CARRIZOZO SADDENED

This community was severely shocked this week, when Miss Evelyn, beloved daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. French, passed on at the Johnson Hospital Sunday morning at about two o'clock, after an illness of but short duration. In our last week's issue the hope was expressed that the young lady would recover, as at that time she was reported to be resting easier, but later on she relapsed and passed on at the time mentioned above.

Miss Evelyn had been teaching school at Capitan for her second year, and when the teachers were making arrangements for the Christmas entertainment, in attempting to raise a window, a splinter entered one of her thumbs, and this becoming infected was the cause of her death, in spite of the fact that same was extracted and first aid treatment applied.

Miss Evelyn was a young lady of many accomplishments. Possessed of a friendly, courteous disposition, she made friends with everyone she met, all of whom will sadly miss her. Her only brother, Miller French, who is now in Juneau, Alaska, was unable to be present at the funeral on account of the distance. To Mr. and Mrs. French and son, Miller, the Outlook extends its deepest sympathy.

Miss Evelyn French was born in White Oaks, N. M., March 16, 1907. She was a member of the Episcopal Church, and was a member of the A. O. P. Sorority of the University of Tennessee. She graduated from the University of New Mexico in May, 1930.

Besides her parents and her brother, Miller French, of Juneau, Alaska, she leaves a host of friends to mourn her departure.

After funeral services in the Methodist church in Carrizozo, Tuesday afternoon, January 12, conducted by Rev. Edward Smith, of Fort Stanton, assisted by Rev. John L. Lawson, interment was made in the White Oaks cemetery.

During the services songs were sung by Miss Dia Herringa and Mr. Raymond Lackland, accompanied by Miss Louise Sweet on the violin and Mrs. T. E. Kelley at the piano.

"Then fell upon the house a sudden gloom.

A shadow on those features fair and thin; And softly from that hushed and darkened room

Two angels issued, where but one went in."

—Longfellow.

Gives Flower Money to School Children

El Paso, Jan. 14.—Five dollars which she would have used for the funeral of her friend, Miss Evelyn French, 24, Carrizozo, N. M., was given to Mrs. C. C. Marshall by a woman to buy food for children at Myra Winkler school. "My friend would have wanted me to help those children instead of sending flowers for her funeral," the woman told Mrs. Marshall.

Hugh Grafton of Alto was a Carrizozo business visitor Friday of last week, and found the time to say "hello" to the Outlook force. Come again, Hugh.

Mr. and Mrs. C. S. Rockwell and son Warren were Carrizozo visitors last Saturday, and paid this office a pleasant call.

We are in receipt of a letter from one of our old subscribers and a former resident of this county, Chas. C. Coe, who is now located in Los Angeles, in which he says he enjoys the weekly visits of the Outlook, which contain items of interest concerning many friends over the county. Mr. Coe resided at Glencoe for many years, in fact, he was reared there. Among other things, he said that they have had several frosts there this winter, but as yet, the roses are still blooming and have not been damaged.

We have always been of the opinion that Indians live happy together and never separate, but according to the Alamogordo News, Coonie and Coonie, Mescalero Indians, were re-united in marriage there last week. Being always in favor of the weaker sex in matters like this, we hope the Mr. Coonie may prove more coonie in the future, so that Mrs. Coonie will have no reason to quit "coonin' up" with Coonie again.

Our old friend Lupo Gabaldon was here last Saturday, and like Luis Naida and Estanislao Bello, he wears the smile that never comes off. After purchasing supplies for his ranch, he returned home late in the afternoon.

Perpetuating the Memory of a Strenuous American

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

WHILE a few notable exceptions, America has usually waited anywhere from two decades to a whole century before paying honor to some of her Presidents with memorials in keeping with the dignity and importance of the office which they held and with their contribution to the history of our nation. So it is all the more remarkable, as well as all the greater a tribute to Theodore Roosevelt, that within ten years after his death not just one, but several, important memorial projects are either completed or are well under way.

A short time ago James H. Garfield, son of President James A. Garfield and president of the Roosevelt Memorial association, announced that Anacostan Island, in the Potomac river, a tract of 69 acres in the heart of the National Capital, had been purchased by the association as the site for a national memorial to Roosevelt and it will be presented to the nation to be used as a public park and to be incorporated into the park system now being developed along the Potomac by the National Capital Park and Planning commission.

Bridges will connect the island with the mainland on the north at Hoadly and on the south near the Virginia end of the new Washington Memorial bridge. Ultimately the association intends to erect on the island an appropriate monumental structure, which will be designed by John Russell Pope, architect of the association, and built under the supervision of the National Fine Arts commission and the National Capital Park and Planning commission. Such a memorial, set in so large an area, isolated by the river from the life of the city yet easily accessible, will be unique.

Anacostan Island lies due west of the White House, between the Francis Scott Key bridge and the new Washington Memorial bridge, within the territorial limits of the District of Columbia. In its location, its physical conformation and its heavy growth of timber it is the most picturesque area in the district which has remained undeveloped. The land rises slowly on the northern end and sharply on the southern, some 50 feet, to a wooded plateau comprising approximately 20 acres, with a clear view toward Arlington, the Lincoln memorial and the lower reaches of the Potomac. Toward the north the Key bridge, with the towers of Georgetown university beyond, provides an interesting and pleasing feature; toward the west are the slopes of Arlington; toward the east, a tongue of wooded land beyond a small bay, now filled in, cuts off completely the industrial plants which line the waterfront of Georgetown. The island gives an impression of wild country peculiarly appropriate as a setting for a memorial to Roosevelt.

The Roosevelt Memorial association was founded immediately after Roosevelt's death in January, 1919, and raised a fund of $1,750,000 by popular subscription and in 1920 secured a charter from congress. Its aims are, first, to erect a suitable monumental memorial to Theodore Roosevelt in Washington; second, to establish and maintain a memorial park in Oyster Bay, N. Y.; and, third, to perpetuate Colonel Roosevelt's memory by spreading the knowledge of his character and career.

The purchase of Anacostan Island is the first step in accomplishing the first aim.

In fulfillment of the second aim, 35 acres of land were purchased in the town of Oyster Bay and a memorial park has been completed at a cost of $600,000. It was formally dedicated on May, 30, 1923, and is now in use. The sum of $200,000 has been set aside for perpetual maintenance. The further sum of $25,000 has been set aside for the perpetual care of Roosevelt's grave in Young's Memorial cemetery in Oyster Bay.

1. Theodore Roosevelt, author, naturalist, explorer, soldier and President of the United States.
2. Anacostan Island in Washington, D. C. Proposed site of a national Roosevelt memorial. It is in the Potomac river between the Francis Scott Key Memorial bridge and the Washington Memorial bridge. In the upper left corner of the picture may be seen the Washington monument and in the center at the top the Lincoln memorial.
3. A lookout point on Anacostan Island with a view across Little Run to the Virginia shore.
4. The Roosevelt Memorial obelisk in Marias pass on the Continental Divide in Montana.
5. The New York Roosevelt memorial, a part of the American Museum of Natural History in New York city.

Under the third aim the association has established certain institutions and carried forward certain activities, as follows:

1. Co-operated with the Woman's Roosevelt Memorial association in the completion of Roosevelt house, the restored birthplace of Theodore Roosevelt, at 29 East Twentieth street, N. Y., and in its maintenance as a national shrine and point of inspiration for public-spirited citizenship and sound nationalism.
2. Gathered one of the most noteworthy collections in the United States of memorabilia centering about a single individual and established at Roosevelt House a permanent museum for its exhibition. The items, chronologically arranged, cover Roosevelt's entire career.
3. Established, also at Roosevelt House, a Roosevelt library of research and a bureau of information for students, writers, and others desiring information on his career. The library contains approximately 5,000 books and pamphlets, including all the books and articles written by Roosevelt, most of the material written about him, and an extensive collection of books relating to the period (1881-1910) of his public life. It contains, furthermore, 2,500 cartoons, 6,000 pictures, and countless clippings, as well as extensive newspaper files. Every effort has been made to obtain material that is critical of Roosevelt and his policies or adverse to them, as well as material in their favor.
4. A Roosevelt motion picture library has been established, the first biographical motion picture library in the world. Negative and positive films relating to Roosevelt's career and photographed on four continents have been collected and assembled in ten productions.
5. The collected works of Theodore Roosevelt have been prepared for publication in a limited edition and an inexpensive popular edition and published through regular commercial channels.
6. Numerous special publications have been issued, including a collection of Roosevelt's wartime editorials, an account of his life as a ranchman in North Dakota, and a book of selections from his writings for use in schools.
7. For seven years an employee of the association has been engaged in sorting, arranging, and cataloguing the Roosevelt correspondence in the Library of Congress for the benefit of future historians.
8. Established Roosevelt awards for distinguished public service in fields associated especially with Roosevelt's career. These fields are: Administration of public office; development of public and international law; promotion of industrial peace; conservation of natural resources; promotion of social justice; the study of natural history; promotion of outdoor life; promotion of the national defense; the field of American literature; the field of international affairs; the expression of the pioneer virtues; the leadership of youth and the development of American character.

Another striking memorial to this many-sided "strenuous American" came into being when the Theodore Roosevelt Memorial obelisk, authorized by congress to honor the President who made forest conservation a national policy, was dedicated at Summit, Mont., last fall. Summit, the apex of Marias pass on the continental divide of the Rocky mountains, is 12 miles west of Glacier park station and 161 miles from Great Falls and the obelisk stands on a line which separates the Lewis and Clark National forest from the Flathead National forest.

This memorial is a stone shaft, 60 feet high, standing on a 23-foot base and bearing two bronze tablets. The tablet facing the east has this inscription: "LEWIS AND CLARK NATIONAL FOREST. Memorial to Theodore Roosevelt. This memorial was authorized by a bill introduced in the congress of the United States of America by Representative Scott Leavitt, February 15, 1923, and approved by President Hoover on June 2, 1930." The inscription on the tablet facing the west reads: "FLATHEAD NATIONAL FOREST. Memorial to Theodore Roosevelt in commemoration of his leadership in the conservation of the forests of the United States. The forest problem is in many ways the most vital international problem of the United States—Theodore Roosevelt."

The memorial stands on the Theodore Roosevelt International highway, extending 4,000 miles from Portland, Maine, to Portland, Ore. The formal opening to motor travel of Marias pass, the last link in the Roosevelt highway, took place in the summer of 1930 in a celebration during which Miss Corinne Akop, a grandniece of Roosevelt, officiated at the laying of the cornerstone of the obelisk which was dedicated last fall.

Last fall also saw the laying of the cornerstone of the New York Theodore Roosevelt memorial which is being erected by that state as a part of the American Museum of Natural History in New York city to symbolize "the scientific, educational, outdoor and exploration aspects of Theodore Roosevelt's life."

According to the plans of the architect, John Russell Pope, (designer of the memorial to be erected on Anacostan Island in Washington), the facade of the New York city Roosevelt memorial will be patterned after the triumphal archway of ancient Rome. The entrance arch will rise 60 feet above a base reached by spreading stairs, and is to be flanked by huge columns of granite. On the solid parapet which is to surmount it will be cut the following inscription: "STATE OF NEW YORK MEMORIAL TO THEODORE ROOSEVELT. A great leader of the youth of America, in energy and fortitude, in the faith of our fathers, in defense of the rights of the people, in the love and conservation of nature and of the best in life and in man."

The man himself will be visualized in the heroic equestrian statue to stand on a granite pedestal thirty feet in front of the archway. It is to come from the studio of the famous sculptor, James E. Fraser. The figure is to be in the hunting garb of the west, and mounted on a horse of the type Roosevelt usually rode, especially when he was on his North Dakota ranch.

On either side of the horse and on foot will be the figure of a gun bearer; one a native African, the other a North American Indian. These figures typify his deep interest in two aboriginal peoples, members of which accompanied him so often in his hunting both in the New World and the Old.

Four men who in character suggested the ideals of Roosevelt, and whom he greatly admired are represented in statues of heroic size which are to cap the four classic columns of the facade. They are Daniel Boone, John James Audubon, George Rogers Clark and Meriwether Lewis.

In niches on either side of the entrance arch will be the sculptured figures of two typical specimens of American big game, the buffalo and the bear. The bear was chosen to typify courage and strength; the bison, romance, hardihood and endurance, outstanding characteristics of Roosevelt.

Value in Health Facts That Are Vital Truths

Health teachers and those engaged in telling health facts to the public should stick to the Grade A facts, advised Dr. Donald B. Armstrong, official of a leading life insurance company at a recent meeting of the American Public Health association.

"So-called health facts worth telling should be important and should be true, though truth is relative," Doctor Armstrong said.

"Every period has its health myths," he added. "Current ones include 'A Clean Tooth Never Decays' and the relationship of underweight to tuberculosis in the school child."

Some true Grade A health facts mentioned by Doctor Armstrong are certainties as to the course of infection in some communicable diseases, the value of immunization for prevention of disease, the value of minerals and vitamins in the diet, and the value of sunlight under certain conditions.

More numerous are the Grade B, near facts, which include things that are believed to be true, probably are true, but cannot be proved at present. Examples are the real value of six glasses of water a day, of eight hours' sleep at night, of fresh air for the prevention of colds, of exercise, of a full bath once a week, of teeth brushing, etc. These facts need verification, but telling them to the public probably does some good and little harm.

Doctor Armstrong suggested that the American Public Health association might have an appraisal committee to study and classify the facts used for educational purposes.—Kansas City Star's Science Service.

A Candle in the Wilderness

A Tale of the Beginning of New England

By IRVING BACHELLER

WNU Service Copyright by Irving Bacheller

THE STORY

Robert Heathers and William Heydon leave England in 1634 for the New World. They are welcomed at Boston by Rev. Doctor Cotton and make acquaintance with Amos Toddhill, veteran soldier and woodman. Heydon falls in love with Elizabeth Brade. The young men settle down to the life of the colonists. Adverse comment forces them to disperse with their pretty cook, Mabel Hartley. Robert is smitten with Peggy Weld, who is engaged to James Roswell. Mabel Hartley and a youth, whom she says was Heydon, are accused of adultery. Heydon and Heathers disappear. Heydon is apprehended and, refusing to talk, is found guilty. Heathers and Toddhill head for New Amsterdam and suspicion begins to point to the former. Belief grows that Heydon is shielding his friend, Elizabeth and her parents sail for England. New evidence seems to point to Heathers as the guilty man.

"I agree with Sir Harry that the Lord is kind and not at all like the kings of this world," said Peggy. "And I agree with him that Robert and not William is the guilty man," said Margaret Winthrop. Then Peggy Weld, with much feeling, made a plea for her lover. It was of no avail. They were not to be turned. They answered her with impatient carriage. He had run away. Moreover Robert had a look in his eye and a way with women that gave one dark thoughts. William was different. He might have a measure of the grace of God in him. He was a more serious man. This was the beginning of a remarkable resolution in the strong-hearted girl, Peggy Weld. "Robert Heathers has been a kind of hitching post for horses," she said. "Every nag in the colony has been growling it. I shall make you all apologize. I am going to find Robert Heathers if possible. I shall go with Henry, who is eager to explore the wilderness. With God's help we shall find Robert and bring him back, and I think that we shall put you all to shame."

After that day the women of influence in Boston began to advocate the theories of Sir Harry Vane in relation to this remarkable case. The so-called goodmen of the town were those who had saved a little money and were just beyond the need of anxious toil. They worshipped the upper classes and humbly followed their leadership. Most of them were able to write their names, to add, subtract and divide and to read the Bible in a stumbling fashion. Their wives were not so well furnished with accomplishments. They were more or less in awe of their great goodmen, but there were moments when the awe was flung off and forgotten. John Samp was an example of this type of citizen.

Returning from their fruitless errand up the coast to the tavern ship, John Samp and the sailor with him were nearly spent and drowned in the sea. Storm lashed, their shallop broke on a shoal, turned on her beam end and lay with her mast-top under water. Clinging to his chair Mr. Samp got to an island where after three days of intense hunger and discomfort he had been rescued by fishermen. He was a sagging and dejected figure of a man when he returned to Boston five weeks after he had left it. His flesh hung as limp as ungarmented hose. He entered his humble domicile with a look which betrayed the feeling that he was weary of life but willing to put up with it for the sake of his wife and the colony.

His wife was weeping. She scarcely noticed him. She swept with renewed energy on his arrival as if he were a part of the dust and litter. She gave him a withering look and began to scold in a voice heard by the neighbors. "Don't lie to me, John Samp—don't lie to me," she demanded, before he had spoken. "You've took and rooked yerself with drink and women. It's writ all over ye. Don't talk to me."

Now Mrs. Samp really desired that he should talk to her with no unnecessary delay. She was burning for information. Her words had been intended only as a mild warning that she was not to be easily deceived.

On such occasions Mr. Samp maintained a profound gravity of deportment.

With a look of injured innocence on his big red face he sank in a chair and said nothing. His wife paused and looked at him and called out: "Well, have ye nothing to say?"

In a loud voice he began: "I've been swallowed and puked up by the sea. I'm rooked, I've been shipwrecked and cast on a lonely island. I've perished o' cold and hunger. I've fetched the rheumatiz. Go and get the ax and put me out o' my misery, Mrs. Samp."

Mr. Samp did not tell her, as he later told others, that he had seen a merman of great size rise out of the sea and tip the shallop with his hands. She was already "too skered o' water."

Invited to be his executioner, Mrs. Samp's heart and countenance underwent a sudden change.

"What is a house for I would like to know, Mrs. Samp? And what is a man's life for?"

He turned to her with a severe look. "Ain't they to be live in and to be lived with? And what is a man for? Is he intended to be fish or a human, Mrs. Samp? He ain't got no gills in his throat, has he?"

The steps in Mr. Samp's philosophy were never interrupted by his wife. He did not expect an answer at any of these interrogation points leading up to a resounding period.

"I say the place for a man's feet is on the ground, Mrs. Samp, and the thing to be sucked into his lungs is air, not water."

He looked at the woman with a severe expression which seemed to say, "It's hard to put up with you, but for the Lord's sake I'll do it."

Convinced of his purity by his loud words and innocent look Mrs. Samp brought a wooden trencher and tin-covered iron spoons and bread and beer and meat to the table.

Such was life on the basest level of the parish.

The constable and his wife gave to their neighbors and to their friends in the church confirmation of the public feeling about Robert Heathers—that there could be no question of his guilt. Moreover Mr. Samp declared that certain fishermen had heard him confess it.

Samp reported to the court that day. The governor questioned him. "I reckon he see me first," Samp answered. "I chased him and Amos Toddhill into the bush. They could run faster and had a mile the start o' me. I reckoned if I met any savages they'd kill and dress me for a good dinner, so I turned around."

This confirmed the opinion of the magistrates that William was unjustly confined. Mabel Hartley had died of a fever of the lungs and before dying had emphasized her statement to Sir Harry Vane. When the young man was elected to the governorship of the colony he moved for the release of William Heydon. The iron men who sat with him on the bench demurred. A compromise was effected. William was to be released and kept in the limits of the town. He was to wear a hempen noose around his neck with a tall two feet long until he was ready to help the cause of justice by telling the whole truth as he knew it.

In dismissing him Governor Vane made it clear that the punishment he had suffered and was still to suffer was not for the crime of adultery, but for his refusal to plead.

These were the best terms that could be secured for the young man. The confinement had impaired his health. Urged by his friends to do so he took the burden of the rope and bore it bravely and the easier because Roswell Brade and his family had returned to England.

Linen "Textbooks" Used in Early Schoolrooms

"Your lesson for tomorrow will be on the blue handkerchief."

Children in the primary schools of Wisconsin, during the days of a century ago, fully realized the significance of the school marm's words.

In the absence of textbooks, linen handkerchiefs, full of prints depicting the great moments and the great men of history, were used to instruct the youngsters. This method was used to teach children how to read and to spell. Different lessons required different handkerchiefs.

Fortunately, little Mary and little Johnny did not have to tote pocketful references. A handkerchief a day made schooling pay.

In a shaded corridor of the Historical museum, on the University of Wisconsin campus, one may see the faded lines, once the pride of a student after ten minutes with Doctor Cotton was quickly changed into another type of human being. The seed of magic thoughts fell into fruitful soil and wrought its wonders in the spirit of the man so that he became a most useful and respected citizen.

The lonely confinement of William Heydon had wrought a great change in him. His pallor, his wasted form, his face worn by fevered anxieties, were the least of it. The change in the inner man was even greater. His pride, his resignation to conditions in the colony, his sympathy with the churchmen, who had so wrecked his life, were gone. His anger had passed. It had settled into a quiet, profound resentment of the wrongs committed in the name of God. He was perhaps more deeply religious and also a more determined rebel than ever he had been. What he should do about it he did not know, but his doing would have no defiant talk in it like that of Anne Hutchinson—like that which had come from his own mouth when he was a boy in England. The departure of the Brades had sorely distressed him. He knew that it was their pride which had sent them away. Pride was the master of well-born men and women. Yet he could not think it the way of love to fall when it is most needed.

Long letters had come to him from the banished Roger Williams, radical opponent of what he called the "magisterial aristocracy" of the Bay Colony. Williams had addressed him as a brother and a child of God. His letter had been full of friendly counsel and advice:

"I send this letter because you have come to a time when friendly words may comfort and help you and because I know your father in England (he wrote). Pride will cause many to turn against you. Pride is a foolish and a cruel thing. It is one of the meanest and the worst of sins. When you are free, and a letter from Vane assures me that you are likely soon to be out of prison, you will have a chance to practice the virtue of forgiveness. I would have you remember that the poor and the ignorant are your brothers no less than the rich and the learned. Bear with them and help them to think and to think rightly. If you have a great spirit when you go forth, it will appear. An opportunity the like of which comes to few men shall be yours. Rule your own spirit and find your work and take upon yourself the grandeur of a noble humility. That, I assure you, is the beginning of great things."

William pondered over these words in the loneliness of his gloomy prison room. They fell into fruitful soil. Some of them put him in mind of things quite new to him.

William thought much in his lonely hours of the sheer cruelty of pride and of its folly. What a masterful motive it was—greater even than love! He knew many men who were proud of their ancestors, of their piety, of their riches, of their learning. How it belittled them and diminished their power! He said to himself, that he liked better certain poor and humble folk he knew who were honest and who had nothing to be proud of. Always he sighed when he thought of the unfortunate Mabel Hartley. The young man had so changed that he had no serious dread of the noose to be put on his neck. Why should he care now? Still when the rope was on it seemed to choke him. For days it was a burden like the millstone of Holy Writ. It burned his neck. He could think of nothing else. He stayed at home yielding to his own pride.

Margaret Hooper, his housekeeper, said to him: "My boy, which is the stronger, you or this rope? It is a test of your soul. If your soul is the stronger I am sure that the Lord will use it to lead you unto great things. If not, the devil will use it to pull you down."

"You are right, Margaret," he answered. "After all what is this rope but my pride? I thought that I was done with it but I still have enough." "To keep you in mind of the value of charity," said Margaret. "Go forth and learn to be humble. It is your great need. These are dark days but a great soul is like the tall of a Greff. It is made to shine in the dark."

The first time he went abroad with the rope man were staring at him. No one gave him a kindly word. Again pride was having its way. Some laborers raising a house jeered and called him a "trundle tail." This was what he expected. He came upon Peggy Weld. She took his arm and walked beside him with friendly words.

Lesson for January 17

JESUS AND NICODEMUS

LESSON TEXT—John 3:1-21. GOLDEN TEXT—For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life.

PRIMARIES TOPIC—Jesus Tells How Much God Loves Us. JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus' Answer to a Ruler's Question. INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Beginnings of the Christian Life. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The New Birth.

I. The History of Nicodemus (vv. 1, 2, cf. 7:45-52; 10:38-42).

The lesson today has its peculiar significance in the light of Nicodemus' station in life. He was a learned rabbi, a doctor of the law, and presumably a man of good character. His coming by night indicates his timidity. Like Joseph of Arimathea, he was afraid to espouse openly the cause of the new teacher of Galilee. Though timid, as an honest man, he investigated and obtained first-hand information. Because of this information, he uttered the brave words in the Sanhedrin against judging a man before hearing him (John, 7:45-52) and rendered loving service at the Lord's tomb (John 10:38-42).

II. Jesus' Discourse to Nicodemus on the New Birth (vv. 3-17).

1. The necessity of the new birth (vv. 3-7). If one is ever to see or enter the kingdom of God, he must be born again. There can be no personal choice in the matter. Regeneration is the first demand of the gospel of Christ made upon man. The reasons for this are:

a. The Kingdom of God is a spiritual kingdom, therefore there must be a spiritual birth in order to enter it (v. 3). As we enter the physical kingdom by a natural birth, so we enter the kingdom of God by a supernatural birth.

b. The nature which is ours through the natural birth is radically and essentially bad (v. 6, cf. Gal. 6:10-21). That which is born of the flesh is flesh. In the Galatian text Paul gives a catalogue of the works of the flesh. The flesh cannot be improved (Jer. 13:23). In order to enter into the kingdom of heaven there must be a nature fitted for heaven. There is nothing that can be substituted for the new birth. Men today are trying to substitute morality and education for the new birth. Nicodemus possessed these, yet Christ declared that he needed more.

2. The mystery of the new birth (vv. 8-13). Though the new birth is mysterious, its results are definite. This mystery is illustrated by the wind. We cannot discern from whence it cometh on wither it goeth, but we know by its effects that it blows. The fruit of the life demonstrates its nature, whether it is heavenly or carnal. We need not to be told that we have had a physical birth for our bodies with their various faculties in exercise prove it. Even so, the presence within us of a nature which has no affinity for the things of the world, a strong affection for God and a disposition to yield prompt obedience to his commands proves our birth from above. Just as the tree is known by its fruit, so tastes, desires, and ambitions prove the quality of our nature.

3. The ground upon which the new birth rests (vv. 14, 15). Christ's atoning death on the cross makes regeneration possible. He took the place of sinners. His infinite merit was placed to their account. He suffered in the sinner's stead. Just as the Israelites had only to look upon the brazen serpent in the wilderness, so the sinner needs only to look upon Christ uplifted on the cross (Num. 21:4-9; John 12:32; II Cor. 5:21; I Pet. 2:24). Our salvation cost on the part of God the giving up of his only begotten Son, and on the part of Christ the suffering and shame of the cross.

4. For whom the new birth is provided (vv. 16, 17). "Whosoever believeth in him." These verses give in a condensed form the whole plan of salvation. Observe:

- a. Its source—"God so loved."
- b. Its ground—the death of Christ—"He gave."
- c. Its recipients—"whosoever."
- d. Its condition—"Believeth in him."
- e. Its results—"Should not perish—have everlasting life."

III. Man's Attitude Toward Christ (vv. 18-21).

1. Some believe and are saved. Those who believe are now free from condemnation.

2. Some will not believe and are therefore resting under the condemnation of God. The awful sin which causes men to be eternally lost is unbelief in Christ. The cause of their unbelief in him is their love of sin.

Work and Worry

It is not work that kills men; it is worry. Work is healthy; you can hardly put more upon a man than he can bear. Worry is just upon the blade. It is not the revolution that destroys the machinery, but the friction. —Henry Ward Beecher.

Overcome Difficulties

"The soul that the Holy Spirit is guiding will be taught to expect difficulties, and to patiently plod on and overcome them."

Study Methods of Drying Hay Fast

Government Experts Work on Problem of Eliminating Moisture.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)—WNU Service.

To determine some of the mechanical and economic factors involved in artificial drying of forage crops, the bureau of agricultural engineering of the United States Department of Agriculture has installed at the Iberia live stock experiment farm, Jeanerette, La., an experimental hay drier.

Methods of hauling the green material to the drier, of getting it into condition to give up moisture quickly, and of handling the dried product are a few of the problems which the engineers are studying.

Green hay contains a great deal of moisture and is bulky in volume and weight. To reduce the weight in hauling and the cost of drying, engineers are considering the cutting and wilting of the crop in the field. To eliminate the moisture as quickly as possible at the drier, they are studying methods of preparation which include chopping or crushing of hay or both. They are also determining the maximum temperature at which drying can take place without injury to the product. Hay that is chopped or crushed comes out of the drier in fine pieces and has to be sacked or baled for marketing. The baling process requires special equipment, according to the engineers.

Hay is a crop of relatively low market value, and driers at present are expensive. Engineers of the department are striving to develop machinery that will produce a quality of product that will help offset the cost of drying. Agronomists are experimenting with different varieties of forage crops such as alfalfa, soy beans, clovers, pasture grass, and crotalaria, to work out a cropping system that will enable the owners of drying equipment to operate it over a long period of the year.

Feeding trials are being made to ascertain the nutritive value of artificially dried hay as compared with that of hay dried under natural conditions.

New Alfalfa Varieties Found Wilt-Resistant

Alfalfa wilt has been taking its toll of the crop in many sections of the United States. Many growers were of the opinion that Grimm, the hardy variety which has been so satisfactory in many places, was resistant to this disease. Tests, however, have shown that this is not true and that Grimm is quite susceptible to alfalfa wilt.

On the other hand, at least two varieties have shown resistance to this new disease. Hardistan, a variety which was recently named to Nebraska and which originated from Turkistan, is highly resistant to the wilt disease. This variety is also winter hardy and apparently offers great possibility wherever wilt is a factor in alfalfa production. Ladak, another new variety, has been quite resistant to the disease, although not as desirable as Hardistan.

Alfalfa wilt is a disease caused by bacteria. Apparently these bacteria get into alfalfa plants, which are subjected to freezing. It is of importance in areas where wilt is a factor, therefore, to grow not only varieties that are resistant to the disease, but also varieties of alfalfa which are winter hardy. Apparently both Ladak and Hardistan offer great possibilities.—Idaho Farmer.

Effect of Superphosphate

A report recently received from Dr. C. Kruegel, director of the experiment station of the International Superphosphate Institute, Hamburg, Germany, presents results secured by many investigators in Europe which show that the use of superphosphate does not increase soil acidity. This idea was somewhat prevalent among farmers in this country some years ago, but reports published by a number of investigators indicate that the use of superphosphate even if continued on the same land for many years results in no increase in soil acidity. In fact, this was the best argument for the change of terminology from acid phosphate to superphosphate.

Sweet Clover Increases

The rapidity with which sweet clover is gaining favor among farmers of the western states is well illustrated in the last report of the Kansas state board of agriculture which gives figures for sweet clover grown for hay in Kansas during the years 1929 and 1930. In 1929 the acreage was 196,081, while in 1930 the acreage had increased to 226,000. The drought-resistant qualities of sweet clover will no doubt cause a further rapid increase in acreage of this excellent honey plant during the next few years.

Farm Machinery

Farm machinery on 40 farms in Greene and Medina counties, Ohio, has been found to have an average length of life of 14 years, according to J. F. Dowler, rural economist at Ohio State university, who has records of machinery costs on farms in these two counties. The useful life of machinery, Dowler believes, can be increased by proper winter storage, timely repairs, the right kind of lubrication, and better care while being used.—Exchange.

Alleviating Distress

Reason enough for anxiety can be found in the current economic situation by those looking for it, but one needs dig no deeper in the wreckage of our lost prosperity to find reason for the deepest satisfaction. It is hard to go back to the old pinch penny methods of doing business and living, but this hardship should not blind the American people to their blessings of which they are not wholly devoid.

Though privation and approach to starvation with their natural fruits, disease and death, were to be expected with several millions out of work and countless families without means adequate for the requirements of bare existence, they are not to be found.

The idle are being fed, the homeless housed, the sick cared for and the dying cured. Although a higher mortality rate and epidemic disease have followed periods of economic debility in the past, there was actual improvement in the public health last year and the mortality rate equaled, if it did not better, the record low of 1930.

There was more unemployment in 1931 than in 1930 and yet the country's meat consumption was greater, an increase that was due in part to lower prices, but would not have occurred had many families gone without meat.

One cannot cogitate on these developments without seeing something remarkable in them. No greater tribute could be paid to the country's industrial system, to its whole economic structure, to its medical profession, to the hospitals and welfare agencies, to the public health service and to the generosity and charity and neighborliness of the American people.—Roswell Record.

State Employees Paying Funds to Democrats

Santa Fe, Jan. 9.—The hat is being passed throughout the New Mexico capitol to gather contributions of state employees to the Democratic national victory fund.

One five page pledge book in evidence which has imprinted on it the name of "Governor Arthur Seligman, chairman for New Mexico," is going the rounds from office to office being signed by state house employees.

No specific amounts are requested, and officials and employees alike sign the dotted line. After their names they designate the amount they will contribute to the financing of the 1932 Democratic national campaign.

This particular book, although it had not completed the circle of offices, held pledges ranging from $15 to fifty cents, although the great majority of contributions were $1, a popular figure among clerks and stenographers.

Among the signers appeared the names of several independent Republicans who hold positions on the state payroll under the present Democratic administration.

The United States Senate and the Wickersham Report

After the Wickersham Commission was appointed with the intention of righting flagrant wrong-doing over the United States, an unpublished document was sent to the commission concerning the illegal proceedings which sent Mooney and Billings to the San Quentin penitentiary for life, and carried with it a request that the same be sent to the United States Senate, went unheeded with the excuse that the commission had no right to review state cases.

But now, it seems that under severe pressure, the document has been sent to the Senate, where it is hoped that facts in the case may be brought to light and the men liberated. The document sent to the Senate by the Department of Justice in response to a resolution requesting that it be sent to that body, gives an exhaustive account of the fact that there never was a scientific attempt made by the police to discover the perpetrators of the crime of bombing a parade on Preparedness Day in 1916. The document further says that the investigation was in reality turned over to a private detective, who used his position to cause the arrest and conviction of the defendants.

The document states further that there was a flagrant violation of the statutory law of California by both the police and the prosecution in the manner in which the defendants were held incommunicado and in the subsequent search of their homes to procure evidence against them. After being pushed back by the Wickersham Commission, it has made its way by that body and finally reached the Senate, where it is hoped that justice will be meted out to the guilty parties, and Mooney and Billings released.

Al Smith was in fine fettle last night bawling out the Republicans. He certainly had his sales talk down pat and blamed the Republicans and Hoover for everything from depression to sudden death. But we'll say one thing for dear old Al, he hasn't wasted any time studying his English grammar since last campaign. He still tosses them and those around promiscuously. And his voice still issues fiercely as if from around the corner of a chewed cigar. The best way to cure any Democratic leanings, we find, is to listen to Al's tirades.—Las Cruces Citizen.

Rare Masonic Book Found in Attic of Old Home

Washington, D. C., Jan. 7.—A Masonic record and rule book, printed in 1791 by John Dixon, Richmond, Va., and compiled by John K. Reed, a prominent Virginian and Masonic leader of that period, was discovered by J. W. Jett, while searching through some papers in the attic of his ancestral home in Atlanta, Ga. It is believed that this discovery is one of two books yet extant of the first edition of the volume compiled by the author. An item of early Masonic history relates the efforts to make George Washington the first Grand Master of Virginia, which honor he declined because he had not been a Master of a lodge and for which reason he did not regard himself as eligible. (Washington later was Charter Master of what is now Alexandria-Washington Lodge No. 22, Alexandria, Virginia.)

The narrative reads: "At a convention of five lodges, assembled at the lodge room in Williamsburg on June 23, 1777," it was determined that these lodges should immediately form a grand lodge organization.

"And in order to give dispatch to this business, this convention beg leave to recommend to their constituents, and to the members of all other lodges in this State, His Excellency Gen. George Washington as a proper person to fill the office of Grand Master for the same, and to whom the charter of appointment aforementioned be made.

"But should the lodges prefer any other person to this office, it is recommended that the respective lodges do elect some other person and notify the same to the Williamsburg Lodge."

The name of the book is The New Ahiman Rezon. On its title page it is described as "Containing the Laws and Constitutions of the Grand Lodge of Virginia. The History of Masonry from the Creation to the Death of Queen Elizabeth. Also Illustrations of the Royal Art; and a Variety of Other Matter Relative to That Institution, Carefully Collected, From the Most Approved Authors, Ancient as Well as Modern."

The Author, John K. Reed, speaks of himself as "the present Deputy Grand Master of Virginia, and a member of the Sublime Lodge of Perfection of Charleston, South Carolina."

Considering the age of the book, 140 years, the print and paper have not been materially damaged.

Origin of Dollar
The word, dollar, according to numismatists, comes from "thaler," which is an adaptation of "thal," meaning valley. Dollars as coins were first issued by the counts of Schilt, a Bohemian principality, in the year 1517. It is interesting to note that coins were not dated in Arabic numerals until the Fifteenth century, and the custom did not become general until the middle of the Sixteenth century. Previous to that time coins usually were stamped only with the head of a sovereign, or the year of reign.

Scientific Fruit Treatment
The way in which science can deal with fruit is astonishing. It can change the flavor, shape, color and size; it can improve its-keeping qualities; it can produce earlier or later ripening. Take apples, for instance. Scientific treatment has now given us a ripening season for English apples which extends from June, when the earliest are ready, until the following March, when the latest come to perfection. Before long we may have home-grown apples at only the best of the whole year round.—Exchange.

Ancient Notion Incorrect

The weather bureau says there is no reason why storms should be more frequent or severe on September 21 or 22 (autumnal equinox) than on September 10 or 11, say, or 29 or 30; nor, in fact, are they. The same is true of the spring or vernal equinox. This whole notion about "equinoctial storms" is erroneous, and it even is uncertain how, where, when or by whom the idea was started. It is only known that in one form or another it goes back at least to 1748.

"East" and "West"

"Never the twain shall meet" is a phrase borrowed from the poem "The Bullard of East and West," by Rudyard Kipling. The full significance of the expression can be gained only by reading the entire poem. Isolated from the text the lines are interpreted as meaning "that people of the eastern civilization, such as the Chinese and the Japanese, and those of the western civilization, such as the English and the American, cannot affiliate upon a truly friendly basis."

"Columbia Jubilee Laugh Month"

"Columbia Jubilee Laugh Month" celebrating the dawn of better times is announced by the Lyric Theatre for the month of January, whereby each program shown by this theatre will have an added Columbia featurette comedy.

The plan is based on absolute evidence of returning prosperity, the theatre management states. For instance, they are celebrating the raise of price of wheat in Kansas, Nebraska and Minnesota. Oklahoma and Texas are joyful over the price of crude oil. The latest figures show a material advance in attendance in motion picture theatres. Every industry is noting improvements.

Realizing this, Columbia Pictures took the initiative in a celebration of prosperity by the screen industry. January, the first month of the year, is designated as 'Jubilee Laugh Month.' A specially strong array of comedy attractions designed to voice the new spirit of optimism has been prepared.

The Lyric Theatre will show these in this community as its part in the move toward a better psychology and greater faith in America's soundness and prosperity.

Columbia Featurettes are among the finest comedy offerings Hollywood has ever produced, all specially selected with a view to the celebration. The Lyric Theatre is one of the first in America to sponsor the new move and this city is one of the first to have the opportunity of participating.

Among the famous stars who endorse this move are: Jack Holt, John Miljan, Constance Cummings, Lionel Barrymore, Ralph Graves, Barbara Standwyck, and many more of the outstanding names of the motion picture industry.

The screen is going to straighten out long faces, and show that the industry is on the up-grade. It is sure to be a popular movement in our community—just as it was when the plan was first worked out in Hollywood, states Mr. Walker, owner of the Lyric. There will be no program without comedy features, he says.

Mr. Walker says he will endeavor to give the public the best performances he can secure in the motion picture line.

Bloom of Rice Plant

Varies in Localities
Temperature plays an important part in the flowering of the rice plant. Rice flowers are relatively inconspicuous, but an official of the United States Department of Agriculture, who works on the improvement of the rice crop, has studied the blooming habits of the plant in connection with the cross-breeding of varieties.

The rice plant blooms suddenly and for only a short time. One observer noted a complete opening of the flower in thirty seconds. The blooming continued for only about two hours. Rice flowers are rarely open before the sun has warmed the earth and air, and they close before the sun is far down. In the United States and in Japan the rice blooms later than in warmer areas, such as Java, India and the Philippine Islands. In India, observers say, rice will not bloom until the temperature has reached 77 degrees Fahrenheit. But there the temperature runs high as a rule and rice blooms most freely in the early morning hours soon after the dew evaporates, and the flowers close before the heat of noon. In California the maximum period of bloom is the two hours after noon.

Rice has a complete flower, and usually fertilizes itself. It "breeds true," and there is little cross-fertilization. The pollen from the stamens fertilizes the stigma in the same plant, usually before or at the time the flower opens.

Easy Way of Inducing

Bees to Change Abode
Bees often take up their abode where they are not wanted, as in a cavity in a wall. A good way to get them out is to put a bee "escape" over the entrance to the cavity, so the bees can get out but not in. A cone of wire cloth about 8 inches high with a hole at the apex just large enough for one bee to pass through will serve as an escape. A regular hive should be placed beside the entrance for the return of the escaped bees. The queen remains in the old cavity and goes on laying eggs, but as the colony is quickly reduced in size the quantity of the brood decreases. The younger bees leave the cavity and join the bees in the hive. A new queen should be given to the bees in the hive as soon as possible.

After about four weeks, remove the bee escape and make as large a hole as possible at the entrance of the cavity. The bees will go in for the honey and carry it to the hive. For this method to work successfully it is necessary that the bees have only one exit from the cavity.—United States Department of Agriculture.

First American Flag

A standard with 13 alternate blue and silver stripes, carried by the Philadelphia Troop of Light Horse in 1775, is the first known attempt to provide a national flag. At Cambridge, Mass., on January 2, 1776, General Washington, acting on his own initiative, raised a flag consisting of 13 alternate white and red stripes with the crosses of St. George and St. Andrew in a blue field in the upper left-hand corner. Under various designations, this was employed until displaced by the Stars and Stripes, adopted by the Continental congress, June 14, 1777.

His Way

"Don't you sometimes get lost in the woods when you go out possum hunting and get separated from your brother?" asked a motorist in the Rumpus Ridge region.

"None!" replied young Banty, son of Gap Johnson. "When I don't know what I'm at and there ain't nobody around to ask I just pick out the way I know leads toward home and turn right around and go the other way; that always fetches me home by the shortest trail."—Kansas City Star.

Canadian Timber

It is estimated by the Dominion forest service that the only economic use for three-eighths of the land area of Canada lies in the growing of trees. This vast area of territory, while incapable of successful agricultural production, is, if permanently dedicated, protected and managed, suited to the production of a timber crop which would guarantee for all time the supply of raw material for Canada's wood-using industries.—Natural Resources Bulletin.

London's Fall Mall

The average American and Canadian tourist may have difficulty in recognizing Fall Mall, as the "Fall Mall," to which the London policeman directs him, when he asks for the famous street. It was named after the French game Fallie-mall, which was first played here in the days of Charles I. On this street were the homes of De foe of Robinson Crusoe fame, Swift of Gulliver's Travels, Sterne of the "Sentimental Journey," and Gibbon, the historian.

Boiling Water

Water boils at 212 degrees F. At 115 degrees a person finds water almost too hot to hold his hand in it. Fabrics that will not be injured by water can be freed of living clothes moth eggs and larvae by being dipped for 10 seconds in water heated to 140 degrees F. Care, however, must be exercised to have and keep the water at this or a greater temperature. Larvae and eggs in bannel dipped for 10 seconds in water heated only to 122 degrees F. remain unaffected.

One summer during a record-breaking drought in Georgia the colored brethren and sisters congregated for the purpose of praying up a rain.

"Good Lawd, dis kentry am dried up! She sho' am parched! De crops am done cooked on de water supply am runnin' low! Ya-people am sufferin' scandalus. Sen' a rain, good Lawd! Sen' a rain! ### Recall Colonial Days

Entire rooms from Colonial mansions in the South and New England have been transported to St. Louis and installed in the City Art museum in Forest park to illustrate early American architecture. Acquisition and removal of the five early American rooms as completed at a cost of $50,000 and is one step in the museum's program for a rehabilitation of its building. Dominating the crest of Art hill in Forest park, the St. Louis Art museum was built for the world's fair of 1904 and is one of the three remaining structures of that exposition. The American interiors, authentic examples from Colonial mansions, come from Charleston, S. C.; Alexandria, Va.; Salem and Newburyport, Mass.

Denver Mother Tells Story

Nature controls all the functions of our digestive organs except one. We have control over that, and it's the function that causes the most trouble.

See that your children form regular bowel habits, and at the first sign of bad breath, coated tongue, biliousness or constipation, give them a little California Fig Syrup. It regulates the bowels and stomach and gives these organs tone and strength so they continue to act as Nature intends them to. It helps build up and strengthen pale, listless, underweight children. Children love its rich, fruity taste and it's purely vegetable, so you can give it as often as your child's appetite lags or he seems feverish, cross or fretful.

Leading physicians have endorsed it for 50 years, and its overwhelming sales record of over four million bottles a year shows how mothers depend on it. A Western Mother, Mrs. H. W. Stewart, 4112 Raritan St., Denver, Colorado, says: "Raymond was terribly pulled down by constipation. He got weak, fretful and cross, had no appetite or energy and food seemed to sour in his stomach. California Fig Syrup had him romping and playing again in just a few days, and soon he was back to normal weight, looking better than he had looked in months."

Protect your child from imitations of California Fig Syrup. The mark of the genuine is the word "California" on the carton.

That's All They call you a peanut politician. "Just trying to roast me."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

BEDTIME STORY FOR CHILDREN

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

PETER RABBIT TRACKS HIS NEIGHBORS

IT WAS a perfectly glorious night. Mistress Moon flooded the Green Meadows and the Green Forest with silvery light, and the white snow which covered everything helped to make still more light. In fact it was almost as light as day, it seemed to Peter Rabbit. In spite of all little Mrs. Peter could say he had started for the Green Forest just as soon as jolly, round, red Mr. Sun had gone to bed behind the Purple Hills.

"It's just like visiting a new world," thought Peter as he reached the edge of the Green Forest. "I do wish that Fuzzy wasn't so timid." By Fuzzy he meant little Mrs. Peter, who you know, was once Miss Fuzzytail. "She thinks that just because my coat is brown and everything else is white it is a great deal more dangerous here than when there isn't any snow. She doesn't know what wonderful hiding places there are everywhere now. The snow has bent down all those little hemlock trees and the lowest branches on the big hemlock trees so that under them are the most wonderful caves. Why, I can jump out of sight almost anywhere here. Hello! I wonder who made those funny tracks, I believe I'll follow them and find out."

It Was Whitefoot, the Woodmouse.

The tracks were just the thinnest of little dots with a tiny little line between the two rows. That line puzzled Peter. You know he is not used to tracking his neighbors. Of course the double row of dots were, the prints of tiny feet, but what made the line? Peter followed as fast as he could, which wasn't so very fast, because the tracks wound about so much. Presently they led to an old log covered with snow. In one side of it was a little hole, and right there the tracks ended.

"Hello!" called Peter. "Hello yourself and see how you like it!" replied a squeaky little voice.

Peter chuckled. He knew that voice. "Why don't you come out and be polite when you have callers?" he said.

"Did you say callers? Who is with you, Peter Rabbit?" asked a squeaky voice.

"Well, a caller, if you like that better. There is no one with me," replied Peter.

Right away a pretty little head with the loveliest soft eyes appeared at the hole. It was Whitefoot, the Woodmouse. "Excuse me, Peter, if I seemed to be a little bit impolite," said he. "I have to be very careful these days. I can't afford to take any chances when there are so many hungry people about. How did you find me?"

"Easy enough," replied Peter. "I just followed your tracks, though I didn't know whose they were."

Whitefoot sighed. "That is the trouble with snow—it is a regular tell-tale," said he. "One cannot move while it is soft without leaving tracks. It tells all one's secrets. Better watch out, Peter, that some of your enemies don't catch you by means of your tracks; they are very easy to follow."

"I'm not worrying," declared Peter. "If they can see my tracks I can see theirs, so it is an even thing. It is great fun to follow tracks. By the way, Whitefoot, how do you make that funny little line between your foot-prints?"

"With my tail, of course. How stupid of you not to know," replied Whitefoot. "A long tail is rather a nuisance sometimes," he added.

Peter chuckled. "Mine doesn't bother me," said he. "I'm very glad to have found out about your tracks. Next time I will know them. Now I am going to see who else I can follow. It isn't often I have such a chance, and it is great fun. I expect I shall learn a whole lot about my neighbors."

"Watch out that they don't learn some things about you that you would rather keep secret," warned Whitefoot. But Peter just laughed and went on his way.

WALL OR ROAD

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

Walls, fences, borders, what are they? That shot and shell may shoot away? The barriers that hold us back Are not the forts that men attack, But barriers we seem to build Within ourselves. The world is filled With men who failed. I wonder why? So oft a purpose seems to die With not a battlement before. Peace has defeat as well as war, And more dreams die by their own hand Than some attack some foe man planned.

Well, first we build a wall of doubt About ourselves—ourselves shut out From cities that we dream to take. The wall the first of all to break. Whatever victory we want, Is that old wall that says, "I can't." If thus you think, no other man Is much inclined to think you can. Who doubts himself has built a wall Around himself the first of all, And now must spend his strength and time His self-made barrier to climb.

And, even if he scales the top, There is another thing to stop His progress: His the twisted wire Of folly, habit and desire. The brambles that will bar his path Are often but the fruits of wrath From seeds that he himself has sown. I bid you never plant your own And you will find a passage through The pits that others set for you, If you yourself no pits have set Of futile sorrow and regret.

Yes, men will fall, and fall again, Because they drag a ball and chain Of foolish pleasure, doubt or fear. But, if you keep your vision clear, Your purpose true, your morals clean, Life has no bounds, luck no demesne. How far a man may go, my friends, How high he climbs, how low descends, Depends, whatever fortune brings, On him, and not on other things— Not on his luck nor on his load, But if he builds a wall, or road. ### Not Really Steel Jackets

There are no steel-jacketed bullets made in the United States. In Europe there are some cartridges made which have steel (really soft iron) jackets, with a thin wash of cupro nickel. Most bullets called steel jacketed in the United States are made with a cupro nickel alloy jacket.

Longest Term Security

The longest term security is a non-recallable railroad bond issued in 1865 and due to mature in 2961—a period of 475 years. When called, the interest paid will be about 16 times larger than the principal $3,450,000,000, or approximately $55,200,000,000.—Collier's.

Mother's Cook Book

FOUR GOOD THINGS

WHEN you want to serve an exceptionally nice frozen dish, try: Apricot Henri.

Take one can (two and one-half pounds) of apricots, put through a sieve, add to the fruit one-fourth cupful of lemon juice, one and one-half cupfuls of orange juice, one cupful of sugar and a pinch of salt. Mix well and freeze.

Orange Blossom Salad. Peel small navel oranges and remove all the white membrane. Slice firm heads of lettuce in three-fourths inch slices, place an orange on the lettuce and open the fruit so that it resembles the petals of a flower. Moisten the fruit and lettuce with a snappy french dressing and top with a spoonful of mayonnaise mixed with whipped cream.

Divinity Balls. Cook one and one-fourth cupfuls of sugar, one-third cupful of light corn syrup, one-fourth cupful of water, one-eighth teaspoonful of salt to the hard ball stage. Leave the saucepan over the burner after the heat has been turned off. Beat one egg white until stiff. Pour over the hot syrup very slowly, beat until the mixture holds its shape. Add one-half teaspoonful of vanilla, one cupful of sliced dates and one-half cupful of nut meats; mix thoroughly and turn out on a marble slab, make into balls and roll in toasted or tinted coconut. This makes one and one-fourth pounds.

Basic Energy Soup. Take two and one-half pounds of veal or beef soup meat and bone. Brown half the meat before adding the water. If light stock is desired use veal and do not brown. Cover with two quarts of cold water. Have the bones crushed and simmer for two and one-half hours. Do not allow it to boil. Now add the vegetables and cook another hour. Strain, chill and remove fat. It is now ready to be served with other vegetables or noodles.

Pineapple Salad. Place a ring of pineapple on lettuce and arrange three balls of cream cheese on each. Fill the center with mayonnaise and serve. (C) 1932, Western Newspaper Union.

Japan Succeeds in Pushing China Out of Manchuria—Plans for Unemployment Relief and Government Economy.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

JAPAN, ignoring the orders of the League of Nations and resentfully disregarding the notes from the United States and other powers, is apparently to have her own way in Manchuria. Conveniently quibbling all opposing forces "bandits," she sent her armies forward from Mukden during the week in an advance that was destined to reach Chinchow. Resistance was met at various points but was overcome with armored trains, bombing planes and artillery, and the Chinese steadily fell back.

Finally Marshal Chang Hsueh-liang decided it was better to give the Japanese no further excuse for carrying the warfare into North China, so he ordered all his forces to withdraw within the Great Wall, and this movement was begun immediately, accompanied by much confusion and the flight of the panic-stricken civilian population of the region. Thus the Japanese gained complete control of Manchuria and the gallant fight put up by General Ma Chan and by the troops directly under command of Marshal Chang has been in vain.

In Nanking the new coalition government was organized and a new cabinet appointed with Eugene Chen, leader of the Canton faction as minister of foreign affairs. It was thought that Chen might be able to negotiate a settlement with Japan on the basis of guarantees for fulfillment of treaties in exchange for military withdrawal of the Japanese.

MOSCOW charges that Czechoslovakia has been plotting to provoke war between Russia and Japan, presumably to promote the sale of war munitions. The story was that a Czech diplomat had tried to instigate the assassination of Koki Hirota, Japanese ambassador to Moscow, and the man accused turned out to be Carl Wanek, secretary of the Czech diplomatic mission to Moscow. The government at Prague recalled Wanek but scouted the allegation that the mission itself was involved in any plot.

Wanek has a reputation as a specialist in military affairs in several large European countries, and counts among his associates the military attaches of several allied capitals.

MAHATMA GANDHI, returning to Bombay from the round table conference in London, told a vast throng of his followers that he would not flinch from sacrificing the lives of a million people as the price of liberty for India, and he warned them that in the coming conflict with the British they might have to face bullets instead of staves. His utterances plainly indicated that he is about ready to abandon his policy of passive resistance.

Mahatma Gandhi

"If the light is inevitable, I will expect every son and daughter of Mother India to contribute his mite," he said. "However, I will not abandon attempts to save the nation from a fiery ordeal. If, on the other hand, there is no single ray of hope I shall not hesitate to call upon you to bear any amount of suffering."

He counseled his followers to keep their heads, despite the bloody events in the northwest frontier province, the arrest of Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru and deportation of Abdul Gafur Khan, leader of the "red-shirt" tribesmen.

WASTE and extravagance in the federal government must be reduced, in the opinion of President Hoover, and many others as well, and it was announced at the White House that the President was preparing a special message to congress recommending the consolidation of departments and bureaus. He wants immediate legislative action providing for grouping all construction activities of the government under one administrative head and the transfer of the shipping board and all federal merchant marine activities to the Department of Commerce.

According to a statement issued by the President, the purpose of the consolidations is to cut the cost of federal government, curtail the growth of independent bureaus, eliminate overlapping and promote efficiency. While refusing to set a definite figure indicating the savings which would follow the consolidations, Mr. Hoover said the grouping last year of all veterans' activities under the veterans' administration is expected to save from $10,000,000 to $15,000,000.

Chairman Cochran of the house expenditures committee, which will handle the consolidation legislation, is in accord with most of the Chief Executive's recommendations.

DURING the holiday recess a senate committee considered two bills that call for the appropriation of federal funds to care for the unemployed, and heard testimony and arguments from social workers from Chicago, New York and other cities. One of the measures, introduced by Senator La Follette of Wisconsin, provides for the appropriation of $250,000,000. The other, fathered by Senator Costigan of Colorado, puts the amount at $375,000,000. Mr. Costigan told the committee that nothing short of government help could provide necessary relief for the unemployed. Some of the witnesses heard estimated that as much as $700,000,000 would be needed for relief during 1932 and that the funds from state, city and private sources would not be sufficient to carry the load through the winter.

Senator La Follette

President Hoover is now, as always, opposed to a direct appropriation from the treasury for unemployment relief purposes, holding that it would be in the nature of a dole and would be a dangerous precedent.

WETS in the house of representatives, it now appears, are to obtain only one vote on prohibition in this session. They may have their choice of whether this shall be on a referendum proposal for repeal of the Eighteenth amendment or on a measure calling for modification of the Volstead act to permit the manufacture and sale of light wines and beer.

Representative Rainey of Illinois, Democratic floor leader, said the Judiciary committee would not report favorably on either measure. "The wets will have to bring the bill to the floor through the petition of 145 members," he said. "That is the only way in which they can do it. They will have but one vote and that either on a referendum or light wines and beer. They can't have both. The rules of the house will be so interpreted."

He said he felt the referendum had the better chance for "getting by" because many dyes, himself included, would vote for it.

NEITHER reparations nor war debts will be finally settled at the European conference which Great Britain has called to meet January 12 in Lausanne, if the program practically agreed upon by British and French treasury experts is adopted. They suggest a new three-year moratorium for Germany on the conditional reparations and that Germany be required during that period to pay the unconditional reparations into the Bank for International Settlements, such amounts to be immediately loaned by the bank to the German railways or re-invested within Germany, thus avoiding all cash transfers abroad by the reich.

The creditor powers would undertake to concede to Germany an impartial re-examination of her capacity to pay reparations toward the close of the moratorium period.

On this side of the water Senator Cordell Hull of Tennessee comes forward with a call for international action to lower tariff barriers as the first step in solving the debt problem. The former chairman of the Democratic national committee says payments can be made only through the restoration of healthy international trade, that tariff walls have strangled trade and that it is "fatuous" to insist on debt payments and at the same time have world commerce hampered. The senator, who is a member of the Democratic policy committee in congress, says he proposes to offer a resolution looking toward a tariff conference of the nations.

SENATOR CAREY of Wyoming, Republican, and his subcommittee on banking amended the house bill to increase the capitalization of the federal land banks by adding the sum of $25,000,000 to be used in granting postponements on farm mortgage payments. This additional sum is to be repaid to the federal treasury by the banks when their need for the money has passed. Senator Carey believes the amendment will permit a moratorium and, at the same time, avoid weakening the banks.

A favorable report on the measure with the amendment was decided upon by the committee.

FINLAND had a national referendum on the question of abolishing the country's prohibition laws, and on the basis of early returns it was estimated that the 90 per cent of the Finns had voted wet. The result of the referendum will not finally decide the problem but will serve to guide the government.

ARCHBISHOP DIAZ, head of the Catholic church in Mexico, has instructed the priests and all other Catholics to disregard the new law passed by congress which limits to 25 the number of priests in the federal district. So the chances for renewed trouble there are good.

BOTH federal reserve and commercial banking officials are severely criticized for their course with respect to the stock market collapse in the fall of 1929 in an appendix to the report being compiled by the senate banking and currency committee's subcommittee which is investigating the national and federal reserve banking systems.

The committee, headed by Senator Carter Glass, Democrat, of Virginia, who was sponsor for the Federal Reserve act in congress, is particularly critical of what it holds to have been the bank's excessive participation in the security markets and of the "mischievous" effects of loans made to brokers "for account of others."

A suggestion is offered that the banks be prohibited from acting for corporations, investment trusts, and others in making such loans. At the same time, the report shows the nation's bankers are opposed to new restrictions upon their investments in securities.

Acting under a resolution by Senator Glass to "make a complete survey of the national and federal reserve banking systems," the subcommittee is expected to bring in a bill to revise those systems in some particulars.

PRESIDENT HOOVER announced the appointment of the fourth member of the American delegation to the disarmament conference at Geneva, the man selected being Norman H. Davis of New York, who was under-secretary of state in the Wilson administration and chief financial adviser to the American delegation in the negotiations that resulted in the treaty of Versailles.

Later in the week the remaining delegate was appointed, he being Hugh Gibson, ambassador to Belgium, a veteran in such negotiations. As alternate in case any delegate cannot serve, Hugh Wilson, minister to Switzerland, was named.

Arthur Henderson, former foreign secretary in the Labor government of Great Britain, told correspondents in Paris that he expects to preside over the arms conference, although he no longer is in office.

MEMBERS of the "progressive" group in the senate are again talking about a third party in the campaign of 1932, and are said to be considering three possible candidates—assuming, as they do, that President Hoover will be re-nominated by the Republican convention, and also assuming that the Democrats do not select a candidate to the liking of the group. The three the independents are talking about are Senator Dorah of Idaho; Senator Hiram Johnson of California, who is sometimes too "regular" to suit a few of them, and Gov. Gifford Pinchot of Pennsylvania, whose lightning rod is always on. Senator Norris of Nebraska will not let his name be considered.

The Republican Independents, it is believed, would be satisfied with Franklin D. Roosevelt as the Democratic nominee, but his selection is no more certain now than it has been for months. Newton D. Baker announced in Cleveland that he would not be a delegate to the Democratic convention, but neglected to say whether or not he would accept the nomination if it were offered him. Both he and Roosevelt were declared "available candidates" by Josephus Daniels in a statement given out in New York. There was a recurrence of the story that Alfred E. Smith would again ask for the honor of leading his party, and a spokesman for "Alfalfa Bill" Murray, spectacular governor of Oklahoma, said that gentleman might be a candidate. And the chances of Gov. Albert C. Ritchie of Maryland must not be overlooked.

RAILROADS west of the Mississippi were granted authority by the interstate commerce commission to put recently authorized freight rate increases into effect on one-day notice. The increase order allowed five days for giving notice, instead of the customary thirty days.

The Southern Pacific Railroad company and its employees' organization reached a harmonious agreement on the wage reduction problem when 15,000 shop employees accepted a 10 per cent cut in pay. The company notified the maintenance of way men that their wages would be reduced 15 per cent in thirty days.

There was a general expectation that the railway labor unions would accept a 10 per cent wage reduction effective about the middle of January as the result of conferences in Chicago and Cleveland, and that the Canadian unions would adopt the decision of the American unions.

Who Was Who?

By Louise M. Comstock

FAUST.

IT WAS no grisly bargain with the devil that made Faust the central figure in a famous legend, the theme of at least two plays and three operas. In Mainz, Germany, in the fourteenth century, people won a reputation for undue intimacies with the devil very easily; and Faust won his overnight, almost, with a printing press!

Johann Gutenberg had just invented the process of printing with movable type. To commercialize his invention he formed the first printing company, Gutenberg, Faust and Shoeffler, to which he contributed the idea, and Faust the capital and a flare for sales promotion. Shoeffler was Faust's son-in-law. Since there were no patent laws at the time, the printing had to be done behind closed doors, often at night, to prevent the idea being stolen. The public, accustomed to slowly and laboriously hand-printed letters, gazed in awe at the freshly printed pages turned out so rapidly in that mysterious shop, and hinted magic. Faust perceived the sales value of that word, encouraged its use and became popularly known, not as a printer, but a man with some strange allegiance with the devil!

Old records show that Faust later won a law suit against Gutenberg for funds invested and lost in the printing of the famous Gutenberg Bible, a single copy of which, perhaps proving the theory of magic, sold in 1923 for $305,000.

SKIPPER IRESON

WHEN John Greenleaf Whittier used popular tales circulating about the fishing village of Marblehead in his poem "Skipper Ireson's Ride," he unwittingly served to perpetuate a great injustice.

"Floyd Ireson, for his hard heart," wrote Whittier, "was tarred and feathered and carried in a cart, by the women of Marblehead."

On the night of October 23, 1809, the fishing schooner Betty, Skipper Ireson in command, passed almost within halting distance of the Active, about to sink in the heavy sea. Skipper Ireson would have stopped to give aid; his crew, fearful for their own lives, disobeyed his orders to stand by to succor the Active and set sail for home while he was taking a bit of a nap below. Once safe home they accused the skipper of refusing aid, and their story was affirmed later when four survivors of the ill-fated Active reached port. The angry populace of Marblehead seized Skipper Ireson, stripped and bound him, tarred him and covered him with feathers and dragged him through the streets in an old dory. When its bottom fell out they put their victim in a cart and proceeded, howling on their way.

Not till many years later, when Skipper Ireson was old, blind, and destitute, and it was too late to make amends, was the true story told, by the Betty's cabin boy, now grown to manhood and a new sense of honor.

CASABIANCA

TWO generations of school boys have decried and parodied Mrs. Hemans' poem commencing "The boy stood on the burning deck," few of them perhaps realizing that the small hero therein described really lived, and died as the poem tells.

During Napoleon's expedition into Egypt, England sent her famous admiral, Lord Nelson, against the French fleet, and all but four of the French vessels were sunk or captured. The French admiral had fallen, and the flagship, wrapped in flames and sinking, was deserted by all of her crew who could squeeze into the lifeboats or swim. Only the captain, Louis Casabianca, already badly wounded but following the time-honored tradition of sea captains, refused to leave his post, determined to go down with his ship. Suddenly those on the attacking British vessels saw that the gallant captain was not alone. His ten-year-old son, who had hidden in a coil of ropes until the decks were cleared, now rushed up to his father, threw a supporting arm about him and stood ready to share his fate. Commands and entreaties failed to move the boy. And fighting was suspended and the British cheered and wept as the flaming ship bearing the two heroes sank into the water.

"CRIMS" OF INDIA ADEPTS IN CRIME

Skillful in Robbery Almost Beyond Belief.

Now easy to get rid of Gray Keep Hair Naturally Dark

To step in where a government had admitted failure, to pit all his energies and long years of perilous work in a fight against organized crime, was the task that Commissioner F. Booth Tucker, of the Salvation Army, together with his wife, set himself when he undertook to reform certain notorious criminal tribes in India.

The "Crims," as the Indian criminals are called, consist of entire tribes of natives, some of whom are descended from the ancient rulers of India. They live almost entirely by robbery and rapine. There are about 1,000,000 Crims in India, banded together in a secret society whose sole business is to commit crime. Both men and women take part in the robberies, while their children are employed as scouts and guides.

The Crims use neither sword nor gun, and invariably carried out the raids miles away from their own village. Then follows a general "share out" of the spoil, which frequently represents a huge sum. In one province 3,300,000 rupees were reported as stolen in one year. Of this amount only the odd 300,000 were recovered.

Occasionally a tribe will keep a regular gang of perhaps 30 young men to do the robbery for the whole tribe. The remainder live as agriculturists. If one of the gang is taken by the police, his successor is immediately named by the tribal chiefs. If he hesitates to go, every woman in the tribe mocks him. It is a case of "No robbery—no wife!"

Now without using dangerous dyes you can darken gray hair naturally, quickly restore its original shade by the world's finest, safe way which is now keeping millions of heads young looking. Benefits the hair as it darkens it to the shade you want. As simple as brushing. Try it. Pay druggist 75c for a large bottle of WYETH'S SAGE & SULPHUR and just follow easy directions.

One tribe specializes in jewel robberies. In India native women make their savings in jewelry. This they hang from the lobes of their ears, which are artificially enlarged for the purpose. Each member of this particular tribe has a razor-edged blade strapped to his forefinger, and after creeping toward a sleeping woman he makes a neat cut in her ear and relieves her of her jewelry. So skillful is the cut and so hard the flesh that in many cases the sleeper is not disturbed.

One of the difficulties was to induce the Crims to believe that a policeman was not necessarily a foe. The ordinary Crim is adept at breaking into native houses, whose walls are usually of mud or wattle. He does not force open the door; he cuts a hole in the wall.

My, An Awful Slip?
It Did Somebody Good

As things sometime happen in the newspaper game and especially when an editor is doing his best to do someone a favor, the Alamogordo News came forward last week with an apology in getting the Baptist heading on a Presbyterian church announcement.

In his apology for the error, Mr. Morgan says: "We solemnly affirm that it was unintentional, doubtless there are some suspicious persons who will believe that we were bent on starting some church-union propaganda. The editor knew nothing of the error until Rev. Fuller stuck his smiling face in the doorway Friday evening, and 'razed us.'"

To those who believe that advertising doesn't pay will readily see where the Presbyterians profited by the error, because of the fact that the mistake caused much discussing among church people on one hand, and much "cussing" from the good-natured editor on the other hand in return for "free stuff" he had run in his endeavor to do some good. Thus it everlastingly happens that just when a newspaper man uses space that is worth from 25 to 30 cents per inch in donating the same to some good cause, he invariably "gets his foot in it."

There must have been some smoke arose over the error, for in following up, he wonders if the different creeds will all agree "over there," or will they separate themselves into groups in the Celestial Abiding Place?

Editor Morgan must remember that a "mess" started over anything, would go further than it would at first seem, for a much-aided matter like that, certainly gives the newspaper its share of the advertising, all of which we still insist, proves that advertising does pay.

Methodist Church

One hundred and eighteen in Sunday School last Sunday morning. It appears that some New Year's resolutions are being kept. Services in Capitan next Sunday morning and in Carrizozo in the evening. In spite of the snow, mud and bad weather we are having good attendance at Capitan. And that fair little city in the lap of the hills is growing. Doesn't look much like depression there.

Our young people are planning to take charge of the evening service again soon. They are preparing a treat for us. Watch for the announcement and come. They are worthwhile young people, and they do worthwhile things.

Purcey--Cooney

In the city of Los Angeles, on Jan. 9, at high noon, Mr. Russell M. Purcey and Miss Margaret Cooney were united in marriage. Mr. Purcey is the son of Mrs. B. Prior, of the Malpais Service Station, and visited his mother and step-father here for a short time last fall. He has been employed at the Benjamin Apartments, in Los Angeles, for the past year, at which place they will make their future home.

High School News Notes

(H. S. Reporter)

Several of the High School students attended the funeral of Judge John Y. Hewitt at White Oaks last Thursday. The school was deeply indebted to Judge Hewitt for his many donations of books to our library, and we all deeply regret the passing of such a gallant warrior from the ranks of the friends of the school.

Thursday and Friday saw the mid-term exams taken by all hands, and we are all hopeful as to the outcome.

Saturday the boys went to Mountainair, and played a very good game of basket ball against the Mountainair team. At the end of the regular four quarters of play, the score was tied, and in the extra playing time Mountainair slapped in a free shot, to end the game at 14-13. The boys are surely picking up, and should make a winning team for all time by the next game.

On Monday night Mr. Detloff and some of the boys started to Corona to see the Albuquerque Indians play. They stalled their car along about Gallinas, and nearly froze while waiting for help. Elmer Catt and Clayton Hust, however, flagged a freight train and went on to Corona. The rest stayed with the car, and were just ready to give up when a truck came along and took them to Gallinas, where they flagged No. 11 the next morning. Their condition from this experience probably accounts for the result of the game with the Indians Tuesday night, which came out 11-25 in favor of the Redskins. I firmly believe we can beat them when in condition.

Wednesday morning the School Library became richer with the addition of seven volumes of the Source Records of the Great War, by Horne and Austin. These books were presented to the school by the members of Benjamin I. Berry Post, No. 11, American Legion. Five members of the Post were present: P. Johnson, Post Commander, E. M. Barber, C. E. Freeman, S. E. Grelson and Joe West. Dr. C. E. Freeman, in a few well-chosen words, presented the books to the school on behalf of the Legionnaires.

Spreading Joy

He who is filled with happiness, though seemingly absorbed, emanates pleasure on whoever crosses his way. He cannot contain it all, but produces much for his neighbors. There is no other such agent for diffusing joy as the heart that itself enjoys.—Palmer.

Louis XIV Sent La Salle

No less a personage than Louis XIV of France sponsored the exploration of the Great Lakes. His royal command sent out La Salle, whose first ship followed Lake Erie to Detroit, Lake Huron to Mackinac Island and Lake Michigan to Chicago.

Early River Navigation

The first trip up the Ohio river by steamboat was made in May, 1816, by the Enterprise, of 75 tons. She traveled from New Orleans to Louisville in that year, the trip taking 35 days. The steamer Washington made the same trip in 1818 and inaugurated steamboat navigation in the Mississippi valley.
