

ANCHO NOTES

Elvin Harkey went to Tucumcari to relieve 3rd truck operator Reed at that place for one night. On his return, he visited his old headquarters at Santa Rosa. During his absence, Mrs. Harkey and children were with her mother, Mrs. J. W. Robinson at Alto.

Mr. and Mrs. Homer Carter, who were enroute to Hot Springs from Dallas, stopped over here last week to visit friends and relatives. Homer spent his boyhood days in Ancho, having left here in 1917 and this was his first trip back here. He is a grandson of Frank Thompson and a nephew of Mrs. H. W. McMillan.

Cody Smallridge is home after spending several weeks in Clarkburg, West Virginia.

Miss Mary Louise Hall was hostess at a delightful affair last Saturday evening when she entertained a group of friends at her home. Games were indulged in until a late hour, after which refreshments were served.

Sunday evening, the Frame family motored out to Jicarilla where they spent a very pleasant evening with their friends, Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Gipson and Messrs. Ozane and Bridges.

Mr. Gipson is in charge of the government road being built through the forest between Ancho and White Oaks, while Messrs. Ozane and Bridges are rehabilitating the old Ozane home on the mountain side above Jicarilla from which a marvelous view is obtained.

Allen Kile was home Saturday. He and Jim Dale left Sunday morning for points in Arizona where they are employed by the S. P. Company.

Mr. and Mrs. S. J. Pruett spent Sunday near Nogal as guests of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Pfingsten.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Silvers were down from Duran Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Reynolds returned to Luna last week, and left immediately for Tucumcari to attend the funeral of Henry Hatcher.

Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Barnes entertained quite delightfully last Saturday with a dancing party at their home west of Ancho. Music was furnished by Messrs. Dragoo, Hobbs and Barnes. Dainty refreshments were served to a large number of guests, who at their departure, assured the hosts it was a gala affair.

Mr. and Mrs. Bob Hale will entertain with a dance in Ancho, Saturday, October 3rd.

The Woman's Club held its regular meeting at the home of Mrs. H. M. Bullard where meetings are always enjoyed to the fullest extent. Roll call was responded to by "One Use of Glass." Mrs. S. J. Pruett, president, read a splendid article on how glass was first discovered. After a brief business session, Mrs. J. E. Frame took charge of Word Study which brought forth some interesting discussions. This was followed by a pencil game in which each one was to write down the greatest number of uses of glass in ten minutes. This was in timely conjunction with roll call mentioned above. Mrs. B. W. Wilson won first prize and boobies going to Mmes. Drake, Henderson and Miss June Caldwell.

Delicious refreshments consisting of chicken sandwiches, cream pie and coffee were served. On each refreshment plate,

NOGAL NEWS

Mrs. Pond and son of Carlsbad were here last week visiting Mrs. Pond's daughter, Mrs. Gault at the Mesa Ranger Station. While here, they bought some nice peaches from J. J. May to take home for canning and preserving.

NOTICE—Hunters, I have a good 25-35 Winchester for sale. Practically new and very cheap. —See Jesse J. May, Nogal.

Marvin Peacock and family made a trip to Roswell Saturday where after a brief visit with relatives, they went on to Hagerman. On their return trip, they were accompanied by Marvin's brother Jesse and family, who will probably remain here for the bear chase which began yesterday, October 1.

Paul Vandergriff, wife and his wife's mother made a flying trip to Artesia Sunday. Mr. Vandergriff going after his carpenter tools, as he has been promised a job on the Ft. Stanton water line.

M. G. Zumwalt moved his cattle from the Mesa to a lower altitude. M. G. has a nice herd of well-bred cattle.

A large crowd enjoyed the dance Saturday night. After the affair, a few amateur actors began a rehearsal of the olden "wild and woolly west" days, but Sheriff Brady soon cooled them down.

The heavy rain Sunday, checked the pinon pickers considerably.

Marvin Peacock, who has been bothered with tonsillitis for the past two months, left Thursday for San Francisco for treatment. He was accompanied by his wife.

Gandhi Tells Round-Table Conference India Must Have Self-Government—Progress in Plans for Relief.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

MAHATMA GANDHI, clad only in his loin cloth and a white robe, and constantly sipping goat's milk from a vacuum bottle, was the outstanding figure in the round-table conference on the status of India which got under way in St. James' palace in London. On the opening day he spoke no word, because it was his weekly day of silence, but in the evening, his period of silence having ended, he made this rather pessimistic statement:

"If our hopes and fears are weighed in the balance, I am afraid our fears will far outweigh our hopes. But it is too early to make predictions. We ought to be able to say a week hence whether our hopes ultimately will outweigh our fears. At present everything is in the lap of the gods."

He had listened to flowery and hopeful speeches by Lord Banbury, chairman of the federal structures committee, and several others, including Indian potentates, but he seemed bored and unimpressed.

Next day, however, the mahatma was free to speak, and speak he did, letting the British know that the minimum demand he, as authorized by the All India National Congress, is empowered to make in undivided self-government for India. He wanted the British to let him know very soon whether this would be granted, and was willing to let other minds work out the details. But if the answer was to be "No," he wished to return speedily to India and resume there his revolutionary movement. The queer looking little Hindu leader did not say this quite so bluntly as it is written, but there was no mistaking his meaning, for he is always unafraid to speak frankly.

India, he said, was willing to remain a partner in the British empire, but that partnership must be such that it may be terminated at the will of either party.

"If God will," he said, "it will be a permanent partnership, but at the same time, the right to terminate the association will constitute a real test of the equality of position enjoyed by both partners."

There was a time when I was proud of being called a British subject but many years ago I stopped calling myself a British subject. I would far rather be called a rebel than a subject, but I still aspire to be a citizen, not of an empire, but of a commonwealth in partnership.

"Not a partnership superimposed by one nation upon another, but a partnership of mutual agreement. In such a partnership India will be ready to share Great Britain's misfortunes, and if necessary, to fight side by side with Great Britain, not for exploitation of any race or any person but conceivably for the good of the whole world."

The dominance of the conservatives in both the present cabinet and the house of commons makes it likely that the opposition to India's demands will be stronger than when the round table first met last winter. The Tories have reiterated their position against those demands. It seemed certain that the debate would be long drawn out and probably at times acrimonious.

The federal structures committee, ignoring Gandhi's desire to have a decision on the general question of self rule first, went ahead with the working-out-of-details.

employment for more than 1,000,000 persons, besides providing a market for farm produce.

TWELVE eminent bankers, representing as many federal reserve districts, were Mr. Hoover's guests at dinner and for two or three hours they set before the President the conditions in their respective regions. It was said at the White House that each banker had assured the President his district would be able to assume the unemployment relief burden this winter without federal aid.

The bankers were: Herbert K. Hall of Boston, R. H. Treman of Pittsburg, N. Y.; Howard A. Leob, Philadelphia; J. A. House, Cleveland; John Poole, Washington; John K. Ottley, Atlanta; Melvin A. Traylor, Chicago; Walter W. Smith, St. Louis; George H. Prince, St. Paul; Walter S. McCue, Kansas City; Henry M. Robinson, Los Angeles, and Walter Lichtenstein of Chicago.

IF DISTRESS during the coming winter can be relieved through the appointment and the labor of leading citizens on committees, it certainly will be relieved. Director Gifford has just named a large committee of distinguished men and women whose duty it will be to mobilize national associations for the task. The chairman of this body is Dr. Elliot Wadsworth of Boston, who used to be an assistant secretary of the treasury and who is known for his excellent public service in connection with the Red Cross. He already is busy at the headquarters in Washington.

Doctor Wadsworth's fellow members include: William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor; John Barton Payne, chairman of the American Red Cross; Matthew Sloan, president of the New York Edison company; Silas H. Strawn, president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States; Colonel Arthur Woods, of New York, who was chairman of Mr. Hoover's relief organization last year, and R. H. Ashton, Washington; Martin H. Carmody, Grand Rapids, Mich.; James C. Drolin, Spokane, Wash.; Dr. John W. Davis, Institute, W. Va.; John E. Edgerton, Lebanon, Tenn.; Dr. Lillian Gilbreth, Montclair, N. J.; C. E. Grankey, San Francisco, Calif.; A. Johnson, Washington; Alvan Macauley, Detroit, Mich.; John H. Mott, New York City; Hubert A. H. Silver, Cleveland, Ohio; Mrs. John F. Sippel, Washington; George Sloan, New York City; Mrs. Robert E. Speer, New York City; J. J. Taber, Columbus, Ohio; George E. Vincent, Greenwich, Conn.; and William Allen White, Emporia, Kan.

GEN. JOHN J. PERSHING went out to Lincoln, Neb., to spend his seventy-first birthday anniversary with his sister, Miss May Pershing, and his son, Warren. He planned to remain there for three weeks, resting from his labors as head of the American monuments commission which have taken him on extensive travels. As always when he is in Lincoln, he declined to make any public appearances or statements or even to give interviews. But he chatted every day with his old friends and thoroughly enjoyed his rest with his informality.

One remark the general dropped was quoted by the press. "There's nothing vitally wrong with the country," he said. "Anyone who says we're on the rocks doesn't know his country. We'll come out of it. The depression can't last."

AVIAION news was a mixture of good and bad. Don Moyle and C. A. Allen, who started a flight from Tokyo across the Pacific and were missing for nine days, were found alive and safe on an island off the coast of Kamohatka. Three passengers and a pilot died when a plane fell into the sea at Oakland, Calif.; and a navy plane carrying supplies to stricken Belize crashed, killing an officer and two enlisted men. Wreckage of a monoplane found near the Sheridan Islands was identified as the plane in which Parker Cramer and Oliver Paquette were trying to fly to Copenhagen. At this writing there is no word of the fate of Redy, Johansen and Vega who, flying from Portugal to New York, vanished off the Nova Scotia coast.

ON ITS second reading in the house of commons the British government's economy bill, authorizing the use of orders in council to effect savings of $300,000,000 in administrative expenditures, was approved by a vote of 319 to 134—a majority for the government of 185. The division came after a long debate on proposals to reduce by 30 per cent the dole and salaries and costs of social services.

Prime Minister MacDonald has appointed a cabinet committee to investigate Great Britain's adverse trade balance, and many think this means the government has decided to adopt a tariff policy. The London Daily Mail says there is a strong opinion in parliament that a general tariff of 20 per cent on all classes of foreign imports will ultimately be adopted without an electoral appeal to the country. The Laborite Herald, however, contends that a tariff cannot be imposed until the electorate has been consulted and hints that a general election is impending.

One immediate result of the wage cuts instituted by the government was a threat of mutiny among the navy men of the lower rating. The admiralty, admitting there was serious "unrest," suspended the program of exercises of the fleet in the North sea and started an inquiry.

Corn That Resists Attack of Frosts

Experiments Prove Rich Soil Increases the Vitality of the Plant.

Just as a well-fed man is better able to withstand the rigors of cold weather, so corn which has received an abundance of plant food is better able than poorly nourished corn to withstand frost attacks, both in the late spring and early fall, agronomists of the United States Department of Agriculture have found.

Department plant breeders, studied the question at Bloomington, Ill., in the corn belt during the last three years. They produced frost with a portable refrigeration plant which was used in different parts of the corn plot.

The results of the experiments suggest that farmers may minimize or avoid frost danger to their corn by growing it in fields that have been fertilized or are naturally rich in plant food.

Corn was planted in 1930 on land plowed from virgin sod in the fall of 1929 and also on soil which had been plowed from virgin sod in 1921 and cropped continuously since. Corn grown on the "new" ground was much more resistant to the frost than that grown on the older land.

While testing corn on cropped and on new soil, the agronomists also experimented with fertilizer in varying amounts on the old soil. Plants growing in fertilized soil showed more resistance to frost than those growing in untreated soil. Young plants of a cold-susceptible strain in untreated soil were killed in a few minutes at a temperature of 33 degrees to 34 degrees F., whereas plants of the same strain grown in a fertilized hill showed no ill effect from four hours of exposure to a 30 degree temperature.

Fall tests gave much the same results. In one instance, approximately 50 plants were subjected to a temperature of 26 degrees to 27 degrees for two hours. Half of them were on fall soil and the remainder on soil capable of producing 15 bushels more to the acre. The test was made about the middle of September when the kernels were about four-fifths matured. Following exposure to the cold, neither set of plants showed any noticeable injury. When the crop was ripe, however, the corn on the poorer soil had failed to mature completely, while that on the richer soil had matured naturally and fully.

Good Season to Market Farm Grain on the Hoof

This is a season when farmers may well plan to market as much as possible of their grain and hay on the hoof. Current market prices are not such as to encourage the sale of wheat and small grains.

The man who wishes to get the most out of grain as feed will find it profitable to grind it. Grinding increases the digestibility. It has been said by experienced men that a feed grinder should pay for itself the first year, through the extra profits obtained because of grinding the feed. However that may be, this is a year when we do think farmers should feed their low-priced grains and prepare them for feeding so as to get their greatest nutritive value.—Indiana Farmer's Guide.

Sun for the Pig's House

The pig's house should be built so as to permit the greatest benefit from the sun's rays at farrowing time. This means that the angle of the roof containing glass to permit admission of sunlight would be different for February farrowing from that at the April farrowing. In planning a new hog house, therefore, consideration should be given the appropriate farrowing date of spring litters.

A permanent hog house should not be used unless it contains a floor that can be thoroughly cleaned before farrowing time. Pigs farrowed on worm-infested earth floors are seldom profitable. Concrete floors are seldom profitable. Concrete floors are seldom profitable. Concrete floors are seldom profitable. Concrete floors are seldom profitable.

Less Barn Feeding

At the pasture day at the Massachusetts Agricultural college, Clarence Parsons, superintendent of the college farm, stated that whereas the usual practice at the college had been to feed about one pound of grain to each three pounds of milk, he has this year reduced grain feeding to 125 pounds of 12 per cent protein grain for a total production of 900 pounds of milk without any apparent shrinkage in either production or feed. The station has under way several feeding tests in connection with intensive pasture.

They Liked Wheat

Illinois farmers fed wheat last year with splendid results, according to E. T. Robbins, University of Illinois. Of 33 men who kept feeding records on their hogs for Robbins, 23 reported good success, equal to corn and seven said it was as good or better than corn. Feeders can afford to pay the same price for wheat that they would have to pay for corn as the wheat is worth enough more to pay for grinding or cracking, Robbins believes.—Frankie Farmer.

Lesson for October 4 THE MACEDONIAN CALL

GOLDEN TEXT—Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost.

LESSON TEXT—Acts 15:26-16:15; Romans 15:18-21.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Paul Takes the Gospel to Other Lands.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Paul Takes the Gospel to Europe.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—How Christianity Came to Europe.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—What Took Paul to Europe.

1. Finding an Assistant for Paul (Acts 15:35-16:5).

a. Contention over John Mark (vv. 30-41).

b. Paul's proposal (v. 36). This was to revisit the scenes of their missionary endeavor to find out what progress the believers were making in their Christian life.

c. Determination of Barnabas (v. 37). This was to take with them John Mark. Mark was Barnabas' nephew (Col. 4:10).

d. Paul's opposition (v. 38). He was suspicious of Mark because of his desertion on the first journey (Acts 13:13).

e. Their separation (vv. 39-41). Their contention was so sharp that they separated. Paul's leadership under God in the evangelization of the world presumably entitles him to a clearer understanding of Mark. Mark should have another chance, but Paul's very sternness brought him to his senses. God overruled this incident to the wider extension of the work. Barnabas took Mark and sailed to Cyprus. Paul chose Silas.

2. Finding Timothy (16:1-5).

a. The place (v. 1). It was the very place where Paul on his first journey had endured cruel stoning. The conversation of this young man may be regarded as fruitage of his testimony at that time.

b. His parentage (v. 1). His mother was a believing Jewess and his father a Greek.

c. His character (v. 2). He had a good reputation in the church at Lystra and Iconium.

d. His circumcision (v. 3). Timothy had not been circumcised, doubtless because his father was a Gentile. In order to avoid offense among the Jews, Paul circumcised him.

e. The ministry of Paul and Timothy through the cities (vv. 4, 5). They went through the cities and delivered the decrees which had been ordained at the Jerusalem council (Acts 15:10-24).

f. Forbidden to Preach the Word in Asia (16:6-8).

The inclination of Paul was to tarry in Asia Minor preaching the word, but contrary to this inclination they were hurried along. We have here a fine example of divine guidance. The Holy Spirit is just as active and faithful in closing as in opening doors.

III. The Call to Macedonia (vv. 9-12).

The time had now come for the gospel to begin its conquest of another continent. The crossing of the gospel from Asia to Europe determined the entire history of the Church.

1. The vision (v. 9). Being hemmed in on all sides, a vision was given to Paul of a man of Macedonia pleading for help. This made clear to him the meaning of the closed doors.

2. The advance (vv. 10-12). As soon as the divine way was known, they moved forward. Visions must be quickly translated into aggressive action, or they are blotted from our skies.

IV. The First Convert in Europe (vv. 13-15).

The devout people were accustomed to worship at the riverside. To a humble gathering of this kind Paul came and preached. Lydia, a business woman from Thyatira, believed his message and was baptized. The steps in her conversion are worthy of note for they are typical.

1. Attendance at the place of worship (v. 13).

2. Listened to the preaching of the word of God (vv. 13, 14). The instrument used in the conversation of sinners is the word of God (Romans 10:17).

3. Her heart was opened by the Lord (v. 14).

4. She was baptized (v. 15). Everyone whose heart the Lord opens desires to confess him in baptism.

5. Her household believed (v. 15), and immediately proffered hospitality to those who had brought blessing to them.

V. Preaching the Gospel Where Christ Was Not Named (Rom. 15:18-21). This was Paul's missionary program. As the apostle to the Gentiles, his work was to be on an independent basis.

Upon Your Knees

A marble-cutter, with chisel and hammer, was chiseling a stone into a statue. A preacher looking on, said: "I wish I could deal such chiseling blows on stony hearts." The workman made answer: "Maybe you could, if you worked like me, upon your knees."—Contributed by Veris M. Naylor.

"Some day," said Osage, over his afternoon paper, "somebody is going to come along and shoot old Cimarron."

"I should think his wife would save them the trouble," some one suggested. If Yancey's sporadic contributions increased the paper's circulation it was Sabra's steady drive that maintained it. It was a gigantic task to keep up with the changes that were sweeping over Osage and all of Oklahoma. Yet the columns of the Wigwam recorded these changes in its news columns, in its editorial pages, in its personal and local items and its advertisements, as faithfully as on the day of its first issue when Yancey had told them who killed Pegler. Perhaps it was because Sabra, even during Yancey's many absences, felt that the paper must be prepared any day to meet his scathing eye.

Strange items began to appear daily in the paper's columns—strange to the eye not interested in oil; but there was no such eye in Oklahoma, nor, for that matter, in the whole Southwest. Cryptic though these items might be to dwellers in other parts of the United States, they were of more absorbing interest to Oklahomans than front-page stories of war, romance, intrigue, royalty, crime.

"Indian Territory Illuminating Oil company swabbed 42 barrels in its No. 2 Lizzie in the northwest corner of the southwest of the northwest of 11-2-6 after having plugged back to 4,268 feet, and shooting with 52 quarts.

"The wildest test of McComb two miles north of Kewoka which is No. 1 Sutton in the southwest corner of the southeast of the northeast of 35-2-9 was given a shot of 103 quarts in the sand from 1,867 feet, and hole bridged. As it stands it is estimated good for 450 barrels daily."

The paper's ads reflected the change. The old ivory stable, with its bugles and phaetons, its plugs to be fixed, its tobacco-chewing loungers, its odor of straw, manure, and axle grease, was swept away, and in its place was Fink's Garage and Auto Livery. Repairs of All Kinds. Buy a Stinson Sallent Six. The smell of gasoline, the hiss of the hose, lean young lads with grease-grimed fingers, engine wise.

Come to the Chamber of Commerce Diner. The Oklahoma City College and Glee Club will sing.

Osage began to travel, to see the world. Their wanderings were no longer local. Where, two years ago, you read that Dr. and Mrs. Florence McGill are up from Concho to do their Christmas buying, you now saw that Mr. and Mrs. W. Fletcher Busby have left for a trip to Europe, Egypt, and the Holy Land. You knew that old Wick Busby had made his pile in oil and that Nettie Busby was out to see the world.

Most astounding of all were the Indian items, for now the Oklahoma Wigwam and every other paper in the country regularly ran news about those incredible people who in one short year had leaped from the Neolithic age to Broadway.

The Osage Indians, a little more than two thousand in number, who but yesterday were a ragged, half-fed and listless band, squatting wretchedly on the reservation allotted them, waiting until time, sickness, and misery should blot them forever from the land, were now, by a miracle of nature, the richest nation in the world. The barren ground on which they had lived now yielded the most lavish oil flow in the state. Yancey Cravat's news story and editorial had been copied and read all over the country. A stunned government tried to bring order out of chaos of riches. The two thousand Osages were swept off the reservation to make way for the flood of oil that was transmuted into a flood of gold.

They were transported to a new section called Wazhazhe, which is the ancient Indian word for Osage.

Agents appointed. Offices established. Millions of barrels of oil, millions of dollars, millions of dollars yearly to be divided somehow among two thousand Osage Indians, to whom a blanket, a bowl of sofeca, a many pony, a bit of tobacco, a disk of peyote had meant riches. And now every full blood, half blood, or quarter blood Osage was put on the Indian roll, and every name on the Indian roll was entitled to a head right. Every head right meant a definite share in the million. Five in a family—five head rights. Ten in a family—ten head rights. The Indian agent's office was full of typewriters, files, pads, ledgers, neat young clerks all occupied with papers and documents that read like some fantastic nightmare. The white man's eye, traveling down the tidy list, with its story-book Indian names and initials, hard, cold, matter-of-fact figures, rejected what it read as being too absurd for the mind to grasp.

Clint Tall Meat, $323,000.
Benny Warrior, $102,000.
He is at se. $235,887.
Long Foot Magpie, $387,942.

The government bought them farms with their own oil money, and built big red brick houses near the roadside and furnished them in plush and placid and linoleum and gas ranges and phonographs. You saw their powerful motor cars, dust covered, whirling up and down the red clay Oklahoma roads—those roads still rutted, unpaved, hazardous, for Oklahoma had had no time to attend to such matters. Fifty years before, while bands of Osages on their wiry little ponies had traveled south in the winter and north in the summer to visit their Indian cousins. Later, huddled miserably on their reservation, they had leaped forth on foot or in wretched wagons to pay their seasonal visits and to try to recapture, by talk and song and dances and ritual, some pale ghost of their departed happiness. A shabby enough procession, guarded, furtive, smoldering.

But now you saw each Osage buck in his high-powered car, his inept hands grasping the wheel, his enormous sombrero—larger even than the white man's hat—flapping in the breeze, that he made by his speed. In the back you saw the brilliance of feathers and blankets worn by the beady-eyed children and the great placid squaw crouched in the bottom of the car. The white man driving the same road gave these Indian cars a wide berth, for he knew they stopped for no one, kept the middle of the road, flew over bridges, draws, and ditches like mad things.

Grudgingly, for she still despised them, Sabra Cravat devoted a page of the Wigwam to news of the Osages, those moneyed, petted wards of a bewildered government. The page appeared under the title of Indian News, and its contents were more than tinged with the grotesque.

The Osages were Wigwam subscribers. They read the paper, or had it read to them if they were of the older and less literate generation. Sabra was accustomed to seeing the doorway suddenly darkened by a huge blanketed form or to look up, startled, to behold the brilliant striped figure standing beside her desk in the business office. If Yancey chanced to be in the occasion became very social.

"How!"
"How!"
"Want um paper?"
"All right, Short Tooth. Five dollars."

The blanketed figure would produce a wallet whose checks were plump to bursting with round silver dollars, for the Osage loved the sound and feel of the bright metal disks. Down on the desk they clanked.

The huge Osage stood then, waiting. Yancey knew what was wanted, as did Sabra.

"No want see iron man. Make um home."

Whereupon Yancey or Sabra would conduct the visitor into the composing room. There were three linotype machines now, clanking and chattering away. Once Yancey had taken old Big Elk, Ruby's father, back there to see how the linotype turned liquid lead into printed words. He had had Jesse Riecke, at the linotype's keyboard, turn out old Big Elk's name in the form of a neat metal bar, together with the paper slip of its imprint.

There was no stopping it. The story of the iron monster that could talk and write and move spread like a prairie fire through Wazhazhe. Whole families subscribed separately for the Oklahoma Wigwam—bucks, squaws, girls, boys, papooses in arms. The iron monster had for them a fascination that was a mingling of admiration, awe, and fear. It was useless to explain that they need not take out a subscription in order to own one of these coveted metal bars. It had been done once. They always would do it that way. Sabra, if she happened to be in charge, always gave the five dollars to her pet charity, after trying in vain to refuse it when proffered. Yancey took it cheerfully and treated the boys at the new Sunny South saloon, now a thing of splendor with its mahogany bar, its brass rail, its mirror, chandeliers, and flesh-tinted oil paintings.

The Levy Mercantile company had added a fancy grocery and market department to its three-story brick store. It was situated on the street floor and enhanced with a great plate-glass window. In this window Sol displayed a mouth-watering assortment of foods. Juicy white stalks of asparagus in glass, as large around as a man's two thumbs; great ripe olives, their purple-black cheeks glistening with oil; lobster, mushrooms, French peas, marinated, mountainous golden cheeses, tender broilers, peaches in syrup, pork roasts dressed in frills. Dozens of chickens, pounds of pork, baskets of delicacies were piled in the cars of homeward bound Osages. Often, when the food bills mounted too high, the Indian agent at Wazhazhe threatened to let the bill go unpaid. He alone had the power to check the outpouring of Indian gold, and even he frequently was unable to cope with their mad extravagances.

"It's disgusting," Sabra Cravat said, again and again. "What are they good for? What earthly good are they? Ignorant savages who do nothing but eat and sleep and drive around in their ridiculous huge automobiles." "Keep money in circulation," Sol Levy replied, for she often took him to task after seeing a line of Indian cars parked outside the Osage Mercantile company's store.

"You ought to be ashamed of yourself."

"Now, now, Sabra. Not so grand, please. I don't do like dozens of other merchants here in town. Make out bills for goods they haven't bought and give them the money. Or charge them double on the bill that the Indian agent sees, and return them the over-charge. They come in my store, they pay what the article is marked, and they get what they pay for. Inez Bull comes in and gets a silk step-in, or Sun Maker he buys twelve pounds of chicken and ten pounds of pork. I should tell them they can't have it! Let the President of the United States do it. The Big White Father."

Not only did Yancey agree with Sol, he seemed to find enormous satisfaction in the lavishness with which they spent their oil money; in the very absurdity of the things they bought.

Donna came home from a bridge party one afternoon, the creamy Venetian pallor showing the Marcy tinge of ocherous rage. She burst in upon Sabra, home from the office.

"Do you know that Cim spends his time at the Big Elks' when we think he's out in the oil fields?"

Sabra met this as calmly as might be. "He's working near there. He told me he had seen them."

"Seen them? That miserable Gazelle Slaughter said that he's out there all the time. All the time, I tell you, and that he and Ruby drive around in her car, and he eats with them, he stays there, he—"

"I'll speak to your father. Cim's coming home Saturday. Gazelle is angry at Cim, you know that, because he won't notice her and she likes him."

She turned her clear appraising gaze upon this strange daughter of hers. She thought, suddenly, that Donna was like a cobra, with that sleek black head, that cold and slanting eye, that long creamy throat in which a pulse sometimes could be seen to beat and swell a little—the only sign of emotion in this baffling creature.

"I'll tell you what, Donna. If you'd pay a little less attention to your brother's social lapses and a little more to your own vulgar conduct, perhaps it would be better."

Donna bestowed her rare and brilliant smile upon her forthright mother. "Now, now, darling! I suppose I say, 'What do you mean?' And you say, 'You know very well what I mean.'"

"You certainly do know what I mean. If you weren't my own daughter I'd say your conduct with Tracy Wyatt was that of a—"

"Harlot," put in Donna, sweetly. "Donna! How can you talk like that? You are breaking my heart. Haven't I had enough? I've never complained, have I? But now—you—"

Donna came over to her and put her arms about her, as though she were the older woman protecting the younger. "It's all right, mamma darling. You just don't understand. Life isn't as simple as it was when you were a frontier gal. I know what I want and I'm going to get it."

Sabra shrugged away from her, faced her with scorn. "I've seen you. I'm ashamed for you. You press against him like a—like a—" Again she could not say it. Another generation. "And that horse you ride. You say he loans it to you. He gave it to you. It's yours. What for?"

She was weeping. "I tell you it's all right, mamma. He did give it to me. He wants to give me lots of things, but I won't take them—yet. Tracy's in love with me. He thinks I'm young and beautiful and stimulating and wonderful. He's married to a dried-up, vinegary, bitter old hag who was just that when he married her, years ago. He's never known what love is. She has never given him children. He's insanely rich, and not too old, and rather sweet. We're going to be married. Tracy will get his divorce. Money does anything. It has taken me a year and a half to do it. I've never worked so hard in all my life. But it's going to be worth it. Don't worry, darling. Tracy's making an honest woman of your wayward daughter."

Sabra drew herself up, every inch the daughter of her mother, Felice Venable, nee Marcy. "You are disgusting."

CHAPTER XIII

But Cim did not come home on Saturday. On Saturday, at noon, when Sabra and Yancey drove from the office in their little utility car to the house on Kihelkah street for their noonday dinner they saw a great limousine drawn up at the curb. A chauffeur, vaguely familiar, lounged in front. The car was thick with the red dust of the country road.

A vague pang of premonition stabbed at Sabra's vitals. She clutched Yancey's arm. "Whose car is that?"

Yancey glanced at it indifferently. "Somebody drove Cim home, I suppose. Got enough dinner for company?"

Donna had gone to Oklahoma City to spend the week-end. It must be Cim.

"Cim!" Sabra called, as she entered the front door. "Cim!" But there was no answer. She went straight to the sitting room. Empty. But in the stiff little parlor, so seldom used, sat two massive, silent figures. With the Indian sense of ceremony and formality old Big Elk and his squaw had known the proper room to use for an occasion such as this.

"Why—Big Elk!" "How!" replied Big Elk, and held up his palm in the gesture of greeting. "Yancey!" cried Sabra suddenly, in a terrible voice. The two pairs of black Indian eyes stared at her. Sabra saw that their dress was elaborate; the formal dress reserved for great occasions. Side by side the two massive figures sat like things of bronze. Those dull black unsmiling eyes, that weaving fan, moved Sabra to nameless terror. "Yancey!" she cried again, through stiff lips. "Yancey!"

At the note of terror in her voice he was down the stairs and in the room with his quick light step. But at sight of old Big Elk and his wife his look of concern changed to one of relief. He smiled his utterly charming smile.

"How!" "How!" croaked Big Elk.

Mrs. Big Elk nodded her greeting. She was a woman younger, perhaps, by thirty years than her aged husband; his third wife. She spoke English; had even attended an Indian mission school in her girlhood. But through carelessness or indifference she used the broken, slovenly English of the unlettered Indian.

Now the two relapsed into impassive silence. "What do they want? Ask them what they want."

Yancey spoke a few words in Osage. Big Elk replied with a monosyllable. "What did he say? What is it?"

"I asked them to eat dinner with us. He says he cannot."

"I should hope not. Tell her to speak English. She speaks English." Big Elk turned his great head, slowly, as though it moved on a mechanical pivot. He stared at his fat, round-faced wife. He uttered a brief command to his own tongue. The squaw smiled a little sardoniously, embarrassed smile, like a schoolgirl—it was less a smile than a contortion of the face, so rare in her "ace" as to be more frightening than a scowl.

"Big Elk and me come take you back to Wazhazhe."

"What for?" cried Sabra, sharply. "Four o'clock big dinner, big dance. Your son want um come tell you. Want um know he marry Ruby this mornin'."

She was silent again, smiling her foolish fixed smile.

"God Almighty!" said Yancey Cravat. He looked at Sabra, came over to her quickly, but she waved him away.

"Don't. I'm not going to—it's all right. It was as though she shrunk from his touch. She stood there, staring at the two barbaric figures staring so stonily back at her with their dead black Indian eyes. It was at times like that that the Marcy in her stirred her in good stead. She came of iron stock, fit to stand the fire. Only beneath her fine dark eyes you now suddenly saw a smudge of purplish brown, as though a dirty thumb had rubbed there; and a sagging of all the muscles of her face, so that she looked wretched, lined, old.

"Don't look like that, honey. Come. Sit down."

Again the groping wave of her hand. "I'm all right, I tell you. Come. We must go there."

Yancey came forward. He shook hands formally with Big Elk, with the Indian woman. Sabra, seeing him, suddenly realized that he was not displeased. She knew that no formal politeness would have prevented him from voicing his anger if this monstrous announcement had shattered him as it had her, so that her very vitals seemed to be withering within her.

"Sugar, shake hands with them, won't you?"

"No, No." She wet her dry lips a little with her tongue, like one in a fever. She turned, woodenly, and walked to the door, ignoring the Indians. Across the hall, slowly, like an old woman, down the porch steps, toward the shabby little car next to the big rich one. As she went she heard Yancey's voice (was there an exultant note in it?) at the telephone.

"Jesse! Take this. Get it in. Ready! . . . Ex-Chief Big Elk, of the Osage nation, and Mrs. Big Elk, living at Wazhazhe, announce the marriage of their daughter Ruby Big Elk to Cimarron Cravat, son of—don't interrupt me—I'm in a hurry—son of Mr. and Mrs. Yancey Cravat, of this city. The wedding was solemnized at the home of the bride's parents and was followed by an elaborate dinner made up of many Indian and American dishes, partaken of by the parents of the bride and the groom, many relatives and numerous friends of the young . . ."

Sabra climbed heavily into the car and sat staring at the broad back of the car ahead of her. Chief Big Elk and his wife came out presently, unreal, bizarre in the brilliant noonday Oklahoma sunshine, ushered by Yancey. He was being charming. They heaved their ponderous bulk into the big car. Yancey got in beside Sabra. She spoke to him once only.

"I think you are glad."

"This is Oklahoma. In a way it's what I wanted it to be when I came here twenty years ago. Cim's like your father, Lewis Venable. Weak stuff, but good stock. Ruby's pure Indian blood and a magnificent animal. It's hard on you now, my darling. But their children and their grandchildren are going to be such stuff as Americans are made of. You'll see."

"I hope I shall die before that day."

The shabby little middle-class car followed the one whirling ahead of them over the red-clay Oklahoma roads. Eating the dust of the big car just ahead.

Repressed Emotions
The word libido is used as a single word to express the emotional craving or wish, psychiatrists believe to be behind all human activities, the repression of which leads to psychoneurosis.

Block System for Cities
Philadelphia was the first of modern municipalities whose plan was prepared for a particular site, and the rectangular plan there adopted has guided city planning in America ever since.

Chance Happening
Luck is generally described as something that happens seemingly by chance. It may be an event, either good or evil, which affects the interest or happenings of an individual, but this happening is entirely casual. Luck, however, carries the idea of good luck only.

Tallest Known Man
There have been reports among the less civilized tribes and among certain savage peoples that men have measured as much as 15 feet. From actual records that have been compiled, the greatest height found was that of Topinard's Finlander, who measured 112 inches—9 feet 4 inches.

Famous English Forest
By its association with Robin Hood, the most romantic forest in England is, perhaps, Sherwood. On its verge is a curious amphitheater called Robin Hood's hill, and in the forest may still be seen a very old hollow oak tree called Robin Hood's ladder. One of the ancient oaks, entirely hollow, called the Major oak, can shelter in its hollow trunk a dozen or fourteen people at once.

Old French Institution
The Academie des Jeux Floraux is at Toulouse, France. The first floral games were held at Toulouse in May, 1324, at the symposium of a guild of troubadours, who invited the lords and their friends to assemble in the garden of "Gay Science" and recite their works. In 1691 the Academie des Jeux Floraux was constituted an academy by letters patent. At present it is especially interested in Provençal poetry.

Circumventing Collie
A pretty little party from Pittsburgh, who always wears a straight flush and who can't understand the ways of a man with a maid, brings her problem to Oral Hygiene. "My boy, friend," she boasts, "as fine as they come, but whenever he calls he invariably waits 15 minutes before kissing me. Now, what's his system, please?" "Perhaps," grins the editor, "he has learned how long it takes the paint to dry?" Path-finder Magazine.

Drum Signaling
The Smithsonian Institution says: "In the eastern Belgian Congo tribes, particularly the Batwa, have evolved a system of telegraphy through use of a wooden drum, the system of signals approaching that of a code. The drum vibrations are not articulated as in human speech; rather the message is recognized through intensity of volume, rhythm, kind of drum used, time of day, etc. In a jungle environment much information may thus be signaled."

"Knight of the Road"
Claude Duval, famous highwayman, was born in Normandy in 1643. He was sent to Paris in 1657, where he remained until he went to England in attendance on the duke of Richmond at the Restoration. He soon took to the road and became famous for his daring and gallantry. He was captured in 1670 in London and within a week was executed at Tyburn. His body was laid in state in a tavern and was viewed by huge crowds before the exhibition was stopped by a judge's order.

Influenza Plague Once Held Fashionable Cold

The word "influenza" came into vogue in English-speaking countries in 1890. The disease had been epidemic in St. Petersburg in 1893, and it spread over Europe and to England and the United States. In the following spring it was severe in India and Australia. In most of these countries it was known as "influenza," or "influenza," though in Paris "la grippe," a term used in the middle of the last century, was revived. The word "influenza" was given in Italy toward the middle of the Eighteenth century to an epidemic of febrile catarrh. It was in use in England as early as 1702. In that year Mrs. Montague, the "blue stocking," wrote: "Mr. Montague . . . returned to London quite well, though he has been much pulled down by the fashionable cold called 'Influenza.' A general epidemic of 'Influenza' took place toward the close of the World war, passing over western countries in three waves, the first appearing very suddenly in May and June, 1918, the second in September and October, declining in December and the third in March, 1919. Its origin was attributed by France to Spain, whence came its most frequently used designation of "Spanish influenza." Spain, in turn, attributed the outbreak to France, and this continent thought it started in eastern Europe. Virtually all the western nations were heavy sufferers. It was most virulent in the second wave.—Montreal Family Herald.

"As You Like It"
Various commentators have advanced different theories as to why Shakespeare's play was given the name "As You Like It." Braithwaite, however, in his "Darnaby's Journal," speaks of "As You Like It" as a proverbial motto, and this seems more likely to imply the true explanation of the title of Shakespeare's play. The title of the comedy may on this supposition be exactly parallel with that of "Much Ado About Nothing." The proverbial title of the play implies the freedom of thought and indifference to censure which characterized the sayings and doings of most of the actors in this comedy of human nature in a forest.

ACID STOMACH

EXCESS acid is the common cause of indigestion. It results in pain and sourness about two hours after eating. The quick correctives is an alkali which neutralizes acid. The best correctives is Phillips' Milk of Magnesia. It has remained standard with physicians in the 50 years since its invention.
One spoonful of Phillips' Milk of Magnesia neutralizes instantly many times its volume in acid. Harshness, and tasteless, and yet its action is quick. You will never rely on crude methods, once you learn how quickly this method acts.

More Laws—More Contempt

"The growing contempt for law is attributable in a large measure to a mistaken zeal for more and ever more law," said Gov. Ritchie of Maryland a short time ago.

It is refreshing to hear this thought echoed by a high public official. Too few of them are sufficiently candid—or courageous—to do so. But almost all who have studied the crime problem have come to the same conclusion.

We are a nation of law breakers largely because we are a nation of law makers. We have abrogated human liberties—and crime has been increasing on a greater scale than in any other supposedly civilized country.

We have passed laws which acted as boomerangs and have in actual practice benefitted the criminal class which they were supposed to suppress—such as the anti-revolver bills in effect in several states.

We cannot shut our eyes to the fact that America is a lawless nation. In almost every great city authorities are all but powerless against the depredations of a well-organized, well-financed underworld.

Simpler and fewer laws—more justice and less litigation, surer punishment for offenders—in that direction lies victory for society in its war against the criminal class.

Roads vs. Doles

It is generally believed in America that the only feasible cure for the unemployment problem is to provide jobs—and not doles. The experience of England, riddled with debt largely because of its out-of-work pensions has not been missed by thinking citizens of this country.

Stimulated public works on the part of the states is being advocated on all sides. Foremost among such activities is the building of roads. In many cases 80 cents of the road dollar goes to labor, which most needs it, and building materials are extremely cheap at present.

As a consequence, a number of states are planning intensive road programs for the winter. Few localities have sufficient improved road mileage. We have developed great trunk highways between main centers of population—while, for the most part, five or ten miles away, in farming areas, roads are subject to the vagaries of weather and the seasons.

It may be that more good feeder roads will be a prime factor in alleviating the need for an American dole. And every dollar we spend on them now will produce many dollars in the form of more efficient transport, easier disposal of farm produce and similar benefits.—Manufacturer.

Poison in Jasmies
The Department of Agriculture advises us that yellow jasmies contain certain alkaloids which would cause toxicity if taken internally, and caution should consequently be used concerning it. The oleander, however, is deadly poisonous, and should never be kept on lawns or around houses where children may have access to it.—Washington Star.

Heredity
The Galton law of filial regression states that the tendency of the children of unusual parents is to approximate more nearly to the common type of the family or stock. Hereditary characteristics are derived as follows: One-half from the parents, one-quarter from the grandparents, one-eighth from the great-grandparents, etc.

Idea for "Movies"
A psychologist suggests that the superfilm of the future may be accompanied by a sequence of scenes watched through the theater, to bring the audience more completely into the atmosphere of the forest, the apple orchard, the farmhouse kitchen, or other scenes of the story.

Wasted Coal
In some poor grades of soft coal as much as 40 per cent of the weight may be in volatile products and 25 per cent is not unusual. This means that out of every 100 pounds shoveled into the furnace 25 pounds go up the stack, and this does not take into account the dense black smoke due to poor combustion, this loss depending largely on the furnace.

Fight That Made History
There were 130 Spanish vessels in the Spanish armada that undertook the invasion of England under Queen Elizabeth. The English had 137 boats that took part during the battle. However, many were small boats and of little use. The fighting was done almost entirely by the large boats on both sides.

Not Those Chicks
Jud Tunkins says he's astonished by the ease with which a hen can manage a big family of chicks. But then chicks don't know anything about automobiles and night clubs.—Washington Star.

MEN ARE LIKE THE LEAVES

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

SOME leaves keep their green Longer than the rest: When the old trees lean Farther from the west, When the winds blow cold, When the last leaves fall, Some green leaf grows old Latest of them all.

So it is with friends: When the summer's done, When the season ends, Farther swings the sun, Some friends will remain, Keep their faith with you; Poverty or pain, They continue true.

Men are like the leaves, Fairest in the spring; When the autumn grieves, That's another thing. In the summer scene Would that we could tell Which would be the green When the others fell.

Mother's Cook Book

"Is it rainy, little flower? Be glad to rain. Too much sun would wither thee, 'Till shine again. The clouds are very thick 'tis true, But just behind them smiles the blue."

SEASONABLE DISHES

WHEN preparing salad for more than the usual number, a few packages of lemon gelatin will make a fine foundation for the various fruits or vegetables. If one wishes, add in place of the water, to dissolve the gelatin, fruit juices, strained broth or both, made with bouillon cubes; they add flavor as well as nutriment.

Music Brings More Milk From Cows

THAT cows will give more milk to the strains of music was proved when Ben Kent, in charge of the cattle at the Fredmar farms near Oakville, Mo., installed a radio loudspeaker for the benefit of the restless bovines. They immediately showed signs of musical appreciation and stood still while they were milked.

BEDTIME STORY FOR CHILDREN

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

HONKER SENDS HIS THANKS TO PETER

THE slap of Paddy the Beaver's tail on the water, especially in the stillness of the night, is a very startling sound. It is no wonder that Honker the Goose awoke with a start. The other geese did the same thing. "Honk, honk!" said Honker in a low voice, which was the way of asking Paddy the Beaver what the trouble was.

them as they looked and listened suspiciously. Now Honker had the keenest of ears. You wouldn't think so to look at him, but he has. They caught the sound of the tiniest rattle on the shore. You or I wouldn't have heard Honker Boldly Swam Towards Them.

It. Oh, my, no! But Honker did. It was the rattle made by Reddy Fox as he changed his position.

"There is some one over there," said Honker, in a low voice. "I thought you said that there would be no danger here tonight, Paddy."

"I didn't think there would be," replied Paddy. "It must be that some one saw you come here. Probably it is Reddy Fox or Old Man Coyote. You wait and I'll find out." Paddy dived and when he came up he put only his nose out of water. He was very close to the shore where Reddy and Granny Fox were hiding, and the minute he put his nose out of water he smelled them. Then he grinned to himself and dived again, coming to where Honker was waiting. "Reddy and Granny Fox," said he briefly. "They are hiding right over there on the edge of the shore and I guess that if you hadn't warned you would have had one or two less to make the long journey south with you by this time. Two or three were pretty close to that very spot when I gave the alarm and were getting closer all the time."

The Old Gardener Says:

IN MANY parts of the country the torch lily or red-hot poker, catalogued both as Tritoma and Kniphofia, can be wintered in the open ground with a light protection in the way of leaves or pine boughs. In New England and other northern states, however, it is very often killed, for which reason it is better to take up the plants when cold weather comes, storing them in boxes of dry sand or coal ashes in a cellar, or with a slight covering in a cold-frame or pit. If this plan were generally adopted, these brilliant flowers would be seen much more often in northern gardens. They are to be prized for their habit of blooming in the autumn, although some of the newer kinds will flower almost continuously from midsummer.

Ostriches Busy Supplying Demand for Plumes

OSTRICHES all over the world are mighty busy these days growing plumes, the reason being the vogue for the Empress Eugenie hat, on which a feather is placed. The owners of ostrich farms are happy and the birds are producing eggs and young ostriches as fast as they can. A few months ago there were twenty-odd feather factories operating in the United States. Now about three hundred of them are going full blast, employing probably four thousand workers. The prices, too, while below those of twenty years ago when a choice ostrich plume brought as much as $30 (that kind isn't needed now) have climbed way up about 70 per cent in the last six months.

When giving a luncheon or serving a church or society club, a molded gelatin salad is always well liked. It may be set in small molds, or in large flat dishes and cut in serving-sized cubes, or it may be lightly broken up with a fork and served in nests of lettuce.

Vegetable Salad.

Grate six or eight medium-sized carrots, or better, shredded very fine on a vegetable shredder; add one finely minced onion and one green pepper also finely minced, a few stalks of tender celery chopped fine, a cupful or more of finely shredded cabbage and one small cucumber cut in dice. Add to three packages of lemon gelatin dissolved in three pints of hot liquid and put away to mold. Chill before adding the vegetable and let thicken slightly.

Hot Slaw.

Shred cabbage very fine and crisp in cold water. Beat the yolks of the eggs with two tablespoonsful of cold water, add a tablespoonful of butter, salt to season and a quarter of a cupful of vinegar. Cook this dressing over hot water until thick. Pour over the drained cabbage and heat until thoroughly hot. Serve hot.

Spanish Pepper Salad.

Dissolve half a box of gelatin in a half-cupful of cold water and add a cupful of vinegar. Add half a cupful of sugar, the juice of a lemon and a teaspoonful of salt, with one cupful of boiling water. Mix with six canned pimientos, two cupfuls of celery and one cupful of pecans, all cut fine. Mold in small molds and serve on lettuce with mayonnaise dressing.

German Cabbage Salad.

This is one of the most appetizing of all cabbage salads. Chop a crisp, hard-head-of-cabbage-with-an- onion or two, according to the size of the cabbage; three cupfuls of chopped cabbage will need one medium-sized onion. Cut up a two-inch cube of salt pork into the smallest possible cubes and fry until brown; pour this browned pork and fat over the cabbage, stirring and mixing well; add a teaspoonful or two of salt and in the same frying pan add enough vinegar to moisten the salad. When boiling hot, pour that over the cabbage. Serve after standing in a warm place to keep hot. This is very good when cold, so there is never any waste.

(© 1931, Western Newspaper Union.)

All the geese began to gabble at once, thanking Paddy for having waked them in time. "Don't thank me," said Paddy. "It was Peter Rabbit who discovered the danger. I only passed his signal along. I didn't know where the danger was or what it was, when I stamped the water with my tail. But I did know that when Peter thumps the ground the way he did it is best for everybody to watch out, so I wakened you."

"Where is Peter?" asked Honker. "I don't know," replied Paddy. "I heard him run away after he thumped. I guess he knew that it wasn't safe to stay another minute because Reddy and Granny Fox would be likely to try to catch him to make up for spoiling their chance to dine on a fat goose. There they are now!"

Sure enough, there were Reddy and Granny Fox in plain sight on the edge of the pond, looking over at Honker and his followers with hungry, longing eyes. You see, they knew that they had been found out and that it was of no use to hide there any longer, for having once been alarmed the geese would not again give them the least chance to catch them. Honker boldly swam toward them. Just out of reach he stopped and hissed angrily.

STAGE COACH TALES

By E. C. TAYLOR

Henry Clay Rides to a Fall HENRY CLAY, the "Idol of the West," to whose efforts in congress more than those of any other man in American public life the building of the great National road was due, rode to a fall on the road he had fathered.

Clay often traveled over the great highway, as he made frequent trips from the nation's capital to his home in Kentucky each year, and was known and liked by every stage coach driver along the route.

One day the brilliant political leader was traveling back home to Kentucky. The streets of Uniontown, Pa., in those days were not the paved thoroughfares of today. They were muddy morasses in wet weather, and rocky roads in dry.

The coach in which Clay was riding struck a large boulder of limestone as it was leaving Uniontown, and overturned, throwing Clay into the street. He was picked up unhurt and after viewing the smashup, remarked: "This is mixing the Clay of Kentucky with the limestone of Pennsylvania."

Sam Sibley, the driver, received a broken nose, and the party returned to the McClelland house, which it had just left, until a new coach and driver were procured.

The "Pike Boys," as the lordly drivers on the National road were called, were all friends of Clay, although they did not all agree with him politically. One driver was accused of deliberately riding down a pro-Clay procession during the Clay-Polk Presidential contest.

The "Pike Boys" were the aristocracy of the day. Lads all over the nation looked upon them as the boys of today look up to Lindbergh and other heroes of the air. It was every boy's ambition to be the driver of mail and fast passenger coaches. There probably were more street corner arguments along the great highway in those days over the style of various heroes' driving and their prowess as lords of the road than there were over politics.

The drivers were as noted for their quick wit and large acquaintance with men of affairs as for their dextrous handling of two hands full of reins.

Their social and business position was the envy of all boyhood, and it was the ambition of the nation's youths to emulate them. They were worshiped as heroes.

Among the best known drivers of the day nearly all of whom Clay knew by their nicknames, were John Bunting, Jim Reynolds, Billy Armor, "Red" Bunting, nearly seven feet tall, was the best known in the East. David Gordon and James Eum were the outstanding heroes of the western section of the stage lines.

These drivers were proud of their horses, and took the best of care of them. The passage of a President was a triumphal procession along the National road. The best drivers and the best horses were assigned to them.

The coaches were elaborate affairs, many of them costing several thousand dollars. They were gaily painted, highly polished, and lined with silk upholstery. They had arm rests, and comfortable seats.

The earliest coaches on the National road were the Troy coaches. They were built at Cumberland, Md., and carried 10 passengers. These were followed by the more elaborate Concord coaches, that were used universally by the stage lines all over the United States.

Relays of horses were waiting for the coaches every ten or twelve miles, and these were changed while the coaches were still rocking after coming to an abrupt halt. Speed was the watchword, and not a minute was lost on a trip. The drivers prided themselves on maintaining their schedule in all kinds of weather.

Those who lived along the National road when they were children still eagerly recall the thrilling sight of a train of coaches, sometimes as many as 14 in a single line, rushing into a relay station, with the drivers blowing their horns, quickly changing horses and speeding off again. It was romance to them.

Mother's Darlings

George, aged four, and Ernest, aged five, were spending their precious five minutes with mummy before going to bed.

"I love you," blurted Ernest contentedly.

"Why do you love me, darling?" asked mother.

"Cos we like your face."

"But it's not much of a face," said mother.

"That was a bit of a poser."

"But we've got used to it," said George, after much thought.—London Tit-Bits.

Army Units

According to army regulations a squad consists of a corporal and seven privates; three squads form a section; two sections a platoon; three platoons a company; four companies consisting of three rifle companies and one machine gun company form a battalion; three battalions a regiment; two or more regiments a brigade; two or more brigades a division; two or more divisions a corps, and two or more corps headed by a lieutenant general, an army.

Too Much Noise Gerald C. Winthrop, of the New York noise abatement commission, said in an interview:

"A haggard woman went into a radio supply shop the other day.

"You keep everything for radio here, don't you?" she said to a salesman.

"Everything, madam," the salesman told her.

"Then," said the woman, "let me have an ax!"

Church on Business Basis

It costs $1 for each person who wishes to hear Rev. R. B. Hooper, of Fort Worth, Texas, preach. The minister adopted the box office idea himself. He decided that most persons had money when they went to church, but that a collection plate was not quite the thing to pry it loose.—Indianapolis News.

Lightning's Frank

Lightning struck four sides of a house in Battle Creek, Mich., without injuring the occupants. In the bedroom, where Mr. and Mrs. M. J. Ackley were sleeping, it shattered a mirror. On the front porch it ruined two sets of golf clubs. On the north side of the house it raised the roof an inch. On another side it came in along the radio aerial.

PATENTS

Scholarships for Jews Young Jewish scholars from America will be beneficiaries of 17 new scholarships founded at the Hebrew university in Jerusalem, given by benefactors in the United States. The awards will be made on the basis of competitive examinations, which will be held at the beginning of the fall semester.

Lost 20 Lbs. of Fat In Just 4 Weeks

Mrs. Mae West of St. Louis, Mo., writes: "I'm only 28 yrs. old and weighed 170 lbs. until taking one box of your Kruschen Salts just 4 weeks ago. I now weigh 150 lbs. I also have more energy and furthermore I've never had a hungry moment."

Fat folks should take one half teaspoonful of Kruschen Salts in a glass of hot water every morning before breakfast—an 83 cent bottle lasts 4 weeks—you can get Kruschen at any drug store in America. If not joyfully satisfied after the first bottle—money back.

Neutral

"You seem upset." "Yes, my wife has just had a quarrel with the cook." "Did you take either side?" "Not I! I feed them both."

Racing by Radio

"In what time was the mile run?" "On the radio it took twenty minutes."—Louisville Courier.

WOMEN: watch your BOWELS

What should women do to keep their bowels moving freely? A doctor should know the answer. That is why pure Syrup Pepsin is so good for women. It just suits their delicate organism. It is the prescription of an old family doctor who has treated thousands of women patients, and who made a special study of bowel troubles.

It is fine for children, too. They love its taste. Let them have it every time their tongues are sluggish, and at the time when you are most apt to be constipated. A little of this famous prescription will do the trick. It is made from fresh laxative herbs, pure pepsin and other harmless ingredients.

When you've a sick headache, can't eat, are bilious or sluggish, and at the time when you are most apt to be constipated, a little of this famous prescription will do the trick. It is made from fresh laxative herbs, pure pepsin and other harmless ingredients.

HEARD ABOUT TOWN

R. E. Lemon left Sunday on the evening train for White City, Kansas, after the receipt of a message to the effect that his mother was seriously ill, but later advices from him to Mrs. Lemon brought the news that she had improved. He will return as soon as his mother is pronounced out of danger.

Miss Adelina Mackey has been employed as waitress at the Star Cafe.

Mr. and Mrs. D. L. Groce, parents of Prof. Groce of the Carrizozo schools, and J. Verle Groce, principal of the Corona schools, will arrive from Marshall, Mo., this week to make Corona their future home. Mr. Groce has purchased the Roberts Mercantile Co. and will operate the same in connection with the Groce Variety Store in Mountainair, of which he is also the owner. Mr. Groce is not a stranger in our parts. He homesteaded in the Estancia valley a number of years ago and is well acquainted with our county and its people. In advance of their arrival, we extend the welcome hand and wish them the highest measure of success.

Mesdames George Young and Elsa Charles and the children spent the week-end with the J. E. Farley family at Alamogordo, returning Monday morning.

Earl Rountree and Perry Sears were here from Capitan yesterday. Perry has an ad in this issue which is of much interest to those wishing good, old-time life insurance.—Read it.

DANCE—At Baca's Hall, tomorrow night. Music by Celestino Sandoval and his "Malpaiseros." Everybody Welcome!

Glenneth English came over yesterday from the Albuquerque University to spend the week-end with the home folks. She was accompanied by Jean Berry of Fort Stanton and the young ladies will return to their studies next Monday.

T. E. Kelley and E. M. Brickley made a trip to the Navajo Lodge, about 150 miles northwest of Carrizozo, last Sunday on a business mission. They succeeded in their business affair and returned Sunday evening.

Deputy County Clerk Ernest Key has gained considerable notoriety by writing an article on the early history of happenings in the Mesilla Valley, gleaned from the court records and published in last week's issue of the Las Cruces Citizen. The article is well-written and Ernest deserves much credit for the same.

Mrs. Erva A. Claunch on her birthday the latter part of last week was pleasantly surprised by a party of close friends. The evening was spent in bridge, after which refreshments were served.

A Two-Cylinder "Smith"

It happened in this manner: G. P. Huppertz had an abandoned 8-cylinder Cadillac, and Charley Smith's city wagon was out of commission. Mr. Huppertz gave the Cadillac to Charley; Charley proceeds to consult Wm. Keene, the Blacksmith, who agreed to make a wagon out of the Cadillac, and proceeded to do so. He dismantled the old veteran, took out the engine and running gear, leaving nothing but the skeleton of the old car.

Charley then placed his wagon bed on the frame, and yesterday, Charley was going about his work with his horses hitched to the "new" wagon, which was once a Cadillac 8, but now is a 2 cylinder "Smith."

High School Notes

And the stunts continue. On Thursday of last week the Sophomores presented a short play entitled "Silence, Please," featuring Vena Snow and Sam Dow, who were ably supported by Edith Dudley and Dorothy Pratt. This was followed by a very effectively rendered violin solo by Deanie McCammon, accompanied by Mrs. Groce at the piano.

Thursday evening, the Juniors, making the best of some very bad luck, had a weenie roast in the Home Economics room. They had made up their minds to have a roast and when weather conditions made it unsatisfactory to go across the Malpais, as they had planned, they made the best of things in the Home Economics room.

On Friday, on account of the unavoidable tardiness of Miss Brunk, a meeting of the Pep Club was called as well as a meeting of the various classes. On Monday another Pep meeting was the only thing of importance. On Tuesday Rev. Lawson spoke to the assembly on Preparedness. This was a very helpful and uplifting address and everyone is sure to profit by it.

Several people are in the 'hospital,' which comes the 8th hour, for the purpose of aiding students in subjects in which they are weak, but we all feel sure that under the gentle care of Dr. Groce, those who are laid up will soon be back on the teams and out of the hospital for good.

The first football game ever played in Carrizozo is scheduled for Saturday, Oct. 3, Corona vs. Carrizozo, at 2:30. Admission, 20-35c. Let's all be there and give our boys a good start.

The chorus and orchestra, under Miss Evrard and Groce, are coming along fine, and Miss Evrard has great hopes for the boys' quartet, which is looming up in the future.—H.S. Reporter.

Mrs. L. P. McGillock came home Sunday from Texas, where she paid a pleasant visit to her parents, but she was glad to get back where the sunshine lingers and the atmosphere is cool and refreshing.

Glencoe Woman's Club

met at the home of Mrs. Tully on Sept. 26. This meeting was scheduled at the home of Mrs. Wilbur Coe, Sept. 5, but as it was necessary for her to be away from home, the change was made to a later date and Mrs. Tully kindly offered to entertain.

Both a written and a verbal invitation was extended by the president of the Roswell club to the ladies of the Glencoe club to attend the State Convention in October. Several hope to have the pleasure. Mrs. B. J. Bonnell was elected delegate and Mrs. Earl Fryer alternate.

A vote of thanks was extended to Mildred Bonnell, for typing the year books. Mrs. Ralph Bower of Roswell kindly sang a group of songs, with Mrs. Hendren of Fort Stanton as accompanist. Mrs. Hendren also kindly played several numbers.

Dainty refreshments of pear salad, cakes and cider were served by the hostess. Next meeting will be held Oct. 3, at the home of Mrs. Werner, acting for Mrs. George Coe, who is absent on a visit to Chicago.

Remember that there is another treat in store for dance fans to be given at White Oaks Saturday night, Oct. 3, by the "Gloom Chasers" and if you miss this one, you will miss a great deal in the way of entertainment. Refreshments consisting of good hot coffee, hot buns and sandwiches will be served during the evening. Lay your plans to be on hand. The "Gloom Chasers" orchestra has been augmented by several new members and the music will be O. K., 100%. Good maple floor, good music, good refreshments and a good time. What more would you want?

Hilario M. Maez was a business visitor from Lincoln this week.

Skinner's Grocery

The governments of the world are setting examples of economy for the people to follow and this being the case, should we not profit by the example? How much can we economize?

Pennies grow into dimes; dimes grow into dollars and before you are aware of the fact, you have saved one of these silver wagon wheels.

Try out on an order from our store and see what you can save. It will surprise you! F-r-e-s-h, wholesome Baby Beef—the kind you love to eat. Our groceries are fresh because we sell them quick, cheap and this keeps the stock in the best of condition.
