

TWILIGHT OF RECREATION

This week will mark the closing of the recreational period at our mountain resorts. People who have been sojourning in the coolness of these retreats, far from the noise of city traffic and free from business cares and worryment, must now return to their homes to get the children ready for school, the housewives to their home duties and the men to their desks and workshops.

We are approaching a period wherein the pleasant diversions of the good old summer time must cease and remain with us only in memory. We must now give our attention to things which concern us aside from happy hours spent amid rushing brooks, shady nooks through the day, while at night fairies whisper and soft, rippling waters lured us to the land of dreams.

The curtain is being drawn on the summer's pleasures, wherein some had visited loved ones in distant states, or had been visited by one or more of the family roll. These blessings must now end as twilight settles down over the season's scenes of happiness. Then let us not go back to business with thoughts of depression and crape-hanging, but with a determination to do greater things; to make more friends and keep them; to be of more use to society; to chase gloom instead of inviting it. Autumn is at our door and winter is not far away. Let's go!

Helen Frances Huppertz, Don Lemmon and Bill Nickles will leave shortly for State College where they will re-enter school.

Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Ferguson and children were here from Coyote Wednesday, doing some shopping and returning home in the evening.

Maurice Lemon will leave next Tuesday for Roswell to finish his course at the Military Institute.

Mrs. C. P. Huppertz and daughter, Helen Frances, arrived home Wednesday from Cedar Falls, Iowa, where they spent the major portion of vacation period with relatives and friends. Frances will return to State College to enter on her second year term.

Margie Rolland and Jane Spencer will leave the first of the week to resume their studies at the Albuquerque University.

Makes Arrest

Jailer Sam Farmer made a good catch Wednesday. He noticed a stranger endeavoring to sell a car for such a small amount of money that it aroused his suspicion. On questioning the man, he was more convinced than ever that something was wrong. Sam took the man to the Sheriff's office, and after being questioned, it was decided to wire Denver and received an answer to hold the car as the man still owed about $140 on same. The wire directed the sheriff to do as he saw fit with the offender, and the man was released, but the car is being held, awaiting the arrival of an officer from Denver, who will return the machine to that city.

J. B. French will be here from Albuquerque for the week-end.

See "Cimarron" at the Lyric Theatre Sept. 7 and 8. Richard Dix is seen at his best; supported by an All Star Cast.

LOCAL MENTION

Mrs. Charles Hamilton and daughter Mary of Denver have been in Carrizozo for the past week, during which time they visited old friends at Lincoln, Fort Stanton and Carrizozo. While here, they have been the guests of Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Sager. The Hamiltons are former residents of White Oaks, but left there many years ago, since that time they have resided in Denver. They will leave for home tomorrow and on their return trip, they will visit Santa Fe, Albuquerque and Taos.

Mr. and Mrs. Jean Baird and Mrs. Fount Miller of Tularosa were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Mayer last Saturday. Mrs. Miller is a sister to Mrs. Mayer.

This office is in receipt of a letter from Mr. F. Corinth of Chicago, who is thinking of locating in this County in the stockraising and dry farming industry. We would say to such people who make inquiries about our part of the state, that they should pay us a visit and see for themselves.

We are not over-estimating when we say that parties wishing to cast their lots with us, could do no better than to locate in Lincoln County. We would appreciate a visit from Mr. Corinth and others who are making inquiries. Land is cheap; we pride ourselves on the beauties of our mountain scenery. Yes, sir, we have peaks 10,000 and 12,000 feet in elevation. The climate is remarkable in Lincoln County. Fancy going in your shirt sleeves in January and February, well you may do it in Lincoln County. This is the land of perpetual sunshine; our people are happy, contented lot. The Mesas and canyons have yielded the best crops in years; plenty of good range to be had. What more could one wish?

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Gallacher entertained at a 6 o'clock dinner last Friday evening in honor of Mrs. Gallacher's sister, Mrs. L. T. Bacot, who was her guest during the past week.

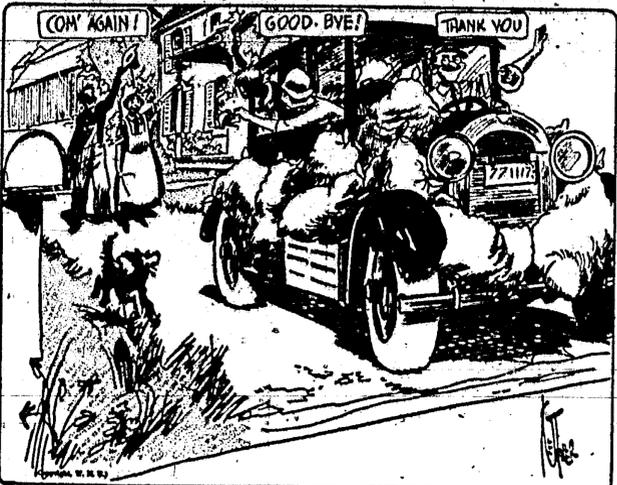

Don't miss "DRACULA" at the Lyric tonight and tomorrow night. Will send chills chasing up and down your spine!

Mack Shaver will leave tomorrow night for Albuquerque to take up his studies in civil engineering. This will be Mack's Junior year and after enrollment is made, the students in his class will be taken to the mountains for a period of engineering work in such localities where they will be given practical experience.—The best of luck to you, Mack.

Earl Rountree was here from Capitan Wednesday and said that the plans for the new highway were materializing rapidly and active work will begin shortly between here and Capitan. Earl is erecting an up-to-date filling station across the street from the Titworth residence, and his dwelling will be directly in the rear of his business. It is directly on the line of the new highway, and we wish Earl the best of success in his new venture.

Mrs. Chas. Coplin entertained the Carrizozo Bridge Club at the Zigler home last Saturday afternoon.

The Harvest

S. P. Announces Cent-a-Mile Fares

With cent-a-mile transportation fares on Southern Pacific Lines re-inaugurated for the first time since May, the first two weeks of September are expected to produce record traffic throughout New Mexico and other parts of the Southwest, according to predictions today.

Mr. Huppertz, local agent for the railroad, who announced plans for the new "Dollar Day" venture over the Labor Day week-end, expressed opinion that the low fares will stimulate extraordinary travel in all sections of the state and in adjacent territory.

Cent-a-mile transportation will be offered on three dates, Thursday, Friday and Saturday, September 3, 4 and 5, according to the announcement. A return limit of 12 days from the first date of sale—midnight of September 14—will be offered, he declared.

The low roundtrip fares are expected to prove of unusual interest to New Mexico residents planning to attend the colorful Fiesta de Los Angeles in Los Angeles from September 4 to 13.

As in the case of earlier "Dollar Day" sales conducted by the Southern Pacific, tickets sold under the plan will be good on all trains, coach or Pullman, operated by the Southern Pacific on its lines from El Paso to Portland and from San Francisco to Ogden.

Roundtrip tickets are sold on the basis of three-fifths of the cost of the usual one-way fare, the transportation "bargain" being the outstanding event of its kind in American railroading.

The 12-day return limit, Mr. Huppertz declared, is expected to be of unusual value to late vacationers throughout New Mexico and other parts of the southwest.

F. L. Zumwalt Leaves

Mrs. A. B. Zumwalt and son F. L. (Flossie) were down from their home in Nogal Thursday of this week and paid this office a friendly call. Flossie is making preparations to depart for Malaga, N. M., where he is Superintendent of the Malaga schools, leaving for that place today. Mr. Zumwalt has been here during the vacation period, and is now ready to resume his duties. The school board will not listen to anything in the way of a resignation from him, so well has he conducted the task of Superintendent. Best wishes, Amigo F. L.

French—Morrison

News reached here the latter part of last week, too late for publication, that Miller French, who has been in Juneau, Alaska, for the past year, was married to one of the fairest belles in the land of the Midnight Sun. The verification of the news came this week when the following article was clipped from the Alaska Daily Empire of Juneau:

"In a wedding Saturday evening that came as a total surprise to her many friends, Miss Mildred Morrison, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Morrison of this city, became the bride of Mr. Baird Miller French. The ceremony was performed by Dean C. E. Rice of the Holy Trinity Episcopal Cathedral. Mr. and Mrs. French have taken one of the MacKinnon apartments and will make their home there.

Mrs. French resided here for many years and is one of Juneau's most popular young ladies. She is a graduate of the Juneau High School and attended Oregon State University where she is a member of the Gamma Phi Beta Sorority.

Mr. French is an engineer of the United States Bureau of Public Roads, attached to the Alaska district. He is a graduate of the University of New Mexico, and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. B. French, reside in that state. He has made his headquarters in this city for the past year.

—The Empire may well use the name of B. M. French; but to us, he is the same "Miller," the name we always used with such fondness, as he is one of the most model young men Carrizozo has ever turned out. Courteous and kind to everyone, attentive to his studies while in school and afterwards in his business relations, polite and trustworthy, made him a fitting example for other young men to follow.

If Miller reads his Outlook and we presume he does, he will remember when we requested him to make a friend of Santa Claus. But he has done more; he has exceeded that and not only made love, but captured one of Juneau's fairest ladies, as well. To the newlyweds, the Outlook extends its warmest wishes for future prosperity and happiness.

Mr. and Mrs. Bryan Hightower arrived home Monday from Ohio where they spent a month, visiting relatives.

Mesdames J. E. Frame and C. C. Belknap were guests of Mrs. Bert Penix at Corona at a bridge party Saturday, the 15th.

Mr. and Mrs. Brack Sloan and their trio of attractive young daughters were here Sunday.

Several members of the Woman's Club accepted the invitation of the Glencoe club to a barbecue dinner at Bonnell's ranch at Glencoe, last Saturday. Two cars left Ancho at an early hour and the occupants enjoyed the wonderful ride over the mountains and through Devil's Canyon. The great bed of petunias and other flowers in the foreground of the Bonnell Inn was like a gorgeous banner of welcome to the scene of the festivities where the guests were graciously met by the reception committee of Mesdames Louise Coe, Ora Tully and Ola Casey Jones.

The barbecued meat prepared by the hostesses' husbands and the salads, cakes and coffee furnished by the ladies, made a repast long to be remembered by those present. Though loth to leave the lovely creek and its overhanging trees and vines, the guests finally repaired to the big dining room of the Inn where a program of addresses and music was enjoyed, after which a small rodeo was presented on the mesa above the Inn.

Representatives from the Woman's Clubs of Roswell, Hagerman, Dexter, Alamogordo, Tularosa, Carrizozo and Ancho were present. Those going from Ancho were Mesdames Belknap, Frame, Kile, S. J. 7:45 p. m.—Prayer and Praise Service.

8 p. m.—Sermon.

The Watchman-Examiner quotes a writer who says: "Going to church is like going a-shopping. You generally get what you go for; no more nor less. You may go into a store where shelves are loaded with thousands and thousands of dollars worth of goods and buy only a paper of pins. So you may go into God's storehouse of grace and take nothing away but the impression that the leading soloist makes on you. But even poor preaching and meager services furnish rich rewards to the really hungry and thirsty after righteousness." The writer might have said that the shopper's ability to buy determines the amount of goods he carries away. So it is in the kingdom of God, the church-goer's ability to receive spiritual impressions determines the value of worship.

W. B. Payne was a caller at this office from his ranch north of Capitan, yesterday.

The big horn in front of the Lyric Theatre is a delightful reminder of the good show going on inside. When you hear the big horn, its time to go! Tonight and tomorrow night, "Dracula," the most wonderful mystery screen production will be shown, together with "The Indians Are Coming."

The dance given at Community Hall last Saturday night by Andy Wilson and his Merry-makers of Tularosa, was well attended, considering the fact that dances were held at Nogal and Ancho that same night. Mr. Wilson is giving a dance at Tularosa tomorrow night and on the following Saturday, September 5, he will give another dance here at Baca's Hall on the east side. Look forward to this, boys!

Myron and Mildred Wells left last Saturday for their home in Palmdale, Cal., after a visit of about six weeks with their aunt and uncle, Morgan and Mrs. Lovelace and aunt, Mrs. Elizabeth Gallacher. They had a pleasant visit and were sorry to leave when the time came for departure. — See you next summer, kiddies!

Revolutionary Movement Threatens Machado's Regime in Cuba—German Reich Saved by Defeat of Radicals.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

Pres. Machado

GERARDO MACHADO, president of Cuba, not long ago scoffed at the danger of revolution in his tight little island. But the threat has materialized in a way to make him sit up and take notice. Rebels in various regions staged outbreaks that alarmed the government and martial law was declared in the effort to stave off civil war.

(two-thirds). The board sent telegrams to the governors of the states urging that this course be adopted. In return, said the board, the cotton stabilization corporation will agree to hold off the market its 1,300,000 bales until July 31, 1932, and will urge the cotton co-operatives financed by the board to do likewise.

EDWARD A. O'NEAL, president of the American Farm Bureau federation, announced at a meeting of state farm bureau leaders in Milwaukee that the federation "must renew its demand for an equalization fee" and that the present marketing act was inadequate to cope with agriculture's "most acute problem—control of its surplus crops."

"The federation has always stood for the principle of the equalization fee, as expressed in the old McNary-Haugen bill, which provides that each unit of a commodity produced shall bear its fair share of the cost of disposal of surplus," O'Neal said.

"Desiring to see the marketing act fully tried out, the organization for two years has not insisted upon enactment of the fee principle. It now appears all too plain that the present act does not adequately provide for the needed surplus control."

PROBABLY to his own surprise, quite a vigorous though small boom has developed for Melvin A. Traylor, Chicago banker, as the Democratic nominee for the Presidency in 1931. It was started in Malone and Hillsboro, Texas, where Mr. Traylor formerly lived and where he is most popular.

REPRESENTATIVE WILLIAM E. Hull of Illinois is another of the members of congress who has been studying things abroad, and he has just been heard from. The special object of Mr. Hull's investigation has been the Bratt system of liquor control in force in Sweden, and his conclusion is that Sweden has solved the problem with which this and other countries are struggling.

SENATOR FELIX HEBERT of Rhode Island, chairman of the senate committee on unemployment, spent the week end at the Hopland camp and then gave out, apparently as President Hoover's spokesman, an attack on the ideas of a government dole and federal unemployment insurance. He asserted that the latter would inevitably lead to the dole as it operates in England.

ORGANIZED labor in certain parts of this country is not doing much to help solve the question of unemployment. Quite the reverse. Take the Hoover dam, for instance. The workers on that big project made wage demands that construction company holding the contract considered extortionate, so 135 men quit work.

concessions that would cost $2,000 daily or $3,000,000 during the seven years allowed for completion of the dam. Living conditions for the workers on this desert job are admittedly rigorous.

In Chicago thousands of men and women were thrown out of employment when more than one hundred small movie theaters closed rather than submit longer to the demand of the motion picture operators' union that two operators be employed at each house. The managers said this was unnecessary and that they could not afford it.

Extensive highway construction operations in Illinois are delayed and may not get under way before next spring, because labor organizations objected to the rulings of a state board as to the "prevailing wage" in various districts, which must be paid for the work according to the law authorizing it.

MISS MARY ANDERSON, head of the women's bureau of the Department of Labor, is a woman of ideas and the ability to express them. Having returned from Europe, she gives out an address urging a modern era for cooks and maids, a higher status for domestic service in keeping with modern industrialism.

PRESIDENT HOOVER'S fifty-seventh birthday came on August 10, but he entirely disregarded the anniversary. Returning from the Hopland camp, he spent the remainder of the day in work as usual, and though Mrs. Hoover had hurried back from Akron, there were no guests for dinner.

COL. LUKE LEA, Nashville publisher, has been indicted by a grand jury in Nashville on charges of conspiracy in connection with the affairs of the defunct Liberty Bank and Trust company.

SHARPLY criticizing "third degree" methods in police force administration, which it found to be widespread in both cities and rural communities, the Witherspoon commission reported to President Hoover that "it remains beyond doubt that the practice is shocking in its character and extent, violative of American traditions and institutions, and not to be tolerated."

DELEGATES from nearly all nations were present when the pre-congress of the world opened in Mexico City. Men and women from North and South America, Europe and the Orient were welcomed at a reception given by Senator Don Lambert Hernandez, head of the federal district. The inaugural meeting was directed by Frank L. Martin, acting dean of the school of journalism of the University of Missouri, and the guests were addressed by Dr. Don Jose Manuel Puga Casarano, secretary of public education. The newspaper men of Mexico then gave the delegates a theater party, and next afternoon they were received at Chapultepec castle by President Ortiz Rubio. On Wednesday there was an excursion to the archaeological excavations at San Juan Teotihuacan, and on Friday, the closing day of the congress, a great feast was held in the stadium.

PARKER CRAMER, the aviator who was mapping out a northern air mail route to Europe, got as far as Lerwick in the Shetland islands safely on his way to Copenhagen and then ran into trouble that is feared at this writing, resulted in his death.

PLANTERS of the fourteen cotton states of the South are asked by the farm board to plow under one-third of their crop immediately, in order to enhance the price of the other

Jim's "Bad" Dime Proved Lucky

By LEETE STONE

JIM McBRIDE had a real problem on his hands, or rather on his mind and the solution was more than elusive—it simply was not anywhere visible on the horizon.

Jim was a conductor on one of those buses, the shiny, green loviathans that career gracefully up and down Fifth avenue. And Jim was in love with Margy Shaughnessy who was a manicure in a swell hotel beauty shop. Jim had saved some money—he had worked a long time; and he knew that Margy was just on the point of saying "yes" to a marriage license and a little two-room flat in the Bronx, or down town somewhere in the village, which would be better for him, because nearer his headquarters.

All that he needed was to make a sweeping gesture of love to win her; he felt sure of that. Sunday was her birthday. Jim knew that if she found a big bunch of American beauty roses on her doorstep Sunday morning, and if he could take her to dinner in a taxi Sunday night after he got through—well, Margy Shaughnessy would be his for life. But how to do it without breaking into that treasured bank account?

To be or not to be was Hamlet's question; but this was another very different one for Jim McBride. He had but two days left. He decided to trust to luck for one more day; and then, if luck turned her back on him, to get off for an hour on Saturday morning and draw $25 from the $500 bank account on which he hoped to provide Margy with a home.

But Jim did not want to break into that account. He possessed that quota of superstition that is part and parcel of all good Irishmen; he felt it would be bad luck. And he believed in "hunches." This was only Tuesday, and all day long he had had, strong within his soul, a conviction that he was in for a carass from Lady Luck in person.

Deciding to miss nothing in the way of those queer little chances that sometimes present themselves so casually, Jim picked up an ornately bound little book from one of the empty seats in his bus that evening and pocketed it. Who knows? Somebody might care a lot for that glossy little book with the strange, unpronounceable name on its cover; might look for him if the owner remembered leaving it, or might advertise for it with a reward. Jim McBride never passed up a chance.

Finishing his evening paper that night he decided to have a peep at the book. Disregarding the jaw-breaking name of it he studied the pictures and the wording under them with an interest that mounted every moment. Finally he rose from his chair, a strange light in his eyes, went to his closet, and carefully brought out a grimy-looking little canvas bag. The contents of this bag he spread out on his little table and examined minutely.

At last, with the light of hope and high adventure in his eyes, Jim McBride lay down to sleep. He dreamed of sending Margy Shaughnessy a stack of American beauties that would sweep her love right into his lap. More than that, he might even take her to the reigning musical hit on Broadway. Margy would fall for that, he knew.

Thursday morning arrived. This was when there were still a lot of conductors on Fifth avenue buses. A little man with a very big derby swung nimbly on Jim's big carriage at Tenth street. He looked like a fox, Jim could swear that at once.

Perhaps it was a certain cocky, nervous air the little man carried. Or maybe it was the furtive, uneasy glances he cast about here and there, and over his shoulder, as he lurched through the rocking conveyance for a seat, after having pressed into Jim's little dice box, courteously held forth, the required fare. Jim tumbled; it never took him long. After that second scared look the little foxey one bent over a shoulder at him. Then he checked the contents of his face pocket into his palm and examined each dime carefully. Then, finally, he realized that Lady Luck had stepped right in his path.

Result—A conversation, between Margy Shaughnessy and Jim McBride Sunday afternoon, her birthday, when Jim dropped in with an armful of American beauties.

"Hello, Margy, mavourneen, here's something for you!"

"Jim darling! You shouldn't do that!"

"Why not, my dear? And more than that; here's two seats to the 'Bandoliers of Broadway' for tomorrow. It's your birthday, my dear."

"Oh—oh, Jim McBride! I think I love you enough to marry you!"

"I was hopin' so my dear. Let's make it tomorrow at lunch time. Say here's a funny thing, Margy. I find a book on a seat the other day—see? Can't tell you the name—noom, mus, Jim's—something like that. Any way it's all about old coins. An' to-day, Margy, a foxy guy passes me one dated 1902. Whad'dayknow, girlie? I snatched it out for 30 bucks, an' got 50 bucks for the rest of my collection that's been passed me and I had to pay the company for."

"Jim! Her arms were around his neck. 'Let's go' from Jim. 'Tomorrow see Margy Jim McBride.'

QUALITY OF EGGS SET AT STANDARD

Factors Used in Formulating the Grades.

Eggs may be only "fresh" or "otherwise" to most consumers, but to the egg trade in 18 countries, quality of shell eggs is now more or less uniformly expressed in terms of air cell, condition of shells, yolks, whites, and germs.

Egg quality standards, according to the bureau of agriculture economics, United States Department of Agriculture, are now recognized in 18 countries. Of 17 foreign countries, 15 maintain standards in connection with an export trade in eggs, and 2 countries—Germany and the United Kingdom—recognize standards for the domestic trade only. There is considerable uniformity in the standards.

Canadian egg standards were the first to be systematically formulated. United States standards were prepared later, and followed in essential respects the Canadian standards. Foreign countries in general have considered the same quality factors in formulating egg grades, and have adopted practically the same methods of describing the various degrees of quality.

In practically all of the standards, the specifications for the air cell deal with its depth. Similarly, differences in quality, as evidenced by the condition of the yolk, are indicated in terms of visibility of the yolk. Countries which have established standards of quality for shell eggs are: United States, Canada, Denmark, Sweden, Norway, Estonia, Latvia, Lithuania, Finland, Netherlands, Belgium, Russia, Poland, Danzig, Rumania, Ireland, South African Union, England, Wales and Germany.

Experiments Show That Best Hens Pay Profits

Illinois hens that were given a chance held up their end of the farm earnings under the stress of 1930 conditions by paying average profits of $1.61 a hen, says the Missouri Farmer. Records kept by 240 farm flock owners in co-operation with the extension service of the college of agriculture, University of Illinois have been summarized. The average profits of $1.61 a hen were paid by the one-third highest flocks in the group. In contrast, the one-third lowest flocks lost money at the rate of 63 cents a hen, while the average for the entire group of 240 flocks was a profit of 64 cents a hen.

Owners of the one-third highest flocks kept up their profits in the face of 1930 conditions by taking advantage of low feed costs, getting more eggs and increasing their efficiency generally. It was explained by H. H. Alp, poultry extension specialist of the college. Hens in the one-third highest flocks laid an average of 135 eggs each during the year, while those in the one-third lowest flocks averaged only 111 eggs. The average egg yield for the 240 flocks was 126 eggs a hen. There was an average of 157 hens in the one-third highest flocks, 153 hens in the one-third lowest and 155 hens in the 240 flocks.

Well Fed Flock Will Bring Profit to Owner

In feeding your poultry flock that is expected to lay eggs this fall and winter when the price is high remember that true economy lies in purchasing them to eat as much as possible of the right kind of food. The more they eat the faster they will grow and the more likely they will be to lay early and abundantly.

During the hot dry days of August and early September the chicks are a good deal like other folks and their appetites may be a little off, then is a good time occasionally to mix up a moist mash, not wet and sloppy but moist enough to make it appetizing for them, and let them have such a food once every day or two. It will help them to eat more and will tone up their appetites.

Poultry Notes

If the smallest daily milk supply equalled the greatest daily demand there would be a milk surplus of at least 10 per cent in a month, due to variations in production and sales.

Keep young turkey poulters separate from chickens and from old turkeys.

Hens may be broken of broodiness by removing them from the flock, placing them in a broody coop, and feeding a balanced ration.

Figures shown by the New York State Agricultural college indicate the chick's weight is increased 54 per cent the first week, 65 per cent the second, 55 per cent the third, 44 per cent the fourth, 32 per cent the fifth, 28 per cent the sixth, 20 per cent the seventh, and 16 per cent the eighth week.

The average weight of eggs from Leghorns weighing between 2 and 3 1/2 pounds is 38.4 ounces a dozen, and hens weighing 4 1/2 pounds and over produce eggs weighing 26 ounces per dozen.

THE STORY

Yancey Cravat, just returned from the newly opened Indian territory, glazing his experiences in a large, gloomy, venerable family. Yancey is married to Sabra Vanable, a criminal lawyer and editor of the Wichita Wigwam. Yancey announces he is going back to the Oklahoma country with Sabra and their four-year-old son, Cimarron. They arrive at Osage, where Yancey intends to start a newspaper. Yancey is determined to find out who killed Editor Pegler of the New Day. Yancey consents to conduct divine worship on Sunday. During the services Yancey announces he has learned who killed Pegler. He stoops in time to escape a bullet fired by Yontis. Still stooping, Yancey shoots and kills Yontis. Then he announces that Yontis killed Pegler. Yancey frustrates a bank robbery and kills two desperadoes. Yancey urges Sabra to join him in the Run at the opening of the Cherokee strip. She refuses. He is gone five years. Dixie Lee and her girls arouse the indignation of the wives and mothers of Osage. The war with Spain begins. Yancey returns in the uniform of a Rough Rider.

CHAPTER IX—Continued

... but here in this land, Sabra, my girl, the women, they've been the real heavers of wood and drawers of water. You'll want to remember that." Sabra remembered it now, well enough.

Slowly the crowd began to disperse. The men had their business; the women their housework. Wives linked their arms through those of husbands, and the gesture was one of perhaps not entirely unobscured cruelty, accompanied as it was by a darting glance at Sabra.

"Rough Rider uniform, sack of gold, golden voice, and melting eye," that glance seemed to say. "You're welcome to all the happiness you can get from those. Security, permanence, home, husband—I wouldn't change places with you."

"Come on, Yancey!" shouted Strap Buckner. "Over to the Sunny Southwest and have a drink. We got a terrible lot of drinking to do, ain't we, boys? Come on, you old longhorn. We got to drink to you because you're back and because you're going away."

"And to the war!" yelled Dixie Lee. "And the Rough Riders!"

"And Alaska!"

Their boots clattered across the board floor of the newspaper office. They swept the towering figure in its khaki uniform with them. He turned, waved his hat at her. "Back in a minute, honey." They were gone.

Sabra turned to the children, Cim and Donna, flushed, both, with the unwelcome excitement; out of hand. Her face set itself with that look of quiet resolve. "Half the morning's gone. But I want you to go along to school, anyway. Now, none of that! It's no use your staying around here. The paper must be got out. Jesse'll be no good to me the rest of the day. It's easy to see that. I'll write a note to your teachers. . . . Run along now. I must go to court."

She pinned on her hat, saw that her handbag contained pencil and paper, hurried into the back room that was printing shop, composing room, press room combined. She had been right about Jesse Rickey. That consistently irresponsible one was even now leaning a familiar elbow on the polished surface of the Sunny Southwest bar as he helped toast the returned wanderer or the departing hero or the war in the semi-tropics, or the snows of Alaska—"or God knows what!" concluded Sabra, in her mind.

Giff Means, the ink-smear'd printer's devil who, at fifteen, served as Jesse Rickey's sole assistant in the mechanical end of the Wigwam office, looked up from his case rack as Sabra entered.

"It's all right, Mrs. Cravat. I got the head all set up like you said. Vice-Gets-Death-Blow. Reign of Scarlet Woman Ends. Judge Issues Ban. Even if Jesse don't—even if he ain't—why, you and me can set up the story this afternoon so we can start the press goin' for Thursday. We ain't been late with the paper yet, have we?"

"Out on time every Thursday for five years," Sabra said, almost dejectedly.

Suddenly, sharp and clear, Yancey's voice calling her from the office porch, from the front office, from the print-shop doorway; urgent, perturbed. "Sabra! Sabra! Sabra!"

He strode into the back shop. She faced him. Instinctively she knew. "What's this about Dixie Lee?" His news-trained eye leaped to the form. He read the set-up head, upside down, expertly. "When's this case come up?"

"Now."

"Who's defending her?"

"Nobody in town would touch the case. They say she got a lawyer from Denver. He didn't show up. He knew better than to take her money."

"Prosecuting?"

"Pat Leary."

Without a word he turned. She caught him at the door, gripped his arm. "Where are you going?"

"Court."

"What for? What for?" But she knew. She actually interposed her body between him and the street door, as though physically to prevent him from going. Her face was white. Her eyes stared, enormous.

"You can't take the case of that woman."

"Why not?"

"Because you can't. Because I've been fighting her. Because the Wigwam has come out against all that she stands for."

"Why, Sabra, honey, where are you thinking of sending her?"

"Away. Away from Osage."

"But where?"

"I don't know. I don't care. Things have changed since you went away. Went away and left me."

"Nothing's changed. It's all the same. Dixie's been stoned in the market place for two thousand years and more. Driving her out is not going to do it. You've got to drive the devil out of—"

"Yancey Cravat, are you preaching to me? You who left your wife and children to starve, for all you cared! And now you come back and you take this creature's part against every respectable woman in Osage—against me!"

"I know it. I can't help it, Sabra."

"I'll tell you what I think," cried Sabra—the Sabra Cravat who had been evolved in the past five years. "I think you're crazy! They've all said so. And now I know they are right."

"Maybe so."

"If you dare to think of disgracing me by defending her. And your children. I've fought her for months in the paper. A miserable creature like that! Your own wife—a laughing stock—for a—a—"

"The territory's rotten. But, by G—d, every citizen's still got the legal right to fight for existence!" He put her gently aside.

She went mad. She became a wildcat. She tried to hold him. She beat herself against him. It was like an infuriated sparrow hurling itself upon a mastodon. "If you dare! Why did you come back? I hate you. What's she to you? I say you won't. I'd rather see you dead. I'd kill you first. That seem! That sith! That harlot!"

Her dignity was gone. He lifted her, scratching, kicking, clawing, set her gently down in the chair in front of her desk. The screen slammed. His quick, light step across the porch down the stairs. Crumpled, tear-stained, wild as she was, and with her hat on one side she reached automatically for her pencil, a pad of copy paper, and wrote a new head. "Vice Again, Triumphs Over Justice" Then, with what composure she could summon, she sped down the dusty road to where the combination jail and courthouse—a crude wooden building—sat broiling in the sun.

Because of the notoriety of the defendant the inadequate little courtroom would have been crowded enough in any case. But the news of Yancey's abrupt departure from the Sunny Southwest saloon—and the reason for it—had spread from house to house through the little town with the rapidity of a forest fire leaping from tree to tree. Mad Yancey Cravat's latest freak. Men left their offices, their stores; women their cooking, their cleaning. The jury so hastily assembled, Pat Leary in a solemn suit of black, Dixie Lee with her girls, even Judge Sipes himself seemed in momentary danger of being trampled by the milling mob. It was a travesty of a courtroom.

The jury was a hard-faced lot for the most part. Plucked from the plains or the hills; halting of speech, slow of mind, quick on the trigger. A slow, rhythmic motion of the jaw was evidence that a generous preliminary bite of plug served as a precaution to soothe the nerves and steady the judgment.

This legal farce had already begun before Yancey made his spectacular entrance.

"Case of the Territory of Oklahoma versus Dixie Lee!" (So they had made it a territorial case. . . .) "Counsel for the territory of Oklahoma!" Pat Leary stood up. . . . for the defense." No one. The close-packed courtroom was a nightmare of staring eyes and fishlike mouths greedily devouring Dixie Lee's white, ravaged face. Oddly enough, compared to these, she seemed pure, aloof, exquisite. "The defendant having failed to provide herself with counsel, it is my duty, according to the laws of the government of the United States and the territory of Oklahoma to appoint counsel for the defendant." He shifted his gird, the while his cunning, red-rimmed eyes foveled solemnly through the crowd seeking the slyster, Gwin Larkin. A stir in the close-packed crowd; a murmur. "I hereby appoint—" The murmur swelled. "Order in the court!"

"Your honor!"

Towering above the crowd, forging his way through it like some relentless force of nature, came the great buffalo head, the romantic Rough Rider hat with its turned-up brim caught by the crossed sabers; the massive khaki-clad figure. It was dramatic, it was melodramatic, it was ridiculous. It was superb. Here was the kind of situation that the Southwest loved and craved; here was action, here was blood-and-thunder, here was adventure. Here, in a word, was Cimarron.

He stood before the shabby judge. He swept off his hat with a gesture that invested it with plumes. "If I please your honor, I represent the defendant, Dixie Lee."

No territorial judge, denying Yancey Cravat, would have dared to face that crowd. He cast another glance round—a helpless, baffled one, this time—waved the approaching Gwin

Larkin back with a feeble gesture, and prepared to proceed with the case according to the laws of the territory. Certainly the look that he turned on Sabra Cravat as she entered a scant ten minutes later, white faced, resolute, and took her place as representative of the press, was one of such mingled bewilderment and reproach as would have embarrassed anyone less utterly preoccupied than the editor and publisher of the Oklahoma Wigwam.

Objection on the part of the slick Pat Leary. Overruled, perforce, by the judge. A shout from the crowd. Order! Bang! Another shout. Law in a lawless community not yet ten years old; a community made up, for the most part, of people whose very presence there meant impatience of the old order, defiance of the conventions. Ten minutes earlier they had been all for the cocky little Leary; eager to cast the first stone at the woman in the temple. Now, with the inexplicable fickleness of the mob, the electric current of sympathy flowed out from them to the woman to be tried, to the man who would defend her. Hot and swift and plenty of action—that was the way the Southwest liked its justice.

Pat Leary, Irish, ambitious, fiery, his temper upon too even a beat, had been lost before he ever rose. The thought of Yancey ahead of him, the purty brigade behind him, spurred him to his frantic, his disorderly charge.

His years as section hand on the railroad had equipped him with a vocabulary well suited to scourge this woman in black who sat so quietly, so white faced, before him, for all the crowd to see. Adjective on adjective; vituperation; words which are considered obscenity outside the Bible and the courtroom.

A curious embarrassment seized the crowd. There were many in the packed room who had known the easy hospitality of Dixie's menage; who had eaten at her board, who had been broken in Grat Gotch's gambling place and had borrowed money from Dixie to save themselves from rough frontier revenge. She had plied her trade and taken the town's money and given it out again with the other merchants of the town. The banker could testify to that; the mayor; this committee; that committee. Pat Dixie Lee's name down for a thousand. Part of the order of that disorderly, haphazard town.

Names. Names. Names. The dull red of resentment deepened the natural red of their sunburned faces. The jurors shifted in their places. A low

Putting Off Inevitable Descent of Life's Hill

There comes a moment in all of us when we realize we have not only reached the crest of the hill, but that we are going down the other side. Or, at least, we think so. For, if we are strong enough, we need not really go down that hill.

Physically speaking, there has been a descent in our life since the moment we were born. Life comes, and immediately begins to go. But that is the least important side of us. If we have the vision, the movement of our mind and soul should be both up and wider. We only go downhill if we decide that we are doing so. Up always should be our watchword—our real determination. Getting the idea that we are

Canada's Oldest House

Canada's oldest continuously occupied house stands in the little village of Sillery, a suburb of the city of Quebec. The mansion, as it once was, is nearly three hundred years old, having been built in 1637. The father and founder of Sillery and its mission was the Commander de Sillery, a great Frenchman of his time, a favorite of the French court and for a long time a leading ambassador of the king of France, following which he took holy orders as a Jesuit, and thus became one of the early missionaries to New France.

mutter, ominous, like a growl, sounded its distant thunder. Blunt, Sharp, Ruthless. Younger than Yancey, less experienced, he still should have known better. These men of the inadequate jury, these men in the courtroom crowd, had come of a frontier background, had lived in the frontier atmosphere. In their rough youth, and now, women were scarce, with the scarcity that the hard life predicated. And because they were scarce they were precious. No woman so plain, so hard, so undesirable that she did not take on, by the very fact of her sex, a value far beyond her deserts. The attitude of a whole nation had been touched by this sentimental fact which was, after all, largely geographic. For a full century the countries of Europe, bewildered by it, unable to account for it, had laughed at this adolescent reverence of the American man for the American woman.

Leary finished in a burst of oratory so ruthless, so brutal that he had the satisfaction of seeing the painful, unaccustomed red surge thickly over Dixie Lee's pale face from her brow down to where the ladylike white turnover of her high collar met the line of her throat.

The pompous little Irishman seated himself, chest out, head high, eye roving the crowd and the bench, lips open with self-satisfaction. A few more cases like this and maybe they'd see there was material for a territory governor right here in Osage.

The crowd shifted, murmured, gabbled. Yancey still sat sunk in his chair as though lost in thought. The gabbler rose, soared. "He's given it up," thought Sabra, exulting. "He sees how it is."

The eyes of the crowd so close packed in that suffocating little courtroom were concentrated on the inert figure looting so limply in his chair. Perhaps they were going to be cheated of their show after all.

Slowly the big head lifted, the powerful shoulders straightened, he rose, he seemed to rise endlessly, he walked to Judge Sipes' crude desk with his light, graceful stride. The lids were still cast down over the lightning eyes. He stood a moment, that singularly sweet and winning smile wreathing his lips. He began to speak. The vibrant voice, after Leary's shout, was so low pitched that the crowd held its breath in order to hear.

"Your honor, gentlemen of the jury, I am the first to bow to achievement. Recognition where recognition is due—this, gentlemen, has ever been my way. May I, then, before I begin my poor plea in defense of this lady, my client, most respectfully call your attention to that which, in my humble opinion, has never before been achieved, much less duplicated, in the whole of the Southwest. Turn your eye to the figure which has so recently and so deservedly held your attention. Gaze once more upon him. Regard him well. You will not look upon his like again. For, gentlemen, in my opinion this gifted person, Mr. Patrick Leary, is the only man in the Oklahoma territory—in the Indian territory—in the whole of the brilliant and glorious Southwest—nay, I may even go so far as to say the only man in this magnificent country, the United States of America—of whom it actually can be said that he is able to strut sitting down."

The puffed little figure in the chair collapsed, then bounded to its feet, red-faced, gesticulating. "Your honor! I object!"

But the rest was lost in the gigantic roar of the delighted crowd.

"Go it, Yancey!"

"That's the stuff, Cimarron!"

Here was what they had come for: Doggone, there was nobody like him. Even today, though more than a quarter of a century has gone by, there still are people in Oklahoma who have kept a copy, typed neatly now from records made by hand, of the speech made that day by Yancey Cravat in defense of the town woman, Dixie Lee. "Yancey Cravat's Plea for a Fallen Woman," it is called; and never was speech more sentimental, windy, false, and utterly moving. The slang words bokum and bunk were not then in use, but even had they been they never would have been applied, by that appreciative crowd, at least, to the flowery and impassioned oratory of the Southwest Silver-Tongue, Yancey Cravat.

Cheap, melodramatic, gorgeous, impassioned. A quart of whisky in him; an enthralled audience behind him; a white-faced woman with hopeless eyes to spur him on; the cry of his wronged and righteous wife still sounding in his ears—Booth himself, in his heyday, never gave a more brilliant, a more false performance.

"Your honor! gentlemen of the jury! You have heard with what cruelty the prosecution has referred to the slum of this woman, as if her condition was of her own preference. A dreadful—a vicious—a revolting picture has been painted for you of her life and surroundings. Tell me—tell me—do you really think that she willingly embraced a life so repellent, so horrible? No, gentlemen! A thousand times, no! This girl was bred in such luxury, such refinement, as few of us have known. And just as this young girl was budding into womanhood, cruel fate snatched all this from her, bereft her of her dear ones, took from her, one by one, with a terrible and fierce rapidity, those upon whom she had come to look for love and support. And then, in that moment of darkest terror and loneliness, came one of our sex, gentlemen. A wolf in sheep's clothing. A fiend in the guise of a man. False promises. Lies. Deceit so palpable that it would have deceived no one but a young girl as innocent, as pure, as stary-eyed as was this woman you now see white and trembling before you. One of our sex was the author of her ruin, more to blame than she. What could be more pathetic than the spectacle she presents? An immortal soul in ruin. A moment ago you heard her reviled, in the lowest terms a man can employ toward a woman, for the depths to which she has sunk, for the company she keeps, for the life she leads. Yet where can she go that her sin does not pursue her? You would drive her out. But where? Gentlemen, the very promises of God are denied her. Who was it said, 'Come unto me all ye that are heavy laden, and I will give you rest'? She is indeed heavy laden, this trampled flower of the South, but if at this instant she were to kneel down before us all and confess her Redeemer, where is the church that would receive her, where the community that would take her in? Our sex wrecked her once pure life. Her own sex shrinks from her as from a pestilence. Society has reared its relentless walls against her. Only in the friendly shelter of the grave can her betrayed and broken heart ever find the Redeemer's promised rest. The gentleman who so eloquently spoke before me told you of her assumed names, of her sins, of her habits. He never, for all his eloquence, told you of her sorrows, her agonies, her hopes, her despair. But I could tell you. I could tell you of the desperate day—the red-letter day in the banner of the great Oklahoma country—when she tried to win a home for herself where she could live in decency and quiet. . . . When the remembered voices of father and mother and sisters and brothers fall like music on her erring ears. . . . who shall tell what this heavy heart, sinful though it may seem to you and to me. . . . understanding, pity, help. Like music on her erring soul. . . . oh, gentlemen. . . . gentlemen. . . ."

But by this time the gentlemen, between emotion and tobacco juice, were having such difficulty with their Adam's apples as to make a wholesale strangling seem inevitable. The beautiful flexible voice went on the hands wove their enchantment, the eyes held you in their spell. The pompous figure of little Pat Leary shrank, dwindled, disappeared before their mind's eye. The harlot Dixie Lee, in her black, became a woman romantic, piteous, appealing. Sabra Cravat, her pencil flying over her paper, thought grimly:

"It isn't true. Don't believe him. He is wrong. He has always been wrong. For fifteen years he has always been wrong. Don't believe him. I shall have to print this. How lovely his voice is. It's like a knife in my heart. I mustn't look at his eyes. His hands—what was that he said?—I must keep my mind on. . . . music on her erring soul. . . . oh, my love. . . . I ought to hate him. . . . I do hate him. . . ."

It was finished. Yancey walked to his seat, sat as before, the great buffalo head lowered, the lids closed over the compelling eyes, the beautiful hands folded, relaxed.

The good men and true of the jury filed solemnly out through the crowd that made way for them. As solemnly they crossed the dusty road and repaired to a draw at the roadside, where they squatted on such bits of rock or board as came to hand. Solemnly, briefly, and with utter disregard of its legal aspect, they discussed the case—if their inarticulate monosyllables could be termed discussion. The courtroom throng, scattering for refreshment, had barely time to down its drink before the jury stamped heavily across the road and into the noisome courtroom.

. . . and the defendant, Dixie Lee, not guilty."

THE MISSION TO CYPRUS

LESSON TEXT—Acts 12:15-13:12.
GOLDEN TEXT—For I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ; for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth; to the Jew first, and also to the Greek.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Paul Starts on a Great Trip.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Paul Begins an Adventurous Journey.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Missionary Adventures in Cyprus.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Christianity at Court.

I. Barnabas and Saul Return from Jerusalem (12:25).
The Christians at Jerusalem were in need because of a famine which had come upon the world. When news of this reached the believers at Antioch, they were moved with sympathy for them, and relief was sent at the hand of Barnabas and Saul. On their return from this ministry, they were accompanied by John Mark.

II. Gifts of the Church at Antioch (v. 1).
Young as was this new religious center—it had prophets and teachers. Such are essential to right church life. In Ephesians 4: 8-12 is enumerated the gifts which when Christ ascended on high he gave to men for the perfecting of the saints unto the work of the ministry. Gifts in the Church are not for the Church itself, but to enable it to perform service for others.

III. Barnabas and Saul Sent Forth (vv. 2, 3).
This marks the beginning of foreign missions as the deliberately planned enterprise of the Church.

1. The occasion (v. 2). While the five prophets and teachers were fasting and praying, the Holy Spirit commanded them to send forth Barnabas and Saul. The work of evangelizing the world was laid so heavily upon these men that they refrained from eating in order to seek the will of God in prayer. This is the kind of fasting that has God's approval. The missionary enterprise is the index to the spirituality of a church. The emptiness of missionary treasuries and the falling off of missionary candidates reveal the unspirituality of the home base.

2. The divine command (v. 2). The Holy Ghost said, "Separate me Barnabas and Saul." The real call to Christian service comes from the Holy Spirit. The Spirit called, the Church responded by sending out those called by him. Spirit-filled Christians know the voice of the Holy Spirit. The Spirit called, and the best men which the Church at Antioch had were sent out.

3. The obedience (v. 3). After fasting and prayer, Barnabas and Saul were sent out. The men were ready to go.

4. Instant obedience was rendered. Those who have received the Spirit's call are not taken by surprise when they are commissioned by the Church. There should be no holding back on the part of the Church, nor of the workers when the Spirit calls. By the workers when the Spirit calls.

IV. Preaching the Word of God in Cyprus (vv. 4, 5).
We are not told as to why they first went to Cyprus, but we are left to infer that it was owing to the fact that Cyprus was the home of Barnabas. He was acquainted with the country and the people and could be thus assured of a respectable hearing among them. Besides, it was most natural that those who had heard the good news go first with it to their kindred and friends. Andrew first went to his brother, and the man out of whom the demons were cast was denied the pleasure of following Jesus in order that he might go and tell his kindred. As they went forth they carefully carried out their commission, for they preached the Word of God. Those who are faithful to God will preach nothing but his Word. The great need today is Spirit-called and Spirit-filled men preaching God's Word.

V. Withstood by Elymas, the Sorcerer (vv. 6-12).
Sergius Paulus, the deputy, invited Barnabas and Saul to tell him of God's Word. Elymas maliciously sought to turn his mind from the truth. He sought to bar the gospel as it entered upon its mission of converting the heathen. Paul came to the front and denounced Elymas in the most scathing terms. He called him the child of the Devil, denouncing him as full of guile and villainy, pronouncing him the enemy of all righteousness, and accusing him of perverting the right ways of the Lord. Surely a man is never more a villain than when he tries to turn a soul from God.

God Does Not Forsake Those
Suppose that all men forsake or forget thee; God does not. His eye sees thee, his heart feels for thee, and his hand is able to deliver thee. Thou art not friendless, nor wilt thou be till the God of all consolation dies.—Charles H. Spurgeon.

The Resurrection-Life
It is the resurrection-life that is the truest as well as the highest form of life; the surest as well as the most glorious immortality; it admits of no reversal and no decay.—L. Bonar.

Opening of School

Next Monday, August 31, the school term opens, and with it will come new conditions and responsibilities.

We have a new Superintendent, who in all probability, will make some changes in our school system. Prof. Groce is an able, conscientious and broad-minded gentleman, and has come to us highly recommended. His duties will be heavy, but his shoulders are broad and in his success in conducting the affairs of the school, we have the greatest of confidence.

Prof. Groce is a pleasant man to meet; kind and considerate. But we predict that this extremely friendly manner, which some might misconstrue as a lack of firmness, has an undercurrent of stability that will assert itself in proper discipline. In other words, when school opens, it will be conducted in a business-like manner.

Teachers and students must not expect everything of a Superintendent, there is something for each to do, and chief among which should be to stand by the leader.

In his endeavors, this paper stands ready to assist him, as far as is possible for a newspaper to do. We have the greatest amount of confidence in Mr. Groce; he promises to be an organizer of merit and a leader of much value.

If parents, teachers and pupils will be of the same attitude and stand by him, it will make his work easier, his worries less burdensome, and his success earlier realized.

He's All Ready With an Ark for Second Flood

WILLIAM GREENWOOD, a resident of Olympia, Wash., of advanced years, says his home city and Seattle, San Francisco and Los Angeles are so wicked and corrupt that God has decided to wipe them off the face of the earth. This, William believes, will be accomplished through a second flood that will inundate the whole Pacific coast of the United States. But William has imitated Noah and has built for himself and perhaps a few chosen friends an elaborate ark in which he hopes to ride the waters when that flood comes. The vessel, here shown with its builder, is 95 feet long, 15 feet wide and 18 feet high.

Mother's Cook Book

VACATION DISHES

FOR a picnic or afternoon garden party, try these little cakes:

Cup Cakes. Sift two cupfuls of flour, four teaspoonfuls of baking powder, one teaspoonful of cinnamon, one-fourth teaspoonful of salt. Add one cupful of chopped nut meats, one package of dates, sliced; mix these well with the flour mixture. Cream one-fourth of a cupful of butter, add one cupful of sugar gradually, then two beaten eggs. Add the dry ingredients alternately with one cupful of crushed pineapple. Bake in small cups, cover with icing and sprinkle with coconut in any desired color. This recipe makes four dozen cakes.

Ice Cream Cake Pudding.

Beat the yolks of three eggs until light, add three-fourths of a cupful of sugar gradually. Mix well, add two tablespoonfuls of juice and grated rind of orange. Fold in one-fourth of a cupful of cracker crumbs, one-half of a package of dates, one-half cupful of chopped nuts, one teaspoonful of baking powder. Mix well, fold in the stiffly beaten whites of the eggs and spread evenly in a shallow pan lined with waxed paper. Bake in a slow oven forty-five minutes. Cool, cut in cubes, serve in stemmed glasses with ice cream.

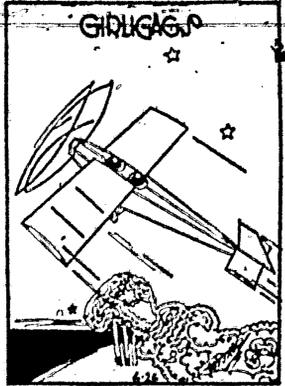

Collegiate Sandwiches.

Spread one slice of bread lightly buttered with peanut butter. Cover with a layer of dates. Spread a second slice of buttered bread with currant or cranberry jelly. Put the slices together in pairs. One-half package of dates, one-half cupful of peanut butter, will be sufficient for a dozen sandwiches the size that college boys and girls like.

Graham Cracker Pie.

Roll one and one-half dozen graham crackers, mix with one-third of a cupful of melted butter, two-thirds of a cupful of sugar and one tablespoonful of cream. Line a pie plate with this mixture, pressing hard to the bottom and sides. Fill with the following filling: one pint of milk, three tablespoonfuls of cornstarch, three beaten egg yolks, one-half cupful of sugar, with salt and flavoring to taste. Cook until thick and cover the cracker mixture. Top with a meringue, using the three egg whites to which has been added three tablespoonfuls of sugar. Sprinkle the top of the meringue with finely chopped nuts and graham cracker crumbs. Bake long enough to brown the meringue.

STAGE COACH TALES

By E. C. TAYLOR

The Vanderbilt of the Stage Era

LUCIUS WITHAM STOCKTON was to the stage coach era of transportation in the United States what Commodore Cornelius Vanderbilt was to the railroad era—the outstanding figure, almost the "czar," of his time. Stockton was born in Flemington, N. J., the son of Lucius Stockton and grandson of Rev. Philip Stockton, famous as the "Revolutionary Preacher," who was a brother of Richard Stockton, signer of the Declaration of Independence.

Little is known of his early life, but it is known that he drove stage coaches for a time, and appeared in Uniontown, Pa., lured westward by the call of the National road, and married Rebecca Moore, daughter of Daniel Moore, an old stage proprietor of Washington, Pa., before he was twenty-four years of age. They had six children. His second wife was his first cousin, Katharine Stockton, and four children were born to them. Stockton became wealthy operating stage coaches over the famous old National road from the Atlantic seaboard to the Middle West, and was perhaps the most colorful figure of his day.

Early in his career he once raced a horse and buggy against a locomotive between Relay House and Baltimore, Md., and won the race. He drove a favorite gray horse in that contest.

Stockton was a great lover of horses, and developed his own special strains for his stage coach lines. He had a strain called the "Murrat" and another called the "Winslow," which many experts declare have never been surpassed for nerve, beauty and speed. This can never be determined, however, as the two strains have died out.

He was a familiar figure along the National road, and became known as the "speed maniac" of his day. He had a span of beautiful Winslow mares, which Hanson Willison, one of his drivers, has recorded were named "Sal" and "Bet." He frequently drove this span from Uniontown to Wheeling, W. Va., between breakfast and tea time, stopping two or three hours at midday in Washington, Pa.

Stockton always had the hostlers add a little whisky to the water given this span to drink, and the spirited, fleet steeds became so accustomed to their "Upple" that they refused to drink unless their water had a little whisky in it.

He also frequently drove from Uniontown to Cumberland, Md., in a day, stopping at the stage coach station along the way to transact business. Also a drive from Cumberland to Hagerstown, Md., a distance of 66 miles, was an ordinary day's drive for him.

He had a private carriage, a long, open vehicle, which he called "The Flying Dutchman," and which was famous among horsemen and sportsmen of the time.

The famous span once ran away with him, when he was driving his wife and sister over the National road. His sister clutched frantically at him, but he didn't pay any attention to her cries, and soon had the spirited team under control.

Stockton had a factory in Uniontown where nearly all of the coaches of the National Road Stage company, which he had organized and which ran nearly all competitors out of business during the heyday of the National road, were built by experts. Maj. William A. Donaldson was one of the foremen at the factory on Morgantown street.

All stage coaches of the National road days were named, mostly for famous personages of the time. Stockton had one named "John Tyler" in honor of the Vice President of the first Harrison administration. When Tyler, on the death of William Henry Harrison, succeeded to the Presidency and vetoed the United States bank bill, Stockton was very much angered. Going into the stage coach yard, soon after the veto was announced, he spied the "John Tyler" and shouted to Donaldson:

"Donaldson, can't you erase that name and substitute another one? I won't have my coaches named for a traitor."

"Certainly I can," Donaldson replied. "What shall the new name be?" "Call it 'General Harrison!'"

So the change was made. Donaldson was a Democrat, and was much amused by the incident.

Stockton died in Uniontown April 25, 1844, at "Ben Lomond," his elaborate estate. He is buried in the cemetery at Washington, Pa., where rest many other builders of the Allegheny Mountain region.

Spider Builds Diving Bell. A spider that lives under water is an air-breathing insect like the garden variety. It can remain under water for many hours at a time and even build its nest there and rear its young by means of air which it collects on the surface, and stores in a reservoir made of its silk.

In midwinter, among the pondweeds, it spins a delicate, flat web, an almost invisible sheet. Then it climbs a plant to the surface, to collect air. It may swim awhile on its back to entangle air in its thick hairy coat, and then smartly dives. The effect is, the air goes with it, caught by its hair, and between its eight legs.

BEDTIME STORY FOR CHILDREN

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

FLATHORNS THE MOOSE IS SMART

PETER RABBIT was so excited that he couldn't sit still as he listened to the story told by Honker the Goose of how Flathorns the Moose had got even with the hunter and had kept him in a tree all night. When Honker paused as if that were the end of the story Peter's curiosity prompted him to ask a question right away.

"Did the Hunter Get Away?" He Asked Breathlessly.

He shouted Flathorns would come out of hiding and sport and butt the tree. Just after daybreak I heard an answering shout way off in the distance, and I knew then that some one was coming. I wondered if Flathorns heard or if he was so filled with rage that he had forgotten to watch out, or if he thought because he had frightened this hunter almost to death he could do the same to any other hunter. The one in the tree began to shout a great many things. I guess he was warning whoever was coming to look out for Flathorns.

Great Woods and the Green Forest might have a fair chance."

Peter drew a long breath. "That was a splendid story," said he. "I would like to see old Flathorns. Tell us some more about the Great Woods."

"Not tonight," replied Honker. "I came here to rest, for I've had a long journey, and I'm very tired." With this Honker settled himself to sleep in the middle of the pond of Paddy the Beaver.

Story of Coffee

Picking Coffee Berries in Brazil.

(Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.)

The recent announcement that coffee consumption in the United States climbed to a total of 13 pounds per person in 1930, adds interest to the checkered career of the beverage since it was first brewed in the Near East a millennium and a half ago.

There are about 60 species of coffee plants but only a few of them are extensively cultivated for commercial use. The coffee plant is a cousin of the elcacha tree from the bark of which quinine is produced. Gambier, which furnishes tanning material and dyes that bear the same name, and madder from the roots of which a substance is extracted that is important in some red dyes, also are related to the coffee plant.

The coffee plant started its worldwide ramblings centuries ago. Beginning in the hills of Ethiopia, it "jumped" the Red Sea and coffee plantations began to rise above the soil of the extreme southern tip of Arabia where the famous Mocha coffee now is produced. Later it was carried to Europe (about 250 years ago) and then to the West Indies and Brazil.

Tradition has it that the discovery of coffee's stimulating effect upon the human system was an accident. One story runs that the plant was discovered in the Fourth century by a group of monks who had been driven out of Egypt and found refuge in the Ethiopian hills. The monks maintained themselves by agriculture and sheep and goat raising. One night a monk reported to his leader that the flocks would not rest—that they were wide awake and frisking about during the hours when they should be quiet. The leader started investigations that led to the coffee plant which he found the animals consumed while browsing on the hillsides. He chewed a few of the berries from the strange bush and found that they kept him unusually alert during the night services which were held in accordance with his religion.

Although coffee did not strike a popular cord among Europeans until the Fifteenth century, as early as the reign of Charles II, in the middle of the Seventeenth century there were more than 3,000 coffee houses in London. Today coffee is a popular brew in every continent and on the civilized islands of the seas; with the United States as the world's leading consumer. More than 1,539,000,000 pounds of coffee were imported by the United States last year.

First Used as a Paste.

But the coffee berry has had its ups and downs during its rise to fame in the beverage world. Its first use was in the form of a paste which was eaten. Early Moslems were not permitted to drink wine, so they learned the art of making a brew from coffee berries. The name coffee is derived from the Arabic word Kahveh, which was pronounced Kahveh by the Turks. Kahveh was the general Arabic term for intoxicating liquors.

According to some authorities, the first cup of coffee was drunk as a refreshment at Aden, Arabia, in the Fifteenth century. Cairo began drinking the beverage about 50 years later. Meanwhile Moslem leaders held a meeting at Mecca where they decided that coffee should be banned. That was in 1611. As a result of the Mecca decision, coffee warehouses were burned and coffee houses were closed in many parts of the Mohammedan world. Some of the coffee house proprietors were beaten with their own brewing utensils by fanatical Moslems.

The ban in Egypt lasted only thirteen years, when Sultan Selim I gave coffee his stamp of approval. He emphasized his approval of the brew by ordering the execution of two Persian doctors who had denounced the use of coffee as injurious to health. Today Egypt is among the largest coffee drinking regions of the world. Some desert people of Egypt and the Near East use the beverage in connection with religious observances.

In the East, coffee is usually used in powdered form. The coffee beans popularly known in the United States are placed in a mortar and pounded. Then the powder is put into boiling water. The coffee maker serves the beverage only after a prescribed ceremony. He pours a small quantity of the liquid into one cup and then rinses each cup with the brew. After all cups have been rinsed, the rinsing liquid is poured on the fire as a tribute to Sheykh esh Shadhilly, the coffee drinkers' patron. Half a cup is served first to the eldest and most honored guest. To hand a full cup to a guest would be an insult.

Coffee Map of the World.

If one were to construct a coffee map of the world filling in coffee growing areas in black he would find most of his dark area on the portion of the world map between the Tropic of Capricorn and the Tropic of Cancer. Mexico would be filled in from the Tropic of Cancer to its southernmost border. The whole area of Central America and a wide coastal rim around the northwestern shoulder of South America, including portions of Ecuador, Bolivia and Peru on the Pacific, and Columbia and the Guianas on the Atlantic would also be marked, as well as Jamaica, Haiti, Porto Rico, and Santo Domingo.

An inverted pear-shaped area on the Atlantic coast of Brazil from Bahia to a point south of Rio de Janeiro in Brazil is the world's leading coffee-producing area. In this region is Sao Paulo state whose prosperity rises and falls with the condition of the coffee industry. Coffee is responsible for the fact that the state has more miles of railroads than any other state in the republic. The railroad leading from Santos, the world's chief coffee port, to Sao Paulo, the world's coffee capital, is one of the richest steel highways because it is literally a coffee funnel, the smaller end of the funnel being set in ships' holds at Santos.

The first coffee berries did not reach Brazil until 1727. Today coffee and Brazil are nearly synonymous. In Sao Paulo state alone there are more than 40,000 coffee plantations with 900,000,000 trees in production. New trees numbering 158,000,000 have been set out and soon will be in production. One plantation owns its own railroads, highways, shops, stores and warehouses.

Africa has several coffee-growing regions. Liberia, Sierra Leone and a portion of southern Nigeria are large producers. The coastal zones of the Belgian Congo and a portion of Angola, Mozambique and Kenya are dotted with plantations while Ethiopia, original home of the famous coffee berry, continues to produce. Coffee plantations in Madagascar are confined to the eastern half of the island.

The southwestern corner of the Arabian Peninsula continues to grow the so-called Mocha coffee, while the southern tip of India and Ceylon also are important coffee-growing regions of Asia. Java and neighboring islands have successfully grown coffee transplanted from Liberia, and New Guinea's eastern plantations are showing promise in the coffee industry. Australia's coffee-growing region is in Queensland, the so-called "sugar bowl" of the continent.

How the Bean is Handled.

The coffee plant grows to a height of from 15 to 20 feet. Its blossoms remain on the plant only a day or two when the petals wither and fall and the fruit begins to take shape. A bush produces from two to three crops a year. Ripe coffee berries resemble dark red cherries. Inside the "cherries" are two coffee beans (the coffee of commerce) which are extracted by various processes.

The beans are enveloped in a delicate skin and fleshy pulp. In Arabia these coverings are removed by the old drying method. The berries are spread out on a drying floor a few inches deep where they are frequently stirred so that each berry may be exposed to the sun. The pulpy covering dries in from two to three weeks after which the berries are pounded until the coffee beans are set free.

The most popular method of hulling is the wet method. The berries are brought in from the field and placed in tanks. The mature berries will sink to the bottom of the tank where they are drawn off through pipes and conveyed to crushing machines. The crushed mass passes to a water tank where it is stirred to separate the beans. The beans fall to the bottom of the tank and are withdrawn. At this stage the beans are covered with a slimy film which is removed by placing them in a vat where fermentation sets up. Then they are washed, dried and sacked for market, the latter process consisting of assorting the beans into sizes, colors, and eliminating any foreign bodies from the mass.

Young coffee plants must be given protection from the sun for several months after they break through the ground. Some planters shade them with palm leaves; some by building a matting-covered frame over the plants about three feet above the ground.

BRIDGE LONG PART OF "LONDON TOWN"

Structure Across Thames in Use for More Than a Century.

That bridge across the Thames at London which is borne upon five granite arches and known as London bridge has completed 100 years of history. But its name is much older than a century. At or near the point at which this modern structure spans the river there has been a crossing from time immemorial. The Saxons had a bridge there (or successive bridges) made of wood and barred by a fortified gate—a gate to the city. It was swept away by a storm.

Then, in 1180, only a little more than a century after the Conqueror had come, was commenced that stone structure which served river-crossing Londoners for nearly 650 years. Until the middle of the Eighteenth century it alone drew together the two banks of the Thames at London.

In its picturesqueness it vied with the Rialto of Venice and the Ponte Vecchio of Florence, which, in some part, it resembled. On each side of its roadway it had shops and stately houses, some with gardens on their roofs. There was a Twelfth-century chapel on a wider pier at about the middle.

The structure, however, was suited better to the ideals and customs of the Middle Ages than to modern notions about bridges. Within the 900 feet of the river's width it had 18 solid stone piers varying from 25 to 34 feet in thickness, so that, in effect, it sent the waters of the Thames through a greatly narrowed channel. The piers supported buildings four stories in height, which in turn narrowed the passage for vehicles and pedestrians, and darkened it to almost tunnel blackness. The buildings were cleared away in the middle of the Eighteenth century, but the obstruction to navigation still remained, and, in 1823, after bitter debate, it was decreed that a new bridge must be built. Two years later the duke of York laid the foundation stone; and then, after six years more, the new structure, only a few yards higher up the river, was opened with flags, music, oratory and parades. In the following year old London bridge went the way of the centuries.

But London bridge is still London bridge. It still divides the Thames into "above" and "below" and, though there are other bridges now—Tower and Victoria, Waterloo and Westminster and the rest—it still carries Londoners from one bank to the other, just as its predecessors carried Saxon and conqueror, knight and cleric. And though the pace is swifter now, what with motor cars speeding along the deck widened in the beginning of the motor age, the bridge has not broken with Britain's past. Its lamp posts are cast of the cannon Britons captured in the War of the Peninsula.

Ceiling of the World

"What is the ceiling today?" This is a common question around airports, because a flying "ceiling" varies with the atmospheric density. To determine accurately the fluctuating ceiling clouds, haze and fog around airports and weather bureaus, an experiment is being conducted in Cleveland with a light beam that is virtually a tape measure.

To determine the ceiling height with this new electric tape measure, it is only necessary to focus the light beam from a light projector upon the clouds and to sight, through a special gauging instrument, the light spot thus thrown on the clouds. The optical system employed in the projector produces a phenomenon—beam intensity of 1,840,000 candlepower.

Proof That Trout Preys on Newly Planted Fry

The spectacle of large fish gobbling up newly planted fry in Tenaya lake in Yosemite National park recently proved to the rangers in charge of the fish planting that trout are cannibals—and also proved too much for the disposition of the offenders. Oscar Irwin, park ranger, was in charge of the planting of a supply of steelhead fry in the upper end of the lake. After releasing the young fish the planting party noticed a large fish swimming around in the shallow water chasing four of the small fish just released from the can. Ranger Irwin waded out after the attacker with a shovel, hit it over the back, scooped it up and brought it to dry land. It proved to be a 14-inch German brown trout. A few minutes later another fish appeared in search of food, and again Irwin and his trusty shovel went to the defense of the fry. This time he brought out a 16-inch trout of the same species.

Here Are the Reasons Firestone CAN GIVE YOU EXTRA VALUES

ONLY by comparing manufacturing, construction, and distribution can you determine what is behind the price tag on the tires you are asked to buy. Price alone is never an index to value unless you know the reputation and ability of the manufacturer and what advantages he has in purchasing of raw materials, manufacturing efficiency, and distributing economies. These are the factors that determine tire value.

Read the facts at the right—then go to the Firestone Service Dealer in your community and make your own comparisons with cross sections of Firestone Tires and special brand mail order tires. See the Extra Values you get by equipping your car with Firestone Tires.

Manufacturing Efficiency

Firestone control every step in the manufacture of their products—own their own rubber preparation factory in Singapore—their own cotton fabric mills—and their own huge tire factories—the most efficient in the world. With these great advantages Firestone save millions of dollars annually, which are passed on to car owners in Extra Values.

Mail Order houses have their tires built as a part of a miscellaneous assortment of production by some manufacturer who is unknown to the public. Mail Order houses are dependent upon others for their tires.

Distributing Economy

Firestone have the most efficient and economical distributing system through Service Dealers and Service Stores. Firestone know tires must carry with them the necessary service for the economy, safety, and satisfaction of car owners. Special brand mail order tires are usually made just to sell, with limited or no facilities for servicing the car owner after the sale.
