the estranged wife of King Carol. According to Patria, the official organ of the Zaranist party in Bucharest, a decree has been drafted for submission to the new parliament.

REFORM and rearmament in the army of Japan have been decided upon by War Minister Gen. Hiro Arima, Chief of Staff Gen. Hanji Kanyani and Gen. Nobuyoshi Muto, Inspector general of military education. The army personnel will be reduced by 25,000 and the savings will be devoted to making the army the best equipped in the world.

SPAIN'S new Republican government is far from being stabilized yet. Its troubles, both external and internal, continue to cause some uneasiness. According to the authorities in Andalusia, a martial law which was proclaimed there several weeks ago may have to be continued indefinitely because of the turbulence of the Communists.

Four religious states in an area no larger than Georgia still leave many creeds out in the political cold. To recognize them all would require cutting Syria up into more pieces than Blue Beard ever chopped his wives.

Much to Attract Visitors. But at present the country is living on hope and America. Thousands of Syrians have come to both North and South America. Whole villages in the Lebanon have been abandoned for fruit lands in the New World.

Syrian Scenes

Roof of "Straight" Street in Damascus.

TRAIL rich in history and dotted with ruin and living cities that have played important roles in world affairs is being traversed by the Trans-Asia expedition which recently left Beyrouth (Beirut), Syria, by motor caravan for a journey of more than 5,000 miles to Peking (Peking), over the mountains and deserts of the world's greatest continent.

Leaving Beyrouth (Beirut), the chief port of Syria, the expedition first traversed that French mandated territory, passing through Damascus and on into Iraq, stopping at Bagdad.

The Republic of Syria appeared seven years after the establishment in her Syrian mandate, that of the Lebanese republic which includes the famous mountains of Liban or Lebanon and runs down to the Mediterranean shore.

Four religious states in an area no larger than Georgia still leave many creeds out in the political cold. To recognize them all would require cutting Syria up into more pieces than Blue Beard ever chopped his wives.

The old clothes bazaar is also known as the house market and this appellation reveals its consequent neglect by tourists. It is always a center of activity for the people of Damascus and Arab and Jew haggle over the comparative worth of hand-me-down burghouses and kamfyahs and occidental business suits.

The vendors of food and drink are not limited to one bazaar. They stroll through the streets crying their wares. One may buy Turkish Delight, a famous sweetmeat, lemonade, raisin water, pistachio nuts, pomegranates and licorice water. The vendors cry to heaven that Allah will bless their customers. A sweetmeat vendor declares that his wares will make young women beautiful. A drink-seller avows that his lemonade will cheer a downcast heart. Other claims equally extravagant are assigned their wares by the itinerant merchants.

But at present the country is living on hope and America. Thousands of Syrians have come to both North and South America. Whole villages in the Lebanon have been abandoned for fruit lands in the New World. Sometimes they go back with their money and live like lords, and in honor of the source of their wealth resume their streets. One town now has a main street named so by returned and retired emigrants.

Stabilization of the governments of the Syrian mandate will undoubtedly bring a higher tide of tourist travel because Syria, although outspied to Damascus interest by the Holy Land to the south, holds some treasures worth going miles to see. Babel's ruins are second only to Athens' Acropolis. Palestine holds no surviving Crusader castle to equal Kalat el Huan into whose banquet halls, keeps and battle-torn towers the Arabs have moved their hermit crabs. Damascus, an overgrown oasis on the edge of the desert, still lives and breathes the atmosphere of the Arabian Nights, while not far to the west a new summer colony develops on the cool heights under the shade of the cedars of Lebanon. American visitors are always interested in Beyrouth because the college on the promontory overlooking the Mediterranean that has educated many of the modern Near East leaders of every creed is an American college.

Syria still has the lure of the unknown; unknown religions, undiscovered cities of the past, unexplored Crusader castles, unexcavated fortresses, secret societies, and little-known races.

Damascus, where the expedition stopped for several days en route to Bagdad, is located in southwestern Syria. It was old in the days of Abraham. When Babylon and Nineveh were hamlets, Damascus was a queen city of the East. It is still a city of importance, but the advent of the railway has crippled the caravan trade. Steamships on the Red sea transport Mecca pilgrims as far as Jidda whence they can easily reach Mecca. For North African Moslems this obviates the overland voyage from which Damascus was the starting point, and the city suffers a consequent loss in pilgrim trade.

The bazaars of Damascus, more celebrated even than those of Cairo or Algiers, reflect the change brought by modern transportation. Prints from Manchester machinery from Birmingham and talking machines from the United States now crowd the market. In Damascus each street is devoted to some special trade and all the shops on that thoroughfare sell one type of article.

Silk Bazaar. The silk bazaar has a wide scope in its merchandise, as its products run from lengths of silk and harem veils to kamfyah, the flowing head-dress of the Bedouins. The shoe bazaar has boots of goatskin dyed red and yellow with heels of camelhide. Wooden sandals are inlaid with mother of pearl for wealthy women customers. Curiously enough the famed Damascus blades are found in the Greek bazaar. They are a rarity now, and it is fitting that they should be found in a bazaar devoted to antiquities. However, the Damascene is a wily merchant and gullible tourists sometimes purchase "antiques" imported from Germany, and "oriental art" from Birmingham.

The vendors of food and drink are not limited to one bazaar. They stroll through the streets crying their wares. One may buy Turkish Delight, a famous sweetmeat, lemonade, raisin water, pistachio nuts, pomegranates and licorice water. The vendors cry to heaven that Allah will bless their customers. A sweetmeat vendor declares that his wares will make young women beautiful. A drink-seller avows that his lemonade will cheer a downcast heart. Other claims equally extravagant are assigned their wares by the itinerant merchants. Most frequently he heard the cry, "Ya Frank!" which is translated, "Oh God, send me a customer."

HEARD ABOUT TOWN

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Ziegler, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Coplin and children made a trip to Carlsbad Cavern the first of the week and viewed the wonders of that underground paradise. Like many others who have paid the cavern a visit, they found it impossible to describe the beauties of that subterranean mystery.

Miss Louise Sweet left Wednesday for Cincinnati, Ohio, where she will take an advanced course in violin. Our best wishes go with her.

Isaac Marquez came from Tucumcari Sunday morning on No. 11, accompanied by Bertha Chavez, little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Saturnino Chavez, who had been visiting for a week with the Marquez, Ramirez and Salcido families and grandmother, Mrs. Lola S. Medina. Mr. Marquez left for home on No. 12.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Maxwell and children came down from their ranch near Gran Quivira last Saturday and stayed over Sunday, leaving for home Monday. The lambing season has been one of the best in years and after a hard season's work in which the wool-growers' labor both day and night, they now find relief and enjoy the liberty of mixing with their old friends in Carrizozo and nearby towns.

Mable St. John, daughter of Mrs. Ramon St. John, who had her tonsils removed last week, is much improved and Mrs. St. John has returned to her duties in the Sacramento mountains.

Margie Rolland came home from the State University at Albuquerque Sunday, accompanied by Walter LaFleur, who came over from Santa Fe and spent the day with the home folks, returning to his duties with the highway commission Monday. Miss Margie will spend the vacation period at home and enroll at the 'U' for the fall and winter term.

Louie Nalda and Estanislao Bello, the smiling woolgrowers, were here this week after a hard siege during the lambing season. These Senors wear the smile that never wears off, and no matter which way the wind blows, conditions never change them and they greet you with the same old smile and a hearty handshake.

BORN—To Mr. and Mrs. Benny Sanchez, June 8, a girl. Mother and daughter are doing nicely. Mrs. Sanchez is the former Miss Beatrice Pino.

Murray Morgan of the Alamo-gordo News was in town Saturday and made the Outlook a friendly call. The News is operated by Clarence Morgan and two sons, Ralph and Murray. We are always glad to meet either or all of these gentlemen who are Master Printers in every sense of the term and conduct one of the best weekly newspapers in the state.

Attorney and Mrs. J. E. Hall and little daughter left Saturday for Gallup, where Mrs. Hall will visit for a short period with her parents. Mr. Hall returned after seeing his family safely over the trip and will return for them at the expiration of their visit.

Town Trustee T. E. Kelley returned last Sunday from Riverside, Cal., where he journeyed on May 28 to see his mother, who had been ill. We are pleased to learn that Mrs. Kelley was improving nicely at the time of her son's departure for home.

Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Walker left yesterday morning for an extended trip which will take them through the states of Texas, Oklahoma, Kansas and from there they will go to Des Moines, Ia., where in all of the states mentioned, they will visit relatives. They expect to be absent about two months.

Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Hendren went on a fishing trip the latter part of last week in the canyons above Three Rivers. Their luck was good, as they each caught the limit on the first day's fishing. They returned to their home at Fort Stanton Sunday.

H. A. Mirabal was here from Claunch, N. M. yesterday, and said that they were visited by a good rain in that locality the first part of the week.

Receives University Medal

Woodrow Clements, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Clements, Sr., of Corona and one of the graduates of the Capitan High School, has been awarded a State University Honor Medal. The medal was sent to the principal of the Capitan high school and was followed by Prof. J. F. Zimmerman, President of the University, who complimented Woodrow both on his splendid record in all branches of his studies and also on his record for athletics, which helped to make up his superior standing in the high school. Woodrow made the trip to Albuquerque the first part of the week, accompanied by his parents who returned Tuesday. We wish to congratulate Woodrow on his rapid advancement and he is now located where he is in a position to go further up the ladder. He has accepted his newly made honors with becoming modesty.

Sandy was invited to a banquet, but had a headache that night and was unable to go. The next morning he looked up the word "Gratis" that appeared on his invitation in the dictionary. For revenge, Sandy ate bean sandwiches for a week.
