Last Friday night at Odd-Fellows' Hall in the Masonic Temple, Corona Lodge No. 15, Order of Rebekahs, I. O. O. F., entertained in honor of a visit of Mrs. Louise Cady, Grand President of the order for the state of New Mexico.

The meeting was called to order by the Noble Grand, Mrs. Birdie Walker and the usual formalities in connection with the reception of the distinguished visitor were carried out. After the reception, the Grand President gave an address in which she reviewed the work of the order throughout the state and gave many helpful suggestions to the local fraternity.

The meeting was then opened to a group of waiting Odd-Fellows who were gathered on the outside, and after being admitted, a luncheon was served by the local Rebekahs which was followed by a special hour.

The Grand President was accompanied by her husband, ex-postmaster Cady and daughter Louise, and Mrs. J. R. Green of Alamogordo and Mrs. W. P. Loughrey of El Paso. This is the season for the Grand President to visit the different lodges over the state and the party left for Alamogordo after the meeting and the President will visit other lodges of the state in due time.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Cleghorn of White Oaks were visitors here on Thursday of this week.

LOCAL MENTION

Charles Coplin of Seattle, Washington, came in last Sunday and will remain with Mrs. Coplin and the children until the end of the school term, after which they will return home. Mrs. Coplin, who is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Ziegler, has been here for the past six weeks, during which time, the children have been attending school. Mr. Coplin resided here for several years, but left for Seattle in 1917, since which time they have made that city their home.

Mr. and Mrs. Will Ed Harris, Mrs. Nellie Reilly and L.A. Whitaker were in from the Harris ranch yesterday.

Mrs. T. E. Armstrong went to Tucumcari Tuesday for a brief visit with her daughter, Mrs. Conway Collins and returned home on Wednesday.

Mesdames Elizabeth Gallacher and Doyle Rentfrow are spending the week in El Paso.

Mrs. Ernest Dingwall spent the week-end in El Paso.

Mrs. V. A. Mosier, who had been at the bedside of her mother, who was ill at her home in Chanute, Kansas, for several weeks, arrived here the latter part of last week. Mrs. Mosier said that her mother had almost recovered from her ailment before she left for Carrizozo.

Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Lumpkins were here from Capitan yesterday, making arrangements for a trip to Albuquerque tomorrow to return with their son Bill, who has been attending the University. The term is not quite out, but Bill was granted leave so that he could take up the Boy Scout work for the summer, in which he is engaged every year. They also told that their oldest son Chester, better known as "Bill O'Fare" when he wrote those crisp Nogal items, is ill and confined in Masonic Hospital at El Paso.

Mesdames Blanche White and Chas. LeBaron were in from Nogal this week, attending to some affairs of a business nature. They expect a prosperous season for that locality, as mining promoters have been there of late, looking over the different advantages which that vicinity affords to the mining industry.

This office is in receipt of a letter from our old friend and former Carrizozo resident, W.W. Stadtman, who is now a resident of San Bernardino, Cal. Among other things, he says that he is still with the Equitable Life Insurance Company and that business is increasing as he becomes more acquainted in the city and vicinity. He also says that he is glad to get the Outlook each week, as it keeps the family in touch with the old stamping ground. They send kindest regards to their Carrizozo friends.

Mrs. R.A. Hunnicutt, after being ill for about one month as a result of an injury, having one of her hip bones broken in a fall, died at her ranch home near Capitan, Wednesday. The remains are being held, awaiting the arrival of relatives, after which, they will be interred in the Angus cemetery. The Hunnicutt family has the sympathy of the surrounding community.

Mother Earth Gets a Facial

To Meet at Roswell on May 11th

Four states will be represented at the annual convention of the Carlsbad Cavern - Petrified Forest - Grand Canyon highway association which will be held at Roswell, Monday, May 11. In addition to prominent citizens and state officials in Arizona and New Mexico through which the highway officially passes, Texas and Colorado will also be represented because of the interest in this highway in those states.

An elaborate, entertainment program for men and women in addition to the business session has been arranged starting with a review of the cadet regiment at the Military Institute, and closing with a dinner and dance at which all the visitors will be guests of the Roswell Chamber of Commerce and Auto Club.

Plans for further advertising the highway will be discussed, according to R. M. Edwards of Socorro, president of the association. Twenty thousand folders, beautifully illustrating the scenic attractions along this route have been distributed throughout the United States, and these together with the active co-operation of Carlsbad, Roswell, Carrizozo, Socorro, Magdalena, New Mexico, and Springerville, Holbrook, Winslow, Flagstaff and Williams, Ariz., have resulted in a heavy increase in travel between the two national parks. In addition to state officials, T. Boles, Supt. of the Cavern; M. R. Tillotson, Supt. of Grand Canyon; Chas. Smith, Supt. of Petrified Forest, and their wives will attend the convention.

New Filling Station

The foundation is being laid on El Paso avenue for a new filling station and it is said that there will be a campyard in connection with the station. Vincent Reil of the City Garage is erecting the building.

Tuesday being the wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. French, a number of their many friends sprung a complete surprise on them at their home. Six tables were arranged for bridge and the game terminated by Mrs. C. P. Huppertz winning the high score for the ladies and Dr. R. E. Blaney for the men.

Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Lovelace were in from their ranch near Corona Tuesday, visiting with Mr. and Mrs. Morgan Lovelace of Carrizozo. They reported stock and range in the finest of condition in the Corona district.

High School Concert a Success

Without question, the concert given by the H. S. orchestra and chorus Friday night, was the best program given this year at the high school auditorium. From the opening march to the closing waltz, the evening was filled with pleasing entertainment.

The orchestra, as usual, gave a good account of itself in all the melodious numbers that were played. A decided improvement is noticeable in this organization since the beginning of the year. The chorus, nevertheless, shows the greater advancement. In this group of first year chorists we find few with previous musical training. The well done standard four-part works speak for them without comment. Arcadio Brady can be commended for his nicely sung solo part in "Lullaby Moon."

The high lights of the evening came in the solo numbers. Ansel Swearingen, a first year trumpet student, played the "Premier Polka" like a professional. He had in him the fire and verve to make a fine instrumentalist. Wayne Van Schoyck gave a good account of himself as a beginning student on the flute. He played with feeling and accurate intonation unusual for a young player. The mezzo solos by Eva Vigil were sung in her usually acceptable manner.

Before the finish of the program, a request was received from the audience for numbers from Prof. John K. Crnkovich, our music director, who will not be with us next year. He was called upon to sing three numbers before the enthusiastic audience would permit him to retire.

Senior Class Play

The Senior Class presents the play, "Tommy," a 3-act comedy, at the high school auditorium, Tuesday, May 12, 8 p. m.

Characters: Mrs. Wilson, Eva Vigil; Marie Thurber, Marguerite English; Bernard, Gladney Zumwalt; Mrs. Thurber, Dorothy Dozier; Mr. Thurber, Marvin Roberts; David Tuttle, Carol C. Hines; Tommy Mills, George Young; Judge Wilson, Manuel Chavez.

The play promises to be one of the best ever featured in Carrizozo. Admission, 25 - 50c.

Charley Smith is busy with hauling cinders for the city and filling low places on the main streets, caused by the rains of the passing week. Yesterday he was assisted by road foreman Herman Kelt, who had a force of men from the highway work and the streets, after being filled and dragged, will be in splendid condition again.

S. P. to Put on 1c-a-Mile Rate on May 8th and 9th

Timed to facilitate travel thru-out New Mexico and other western states in connection with observance of Mothers' Day, May 10, the S. P. is planning a new sale of cent-a-mile transportation over its entire Pacific system, according to announcements today.

The new bargain offering of roundtrip train fares, including all the concessions of the recent "$1-day" excursions, will be made Friday and Saturday, May 8 and 9, with return limit of Thursday, midnight, May 14. Tickets will be good on both coach and Pullman trains on S. P.'s lines from El Paso to Portland and from San Francisco to Ogden, including Salt Lake City. Roundtrip fares involved are based on three fifths of the one way fare.

Southern Pacific's growing experiment with cent-a-mile transportation in an effort to win passenger traffic back to the railroads has attracted national attention, according to Mr. Huppertz, local agent. Take advantage of this opportunity to visit your mother on Mothers' Day. —See ad on page 4 of this paper.

Mrs. Kelley's Recital

On page 8 of this paper, we are publishing the program wherein Mrs. T. E. Kelley will present her pupils in recital at the High School Auditorium tonight, to which the public is cordially invited.

Here is an opportunity for music-lovers to spend an evening of pleasure and also to witness a demonstration of what can be done with children through careful musical training by an experienced teacher like Mrs. Kelley. Those who hear the program must take into consideration the fact that youthful minds must first receive the rudiments of the art of music and gradually grow in efficiency. By perfect methods, kind and careful teaching in which they can be instructed to love the art, instead of becoming a task to them.

Mrs. Kelley possesses these characteristics which go to make a proficient teacher, as will be seen by the zeal in which the little tots carry out the program. There will be no admission at the door and Mrs. Kelley extends to the people of Carrizozo and vicinity a most cordial welcome.

Mr. and Mrs. Jimmy Leepent the week-end with friends and relatives in El Paso, returning to Carrizozo Monday.

Carving Roast Stuffed Lamb Shoulder

Shoulder of Lamb, Boned and Stuffed.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)—WNU Service.

Many people think the meat of a shoulder of lamb is just as tender and quite as delicious in flavor as the leg or any other part. The shoulder is not so easy to carve as the leg, owing to the irregular shape and central position of the shoulder blade. This difficulty about carving is easily met, says the bureau of home economics. Select a shoulder of lamb weighing from 3 to 4 pounds. Have the butcher remove all the bones, as well as the fell, or outer papery covering of skin. The bones may be saved for making soup. The shoulder may then be stuffed, and either left flat or rolled, and the pocket holds twice as much stuffing. Either of these completely boned stuffed shoulders can be carved straight through in attractive slices of part meat and part stuffing.

Wipe the meat with a damp cloth. Sprinkle the inside of the pocket with salt and pepper, pile the hot stuffing in lightly, and sew the edges together. Rub salt, pepper, and flour over the outside. If the shoulder has only a very thin fat covering, lay several strips of bacon over the top. Place the roast on a rack in an open pan without water. Sear for 30 minutes in

Sauerkraut Valuable Addition to Diet

Sauerkraut has been found to make a valuable contribution to the diet. In fact, sauerkraut juice is used as an appetizer and featured on the menus of many well known restaurants. As with cabbage in other forms, the old fashioned way of cooking sauerkraut was to boil it for several hours. Unfortunately this method of preparation destroys the very things for which the sauerkraut is valuable. The bureau of home economics of the United States Department of Agriculture, suggests the following recipe for preparing savory sauerkraut to eat with ham, corned beef or other meats.

1/2 cup butter or 1/4 tsp. celery or other fat
1 quart sauerkraut
Heat the fat in a skillet until golden brown, and add the sauerkraut and the seasoning. Mix well, using a fork to separate the kraut. Cover and cook for five minutes. Serve hot.

Trouser Suits Fine for Youngsters

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)—WNU Service.

Every mother is relieved as the time comes when her child learns to dress and undress himself and go to the toilet alone. She is then much more free for other household duties. Training in self-dressing may be started between two and three years old and a boy will soon take great pride in being independent. Good clothing design is the first requisite in encouraging self-help in dressing. Small trousers should be made with as few fastenings as possible, and these should be placed within easy reach of a two-year-old's little fingers. The child learns by repetition if the buttons and buttonholes are always in the same place at first, so it is best to use only one pattern until the little one has completely mastered its fastenings. Vary the material, color, and minor style details as much as you please.

A very good type for the first trousers of a two-to-three-year-old is here illustrated. It was designed by a clothing specialist in the bureau of home economics, United States Department of Agriculture, after studying the needs of a group of nursery school children. These trousers can be buttoned on to a blouse in the Oliver Twist style. The back and front button independently, and it is not necessary to substitute the front in order to drop the back. Sometimes bound side openings are used. Another plan is to make a two-button drop front which fastens midway between the center seam and the side placket. This is finished with simulated welt plackets and replaces the fly. Two buttons instead of three are used on the back drop, so the child can reach them more easily. These little trousers are straight and short, well above the head of the knee, and they have plenty of room in the seat and sufficient length in the crotch.

Show necks and flat triangular, attached to look like a collar and cuffs are recommended on the blouse. These insure easy laundering and greater comfort when the child is playing actively than pieces that move or wrinkle.

Crocheted loops are used for closing. They are made by first crocheting the edge with a single stitch, forming loops opposite the buttons with a chain stitch and finally strengthening the whole edge with a "double crochet."

Evening Story for the Children

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

"Now, my dears," said Grandfather Frog. "I am very grateful to you all for hopping along and telling me that you wish me these kind wishes of happy returns of the day in honor of my birthday."

"But I have just been thinking,"

"Oh, Grandfather, Grandfather, goog-a-room, goog-a-room," said the little frogs. "How wonderful!"

"Yes," said Grandfather Frog. "I have been thinking ever since I spent the early part of the morning looking and searching for bugs and other delicacies for the party."

The frogs were pleased to hear that there was going to be a party.

That pleased them immensely, and they knew that their grandfather would have found a lot of goodies for it.

"But," he continued, "when I was thinking I said to myself, that it was really very foolish to say many happy returns of the day, even though it is a pleasant thing to say."

"You see," he went on, rolling his great bulging eyes and sticking out his chest, "it is impossible to say such a thing."

"We all said it," said the little frogs, "so it is not impossible to say at all."

"That was not exactly what I meant,"

Cook for 2 minutes and add the mint leaves or the finely cut dill and the other seasonings. Push this mixture to one side of the skillet and in the empty part melt the remaining butter and stir in the bread crumbs. When they have absorbed the butter, mix all the ingredients together. When using watercress allow the liquid which cooks out to evaporate before the buttered bread crumbs are added.

said Grandfather Frog. He panted for breath. He was so excited at having the little frogs listen to him so attentively and pay him all this attention.

"Goog-a-room, goog-a-room, goog-a-room," he said. "Of course you could say it without choking, I suppose."

"Because, of course, you did say it. But, at the same time, it is a senseless thing to say."

"Goog-a-Room," He Said.

"Won't you tell us why, dear Grandfather?" all the little frogs asked.

"I am so pleased you all came to me, and I appreciate it very, very much."

"But how can this day ever come back? There will be other days. Yes, other ones."

"They will be different. They may be rainy days, or sunshiny days, or days when the sun and rain are both here and there is a rainbow."

"No, I cannot have many happy returns of the day, because this day will never return.

"It makes me a little sad to think of it."

Grandfather's eyes filled with water. One tear trickled down and he swallowed it. And then he swallowed quite a few.

"I am drinking tear water," he said, "and I don't like it much."

"Ah, don't cry, Grandfather, it is true this day won't come back, but when we and others wish many happy returns of the day, we wish that happy days such as this will return."

"Oh," said Grandfather Frog, "that's a lovely thought. That makes me very happy."

"And now come back in one hour for the party. I shall be all ready for it then."

It was a fine birthday party. The bugs were simply delicious.

Beefsteak Pie Liked as Dinner Dish

Round or chuck beefsteak may be used in making a beef pie—in fact any of the less tender lean cuts will make a very good meat pie. The meat is cooked with the onion, parsley, tomatoes and seasonings, until it is tender. Then it is combined with canned string beans, covered with a crust of pastry or mashed potatoes or biscuit dough, and baked in a moderate oven until the top is a golden brown. Left-over cooked beef may be used in a similar way without simmering to make it tender. Simply combine it with the vegetables, gravy and seasonings, cover with a crust, and bake. The bureau of home economics of the United States Department of Agriculture gives the following ingredients for a beefsteak pie:

- 3 lbs. fat 1 pint canned tomatoes
- 1 lb. chopped parsley 1/2 cup water
- 1 medium-sized onion, sliced 1 1/2 tsp. salt
- 1 pound round or chuck beefsteak cut in inch cubes 1 1/2 cups canned string beans
- 3 lbs. flour Few drops tabasco

Melt the fat in a heavy skillet, add the onion and parsley and cook for a few minutes. Roll the meat in the flour, add to the fat and the onion, and brown the meat well on all sides. Pour the tomatoes over the meat, add the water, cover and simmer until the meat is tender. Season and stir in the string beans, adding some of the bean liquid if the stew is too thick. Pour the stew into a baking dish, cover with a pastry crust or mashed potatoes and bake in a moderate oven until the top is golden brown. Serve at once.

Foods that Will Interest the Family

By NELLIE MAXWELL

"Our spectacular opportunities for courage may be few or none at all. Our commonplace opportunities for courage start when we wake and last until we go to sleep. The courage of the commonplace is greater than the courage of the crisis."

For the cake par excellence, the torte is one of the delectable. Our German cooks excel in this kind of a cake combination. They are rich with nuts, chopped or rolled fine, plenty of eggs and crumbs, with spices. The baking is another important point, as slow, careful baking is necessary for a light and tender torte.

Schaum Torte.—Beat three egg whites until stiff but not dry, add one cupful of sugar very lightly and gradually, not to lose the lightness, a pinch of salt, one-half teaspoonful of vinegar and one-half teaspoonful of vanilla. Bake in two deep layer tins for one hour. Put together with whipped cream, or add nuts and chopped pineapple with the cream.

Walnut Torte.—Beat the yolks of six eggs with one cupful of sugar, add one-fourth pound of walnuts and six lady fingers grated, two teaspoonfuls of flour and one teaspoonful of baking powder. Add the juice and rind of a lemon and when all the ingredients are well mixed, add the stiffly beaten egg whites to which a pinch of salt has been added. Bake in layers in a moderate oven and use the following:

Filling.—To one beaten egg yolk add two tablespoonfuls of sugar, and three-fourths of a cupful of milk. Cook, stirring constantly until the mixture coats the spoon, add one and one-half cupfuls of grated walnut meats with a flavoring of almond and vanilla. Use between the layers and ice the top of the torte.

Date Torte.—Rub sixteen dates to a smooth paste with two tablespoonfuls of lemon juice. Beat two whole eggs, add seven yolks, add one and three-fourths cupfuls of sugar, beat well, add the dates, three tablespoonfuls of grated chocolate and one teaspoonful each of cinnamon, allspice, and a cupful of cracker crumbs. Stir well and fold in the stiffly beaten whites of seven eggs. Bake in a large spring form forty minutes.

Peach Omelet.—This is not a soup but is equally as good. Press three ripe peaches after peeling and stoning, through a sieve, add two tablespoonfuls of powdered sugar and the well-beaten yolks of three eggs; fold in the stiffly beaten whites of six eggs and pour into a well buttered baking dish. Bake 15 or 20 minutes and serve at once.

Cherry and Quince Soup.—Stem and stone a pint of deep red cherries; place them in a saucepan with the juice and grated rind of a lemon, half a cupful of quince juice and a pint of water; cook until the cherries are tender, then thicken with cornstarch and cook until the starch is well cooked. Serve hot.

Attractive Headgear for Weddings

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Lovelier than ever are the hats which crown with glory the heads of bridesmaids who have been chosen to add their picturesque presence to the spring wedding pageant.

Due to the favor expressed for very sheer and lacy affairs and other media, there is a fragile beauty about this season's models which is captivating. Tuned to the exquisite delicacy of the materials of which these enchanting confections are made, are their fairy-like colorings—opaline colors—to speak of these detectable tones and tints correctly.

All that fashion's followers have been hearing of late in regard to a return of romance in millinery, a revival of flowers, ribbons and feminine graces, together with the picturesque tilt and tilt of brims because of their lately acquired bandeaux, is confirmed in the sketches herewith.

The loveliness of some of the new brims is a matter of comment this season. One of the very white brims is seen at its loveliest in the first sketch in this group. The original of this model is of transparent tulle in a pale rose opaline tint. To carry out the scheme successfully, each bridesmaid in the party will wear a duplicate of this lovely creation in a different color. Centered at the top, in the picture is a charming little shape which faces its wee upturned brim with tiny flowers, with a full-blown rose posed to one side.

The lacy straw capeline in the upper corner to the right is in natural color, the idea being to trim each hat with ribbon in a color tuned to the frock with which it is worn.

Trimming is conspicuous by its absence when it comes to the exquisite hair shape shown in the center of the picture to the left, the emphasis being placed on the softly draped brim and the fact that the color of each hat for the cohorts of the bride's attendants is different, achieving a sympathy of opalescent tones and tints.

A particularly charming variation of the smaller-brimmed hat is centered in the right in the illustration the arrangement of the flowers and the ribbon bespeaking true artistry of the designer.

The little Witten hat down in the lower left hand corner is a millinery gem. It is lace and straw, the flowers are every color and the ribbon is velvet, for velvet ribbon in a trimming featured throughout the mode this season.

A softly draped flower-trimmed hat of very sheer hair brim is shown in the opposite right-hand corner.

The group concludes with a large and extremely effective hat of starched white lace. If preferred, capeline of lacy straw may be draped after the lines of this lace model.

Owing to its vogue throughout the realm of fashion, lace is playing a very conspicuous role in bridal array. It is not alone spotted for frocks, but its favor is reflected in the lovely hats which milliners are creating for bridesmaids this spring. If the hat be net all of lace, then it is apt to have a lace edge, while many large hair capelines are elaborated with bands of either broad lace or straw lace.

Fatigue is the signal to rest. Obey it if you can. When you can't, keep cool and carry on in comfort.

Bayer Aspirin was meant for just such times, because it insures your comfort. Freedom from pains that nag at nerves and wear you down. One tablet will block a threatening headache while it's still a just a threat. Take two or three tablets when you have caught a cold, and that's usually the end of it.

Carry Bayer Aspirin when you travel. Have some at home. It will often "save the day."

From a grumbling tooth to those rheumatic pains, Bayer Aspirin is ready with its quick relief—and it always works. Neuralgia. Neuritis. Any nagging, needless pain.

Get the genuine tablets, stamped with the Bayer cross. Why experiment with imitations coating a few cents less? The saving is too little. There is too much at stake. But there is economy in the purchase of genuine Bayer Aspirin tablets in the large bottles.

PATENTS

Poland's Women Warriors

Compulsory military service for women will be established in Poland if the women M. P.'s of that country have their way. They are bringing in legislation to introduce conscription for women. The scheme provides for the formation of a special women's army, in which girls will be required to serve when they attain the age of eighteen. The service period is to be 18 months. In the event of war, the women who have passed through this force will form a special military reserve. Various duties connected with social work and public health are to be entrusted to this woman's army, and it will probably be organized and trained rather on the lines of the British wartime women's army auxiliary corps. But women have also taken part in actual fighting as combatant troops.—Montreal Herald.

POISON in Your bowels!

Poisons absorbed into the system from souring waste in the bowels, cause that dull, headachy, sluggish, bilious condition; coat the tongue; foul the breath; sap energy, strength and nerve-force. A little of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin will clear up trouble like that, gently, harmoniously, in a hurry. The difference it will make in your feelings over night will prove its merit to you.

Dr. Caldwell studied constipation for over forty-seven years. This long experience enabled him to make his prescription just what men, women, old people and children need to make their bowels help themselves. Its natural, mild, thorough action and its pleasant taste commended it to everyone. That's why "Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin," as it is called, is the most popular laxative druggists sell.

LESSON TEXT—Luke 19:1-10.
GOLDEN TEXT—For the Son of Man is come to seek and to save that which is lost.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus Makes a Bad Man Good.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus Makes Zacchaeus Want to Do Right.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Beginning a New Life.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Repentance and Restitution.

I. Jesus Passing Through Jericho (v. 1).

Jericho is noted as a stronghold of the Canaanites which was miraculously delivered into the hands of Israel in response to their faith. Joshua 6, and also for the faith of Rahab which saved her from destruction with the city Heb. (11:31). Two notorious sinners, Rahab and Zacchaeus, were saved at Jericho.

II. Zacchaeus Seeking Jesus (vv. 2-4).

1. His object (v. 3).
He sought to see who Jesus was. He doubtless had heard of Jesus' kind treatment of publicans, so was prompted to see what kind of a man he was.

2. His difficulties (v. 2, 3).

(1) His infamous business (v. 2).
He was a tax collector of the Roman government. The very fact that a Jew held such an office under the hated Romans would make him extremely unpopular. Then, since he was rich, it was evident that he had practiced extortion in collecting taxes. By virtue of his traitorous act in accepting such an office from the Romans and his extortion in collecting taxes, he was ostracized from society. Many men have a hard time in coming to Christ because of their unpopular business relations.

(2) His shortness of stature (v. 3).

He was too small to crowd his way through to Jesus, and being hated by the people, they had thrust him aside, no doubt, with taunts and jeers.

3. His persistence (v. 4).

He ran before the multitude and climbed up into a tree. What he lacked in stature he was determined should be made up by the height of the tree. Zacchaeus seems to have been of that temperament which knows no defeat. The obstacles placed before him be brushed aside; those he could not brush aside he climbed over, his heart set upon the goal.

III. Jesus Finding Zacchaeus (vv. 5, 6).

While Zacchaeus was trying to see Jesus, Jesus was looking for him. This is always the case, when desire is stirred up in a heart to see Jesus, Jesus is seeking that one. When Jesus saw him he commanded him to come down from the tree, and declared his intention to go home with him. Jesus called him by name, but did not utter a word which would humiliate Zacchaeus. Jesus knew his heart's desire and dealt with him accordingly. All souls who earnestly seek Jesus shall be found of him. Zacchaeus quickly responded. He came down, and with joy received Jesus. He acted wisely in that he did not hesitate. A moment's indecision and waiting would have kept Zacchaeus from Jesus—from Jesus and salvation.

IV. Zacchaeus' Conversion (vv. 7-10).

His conversion was sudden and thorough. He was converted before he reached the ground.

1. What the crowd said (v. 7).

They said just what they say today when sinners come to Christ. They call to mind the man's former sins. They also reproached Christ saying that he had gone to be a guest with this notorious extortioner, the tax collector. That for which they reproached Jesus was his glory. His supreme mission was to save sinners (v. 10).

2. What Zacchaeus said (v. 8).

His conversion was thorough. It took hold upon his heart. His new life was begun with resolution and restitution. He dedicated half of his goods to the poor. The man who a little while ago was a grafter was now a generous giver. His conversion got hold of his pocketbook. His determination to make restitution wherein he had wrongly exacted taxes shows the genuineness of his conversion. While God forgets the past of the sinner when he comes to Christ, the sinner who is converted will seek to make right all wrongs, be they unkind words or unrighteous deeds. Sorrow for sin is not enough when restitution is possible.

3. What Jesus said (vv. 9, 10).

"Today is salvation come to thy house." The publican was now a child of God, a son of Abraham. Salvation is a present reality to those who receive Jesus Christ.

The Bible.

Hold fast to the Bible as the sheet anchor of our liberties; write its precepts on your hearts and practice them in your lives. To the influence of this book we are indebted for the progress made in free civilization, and to this we must look as our guide in the future.—W. S. Grant.

Machines That Are Almost Human

By E. C. TAYLOR

The "Thinking Machine"

PROBABLY the nearest approach to a machine that can think for itself is a device in the Massachusetts Institute of Technology in Boston, Mass. This machine has the power to rapidly and accurately solve problems in higher mathematics that are beyond the powers of the human brain as yet demonstrated.

Its technical name is the Michelson-Stratton harmonic analyzer and was invented to aid Prof. Charles A. Michelson of the University of Chicago in his studies of the speed and curves of light.

This wonderful machine won't have anything to do with problems in simple arithmetic or algebra. But it dotes on calculus, that highest branch of mathematics which is a short cut in solving problems by means of mathematical equations.

Any problem can be submitted to this machine, and the correct answer will be forthcoming in a few minutes. It would take human beings anywhere from a month to a year to get the answers to these same problems, provided the human being could get them at all, and the machine is absolutely accurate. It eliminates weeks and months of intensive thought. Think of the saving it effects in the wear and tear on the brains of scientists and engineers!

All engineers must know accurately beforehand that if certain work is done in a given way, it will produce the result they desire. This often necessitates a waste of time, labor and materials.

Scientists themselves call the Michelson-Stratton device a real "thinking machine." It takes almost any differential equation of the second order in calculus and by a combination of mechanical and electrical means perfects the computations. It does this beyond the power of the human brain so far demonstrated. And it does it in from five minutes to half a day, where it would take expert mathematicians from weeks to a year to attempt to get the answer.

The mainspring of the device is the common meter by which the flow of electric current into homes and factories is measured.

The problems to be solved are submitted to the machine as questions in the form of calculus equations. Each equation is written on a separate piece of paper, and one operator is at hand for each question asked.

These sheets of paper are fastened to a series of moving tables above which are mounted pointers which can be moved perpendicularly to the tables and which increase or diminish the flow of electricity through the meter.

The meter traces a curve to show the result as the tables move under the pointers, and it is a simple task for mathematicians to translate the curve into the mathematical equation that is the answer to their problem.

One of the first problems placed before this remarkable machine proved its value to scientists and engineers. An engineer had drawn complete plans for a new type of electric motor. He wanted to know all about its performance in advance. So he asked the Michelson-Stratton harmonic analyzer.

The machine was asked how fast the motor could go; the best speed at which it should be operated; how long it would last if operated at different speeds, and similar questions that naturally arose in the mind of the inventor.

The questions were placed in the machine, the tables moved, the curve was drawn, and the engineer had his answer. The machine replied to them all, and told him in a short time how his motor best should be built and best operated. Tests of the actual motor made during the next two years showed that the machine was absolutely accurate in its answers.

This is the only machine of its kind in the world. Other harmonic analyzers have been built and some are in use in other scientific institutions, but they cannot approach the Michelson-Stratton "thinking machine" in their ability to solve problems that task the human brain.

Where Clemenceau Died

While the question whether the apartment in the Rue Franklin, Paris, where Georges Clemenceau died is to have official status as a national museum remains unsettled, it is actually being maintained as an unofficial museum by "The Tiger's" faithful old valet, Albert. Hardly a day passes that a number of persons apply to Albert for permission to see the study where his master worked on his memoirs almost up to the moment of his death. Albert has jealously seen to it that everything is just as it was the day M. Clemenceau died. Even the desk calendar remains untouched, marking the date of November 24, 1929. The old-fashioned quill pen M. Clemenceau preferred reposes under the desk blotter. One of his reference books is open at the page he last consulted.

Stamping Out Disease

The public health service says that the system of control of domestic ports and of medical inspection at foreign ports was so good last year that no instance of the importation of a quarantizable disease occurred. Bad Stomach Cause of Bad Skin

You can't expect to have a good clear skin if your stomach is weak and disordered. Undigested food sends poisons through the body, pimples appear, skin grows sallow and loses color. But these troubles will end quickly and skin clear up if you will start today taking Tania.

Tania is made from herbs, barks and roots. A tablespoonful before each meal stimulates the digestion naturally so that you can digest what you eat. And when your stomach is in good shape again watch how quickly skin begins to clear up. At your druggist's. Money back if it doesn't help you.

Portuguese Fear Census

Census taking in Portugal spells terror to the heart of the popular masses. In an effort to get at rest people who see in the census official, the forbidding figure of the tax collector, a campaign has begun to teach the significance and value of the census. After sermons in churches, hand bills, posters and newspaper stories had failed to enlighten the public, authorities had thousands of bills thrown from airplanes.

Like a Symphony... the best Gasoline is Blended

ITS primer knowledge to the orchestra conductor that each group of instruments in the ensemble brings a necessary influence into the symphony's finished blend of tone. In the unaccompanied "oomph" of the bass horns the overtones of melody provided by singing violins and mellow woodwinds is lacking. All must be blended by the baton of the conductor according to the expert formula of the composer before the perfection of the symphony is achieved.

CONOCO long has realized that harmony is as necessary to gasoline as to music. So CONOCO gasoline is blended—and balanced. One type of gasoline is no more satisfactory than is an orchestra of bass horns. So CONOCO refiners take the three types containing the elements of the perfect fuel and deftly combine them until they blend in absolute harmony.

That's why CONOCO contains: Natural Gasoline, for quick starting... Straight-run Gasoline, for power and long mileage... Cracked Gasoline, for its anti-knock qualities.

No single type of gasoline can contain all these qualities. They are present, though, in CONOCO Gasoline... blended there into a symphony, harmonious whole, with CONOCO's master refiners welding the baton. For, after all, it's in knowing how. That's why some musical directors, as well as some refiners, achieve fame. You'll find this triple-test gasoline with the balanced-blend wherever you see the CONOCO Red Triangle.

EDITORIAL COLUMN

Soaking the Public

Ex-president Coolidge, in his daily writings, propounds some hard questions for politicians to answer. He recently pointed out the simple fact that when Congress passes laws for spending money, the people have to pay for them. Also, when Congress creates a deficit, the people pay, not the men who pass the laws.

The smaller the business and the smaller the income, the harder the tax load hits it. The small earner and the small business, in paying rent and buying supplies, are charged with all the taxes that accumulate on land and manufactured goods.

So, when a single Congress appropriates $10,200,000,000 during one session, as it did during the last one, the man on the street—the taxpayer—is the one who will ultimately dig up the money to pay the bill.

It makes no difference how well the politicians camouflage their tax-raising schemes as assessments against the wealthy, as inheritance taxes, intangible taxes, excise taxes, or what-egs, the laboring men and women will feel the effect in higher prices, higher rents, depressed business, fewer jobs, lower wages, or actual lack of employment.

Tax money does not grow on trees. It comes out of the pockets of the people. You can't "soak" a corporation without "soaking" the consumer, and you can't "soak" the consumer without "soaking" the corporation—in both cases you "soak" the buying power of the nation and tend to cause depression and stagnation.—The Manufacturer.

Fish For Lincoln County

In line with the policy established by the Game Department in the past two years, trout are being planted in different streams of the state of sufficient size to come within the legal limit this season.

Last Saturday, John P. Bengard, superintendent of all state fish hatcheries, arrived in Carrizozo with two trucks loaded with Rainbow trout, between three and 4,000, ranging in size from 6 to 9 inches in length. These two loads were planted in the Ruidoso in the North and South forks inside the Indian Reservation.

The plan of the present game commission is to continue planting trout of this size through the entire fishing season. Another load will be in Carrizozo next Sunday, one truck to Three Rivers and the other to Ruidoso.

A new tank has been added to the equipment of the State Fish department which eliminates loss in long trips from the state hatchery at Lisboa Springs. It is a compartment tank which holds approximately 2,000 fish, and oxygen is supplied from small high compression tanks from the driver's seat of the truck.

Of the loads received last Sat-loading at Lisboa Springs at 2 a. m., leaving the hatchery at 3 a. m. These same trucks arrived at the river on the Ruidoso at 3:15 p. m. and when unloaded, the tank where oxygen had been supplied enroute, had only one dead fish. Under the old method without the use of oxygen supplied from tanks, it was not unusual to have a loss of 100 or more from one load.

MOHAIR FAVORITE AUTO UPHOLSTERY FABRIC

CAR'S INTERIOR ATTRACTS WOMEN

Upholstery May Enhance Comfort, Smartness and Ultimate Value of Car.

WHEN it comes to selecting the family automobile, a good basis of procedure is that adopted by the sight-weary American tourist who sold to his partner when they came to the next important cathedral: "You do the inside and I'll do the outside."

This average woman is quite content to have her husband concern himself with the body of the car, the wheel-base and general mechanics, provided she may have something to say about the inside. The car's clothing, as its upholstery may well be called, is equally important with the rest of the car, for upon it depends much of the comfort, smartness, beauty and ultimate value of the car.

In choosing the upholstery for the interior, a number of distinct features should be considered—good appearance, smart design, pleasing color, wearing quality, riding comfort, cleanliness and economy. The only material that can be depended on to embrace these important features in one fabric is velvet-mohair, otherwise known as velmo, and made from the lustrous fleeces of the Angora goat. Because of its original snowy whiteness, mohair can be dyed any shade, however subtle. Its lustrous sheen and soft, silky texture leave nothing to be desired in the way of beauty and luxurious appearance, while the long wearing quality of pile-mohair, as contrasted with that of flat fabrics, is undisputed. A velmo upholstered car will be fresh and inviting long after the rest of the car has lost its good appearance or even given itself up to the infirmities of age. Because of the smooth surface of individual mohair fibres, discernible only under a microscope, dirt does not readily adhere to nor penetrate them, and the material is easily cleaned with a whiskbroom or by vacuum. Actual grease or dirt spots are removed by washing with pure soap and warm water.

Easy riding, an important feature when taking long trips, is assured with mohair velvet because there is no slipping and sliding about, as with smooth fabrics, and each fibre of the pile fabric acts as a resilient spring to absorb shocks. It is easier on the clothing, too, as the reduced friction avoids rubbing and subsequent shininess.

Added to these advantages is the additional one that they all add materially to the trade-in value of the car when the time comes to get a new one. In fact, it has been conservatively estimated that anywhere from fifty to two hundred dollars difference can be looked for in a car whose upholstery is in perfect condition and inviting to the eye.

Offer Prize for Oldest Piece of Mohair

Have you a mohair-covered chair or sofa in your home? If so, you may be $250 the richer for it!

This paper is in receipt of a message from the Household Science Institute, Chicago, asking for help in locating the oldest piece of mohair-upholstered furniture in the United States. The style of the sought-for furniture, its use or non-use at the present time are not important, providing it is in good condition. Its owner will be awarded $250, and the piece itself will be exhibited with other old-time furniture during the World's Fair in Chicago in 1933.

Back of the Institute's offer is the desire of Grace Valli Gray, its director, to ascertain the longevity of mohair. It is claimed that unless deliberately injured no instance has as yet been found of a mohair wearing through.

Readers who feel that they have something of interest should communicate with Mrs. Gray at the Household Science Institute, 7 South Dearborn Street, Chicago, giving the history of the piece in mind.

Alfonso of Spain Surrenders Power, but Does Not Abdicate—Illinois Governor Vetoes "Wet" Bill—Nicholas Longworth Buried.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

Ex-King Alfonso

AS KING ALFONSO and members of the royal family scattered into exile, leaders of the Spanish republic moved to insure the life of the new regime and to make royalty's return to Spain impossible.

The prison gates of Barcelona, Valencia, Jaca and other cities were opened for thousands of political and revolutionary hostages, incarcerated during the dictatorships of the last eight years, while crowds boisterously celebrated the death of the monarchy and the birth of the republic. Don Niceto Alcalá Zamora, provisional president of Spain, at once assumed power.

Born on May 17, 1856, six months after the death of his father, Alfonso XII, Alfonso XIII automatically became the king of Spain. His mother, Queen Maria Christina, was appointed regent and ruled the country as sovereign until Alfonso became sixteen, when, according to Spanish constitutional law, he reached his majority and came into his full kingship.

Alfonso made no bluff of abdicating in favor of his son. The kingdom of Spain is at an end. And Alfonso, by yielding without bloodshed, won for himself a unique honor. He did not have to take to his heels and scamper for his life. He went out of Spain in a dignified way, a man who feels that he has served his nation well and who knows himself worthy of this last mark of consideration.

It will be interesting to watch the developments in Madrid during the next few weeks, for the trend in government on the continent of Europe has not been wholly a victory for present-day democracy. In certain countries, notably France, a republican government has functioned with admirable stability. In others the tendency has been toward dictatorships.

And the chief difference between a monarchy and a dictatorship is that individual ability and dominance, rather than accident of birth, bring about the selection of the ruler.

IN ASSUMING his duties as viceroy to India, Lord Willingdon finds the country vastly more complex and infinitely more difficult to deal with than was the Dominion of Canada. Instead of having to handle 10,000,000 people with only two principal languages, the new governor general has 250,000,000 speaking 222 vernaculars, all crowded in a space about half the size of Canada.

Lord Willingdon is facing a country not only clamoring for the right to shape her own destiny but one beset with acute racial and religious cleavages and animosities, with Hindus outnumbering Moslems by 3 to 1.

To be sure, every viceroy has had this Moslem-Hindu communal problem to struggle with. Observers in India say it will always exist, as long as the Hindus worship the cow and the Moslems eat it, for it is the so-called deprecation of this animal that causes most race riots.

One of the few bright spots Lord Willingdon will find is that the Nationalists are now at peace with the British government. But how long this will last depends on what measure of independence Gandhi secures when he goes to the second "round table" conference in London this summer.

If increased remuneration and honors are any compensation for the trials he must face, Lord Willingdon may find some satisfaction in the fact that his $50,000 salary as governor general of Canada is doubled and his expense allowance quadrupled.

THE Funeral of

Nicholas Longworth at Cincinnati was attended by notable men from all parts of the United States, all of them warm friends of the late speaker of the house of representatives. President Hoover laid aside pressing public duties to do honor to the memory of Mr. Longworth. Affectionate tributes from all parts of the world laid stress upon his attractive personality. These expressions, and the high esteem manifested by the public and through the press, are a rich legacy of comfort to his family.

Mrs. Longworth

Mr. Longworth's death has, of course, completely changed the course of events in the house. A struggle for the speakership would have occurred in any event, but it was taken for granted that Mr. Longworth would command all the votes of his party and thus hold an even chance of winning the speakership. The Republicans must now choose a candidate for speaker, and he will face the difficult task of reconciling the entire party. Although a few Republicans had threatened to elect "Big" Lacey worth's personal popularity was such that a solid party vote was confidently expected to appear when needed. Now the would-be bolters may not be drawn into line by personal affection for the party leader.

Archibald Roosevelt, brother of Mrs. Nicholas Longworth, said that his sister "has never and will not seek political office."

Roosevelt made this statement at the Longworth home and added that "my sister will of course go back to Washington where she has a residence but Cincinnati is her home and she intends to make it such in the future."

Further than this, he said, Mrs. Longworth has no future plans.

This would seem definitely to set at rest rumors that Mrs. Longworth would be a candidate for her late husband's seat in congress.

Gov. L. L. Emmerson

GOV. LOUIS L. EMMERSON, contrary to expectations, vetoed the bill for the repeal of the Illinois search and seizure laws.

The measure, which would have placed Illinois sixth in the column of states repealing their prohibition enforcement acts, had been enacted by the state senate by only a two-vote margin, 20 to 24.

The vote for it in the house had been 91 to 50. Several of those who voted for repeal in the senate, where the turn of two votes would have changed the vote, frankly admitted they voted for it only because of the referendum, by which the voters of Illinois, by a large majority, expressed their approval of repeal.

Governor Emmerson, however, left the way open for alterations in the repealer, which he said would cause it to meet with his approval.

He declared in his veto message that if the repealer had continued a referendum provision "so that the people of the state, with the full knowledge of the consequences, could vote on wiping out all state liquor legislation without regard to the Constitution of the United States, I should feel compelled to sign the bill."

The governor asserted that the efforts of Illinois "wets" to strike all prohibition laws from the statute books was nullificationism.

CHAIRMAN JAMES C. STONE of the federal farm board said in a recent statement that Russian activities in the dumping of wheat "were largely responsible for demoralizing the world market and necessitating a renewal of the wheat stabilization operations in the middle of last November to prevent further effects of that collapse from being felt in our own market."

That is to say, the dumping of Russian wheat into the markets of Europe at any price it would bring was largely the cause of that great accumulation of wheat in storage which now embarrasses the board and the market. That Russia was the main cause of that calamitous slump in wheat last November is a fact that is not questioned by responsible authorities anywhere in the world.

Yet little or none of this wheat came to America. The tariff on wheat is practically prohibitive, even for Russia. And we can if we wish effectively prevent the entry of any Russian products. That, however, will not enable us to escape the consequences of Russia's prodigious economic program, the most extensive and the most audacious economic experiment in the world's history. It need not touch us directly at any point but we cannot escape it. Russia is in a position to make the price in the world market, and it will not be a profitable price.

Much the same situation is developing in relation to lumber and oil. Russia has a larger area of useful timber than any country in the world and as fast as it can, by forced labor, it is turning that timber into lumber in order to realize cash or credit on it from its sales in the markets of the world. The effect on lumber prices must be similar to that on wheat.

The world of the established order has never been confronted by such an economic menace as Russia now presents, not to speak of its social and political menace.

IN THE federal court at Evansville, Ind., Harry E. Rowbottom, former representative in congress of the First Indiana district, was convicted of accepting bribes from persons who sought post office appointments.

The former congressman was sentenced immediately by Judge Charles H. Woodward to serve one year and one day in Leavenworth penitentiary and was fined $2,000.

In refusing a request to have the defendant placed on probation because of his physical condition and on the grounds that others involved in the post office deals were not indicted, Judge Woodward said: "Respect for public office is lessened if they may be bought and sold. The offense of which this defendant has been found guilty is grave. I do not deem it necessary to impose the extreme penalty but the sentence must be of such a nature as to deter other congressmen from such practices."

The ex-congressman, testifying as a witness, told of receiving money from job seekers, but insisted it came to him with expressions of sympathy over his unsuccessful campaign for re-election last November.

Secretary Adams

ADVISES received at Panama City by officials of the Standard Fruit Steamship company at Cristobal said three United States marines were killed in an attack by a large force of bandits on the commissary at Logtown, Nicaragua, seven miles from Puerto Cabezas. Puerto Cabezas is on the northeastern coast of Nicaragua.

The three marines, listed as killed in the reports to the steamship company were Capt. Harlan Pelley, Lieutenant Darrah and Sergeant Taylor. Several native employees of the commissary also were killed, the report said.

Rev. Karl Bergener of Watertown, Wis., a Moravian missionary in the Prinzapjka district, was reliably reported killed when Capa Gracias a Dios was captured by insurgents. Other American residents of Capa Gracias a Dios include Albert and Edwin Fagot of New Orleans, and William J. Green of Allegheny, Pa.

RUTH NICHOLS, Rye (N. Y.) aviatrix, set a new speed record for women over a three-kilometer course at Detroit (slightly less than two miles) with a speed of 210.683 miles an hour. Amelia Earhart-Putnam held the previous record of 181.157 miles an hour.

Miss Nichols flew the Lockheed-Vega plane in which she set a woman's altitude record in March, over an official course laid out near the flying field.

Harry H. Knepper of the National Aeronautical association, checked the flight, and R. A. Leavell, another aeronautical official, timed the race. Miss Nichols made two round trips over the course and the speed was the average of the four flights. In the trips against the wind she was timed at 101.030 and 202.814 miles an hour, and with the wind the times were 221.525 and 220.550.

The only comment the aviatrix made was that "there wasn't anything particularly exciting about the flight."

PROHIBITION DIRECTOR WOODCOCK announced a new high peak in federal prohibition enforcement for the month of March, with more arrests and more automobiles seized than in any similar period since July.

He declared it was "the best month the bureau has had since I took office nearly a year ago. Notwithstanding the increased activity the courts more than kept up with us. There were 23,658 cases on the docket at the end of February and only 21,543 on April 1.

"Further," he claimed, "we have established a definite trend in these figures showing that the average of fines is steadily decreasing while the average of jail sentences has been steadily increasing in the nine months since prohibition enforcement was transferred from the Treasury to the Justice department."

A DANGEROUSLY complicated situation has arisen in the political situation developing in Europe, especially in connection with the Austro-German tariff union and the forthcoming visit of the German chancellor and foreign minister to London for conferences with British government leaders.

Behind the official silence in various capitals many French observers saw important issues centering in the tariff agreement and in the Franco-Italian naval accord, which it was said France is attempting to drop because the government was never fully convinced that it was profitable.

France desires to remain on friendly terms with Britain, because Foreign Minister Aristide Briand has asked the British foreign secretary, Arthur Henderson, to use pressure on Germany to modify the tariff accord when the German chancellor goes to England next month.

Briand has been placed in an exceedingly embarrassing position because of the possibility that he will be elected President of the republic in May, while he would prefer to conclude the naval accord with Italy by concluding his work at the Quai d'Orsay.

The SEALED TRUNK

It didn't startle Max, for he answered readily enough, "No, I just happened to run across her there."

"So you helped her buy her ticket and check her trunk and then you saw her off on the train. And now you've heard my trunk has been stolen you think that must be the one you checked?"

"Well, it seems kind of queer, her going off to New York like that without letting you know anything about it. You said you'd lost some money, didn't you? She's got that, too, if you ask me. She certainly talked as if she had plenty. She told me she was taking her vacation late so that the big burg would be running full time when she got there."

Involuntarily Rhoda started at that. Babe had been talking about that sort of vacation ever since she and Rhoda had begun living together. She'd used that very phrase. Max couldn't have made it up. He had met Babe at the station then and she had made him think she was going to New York.

"Why? Why had she gone to the station? Why, for that matter, had Max gone there himself? Had he meant to go to New York on that train? With her three hundred dollars and her trunk?"

Well, how about Claire? Where did she come in? Or didn't she come in? Had he ditched Claire, or tried to? Was that what the telephone message had been about? Never mind that now. Whatever Max had tried to do he'd failed. Rhoda remembered how he'd looked when he came into the room.

"I wish you'd tell me," she said, looking at him in as childlike a manner as she could manage, "what the terrible thing was that Babe did to you."

"Never mind about that," he growled at her. "Get off it! It's no business of yours. You've got enough to worry about with what she did to you."

"I don't think," she told him cheerfully, "that I've anything to worry about at all. I think she's got my trunk back. You see I was talking to her on the telephone just now, when you came in here."

"This proved one dart too many and he came for her; not blindly, either. He seized her arm with a wrench that made her want to cry out, and jerked her to her feet."

"Get out of here!" he said. "I'll make it worth your while to talk to me some other time, if you get out now before my uncle finds you here."

For an instant she stared up at him blankly, the realization breaking over her that he didn't know she'd already seen his uncle; that he thought she was voluntarily waiting for him. "All right," she said, "I'll go. But you'll have to show me the way out."

He didn't altogether release her, but his grip on her arm relaxed as he started leading her toward the door she had come in by. Half-way to it they were halted by Conley's voice. He had come in by one of the smaller doors.

Conley came up to them briskly. "Let the girl alone," he continued. "She's no affair of yours. Mr. Forster wants her to wait here."

Now Max did let go her arm, but it was in obedience to Conley's order. "Lay off it," he said. "You aren't in on this. This young lady's a friend of mine and now she's talked to me she doesn't want to see C. J."

Conley, agreed with a grin. "I guess she doesn't. But she don't leave this room until the boss comes back."

Glancing up at Max, Rhoda could see that that word, "back," troubled him, though he hadn't yet made out the implication in it.

Rhoda started for the door, and she kept on going, though Conley barked at her. "Come back here, you!" She was aware that Max interposed to check Conley's rush for her. The last thing she heard before she closed the door after her was the thud of a heavy blow, and she inferred from the fact that she wasn't immediately pursued and dragged back, that the recipient of it must have been Conley.

She walked—It seemed safer somehow than breaking into a run—down the broad corridor and around the corner, retracing her way in, although it was a stairway she hoped to find rather than the elevator. However, by almost unbelievable good luck, she found the elevator there, waiting for her, with both its own door and the outer guard gate standing wide open.

There was no attendant there. It was one of those mysterious little elevators you were supposed to run yourself. She swiftly scrutinized the little row of push buttons, and pressed the one marked "Down." There was a faint, protesting buzz, but nothing happened. In less desperate haste she might have reflected that an automatic elevator which could descend its shaft while its guard gate stood open would be a veritable death-trap, but on the verge of panic as she was, she couldn't think at all.

voice swept over her and, even before she consciously recognized it or took any meaning from what it said, all but paralyzed her with childlike terror.

Very well. But I warn you, you are making a serious mistake. I shall find her in spite of you, and if necessary, in spite of herself. She is a minor and I am her guardian—in effect, at any rate. Her interests are in my hands and I shall protect them."

It was six years since she had heard those heavy menacing tones. It was her uncle, William Royce—the ogre! She fled now, as a child would, running blindly down one corridor, up another, turning corners at random. There must be a stairway somewhere.

She was just getting over this panic and beginning to try to feel ashamed of it when it was renewed by the sound of heavy and, to her ears, ogreish footsteps coming briskly along the transverse corner which she was approaching. She was passing, at the instant, a door which stood ajar. Instinctively she pushed it open and stepped into the room it gave upon.

The room was dark, but she perceived at once it wasn't empty, since a woman's silhouette was visible against one of the windows. The woman hadn't heard her come in, since she neither spoke nor moved.

But the footsteps which had frightened Rhoda were now just outside the door and pausing there. The man was coming in too. She wasn't cornered yet, however, for another door communicating with the adjoining room stood open too, and she retreated through it just before the man switched on the light.

The next moment she heard Max Lewis demanding angrily, "What the devil are you doing here?" He hadn't seen her, though; he was speaking to the woman.

CHAPTER XI

To the Rescue

Babe and Martin stood staring at each other across a dead telephone.

"What do you suppose made her voice sound so funny?" Babe asked. "Sure it was hers, are you?" he shot at her.

"Oh," cried Babe disgustedly, "don't I know Ned's voice? Look here, have you really got anything on your mind, or are you just generally cuckoo—about her, I mean?"

"I've got that Cleveland woman on my mind," he answered, "and a man named C. J. Forster, who wants to get hold of her pretty badly, and I don't know why. He's been advertising for her and somehow or other has managed to find her."

Babe asked, rather tensely, "how he knew?"

"It was Forster," he told her, "who brought you two down to work this morning in his limousine. Where did he pick you up? Just as you were leaving the building here?"

She answered with a nod. "I guess it's my fault, if anything's happened," she said, pretty humbly for Babe. "I know how he found her, all right. You see, I answered his ad myself. He telephoned me in the morning after Max had brought me home. Max had asked me that night if her real name wasn't Rhoda McFarland. I took the ad over the phone and got Forster's name and address. I'd tried to get Red to answer it the night before but she wouldn't. It said 'something to her advantage' and I thought it probably was. So I called him up at lunch time at the Worcester and told him if he'd write her a letter, care of me, I'd forward it to her. I didn't see how that gave her away, but it must have, somehow. I suppose you'd like to beat me up for butting in like that."

He patted her shoulder instead. "It's no use worrying about that now," he said. "I'm glad you told me. It's between him and the Cleveland woman, then. They are fighting each other, that's one good thing. But one of them has got her, somehow. If that had been a plain broken connection she'd have called again."

The telephone bell interrupted him. Babe was nearer and caught up the instrument before he could get to it.

"Red!" she cried, "is that you?"

But it wasn't Rhoda. Babe was looking rather puzzled. "No," Martin heard her say. "She hasn't come back yet. We're expecting her. . . . This is her friend, Babe Jennings. Say, who is this?"

Martin started over to take the telephone away from her, but she clung to it pressing the mouthpiece tight against her chest.

"Martin!" she cried excitedly, "I think it's the woman at the station—the Cleveland woman! Listen and see if she sounds like she did when you telephoned to her this afternoon!"

He'd been motioning at her frantically to take the transmitter away. "She can hear every word you say when you hold it like that. Talk to her! Ask her where she is. Give me the receiver so I can hear what she says!"

But all he was in time to hear was the click of disconnection. Claire had hung up on them.

"Well," Martin remarked as he himself hung up, "thanks to that cheat trick of yours she knows how we framed her, and Max this afternoon. But she hasn't got Rhoda or she wouldn't have called up here to ask for her. That makes the Worcester our best bet. I'm going there now and try to find her. You stick tight, you understand—to that telephone so that you can answer the second she calls, if she does call again."

With that he snatched his hat and fled.

Fifteen minutes later, in a telephone booth in the lobby of the Worcester hotel, he looked up Forster's number and telephoned for there.

When a man's voice answered with a "Hello? Who is this?" he said that he was a reporter from the News and he wanted a personal interview with Mr. C. J. Forster. The rather surprising answer came back, "This is Mr. Forster speaking. What was it you wanted to speak to me about?"

Apart from the fact that you wouldn't have expected Forster to answer his own phone, there were two queer things about this. The rhythm of his talk wasn't right. The man wasn't speaking for himself. He was being prompted. This meant, of course, that he wasn't Forster but was impersonating him under orders from some one else. The other strange thing was that his voice was one that Martin half recognized; felt, at least, that he ought to be able to recognize.

"I don't much want to talk about it over the telephone," Martin said, and then added casually, "and I don't believe you do, either."

Evidently they—whatever they were at the other end—had to go into conference over this remark, for it produced quite a silence. Finally the man who said he was Forster asked, "Who are you? What's your name?"

On Martin's telling him he said: "If you're really got anything to say you can have your interview. But you'll have to tell me what it's about."

"It's about," said Martin, "the disappearance of Miss Rhoda McFarland. Do I get my interview?"

There was a long silence at that. Evidently they were having an argument about it.

"Nothing doing," the voice said at last. "I don't know that she's disappeared. I don't know that there's any such person."

"You don't want to say, then, why you've been advertising for her?"

The only answer he got to that question was a click which meant that the other receiver had been slammed down on the hook. So Martin hung up, too, and left the booth.

The first thing to find out was the number of Forster's apartment, and of course, the obvious way would be to walk up to the desk and ask the clerk. But instinctively he shied at that. Forster was no ordinary transient guest here. A man as rich as he was, and permanently domiciled here, would have special defenses. You wouldn't be able to mention his name without starting something. The better way would be to drift into casual talk with somebody, a bell hop or the girl who sold theater tickets, lead up to his question and ask it lolly. But it wasn't so easy as it looked, for traps that question set it would sound casual. And if he failed, if his question roused suspicion, he'd be worse off than if he'd gone straight to the clerk in the first place.

His gaze was questioning about the lobby, noting everything that everybody did, studying faces in the hope of finding one dull and friendly and unsuspecting enough to suit his purpose. The man who had just come down in one of the elevators and now stood talking to the captain hadn't a face like that; very much the contrary, in fact, bleak and rocky as a chunk of the great American desert and he talked as if he were biting off the heads of snafish nails.

Martin stared at him, regardless of the risk of catching his eye, until, in his own mind's eye, he had put a derby hat on his head and a brown overcoat on his back and a little leather notebook in his hand, and recognized him. He was the man who had come to the studio last night, getting names for the new-city directory. And this identification led on so quickly to another that it was like firing the second barrel of a shotgun. This was the man whose voice he had just now been trying to remember, the man on the telephone who had been pretending he was Forster.

It seemed a reasonable guess that the instructions Blue Serge was giving the captain were that any reporter or other inquisitive person, asking questions about C. J. Forster or trying to get through to him was to be dealt with in a special manner.

Satisfied that the captain understood these instructions, whatever they were, Blue Serge left him and crossed the lobby to the desk. Here his business was not with the clerk but with the manager, who promptly came out of his little private office to talk with him. The manager was taking orders, too, with an alertness which showed he recognized their importance.

Leaving the desk and a completely instructed manager behind it, the man in the blue serge suit now started across the lobby in a new direction; one that would bring him, unless he veered off, uncomfortably close to Martin's chair. But before this embarrassment became acute he was diverted by one of the bellboys who crossed his path. The boy seemed perfectly unaware of him, but Blue Serge, after a sharp look, turned on his heel and went back to the desk, summoned the manager again, brought him out into the lobby a little way, and nodded after the boy. Then he went on and disappeared into an elevator.

The manager, returning to his office, paused for a word to the bell captain. The bell captain spoke to the boy Blue Serge had pointed out. The boy, with a look of surprise, went into the manager's office to come out again a minute or two later flushed, indignant, and, without, profoundly puzzled. Something had happened to him that he seemed utterly at a loss to account for; discipline, evidently, that he felt to be undeserved. He was coming along slowly in Martin's direction. That was luck.

But it wasn't until the boy was in the act of passing his chair that the significance of the little play clicked into a pattern in the reporter's mind. That boy had seen something. He possessed, probably without suspecting it, some piece of damaging information, and they'd taken measures to prevent his giving that information away. Martin rose from his chair just when his doing so intercepted the boy's progress toward the door.

"I guess you're looking for me," he said.

The boy stopped in surprise and answered, "I'm not looking for anybody, that I know of. What made you think I was looking for you?"

Martin took the plunge. "If they just laid you off," he said, "I think I can tell you why they did. Who's the hatchet-faced man in the blue serge suit who works for Forster? He pointed you out to the manager just now."

"Do you mean Conley? I haven't done anything to him. Say, who are you? How do you know they laid me off?"

"Conley's expecting a reporter around here in a few minutes, a reporter from the Daily News who's trying to find out about the disappearance of a girl. He had you laid off because he thought you knew something about her."

When he saw it going boldly up from the second room he entered—evidently the stenographers' room, since there were four typewriter desks in it—his first thought was that this was too easy to be true. It wasn't as easy as it looked, however, for he found at the head of it a solid mahogany door leading to a full set of tools to get in through that door, he thought despairingly.

Colors Not Important in Emotional Effects

In a recent popular article, similar to others which have appeared in popular or pseudo-scientific journals, we are told that green and blue-green are quieting, blue sobering, purple representing, yellow cheering, red and orange exciting or stimulating. It happens, however, that this sort of systematization is mostly what might be called boloney, with just enough basis of fact to make it seem sensible to the layman.

The supposition that red is generally exciting (based entirely on association) runs contrary to the affects of roses and many other flowers, not to mention the sunset. Red cloths excite the bull, but black cloths are just as efficacious, for to the bull red actually looks black. The conventional red signal checks the motorist and green stimulates him to go. The reverse system would work just as well, if it were conventional.

Under the deep blue sky of summer people are stimulated more than by the gray of winter; but they are cheered as much by the green landscape of Maryland as by the yellows and browns of California. Purple grapes and green watermelons are as appetizing as are yellow apricots, red cherries, or oranges, and if the sea were persistently yellow it has now.

—Knight Dunlap in the American Mercury.

"Tall" Fish Story
A record kept by Thomas Boosey, of England, in 1834, tells of a fish that lived to be fifty-three years old, the Golden Book magazine reveals. "W. Hoosop of Bond Hall, Furness," the record says, "placed a small fish-back trout, about 63 years ago, when a boy, into a well in the orchard belonging to his family, where it remained ever since until last week. Then it died, got through sickness or infirmity, but for want of its natural element, water, the severe drought during the spring that supplied the well. The trout's lips and gills were perfectly white. He regularly came to be fed by his master's hand when called by his name of Ned."

Inside Work?

"I don't know anything about any girl that's disappeared," protested the boy. "Say, who are you?"
"I'm the reporter Conley's expecting in about fifteen minutes. Didn't you see a girl—a red-haired girl? Didn't you answer some questions of hers or take her somewhere?"
"Sure!" said the boy. "Forster was expecting her. I took her up to the top floor, to the private elevator. Conley ran her up from there."
"How do you know Forster expected her?" Martin asked.
"Because we ran her right up the minute she gave her name. Miss White, it was. She didn't know Forster owned the hotel and she seemed sort of scared when she found she was going up to that bungalow of his on the roof. Conley came down in the private elevator to take her up."

"What time was this?"
"I don't know," said the boy. "This afternoon some time. Say, do you think they're keeping her up there?"

Martin nodded. He hadn't thought so until a moment ago. But a bungalow on the roof offered opportunities.

"I'm going up to see if she's there, anyhow."

"How you going to get in?" the boy wanted to know. "The private elevator's locked up except when they run it themselves. The only stair—except the service stair—comes down into Forster's office on the top floor. That's all locked up now."

"How about the fire escape?" Martin asked.

The boy's face lighted at this suggestion, but chiefly, Martin was disappointed to discover, in admiration of the reporter's nerve in contemplating it. "These's a fire escape landing outside the window right at the end of the corridor on the top floor. And there's a steel ladder goes up from there that curves over the sort of stone railing at the edge of the main roof. That ladder must be pretty scary, climbing right up over the edge of nothing."

It may be confessed that it struck Martin that way. But all he said was that it looked like the best bet. He shook hands with the boy and walked away, with the best air of unconcern he could assume, to the elevators.

"As far as you go," he said in response to an inquiring glance from the elevator-boy. He hoped the phrase would conceal his ignorance of the actual number of the top floor, and it did. He perceived, though, that even the briefest hesitation on his part when he stepped out of the elevator at the top would be fatal to his plan. The boy would ask him whose room he was looking for. He must choose in advance which way to turn. Very well, he'd turn to the right.

It seemed at first that he had made a disastrously bad guess, for he found himself walking straight toward a transverse partition of glass and oak with a door in the middle of it marked "C. J. Forster." The door was ajar and there was a light inside. The elevator hadn't started down. The boy was certainly watching him. The only thing he could possibly do was to push open the door and walk in and see what happened after that.

Nothing happened. A sense that he had no time to waste all but betrayed him into a mistake. The project that was on the rails of his mind was the one he'd come up in the elevator with, namely to get out the window at the end of the corridor on to the fire escape, and he had his hand on the knob when the thought of something else halted him. The helpful bellboy who had remembered Rhoda had spoken of a stairway leading from the office up into Forster's apartment. He turned back at once and started through the suite of offices looking for it.

When he saw it going boldly up from the second room he entered—evidently the stenographers' room, since there were four typewriter desks in it—his first thought was that this was too easy to be true. The artist nodded. "That's true, sir," he said; "but then, don't some of those Academy chaps paint angels?"—Answers.

Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Heister were here last Saturday night from their home near Ocurra, N. M., attending to some business matters. They reported good rains recently, stock and the spring range looking fine.

Mr. and Mrs. Homer Brown and three sons drove up from Cloudcroft last Sunday and saw the show, "Lightnin'." Long way to go to see a show, but it was worth it.

Mrs. W. C. McDonald came home last Sunday from California, where she spent the winter. She passed a pleasant winter season in the Golden State, but was glad to get back to Carrizozo and home ties.
