Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Miller left Wednesday for their home in Charlotte, N. C. They were accompanied as far as El Paso by Mr. and Mrs. J. B. French, who returned home yesterday. The Millers will go by way of New Orleans on their return trip.

As we announced in our last week's issue, Dr. R. E. Blaney is attending a meeting of dentists in El Paso, where the latest methods in advanced dentistry are being given to dentists who are attending from New Mexico and Texas. He will return tomorrow.

L. A. Whitaker, Mayor of Ocuca and Bill Wettstein, postmaster of that place, were here Monday attending to some business matters.

Mrs. J. B. French and Mrs. Ralph Miller spent Sunday and Monday in Santa Fe, returning Tuesday.

Mrs. Elizabeth Gallacher returned last Thursday from her trip to Sandusky, Ohio, where she visited her sisters and brothers for several months. She was accompanied by her nephew, Ralph Greeno, who will accompany his aunt and uncle, S. W. Wells, who will be here in a short time, to Palmdale, Calif., where they will pay the Wells family a visit. Mr. Wells will make the trip to Carrizozo by train and the trio will return to California in Mrs. Gallacher's car.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Ziegler and daughter, Mrs. John Gutnecht, left on No. 4 Tuesday night for Chicago, where, after a short stay at his daughter's home, Mr. Ziegler will return, and Mrs. Ziegler will remain at the Gutnecht home until the weather settles in the springtime, at which time she will return home to enjoy spring flowers, her beautiful home and the glad New Mexico sunshine.

A. D. Brownfield was here from El Paso Monday, shaking hands with his many Carrizozo friends. "D" looked well, and carried the same well-known smile.

Entertainment Extraordinary

Last Saturday night at the High School Auditorium, the Woman's Club of Carrizozo gave a novel and interesting entertainment under the management or a committee composed of Mrs. Maude L. Blaney and Miss Hazel Melasa. A good attendance greeted the event, the program of which began with a solo by Mrs. D. U. Groce, another by Miss Harrings, and followed by Mrs. C. A. McCammon with a humorous reading, Miss Louise Sweet and Saturnino Chavez, Jr. in two violin duets. And then a playlet, the characters in which were well taken by Mrs. Paul Mayer, Mrs. S. S. Gillespie, Miss Nellis Shaver and Elmer Catt. Features of the playlet caused much merriment among the audience.

Little Peggy Farley Baker, the principal feature of the evening, appeared with her assistant manager, and showed a marked improvement over what she did one year ago, although at that time she excelled over most children of her age. The sweet little starlet danced and did acrobatic work that would put most grown-up stars in the shade, and bowed her thanks to the repeated rounds of applause from the audience.

The entertainment, on the whole, was a complete success, and reflects much credit on the committee named above. Elsewhere in this paper will be found an expression of thanks from the committee.

The Cycle of the Year

This service of music, song, tableaux, and pageant, will be presented by Mrs. T. A. Spencer's Sunday School class at the Methodist Church next Sunday evening at 7:30. A religious service by our own young people, and for every one. A delightful and worthwhile evening is promised. You are welcome, and so is your neighbor. Please tell him about it.

Youth Must Be Served

Events in Early History

The Santa Fe New Mexican, in its issue of Jan. 1, published pictures of three of the principals in the Lincoln County War. The photographs from which the cuts were made are in the possession of Mr. John Zimmerman, of Santa Fe. They were pictures of J. H. (Jack) Tunstall, Alexander A. McSween and Mrs. Alexander A. McSween. The following interesting bit of reminiscence accompanied the pictures:

Tunstall was the first man killed in the war between the Murphy and McSween factions, in which Billy the Kid achieved fame as the most notorious gunman of all times. Tunstall came to Lincoln from England. In dress and manner he was all that could be asked of the Britisher of that period. He became a close friend of McSween's and with him started the McSween store, which is said by many to have had as much to do with the war as did the question of cattle. Later the two friends, in partnership with John Chisum, opened a bank which was operated in connection with the store.

At the time he was killed, February 13, 1878, Tunstall was the employer and close friend of Billy the Kid. The two were riding together on the fatal morning. He is buried behind the old store in Lincoln. It is claimed by many that, while others fought for pay, it was the desire to revenge the murder of his friend which drove the Kid on to the heights of his career as a killer.

Alexander A. McSween was born on Prince Edward's Island. Their decision to go to Lincoln was the result of a strange prank played on them by fate rather than a planned move. In all probability neither of the McSweens had ever heard of Lincoln when they arrived in New Mexico. They were seeking a salubrious climate and an opportunity to make their way in the world when chance threw them across the path of Miguel Otero.

One night at Punta de Agua the couple were camped next to Mr. Otero. The entered into conversation with the young politician and asked him where would be a good place to settle. Lincoln was a town of unusual promise in those days. Mr. Otero suggested that they go there and gave them a note to a friend. In such a casual way was the fate of an entire community settled. The arrival of the McSweens in Lincoln was something of an event. They were an unusual couple to be found wandering about the mountains in those days. McSween was an able lawyer and his wife an accomplished musician. They had little more than settled in town before Mrs. McSween ordered a grand piano shipped out from St. Louis.

The march of the instrument across the country was almost in the nature of a triumphal procession. There had never been a piano in the town and its arrival was the event of the age. It gave Lincoln something to boast about for many a long day.

At that time there was not a mile of railway in the State of New Mexico. The instrument was shipped by rail to Trinidad, Colo. There it was loaded on a wagon drawn by four horses and paraded across the State to its final resting place in the little mountain town.

"People who knew the McSweens have said that he was a meek man who put his faith in God, refusing to believe in the viciousness of others. His wife was a fine gentlewoman, and within her there rested the spirit of a gallant fighter. When the war became inevitable she begged her husband to carry a gun in one of his saddle bags while his Bible rested in the other. During the three days of siege at their home she escaped, and brought Colonel Dudley of the U. S. army to stop the slaughter. When he did nothing she returned home.

"On the night that her home was burned and her husband killed, Mrs. McSween sat in the midst of swirling smoke and played the "Star Spangled Banner" on her beloved piano as the flames devoured the walls and ceiling of the room.

"After the Lincoln county war, she married Mr. George L. Barber. With 200 head of cattle she established a ranch at Three Rivers and became known far and wide as the New Mexico Cattle Queen. In 1917 she sold the ranch to Albert B. Fall and moved to White Oaks to spend the last years of her eventful life."

They Brought the River to This Bridge

REPLACING an old curved bridge on State route 93 in Coshocton county, Ohio, the engineers constructed a new steel truss bridge of three 140-foot spans, and set it up just where they wish it, over dry land. Then they proceeded to divert the waters of the Tuscarawas river for a distance of 2,500 feet and sent them under the new bridge.

HARDLY had Peter Rabbit left Whitefoot the Woodmouse when he discovered some new tracks in the snow, and right away he was all curiosity.

"Now whose can these be, I wonder?" thought he.

They were quite different from the tiny tracks of Whitefoot. In the first place they were so much larger. Then, too, they were quite far apart in little groups of four, two little round ones and two quite long ones.

"Of course," said Peter to himself, "the little ones are the prints of front feet, and the long ones are the prints of hind feet. They are just a little like my own prints, only not so big. I guess I'll follow them and see where they lead to."

So Peter started off hip-ty-ty-ty-ty, for these tracks were very easy to follow. He had followed them quite a distance without discovering anybody when he happened to look back at his own tracks. Then he stopped abruptly and sat up. First he looked at his own tracks and then he looked at the other tracks, and a very foolish look crept over his face. He had noticed what he had quite forgotten and this was that in hopping he puts his hind feet down in front of his fore feet so that anyone who didn't know that would think from his tracks that he was going in just the opposite direction from what he was. He looked a little closer at the tracks he had been following and now he could see the marks of toenails. Whoever had made those tracks did just as he did, put the hind feet down in front of the forefeet, and here he had been following them in the wrong direction. No wonder he didn't catch up with any one. My, how foolish Peter did feel! He looked this way and that way to make sure that no one had seen what he had been doing, and then he turned about and started back the way he had come as fast as he could go.

When he reached the place where he had first begun to follow the tracks he kept right on. Presently he came to a place where some one had dug down through the snow. Right beside the little hole was an empty nutshell. Peter stopped and right away he lost all interest. "Pooh!" he exclaimed, "I'm not going to waste my time following those tracks any farther. They were made by Happy Jack Squirrel, and he's at home in bed now. Funny I didn't think of him before. Next time I see his tracks I'll know them so perhaps my time hasn't been wholly wasted."

With this Peter once more went looking for tracks, and he didn't have far to look. This time they were big round tracks in a single row. Peter took one good look at them and that was enough.

"Reddy Fox!" he exclaimed under his breath. "This is no place for me if he is about. There is one good thing, and that is they head away from where I have been, I hope he won't take it into his head to come over this way."

Making the longest jumps he knew how, Peter hurried off to another part of the Green Forest, and there presently he forgot all about Reddy Fox in his interest in another set of

GRANDMOTHER'S BOOK

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

I SEE Grandmother's finger yet
Tracing the verses line by line.
The light was poor, the print was fine.

The way the Bible once was set,
But little handicaps she met,
Spelled out the sentences divine,
When thine was always printed
Thine

In an old-fashion alphabet.

The Book was hard on ancient eyes
But it was balm to hearts of old,
Before the Story was retold
And commentators grew too wise.
So much we now philosophize,
So much explain, so much unfold,
We hide the fabled streets of gold,
We shut the gates of Paradise.

Grandmother's Book is put away,
Grandmother's faith is half forgot,
And if we're happier or not
Perhaps is not for me to say,
But I have just enough of gray,
Have known enough the common lot,
To long for—well, I don't know what,
But something from Grandmother's
Day.

A Cold

Colds are common because people are careless. Prompt use of aspirin will always check a cold. Or relieve your cold at any stage. And genuine aspirin can't hurt you. Take two tablets of Bayer Aspirin at the first indication of a cold, and that's usually the end of it. If every symptom hasn't disappeared in a few hours, repeat. Bayer Aspirin does not depress the heart. Take enough to give complete relief. And if your throat is sore, dissolve three tablets in water and gargle away all soreness. In every package of genuine Bayer Aspirin are proven directions for colds, headaches, sore throat, neuralgia, neuritis. Millions who used to suffer from these things have found winter comfort in aspirin.

AS SCIENCE VIEWS
ADVANCE OF MAN

Erect Position Put Him
Above Beasts.

From a single fossil skull discovered in the desert wilds of Central Australia, Sir Colin MacKenzie deduces the fact—or at least the conclusion—that "the erect posture dominates man's intellectual system, and shows that all intellectual development has a muscular basis." At first glance it is a little difficult to perceive how a skull which is not a whole skull, but only a portion of one, and which is supposed to be, and probably is, a relic of a primitive kind of human being, can teach the scientist all that. It takes a good equipment of imagination to understand it. We must first imagine the creature from which man is descended going on all fours. He had not yet assumed the erect position. He was then like any other beast of the jungle. Any bigger beast might tread him to death under its feet. Manly was a matter of size. But one day, the beast, groveling in the tall grass, through some accident, or freak, or the help of a stump or a rock, gets upon his hind legs. In that position he sees above the grass. He is enabled to observe the approach of the possible mastodon who will grind him to death, and to hid from him. With his incident, this groveling creature's relative advance begins. From that time on, he and his species struggle toward the maintenance of an erect position. They employ craft; they learn a superior mode of physical progression, and thereby they attain a superiority over other creatures.

made man the master of his own evolution.

Of course at the stage noted the "mind" is yet to come. But it is now an inevitable thing, for the improvement achieved makes the newly developed species gregarious. Superior individuals learn to dominate their fellows. Communication becomes necessary. Language is developed from grunts and squeaks. Society is organized. Thoughts are expressed. Thus from the bones and muscles of the legs, from the bones and muscles of the hands, an "intellectual development" has been evolved. The great thing was to get started, and the start was the erect posture.

"Quod erat demonstrandum," says the professor. But of course all this is not a demonstration. It is only a speculation. Sir Colin MacKenzie's notion about the dependence of intellectual development on muscle is pure Lamarckianism. Lamarck was a French naturalist who was born in 1744 and died in 1829. He was the forerunner of Darwin, who accepted his doctrine of "acquired characters." What Lamarck taught is centered in his account of the manner in which the giraffe acquired his long neck. An ordinary antelope who lived in a South African region where, from increasing aridity, food for the antelope on the earth's surface disappeared, could graze only at the tops of trees. Such individual necks as had the longest necks could reach food and survive. Those individuals survived when their shorter-necked fellows perished; it was they who propagated their species, which became increasingly long-necked. The primitive man, getting on his feet in the tall grass, is practically doing the same thing that Lamarck's giraffe did.

Sir Colin MacKenzie's deductions from the discovery of the skull in the Australian desert demonstrate that Lamarck is coming to his own in the field of evolutionary science. They demonstrate nothing else—that is, as yet.—Boston Transcript.

Japanese Jonah and the Whale

THIS Japanese Jonah was not actually swallowed by the whale because he and his fellow-whalers had made the big fellow secure long before they got within reach of his jaws. The whaling industry is one of the foremost means of livelihood of the northern Japanese. The gigantic mammal in whose mouth this whaler is standing is of the "Iwa" or beef whale species. Its length varies from 60 to 90 feet and its weight from 15 to 24 tons. It is worth about $1,500 and the meat is regarded as a great delicacy by the natives.

THIS AND THAT

PLACE one teaspoonful of grated orange peel or lemon peel in the tea pot when making tea. It gives a delightful flavor and makes ordinary tea taste like the expensive teas.

Mild Rarebit.
Cut one-half pound of cheese into small bits. Sprinkle crumbs over the bottom of a buttered baking dish, cover with one-third of the cheese and seasonings, using one and two-thirds teaspoonfuls of salt, one-third teaspoonful of paprika; when the dish is full add one and one-half cupsful of milk and set into a pan of hot water. Bake in a moderate oven thirty-five minutes.

Cheese Souffle.
Take three tablespoonfuls of quick cooking tapioca, cook in one cupful of milk until the tapioca is clear. Add one cupful of grated cheese, stir until melted, cool, add three beaten egg yolks, one teaspoonful of salt and fold in the stiffly beaten egg whites. Place in a pan set in water and bake until the souffle is firm. Serve at once. This serves four.

Lines of Velvet Coat
Models are Simplified

Velvet coats are finding favor with smartly dressed women.

A brown velvet model for formal afternoon wear is offered by Patou. The collar, cuffs and bottom are trimmed with brown astrakhan. The lining is of jade green.

The long simplified lines show a modification of the closer silhouette of fall styles. The tie fastening, however, allows the coat to be fitted in at the natural waistline.

A chic brown hat and brown shoes complete the ensemble.

Here's the World's Rarest Bird

WHAT is said to be the world's rarest bird has been added to the collection of Gilbert Lee, famous Los Angeles agriculturist. The blue-winged parrot, scientifically known as "Puffinus leucurus" and thought the only one of its kind in captivity, was recently brought by sailors from the uninhabited island of the Malay peninsula which is the only place in the world the bird is found. One other such bird was once brought to London but lived only a few days. The bird's length is 5 1/2 inches. It has a red bill and green wings which are Chinese red underneath. Its head and rump are blue.

Muddy Water

The city of New Orleans gets its water supply from the Mississippi. In filtering this water an average of 3.5 tons of debris and mud is taken out of every 1,000,000 gallons. Yet after this is done and it is chemically treated the water is made safe for drinking and other domestic uses, thanks to modern science.—Capper's Weekly.

Candle Fish

A fish native to Alaska and known to Alaskan Indians as the "candle fish" is used in the making of a crude sort of lamp. This species of fish is said to be so oily that a pith or bark wick passed through its dried body and lighted at the exposed end will burn for a long time.

Pacific Salmon

Unlike the Atlantic coast salmon which spawns several times, the Pacific salmon spawns but once and dies immediately thereafter at the river spawning ground. All the five varieties of Pacific salmon are members of the same one family (Oncorhynchus), but show interesting differences in length of natural life span. The pink lives only two years; the coho, three; the chum, four; the sockeye, four to five, and the spring, six or seven.

Tidal Phenomena

There is only one high tide and one low tide in the Gulf of Mexico each day. The diurnal inequality has become exaggerated to such an extent as practically to extinguish the semi-diurnal tide in the lower parts of the gulf, giving high and low water only once daily. Normally there are two high and two low tides every 24 hours, but there are numerous variations in tidal phenomena in various parts of the world.

EDITORIAL COLUMN

The Hunger Marches

The outstanding fact about the so called "hunger marches" which have been precipitated upon Washington this winter that the country should not fail to note is that both of them had their genesis in politics and not in unemployment.

The first expedition was frankly avowed to be communistic in its inspiration, conduct and purpose, designed to create sentiment against the government and the United States.

The second was inspired by political antagonism to President Hoover, led by men conspicuous in political circles for their opposition to him, and deliberately planned to arouse public sentiment against him.

That the purpose behind both of these expeditions was political rather than economic any child must know. The marchers brought no information to Washington which was not already common property there as it is over the country generally. The petitions for relief which they presented to Congress and to the President could have been handled just as effectively through the mails. There was absolutely no point to be made by bringing the several thousand men to the national capital - except a political capital.

The manner in which the marches were conducted, contradicts the pretended purpose behind them. In the case of the last army, a very considerable part of its membership did not join in the parade to the Capitol which was supposed to be the chief function in which they should be engaged, but scattered about over the city, taking in the sights and having a good time like all other well-fed tourists. One of the men collapsed, not from hunger, but from excitement and was taken to a hospital. He found to be wearing a diamond ring and had $1,000.00 in currency on his person.

It is obvious that a cavalcade of 2,200 motor vehicles with hired drivers could not be brought together for a journey of 1,000 miles by men who were wholly indigent.

There was not only organization behind the enterprise, but a very considerable amount of money, which certainly would have been better expended relieving the families of those who needed relief than in sending some thousands of men on an utterly fruitless journey.

Mr. and Mrs. Hale Entertain

Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Hale entertained a number of their friends at the Herbert Ellis home in Ancho, January 9.

Several of the good old gang were missing due to sickness and weather conditions. The ladies proved themselves past masters of their art by the number of delicious cakes brought.

Music was furnished by several of our talented neighbors, and modern and old fashioned dancing was indulged.

The many guests left at a late hour, after expressing thanks for another enjoyable evening.

Acquaintance on Train

Wife's Former Husband
In a smoking compartment of the Twilight Limited, bound from Chicago to Detroit the other day, a Chicagoan and a Detroitter met and speedily became acquainted as people will on trains. Housler Massey, who is authority for the story and vouches for its truth, said the two men soon reached the point where they were trading their opinions on life and living.

The Chicagoan was cynical about women, and said so. "You can't trust 'em," he declared. "I was married once, and my wife left me for another guy, a fellow I never saw. An experience like that is enough to teach you not to trust women again."

"Well, I don't feel that way," said the Detroitter. "I'm married, have been married for several years, and my wife and I get along very well. Of course, she's an exceptional woman. She'll be at the station when we get to Detroit, and I want you to meet her. You'll see your ideas about women are wrong."

Arriving here, the two acquaintances walked up to the waiting room together. The Detroitter's wife rushed up to greet him, stopped suddenly. Her face paled. As she stopped, the Chicagoan flushed, muttered something about seeing a friend across the way, grabbed his bag from the red cap and was off. The Detroitter didn't know that his acquaintance of the train was his wife's former husband.—Detroit Free Press.

Death Adder Fourth in List of Deadly Snakes

The Australian death adder is said to have long borne an undeservedly bad name. People said the death adder was the most virulently poisonous of Australian snakes. Now Mr. Is Souel, director of the Sydney zoo, states that it is not nearly so fearsome as has been imagined. The average farmer will say emphatically that the death adder is one of the most dangerous reptiles in the bush. At the week-end a man was bitten by one. The fact that the bite had little effect on him prompted inquirers to seek Mr. Is Souel's opinion. Mr. Is Souel declared that he would have been surprised if the man had died, as he would rank the death adder as only fourth among Australia's poisonous snakes. The most deadly is the tiger snake, capable of killing a healthy man in 70 minutes. Next comes the brown snake, a potential killer in two hours. Then, says Mr. Is Souel, the black snake, which can make man desperately sick for 12 to 24 hours, but gives him a chance of life. Then the death adder and other varieties.

Sports Improve Posture
Walls corrective exercises are important for improving poor posture, sports have been found even more helpful. In the case of students at Harvard, it was found that of the freshmen who were obliged to take corrective exercises for poor posture those who took part in organized athletic sports during the subsequent three years showed much greater improvement in posture than those who did not go in for sports, the latter showing little if any improvement, according to the Boston Herald.

Traveling Cinemas
Traveling moving picture shows are the latest cinematic development in Soviet Russia. At present there are more than 1,200 such units traveling from one village to another. The popularity of the exhibitions may be judged by their rapid growth in number during the past two years. At the end of 1925 there were less than 400 traveling movies. This figure rose in 1926 to 600, and for the present year it is planned to produce 2,000 projectors.—Washington Star.

What Do You Give?
A New York vocational guidance expert advises people who are not happy in their jobs to save their money until they can make a change. She might say, too, that if people are not taking happiness out of their jobs they would do well to see that they are putting into those jobs everything they have to give. What you get out of your job in the way of contentment depends upon what you are willing to put into it in a day to day effort.—Grove Paterson, in the Mobile Register.

Lake's Depth Varies
The depth of Lake Titicaca, the largest lake in South America, in some places reaches 700 feet, but large portions of it are shallow, and the shores, especially in the south, are lined with marshy tracts covered with reeds. The lake receives a number of streams from the surrounding mountains and discharges through the Desaguadero into Lake Aullagas, whose waters finally evaporate in the great salt marshes in the southern part of the closed basin.

Man's Food Consumption
A healthy man, with a normal appetite, who reaches seventy has eaten 700 times his own weight, according to the calculation of experts of the faculty of Paris. They have figured that in his span of seventy years the average man of 140 pounds would have eaten 13 tons of bread, 15 tons of vegetables, 7 tons of meat or 18 whole cows; 2 tons of fruit, 1,000 pounds of candy and sugar, drank 15,000 quarts of milk and 20,000 quarts of beer, 16 barrels of water in America.

"Whistlin' Lyd" Hutchinson

I T IS a far cry from the sub-zero temperatures and the snow-covered hills surrounding Lake Placid in northern New York to sunny California and the great stadium in Los Angeles, where the 1932 Olympic games will be held this summer, but there is a connection between the two. Starting in Greece more than 3,000 years ago, Olympic games have been held at more or less regular intervals in many different countries during these 50 centuries, but this year for the first time in history the games will include sled dog races.

Obviously it would be impossible for the sled dog races to be held at the same time and place as the other branches of Olympic competition. So that is why Lake Placid, N. Y., comes into the Olympic picture. It has one of the finest sled dog racing courses on this continent and there on February 6 and 7 the teams of "huskies," driven by their fur-clad "mushers" will race 25 miles each day to win Olympic honors for the nations which they represent. Previous to the races at Lake Placid, elimination contests are being held in various parts of the country, notably in New England, to determine the American representatives in the Olympic finals, so these finals will see in the entry lists the names of some of the greatest sled dog drivers and teams in the world, pitting their speed and endurance against each other.

Outstanding among these will be such drivers as Leonard Seppala of Alaska, a native of Norway but now a naturalized American citizen, the man who with his heroic lead dog, Balto, thrilled the world a few years ago when they carried the diphtheria serum to stricken Nome; Emile St. Godard of Le Pas, Manitoba, a young French-Canadian, who has won three world championships; Frank Dupuis, another Canadian; Arthur T. Walden of New Hampshire, experienced Alaskan soursough musher and dogmaster for Commander Byrd in the Antarctic; Walter Channing of Boston, who has twice defeated teams from both sides of the border in the annual races at Lake Placid; Charlie Lyman, the barber of Laconia, N. H., who has defeated veteran mushers, fur trappers and mail drivers of the Northland; Norman Vaughan, E. Goodale and Fred Crockett, "the three Musketeers of the South pole"; and many others.

Nor is sled dog racing a sport in which only men compete. Although Seppala, if successful in the trials, will represent his adopted country rather than his native land, Norway will probably be represented by a former American, the outstanding woman dog driver of the East. She is Mrs. Kaare Nansen, who before her marriage to the son of the famous Norwegian explorer, was Mrs. E. P. Ricker, Jr., a formidable competitor to the men in many an exciting dog race. And a competitor from the West may be Miss Lydia ("Whistlin' Lyd") Hutchinson whose fame is intimately associated with the fame of the annual American Dog derby at Ashton, Idaho.

What horse racing is to the people of the more moderate climates in North America, sled dog racing is to the people of the north where the snows are deep, the winds bite cold and the ice-bound trails defy man and his principal beast of burden, the sled dog, to conquer them. Part timber wolf, part Labrador husky, the fierce snarling mauler makes his place in history during the Klondike gold rush a third of a century ago. But their usefulness as no means ended with the end of the gold rush. Today in the land which lies "north of 53," day in and day out these dogs haul provisions, medicines, freight and supplies. They are an essential part of the fur trade for with their help the trappers patrol their 200-mile trap lines and bring back to civilization the furs which fashion delectable mink coats.

The sport of sled dog racing is comparatively new but it has grown in favor and in extent more than most people realize. It began back in 1908 when the first of these picturesque sporting events was held over the 400-mile wilderness trail in Alaska from Nome to Chukchi creek and back. "Man's best friend" had made it possible for the golden riches of Alaska to be obtained, so the first Alaskan soursough race was dedicated to the huskies. The plan was originated by a Nome lawyer, Albert Fink, a dog lover and experienced soursough musher. Assisted by a company of friends he raised a fund of $10,000 to be awarded to the winners and they spread the word of "race of the century" throughout the northland. The result was that Nome was packed with spectators and a long string of famous dogs and experienced mushers ready for the race. It was won by John Hegness, who ran the 408 miles across the bleak wilderness and back, after a steady grind, night and day, in 110 hours and 15 minutes—and most of the way he had to fight one of the most severe Arctic blizzards known in the history of Alaska.

Entered in the second race was a youthful hardware clerk whose name was destined, in later years, to occupy a romantic place in the annals of the northland. Scotty Allen, in odd hours at the store, had managed to assemble a team of dogs of doubtful value as racers. His entry was regarded as a joke; he was asked how he had got up the nerve to list them—but Scotty won the 1900 classic. In 1910 he was defeated by "Iron Man" John Johnson, who established a record never duplicated over that 408 miles, thanks to an exceptional team, his rare skill and a good break in weather. Johnson's time was 74 hours and 14 minutes, the fastest ever made in dog racing in the north.

But Scotty Allen was not discouraged. Back he came for another trial in 1911, and cut two hours off his previous record. He is the only man who ran in more than four All-Alaskan Sweepstakes—the first, second, third and eighth and final—and he won the distinction of always finishing a race, irrespective of weather or condition of his dogs. In 1915 Scotty took 440 Alaskan dogs to France; for distinguished service he was decorated by the French government with the Croix de Guerre.

The same world conflict that claimed Allen drew the other men of Alaska—and the ranks of the racers became so depleted that it was impossible to hold the big race. Thus the 1916 event became the last. During that winter a company of soursoughs met in Le Pas, Man. Dog race talk was revived. It was suggested that Le Pas hold one and the date was set for late that winter, over a 180-mile course from Le Pas to Flin Flon, mushroom mining town, and back.

Few preparations were made; the drivers used ordinary dogs; they themselves were unskilled in the art of racing, and a bitter struggle followed across that trackless snowy waste in quest of the $600 prize and the title of champion. But it turned out to be a singularly exciting race. The winner had an accident that stayed in two ribs but he hung on until the finish. From that day to this Le Pas has staged each winter one of the most thrilling races and has developed some of the finest men and teams in the game, most famous of whom is their own boy, St. Godard.

Since that time the growth of the dog derby idea has been rapid until now such races are held in different parts of the United States, Canada and Alaska. Outstanding among them, besides the one at Le Pas already mentioned, are the annual races at Poland Spring, Maine; Laconia, N. H.; Ashton, Idaho; Prince Albert, Saskatchewan; Quebec, and Fairbanks, Alaska. The American Dog derby at Ashton, Idaho, is run each year on Washington's birthday over a 25-mile course, and attracts a large crowd of spectators from all over the Northwest.

Perhaps the best known of all the dog races is the Eastern International Dog derby held at Quebec during the third week in February each year where "world championships" are awarded the winners. There assemble the winners of the other contests, to race over a course of about 120 miles, run in heats of 40 miles a day.

Quebec attracts the best drivers and teams from all parts of America, and rivalry runs high during the three days, attaining a fever heat on the last day of the race. The winner of the world's championship in the first international was Arthur T. Walden, of New Hampshire, experienced Alaskan soursough musher, who started trailing dogs across the frozen wilderness back in 1906, during the gold rush, and who was dogmaster with Commander Byrd in the Antarctic.

In 1923 the international was won by a French Canadian, Jean Lebel, of Quebec, much to the elation of the Canadians. Earl Brydges, of Le Pas, took the next championship, and into the arena of the 1925 derby stepped young Emile St. Godard, still in his teens to begin his unparalleled record in dog racing. He is now the only man who has won three championships. Frank Dupuis won the 1926 race over St. Godard by a margin so narrow as to make the race one of the most thrilling, and to establish a new time on the trail. St. Godard won the 1925, 1927 and 1928 races. In 1929 Leonard Seppala entered with a string of seven wonderful dogs. This was the third year he had made a determined bid to win the world's championship, and from start to finish, Seppala ran one of the most spectacular races ever seen at Quebec—or anywhere else. Not only did he defeat St. Godard by about an hour, but he broke St. Godard's own world's record, and again put the Americans into the game. Dupuis took second honors and St. Godard came trailing in third. In the opinion of the judges, Seppala's Siberians completed the 123-mile grided fresher than any racers they had ever seen; and they were awarded the condition prize, something unusual in the annals of dog races. Usually this award goes to some driver who trails in later and who has saved his dogs in the mad dash over the snow.

It is such drivers and such dogs as these who will compete in the Olympic contests at Lake Placid within the next few weeks. The sled dogs are trained for their life work just as soon as they are able to walk; they are tied up and soon acquire the habit of pulling. At about sixty days of age they are given over to the care of boys, who harness them to small sleds or wagons. The dogs appear to be willing to do this play-acting in the harness, and seem to enjoy the pastime.

Any number of dogs may be used in a team, although 12 is the limit.

Gaelic Sign Too Attractive
Merchants of Dingwall, Scotland, decided that during the annual Mod week last year they would make a hit with visitors by having all signs over their stores in Gaelic. One non-Gaelic business man got a neighbor to write an advertisement of the excellent quality of his wares. When a crowd stormed the place the merchant learned that his sign advertised that any customer coming into the store at a certain time would get "three free drinks." And down came the sign in record time.

A Correction

An error crept into our last issue, the same being in the article concerning the Carrizozo Transfer & Storage Company, and where the innocent error sprung was in mentioning the name of the oil product. Instead of giving the name of the Continental Oil Company, it appeared as the Standard Oil Company.

We gladly correct the error, as Vincent Reil of the City Garage is the agent for the Standard Oil Co. Nevertheless, the correction of the error gives both firms special double mention which will do neither of them harm. If this statement is satisfactory to both agents we bow our thanks and sign off.

Home Economics Department, Corona High

These are some of the activities that members of our Home Economics classes and Club have been carrying on this year. We took part in the County Fair, taking an exhibit of posters and illustrative materials on health, styles, sewing and types of breakfast, which represent the different phases of our work in the department.

We redecorated the Home Economics department. First we calcimined the walls, then enameled the furniture, relaid the linoleum and varnished it. We sponsored an art exhibit showing over one hundred and fifty copies of old masterpieces, using the proceeds to buy pictures for our High School building.

The Home Economics girls gave two dinners in December, one for the members of our local school board, their wives and the school faculty. Another was given near Christmas for the parents of the Home Economics girls. We constructed a fine "brick" fire place and used Christmas colors and decorations.

The two Home Economics classes made cloth animals and dolls for their little brothers and sisters. They also made costumes for an Operetta given by the grade children.

The Home Economics Club initiated the Freshman girls making a total of twenty-six. We have had educational and social meetings. Perhaps the most interesting activity was our Kid Party. All the girls were dressed like little girls. Santa Claus came bringing a sack full of toys and candy, there was a gift for every girl. Little folks games were played and refreshments served. Everyone enjoyed being a little girl again.

We are planning to earn money and buy pictures for the new High School building. We have had several helpful and interesting home projects this year, such as "Caring for my own clothes," which gave the girls pride in their appearance, and teaches them to sew and darn; Getting the evening meal," in which the girls learned much about cooking and helping at home; "Redecorating my bedroom," where the girls were given experience in calcimining, painting, varnishing, sewing, color schemes, arrangement of furniture and selection of pictures suitable for a bedroom.

Now, the Home Economics II girls are planning to serve hot meals to the school children during the cold weather.

On January 21st, dedication of the new High School building will be held. We will be honored in having with us Mrs. Lusk, State School Superintendent; Mrs. Cos, State High School Inspector; Mrs. Corrigan, Rural School Inspector, and members of the County Board. At this time the Home Economics girls will serve the guests at a six o'clock dinner.

Plans have been made to organize an adult class in Home Economics.

One hundred and four in Sunday School last Sunday. Mrs. Spencer's class, with twenty-seven present, took the banner for attendance. There is a close race between this class and the class of boys taught by Tennis Bigelow. Each has had the banner several times. Now watch those boys. The question now is, if these two classes take all the room in the building, where are the rest of us going?

Regular services next Sunday morning. The sermon subject is "Man." This follows the subject of last Sunday evening, which was "God." The religious man says that we should seek after God; the philosopher says: "The proper study of mankind is man," both are right; Another philosopher says: "Know thyself." The poet sings of the little flower in the crannied wall and declares that if he could know that little flower "root and all" he would know what God and man is. He is right, too. Come, and let us reason these things out together.

And don't forget the Young People's service Sunday night. See announcement elsewhere in this paper.
