

LOCAL MENTION

Roy Shafer of the Carrizozo Auto Co., made a business trip to Encino Tuesday, returning home in the evening.

Mrs. John Gutknecht of Chicago is here, administering to the wants of her mother, who is ill at the Johnson Hospital.

Raymond Lackland of El Paso was a Carrizozo visitor the latter part of last week, visiting relatives and friends.

Mr. and Mrs. D. L. Groce and son J. Veri Groce of Corona, were guests at the home of Prof. and Mrs. D. U. Groce at a six o'clock dinner Wednesday evening.

The Woman's Missionary Society of the Methodist Church will give a baked sale Saturday, Dec. 5, at the Carrizozo Hardware Store.

There was a family re-union at the home of Mr. and Mrs. S.S. Gillespie on Thanksgiving Day, when Mrs. Gillespie's father, Mr. L. C. Smith, her sister, Mrs. H. A. Meisel, husband and daughter Alice, another sister, Mrs. F. E. Pattison husband and son Earl, and her brother and wife, Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Smith, Jr., came up and spent the day, returning to the border city this morning.

F. L. Skinner, Superintendent of the Bonito Water System for the Southern Pacific, was a business visitor here Wednesday.

Miss Viola Kimbrell, Principal of the Picacho school, was a week-end guest of her parents, Assessor and Mrs. William E. Kimbrell.

Henry Silva, Sr., was here yesterday from his ranch in the Tucson mountains on business.

Miss Charlotte Burnett, State W. M. U. Secretary of the Baptist Convention of New Mexico, with headquarters at Albuquerque, spent Tuesday in Carrizozo, conferring with Mrs. L. D. Jordan concerning W. M. U. Work in this section. She returned to Albuquerque Tuesday evening.

Remember the good old days when the neighborhood grocer would give you a good 5 cent cigar when you paid your bill on Saturday nights?

Mrs. Albert Ziegler was taken ill Sunday morning and is now at the Johnson Hospital, where her condition shows an improvement, we are glad to say.

Prof. and Mrs. D. U. Groce and small daughter Wanda are spending the week-end with Mr. Groce's parents, Mr. and Mrs. L. D. Groce and brother, J. Veri at Corona.

American Troops Not for Manchuria

China has asked the League of Nations to send an international force, consisting of American, British, French, and Italian troops now on Chinese soil or in Chinese waters, to police the South Manchurian Railway pending the settlement with Japan. The thing can't be done! American troops are in China solely for the purpose of protecting American life and property. They cannot be commanded by the League of Nations; and if the government in Washington were to order them to co-operate with the

OSCURA OBSERVATIONS

Last Wednesday evening, Mrs. Geo. Dixon was given a delightful surprise party at the Taylor I-X ranch.

Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Dillard and Mrs. May Russell have gone to Hot Springs, they expect to remain over the holidays.

Mr. and Mrs. Vance Smith spent the week-end at Tucumcari, visiting Mrs. Smith's sister.

Mrs. R. H. Webster of Dawson spent several days with the Holloways last week.

Mrs. George Dixon will spend Thanksgiving with her children at Clouderott.

Miss Nettie Brown is down from Carrizozo, spending a few days with her parents.

Another school benefit dance, Nov. 28, at the Oscura schoolhouse. Music by the "Gloom Chasers."—Rah!

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. H. Thornton and daughter, Mrs. Gladys Moore returned from El Paso Sunday evening.

The Wooten family is back again—Mr. Wooten being employed by the S. P. at this section.

Judge Seth F. Crows left for El Paso to spend Thanksgiving Day with his son and daughter.

Dinglehooper and his dog ADOLPH passed through here, enroute to Juarez.

Yeah! We'll Be There!

The "Gloom Chasers" played to a big crowd of dance fans at White Oaks last Saturday night and as they heard of 'Old Gloom' sitting around moping and smoking, so they are going to storm Oscura Saturday, (tomorrow night) and chase 'Old Gloom' out of town with a big Depression-Defying Dance. Will you be there?—Yeah!

League in performance of duty so remote from the protection of American life and property as policing a Japanese railway in Manchuria, we have a feeling that Congress would have something to say about it.

Great Britain, France and Italy, all members of the League of Nations, can lend their soldiers and sailors to the League if they like. The United States is under no obligation, actual or implied, to do so. As a matter of fact, it was Article XVI of the Covenant, that did as much as anything else to keep the United States out of the League.

The failure of the League to live up to its promises is naturally disappointing to China; but that is no reason for expecting that the United States will support both the League and China with American troops in the controversy in which American interests are not immediate. China's request forcefully illustrates the folly of two things: Counting on armed support from an organization that has no army and looking to others to do your fighting for you. American pacifists and little army and navy people should take note.—Detroit Free Press.

Lone Horseman Flees As Bear Attempts Attack

Alamogordo News: The thrilling story of how a mother bear, in defense of her two cubs, and seeking vengeance for the loss of her mate at the hands of a hunter, attempted to attack a lone horseman, was related here last week by Carmen Baca, employed on the Circle Cross ranch south of here.

Baca states that he had tied his horse near and was working on an irrigation ditch on the Circle Cross ranch, when his attention was attracted by a shuffle of feet down the hill toward him. Glancing up he beheld Mamma Bear coming towards him, with jaws very much ajar, and with looks that well bespoke her hatred of human beings. Not trusting his 30-30 calibre rifle, which Baca carried on his saddle, he mounted his horse hurriedly and galloped a way. 'I was riding a good horse,' says Mr. Baca, 'but he was none too fast for me.' Baca had been in a hunting party which had slain the bear's mate a few weeks before. He states that two small cubs accompanied the mother bear and that they and the mother were of the silver tip species, the largest bears that are known to western wilds.—Mr. Baca is a brother to Mrs. Ramon St. John of Carrizozo.

Did Billy the Kid Sue For Peace?

Santa Fe—A new conception of Billy the Kid, as a Lincoln county gangster who got tired of fighting and wanted to go to work, is presented by M. G. Fulton, English instructor at the N. M. I. at Roswell. Mr. Fulton is here researching for information on the life of the Kid. He holds no element of sympathy for the notorious outlaw, but raises a new issue of whether it was William Bonney, alias 'Billy the Kid,' who first sued for peace. Most of those who have written in the past, have had that it was Gov. Lew Wallace who offered to forget about the Kid's past crimes if he would put up his pistols.

Which of the two violated the terms of the agreement when the Kid surrendered, is another issue. Fulton is preparing a magazine article on Gov. Lew Wallace and 'Billy the Kid,' in which he treats in detail the relationships between the two men, and is likewise working on a new book for future publication.

A letter, Mr. Fulton said, was written by Bonney to Governor Wallace in March of 1879 at a time when $1,000 was posted for Bonney's arrest in connection with the killing of attorney Chapman.

Use Railway for Highway

Santa Fe New Mexican: An all-winter road to Santa Fe, trade center of the Vallecitos area, has been assured residents of that rather remote and isolated region of Rio Arriba county.

Certainty of an excellent highway was made public today that the D. & R. G. W. railroad had accepted the district highway department's proposal for the purchase of bridges and right-of-way on the discontinued line between Taos Junction and La Madera.

The deal was closed through Alamosa offices of the railroad by means of telephone and telegraph. Whether or not actual payment of approximately $4,000 has been made at the present time could not be learned today.

Plans for getting the railroad grades and bridges in shape for highway purposes are being made, but the work is dependent upon tax returns from Rio Arriba county. The road will receive returns from a half mill levy for a two year period.

One bridge was torn out before the deal could be arranged but seven or eight others, ranging in length from 90 to 200 feet, remain and will be utilized.

It is planned to use about one-half of the 18-mile railroad grade for the new road.

Odd Fellows Will Entertain

Carrizozo Lodge No. 30, I. O. O. F., will hold another free entertainment for Oddfellows, Rebekahs and close friends at Oddfellows' Hall Wednesday night Dec. 2. It was first decided to hold the entertainment on Dec. 3rd, but changed the date as an act of courtesy to the Eastern Star Chapter which has its regular meeting on that date.

There will be a splendid musical program both vocal and instrumental. Prof. D. U. Groce will furnish an 8-piece orchestra, Mrs. R. E. Lemon will give a vocal solo, duets and other vocal selections will be given by others on the program. Short addresses will be made by E. M. Brickley of Carrizozo and D. L. Groce of Corona, father of our School Superintendent. After the program, an oyster supper will be served. One and possibly two of the Grand Lodge officers will attend. The entertainment will be held under the direction of a joint committee from the local Oddfellow and Rebekah lodges.

Miss Eleanor Kennedy, State Supervisor of Nurses, was in Carrizozo on Wednesday of this week, visiting the local health department, while on her way to Roswell to attend the Nurses Conference.

ANCHO NOTES

Mr. and Mrs. S. J. Pruett, and son J. A. spent Thanksgiving at Pastura.

J. M. Frame motored to Corona Saturday evening to visit Mr. and Mrs. Bert Penix.

Messrs. Bence and Hogan left this week for California after a brief visit with the Goss family.

Miss June Caldwell is spending the week in El Paso as guest of Mrs. Joe Roscoe.

Allen Kile was home from Douglas, Arizona, for the Thanksgiving holiday.

George Straley has returned from Kansas City.

George Goodson is back at Luna, after spending several days in the S. P. Hospital at San Francisco.

Mrs. C. C. Belknap left Sunday for New York City where she will spend Thanksgiving and the holidays with Mr. and Mrs. Carrol York Belknap, who returned this week from a cruise in Bermuda.

Mr. and Mrs. S. J. Pruett were hosts Wednesday evening, Nov. 18, to the Bridge Club. After games, dainty refreshments were served. Those enjoying the hospitality of the Pruetts, were: Meses. Belknap, Kile, Miss Caldwell, Mr. and Mrs. Grover Pruett and J. M. Frame.

The Woman's Club held its regular meeting at the home of Mrs. Price Miller Saturday afternoon, with the president, the secretary and ten members present. It was voted to have the librarian order a four-section bookcase. After a brief business session, word study was taken up under the leadership of Mrs. Kile. After tea hour, a delectable two-course menu was served by the hostess. Next meeting will be Dec. 5th, with Mrs. L. L. Peters.

Last Sunday, Mr. and Mrs. S. J. Pruett entertained with a lovely dinner party for 12 guests as a farewell courtesy to Mrs. C. C. Belknap who was leaving that day for New York.

Joe Devine of Carrizozo is third-trick operator at the local depot.

Echoes from the Regional Conference

The Regional Conference of Public Health Nurses held at Roswell last week was well-attended by all the school and county nurses of this section.

The conference was opened with a dinner meeting at the Nickson Hotel, and was followed by a round table meeting at which the nurses brought up various interesting problems of their work.

The Saturday meetings were presided over by Miss Eleanor Kennedy, State Supervisor of Nursing Service. All nurses reported gaining much assistance from the meetings.

Saturday evening was spent in a social gathering at the home of Mrs. Esther Victory Schaeffel, the hostess being ably assisted by Miss Ella Yager. Another conference of this nature is planned for February, also to be held at Roswell.

LYRIC THEATRE

Friday-Saturday—Buck Jones in his latest picture, "The Range Fued." Outdoor thrills and mystery! Also last of "The Phantom of the West," and Mickey Mouse Comedy.

Sunday-Monday—Stormy passions on the high seas—"Shanghai-ed Love," with Richard Cromwell, Noah Beery and Sally Blane. Also two good comedies.

NOGAL NEWS

Cold weather has stopped the placer mining business for a short spell.

Walter Snell sold a nice bunch of fat steers this week.

If you are looking for a fine dressed hog, Jesse May has a few more for sale at reasonable prices.

Mr. and Mrs. Elbert Brown, Joe Hurley and 'Sephus' Brown, made a trip the past week to the Hurley ranch near Quemado, N. M., where they found fine ranch land, plenty of good grass and some nice farming land—It is an ideal place for a rancher-farmer.

L. A. Daniels and D. J. Hargett, mining men from Roswell, were here last week looking into the mining business and have decided to start the mines again.

Tommie Zumwalt relieved E. Brown at the Coyote pumping station for a few days last week while Elbert was on a short vacation and business trip.

Mr. and Mrs. S. E. Cazzens of the Nogal-Mesa lost their baby last Monday with scarlet fever and we greatly sympathize with the parents.

J. Hoagland was here from his sawmill near Alto Tuesday with a load of lumber for Jesse May's new residence.

We sometimes think we have severe cold weather here, but while disagreeable at times, our climate is very mild when compared with that of some other states. We had word this week from Edgar Martin at Fruitland, Idaho, telling of zero weather there, with plenty of snow and everything frozen-up tight. This is only a 'love-tap,' for that place the thermometer runs as low as from 20 to 35 degrees below the zero mark at many times through the winter. If we had winters like that, we might have some reason to complain.

Mr. and Mrs. William Gallacher were here this week from Carrizozo and bought fruit and vegetables from Jesse May.

Mrs. Nellie Reilly returned last Saturday from El Paso, where she reports a pleasant time visiting relatives and friends.

County Clerk and Mrs. S. E. Greisen spent last Sunday in Capitan, visiting relatives and friends.

Brr! Snow!!

The first snow fell Sunday following a slow, cold rain which made us hustle for our overcoats perfumed with moth balls, but we forgot about the odor in the good service the 'Big Boys' did us.

PETER TELLS MRS. PETER ALL ABOUT IT

When things look dark, pray, do not quit; Get busy then and use your wit.

IT IS by doing just this that Peter Rabbit has succeeded in getting out of all kinds of scrapes. If Peter were the kind to give up easily he long ago would have made a good dinner for Reddy Fox or Old Man Coyote, or Hooty the Owl or Koughleg the Hawk, or some other of those who have a fondness for rabbit.

When Peter told Mrs. Peter that in letting Bowser the Hound keep close to his heels all the way through the Green Forest and half way across the Green Meadows to the dear Old Briar Patch, he had been fooling Old Man Coyote, she didn't know what to think.

"What did Old Man Coyote have to do with it?" she demanded just a wee bit crossly, for she had been terribly frightened as she watched Peter seemingly having such hard work to keep out of the clutches of Bowser the Hound. "I didn't see him anywhere."

Peter chuckled. "It was this way, my dear," he began. "I was sitting near the pond of Paddy the Beaver over in the Green Forest last night where Honker the Goose and eleven of his followers were fast asleep, when I saw Old Man Coyote and Reddy and Granny Fox hide close to the edge of the pond. By and by I saw that some of those sleeping geese were drifting in sight toward them. I wait-ter with his tail, and that made them open their eyes in a hurry. The instant I had thumped I ran, for I knew that the nearest hiding place was an old bramble-tangle, and that was a long way off, and I felt sure that Old Man Coyote would try to get even with me for spoiling his chance of getting a fat goose. Half way there I stopped to listen, which was a very foolish thing to do. Old Man Coyote almost caught me there.

"He's smart. Old Man Coyote is. I never realized until last night how smart he is. You see, he knew that the nearest place of safety for me was that old bramble-tangle, and he guessed that I would do just what I did do—stop before I got there. So the instant I thumped he started for the bramble-tangle to try to catch me, and he nearly did it, too. Just look at my tail. Did you ever see such a looking tail?" Peter twisted around and looked mournfully at the ragged little white bunch which he called a tail.

"He so nearly caught me that he pulled a bunch of hair out of my tail just as I reached the bramble-tangle. I never before had such a narrow escape in all my life. Then he told me that I never would get back to dear Old Briar Patch unless I got him a fat goose to make up for the one I had cheated him out of by waking Honker and the others and I knew by the way he said it that he meant it. Of course, he knew that I couldn't, and wouldn't if I could, get him a goose. It was his way of telling me that he meant to catch me. Then he trotted away, and I knew perfectly well that he had gone to hide somewhere along the way I would have to get home.

"I kept trying and trying to think of some way to get here, for I knew how worried you would be, my dear, but I couldn't think of a single plan until Bowser the Hound came nosing along this morning and found me there in the bramble-tangle. Then all in a flash it came to me how I could get home. I hopped right out in front of Bowser and pretended that something was the matter for me and I ran, keeping just out of his reach, and all the time pretending that I couldn't run any faster. Right on the edge of the Green Forest, hiding behind a pile of brush, was Old Man Coyote, just as I had suspected he would be. I wish you could have seen him when I went past almost under his nose. You see, he didn't dare jump out because Bowser was right at my heels. When it was safe to do so I showed Bowser how I can run when I want to, and here I am. I'd give another bunch of hair out of my tail to know what Old Man Coyote said when I skipped past. Ha, ha, ha! There's nothing like a little wit, my dear, to get you out of trouble."

Little Mrs. Peter drew a long breath and her eyes were shining with pride and admiration. "My, how smart you are, Peter!" she cried. "Still I do wish that you would stay at home and not take such dreadful risks," she added.

STAGE COACH TALES

By E. C. TAYLOR

Breaking Up a Whig Parade

GEORGE FISHER was one of the best known stage coach drivers on the old National pike in the 1840's. He was noted for his manipulation of fiery steeds.

There was a fractious team at Claysville, Pa., that was the terror of all the drivers on that section of the road. It had "run off" once, killing one passenger and injuring several, on Caldwell's hill, seven miles west of Washington, Pa.

Every driver who had been given the team had despaired of taming these fiery horses, so Fisher was sent for. He had been driving out of Washington, Pa., and after taking charge of the team he soon had it under control. He drove it many years without an accident.

Fisher was driving this team in 1844, during the celebrated political contest between James K. Polk and Henry Clay, opposing candidates for the Presidency. Fisher was an ardent supporter of Polk, and bitter in his enmity toward the Whigs.

One day in 1844 there was a large mass meeting of Whigs in Washington, Pa. An "extra" coach, specially chartered, passed over the road going west, with Fisher at the reins, going from Claysville to Honey's Point.

There was a delay just beyond the state line of West Virginia. A delegation of Whigs, flaunting banners and with music blaring, were en route from West Alexander to Washington to attend the mass meeting.

On their return home in the evening, while they were parading along the National pike, with banners flying and bands playing, they were overhauled by George Fisher and his coach.

Fisher drove his teams, one of which was the famous "unbroken" span he had mastered years before, and his coach into the Whig procession at several points. Buggies were damaged, carriages and light wagons broken, and several persons were injured.

Collin Wilson, a prominent citizen of Washington, Pa., was one of the injured. The town of Washington demanded that Fisher be held to account for his action, and the resultant investigation stirred that section of the country as nothing else had done for years.

Fisher explained that the "bad" team he was driving became frightened when it encountered the banners and the music. He claimed that the breaking-up-of-the-Whig-procession was unintentional, was just an accident.

The reputation of his team was well known, especially in the vicinity of Washington, Pa., and his explanation served as a plausible excuse. The fame of the team saved Fisher from prosecution and probable severe punishment.

But the Whigs of that neighborhood went to their graves solemnly believing that Fisher did it on purpose. Fisher in later years would not discuss the incident, but he intimated to his many friends that the team must have known the paraders were Whigs, and had the same feeling toward them that he had.

The same team, just before Fisher took the reins, had made a reputation as "killers." One man had been killed and several injured in a mad dash of the horses.

A few days before Fisher took charge of the recalcitrant team, the horses dashed down the long hill from the locust trees at Caldwell's tavern, to Wickert's bridge.

A Mr. Moses—He never was identified further—was seriously injured; the driver was severely hurt and three passengers were injured.

Mr. Moses, a Kentucky merchant, suffered a badly crushed leg. He died two days later in the hospital, at Washington, Pa.

The driver of the stage coach was so seriously injured that he did not recover until the next spring. He spent the winter recuperating at the Caldwell tavern.

The other passengers in the coach were not injured.

Lighting and Autos

The bureau of standards says that the fact that automobiles are supported on rubber tires would probably have no appreciable effect on the probability of the automobiles being struck by lightning. Likewise, the wetting of the automobile by rain would probably produce no appreciable effect. The inclosure effected by the automobiles would probably afford some degree of protection to persons within. Persons within a conducting inclosure are safe against lightning. The automobile body, although the inclosure is in a large measure effected by glass, approaches this condition.

First English Letter

Sir John Pelham is stated to have been the first to receive a private letter written in the English language. It was sent by his wife in 1390. Latin was the language in which letters and communications of every kind were written to the time of the accession of Edward I. French continued to predominate as the language of correspondence until the reign of Edward III. An act of parliament then provided that the English language should in future be the language of legislation, and the French language, which had been spoken since the conquest, ceased to be used.

John's Mother Praises Doctor

There isn't a mother living who won't agree that no half-sick child should be the subject for an experiment with medicines of uncertain merit. When your child is bilious, headachy, half-sick, feverish, restless, with coated tongue, bad breath, no appetite or energy, you know that nine times out of ten it's a sign his little stomach and bowels need purging. And when you know that for over fifty years leading physicians have endorsed one preparation for this condition, there doesn't seem to be any reason for "trying" things.

Rich, fruity California Fig Syrup clears the little stomach and bowels gently, harmlessly and in a hurry. It regulates the bowels, gives tone and strength to them and to the stomach; and helps to give your child new strength, energy and vitality. Thousands of Western mothers praise it. Mrs. Joseph W. Hill, 4306 Bedford Ave., Omaha, Nebraska, says: "I'll never forget the doctor who got me to give my baby boy, John, California Fig Syrup. Nothing else seemed to help his weak bowels. That was when he was just a baby. He suffered a good deal before I gave him Fig Syrup, but it stopped his trouble quick. I have used it with him for colds and little upset spells ever since. I consider him a Fig Syrup boy."

Insist on the genuine article. See that the carton bears the word "California." Over four million bottles used a year.

Bolshevik Morals

Sinclair Lewis laid down a book in defense of Bolshevik morals. "Bolshevik morals may be all right," he said, "but they seem topsy-turvy to me. They remind me of a story. 'A married man down in Palm Beach tried to kiss a pretty girl. He'd often kissed her before, but this time she pushed him away. 'How dare you try to kiss me, you unfaithful brute!' she spat. 'Only this afternoon I saw you kissing your own wife. And I heard you tell her besides that she was all the world to you.' 'Yes,' said the man, 'what of it? There are two worlds, darling. Wife is the old world, and you are the new.'"

When PAIN Comes

WHAT many people call indigestion very often means excess acid in the stomach. The stomach nerves have been over-stimulated, and food sours. The corrective is an alkali, which neutralizes the acids instantly. And the best alkali known to medical science is Phillips' Milk of Magnesia. One spoonful of this harmless, tasteless alkali in water neutralizes instantly many times that much acid, and the symptoms disappear at once. You will never use crude methods when once you learn the efficiency of this. Go, get a small bottle to try.

Be sure to get the genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia prescribed by physicians for 50 years in correcting excess acids. 25c and 50c a bottle—any drug store.

Arms of Law for Great Bridge

WHEN the new and magnificent George Washington bridge which stretches across the Hudson river from New York city to the New Jersey shore was formally opened the other day, the eighty eight members of the bridge police force were given their share of admiration and praise. These men, guarding traffic across the longest span in the world, were appalled by the port authority of New York and New Jersey which built and controls the bridge, and all are picked officers. Part of them are seen here being put through a traffic signal drill.

The Old Gardener Says:

MANY garden makers are obtaining much satisfaction by the use of peat-moss as a mulch. This is especially true in sections where there has been a prolonged drought. Granulated peat-moss is a better mulch than stable litter or grass. It prevents the evaporation of moisture from the soil and enables the garden maker to avoid hours of cultivation. When a mulch of this kind is spread over the perennial bed it serves a useful purpose by conserving moisture, and becomes a fertilizer when dug in as a part of the spring work. Moreover, it helps to protect the roots during the winter. In some gardens this plan of using peat as a mulch has been extended to the rose bed, with decided success.

How I Carry On

BY DOUGLAS MALLOCH

If I am part of all the past, If dead men's souls still live in me, If rocks are only rocks re-cast, If I am part of what is gone, I wonder how I carry on?

This boulder traveled from the north Upon some glacier's icy blast, That they who journeyed back and forth Along this road might pause and rest, And yet how many men in me Will find a little charity?

This oak tree, when an oak tree fell, Rose from its roots and spread its shade; And, when the sun beat down as well, How much of shadow have I made To cool some other fellow's brow As this old oak tree cools me now?

And, if some martial loved the right, And died, who had so bravely fought, How well did I take up the fight, Or was his struggle all for naught? I took his gifts, but now he's gone, I wonder how I carry on?

GOOD THINGS TO EAT

A dainty food especially good for an invalid and simple to prepare is:

Chicken Custard. Take three tablespoonfuls of finely chopped and pounded chicken, one-half cupful of bread crumbs, two well beaten eggs, a pinch of salt and one of celery salt, a cupful of milk. Mix thoroughly, pour into well greased custard cups and place in a pan of water. Bake in a moderate oven until the custard is set. Serve hot.

Turkey Stuffing. Crumb a good sized loaf of bread, chop two medium sized onions and fry until soft in one cupful of butter; when tender but not brown, pour over the bread crumbs, mix lightly, add one cupful of finely cut celery, two hard cooked eggs chopped, one cupful of broken walnut meats, a pair of cooked sweetbreads, salt, pepper and minced parsley. Mix well, fill the turkey, adding a few sliced olives at intervals. Do not pack too tightly. If a plainer dressing is desired sweet-breads may be omitted and a little cooked veal substituted, or the nuts and olives may be left out.

Chicken Chow.

Cook a chicken until tender, adding salt and one or two small dried peppers. When tender pick the meat from the bones as for cream chicken. Prepare noodles, using one egg, salt, a tablespoonful of cream and flour to roll as thin as paper. Cut and dry for an hour or two. In a baking pan put a layer of the noodles, then a layer of chicken, a layer of sliced hard cooked egg, add a little broth and finish the top with noodles; cover with buttered crumbs. Bake for half an hour.

Ginger Ale and Pear Salad.

Boil the syrup from a can of pears, add two and one-half tablespoonfuls of gelatin softened in one-fourth of a cupful of water, add one-fourth cupful of sugar. Cool and add one cupful of ginger ale and the pears cut into small pieces. Pour into a mold and when firm serve with whipped cream and a tablespoonful of salad dressing. This is nice for dessert.

Japan Still Defies League of Nations and China Threatens — Groener Asks Fair Play for Germany in Armaments.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

THERE is no war in Manchuria because, as the League of Nations and other authorities agree, there cannot be a war until a competent government has declared war. But there have been bloody battles up there almost every day, and the situation during the week was getting worse. The league council was to meet again on November 16, and it was confronted with the fact that Japan had not heeded its order to withdraw her troops by that date, with the added aggravation that Tokyo had reiterated the statement that it would not obey the order and would make no concessions to the league.

Then China came to bat with a statement by its representative at Geneva, Dr. Alfred Sze. In a note expressing his government's conditional acceptance of the one-year arms holiday Doctor Sze told the league secretariat flatly that if the league covenant and the Kellogg pact should fail in the Manchuria crisis, China would build up her fighting forces to protect herself against Japan. Before that he had asked the league to send an international force to police the Manchurian railway zone.

Gen. Ma Chian-shan, commanding the Chinese troops in southern Manchuria, was said to have attacked the Japanese at the Nonai river bridge which the latter were repairing, and after a sanguinary conflict the Chinese were driven off. But they did not go far and at last reports were gathering for another attack; and more Japanese soldiers were on their way hurriedly to the scene. There were other battles, but this was the biggest.

What was more alarming to foreign nations was the spread of the fighting to the big city of Tientsin. This began with outbreaks of Chinese mobs that attacked the Japanese concession. The Japanese officials said the disorders were due to the fighting of Chinese factions and that the real motive of the Chinese was to occupy the foreign concessions in the city; so the Japanese forces went into action "for protection" and shelled the Chinese. American, French and other troops were held ready to act, but at this writing had not been called on to do anything.

In the background of all the trouble is Henry Pu Yi, who as Hsuan Tung was the last Manchu emperor of China. The young man is a quiet retiring householder in the Japanese concession in Tientsin, but loyal monarchists have always been about him and now it is asserted that there is afoot a plan to separate Manchuria from China and put Henry on the throne. With this in view, it is said, many thousands of troops have been gathered together by Gen. Liang In-Ching, former ally of the Manchu dynasty and for years the enemy of the Chang family now headed by Marshal Chang Hsueh-Liang. It is true most of these reports come from Japanese sources, but they have the ring of truth.

Ambassador Dawes was instructed to go to the league meeting.

WHAT Germany can and will do and what she asks, the other powers to do for her continue of absorbing interest to the world. The reich's stand on disarmament was set forth by Gen. Wilhelm Groener, the brilliant soldier, who is now minister of war and minister of the interior and who may succeed Von Hindenburg as president.

"Germany has the right to the same treatment as all other nations," General Groener said. "She is entitled to the same security and to the same methods of disarmament as other nations. It was expressly guaranteed in 1919 that the other powers would follow the path Germany took when she was disarmed."

"When we disarmed we were forbidden to possess heavy artillery, tanks, war planes, submarines, and warships over 10,000 tons. Even anti-aircraft artillery was prohibited. Military conscription was forbidden, and Germany was instructed, even to the slightest detail, on how to organize her army."

"The result is that Germany is utterly disarmed. Measures have been taken to guarantee an effective disarmament. Would it not be lying in the very face of all logic, and would it not be a violation of the solemn obligation to disarm entered into by all other nations, if the forthcoming disarmament conference would now seek to apply other methods than those tried out on Germany?"

"Therefore we object to the drafts of the disarmament agreement as worked out by the preparatory disarmament commission at Geneva. It is a violation of the principle of the equality of nations if it tries to make eternal the difference between the victors and the vanquished by freeing the victors of their obligations to disarm and making the vanquished bear the full brunt of the disarmament clauses in the Versailles treaty."

CONFERENCES and conversations in Paris and Berlin concerning reparations and war debts were held behind closed doors, but it was reliably reported that the French government sent word to Berlin that whatever concessions are made to meet the German situation must be only temporary and within the framework of the Young plan; that France will not agree that Germany's pre-war debts shall be given precedence over reparations payments; and that if there is any permanent reduction in the conditional part of the Young plan annuities, it must be accompanied by a corresponding reduction in the war debts owing to the United States.

Germany, on the other hand, is evidently seeking to take advantage of her present economic distress to obtain a great permanent reduction of reparations, or even their complete obliteration. The French nationalists are determined that Premier Laval shall not abandon the principle of reparations, no matter what pressure Germany brings to bear.

OUR political pot is already seething and bubbling and there is a lot of talk, loose and otherwise about next year's campaign. Senator George W. Norris of Nebraska gave voice in Washington to a few characteristic opinions. The insurgent Republican made a strong attack on the policies of Mr. Hoover, and seemed to the correspondents about ready to participate in a bolt of radicals from the G. O. P. ticket that presumably will be put up next summer. Here are a few of the things the Nebraskan said:

"If we are to keep men employed, why discharge them? It may be necessary in some instances for private industry to reduce its employment, but there is no justification for the government discharging workers."

"If we expect industry to keep men at work the government ought to set an example because the government is the largest employer in the nation. I favor a bond issue to cover the emergency and provide work for the unemployed. I do not favor bond issues in peace times, but this is an emergency tantamount to war conditions. I mean a bond issue, not to provide charity, but to provide jobs by road building and other federal construction. Instead of fighting over the dole the government ought to provide work for its jobless citizens."

Concerning the world court Senator Norris said: "I shall favor American adherence only, if a reservation is adopted requiring the senate's approval before any controversial issue, involving the United States, may be submitted to the court for decision."

COMING back to the supposed opposition in the Republican ranks to the re-nomination of President Hoover, which if it exists will probably be futile, it is interesting to note that Senator Hiram W. Johnson of California is going to visit Chicago for the purpose of finding out what support he would receive in Illinois if he became a candidate. Some of the Republican leaders of the city and state said they would give the matter serious thought, and they were rather of the opinion that Johnson might be approved by all or part of the Illinois delegation in the convention. They cited the fact that the Californian has opposed all of the Hoover policies that proved most unpopular in this part of the country, and also they thought his coming into Illinois as a presidential entrant in the April primaries might help their state ticket. Those of them who oppose Mr. Hoover had heretofore had no one to suggest except Frank O. Lowden.

WHEN Harry Moore was elected governor of New Jersey the other day, it was immediately suggested that he might be a good man for the Democratic Presidential nomination, and Senator Lewis of Illinois agrees that Moore stand at the top of the list of dark horses. Lewis also told the reporters there was an "undercover movement" in the Republican party to repudiate President Hoover.

DEATH having removed from the senate the formidable and picturesque Thaddeus H. Caraway of Arkansas, the Democrats of that state are considering the choice of his successor. The suggestion has been made, and well received, that the senator's widow, Mrs. Hattie Caraway, be nominated to fill out the unexpired term. This would be tantamount to her election. Mrs. Caraway is said to be willing to accept the office. She is a close student of public affairs and has been a charming and popular hostess in the Lord Baltimore mansion, a colonial home just over the Maryland line near Washington.

RUMANIA'S royal family has supplanted the world with another romance. This time it is Prince Nicholas, brother of King Carol and Princess Helena, who is the central figure. Nicholas met accidentally and fell in love with Mme. Delet, divorced daughter-in-law of a former cabinet minister. He asked Carol for permission to marry her and the king refused, whereupon Nicholas climbed into his automobile, picked up the lady and drove at top speed 125 miles to the village of Tohan. There he compelled the mayor to perform the marriage ceremony, and the happy couple rushed away, while the terrified mayor telephoned the news to Bucharest.

So far as is known, the king has not relented enough to recognize the marriage as even a morganatic union. But he probably will not take severe measures, for he is fond of his brother and gives him much credit for his own success in gaining the throne of Rumania. Then, of course, Carol cannot fail to remember his own affairs in the past. Prince Nicholas, who is twenty-eight years old, accompanied his mother, Queen Marie, and the Princess Helena on their tour of America in 1920.

SMALL-minded people reveled in the news that C. Van Ness Leavitt, a brother-in-law of President Hoover, was arrested in Santa Monica, Calif., on charges of violating the state prohibition law. A police officer and two dry agents who were riding speak-cases there found Leavitt in an alley holding a sack containing nineteen pints of liquor, and he was released on bail after pleading not guilty. Leavitt said some one handed him the sack while he was visiting in a store and asked him to take it out the back door and get rid of it and that he acquiesced as a friendly service not knowing the sack contained liquor. The owner of the store, also arrested, said he believed the sack was brought in by a bootlegger fleeing from the police. Altogether a trivial affair, made news only by Leavitt's relationship to the President.

WILLIAM L. Edlson, second son of the late Thomas A. Edlson, who intends to contest the great inventor's will, issued a statement at Wilmington, Del., in which he said he believed interests opposed to him are trying to establish the impression that he was not always on friendly terms with his father. As proof that this is untrue he pointed out that when both had perfected like radio equipment he (William) did not market his set in opposition to his father's even though it was patented.

"I have had the highest regard for every member of my father's family," he said, "and never since his second marriage has there been a single instance of unpleasantness either with my stepmother or any of my full or half-sisters and brothers."

"Until the conditions of my father's will and codicil were revealed no disagreement of importance ever had come between us. Even now I do not intend to allow the case to degenerate into attacks on personalities."

Edlson's will left the bulk of the estate to Charles and Theodore Edlson, the two youngest sons. Thomas, the eldest son, has said he would not join William in contesting the will.

OBSERVANCE of Armistice day was the occasion of innumerable ceremonies and addresses in all parts of the country, and in the lands of the allied nations as well. President Hoover, of course, led our nation in observing the day. In the morning, accompanied by General Pershing, Secretary of War Hurley and Secretary of the Navy Adams, he went to Arlington cemetery and laid a wreath on the tomb of the Unknown Soldier. At eleven o'clock, the hour symbolic of the ending of the war, the President was in West Potomac park, where he dedicated the beautiful marble temple which the people of Washington have built as a memorial to the soldiers who went from the District of Columbia. In the afternoon Mr. Hoover paid a visit to the old frigate Constitution at the Washington navy yard.

General Pershing and American Legion officials participated in a commemorative program in the evening, and the Carnegie endowment for international peace held a mass meeting which was addressed by Houston Thompson and Frederic R. Coudert. (A. 1921, Western Newspaper Union.)

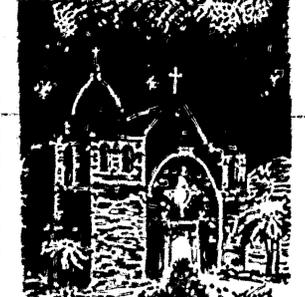

WHEN one thinks of the traditions of Christmas celebration in New England, the Middle States, and even farther West, in the early part of the Nineteenth century, it is to vision snow-covered ground, sleigh rides, and the jingle of sleigh bells, with Christmas trees and Santa Claus, much as today in those sections. Whole families going visiting in the bob-sled, to partake of the Christmas feast built around the turkey!

Those were great times and days, and their annals live in the works of famous literati of the East coast when our Republic was comparatively young. But at the same time a mighty civilization was being built on the West coast, though how different was the Christmas observed in the sparsely settled and undeveloped land that is now California! And how few to leave record!

However, Albert Robinson, a clerk who left Boston for California in July, 1829, and after 110 days reached Valparaiso, and Monterey on February 16, 1830, has left in his "Life in California," published in the late forties, a description of a Christmas celebration held at the mission in San Diego that shows the contrast between such events on the east and west coasts at that time.

Robinson's business took him to various parts of the (now) state, and while on a visit from his headquarters in San Francisco to his friend Don Jose Antonio Estudillo, comandante of San Diego, wrote of the Christmas festivities he had witnessed:

"Don Jose Antonio . . . was ever on the alert seeking for some new device for my gratification. It was nearly time for the religious festival of 'la noche buena' (the holy night) and he directed the customary exhibition of the 'pastores.' They were rehearsing night after night, till at length Christmas arrived, and I had an opportunity of beholding the midnight mass and the subsequent performances.

"At an early hour illuminations commenced, fireworks were set off, and all was rejoicing. The church bells rang merrily, and long before the time of mass the pathways leading to the presidio were enlivened by crowds hurrying to devotion. I accompanied Don Jose Antonio, who procured for me a stand where I could see distinctly everything that took place. The mass commenced, Padre Vincente de Oliva (died 1845) officiated, and at the conclusion of the mysterious 'sacrifice' he produced a small image representing the infant Saviour, which he held in his hands for all who chose to approach and kiss."

"After this, the tinkling of the guitar was heard without, the body of the church was cleared, and immediately commenced the harmonious sounds of a choir of voices. The characters entered in procession, adorned with appropriate costumes, and bearing banners. There were six females representing shepherdesses, three men and a boy."

"One of the men personated Lucifer, one a hermit, and the other Bartolo, a lazy vagabond, whilst the boy represented the archangel Gabriel. The story of their performance is partially drawn from the Bible, and commences with the angel's appearance to the shepherds, his account of the birth of our Saviour and exhortation to them to repair to the scene of the manger."

"A dialogue is then carried on of considerable length relative to the attributes of the Deity, which ends in the submission of Satan."

"The whole is interspersed with songs and incidents that seem better adapted to the stage than the church. For several days this theatrical representation is exhibited at the principal houses, and the performers at the conclusion of the play are entertained with refreshments. The boys take an enthusiastic part in the performance, and follow about from house to house, perfectly enraptured with the comicities of the hermit and Bartolo."

How different from the gay Christmas celebrations of California's present millions! And how different from what was taking place on the east coast!

Will Make Calamity the Issue

A dispatch from New York, under date of November 12, by the Universal Service (commonly known as the Hearst Service) began with the following paragraph:

"Following an extended conference with John J. Raskob and former Gov. Alfred E. Smith, Albert C. Ritchie, governor of Maryland tonight announced that unemployment will be the paramount issue of the National Democratic campaign in '32."

Here is a frank avowal, sponsored by three of its most conspicuous leaders, that the Democratic Party in its next campaign expects to make political capital of the country's distress. There is nothing surprising in this announcement except its frankness. It is not surprising because it pictures precisely the measure of Democratic statesmanship. Thoughtful, informed and far-seeing men everywhere recognize that such degree of unemployment as the United States has suffered - far less than any other great country - grew out of forces and conditions world wide in their scope for which neither the Republican Party nor President Hoover was in the least responsible. Nevertheless the Democratic Party, if the advice of Gov. Smith, Gov. Ritchie and Mr. Raskob is followed, will go before the country declaring that it is a Republican depression, a "Hoover Panic," from which we have been suffering and that the road to recovery leads to a Democratic administration.

And this from a party which was in power in 1837 when all banks suspended specie payment, when nine-tenths of all the eastern factories were closed and unemployment was all but universal; from a party that was in power in 1857 when all the banks of the country suspended, when mobs paraded the streets of New York with cries of "Bread or Death," when Federal troops were called out to protect the treasury from mobs threatening to plunder it; from a party that was in power from 1893 to 1897 when banks closed by the hundred, when farm products were virtually without sale at any price, when practically all the railroads of the country went into the hands of receivers or into the bankruptcy courts, when Federal troops were sent to Chicago to suppress railroad strikes and there were labor riots everywhere; from a party which was in power in 1913 when it was estimated 6,000,000 men were out of employment and bread lines were the most conspicuous features of all the great cities; from a party which was in power during the fall and winter of 1920-21 when farm prices were deflated with a suddenness that ruined hundreds of thousands of farmers, when a Democratic Senator declared that answers to questionnaires he had sent out convinced him that 40 percent of the working men of the country were out of employment.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE WITHOUT CALOMEL

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

If you feel sour and sunk and the world looks black, don't swallow a lot of salts, mineral water, oil, laxative candy or chewing gum and expect them to make you suddenly sweet and buoyant and full of sunshine. For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and a mere movement doesn't get at the cause. The reason your down-and-out feeling is your liver. It should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You have a talk, bad taste and your breath is foul. Skin often breaks out in blemishes. Your head aches and you feel down and out. Your whole system is poisoned. It takes those good, old CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." They contain wonderful, harmless, gentle vegetable extracts, amazing when it comes to making the bile flow freely. But don't ask for liver pills. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills, keep the name Carter's Little Liver Pills on the red label. Request a substitute. 25c at all stores. © 1931 C. M. Co.

when the credit of the government was so low that Liberty bonds sold as low as 80 cents. It is from a party with such a record as this the appeal will come to the country to restore good times by putting the Democracy in power! The Republican Party will welcome the issue, if that is to be the issue. It will welcome it as a confession of political impotence on the part of a party which seeks to win, not on its own merit, but by denunciation of its opponents. It will welcome it for the opportunity it will afford to present to the country the record of the most constructive and helpful measures ever offered to meet similar conditions. It will welcome it as an opportunity to go before the people with an affirmative, carefully thought-out program for the upbuilding of the nation in contrast with a program of detraction, denunciation and negation.

Notice for Publication The Captain Union High School Board and the Captain Local Board wish to invite the taxpayers of their respective districts to a meeting to be held at the Captain High School, Tuesday, Dec. 1, 1931, at 7:30 p. m.

At this meeting, a report of the crowded condition of the Captain schools will be given. The financial condition of the district will be discussed. The meeting will then consider the question of the erection of a new building as a solution to our problems of student needs.

The cost of a suitable building and the proper time to ask taxpayers for it, etc. Our problem is to give the children in our district an equal opportunity to compete with pupils of other districts in this state, in so far as our financial ability admits and our taxpaying public approves. Your presence and your opinion will be appreciated. Mr. A. N. Runnels Pres. U.H. School Board. Mr. James Howard Pres. C.L. Board.

HUGE TASK IN DROUGHT AID MET BY RED CROSS

Relief Given to Distressed Helps in Meeting Serious Situation, Chairman Payne Says.

"The year of the great drought," as these past twelve or more months will be known to future generations, wrought great damage to millions. Not alone did the crops, which were harvested in the fields in twenty-three states, in the summer of 1930, deprive several million persons of food, but the drought disaster continued in the summer of 1931 in the northwestern states, and also brought other minor catastrophes in its wake, such as forest fires, and the grasshopper plague. More than a year has elapsed since the American Red Cross launched, in August, 1930, its first moves for relief of the drought-stricken farmers, and in that time more than 2,750,000 persons were given food, clothing, medical aid, shelter or other type of assistance. At no period during this year were there fewer than 75,000 persons being aided and at the peak of the relief work on March 1, last, more than 2,000,000 persons were being helped.

First Use of Coffee The early history of coffee as a beverage is obscure, but it is believed that the coffee tree was originally found by Arab travelers in the Ethiopian province of Kafa about 1,000 years ago. The plant acquired the name "coffee" from Kafa, and seed was taken from Kafa to Arabia, whence it was gradually introduced to the rest of the world. Positive Proof of FORD ECONOMY

City of Detroit purchases 137 new Ford cars
Hundreds now in use prove low cost of operation

THESE 137 new Ford cars represent one of the largest deliveries ever made to a municipality at one time.

21 radio-equipped Ford scout cars were traded in on this purchase. They had been operated day and night for two years in heavy traffic and all kinds of weather.

Their individual records ranged from 73,434 miles to 143,723 miles with a grand total of 2,283,097 miles. The operating cost of the 21 cars was 2.284 cents a mile — less than 2 1/3 cents. This cost included all fuel, oil, tires, repairs and every other item except depreciation and insurance.

Of 577 Ford cars in Detroit City service, the 300 in the Police Department traveled a total of 6,591,937 miles during the past fiscal year, at an average cost of 2.9 cents a mile.

Many claims have been made on operating costs, but here in the carefully kept motor car records of the City of Detroit is positive proof of Ford economy.

In the paragraphs above, it is seen that 21 Ford scout cars averaged less than 2 1/3 cents a mile and 300 Ford cars in all branches of Detroit police work averaged 2.9 cents a mile!

Day and night, twenty-four hours a day, these Ford cars are in operation. Few branches of transportation demand such grueling service. The records show that low fuel and oil consumption is but one of the Ford's many economies. Ford materials, simplicity of design and accuracy in manufacturing provide unusual strength, stamina and freedom from replacements and repairs.

The individual car buyer as well as the purchasing department of a city or a business cannot afford to ignore the proved economy of the Ford car.

NEW MEAT for AMERICA'S MILLIONS

A HERD OF MUSK OXEN

A BUFFALO BULL

ROUNDING UP BUFFALO HERD IN YELLOWSTONE PARK

THE REINDEER

RECENTLY there came from Washington the news that the herd of buffalo in Yellowstone National park had grown so large that it would be necessary to reduce it in order to insure proper winter grazing for the remainder of the herd, which now numbers more than 1,200 animals. So the national park service of the Department of the Interior, which is custodian of the buffalo and other wild game in the park, announced that it would give away free to the first 100 applicants 100 buffaloes on the condition that these animals must not be killed, but must be used for exhibition or propagation purposes.

It was only a few years ago that America awoke to the fact that the buffalo had joined the class of "vanishing Americans" and that unless the necessary steps were taken this noble animal would be extinct. Of the millions which had once roamed the plains of the Great West only a pitiful remnant remained in a few public parks and in the hands of private owners. Inbreeding was weakening the stock and it seemed only a matter of a few years before the buffalo must go the way of the passenger pigeon and other birds and animals which had been ruthlessly and wastefully slaughtered. Fortunately, however, public sentiment was aroused in time and steps were taken which guaranteed the preservation of the animals for the future.

This latest announcement from government officials indicates that the buffalo no longer need be classified as a "vanishing American" because, recent years have seen a decided increase in the number of buffaloes now alive. Although their numbers will never be anywhere near the numbers which once inhabited this continent, the protection which the government has given to the survivors and its encouragement of their propagation in a scientific manner may mean that buffalo meat may again become a part of the regular American diet.

But more interesting than the possibilities suggested by the increasing number of buffalo is the action taken by the government in our great territory Alaska, for guaranteeing the future meat supply of America's millions. Up there more than 1,000,000 reindeer now roam the frozen tundras of the north and it is estimated that by 1930 this number will be increased to almost 6,000,000. In fact, within the last two decades the raising of reindeer has grown to such proportions that now it is second only in importance to the fishing industry.

Reindeer were introduced to Alaska in 1891. In that year sixteen were brought from Siberia at the instigation of Dr. Sheldon Jackson. When Doctor Jackson was sent to Alaska by the government to establish schools among the natives, he found his wards threatened with starvation as a result of the slaughter by white men of the game animals on which the natives had depended for food. He conceived the idea of replacing the fast disappearing game with reindeer, the principal domestic animal of Lapland and Siberia, the climate and vegetation of which resembled that of Alaska.

Returning to the states and unable to interest congress in the venture Doctor Jackson sought contributions from the public. He obtained $2,149 with which the first animals were procured in Siberia. At the same time Siberian herdsmen were brought over to care for them.

In 1912 150 more reindeer were imported. Congress then became mildly interested and small appropriations made possible importations through the next ten years until, in 1922, when the Russian government put an embargo on further exportations from Siberia, 1,250 animals had been taken into Alaska.

The Siberian herdsmen proved incompetent as teachers for the Eskimos, and for a time the venture was threatened with failure. It was then that Doctor Jackson went for advice to Prof. Rasmus H. Anderson of Madison, Wis., who, while minister to Denmark, had visited the reindeer herds of Lapland. Doctor Jackson's early interest had been aroused by a report on the industry there made by the professor.

In pursuance of Professor Anderson's advice, Lapp herdsmen were engaged to replace the Siberians as instructors to the Eskimos. Each was lent 100 animals from the government herd for a period of years, at the end of which an equal number of reindeer were required to be returned to the government. The Lapps were permitted to retain the increase.

The Eskimos were apprenticed to the Lapps for a period of four years. At the end of the first year each was given six reindeer, at the end of the second, eight, at the end of the third year, ten, and ten more at the end of his fourth year of training. With normal success, each man's herd would be almost 100 head by the time he had completed his apprenticeship. He was well equipped to start in business for himself. Today, more than two-thirds of the reindeer of Alaska are owned by natives, of whom some 5,000 have been trained in their care.

The effect of this training on the Eskimos is one of the most important results of the enterprise. Within less than a generation the reindeer industry has advanced the natives of Alaska through one entire stage of civilization—from the primitive to the pastoral, from nomadic hunters to civilized men, independent, respectable, assured of support for themselves and an opportunity to acquire wealth. They have been accounts, purchase American clothing and food, have adopted improved methods of sanitation and, in some instances, have built frame houses from imported lumber.

Between 1918 and 1925 more than 1,575,000 pounds of reindeer meat was shipped to the United States from Alaska. Two hundred thousand pounds were shipped in 1923, while by 1925, the export had increased to 690,000 pounds. The export for 1927 was expected almost to double that of 1925, the amount depending on shipping facilities. Reindeer meat sells in Nome for 15 to 20 cents a pound. It can be delivered at Seattle for 15 cents a pound and, with increased shipments and improved methods of handling, even this price can be reduced.

While the only reindeer on this continent now are in Alaska, and the territory's production is restricted by pasturage to 4,000,000 head, there are millions of acres in Canada where ten times as many can be fed, and vast stretches in northern Europe and Asia where reindeer have been raised for centuries, but never on an extensive scale, where ten times as many can be grazed as in Canada. In all, 444,000,000 reindeer could be supported by Alaska, Canada and Eurasia, assuring a substantial contribution to the world's supply of food and a utilization of what otherwise would be waste land.

But the reindeer is not the only animal which the government is propagating in the great natural game preserve of Alaska. A more recent experiment is with musk-oxen, which have been introduced into Alaska in the hope that they may become re-established there.

In 1927 the legislature of the territory of Alaska petitioned congress for an appropriation for establishing an experimental herd of musk-oxen at the reindeer experiment station of the United States biological survey near Fairbanks. Under the leadership of Representative L. J. Dickinson of Iowa and Senator Peter Norbeck of South Dakota, a bill providing $40,000 for that purpose was finally passed in 1930 and signed by President Hoover.

With this money the Department of Agriculture went to work. A herd of 34 musk-oxen was obtained in Greenland in the fall of that year, was shipped from Greenland to Norway and then to New York by boat. Then they were sent by railway express from New York to Seattle, Wash., then by steamship to Seward, Alaska, and from Seward to Fairbanks they were taken by railroad, finally completing their long journey early this year. At Fairbanks they have been placed in a large enclosure where they are under the care of men acquainted with the peculiar problems of feeding, breeding and management of these animals under Alaskan conditions.

Evidently the first musk-oxen to be captured and transported alive from their native haunts were taken on an island near Greenland around 1800. These were shipped to Norway and later sold for exhibition at a park at Woburn, England. The first to reach this country were delivered at New York in 1900, and were exhibited at the New York Zoological park. A number of others were imported during succeeding years.

It is in the hope of the biological survey of the Department of Agriculture that the musk-oxen may be successfully domesticated and that their numbers may be increased to utilize a large part of the vast feeding resources of Alaska which are largely wasted. If the experiment succeeds and the musk-oxen increases, it may mean a valuable source of supply of meat and valuable robes, as well as other products.

Musk-oxen are the most truly Arctic of all the large mammals in North America, according to Paul G. Redington, chief of the United States biological survey. At the time of the earliest exploration of the Arctic musk-oxen inhabited the vast territory north of the great transcontinental forest, roaming from the northwestern shores of Hudson bay to the Mackenzie river and over most of the Arctic islands and northern Greenland. They formerly existed in some numbers in northern Alaska. There seems to be no authentic records of their occurrence within the territory since its exploration by Europeans, though some of the natives state that their grandfathers killed them in the region south of Point Barrow, and their skulls and other bones are still occasionally picked up on the tundra.

It seems probable that the relatively small areas north of the tree limit could not support sufficient numbers to withstand the demands made on them by the surrounding natives. Musk-oxen also disappeared long ago from northern Europe and Asia. Fortunately, they have persisted to the present time in limited numbers in northern Canada, eastern Greenland, and some of the Arctic islands, though they are much reduced from their former numbers. The Canadian government for the past several years has been making vigorous efforts to preserve the remnant of these animals, having established several reservations for them, one of the most important of which is the Thelon sanctuary, east of Great Slave lake in Northwest Territories. There about 250 musk-oxen still exist, where adequate range had been set aside for them, and the most effective protection possible is being afforded in the hope that they may not only maintain themselves but also increase materially in numbers.

In appearance musk-oxen resemble somewhat a small-sized buffalo, or bison, to which they are probably more nearly akin than to any other American animal. There is a distinct hump on their shoulders, although it is not so conspicuously developed as in the bison, and the head is carried high when the animal is on the alert. Their general color is dark brownish-black, with a lighter brown or cream color on the back, and the legs are much lighter colored.

Both sexes in the musk-ox have horns, which in the mature bulls are massive, coming together at the forehead and descending on each side of the head, and then turning sharply upward and ending in sharp points. The horns in the female are similar but more slender. These weapons are exceedingly effective against the wolf, which is the musk-ox's only natural enemy. In their ordinary movements the animals are usually slow and deliberate, but they can develop astonishing speed, especially when attacked. The animals tend to group themselves into herds, and in defending themselves against the attacks of the wolves they bunch up in close formation with heads ranged outward, forming an irregular circle. When attacked they paw the ground below, and with lowered heads make quick dashing charges for short distances and then return into formation. The young and immature animals are thus defended from attack by the stronger and more aggressive adults.

The meat of these animals is reported to be of excellent quality, similar to beef or buffalo meat when properly dressed at the right season of the year. The fact that the musk-oxen formerly roamed the treeless coastal plains of Alaska and the information obtained in range investigations conducted by the biological survey offer abundant evidence that the forage there is suitable for their use. Animals kept in captivity have fed readily and thrived on hay and carrots and other root crops. Hence, their domestication is particularly desirable as a means of providing a meat-producing animal that can utilize the natural forage and the kinds of cultivated foods that can be produced in abundance in Alaska. Climatic conditions in Alaska are such that the agricultural development of the territory must depend upon production of special types of animals adapted to such environment. The present attempt, therefore, to reintroduce musk-oxen into Alaska and to domesticate them with a view to restocking suitable ranges appears to be timely, and as they will subsist largely on range forage different from that consumed by reindeer and are adapted to live under different and exceedingly rigorous conditions, they should supplement well the present rapid development of the reindeer industry. The tendency of the animals to bunch up during feeding and not to wander far away from their established ranges should make them readily herded and managed and well adapted to handling conditions that will be necessary on the great Alaskan ranges.

RESTFUL SLEEP for FRETFUL, FEVERISH CHILD

—With Castoria's regulation

When your child tosses and cries out in his sleep, it means he is not comfortable. Very often the trouble is that poisonous waste matter is not being carried off as it should be. Bowels need help—mild, gentle help—but effective. Just the kind Castoria gives. Castoria is a pure vegetable preparation made specially for children's ailments. It contains no harsh, harmful drugs, no narcotics. Don't let your child's rest—and your own—be interrupted. A prompt dose of Castoria will urge stubborn little bowels to act. Then relaxed comfort and restful sleep! Genuine Castoria always has the name:

Sweeping Indictment— It is not true that the young people today are thinking for themselves. Young people don't think; they haven't had experience enough to think. In the past, young people permitted their parents to think for them in vital matters. Today many young people neither think for themselves nor allow anybody else to think for them.—Southern Agriculturalist.

COLDS

RUB Musterole well into your chest and throat—almost instantly you feel easier. Repeat the Musterole-rub once an hour for five hours... what a glorious relief! Those good old-fashioned cold remedies—oil of mustard, menthol, camphor—are mixed with other valuable ingredients in Musterole to make it what doctors call a "counter-irritant" because it gets action and is not just a salve. It penetrates and stimulates blood circulation and helps to draw out infection and pain. Used by millions for 20 years. Recommended by many doctors and nurses. All druggists. To Mothers—Musterole is also made in milder form for babies and small children. Ask for Children's Musterole.

Too Many "Mother, when the depression is over may I have a pony?" "We'll see, Bobby. What did daddy say?"

"He said I could have a dozen ponies, but I wouldn't know which one to ride if I had that many."

Their Problem "Does your baby talk yet?" "Talk? It takes us all our time to teach it to be quiet."

POISON in Your bowels!

Poisons absorbed into the system from souring waste in the bowels, cause that dull, headachy, sluggish, bilious condition; coat the tongue; foul the breath; sap energy, strength and nerve-force. A little of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin will clear up trouble like that, gently, harmlessly, in a hurry. The difference it will make in your feelings over night will prove its merit to you. Dr. Caldwell studied constipation for over forty-seven years. This long experience enabled him to make his prescription just what men, women, old people and children need to make their bowels help themselves. Its natural, mild, thorough action and its pleasant taste commend it to everyone. That's why "Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin," as it is called, is the most popular laxative drugstore sell.

A Candle in the Wilderness

A Tale of the Beginning of New England

by IRVING BACHELLER

WNU Service Copyright by Irving Bacheller

THE STORY

Robert Heathers and William Heydon, to escape regular and religious tyranny, leave England in 1634 for the New World. They are welcomed at Boston by Rev. Doctor Cotton and make acquaintance with Amos Todd, veteran soldier and woodsman. Heydon falls in love with Elizabeth Brade. The young men settle down to the life of the colonists. Adverse comment forces them to dispense with their pretty cook, Mabel Hartley. Robert is smitten with Peggy Weld, who is engaged to James Rosewell.

CHAPTER III—Continued

They rode on in silence. She broke it, saying: "Don't take it seriously. You are one of the dearest of men and there are better fish in the sea than were ever caught. I'm a common seaman who they use in growing corn. I feel sorry for Rosewell when I think of myself. I'm ordinary. A lady asked me the other day if I was bound for Heaven. I told her that I just kept going and really didn't know where I'd fetch up. She grew stern and said, 'It's a pity. Have you no sense of sanctification?' I had to say that no one had ever suspected me of having any kind of sense, that one might as well try to pick strawberries on the sea-beach. I'm all right in England, but here I'm a lost soul."

"Well, I ask one favor," he said. "It may be the last one I shall ever request."

"What is it?" she asked.

"I want a memory that will last as long as I live."

"A memory!" she exclaimed.

"A blessed memory! I want to kiss those lips of yours—just once."

She looked down and did not answer. The horses stopped. He dismounted. They were in the deep greenwood. She leaned toward him and their lips met.

Looking into her eyes he asked: "Do you think that I could ever forget that?"

"Lord o' mercy! It's a mean thing to do to one," she answered with a sigh.

"Why mean?"

"Because you put me in mind of the devil. I shall have nothing more to do with you. Your lips have filled me with a strange trembling. Get on your horse and look to your behavior. Let us go home and pull this burr out of our minds. I am engaged to marry one of the best men in the world. Keep that among your memories."

Robert returned to his home in a rather unhappy mood. He said to William: "I am now a lack-brained, sorry varlet. My virgin heart is broken. I called her a ray of sunlight piercing the gloom, but she has only pierced me. She's been a kind of lightning flash, and now it's darker than ever and I'm like a splintered tree with its top on the ground."

"Cheer up, old man," William answered. "Girls are coming on every ship. There's time enough. Meanwhile, my home shall be yours."

Early October of the memorable year of 1635 brought a welcome arrival to the colony. He was young Sir Harry Vane, of the best blood in England, a descendant of the Sir Harry who fought heroically with the "Black Prince" at Poitiers. The newcomer had been a friend of Heydon in the school at Westminster. The young baronet had been a commoner in spirit and a noted rebel at Magdalen college. He was still a rebel—young, handsome and picturesque. A courtly figure, he had the Puritan leaning and a genius for statecraft. His fine manners and brilliant talk captured the leading men of the colony. He, they agreed, should be the next governor. Heraldry had its power even in New England when backed by a clean personality and hatred of oppression. He took William to his heart with all friendly good feeling for the sake of well-remembered days.

Vane's friendship had strengthened William with the Brades. One evening the boy sat with Brades. His way was now open.

"After all these ages of waiting, when are we to be married?" he asked.

"Suppose I say tomorrow," Brades answered. "There's a test for your courage."

"Next to tonight I favor tomorrow," he answered.

"There is a matter of family courtesy to be considered," Mr. Brades remarked. "My father will arrive early in November. It is only a little time to wait for his blessing, a deference which would, I am sure, please him deeply. The marriage may take place immediately after his arrival."

In the days that followed the lovers sailed the smooth, translucent, pearl-bottomed sea "whose water is nectar and whose rocks pure gold."

It was a day in the time of the Indian summer, when of a sudden every face in the quiet town was changed. The colony was rent with tumult and groping in a black cloud of mystery. In the evening of that day, Robert announced his intention of going to see Peggy Weld. The housekeeper testified that he went out at seven-thirty. William was not at home when Robert left. As to William's movements that night, the historian must be content with the court record.

It had been a warm quiet evening under a clear sky with a great golden moon rising. As to Robert, his going, up to the hour of nine, there was much unquestionable evidence. Leaving home he wore his belt and pistol, as both young men were wont to do when they went out after dark. He was talking with the Welds and James Rosewell and the latter's bosom friend, Roderick Leighton, from Wiltshire, and Sir Harry Vane at the house of the governor. He left there at nine, saying: "This is the land of early hours. One wandering in the night at ten has to give a good account of himself."

The young lady went out of the door with him.

This entry in Robert's diary made some days later relates an incident of this last meeting as follows:

"She went out with me into the moonlit space in front of the door.

She Cried Out: "Don't Strike. Run Before He Sees You."

She put in my hands a little golden case shaped like a locket.

"This is a curious little thing," said she. "It was called Le Medallion avec la serrure a secret. It came to me from my grandmother. It was made by an ingenious French jeweler for one of the naughty ladies of the court of King Henry VIII. The little thing is made to hold and carry secrets. You see, it has a gold beading around its rim. It is a trick to open it—a test of one's patience and curiosity. I lend it to you. When you have opened it bring or send it back to me. But be warned—years may pass before you find the combination that opens it or you may be lucky."

"With that I came away. I have spent many hours pushing at members in the circle around its rim that look like small golden beads. I suppose that certain of them communicate with springs and that these must be pushed in the right order."

Of the events of that evening, he has nothing further to say. He went away in the darkness and whither?

A Goodman of the parish—one Hachallah Groat, a constable—lay concealed that night beside a mossy glade in a pine thicket, remote from the house of the governor, his lantern hidden under his cloak. He had learned that the glade was a trying place. The thicket was not in the path which Robert would naturally have taken.

About nine-fifteen of the clock a woman came down the path to the glade dimly lighted from above. As she came the officer detected the odor of musk. The woman concealed herself in the bushes. Soon after that a young man entered the glade walking hurriedly, his sword tapping his leg. The woman stopped him and kissed his hand.

"Don't you know me?" she whispered. "I am your slave Mab."

"You wanton! Again you put my

Balm of Gilead Prized for Healing Qualities

It is very evident that balm from trees or plants was quite commonly applied as a salve in Old Testament times, and that the Balm of Gilead derived from a tree known as the Tzeri, in the beautifully wooded and fertile land of Gilead, by far the most highly favored part of Palestine, then as now, was esteemed an exceedingly valuable, perhaps and most valuable of all balms.

At the time of the Crusades, the Sultan Saladin and his physicians were credited with the possession of salves—"balms" or "balsams"—of almost miraculous healing potency for wounds. No doubt the knowledge of the value of the Balm of Gilead had been well preserved through many generations by the Arabs, and was still made use of by the Moslems, who had much to do with the spread of information which led up to the present position of medical science.

Famous Tapestry The Gobelin tapestries originated in the work of a former dyer, named Gobelin, who in the Fifteenth century came from Helms to Paris; the family having discovered a marvelous scarlet dye which attracted great attention. In the Sixteenth century to the manufacture of dyes was added the manufacture of tapestry, which founded the fortune of the family. Some of the family were granted titles of nobility and some became leading statesmen of France. In the reign of Louis XIV, the government took over the Gobelin tapestry manufactures and they remain a state activity.

Favored by Nature When pursued by another creature, the fire-bellied toad turns on his back and kicks up his legs in the air. Nature has provided him with a splash of red on the stomach and legs. As red is regarded as a danger sign by wild animals, no creature will eat him, and so he gets off scot free.

neck in danger," he had answered. The pair retired in the shadows not two fathoms from the edge of the glade. A little later the constable sprang upon them, his lantern in his hand. They arose, terror-stricken. The officer seized the woman. He saw the young man not too clearly in the lantern light. The latter drew his sword. The woman had the better head. She cried out: "Don't strike. Run before he sees you."

There was no time for thinking. It was a moment when action yields to impulse. The young man leaped away and ran. He tore through the thicket and was soon in the open. As he ran a dog pursued him, it was thought, for a dog was found lying dead from a sword thrust.

The court convened at eight-thirty next morning. The young woman, Mabel Hartley, sometime the kitchen maid of William and Robert, was brought from the prison. The watchman related the circumstances under which she had been arrested. The grave, stern-faced Dudley examined the prisoner. Having heard the constable's account of her taking, substantially as given above, he asked: "Have you a husband who is living?"

"Yes, sir."

"It is the foul sin of adultery. Do you know that the punishment is death?"

All eyes were on the unfortunate woman, who was weeping. She gave her head a pathetic, affirmative nod.

"As you value the mercy of God and this court, I enjoin you to tell the whole truth. With whom were you when the constable discovered you?"

She wiped her eyes, lifted her head and in a trembling tone spoke a name heard in every part of the courtroom: "William Heydon."

Winthrop dropped the gull with which he had been writing and sank back in his chair. A pallor fell upon his face almost as much in contrast with his black robe as the ample breadth of white linen in his collar. Endicott and Dudley with wrinkled brows turned to each other and whispered. Winthrop broke the silence. He asked the constable:

"Did you see the man?"

"Yes, sir. He was William Heydon, sir. I have seen him often. This is the coat he wore. It was torn from his back in the thicket. We found it lying among thorny briars. In one of the pockets is a letter to William Heydon."

"Is he under arrest?"

"No, sir. He threatened me with his sword and took to his legs. He is not to be found either at his home or the plantation he is clearing. Both he and his friend made off for parts unknown whilst I was busy with the prisoner."

Winthrop conferred a moment with Endicott and Dudley. Then with sorrow in his face he said in a low tone: "If William Heydon has not returned by high noon you may proclaim the hue and cry."

In due time the constables went through the town with raised staves crying out: "William Heydon, wanted for the foul sin of adultery, has fled. Let all who hear me assemble at the courthouse for a hue and cry."

There were many who enjoyed the excitement of a man chase. It was one of the frightful customs of medieval men, giving free rein to primitive passion, still used in England but not before in the colony. The vulgar crowd gave themselves to its plan with the eager avidity of hounds in the chase—and especially if a man of rank were the fugitive. In the rage of it the captive was likely to lose his life. Soon men and boys and fishwives and dogs were in full cry, seeking William Heydon. The running, shouting, screaming, barking and blowing of horns filled the pursuers with excitement.

Many joined them, streaming westward in the main path, spreading into the bush on either side and beating the thickets with clubs in hand. Some had guns or pistols. They were more like furies than like those who have the brain and heart of man in them.

The tumult awoke strange echoes in the silent wilderness. It reached the ears of young Heydon who lay asleep in a mossy glade a mile or so west of the path from which he had wandered in the darkness trying to walk to his plantation. It pained the ears of the Brades, of Margaret Hooper, of John Cotton and of all the good people of the parish. What a striving of thoughts, what a beating of hearts, what a shuddering of souls was under all this hellish uproar!

Lesson for November 29

PAUL'S LETTER TO PHILEMON.

GOLDEN TEXT—There is neither Jew nor Greek, there is neither bond nor free, there is neither male nor female: for ye are all one in Christ Jesus.

LESSON TEXT—Philemon. PRIMARY TOPIC—How to Treat a Servant. JUNIOR TOPIC—A Servant Becomes a Brother.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—A Slave Made a Brother. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Christ Transforming Social Relationships.

This letter is a private one. Philemon was a member of the church at Colosse. Onesimus, his slave, wronged him, and fled to Rome. At Rome he came under Paul's influence and was converted. Paul sent Onesimus back to Philemon with this letter—one of the most tactful, tender, and beautiful letters ever written, and the first anti-slavery petition ever penned.

I. His Salutation (vv. 1-3).

In salutation he refers to himself as a prisoner and links Philemon to himself as a fellow laborer in the gospel, having as his special aim to touch Philemon's heart. He makes mention of Apphia, Philemon's wife, and Archippus, the son, who had already enlisted as a fellow soldier.

II. Philemon's Reputation (vv. 4-7).

Paul paid a fine tribute to Philemon's character, reminding him that he never prayed without bearing him up before God.

1. His faith and love toward the Lord and all saints (v. 5). It was Paul's hope and desire that Philemon's faith might bear fruit in Jesus Christ. With such an approach, the way was open to Philemon's heart.

2. His ministry to the saints (v. 7). Philemon was most generous in his ministry to the poor saints.

III. Paul's Request (vv. 8-10).

He requests Philemon to receive back Onesimus, the runaway slave, as a brother in Christ. Note the incomparable delicacy and courtesy with which Paul approaches Philemon.

1. He beseeches instead of commands (vv. 8-10). Though conscious of his right to enjoin, he pleads as the prisoner of Jesus Christ for love's sake.

2. He makes his plea on the grounds of grace (vv. 11-14). He admits that Onesimus has been unprofitable, has forfeited all claim upon Philemon, and that on grounds of justice his plea might well be rejected and yet because Onesimus was begotten in his bonds (v. 10), was in a real sense a part of his own suffering nature (v. 12), he ventures to suggest that he should be accepted. Though Onesimus' hitherto has been unprofitable to his master, he is now profitable to both Paul and Philemon.

3. Paul desired that Onesimus be received back, not as a slave, but as a brother in Christ (vv. 15, 16). Here is the real fugitive slave law. Paul never attacked slavery, but emphasized principles which destroyed it. Christianity changes the whole face of human society. The wise thing to do is to get men and women regenerated and thus transform society instead of seeking change by revolution. Social wrongs can permanently be removed by the creation of a brotherhood which can be realized only by faith in Jesus Christ. Faith in Jesus Christ brings the individual into connection with the source of life. In Paul's request for Onesimus you can hear the pleadings of Christ for sinners. All men have gone astray and have become unprofitable. Though possessing no merit, he has made us profitable. We have been begotten in his bonds. Through his passion, agony of heart, we shall be changed. We can see and hear him now pleading our cause before God's throne for love's sake.

IV. The Basis upon Which Onesimus is to Be Received (vv. 17-21).

The debt of guilty Onesimus is to be put to the account of Paul, and the merit of Paul is to be put to the account of Onesimus. This is a fine illustration of the atonement of Christ. Whatever wrongs we have committed, debts incurred, all our shortcomings are debited to him. Jesus Christ, on behalf of all mankind, has said to God, "Put that to my account. I have written with my pierced hand, I will repay." Onesimus was taken back, not as a runaway slave, but as a beloved brother in Christ.

V. Paul Requests Lodging (vv. 22-25).

He expected a speedy release from imprisonment and proposed to sojourn with Philemon. In all probability this was realized. What a welcome he must have received! Jesus Christ is saying to everyone of his redeemed ones, "Prepare me a lodging."

Yesterday, Today As for the past, let it sleep if it can. "Sleep on now and take your rest," is the gentle voice of Jesus as to the past. "Rise, let us be going. To be that betrayeth me is at hand," is the next sentence. The past is past. Let that sleep if it can. But there is a future task right now to be done. Don't sleep over that.

Necessary Before you can come into communion with him you must come into covenant with him.—Matthew Henry.

POULTRY

WINTER SUNSHINE GOOD FOR POULTRY

Ultra-Violet Rays Needed by Flock.

So much evidence has been accumulated about the value of winter sunshine in egg production that it cannot be ignored by poultry raisers who want to get profitable results.

It has been shown that ultra-violet rays are a powerful factor in increasing egg production, hatchability and fertility, as well as in maintaining healthful conditions.

Ultra-violet rays promote bone and body growth, and building vitamin D. During the winter months, when poultry is confined, ordinary glass and soiled cloth curtains bar them out and some means must be employed to make them available.

You need good housing and good management to get best results. Published data by such representative bodies as Wisconsin experiment station, University of Arkansas; Ohio experiment station and others have shown the effect of ultra-violet rays during the winter months. Records at egg-laying contests (notably the Vineyard egg-laying contest) also give practical proof of the egg-producing value of ultra-violet rays.

Poultry needs winter sunshine. Layers must get ultra-violet radiation or its equivalent. This is also true of chicks. The wise poultry raiser will make sure his house is properly constructed this winter and next spring.—Ohio Farmer.

Size of Eggs Can Be Influenced by Feeding

Egg size is influenced by breeding and also by feeding. It is as natural for some hens to lay large eggs as it is for some cows to give a heavy flow of milk. It is important to select eggs of the desired size when saving for incubation, because the size of egg laid, to some extent, is inherited by the offspring. However, it is possible to influence the size of eggs to a considerable extent through proper feeding and a proper supply of minerals necessary for egg shell.

A ration of grain alone or even with milk will probably not give best results so far as egg size is concerned. A balanced ration carrying not less than 3 per cent of bone meal and possibly 1 or 2 per cent calcium carbonate in some form, like crushed limestone or calcite, is considered desirable for best eggs.

Plan Now to Increase Production of Eggs

One of the imperative needs of the poultry industry is to increase the consumption of eggs, said Reeco Hicks of the International Baby Chick association, in addressing the American Institute of Co-operation at Manhattan, Kan. Other foods are giving eggs a battle for a place on the breakfast table, and according to Mr. Hicks, this is what can be done about it.

The first step toward increasing egg consumption is for producers to supply high quality eggs. The second step is in standardizing the product so that the public will know what it is buying. The third step is for co-operatives to join hands with other agencies in the poultry industry to educate the public as to the value of eggs.—Nebraska Farmer.

Poultry Facts

Oat hulls are not harmful to chicks if ground fine enough.

Among the incurable poultry diseases are chronic coccidiosis, tuberculosis, bacillary white diarrhea, fowl cholera, fowl typhoid and blackhead. Serious cases of chicken pox and roup might also be included.

The poultryman's biggest asset right now is the flock of new pullets that are being developed for next winter's laying flock, and whatever he can do to protect that flock so these birds will continue to lay, worth real money to him.

Culling a flock is one of the important things which is most commonly neglected. There is also a neglect to procure and keep pure-bred chickens. Vermin are commonly found in poultry houses.

Several poultry diseases are quite similar in many external symptoms. One or two additional symptoms usually, to the experienced, determine the accuracy of the superficial diagnosis. Post mortems prove the superficial diagnosis and therein lies experience.

Either whole oats or hulled oats may be used in a grain ration that is fed to chickens. However, hulled oats makes a better feed because a large part of the fiber is removed and the birds will, therefore, get a bigger percentage of grain.

Keep records of the number of eggs received each day and how they are disposed of. An account book will tell where the money goes and where the money comes from and will enable one to make economies on the one side and increase income on the other.

"Thriller" of Long Ago

Outdone by Invention "Way back in their boyhood reading, illicit reading, with the yellow-back in the big geography, and the teacher not too vigilant, some men who are gray-haired now can recall a Beadle thriller with the title "Red Star, the Spirit of the Lake."

A white pioneer had had all his family murdered by the Indians. He escapes to an island and finds a cave. In that cave there is a stone tomahawk with the striking edge so carved as to form a star, and leave that mark on the victim.

Also there are two very light and narrow cedar canoes, with straps for the feet. The pioneer finds that in these he can walk the water of the lake. Every night he goes out. Every morning some redskin is found dead in the forest with the star mark. Hence "Red Star, the Spirit of the Lake."

Red Star walked on quiet water. But now the news tells us that Karl Naumenski, of Styria, has eclipsed the Beadle hero. Facing rather heavy seas, he has actually walked the water from Cape Girls Nest to Dover on "water skis." The distance is about twenty miles. The water skis of 1931 are clearly superior to the strapped-on cedar canoes of fancy, three-quarters of a century ago. And once more it has been proved that truth is stranger than fiction.—Brooklyn Eagle.

For Stomachs TEMPORARILY Out-of-Order

Occasional constipation should never be allowed to attach itself. Check first with a natural laxative. A good old-fashioned, tried and natural remedy that finishes the bowels, stimulates sluggish liver and renews the cheery good health of an active stomach. Recommended by many years of splendid, certain results. A good for children as it is for grown-ups. Get it at your druggist.

Zoo Gets Rare Bird

The London zoo now has one of the world's rarest birds—a hoatzin, which seems to have changed little in its physical character since prehistoric times. The bird has two sharp claws on its wings. When danger threatens it dives from its nest into the river and uses the claws to climb back.

When fully grown it resembles a small pheasant, with a long tail, and the nestling looks distinctly reptilian. Its home is South America.—Associated Press.

Methodist Church

One hundred and eight in Sunday School last Sunday—not counting the visitors. Whoop! Over the top now. And let's keep going. And 'tis said that the way to a man's heart is through his stomach. That goes for a whole family. And Carrizozo knows how to play a mighty sweet tune on heartstrings. The pastor and his family were given strict orders Sunday morning to stay away from the church until further notice. And when that further notice came—well, nothing could have kept them away. About two hundred people were present—and not empty-handed. The table before the altar rail, the altar rail itself, and the long bench on the side were piled and heaped with good things. From a fat turkey in a coop to a gallon of cider. Yep, cider! From a ham—Premium ham—to a bucket of lard. From a sack of sugar to a box of candy. From potatoes to canned fruit, jelly, jam and vegetables. From cranberries to nuts. All of that and a lot more and then some. Never a greater surprise and never a better one—nor one more appreciated. Truly it was a Thanksgiving occasion. Thank you! And you can multiply those two little words of gratitude and appreciation indefinitely. Spontaneous giving, that's the kind that warms the heart. And the givers with the gifts. Adherents of every denomination, sect and creed in and about Carrizozo. And some with no church affiliations—good people all. The kind we love to associate, work and play with. Truly our lines are cast in a pleasant place and among a fine people.

A good rally day program by the Sunday School during which the orchestra under the direction of Supt. D. U. Groce rendered some good music. Carrizozo can well be proud of that orchestra. Then the presentation speech of Mr. J. E. Hall, presenting the donation of the good things mentioned above to the pastor and his family on behalf of our neighbors. Yes, neighbors, in every good sense of the word. Then followed the Thanksgiving service—the pastor was too frustrated and flabbergasted to rise properly to the occasion. But under the direction of Miss Dia Herringa the choir failed not and saved the day. A wonderful choir, and we can look forward for much from it. The choir is working now on a Christmas Cantata as well as the regular church services.

Preaching next Sunday morning and evening, that being the fifth Sunday. And don't forget the Sunday School. Again, Carrizozo, we thank you, many, many times. And may the Giver of every good and perfect gift pour out His blessings abundantly upon you.

Surprise Party

On last Sunday evening when we returned home from church we found that our home had been entered from the rear, and there were piled on table, chairs and the floor a large and varied assortment of good things to eat. The good women of the Church had gotten together and contributed a bountiful supply of beans, butter, bacon, jams, jellies, preserves, canned fruits, potatoes, etc., all of which come in very nicely in a preacher's pantry. We wish to thank everyone who had a part in this generous act; and to assure you that we are deeply grateful for your thoughtfulness.

The progress of every phase of our work depends on the manner in which our people subscribe to the every-member canvass. This is an effort to get every Southern Baptist enlisted in Kingdom work, and it is very important that we make as good a showing as possible next week. We hope to be able to report that the Carrizozo church comes up with as good a percentage of subscribers as any church in the state.

MELLOWED A HUNDRED MILLION YEARS

When mighty armored fishes swam over PENNSYLVANIA

THE Devonian Age which occurred more than a hundred million years ago was the source of two wonders—mighty, armored fishes and the Bradford-Allegheny crude oil which is now being manufactured into Sinclair Pennsylvania Motor Oil. Sinclair Pennsylvania is de-waxed and freed from petroleum jelly at as low as 60° F. below zero—Sinclair Pennsylvania is a year-round Pennsylvania grade oil. Ask the Sinclair dealer.
