

ANCHO NOTES

Mr. and Mrs. Foster and son, of Fort Worth, are vacationing in New Mexico. At present they are guests of Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Peters.

Mrs. W. E. Reynolds is back in Luna with her mother, after a brief visit in El Paso.

Mrs. C. C. Belknap spent last Friday in Alamogordo.

J. M. Frame left Saturday for San Francisco where he will spend the remainder of the summer with Mrs. Frame, who has been there under care of specialists for the past 20 months. E. I. Harkey is relieving him at the local S. P. station. Mrs. Paul Long will be second truck operator during Mr. Frame's absence.

Mrs. Turner and Mr. Lassiter of Gran Quivira are here, assisting Brother St. John and wife with the revival. Good crowds are in attendance most of the time.

Mr. and Mrs. John Dale, sons John, Henry, Jim, Fred, Elmo and daughter Effie, George Goodson, Dude McCarty, Miss June Caldwell, Mrs. R. L. Hale and children, Mr. and Mrs. Harkey and children, Bill Fambrough, Ferris Grasham, Mmes. Straley, Kile, W. L. Silvers, Geo. Alton, Lee Simpson, O. W. C. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Alix Hubbard and children were among those who attended the ball game at Corona Sunday.

Mrs. Smith and daughter are here from Nogal, visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Storey.

The Woman's Club had a delightful meeting at the home of Mrs. T. J. Straley, Thursday, July 9, with most of the members present, and Mmes. O'Leary and Reynolds as special guests. Roll call was responded to by "What I think would benefit my Community," which brought forth some helpful suggestions. Mrs. Harkey was unanimously elected to membership. The librarian reported several books generously donated by Mrs. Roy Bogle. Word study recently taken up is creating a great deal of interest and enthusiasm. Up until now, Mmes. Belknap and Kile have been in charge. Next leader will be Mrs. G. F. Pruet, who is quite proficient along that line.

After business, cantaloupe a la mode was served. Next meeting will be at the home of Mrs. B. W. Wilson on July 23rd.

Mmes. Bullard, B. A. Hightower and C. C. Belknap, club members, are on the sick list.

Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Hall had as their week-end guests, Attorney J. E. Hall, wife and daughter Jeanne.

Gene Riggins of Oklahoma is spending the summer with Virgil Hall. They were classmates at Fulsom Training School at Smithville, Oklahoma.

Dan Ortiz will remain here a few days longer before returning to his duties with the Magna Copper Co., at Superior, Ariz.

Miss Mary Romero left Saturday, after spending her two weeks' vacation with the home folks. Mary is undergoing instruction for a trained nurse at Hotel Dieu at El Paso.

THREE BUSINESS HOUSES ROBBED TUESDAY NIGHT

Tuesday night, a lone robber entered Skinner's Grocery and obtained a small amount of goods, such as chewing gum, candy, cigars and a .32 calibre revolver, which Roy had kept in the drawer for several years.

Not finding any cartridges for the gun, he went to the Carrizozo Hardware Company, where he stole 8 boxes of cartridges and two fish bags. As far as Mr. English can see at this writing, he took nothing else.

Mr. Robber then visited Paden's Drug Store, broke the lock on the cash register, but in doing so, the noise was heard by Dr. Paden's little dog, which immediately gave the alarm. Dr. Paden hastened into the store, threw on the lights, and saw the thief at the cash register. He made a run for the back door, just as the Doctor fired a shot after him, which barely missed the mark.

Officer Henry Lutz was soon on his track, and at the Star Cafe he was informed that a man bearing a sack of some kind had been there shortly before.

He made his way to the freight yards and after a thorough search, the thief was located in an empty box car. The officer covered him with his gun, and after searching him, found all of the stolen goods on his person.

He confessed to everything, and was arraigned before Justice of the Peace A. H. Harvey yesterday. He gave the name of Francis Barbout of Pratt, Kans. He was bound over to the District Court and is being held in jail in default of bail.

This youth, who is 16 years of age, broke jail at Hot Springs, N.M., broke into a nearby hardware store to steal a pistol, held up a hitch-hiker and then stole an automobile from a Hot Springs garage. He was being returned to Oklahoma from Los Angeles to face automobile theft charges.

The Green Construction Co.

Bert Pfingsten and a force of men were here Wednesday night from the Green Construction Company, now working at Hondo. They had several large trucks and loaded up a shipment of cement from the local railroad yards and trucked the same back to the scene of activity.

The reason for this was, that to wait for the cement to be shipped to Capitan would cause a delay of several days and they could not wait, so they took the aforementioned course. This morning the cement is in Hondo. Station Agent C. P. Huppertz assisted the men, in every way possible; he came down from his home, unsealed the car, and remained until the cement was loaded. The cement will be used for road construction on Hondo road.

Miss Florence Reed of Chicago is here for a visit with Mr. and Mrs. Russell Reed of Fort Stanton. Miss Florence is a sister to Russell and while here, the Reeds will show her the beauties of our mountain scenery. They are on the Ruidoso for a few days of this week. Mrs. Reed will be remembered as the former Miss Irma Poage.

An Obnoxious Weed

Primrose Path

The primrose path along the trout streams is very lovely just now, for, since the rains, the pale yellow evening primrose is blooming abundantly and it seems just as happy in the morning as in the evening in spite of its name. It also has a great deal of company. A botany student could have a marvelous time vacationing in the dry west. But so can a society ed.

Because people come and go during a stay at a resort and one finds interesting personalities to fit to telephone voices. One gets new lights and angles (didn't we say trout stream) on the readers and the woman's viewpoint. The latter quite various, by the way--as various and original as her types. We think it should be the "masculine viewpoint" for the trite phrase. According to most all women "men are all alike" but you wouldn't, would you, find men admitting that about women?

And fashion whimsies are fun in the mountains, where there is obviously no set rules.

One can come in knickers and boots and wear them all the time, one can wear simple little wash dresses and one can dress for dinner or supper or what have you. And suits and blouses do, too, when dude ranching at home. Not to mention beach pajamas. In spite of lack of beaches they have a suitability on youthful wearers and lend a zest to vacation. And river banks with the noise of water is perhaps as good a setting. Albuquerque Tribune.

Methodist Church

A fine Sunday School program last Sunday morning with 71 present. Seven were baptized and received into the church at Capitan next Sunday morning and in Carrizozo in the evening. Only one hour for Sunday School each week. That is hardly enough time to give to the study of the world's greatest book. Let's be sure to get in that hour. Be in Sunday School next Sunday morning.

Mr. and Mrs. Florentino Lopez left Monday for Las Vegas and will return the latter part of the week, accompanied by Alfredo Lopez, who has been attending the State Normal this summer.

Mrs. B. L. Stimmel left last week for California, where she will visit her children who reside at Los Angeles, Stockton and other places over the state. Mrs. Stimmel will be absent two months.

OddFellows Meet in New Home

The first regular meeting of Carrizozo Lodge No. 30 since the new home was purchased, was held Tuesday night, there was a large attendance.

The interior is about finished, the lighting system installed and in the course of two weeks everything will be completed with the exception of the front, which will be re-modeled later.

The new officers recently elected will be installed at the last meeting in this month. They are as follows-- Noble Grand, John E. Wright; Vice Grand, L. H. Dow; Sec'y-Treasurer, Wm. J. Langston. Appointive officers will also be installed at the same meeting.

Church Street Booster

Carl Dunlon, the new Chairman of the State Republican Committee is all right with us, and we believe he'll make a good chairman. Bill LaPoint of the Las Cruces Citizen seems to be delighted with this new section, and more especially because he is a Church street booster--but let's not get Church street ironed in to committee affairs.

You are O.K., Bill; and if anyone knows that advertising pays, you certainly do.

Nail Picker in Carrizozo

The "Nail Picker" was seen giving the streets the once-over Tuesday of this week. A large amount of nails and what have you are reported to have been collected off our streets.

The "Gloom Chasers"

A bunch of college youths home for their vacation, seeing things rather dull around this place, so they decided to give a dance on Saturday, July 18. A very opportune time for a dance, we'll say. It has been quite a long time since we've had a chance to make whoopes and shake our feet in the usual wicked fashion. Among the members of the jazz band are-- Mack Shaver, saxophone; Raymond Lackland, trumpet and Tannis Bigelow, drums. The "Gloom Chasers" will be augmented for this affair; we understand.

Standard Gasoline

The advertisement on an inside page is self-explanatory, as everybody knows the good qualities of the celebrated Standard gasoline.

Mrs. J. H. Fulmer and sons Walter and Bill of White Oaks were Carrizozo visitors for a day this week.

LOCAL MENTION

Dr. and Mrs. R. T. Lucas and Mrs. A. L. Burke left Sunday for Kansas City, after a three-weeks' visit with the A. L. Burke family of the Outlook office. Miss Rosalind Burke, who came west to spend her vacation, will attend to the interests of the Outlook Art & Gift Shop during Mrs. Burke's absence of several weeks, while she is making her purchases for the fall and holiday trade of art and gift goods.

Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Adams and Miss Gladys Estes of El Paso are guests of Mr. and Mrs. O. S. Stearns at their summer home in Nogal Canyon this week.

Mr. and Mrs. John Brown of Fort Sumner came in Tuesday morning and will be the guests of Mr. and Mrs. L. P. McClintock for about two weeks, during which time they will be taken to the mountain resorts and also to El Paso--it may be that friends Mac and wife will take them across the river to Juarez, where they can see a real bull fight; "Quien sabe." Mrs. Brown is a sister to Mr. McClintock.

Johnson Stearns is in Los Angeles visiting Mr. and Mrs. Robert Poage. He will remain for the greater part of the vacation period and is having the time of his young life in the "Angel City."

Engineer-Fireman Bart Holland of Tucumcari says: I remember when overseas during the World War with my buddy Eb Jones--we were in Glasgow, Scotland, and Eb said he guessed he'd go to the postoffice to see if there was any mail for us. "Who is there to write to us, we're being changed all the time," I sighed. Finally Eb returned with a copy of the Carrizozo Outlook, and we proceeded to read it, advertisements and all (spread on our stomachs in the park) "Talk about a letter from home, 'twas it, with nothin' else but!" Bert said.

Mrs. T. G. James and R. P. Hickey were Carrizozo visitors from Kudner's Oh Bar Oh ranch Tuesday of this week.

Mrs. S. W. Hale of Capitan was a Carrizozo visitor Monday.

"Come to Spooner, Wis., for R. M. A. fishin'," shouts Stanley Squier, who is in business at the above-named place. "Why, man, the fish literally eat out of your hand around Spooner, believe it or not," Stanley is quoted as saying.

Tom DuBois, stockman of the Corona district, was a business visitor in Carrizozo Tuesday of this week.

Prof. and Mrs. F. R. Birney and children were in Carrizozo last week visiting relatives and friends. The professor formerly taught in the Carrizozo High School quite some time ago and is now Supervisor of Journalism and Public Speaking, Instructor in the high school at Houston, Tex. They left for Animas, Colo., to spend the remainder of the vacation with Mr. Birney's parents.

Attorney H. B. Hamilton of El Paso was a Carrizozo visitor on Monday of this week, attending to legal matters.

LYRIC THEATRE

(G. Earnest, Mgr.)

Talking Pictures at Their Best

Friday-Saturday--Ken Maynard and the wonder horse, "Tarzan" in "Alias the Bad Man." Colorful human interest drama "Alhounded" against the picturesque background of the primitive west! Replete with action--romance--thrills. A whirlwind all-talking feature starring the inimitable Ken Maynard. Also the second installment of the Serial, "The Indians Are Coming," with Col. Tim McCoy and Alene Ray. Chapter 2--"A Call to Arms!" Also Terry Toon Comedy, "Salt Water Tuffy." Two shows each night, 7:30 and 9:30.

Myron and Mildred Wells, son and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. W. Wells, formerly of this place, when Mr. Wells was operator at the local station, but now residents of Palmdale, Cal., are in Carrizozo to spend the remainder of their vacation with their uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Morgan Lovelace, and aunt Mrs. Elizabeth Gallacher. Mildred will remain here with her aunts, but Myron will spend most of his time on the ranch, where he can ride wild horses, shoot injuns and hunt skulkin' coyotes.

Miss Emma Fitch of Hachita is a guest of Mr. and Mrs. S. S. Gillespie. Miss Fitch is greatly pleased with our scenic resorts in the mountains; also the ancient ruins of the Gran Quivira, where her boat and hostess have taken her. Miss Fitch will leave the latter part of the week, after a few more places of interest have been visited.

L. A. Whitaker was in town from his ranch near Walnut Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. G. Earnest of the Lyric Theatre left Wednesday morning for Roswell, staying for the day and returning last night. While there, they were the guests of Mrs. Earnest's parents.

Mrs. W. P. Dolan and children left for Nebraska last week, to visit with relatives for a few weeks.

Mack Shaver is now in charge of the postoffice, during the absence of postmistress Mrs. Elizabeth Gumm, who is on her vacation in the east.

Floy L. Skinner, Supervisor of the Bonito Water System, was a visitor in town from Nogal, transacting some business for the S. P. Wednesday.

Birthday Party for Jane Spencer

Last Sunday being the birthday of Miss Jane Spencer, a party was arranged at the Oh Bar Oh ranch, with Mesdames Spencer and Rolland as hostesses. The afternoon was spent in games of various kinds; swimming being one of the chief means of pleasure for the young folks.

Those present were: The T. A. Spencer, A. J. Rolland and T. G. James families; Mrs. S. G. Allen and son Bill; Mr. and Mrs. R. P. Hickey, Mr. and Mrs. H. Houles, Mr. and Mrs. Wayland Crisp, the Misses Taylor, Gilbert, Mrs. Scott, George and Avela Young, Raymond Lackland, Maurice Lemon and Mack Shaver.

Pajama Outfit Chic for Vacation

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Not by this generation can it be proved that "all work and no play makes Jack a dull boy," nor Jill a dull girl, for that matter. Rather, would it seem according to the present program of life that most of us are holding the thought "if business interferes with pleasure, then give up the business." At any rate we are doing a lot of golfing and tennis playing and swimming and beach promenading and motoring these days and the "spectator" group in the grandstand is registering in ever increasing numbers.

It is interesting to note the enthusiastic reaction of the world of fashion to this mood for sports which now prevails. In the field of costume design, sportswear becomes first in importance to the mind of most fashionists.

Perhaps no other costume so completely falls in with this spirit of play as does that of the very modern pajama ensembles which nowadays include types for every occasion. Since pajamas go most everywhere, from beach parties to summer night dances, and it is said that they are going to attend outdoor opera during the coming months, it behooves every woman of fashion to plan her immediate wardrobe accordingly.

The shorter-length pajama and the tri-color theme are noteworthy features of the striking sports ensemble shown to the left in the picture. It is made of a silk material called geshan which is washable and extremely chic for sportswear. The double reversible jacket is in navy and the bright red reversible tie completes the patriotic three-color arrangement. The

Careful Laundering Will Keep Blankets Fluffy

Fluffy, soft wool blankets can remain fluffy and soft indefinitely if laundered carefully, says the New York state college of home economics at Cornell university.

Wash wool blankets in a lively suds made from a concentrated solution of pure mild soap. The blanket should be gently squeezed with hands or, if a washing machine is used, left in that about seven minutes with the washer at lowest speed. Wet wool should be handled gently. Feed out the blanket, bit by bit, into a pan, looking carefully to see that no spots remain. Squeeze out the water lightly by hand, leaving plenty of water in the blanket. Hang the blanket in the shade and shake it frequently to fluff it while it is drying. A breezy, sunny day is best for drying wools.

big stitched hat is of matching white geshan. The "Dutch boy" beach pajama costume to the right is a favorite with Schiaparelli, who designed it. The trousers are knitted wool in cocoa brown and the boyish blouse is made of gay bordered scarfs.

If you are spending the summer where to be rural is to be smart before you decide on what clothes to take along, make a survey of the better shops. The clever togs you will see there for the would-be farmerette and the fair sojourner at the picturesque "dude ranch" will be a revelation—blue jeans made specially for girls, bizarre shirts in as loud colors as fancy can picture, gaudy neckerchiefs, and when it comes to garden outfits, there's smocks and huge hats 'n' everything.

Watermelons Contain Needed Vitamins

The bureau of home economics of the United States Department of Agriculture learned these facts by carrying on a series of studies with watermelons of the Tom Watson variety, feeding them to experimental animals. About 90 per cent of all commercial shipments of watermelons are of the Tom Watson variety, and as other red-fleshed varieties are similar in structure and are similarly handled, it is believed that the results of this study apply to the watermelon crop as a whole.

Laboratory tests have shown that watermelons are a good source of two important vitamins, A and C, and that they contain detectable amounts of vitamins B and G. Vitamin A is needed for growth and physical well-being, while vitamin C is the food factor important in the nutrition of the teeth and some other parts of the body. Vitamins B and G aid in stimulating growth and normal development.

Any mother may therefore feel confident in serving watermelon frequently during the season, that she is providing a wholesome addition to the fruit supply. As with other tempting foods, the "eye may be bigger than the capacity," and some one may indulge a little too freely at the watermelon feast; but this might be true of ice cream or pink lemonade or "hot dogs" or many other foods.

They had to whisper very, very gently, for if they really talked it would wake up the whole country around and they would be most unpopular. "Well," said the second, the older bear, "I am so tired of being made to dance."

Usually a man who takes around a performing bear only has one bear with him, but this man had two, and this happened quite a long while ago. He would sing songs in a queer sort of voice and in queer sort of language, but at the end he would always say:

"Please, ladies and gentlemen, boys and girls, give pennies, nickels, dimes and quarters for the work of my fine bears."

"Fifty cents are nice, too." The bears had always performed many tricks when the man said this. One day a little girl said:

"How about ten cents?" But the man didn't know what ten cents meant, he had only heard them called times, and in the country from which he came they had quite a different name for money.

At any rate he stayed in this town for quite a few days and made a good deal of money for his bears did very fine tricks and the people enjoyed seeing them.

Now one of the bears was quite happy walking around the streets and doing his tricks every day.

His master was kind and he gave him plenty of food. And he got better food than ever on the days he did his tricks best.

Of course you can understand that, for on such days the man got more money and he liked to give his bears nice things to eat.

But the other bear did not like doing tricks. He was tired of performing.

He was becoming old and he felt it was a great strain for him. He particularly disliked having to climb a pole, and that was the trick that always got the most money and the greatest amount of praise.

He wouldn't have minded climbing a tree, but he did dislike a pole. And how he did hate to dance on his hind legs.

Particularly now that he was growing old, it didn't seem a dignified thing for an old bear to do. After the man had gone to sleep and the bears were supposed to be asleep, too, they would talk over the day's work.

They had to whisper very, very gently, for if they really talked it would wake up the whole country around and they would be most unpopular.

"Well," said the second, the older bear, "I am so tired of being made to dance."

"It is so silly, too. People like to see bears dance on two legs because they have four, and we don't ask them to dance on one leg because they have two."

"It would be just as sensible if we asked them to do this!"

The first bear laughed in a low tone. "The trouble is I am old. And these things seem very silly to me. I wish I didn't have to do any more."

And the bear's wish came true. He was given to a zoo after this and he never had to do any more work!

It was really time for him to rest. He had worked hard and long and he was too old to be asked to dance on his hind legs.

Machines That Are Almost Human

By E. C. TAYLOR

Census Tabulators

HOW many married men are there in the United States who are under thirty-five years of age, married and own automobiles that cost less than $1,000?

Or again, how many heads of families were jobless at the time the last census was taken, have their own homes that cost less than $5,000 but are not all paid for, have children and were born in the United States?

Or, how many farmers are there in the United States who own automobiles, sold their crops at a loss last year, but have some money laid away and are not worrying about the future?

These and many other questions can be answered by the census tabulators, which are electric devices for tabulating statistics.

These machines make it possible to learn facts within a few hours or days that formerly took months or years to ascertain when men and women did the work.

They are operated like adding machines, except that instead of an operator punching keys, holes in cards, give off electric impulses that cause the machines automatically to register any requested set of facts.

When the 1930 census was taken, the people of the United States were asked a great many questions, not only as to age, sex, place of residence and where they were born, but as to their economic status. The government wanted to know whether they had jobs, if they lived in cities or towns, whether their farms paid them a profit, whether they owned automobiles and how much they cost, whether they owned their homes, and many other things to which the census enumerators found it hard to get answers.

Contrary to the belief of many who were asked such questions the idea was not to make mailing lists of all those in the country who didn't have automobiles or radios or who had some money in the bank. The government wanted to know how the people of the country were prospering and how they lived. There is nothing like statistics to tell such a story, the government believed, and it set about the task of finding out.

After previous censuses thousands of men and women spent months and years compiling statistics as to the various groups in the country—how many were farmers, how many residents of the United States were born in this country, how many were of school age. The government made no effort to learn how many had radios and automobiles until the census of 1930. A score of questions were added to the former list asked by census enumerators.

If the old method of sorting all this data by hand, and adding it all up by punching adding machines by hand had been followed, the task would have been well-nigh hopeless. It would have required years to total all that the 1930 census had disclosed about the condition of the people of the United States.

So the electric statistics tabulating device was put to work, and it has greatly simplified the gigantic task of finding out how the 120,000,000 people of the United States live.

The answers each man, woman and child in the United States gave to the questions asked by the enumerators were recorded by holes on cards. The position of the holes on each card indicated whether the answer was "yes" or "no" to each question, and also what each question was. Nothing was written on the cards. They were simply punched with the answers.

To find out the answers to any set of questions such as are asked above, the operator of the machine only had to set the proper triggers and magnets so that only the facts he wanted to know would be recorded, and start the machine.

The cards are dropped into the machine by the 100,000, and shoot through at a whirling pace. The machine selects only the cards bearing the proper answers and dumps them into a separate container. They are then run through a counting machine and the task is completed.

It looks easy when you see the machine operating. A task that required hundreds of times as long and hundreds of times as many operators is performed accurately and simply. It is another example of how science has produced a machine to do a tedious, difficult and wearying task accurately and with skill.

Shines at Welmar

Welmar contradicts the old proverb about the honor which their own cities give to prophets, for here both Goethe and Schiller are revered as at Shakespeare is at the English Stratford on Avon. Franz List also lived here for twelve years; Kotzebue, the dramatist, was born here and Nietzsche died here. Goethe made it the cultural center it became, doing as much for it as Wagner did for Bayreuth. His house and the Schiller home are open to all visitors.

Cathedral to Cost $5,000 Liverpool, England, has just sold to Roman Catholic church a site on Broadlow hill for the proposed cathedral, which is to cost $15,000,000 and will have a seating capacity of 50,000. The site cost $500,000. The construction will start within two years.

When serving a fruit cocktail the entire menu should be considered, as other fruits should not appear in the same meal.

Cayenne Tomato Salad.—Peel three solid tomatoes, cut them into halves and press out the seeds. Chop the tomatoes and put into a bowl, add a tablespoonful of lemon juice, a teaspoonful of salt, a tablespoonful of onion juice and the same of green pepper, with half a teaspoonful of paprika. Mix and turn into the dish in which it is to be served. Serve with four tablespoonfuls of coconut cream.

Coconut Cream.—Prepare coconut cream by grating a good-sized nut and pouring boiling water over it. Wash and stir until all the flavor has been washed from the fiber, then press into a sieve and drain, turn into a cheese cloth to strain. Let the milk thus obtained stand over night. The cream will form on the surface. Remove this and use for the above dish. It is well to remember that a nut after draining out the milk, if placed in the oven or on a hot plate to become very hot, will come out of the shell with little difficulty.

Italian Cheese.—Take one pound of veal, one and one-half pound of calf's liver, one-half pound of ham, one small onion, one-half teaspoonful of sage, two teaspoonfuls of chopped parsley, one-fourth of a box of gelatin, two teaspoonfuls of salt, one-fourth teaspoonful of pepper and a dash of cayenne. Cover the liver with boiling water and let stand five minutes, then drain and dry. Chop the liver and the other meats, all raw, add the seasonings together with one grated onion. Mix well and grease a mold, press the meat into it, packing well, cover and steam three hours. Remove the cover, pour off the broth, adding the gelatin to the broth, return to the mold and let stand in cold water for an hour or more.

With smaller houses now being built, it is often difficult to find enough closet space, points out a correspondent to the household department of the True Story Magazine. Here is how she solved the problem: "Not having much space to store winter blankets and bedding, I bought a parson's bag, folded the articles to fit the bag, and hung the bag in the clothes closet. One bag will hold six or eight blankets or coverlets, and stored this way they are easy to get at."

For Negro Advancement The Spingarn medal was instituted by J. H. Spingarn, director of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, for the negro making the highest or noblest achievement during the preceding year. It was inaugurated in 1914.

An Easier Way

"You may safely reduce from five to twenty pounds in two months," says a magazine article. But we find that wearing a corset one size too large gives the same general effect.

Rhubarb-Tapioca Dessert Is Easy to Prepare

Here's a simple, easily made dessert—one of those "mother used to make" which is sure to be well-liked. Nowadays we have quick-cooking tapioca instead of the kind that had to be soaked overnight, but the rhubarb is no different from the kind grandmother or grew in her garden. The bureau of home economics of the United States Department of Agriculture furnishes the recipe.

1 quart rhubarb cut in 1/2 in salt in small pieces. 1 cup hot water 1/2 cup quick-cook. 1 1/2 cups sugar 1/2 cup tapioca.

Rhubarb Tapioca. Put the rhubarb, water, and tapioca in the upper part of the double boiler. Cook over steam for 15 minutes, stirring frequently. Add the sugar and salt, and cook about five minutes longer, or until the tapioca is clear and the rhubarb is tender. Chill thoroughly before serving. Plain or whipped cream may be served with this dessert.

Plan for Grouping Laundry Equipment

Well Lighted Arrangement of Sink and Tub.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.—WNU Service.)

While the ideal arrangement for home laundry work is to have a separate room for the laundry equipment, this is often impossible. Space for tubs, washing machine, ironing board, and laundry supplies must be provided in the kitchen. When this is necessary it is advisable to group the laundry equipment in such a way that food preparation and laundry work will not interfere with each other.

The picture shows a farm kitchen in Massachusetts where the tubs have been set next to the sink, for convenience in placing water and drain pipes, and also because of the good light from the window and the door opening on the back entry. The tubs are provided with a cover which can be used as a worktable. Such a cover may be hinged, but if there are projecting articles on the wall behind it such as the coffee mill and kitchen utensils shown in the illustration, it is probably better to lift it off entirely when the tubs are required. A piece of linoleum has been fitted to the cover in this kitchen, for easier care and imperviousness to water and grease.

It would have been better, if possible, to put the faucets for the tubs inside instead of above them, not only to get them out of the way but to prevent any annoyance from dripping, suggests the bureau of home economics of the United States Department of Agriculture. This bureau has made a study of both kitchen and laundry equipment and is interested in placing both in a convenient, unobtrusive labor and shorten the time spent in these work rooms by the housemaker.

Parents should not have family rows at the table, if only for the sake of not spoiling a child's appetite for food.

Clothes closets should be well-equipped, well-lighted, and well-used, with convenient racks for shoes, hats and garments.

Can vegetables as soon as possible after they are brought in from the garden. Freshness may develop if vegetables are allowed to stand in a warm kitchen.

Remove stains from fabrics when the stains are new.

Cook vegetables quickly in an open kettle to keep them green.

If the pots and pans and kettles are soaked during the meal it lightens the work of dishwashing afterwards.

News Review of Current Events the World Over

France, Alone in Blocking Hoover Moratorium Plan, Is Warned by President—Feat of Globe-Circling Flyers.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

DAY after day Secretary Mellon and Ambassador Edge negotiated with the French officials in Paris in the effort to reconcile the moratorium plans of President Hoover and Premier Laval, and in Washington the President and Acting Secretary of State Castle were almost constantly at the American end of the transatlantic telephone line, coaching them and learning what progress they were making. At this writing the progress, if any, is small.

Premier Laval, who was continually receiving the advice and assistance of Finance Minister Etienne and others, stood firmly on the position he had assumed, and the senate, by a vote of 197 to 5, backed him up, virtually giving him a free hand so long as he did not recede. This huge vote did not indicate that the senate had confidence in Laval, however. He was attacked fiercely and jeered, but the senators had to express their approval of the refusal to give in to President Hoover.

Mr. Hoover then came to bat with a memorandum sent to Ambassador Edge for communication to the French government. This was in effect an ultimatum to France that unless she accepted the Hoover plan she was likely to be left out in the cold. The warning was conveyed that if the President's project failed, Germany certainly would apply for a moratorium on reparations as provided by the Young plan, and this, Mr. Hoover figured, would cost France $100,000,000,000 more than would the Hoover moratorium. Behind the polite phrases in the memorandum seemed to lie the intimation that if France rejected the Hoover plan, the administration would establish a moratorium on war debt payments and leave France out.

MEANWHILE Premier Mussolini put over what was considered by some a "fast one." His government announced that the Hoover proposal, which had been accepted unconditionally, was in operation, so far as Italy was concerned, on July 1, Italy's debtor nations, Germany, Austria, Hungary and Bulgaria, were notified that she was not collecting sums due from them on that date; and her creditors, England and the United States, were told she was putting aside the sums she owes them, pending final decision.

M. Flandin

The State department in Washington said the Hoover plan had been accepted by Belgium and Poland, both allies of France and by Rumania, and in part by Greece and Jugoslavia. So France was standing alone in opposition. It was believed in Paris that Premier Laval, after closing down parliament, would call a conference of all nations signatory to the Young plan to obtain from them a release from the guarantee clause requiring her, in case of a moratorium, to place in the bank for international settlements the sum of approximately $120,000,000 to be applied in part to increasing payments to be received by other creditors during the period of suspension.

FOR the first time since the World War the federal government began its fiscal year on July 1 with an unbalanced budget. The deficit is almost $803,000,000. Handicapped by reduced revenues, the Treasury found itself confronted with rising expenditures, due to the government's efforts to help the farmer, the unemployed and the drought sufferers. About the only favorable factor in the financial situation was a cash balance of over $400,000,000 with which the treasury entered the new year. This will be used to meet current expenses during the first quarter instead of being applied to the deficit.

WILEY POST and Harold Gatty, American aviators, set their monoplane, the Winnie Mae, down at Roosevelt field, New York, Wednesday evening. They had accomplished the remarkable feat of flying around the globe, approximately 15,475 miles, in 8 days 15 hours and 51 1/2 minutes, a new mark for other flyers to shoot at. They set out to break the record of 22 days made by the dirigible Graf Zeppelin, and they smashed it to bits. Great skill in piloting and navigating, unobscurable courage and nerve and a plane that functioned perfectly all contributed to the success of this epochal flight. The route followed by the flyers took them from New York to Harbor Grace, N. F.; thence successively to Chester, England; Berlin, Moscow, Novosibirsk, Irkutsk, Blagoveshchensk, Khabarovsk, Solomon and Fairbanks, Alaska; Edmonton, Canada; Cleveland, Ohio, and back to New York. They met with no serious accident but at times flew through high winds and rainstorms. New York city on Thursday gave the aviators the usual show and noisy welcome, with parade, speeches and reception by Mayor Jimmie Walker. But they were too tired to mind this much. President Hoover invited them to luncheon at the White House, and they received the congratulations of eminent persons all over the world. It is estimated that Post and Gatty will realize about $50,000 each from their wonderful flight—and they certainly earned it.

J. C. Stone

Southwest that the board commit itself to keep its immense wheat holdings off the market, either for a stated period or under a fixed price level, are rejected.

One important concession is made. The board agrees to limit sales of its wheat to 3,000,000 bushels a month, this limit to run on a cumulative basis, the unused portions of the quota to be good for succeeding months. But it is excepted from this limitation important contracts with foreign purchasers now under consideration.

To the problem of the wheat surplus there is only one answer, and that is acreage reduction, the board declares. Hope was seen for an improved export market in smaller productions in other countries and in the prospect for better world conditions "that will be created by the President's debt plan."

Chairman Stone, before giving out the statement, conferred with President Hoover, and he said it was satisfactory to the Chief Executive. It certainly was not wholly satisfactory to the grain growers, farm leaders and grain dealers of the middle western states. They continued to urge the board to hold all sales of surplus wheat for a year.

WHAT was the President's national commission on law enforcement and observance, better known as the Wickersham commission, went out of existence with the close of June, and is now just eleven men and women. On Tuesday the fine furniture and equipment were moved out of its offices; after midnight the unexpended remainder of its $500,000 appropriation reverted to the government; and Chairman Wickersham by that time was the only member left in the National Capital.

Sticklers for exactness said the commission will not actually cease to exist until a final history of its activities and expenditures is written and is accepted by President Hoover. In order to attain this end a temporary commission headquarters has been established near the White House, equipped to accommodate only the chairman and a small staff. There the fifteenth report will be written. Here is the commission's record: Ten reports have been delivered to the government printer or deposited at the White House; four others, one of them the still-controverted study of prohibition, have been made public.

Since midwinter the commission has completed reports upon the deportation of aliens, "lawlessness in law enforcement," crime among the foreign born, juvenile delinquency, the work of the police, prisons, probation and parole, the costs and causes of crime and a "progress report" upon the work of the courts, to be carried out by private agencies.

SENATOR BEED Smoot of Utah, chairman of the senate finance committee, has been in conference with the treasury authorities in Washington; and he now says that under the provisions of the Hawley-Smoot tariff law with relation to the products of convict, forced or indentured labor, the Treasury Department will adopt a policy of excluding a large share of the products of Russia.

While this exclusion will not apply to products of the soil, says Mr. Smoot, it will apply to Soviet products which are manufactured, mined or produced by means of forced labor of any kind, and which are competitive with products here. He mentions lumber and pulpwood especially as products which will be shut out.

The Utah senator takes sharp leave with his Democratic colleagues, Sentor W. H. King, who has denounced the idea of shutting out Russian products in blanket fashion and declared that Congress did not have such a thing in mind and did not authorize it. Senator Smoot declares it was the purpose of congress to shut out the products of convict, forced or indentured labor, and that the Treasury Department will adhere to the law.

IN A few days Secretary of War Patrick J. Hurley will be on his way to our farthest possession, the Philippines, for an inspection tour of the islands. This is because their administration falls under the jurisdiction of the War department.

While the official War department announcement ascribed the reason for the secretary's trip to a desire "to acquaint himself more intimately with the details of Philippine problems," it was understood that Mr. Hurley would study personally sentiment there for independence in preparation for a movement in the next session of congress to free the islands.

President Hoover has been advised by members of both senate and house of representatives that it appeared probable sufficient strength would be mustered in the next session to pass a bill authorizing Philippine independence.

Sec'y Wilbur

RAY LYMAN WILBUR, secretary of the interior, before he became president of Leland Stanford University, in 1916, had attained considerable fame as a physician and surgeon, and he demonstrated the other day that he has not lost his surgical skill. While escorting Secretary and Mrs. Wilbur through Mesa Verde National park, V. M. Delerchman, president of a southwestern Colorado transportation concern, fell suddenly ill and was taken to the park hospital. There Doctor Wilbur diagnosed his ailment as acute appendicitis and decided an immediate operation was necessary. So he gathered up the tools and, with the assistance of Dr. R. E. Johnson of Cortez, he performed the operation which almost certainly saved Delerchman's life.

Next day the patient's condition was so good that Secretary Wilbur resumed his trip of inspection of the park.

SENOR DON SALVADOR DE MADARIAGA, the new ambassador from Spain, presented his credentials to President Hoover with due ceremony, and the customary polite phrases were exchanged. Then the two distinguished men enjoyed an informal chat, as both of them used to be mining engineers. Senor de Madariaga is a noted writer and in the past has criticized severely some of the policies of the United States in Latin-American affairs.

SPAIN is to continue to be a republic, and Alfonso will remain an ex-king, according to the results of the national elections. Alejandro Lerroux, old time Republican leader and at present foreign minister, is the man of the hour and it is accepted that he will be the first premier under the new constitution that is to be adopted by the national assembly that convenes on July 14. The Socialists and so-called radicals will control this assembly, which in fact will be rather moderate in policies. The communists are powerless.

Catalonia still insists on being a separate state in a Spanish federation, but Senor Lerroux predicts that the Catalan movement will soon collapse.

SENATOR SIMEON D. Fess of Ohio, who is a leading member of the senate committee on interstate commerce, predicts that railroad and transportation legislation of a comprehensive character will be considered during the next session of congress. He has studied these questions closely for years, and probably knows what he is talking about. In his opinion, consolidation legislation will again be taken up, and laws for the regulation of the motor bus and the motor truck will be proposed.

Senator Fess

Mr. Fess foresees much difficulty in getting legislation enacted to meet the various transportation problems. This difficulty is much enhanced, as he views it, by the competition between the railroads and other forms of transportation. On the one hand, he feels the country cannot get along without the railroads, but on the other, he is convinced the public will not sanction any undue restriction of other forms of transportation.

The Ohio senator is an advocate of legislation to liberalize existing law with reference to railroad consolidations. He sponsored, in the last congress, the Fess-Parker bill to provide, in effect, for voluntary combinations.

It is interesting to hear, from Senator Fess himself, that he probably will remain chairman of the Republican national committee for another year, despite frequent rumors that he would retire or be displaced. He called on President Hoover the other day and afterward said: "It appears now that I will serve until convention time next year." However, he insisted he had not discussed the matter with the President.

Virtue in Many Things One Cannot Understand

"Science," said a traveler, "has at last come to recognize that there is truth in spiritualism, occultism, clairvoyance and many other old, magical, eastern things that we used to laugh at."

"Once in Peru a friend of mine fell sick. The best doctors could do nothing for him, and one day his Indian servant brought to his bedside an Indian medicine man."

"The Peruvian professor in charge of the case laughed at the medicine man."

"You know nothing about medicine. You're a bluff," he said. "The medicine man opened his quaint sack, took a small dried leaf from it and handed it to the famous Lima doctor. 'Smell that,' he said calmly."

"The doctor smelt it and his nose began to bleed. It bled and bled. Nothing would stop it. Then the Indian took another dried leaf out. 'Now smell that.' And at once the bleeding was over."

"After this proof" of his skill the Indian medicine man was allowed to prescribe for my dying friend. By Jove, he cured him in two days."

Naturally Wanted to See That Other "Ape"

America is lacking in comfortable inns, as Mr. Chesterton correctly points out, and it confesses an equal dearth of the interesting type of innkeepers.

A bibulous friend of Alexandre Dumas, it is related in a recent biography of the great romancer, stopped at "The Sign of the Two Apes" on his way home late at night and, pounding on the door, roused the proprietor from slumber.

"I want to see your partner," he announced. "My partner?" exclaimed the astonished publican. "I am the sole owner. I have no partner."

"No partner?" cried the bibulous one. "Then what do you mean, you scoundrel, by deceiving the public? Your sign here says that this is the Inn of the Two Apes."

Men Also Called "Gossips"

After traveling extensively in the British isles, where he observed the conversations of men and women, Justice Alfred H. Couter returned to Belfast, Ireland, recently, and declared that he had learned that men are as great gossips as women. In a lecture he said that it was a mistake to think that only women gossiped, for he had found men who could "talk the heads off women."

Earth's Wickiest Spot Macao, Portugal's two-square-mile city-island-at-the-mouth-of-the-Canton river, China, is today the most sinful spot on earth. Its chief business is to exploit every vice—opium smoking, fan-tan, roulette, lotteries, liquor, sing-song girls—for the crowds from Hong Kong and other nearby cities.—Collier's Magazine.

Railroad on Which No Christian May Travel

The world's strangest rail carrier, officially known as the Damascus-Medina-Hadj railroad, according to the Wall Street Journal, is to be rebuilt. At any rate, a petition to that effect is before the King of Hejaz. The road, which was destroyed during the World War, began in traversed and ended in Near East deserts. It carried no freight and its only passengers were pilgrims going to or returning from "making the Hadj," the hope of every religious Mohammedan. The Moslems are still "making the Hadj" but by foot, and they have tired of the exhausting trek.

The railroad was ordered by the sultan in 1908, paid for by the Mohammedans, designed by a German engineer, built by Italian, Polish, Hungarian, and Turk engineers using Italian, Greek, Turk and Montenegrin labor. Its rails were made in America, France and Belgium and its engines in Germany. In other words, while Christians built and equipped the road they are barred as passengers.

Trees for Iceland

Treeless Iceland is being made into wooded fastnesses through the wholesale transplanting of trees that are secured from the northern parts of Canada. The experiment, tried some time ago, has proved successful and the Canadian trees that have been shipped so far have been warmly appreciated and carefully attended and found to be ideal for the climate. Spruce, pine, tamarack and balsam are the varieties which have proven most successful. The ability to secure wood will mean much to the inhabitants of the island, and efforts are being made to secure funds for the purpose from humanitarians of other countries.

40,000 Conoco Passport Holders are on Vacation Highways

THESE motorists have requested and received free 1931 Passports from the Conoco Travel Bureau. In addition more than a million are using Conoco Road Maps. Now they are on the highways of America... fishing in the Minnesota Lakes, viewing new scenes in the Rockies, lazy thru restful days in the Ozarks, exploring historic spots in the East... swimming, golfing...enjoying vacation time to the utmost. As these motorists travel the highways Conoco stations will be their stopping places for service and information. These stations are not merely sales points for Conoco Germ Processed Motor Oil, Conoco Ethyl Gasoline and Conoco Balanced Blend Gasoline; each is a field outpost of the Conoco Travel Bureau, rendering many special services, which include:

- Local Road Information
- Hotel Information
- Mail Forwarding
- Fishing Information
- Package Checking
- Camp Information
- Assistance in Obtaining Repairs and Making Necessary Purchases

The Conoco Travel Bureau... maintained by the Continental Oil Company... is the only free national service of its kind. It is the culmination of years of growth of the idea of service to travelers, dating from the earliest days of the oil industry. This free service is at your command, whether you plan a long trip or a short one. Stop at Conoco stations, identified by the Red Triangle; call on Conoco men for service. You'll find each a well-informed friend.

Hoover Triumphs

President Hoover's moratorium on reparations and war debts is a reality. With remarkable swiftness and precision the President has brought the whole world into accord with his proposal. Formidable obstacles have been met and overcome. The achievement is all the more significant because the American Government made no sacrifice of principle to bring France into harmony with its plan.

Technical details of the agreement, including reparations in kind, which were the last hurdle, will be left for a committee of experts to decide. But those experts will have no authority to negotiate any question outside of the "broad spirit of the President's proposal." The details which they will settle are relatively unimportant. What the world has been waiting to hear is that reparations and war debts would be actually suspended for one year. For millions of people in the United States and abroad this agreement marks the turn from depression and despair to hope, renewed activity and ultimate prosperity.

One paragraph in President Hoover's statement is especially significant:

"While the plan is particularly aimed to economic relief, yet economic relief means the swinging of men's minds from fear to confidence, the swinging of nations from the apprehension of disorder and governmental collapse to hope and confidence of the future. It means tangible aid to unemployment and agriculture."

This agreement can be interpreted in no other way than as a great victory for President Hoover. He is responsible for the original proposal and for the successful completion of negotiations with France. Tempering firmness with an understanding of the problems of France, he won every substantial point in the negotiations without deviating from his original purpose. Yet the whole agreement has been concluded in an atmosphere of confidence and good will that contributes to the more hopeful economic outlook.

THE STORY

Yancey Cravat, just returned from the newly opened Indian territory, relates his experiences to a large gathering of the able family Yancey is married to Sabra Venable; is a criminal lawyer and editor of the Wichita Wigwam. When the Run started, Yancey had raced his pony against the thoroughbred mount of a girl. The girl's horse was injured and when Yancey stopped to shoot it she grabbed his pony and got the land Yancey wanted. Yancey announces he is going back to the Oklahoma country with Sabra and their four-year-old son, Cimarron. They make the journey in two covered wagons. They arrive at Osage, where Yancey intends to start a newspaper. Yancey is determined to find out who killed Editor Pegler of the publication of the Oklahoma Wigwam are completed.

It was all like a nightmarish game, she thought. The shooting, the carousing, the brawls and high altercations; the sounds of laughter and ribaldry and drinking and song that issued from the flimsy cardboard false-front shacks that lined the preposterous street. Steadfastly she refused to believe that this was to be the accepted order of their existence. Yancey was, always talking of a new code, a new day; live and let live.

Sabra refused to believe that this business of the Pegler shooting was as serious as Yancey made it out to be. It was just one of his whims.

He would, she told herself, publish something or other about it in the first edition of the Oklahoma Wigwam. Yancey stoutly maintained it was due off the press on Thursday. Privately, Sabra thought that this would have to be accomplished by a miracle. This was Friday. A fortnight had gone by. Nothing had been done. Perhaps he was exaggerating the danger as well as the importance of all this Pegler business. Something else would come up to attract his interest, arouse his indignation, or outrage his sense of justice.

She was overjoyed when, that same day, a solemn deputation of citizens, three in number, do rigueur in somber and six shooters, called on Yancey with the amazing request that he conduct divine service the following Sunday morning. Osage was over a month old. The women folks, they said, in effect, thought it high time that some contact be established between the little town sprouted on the prairie and the power supposedly gazing down upon it from beyond the brilliant steel-blue dome suspended over it. Beneath the calico and sunbonnets despatched of Sabra on that first day of her coming to Osage there apparently glowed the same urge for convention, discipline, and the old order that so fired her to revolt. She warned toward them. She made up her mind that, once the paper had gone to press, she would don the black silk and the hat with the plumes and go calling on such of the wooden shacks as she knew had fostered this meeting. Then she recollected her mother's training and the stern commands of fashion. The sunbonnets had been residents of Osage before she had arrived. They would have the call first.

She got out a plaid silk tie for Cim. "Church meeting!" she exclaimed, joyously. Here, at last, was something familiar; something on which she could get a firm foothold in this quagmire. Yancey temporarily abandoned his journalistic mission in order to make proper arrangements for Sunday's meeting. Horn entrepreneur, he took hold with the enthusiasm that he always displayed in the first spurt of a new enterprise. Already news of the prospective meeting had spread by the mysterious means common to isolated settlements. Neaters, homefasteners, rangers, cowboys for miles around, somehow got wind of it. Saddles were polished, harnesses shined, calicoes washed and ironed, faces scrubbed, Church meeting.

Yancey turned quite naturally to the one shelter in the town adequate to the size of the crowd expected. It was the gambling tent that stood at the far north end of Pawhuska avenue. Sabra waving gayly from its top in the bleak Oklahoma wind. For the men it was the social center of Osage. Faro, stud poker, chuckaluck diverted their minds from the stern business of citizenship and saved them the trouble of counting their ready cash on Saturday night. Sunday was, of course, the great day in the gambling tent. It was a question whether the owner and dealer would be willing to sacrifice any portion of Sunday's bleak trade for the furtherance of the Lord's business, even though the good will of the townspeople were to be gained thereby. After all, he might argue, it was not this element that kept a faro game going.

Yancey, because of his professional position and his well known power to charm, was delegated to confer with that citizen du monde, Mr. Grat Gotch, better known as Arkansas Grat, proprietor and dealer of the gambling tent. A little plump man, Grat, with a round and smiling countenance, strangely unlined. He looked like an old baby.

Yancey ordered his drink and invited Gotch to have one with him. Over the whiskey Yancey put his case. "Listen, Grat. The women folks have got it into their heads that there ought to be a church service Sunday, now that Osage is over a month old, with ten thousand inhabitants, and probably the metropolis of the great Southwest in another ten years. They want the thing done right. I'm chosen to conduct the meeting. There's no building in town big enough to hold the crowd. What I want to know is, can we have the loan of your tent here for about an hour Sunday morning for the purpose of divine worship?"

Arkansas Grat set down his glass, made a sweeping gesture with his right hand that included all that, the tent contained.

"Divine worship! Why, h—, yes, Yancey," he replied, graciously.

They went to work early Sunday. So as not to mar the numbers they covered the faro and roulette tables with twenty-two foot boards. Such of the prospective congregation as came early would use these for seats. There were, too, a few rude benches on which the players usually sat. The remainder must stand. The meeting was to be from eleven to twelve. As early as nine o'clock they began to arrive. They came from lonely cabins, dugouts, tents. Ox carts, wagons, buggies, horsemen, mule teams. They were starting for company. It wasn't religion they sought; it was the situation that comes of meeting their kind in the mass. They brought picnic baskets and boxes, prepared for a holiday.

The town seemed alive with blanketed Indians. They squatted in the shade of the wooden shacks. They walked in from their near-by reservations, or rode their mangy horses, or brought in their entire families—squaw, papoose, two or three children of assorted sizes, dogs.

"Divine Worship! Why, h—, yes, Yancey."

Sabra, seeing them, told herself sternly that she must remember to have a Christian spirit, and they were all God's children; that these red men had been converted. She didn't believe a word of it.

Rangers, storekeepers, settlers, lean squatters with their bony faces and their bare-legged, rickety children, as untamed as little wolves.

Sabra superintended the toilettes of her men folk from Yancey to Isalah. Yancey chided her, laughing. "My good woman, do you realize that this is no way to titillate for the work of delivering the Word of God? Back-cloth and ashes is, I believe, the prescribed costume." He poured and drank down three fingers of whiskey, the third since breakfast.

Cim cavorted excitedly in his best suit, with the bright plaid silk tie and the buttoned shoes, tasseled at the top. The boy, Sabra thought as she dressed him, grew more and more like Yancey, except that he seemed to lack his father's driving force, his ebullience.

Yancey's sure dramatic instinct bade him delay until he could make an effective entrance. A dozen times Sabra called to him, as he sat in the front office busy with paper and pencil. "This was, she decided, his sole preparation for the sermon he would be bound to deliver within the next hour. Later she found in the pocket of his sweeping Prince Albert the piece of paper on which he had made notes. One word he had written on it, and then disgarded it with meaningless marks—but not quite. Sabra, studying the paper after the events of the morning, made out the word "Yousita." At last he was ready. Sabra had put on, not her second-best black gown, but her best, and the hat with the plumes. She and Yancey stopped suddenly down the street, with Cim's warm wringing little fingers in her own clasp. Sabra was a steady stugant little figure in her modish black; Yancey, as always, a dashing one. They went on their way. If occurred neither to Sabra nor to Yancey that there was anything bizarre or even unusual in their thus proceeding, three well-dressed and reasonably conventional figures, toward a gambling tent and saloon which, packed to suffocation with the worst and the best that a frontier town has to offer, was for one short hour to become a House of God.

"Are you nervous, Yancey dear?" "No, sugar. Though I will say I'd fifty times rather plead with a jury of Texas Panhandle cattlemen for the life of a professional horse thief than stand up to preach before this gang of—" He broke off abruptly. "What's everybody laughing at and pointing to?" Certainly passers-by were acting strangely. Instinctively Sabra and Yancey turned to look behind them. Down the street, perhaps fifty paces behind them, came Isalah. He was, strutting in an absurd and yet unmistakably recognizable imitation of Yancey's stride and swing. Around his waist was wound a red calico sash, and over that hung a holstered leather belt so large for his small waist that it hung to his knees and bumped against them at every step. Protruding from the holsters one saw the ugly heads of what seemed at first glance to be two six-shooters, but which turned out, on investigation by the infuriated Mrs. Cravat, to be the household monkey wrench and a bar of ink-soaked iron which went to make up one of the printing shop metal forms. On his head was a battered—ah un-speakable—sombrero which he must have salvaged from the back yard debris. He managed, by the very power of his dramatic gift, to give to the appreciative onlooker a complete picture of Yancey Cravat in ludicrous—in grotesque miniature. He advanced toward them with an appalling imitation of Yancey's stride. Sabra's face went curiously sallow, so that she was, suddenly, Felice Venable, enraged. Yancey gave a great roar of laughter, and at that Sabra's blazing eyes turned from the ludicrous figure of the black boy to her husband. She was literally panting with fury. Her idol, her god, was being mocked.

"You—laugh! . . . Stop. . . ." She went in a kind of swoop of rage toward the now halting figure of Isalah. The black face, all eyes now (and those all whites), looked up at her, startled, terrified. She raised her hand in its neat black kid glove to cuff him smartly. But Yancey was too quick for her. Swiftly as she had swooped upon Isalah, Yancey's leap had been quicker. He caught her hand half way in its descent. His fingers closed round her wrist in an iron grip. "Let me go!" For that instant she hated him.

"If you touch him I swear before God I'll not set foot inside the tent. Look at him!"

The black face gazed up at him. In it was worship, utter devotion. Yancey, himself a born actor, knew that in Isalah's grotesque costume, in his struttings and swaggerings, there had been only that sincerest of flattery, imitation of that which was adored. The eyes were those of a dog, faithful, hurt, bewildered.

Yancey released Sabra's wrist. He turned his brilliant winning smile on Isalah. He put out his hand, removed the many sombrero from the child's head, and let his fine white hand rest a moment on the woolly poll.

Isalah began to blubber, his feight-giving way to injury. "Ah didn't go 'fo' to fret nobody. You-all was dress up fine 'fo' ch'ch meetin' so I craves to dress myself up Sunday style."

"That's right, Isalah. You look finer than any of us. Now listen to me. Do you want a real suit of Sunday clothes?"

The white teeth now vied with the rolling eyes. "Sunday suit 'fo' me to wear? Fo' true?"

"Listen close, Isalah. I want you to do something for me. Something big. I don't want you to go to the church meeting." Then, as the black boy's expressive face, all smiles the instant before, became suddenly doleful:

One night, just before closing up time, Ole Olsen came running into the general store, hatless, coatless and breathless, and dropping on his knees yelled: "Yon, Yon, hide me, hide me! Is sheriff's after me!"

"I've no place to hide ye here, Ole. Yon Yonson, the proprietor, said."

"You moost, you moost," screamed Ole.

"Crawl into that gunny-sack, then," said Yon.

He had no sooner gotten hid than in ran the sheriff. "Seen Ole?" he asked.

"Don't see 'im here," said Yon, without lying.

Then the sheriff went nosing around and pretty soon he spotted the gunny-sack area in the corner. "What's in here?" he asked.

"Oh, jest some old barrels and stapholins," said Yon.

"Isalah, listen hard. This is something important. Everybody in town's at the church meeting. Jessie Rickny's drunk. The house and the newspaper office are left alone. There are people in town who'd sooner set fire to the newspaper plant and the house than see the paper come out on Thursday. I want you to go back to the house and into the kitchen, where you can see the back yard and the side entrance, too. Patrol duty, that's what I'm putting you on."

"Yes, sah, Mr. Yancey!" agreed Isalah. "Patrol." His dejected frame now underwent a transformation as it stiffened to fit the new martial role.

"Now listen close. If anybody comes up to the house—they won't come the front way, but at the back, probably, or the side—you take this—and shoot." He took from beneath the Prince Albert a gun which, well on the left, under the coat, was not visible as were the two six-shooters that he always carried at his belt. It was a six-shooter of the kind known as the single action. The trigger was dead. It was the deadliest of Southwestern weapons, a six-shooter whose hammer, when pulled back by the thumb, would fall again as soon as released. No need for Isalah's small forefinger to wrestle with the trigger.

"Oh, Yancey!" breathed Sabra, in horror. "Yancey! He's a child!" Now it was she who was protecting the black boy from Yancey. Yancey ignored her.

"You remember what I told you last week," he went on, equably. "When we were shooting at the tin can on the fence post in the yard. Do it just as you did it then—draw, aim, and shoot with the one motion!"

"Yes, sah, Mr. Yancey! I kill 'em dead!"

"You'll have a brand-new suit of Sunday clothes next week, remember, and boots to go with it. Now, scout!"

Isalah flashed a brilliant, a glorified smile at Sabra over his shoulder and was off, a ludicrous black Don Quixote.

All Sabra's pleasurable anticipation in the church meeting had fled. "How could you give a gun to a child like that! You'll be giving one to Cim, here, next. Alone in the house, with a gun."

"It isn't loaded. Come on, honey. We're late."

For the first time in their married life she doubted his word absolutely. He strode along towards the tent. She hurried at his side. Cim trotted to keep up with her, his hand in hers.

"What did you mean when you said there were people who would set fire to the house? I never heard of such one . . . or was it an excuse to send Isalah back because of the way he looked?"

"That was it."

For the second time she doubted him. "I don't believe you. There's something going on—something you haven't told me. Yancey, tell me."

"I haven't time now. Don't be foolish. I just don't like the complexion of—I just don't think that maybe this meeting was the idea of somebody who isn't altogether inspired by a desire for a closer communion with God. Just occurred to me. I don't know why. Good joke on me, if it's true."

"I'm not going to the meeting. I'm going back to the house." She was desperate. Her house was burning up. Isalah was being murdered.

"You're coming with me." He rarely used this tone toward her.

"Yancey, Yancey, I'm afraid to have you stand up there, before all those people. I'm afraid. Let's go back. Tell them you're sick. Tell them—"

They had reached the tent. The flap was open. A roar of talk came to them from within. The entrance was packed with lean figures smoking and spitting. "Hi, Yancey! How's the preacher? Where's your Bible, Yancey?"

"Right here, boys." And Yancey reached into the capacious skirt of his Prince Albert to produce in triumph the Word of God. "Come in or stay out, boys. No loafing in the doorway." With Sabra on his arm he marched

To the Home of the Fair . . . So long as tourists visit Verona to see Juliet's tomb, or the Duomo valley to see Lorna's farm, or Kissore to see the grave of Ophelia, so long will tourists go to Perth in Scotland, to its North Fort, and seek the corner of Crawford row and Blackfriars' ward, to visit the house of Katie Glover, the fair maid of Perth, whose Sir Walter Scott made known to all of us. About the only thing that is certain, is that the house did belong to the Grovers, and standing within it, and walking about this part of the old city, it is possible for the lovers of Scott to reconstruct the scenes of the great romance.

through the close-packed tent. "They've saved two seats for you and Cim down front—or should have. Yes, there they are."

Sabra felt faint. She had seen the foxlike face of Lon Xountis in the doorway. "That man," she whispered to Yancey. "He was there. He looked at you as you passed-by—he looked at you so—"

"That's fine, honey. Better than I hoped for. Nothing I like better than to have members of my flock right under my eye."

CHAPTER V

Ranged along the rear of the tent were the Indians—Osages, Poncas, Cherokees, Creeks. They viewed the proceedings impassively, their faces bronze masks in which only the eyes moved. "Later, on their reservations, with no white man to see and hear, they would gossip like fishwives; they would shirk with laughter; they would retail this or that absurdity which, with their own eyes, they had seen the white man perform. They would slip their knees and rock with mirth."

"Great jokers, the Indians," Yancey had once said, offhand, to Sabra. She had felt sure that he was mistaken. They were sullen, taciturn, grave. They did not speak; they grunted. They never laughed.

Holding Cim's hand tightly in her own, Sabra, escorted by Yancey, found that two chairs had been placed for them. Sabra glanced shyly about her. Men—hundreds of men. They were strangely alike, all those faces; young, old, weather-beaten, deeply seamed, and, for the most part, beardless. The Plains had taken them early, had scorched them with her sun, parched them with her drought, buffeted them with her wind, stung them with her dust. Sabra had grown accustomed to these faces during the past two weeks. But the women—she was not prepared for the women. Calico and sunbonnets there were in plenty; but the wives of Osage's citizenry had taken this first opportunity to show what they had in the way of finery. Near Sabra, and occupying one of the seats evidently reserved for persons of distinction, was a woman who must be, Sabra thought, about her own age; perhaps twenty or twenty-one, fair, blue eyed, almost childlike in her girlish simplicity and purity of contour. She was very well dressed in a wine-color silk-wrap henrietta, bustled, very tightly laced, and elaborate with fluting on sleeves and collar. Dress and bonnet were city made and very modish. From Denver, Sabra thought, or Kansas City, or even Chicago. Sabra further decided that the man beside her, who looked old enough to be her father, must be, after all, her husband. It was in the way he spoke to her, gazed at her, touched her. Yancey had pointed him out one day. She remembered his name because it had amused her at the time: Waltz, Evergreen Waltz. He was a notorious Southwest gambler, earned his living by the cards. The girl looked unhappy; and beneath that, rebellious.

Still, the sight of this lovely face, and of the other feminine faces looking out from at least fairly modish and decent straw bonnets and toques, gave Sabra a glow of reassurance. Immediately this was quenched at the late, showy, and dramatic entrance, just before Yancey took his place, of a group of women of whom Sabra had actually been unaware. As a matter of fact, the leader of this spectacular group, had arrived in Osage only the day before, accompanied by a party of six young ladies.

Osage, since that first mad day of its beginning, had had its quota of shabby ladies, but these had been raddled creatures, driftwood from this or that deserted mining camp or abandoned town site, middle aged, unattractive, and doubtless slightly subnormal mentally.

These were different. The leader, a handsome, black-haired woman of not more than twenty-two or -three, had taken for herself and her companions such rooms as they could get in the town. Within an hour it was known that the woman claimed the name of Dixie Lee. That she was a descendant of decayed southern aristocracy. That her blooming companions boasted such fancy names as Cherry de St. Maurice, Carmela Brown, Belle Mansero, and the like. That the woman, shrewd as a man and sharp as a knife, had driven a bargain whereby she was to come into possession, at a stiff price, of the building known as the Elite Rooming House and Cafe, situated at the far end of Pawhuska avenue, near the gambling tent; and that she contemplated building a house of her own, planned for her own peculiar needs, if business warranted. Thus harlotry, heretofore soild enough in a wrapper and curling pins, came to Osage in silks and plumes, with a brain behind it and a promise of prosperity in its gawdy train.

Dixie Lee, shrewd saleswoman, had been quick to learn of Sunday's meeting, and quicker still to see the advantage of this opportunity for a public advertisement of her business. So now, at Osage's first church meeting, she marched the six, with Dixie Lee at their head making a seventh. They rustled in silks. The air of the close-packed tent became as suffocating with scent as a Persian garden at sunset. The hard-working worthy wives of Osage, in their chevrons and their faded bonnets and cotton gloves, suddenly seemed sallow, seaway, and almost spectacularly unattractive.

All this Sabra beheld in a single glance, as did the entire congregation. Yancey, having lifted Cim into the chair next his mother, looked up at the entrance of this splendid procession.

Mental Treatment Best to Overcome Moodiness

One of the commonest faults among modern women is "moodiness," according to a recent psychological study. The psychologists have been seeking a cure for it, and declare that mental treatments, administered by the sufferer herself, give the best results.

"Moodiness is a thing that definitely endangers a woman's happiness," declares Anne Bryan McCall in the "Woman's Home Companion." "It also harms her standing with others and menaces her usefulness. Moody people are untrustworthy and unaccountable to others. They are gay and friendly one day, and the next may be sullen or discouraged, or morose."

"Why do they indulge a characteristic so obviously to their own disadvantage? Almost invariably moodiness is the easy thing, the unadvised thing, the undeveloped thing. If you carry the analysis further, you can hardly fail to see that it is also the primitive thing, the uncivilized thing, the savage thing, as a matter of fact moodiness and unreliability are outstanding traits of savage tribes."

"The person who is still behaving in uncivilized ways, ways of moodiness, is a person who is not keeping up with civilization. This is a person who is taking the easy childish way out. It is the person who is not developing and who no matter how up-to-date she may think she is, is in a profound sense tragically behind the times."

The remedy, according to the psychologists, is for the victim of moodiness to ask herself the following questions every day, and answer them honestly: "How moody have I been today? How savage? How childish? How undeveloped? In short how inferior and backward a person have I been?"

Still Ireland of Old

Ireland after eight years of independence is changed only superficially, writes Alexander J. Reynolds in Current History. The old Bohemian life and social splendor of Dublin has gone with the royal troops and the governing circle.

In the countryside, however, the peasant still blames the government for his misfortune, and it makes little difference that this government is Irish. He still has the same cheerful indifference to the penalties of overbreeding and the same old love for landlordship.

Frontiers disappear, old orders change, rulers die, political creeds vary, funds wax and wane, but certain things abide—the soul of a people whose roots are deep in the soil and form their real anchor.

Act Your Age!

You've seen young men with old faces, and old men with young faces. The men in the latter class have learned the secret of youth.

They know that "pep" and interest in life come from perfect health. Many old men with young faces have told us that Fellows Syrup is their standby. They take it regularly. They wouldn't be without it.

Go to your druggist's today. Get a bottle of this valuable tonic. Take it three times daily, and watch your "pep" return.

FELLOWS' SYRUP

Juvenile Deduction— "Pop, am I human?" "Why, of course you're human." "Well, the hired man said you weren't human, and if you're not I don't suppose I am either."

Lesson for July 19 SOCIAL SERVICE IN THE EARLY CHURCH

LESSON TEXT—Acts 4:32-35; 6:1-4; 13:35-37; II Cor. 9:1-7.

GOLDEN TEXT—I have showed you all things, how that so laboring ye ought to support the weak, and to remember the words of the Lord Jesus, how he said, It is more blessed to give than to receive.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Sharing With Friends.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Sharing With Friends.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Christians Sharing With Others.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Generosity of the Early Christians.

Social service as such was not a department of church activity. However, the early church was most ready to discharge its social obligations. Members of the body of Christ are sympathetically related.

I. Characteristics of the Early Church (Acts 4:31-35).

1. It was a praying church (v. 31).

2. It was a Spirit-filled church (v. 31).

3. It was a church with a bold testimony (v. 31).

4. It was a united church (v. 32).

5. It was a generous church (v. 32).

6. Its ministers had a powerful testimony (v. 33).

7. Its members had an unblemished character (v. 33).

II. Appointment of Deacons (Acts 6:1-4).

1. The occasion (v. 1). The church was threatened with disruption over suspected partiality in the distribution of alms.

2. The issue (v. 2). A congregational meeting was called, the case placed before the church, and the church instructed to select seven men of good report, filled with the Holy Spirit and wisdom to administer the temporalities of the church, leaving the apostles' freedom for prayer and the ministry of God's Word.

3. The ministry of the deacons (v. 3). They looked after the poor, but while distributing alms, they were witnessing for Christ. Social service is a by-product of Christianity and not Christianity itself.

III. The Raising of Dorcas (Acts 9:36-42).

1. Her ministry (v. 36 Cf. v. 39). Her life was full of good works, such as making coats and garments for the poor. Her noble ministry has set in motion countless numbers of needles, and has given incentive to many noble women to follow her example.

2. Her death (v. 37). In the midst of a life full of good works she was overtaken by death.

3. Peter sent for (v. 38). In their distress the disciples sent two men urgently to request Peter to come to them. Having heard of the healing of Aeneas at Lydda, which was near, they no doubt believed that he could restore Dorcas to life.

4. Dorcas raised (v. 39-41). In answer to Peter's prayer Dorcas was "presented alive to the saints and widows."

5. The effect (v. 42). So astounding was this miracle that "many believed in the Lord."

IV. Ministering to the Saints (II Cor. 9:1-7).

1. The saints in need were Christians at Jerusalem. Many were impoverished because of embracing Christianity. Sending money to the saints at Jerusalem was an expression of affection on the part of these Gentile Christians for the Jews. As an incentive to giving Paul shows:

1. That the volume of reaping is based upon the volume of sowing (v. 6).

2. There should be a heart purpose (v. 7). This calls for intelligence as to the object in giving.

3. Giving should not be of necessity (v. 7). No particular value accrues to the giver who only responds under pressure.

4. God loves a cheerful giver (v. 7). Right understanding of responsibility toward God with reference to temporal possessions will make giving a glorious privilege.

All Who Come Christ saileth unto the uttermost all who come unto God by him; and it is best to leave Christ to determine where the uttermost lies. What is impossible with men is easy to omnipotent grace.—W. L. Watkinson.

As the Angels Give If instead of a gem or even a tower, we could cast the gift of a lovely thought in the heart of a friend, that would be giving at the angels give.—George MacDonald.

Scraps of Humor

PRETTY APOLOGY

Coleridge, whenever he read a book, would write in the margin any thought that might occur to him.

In one of the books which he borrowed from Charles Lamb (a copy of Donne's poems) appears this glimmer, at least, of conscience:

"I shall die soon, my dear Charles Lamb, and then you will not be angry that I have scribbled your book."—Golden Book Magazine.

"Did you ever watch a man propose?" asked Miss Cayenne.

"Then you don't realize that a feminine appreciation of the humorous would overcrowd the world with splinters."—Washington Star.

An Old Trick

A bridegroom of seventy-five, marrying his third wife, was called upon to sign the register.

The pen was a bad one, and, after making several attempts to sign, he said to the clerk:

"This is the third or fourth time you've played me this trick. Next time I'll bring my fountain pen!"

Real One

"Pa," said the kid, "what is a financial wizard?"

"He's a married man, son, who doesn't have to buy his Friday lunch and pay for his carfare home with borrowed money," replied his dad.

Two Extremes

Daughter—So you don't like Jim? Father—No; he appears capable of nothing.

"Well, what objection have you to George?"

"Oh, he's worse than Jim! He strikes me as being capable of anything."

ALL GOOD POINTS

"Mr. Porcupine is a wonderful fellow, isn't he?"

"You're right! He hasn't a single weak point."

Change at Last "John, my uncle has left us $25,000."

"Good, now you may learn to drive the car, if you wish."

A Gift "I regard conversation as a gift," remarked the studious woman.

"It usually is," replied Miss Cayenne, "if people had to pay for it there would be much less of it."—Washington Star.

That Guffy Feeling "My dear, that gown is perfectly stunning! Does your husband know you've bought it?"

"Well, he stayed out all night. He knows I've bought something."

Repairing Damage Done by Beavers

Skinner's Grocery

WHERE do we go From Here? This question has been asked and answered many times in the many ages and it is still used.

THE Wise Housewife asks herself this question before she goes to order her groceries—"Where do I go from here?" The answer to her own question is very easily made, when she knows just where to go.

JUST where to go, is where she can save the most on her purchases and you can't fool her. She knows that in trading at Skinner's, she can figure up the savings she has made and that is just what we are all trying to do.

THEN, when you are in need of groceries, just ask yourself "where do I go from here?" And the answer will be, of course, "to the place where I can save pennies, nickles and dimes," which will furnish a nice little amount of pin money. Anyhow, it will take the kids to the Lyric Theatre.

"You be the Judge!"

FUNDS FOR HOMES SUPPLIED BY BANKS

By ROME C. STEPHENSON
President American Bankers Association

A LARGE portion of the funds required in home building always has been furnished by banks. They have shown constantly a deep interest in the performance of this feature of national development. Upon it rests much of our country's future stability, and any contribution to its advancement redounds to the advantage of all. So banking has never permitted its co-operative attitude toward home building to lessen.

Practically all banks now accept savings deposits which can well be turned to the advantage of the home builders. The construction of individual dwellings requires a large amount of financing and is a thoroughly commendable enterprise. Necessarily, the aid given to home builders is governed by the sound banking rules which have grown out of the years of experience and the constant studies of bank practices. All of the efforts made to secure broader real estate loan privileges, to adjust resources to make it possible to lend larger sums for long terms, the standardization of mortgage loan formulas, and the actual lending of vast sums on mortgage notes evidence the desire of banks to contribute a full measure of support to the home-building movement. This is true of all classes of banks, but even in a more marked degree of those whose deposits are largely in the form of savings and whose loans are primarily for building or home purchasing purposes.

Both Sides Protected
The process through which bank loans are made on real estate is as simple as the nature of such an important transaction will permit. When money is advanced the lender must know that repayment will be made the specified time. Likewise the borrower wants to be assured that, after he has figured the loan on the basis of his conservatively anticipated ability to pay, he will not be required to do more, that he will not be disturbed in his efforts to work out of his obligations under those terms. Whether his agreement is to repay the entire loan in three or five years, or on a monthly or yearly basis, he wants the assurance that no additional burdens will be imposed upon him. All of this is settled definitely in advance.

There is no mystery about any of the details, and when the negotiations are complete the borrower knows just what he may expect and what he will be required to do to meet his obligations. Loans made to persons who wish to acquire homes are not necessarily building loans. One may wish to purchase a home already constructed. In this form of transaction bank loans are used very freely because it is the only kind of a real estate loan some classes of banks may make. Others, of course, may lend upon real estate with improvements uncompleted and advance funds as the construction progresses. Different styles in home financing have developed in the various states, and banks have tried to adapt their facilities to the needs. Whatever character of assistance is required in any particular instance usually can be found in some bank in the local community.

Among banks and borrowers for home acquisition purposes a long established and thoroughly tested relationship exists. Banks are not the only agencies through which such funds are available; they do not embody all the spirit of helpfulness which abounds. However, through the years of their co-operation their aid has been unquestioned value to the home builders whose efforts to establish a permanence for themselves have received constant encouragement. Bankers everywhere are ready to counsel with their customers about their home-building plans and to assist to the extent of their ability. This is being done constantly and the many advantages of it are not without recognition.

Farm Service by a Bank

A farm service department was inaugurated a year ago by a bank in Olympia, Washington, and a farm advisor appointed. Close cooperation has been maintained with the state college extension service. Work in dairying is carried on in connection with the Dairy Herd Improvement Association. Also a business contact was held in cooperation with the four banks in the county which offered prizes amounting to $100. Work in the country was carried on in cooperation with the Co-operative Poultry Association and assistance was given in organizing an economic conference for the benefit of berry growers. The farm advisor of the bank is active in the Agricultural Council of the county composed of farm and other organizations interested in agricultural development, and also in the Farmers' Market. Six hundred farm business analysis blanks were distributed while farm account books and poultry record books were also provided to farmers and have been helpful in starting many farmers in keeping business records.

CARRIZOZO AUTO CO.

Juan and Enrique Otero were here from Capitan Sunday on business. These boys are connected with their brother, Jose Otero, in the sheep business, but now that the lambing season is over, they have contracted to haul the winter supply of fuel from Capitan to Fort Stanton. The boys consigned a fine shipment of wool to a Boston market last week, for which they expect the maximum price.

This office is in receipt of word from Miss Stella Vaughan, who is a delegate from New Mexico representing the Sigma Sigma Sorority of Las Vegas. Miss Stella is now in Mackinac Island, northern Michigan. She says the island is more beautiful than she had hoped. Miss Vaughan wishes to be remembered to her many Carrizozo friends.

Hilario Mace was here from Lincoln Monday on business.

A usual summer sight—Caretaker Joe (again?) Navarro of the S. P. Club House, forever watering and beautifying the lawn of that popular place—one of the coolest and most comfortable spots in town. And believe us, Joe's untiring efforts have made that place what it is today.
