

CORONA GLEANINGS

Mrs. R. R. Green and daughter, Jane McFadden, are visiting Mrs. Green's mother and other relatives and friends in Tulsa, Oklahoma. They will be away about three weeks.

Mrs. Bob Fuhrman returned last week from Alamogordo, where she had been visiting her nephew, Ed Kimmons, and family. She is spending the winter with her sister, Mrs. John Kimmons.

E. M. Brickley, of Carrizozo, and Otho Lowe and Clint Hester, of Mountainair, were in town a short while Sunday night. Mr. Hester visited his sister, Mrs. W. S. Dishman.

Miss Ethel Coffey, of Roswell, is here on an extended visit with her sister, Mrs. Chris Wyatt.

Mrs. Tom McCamant is spending a few days with Mrs. A. S. McCamant in Roswell.

Mrs. Alton Hillman has returned home after an absence of several weeks. She left her daughter, Vernon, in Roswell to recuperate from an appendicitis operation.

Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Torres announce the birth of a daughter, Pablita, January 24th.

Mrs. Anita Lucero died suddenly of heart failure Sunday afternoon. She is survived by her husband, a son, and infant daughter, and by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Luis Lopez, to whom we extend our sympathy.

The Corona High School boys have added two more victories to their long list, by defeating Capitán, 14-6, at Capitán, and Carrizozo, 17-7, at Carrizozo. The Carrizozo team will play a return game here Saturday night. Scott and his Cubs will play for the dance following the game.

Misses Lahalla Brown, Addie Perkins, Geneva Jenkins, Myrtle Ladd and Edna Atkinson spent Saturday in Carrizozo. In the afternoon they sang before a meeting of the County Teachers and remained for the ball game and dance that night.

The new High School building was formally dedicated Thursday night. Mrs. Georgia Lusk, principal speaker, was unable to be present, but sent a representative instead. Local speakers were L. S. Van Scoyoc, T. M. DuBois and Glenn Greer. Mr. Greer presented a set of books, the gift of the Beaver-Bond Post of the American Legion. Corona is very proud of the new structure, knowing that it compares favorably with any of the school buildings in the State.

The race track was muddy Tuesday, so that the horses did not have a fair chance to show their speed. The Wilson horse outran the Wyatt horse.

Bryce Ward was a Corona visitor Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Estes returned from Carrizozo Sunday. Mr. Estes was down for medical treatment.

Mrs. Lola Jones spent the week-end with her sisters, Mrs. Argenbright and Mrs. Estes. She was accompanied by her sons, Frankie and Elliott.

LOCAL MENTION

Carrizozo Lodge No. 41, A. F. & A. M., held its first communication of 1932 last Saturday night, and after the business session, E. M. Brickley of the First National Bank, gave an interesting address on the educational program. At the February communication, another member will be chosen to give an address on the same program.

Miss Ruth Brickley came over from Albuquerque Tuesday and is spending the week with the home folks. Several others of our Carrizozo students at the "U" will be here later for the week-end, all to return by the first of next week.

Mrs. Elizabeth Gumm entertained the Carrizozo Bridge Club last Saturday, and Mrs. F. J. Sager will entertain the club tomorrow afternoon.

Louis Adams is in Tucumcari this week, being called there, on account of four new crews being put on in the freight service of the S. P. Business is picking up on the road just now, and more men will be put to work as the spring season advances, according to those in position to know.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Fulmer and son, Bill, are spending a few days in El Paso.

L. B. Corn, Farrell Sutherland and Eddie Goodren were here from the ranch country southeast of Picocho Wednesday. Mr. Corn's ranch is situated in the Twin Butte Canyon, noted for its rich soil, where he raises some of the best stock in this part of the State. These gentlemen, having possessions in this county, were looking after taxes and attending to other business matters. Good snows in their locality have made the range in such fine condition, that Mr. Corn said in the 14 years of his residence in the Twin Butte Canyon, he had never seen the soil in such splendid condition.

Mesdames B. Nixon and A. N. Moore were here Wednesday from Oscura, under the guidance of Mayor L. A. Whitaker, who acted as chaperon and driver for the ladies on their trip, returning to the "oil city" in the afternoon.

TEACHERS MEETING

The Lincoln County Teachers' Association met in convention at Carrizozo January 22-23, 1932. The convention was without doubt, one of the most successful ever held in Lincoln county. The addresses were unusual in not only their practicality, but also in their educational and inspirational values. Much of the success of the convention was undoubtedly due to the untiring efforts of Mrs. Alice W. Boyd, retiring president, who secured many State speakers of note, including Dr. J. L. Zimmerman, President of State University; Dr. S. P. Nanninga, President of New Mexico State Teachers' Association; Dr. H. L. Kent, President of A. & M. College; Dr. O. A. Bowden, President of State Teachers' College; Dr. H. C. Gossard, President of N. M. Normal University; Mrs. Louise Coe, State High School Supervisor; Mrs. Georgia Lusk, State Superintendent of Public Instruction; Mrs. Grace Corrigan, State Rural School Supervisor; Mr. Paul Fickinger, Secretary of New Mexico Teachers' Association, and Mr. R. R. Larkin, New Mexico Normal University.

Miss Marie Brunk, County Health Nurse, gave several addresses especially practical, helpful, and of great value to the teachers of this county.

A special feature was the banquet served Friday evening by the Home Economics class under the direction of Miss Davis. Approximately sixty guests attended. Mrs. Blaney, in her usual able manner, presided as mistress of ceremonies, and many responses were made by State and local speakers. Musical numbers added to the pleasures of the evening.

Saturday noon a very delightful lunch was served in the Home Economics rooms by members of the Methodist Missionary Society.

The general convention sessions were well attended. The schools of the county contributed much to the success of the convention by furnishing appropriate music for the various sessions.

The following resolution of respect in memory of Miss Evelyn French were unanimously adopted:

French, and her brother, Miller French; be it resolved that we express to them our heartfelt sympathy; and that this resolution be spread on the minutes of the Lincoln County Teachers' Association, and that copies be sent to Mr. and Mrs. J. B. French, of Carrizozo, New Mexico; Mr. Miller French, of Juneau, Alaska, and to the editors of the Lincoln County papers.

They will then start the mines in operation as soon as the weather permits.

B. D. Holguin Wins Lyric Theatre Prize

The first drawing which won the $5.00 prize at the Lyric Theatre took place Tuesday night. The first name drawn after the tickets had been shuffled up, was so illegible that it had to be thrown out. The second fell to Deputy County Clerk Ernest Key, but he not being present, this ticket was of no effect. The third attempt was successful, and the ticket drawn revealed the name of B. D. Holguin, clerk to Readmaster J. B. Dinwiddie, and Mr. Walker handed the $5.00 over to the winner. The second drawing will take place next Tuesday night.

OUR BEDTIME STORY

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

PETER says that habits always make him think of burrs—they stick and are mighty hard to get rid of.

Now one of Peter Rabbit's habits is to run in circles, a perfectly harmless habit usually, and yet one which sometimes gets him into trouble.

At first he didn't know that they were his own, and started to follow them. Then, happening to look back at the footprints he had just made, he suddenly realized that they were exactly like the ones he was following.

"Huh!" he chuckled. "Here I am Chasing Myself."

Peter has always seen a joke, even if it is on himself. "Huh!" he chuckled. "Here I am chasing myself! I am afraid it would be a long, long chase to catch up. I guess I'll run over to the pond of Paddy the Beaver and see what I can find there. Hello!"

Peter sat up very straight and stared straight ahead at the tracks he had made earlier in the evening. His eyes were round with surprise, and then a troubled look crept over them.

What should he do? He didn't dare sit still and he didn't know where to go. It only he knew who it was!

before they joined his own he might learn something. Peter wasted no more time. He hurried along that back track straight to the brush pile. The tracks went all around it and in and out under it. Peter didn't like that a bit. He was beginning to get suspicious. Then he found where the tracks had first come to the brush pile from the direction of an old fallen log. He hurried over to this. The tracks were all around and over the log. Whoever had made them had peeped into every hole, no matter how small. Then Peter knew.

"It's Shadow the Weasel!" he cried with a frightened gasp. "No one but Shadow would look into every hole this way and run all around and in and out of the brush pile. It's Shadow the Weasel, and now he's after me! Oh, what shall I do?"

TURNING WHITE

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

HIS hair turned white in just one night. They say, and sigh with sympathy, "His hair grew gray in just one day!"—Well, he is better off than me. One night of trouble changed his hair; just look at mine, there's plenty there. Yes, white and gray they seem to run, but I got my hairs one by one.

One night of grief and like a leaf His hair was altered in its shade, One day of pain, of sorrow's rain, Yes, so it was the change was made. One night, and white or gray he grew. One joyless day, and he was through. He had a night he couldn't smile, But my white hair took quite a while.

See this one here? That took a year Of trouble when the times were bad. See that one there? I got that hair With months of worry that I had. If sympathetic you must be, Then why not sympathize with me? Some get them suddenly, but I'm Still getting mine—one at a time. (© 1932, Douglas Malloch.)—WNU Service.

That's the happy state of health and pep a man enjoys when he gives his vital organs a little stimulant! When your system is stagnant and you feel sluggish, headachy, half-sluggish—don't waste money on "tonics" or "regulators" or similar patent medicines. Stimulate the liver and bowels. Use a famous physician's prescription every drug store keeps. Just ask them for Dr. Caldwell's syrup.

This appetizing syrup is made from fresh laxative herbs, active senna, and pure pepsin. One dose will clear up almost any case of headache, biliousness, constipation. But if you want to keep in fine shape, feel fit the year 'round, take a spoonful of Dr. Caldwell's syrup every few days. You'll eat better, sleep better and feel better in every way. You will never need to take another laxative.

Give the children a little of this delicious syrup two or three times a week. A gentle, natural stimulant that makes them eat and keeps the bowels from clogging. And saves them from so many sick spells and colds.

Have a sound stomach, active liver and strong bowel muscles that expel every bit of waste and poison every day! Just keep a bottle of Dr. Caldwell's syrup pepsin on hand; take a stimulating spoonful every now and then. See if you don't feel new vigor in every way. Syrup pepsin isn't expensive.

Familiar With Economy of Every Other Kind

An irate citizen stormed the citadel quite the thing in Germany. Firms supply a trowsman for the bride, swallowtail outfit for the bridegroom and all other things necessary for the wedding, including a short honeymoon trip. All this is to be paid for on the installment plan after the couple return and settle down.—Pathfinder Magazine.

Mr. Shaw took the trouble to point out some of the weaknesses in the visitor's scheme, cited a number of points which made it utterly impracticable and finally remarked:

"Of course, we always appreciate public interest such as you have displayed, but I believe you will be a greater help to us if you would study a little political economy."

"Well," sighed the visitor, "I suppose I might as well; I've studied every other kind."

Harold's Mother Knew Answer

"Yes, sir, I am certainly proud of my little boy," says Mrs. H. M. Smith, 421 Topeka Ave., Topeka, Kansas. "He's five and weighs fifty-seven pounds. He's the picture of health as you can see, and I feel like he'll always be that way as long as I can get California Fig Syrup. I have used it with him ever since he was a year old. I knew what to give him for his colds and his feverish, upset spells because Mother used California Fig Syrup with all of us as children. I have used it freely with my boy and he loves it. It always fixes him up, quick."

In many homes, like this, the third and fourth generations are using pure, wholesome California Fig Syrup because it has never failed to do what is expected of it. Nothing so quickly and thoroughly purges a child's system of the souring waste which keeps him cross, feverish, headachy, bilious, half-sick, with coated tongue, bad breath and no appetite or energy as long as it is allowed to remain in the little stomach and bowels. Fig Syrup gives tone and strength to these organs so they continue to act as Nature intends them to do, and helps build up and strengthen weak, pale and underweight children. Over four million bottles used a year shows its popularity. The genuine, endorsed by physicians for 50 years, always bears the word "California."

News Review of Current Events the World Over

Congress Approving the President's Rehabilitation Program Step by Step—Oliver Wendell Holmes Resigns From the Supreme Court.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

ONLY eight senators out of 81 voting opposed the passage in the Senate of the administration's bill creating a reconstruction finance corporation that will extend $2,000,000,000 credit to banks, insurance companies, railroads, mortgage loan companies, farm credit and other associations. A similar measure was rushed rapidly through the house, and before the close of the week President Hoover had the satisfaction of signing the act embodying his most ambitious plan for the financial rehabilitation of the country.

Debate of the measure in the Senate was chiefly over proposed amendments, many of which were offered and few were chosen. The most important amendment adopted was proposed by Senator Ellison D. Smith of South Carolina. It added a new section to the bill authorizing an appropriation of $50,000,000 for use by the secretary of agriculture to extend loans to small farmers. It stipulated further that the $45,000,000 now remaining in the drought relief fund should be applied to such loans.

During the discussion there were frequent and fierce attacks on the banking interests, especially those of the "international" variety which are being accused of questionable methods and ethics in the flotation of foreign securities in the United States.

The eight men who refused to vote for the bill were all from the western states. They were Norris of Nebraska, Brookhart of Iowa, and Blaine of Wisconsin, all "progressive" Republicans, and Bratton of New Mexico, Bulow of South Dakota, Connally of Texas, McGill of Kansas, and Thomas of Oklahoma, all Democrats.

PROCEEDING with the economic program, the Senate put through the bill increasing the resources of the federal land banks by $125,000,000. Meanwhile subcommittees began hearings on the $150,000,000 home loan discount bill and the $750,000,000 depositors' relief bill.

The Senate finance committee continued the taking of testimony relating to the deals of our international bankers in foreign securities, and it was often most interesting. For instance, it was brought out that Secretary of State Stimson and Francis White, assistant secretary, took an active part in ironing out an alleged misunderstanding between the Colombian government and a syndicate headed by the National City company, which early in 1931 temporarily withheld a payment of $4,000,000 on a $20,000,000 credit arrangement. Also, Oliver C. Townsend, formerly commercial attache in Peru, said he was severely reprimanded for making a pessimistic report on the financial status of Peru when that country was trying to float a large loan in the United States.

NEARLY ninety-one years old and growing feeble physically, Oliver Wendell Holmes voluntarily brought to an end his service of thirty years as an associate justice of the Supreme Court of the United States. The venerable and beloved jurist sent his resignation to President Hoover, who reluctantly accepted it, writing: "I know of no American retiring from public service with such a sense of affection and devotion of the whole people." Only the day before Mr. Justice Holmes had rendered a decision with characteristic pithy phrasing, but his voice wavered and he had to be helped from the bench and into his automobile. So he penned his letter of resignation, closing: "The time has come, and I bow to the inevitable."

There were many suggestions for a successor to Justice Holmes, among them being: Newton D. Baker, Wilson's secretary of war; Curtis D. Wilbur, Coolidge secretary of the navy; William Dewitt Mitchell, Hoover's attorney general; John W. Davis, 1924 Democratic Presidential candidate; William S. Keyton, judge Eighth district United States circuit court; Robert Von Moschikaker, former chief justice of the Supreme court of Pennsylvania; Benjamin Nathan Cardozo, chief judge, Court of Appeals, New York, and Learned Hand, judge second district, United States circuit court. Middle westerners put forward also the name of James H. Wilkerson of Chicago, who about the same time was elevated by the President from the district court to the federal circuit court of appeals.

WHEN Gen. Charles G. Dawes informed the press that he would retire from the ambassadorship to Great Britain after the disarmament conference gets under way, he created a great furry among the minor politicians, some of whom assumed that he was putting himself in line for the Republican Presidential nomination if the opponents of Mr. Hoover could prevail. But the general put an end to such speculation in just such a statement as might be expected from him. In it he said: "I cherish for President Hoover the highest admiration and deepest affection. Any intimation to the effect that in any possible way or under any possible contingency he will not have my loyal and entire support is an insult to me."

"I find both parties and all the people standing behind a legislative program of reconstruction, which is a common-sense program. It is based upon an old-fashioned idea that our government should always raise the money to pay its expenditures and not borrow it."

"As for President Hoover, whatever may be temporary political reactions—and they are unimportant in such times—he has made a record in Presidential initiative and constructive accomplishment unparalleled in the economic history of this nation or of any other. He has done this without faltering and without discouragement."

SPEAKING of resignations, it may be recorded right here that James A. Farrell resigned the presidency of the United States Steel corporation, effective April 13. He has held the position since 1911 and would be retired automatically in February, 1933, but says he believes "the time has now arrived for my successor to be appointed in order to establish the management upon a more permanent foundation composed of younger men." Mr. Farrell will remain on the board of directors.

RETIREMENT of Dwight F. Davis from the position of governor general of the Philippine islands had been long expected, for Mrs. Davis is in ill health and cannot live in the tropics. President Hoover promptly sent to the Senate the name of Theodore Roosevelt, governor of Porto Rico, as the successor to Mr. Davis, and the selection, also no surprise, was generally commended. Colonel Roosevelt, son of the former President is forty-four years old and has made an excellent record as governor of Porto Rico, where he has been since 1923. He was assistant secretary of the navy from 1921 to 1924, in the latter year being the Republican candidate for governor of New York, but was defeated. His war service included participation in practically all the offensive operations of the A. E. F.

Roosevelt's successor in Porto Rico is likely to be James R. Beverly, attorney general and second ranking officer in the island government.

RETURNING to the doings of congress: The house ways and means committee began its hearings preliminary to drafting a bill for increase of taxes. Secretary Mellon of the treasury and Undersecretary Mills were called to explain their department program, which is designed to raise a billion dollars in revenue by boosting income rates all along the line and by levying taxes on many things the ordinary citizen enjoys—automobiles, tobacco, amusements, radio—as well as such conveniences as bank checks and telephone and telegraph messages.

The judiciary committee of the house had before it the resolution of Representative Wright Patman of Texas for impeachment of Secretary Mellon. The Texas set forth his charges of "high crimes and misdemeanors" based on Mr. Mellon's alleged connection with business in violation of law. The secretary was represented by Alexander W. Gregg, former solicitor of the internal revenue bureau.

POLITICAL scheming resulted in the upset of the French cabinet and conditions in Paris were described as chaotic. Premier Laval handed to President Doumer the resignations of all the ministers except himself, and tried hard to get the support of the radicals, offering the post of foreign minister to Edouard Herriot. That gentleman declined, stating that his party could not participate in the government until after the spring elections, and so Laval was left no course but resignation. Laval then formed another cabinet from which Briand was omitted. It was assumed that there would be no change in France's foreign policy at the reparations and disarmament conferences.

CHANCELLOR BRUENING, who recently declared Germany could no longer pay reparations, failed to get the support of the Nationalists and Fascists for his plan to have President Von Hindenburg's term extended by the reichstag, and is said to have threatened to resign. The chancellor sought to create an "iron front" in preparation for the reparations conference but could not do so. Bulgaria also has announced that it can pay no more reparations.

SECRETARY OF STATE STIMSON is at peace with Japan again and the incident of the assault on Consul C. B. Chamberlain by Japanese soldiers in Mukden is considered closed with the punishment of those who actually participated in the attack. Tokyo offered also to discipline Major General Niamylin, commander of the military police, and his subordinate officers, held responsible for the actions of the military police. Punishment of a major general in such cases is rare, and the secretary accepted the other punishments as sufficient and asked remission of the punishment of the general and his subordinates.

The neutral commission of investigation fathered by the League of Nations will leave Europe at the end of January for Manchuria, where it will be joined by Gen. Frank R. McCoy, the American member.

ATTORNEY General William D. Mitchell began a searching investigation into the enforcement of criminal laws in Hawaii, with especial reference to the recent killing of a native Hawaiian who had been accused of attacking the wife of a naval officer. Crime conditions in Honolulu are wretched, according to a report of the house naval committee, and some congressmen think it may be necessary to change the organic law of the territory to make the islands safe for white women.

Meanwhile the naval officer concerned, Lieut. Thomas H. Masnie; his mother-in-law, Mrs. Granville Fortescue, and two enlisted men are under charges of having murdered Joseph Kahahawai, one of the men alleged to have attacked Mrs. Masnie. The lieutenant indicated that he would be satisfied with a trial in the local court, and though there was opposition to this in navy circles in Washington, Secretary Adams decided that all the defendants should be turned over to the territorial authorities.

Gov. Lawrence Judd called a special session of the territorial legislature to consider Honolulu's crime situation.

LEADERS of the dry forces of the United States, aroused but by no means dismayed by the activities of the wets, held a big five-day conference in Washington to inaugurate what they declare will be a year of "the most intense activity since the adoption of the Eighteenth amendment." These big guns of the Anti-Saloon league and a large number of their adherents made and listened to red hot speeches and laid plans for the 1932 national campaign. They formulated unified action on the proposed reabmission of the dry amendment to the states, which the league opposes, and arranged for public meetings everywhere and the wide circulation of literature.

Most prominent among the speakers and planners in the convention were E. Scott McBride, general superintendent of the league; Bishop W. N. Ainsworth of Birmingham, Ala.; Gov. William H. Murray of Oklahoma; Senator Morris Sheppard of Texas, Patrick Callahan of Louisville and Ernest H. Cherrington, general secretary of the World League Against Alcoholism.

CHICAGO was the scene of a momentous gathering of railway union leaders and railway presidents, assembled to endeavor to reach a settlement of their mutual problems of wages and employment, ignoring the many complications in these problems. It may be said that in general the railroads propose a wage cut of 10 per cent, which they would like to have the unions accept voluntarily; and the workers put forward a program for stabilization of employment, lessening of unemployment and relief for the jobless.

CYPRUS IN HANDS OF MANY MASTERS

Island Has Seen Conquerors Come and Go.

If newspapers had been invented sixteen centuries before Christ, Cyprus would have made the front page as often as any other 3,850 square miles of territory on the face of the earth. The Old Testament refers to it as Chittim. Copper, which takes its name from the Greek appellation for the island, and timber, with which its now denuded mountain slopes once were covered, attracted Greeks and Phoenicians to Cyprus in the Iron Age. The island formed a bridge across which the Mycaean civilization communicated with Syria and Egypt. Assyrians, Egyptians and Persians successively dominated it between the Eighth and Sixth centuries before the Christian era. Alexander the Great won it. After his death it became again a valued possession of Egypt. Capt brought it under the aegis of Rome. Christianity used it in spreading to the West.

The Jews on Cyprus rose under Trajan and slaughtered 24,000 of its people. When Rome fell, Cyprus went to the Byzantine emperors. Arabs and Greeks battled for and successfully dominated it for two centuries. Comenus set up an independent sovereignty on it in 1184; but in 1191 Richard the Lionhearted ousted him and installed Guy de Lusignan as king, whose dynasty lasted for 300 years. Venice seized it in 1489 and held it for 80 years. Venice seized it in 1489 and held it for 80 years. The Turks conquered Cyprus in 1570, and possessed it until Great Britain seized it during the World War, although the island had been under Great Britain's suzerainty, with the sultan's sovereignty formally acknowledged, since 1578. An island with a history like that, whose soil has run so often red with its own and others' blood, ought to be familiar with implications of insurrection.

A queer mixture these Cypriotes. Anciently they carried the worship of Aphrodite, who rose from the seafoam to their shore, to a degree of genuinity that made the name Cyprian symbolic. That was a long time ago. The Paphian goddess has long since flown their groves; but the spirit of protest against subjection to things they do not like seems to have survived among them as strong as ever.—Detroit Free Press.

The Only Difference
There is this difference between great leaders and the average citizen: The average citizen doesn't know how to save the country, either, but he doesn't know it.—Los Angeles Times.

Skill is what we call it when one can prepare an omelet without scorching one side.

Developing Powers of: Observation in Child

Teach a child to be observant of everything around him, and you give him one of the soundest starts in life, for observations are very rarely wasted. The Japanese are a race who appreciate to the full the value of observation, and their babies are taught it unconsciously almost from their cradles. They learn it as a game. The Japanese mother will give her child a tray of objects to look at for a few minutes, then the tray is taken away and the child tells her all about its contents. It is quite a thrilling game when here are lots of things to remember, and children take to it very quickly.

To be able to observe swiftly and accurately will often help one very substantially in life. To take in one's surroundings quickly, and to be able to sum up characters fairly accurately, are two very useful assets and each derived to a certain extent from observation.

When there are decisions to be made, it is possibly the man or woman who has been taught to observe from childhood who stands the best chance of making happy ones.

When one is old he can get a kick out of annexing $10,000 and out of very little else.

LOOK OUT!

Counterfeit Aspirin!

THOUSANDS of boxes of counterfeit aspirin have been put on the market. Watch out. Take no chances and flatly refuse to accept any box not marked "Genuine Bayer Aspirin." Don't put any tablet not marked "Bayer" in your stomach. Tell your family and your friends of this. Refuse any preparation offered you as the "same" or "like" Genuine Bayer Aspirin.

It's common sense

WISDOM doctors all agree that your body needs Vitamins, it's common sense to see that you get them. Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil contains both Vitamins A and D in guaranteed potency. Vitamin A builds resistance to winter colds. Vitamin D aids growing children in the development of bones and teeth. This emulsion has no fishy flavor. Men and women find it a pleasing, palatable way of taking cod liver oil. Scott & Bowne, Bloomfield, N. J. Sales Representatives, Harold F. Ritchie & Co., Inc., New York.

"I've been CHASING YOU 12 miles....

to tell You You've Lost Your Oil"

Two cars raced along the highway east of Abilene, Texas. The second driver finally overtook the leader and signaled to stop. "I've been chasing you twelve miles to tell you you've lost your oil," he called to J. W. Bell. Mr. Bell found that a rock in the road had knocked a hole in the crankcase, allowing the Conoco Germ Processed Oil to drain out.

But examination of the motor showed no damage done. The "Hidden Quart" had protected the motor!

Only Conoco Germ Processed Oil offers the extra protection of the "Hidden Quart" that stays up in your motor and never drains away. Only Germ Processed Oil actually penetrates and combines with metal surfaces.

You need that extra protection during the starting period, when almost half your motor wear occurs. Oils not Germ Processed drain away, leaving parts unprotected. Germ Processed Oil stays on the job to cut down starting wear, giving your motor longer life, with fewer repair bills. It is the safest, surest lubrication you can buy.

Change to Germ Processed Oil now at the sign of the Conoco Red Triangle.

We neither encourage "dry crankcase" experiments nor guarantee success under all conditions. But unsolicited letters from motorists, now in our files, tell of this and hundreds of other runs with empty crankcases but without damage.

EDITORIAL COLUMN

Depression and Pessimism

E. W. Kemmerer, the famous Princeton University professor of economics, who has been called on by all the nations of the earth to offer a solution for the world sick money systems and it possible to give us some degree of hope, has the following to say, which is well worth the time to read, in the February issue of the Cosmopolitan: 'The world is almost saturated with the psychology of depression; it can't stand it indefinitely. The human organism demands contrast. Society can't continue indefinitely in the dumps. Chronic pessimism is doomed because the pessimists can't survive either physically or economically. Their places will be taken by the hopeful, the buoyant, the active. Pessimism in moderate quantities is often a useful antidote to extreme optimism, but in the long run, the world belongs to the optimists.'

'Someone asked the late Dwight Morrow when he thought the present world depression would be over and he replied, 'About two months before I hear anything about it.' There is a world of sense in this statement. The upturn will come before we know it. When prices once get a reasonable momentum on the upward move, the world will get the psychology of rising prices—which is: 'Buy today, because things will be dearer tomorrow.' 'Stocks of goods which were excessive when the public were waiting for lower prices suddenly become insufficient when prices move substantially upward. Then our hoarded money will move, our bank deposits will resume their normal rates of turnover, and the effective supply of money and of bank credit will become enormously increased. When our economic machinery again functions normally, we will find that there is no scarcity of gold, and then, in my judgment, commodity prices will move back to a level much nearer that of 1922-1929 than that of today.'

Playing Politics With the Fall Case

The El Paso Times had an editorial in last Wednesday's issue that expresses our sentiment a great deal better than we can ourselves. The editorial is as follows:

Action on A. B. Fall's application for parole "will be delayed as long as possible," according to a letter received from Senator Bronson Cutting of New Mexico, to Hugh Williams, chairman of the New Mexico state corporation commission. 'This accords with the opinion recently expressed by the Times. If Mr. Fall were anyone else, convicted of almost anything else, his application for parole would have been acted upon and either granted or denied.'

But the administration apparently does not want to be in the position of extending clemency to the former secretary of the Interior for fear the fact may be used for campaign ammunition. Neither does it desire the court-resentment of Fall's friends by an outright refusal of parole.

Therefore, nothing is done—except to wait interminably for the reports of investigators, detailed to bring in "additional facts" relative to Mr. Fall's conduct, treatment, etc., in the state prison at Santa Fe, where he is held a federal prisoner.

This is an act of cruelty to Mr. Fall and his family. The suspense is painful; even worse than a definite refusal to parole him would be — Alamogordo News.

Hee Haw!

The Pathfinder, a Washington magazine, some time ago offered prizes for party slogans. Three eminent Democratic Senators; Morris Sheppard, of Texas; Roy S. Copeland, of New York, and Clarence C. Dill, Washington, were asked to serve as a committee of award for the slogans entered for the Democratic party. There were near 100,000 offerings, and from them all the Senators selected this:

'Hee Haw! We're Coming Back!'

Without knowing what the other 99,999 were it will be conceded at once that the selection of this one was inevitable. It so precisely fits and reflects the Democratic attitude toward a political victory. As one reads this slogan he can see the well known jackass, with its head up, its long ears pitched forward and its heels flying as it races toward the crib—the crib where it is to feed its fill. No suggestion of public responsibility, no thought of obligation to the people. Nothing but the selfish gratification of an organized appetite.

'Hee Haw! We're Coming Back!'

A well chosen slogan, indeed. It expresses with complete and incontestable nicety the highest aspirations of the Democratic party.

These Good Old Days

A party of unemployed was employed by the British government to excavate the ruins of Pavaneey castle, a very long and interesting piece of work. While on the work they came upon a stone slab, and on raising it nearly toppled into an old dungeon. There were chains and bolts on the floor, and there were no windows. Prisoners were lowered 15 feet into this dismal hole, and there left in darkness.

Compensation

We compensate for the loss of any of our senses by developing special alertness and sensitivity in other senses. Dr. Morris Fishbein, the editor of Hygeia Magazine, points out in an editorial. Audiences of blind persons seem to be better informed concerning general literature than are audiences of college graduates, he observes. The sensitivity associated with the realization of the disability keeps the blind keyed to a high point of alertness.

Primitive Flutes and Darts

Archaeologists are wondering who played on a pair of flutes found in Gypsum cave, in Nevada. Students of primitive man say these flutes and small darts found with them, are the most important ethnological discoveries ever made in America. In the opinion of Mr. M. R. Harrington, curator of the Southwest museum, the flutes prove that human beings lived in America 20,000 years ago, and had developed even then a high standard of culture for those ancient days.—Montreal Family Herald.

Ladder Superstition

The origin of the superstition about walking under a ladder is not known. It probably arises from the fact that in very early times culprits were often hanged from ladders propped against buildings. Believers in the superstition say that bad luck will follow those who walk under a ladder, unless he makes a wish. In England the superstition has it that an unmarried woman who walks under a ladder will not be married for a year. To those believing this superstition it is also considered unlucky to walk on a ladder lying on the ground.

The Thunderstorm

During an electric storm recently, late at night, our little four-year-old daughter awoke and came into my room, and when snuggling down said, 'I don't like to hear the clouds talking to each other like that—they get angry.'—Chicago Tribune.

Immense Brass Brain

Figures Out the Tides

In a room of the United States Coast and Geodetic Survey building at Washington is a great machine which answers to the name "Great Brass Brain." Its function is to predict tides with the utmost exactness at any place in the world, or to tell the state of the tides at any moment in the past.

This robot is a marvel of wheels and pulleys. Tides rise and fall with mathematical exactness, but there are a large number of forces acting upon them, such as the moon, the motion of the earth, and many other things. The machine takes into account 87 of these factors in its mechanical calculations.

Its chief purpose is to help in setting time schedules for ship movements, but it is also useful to the historian.

For instance, the delay of the British expedition which landed at Charleston in 1776, which gave Paul Revere the chance to save the countryside, has been ascribed to their waiting for low tide. Brass Brain, however, showed that the tide was low when the British landed, so that they must have been waiting for something else, probably provisions.

Vast Water Resources

in Black Hills Region

One of the most productive water-bearing formations of the northern interior of the United States is what is known as the Dakota sandstone, which crops out about the flanks of the Black Hills in southwestern South Dakota. The formation extends eastward and northward to the borders of Iowa and Minnesota.

As the sandstone slopes away from the Black Hills, the water percolates northward and eastward through the porous rock and underneath a dense covering of thick clay shale.

Beneath the James river valley it is under considerable pressure, and where the surface altitude is not too great, strong artesian flows have been obtained. In fact, the artesian wells are among the greatest natural resources of that area.

However, so many wells have been driven, the supply shows signs of having been taxed about to the limit, and the force of many of the wells has fallen considerably below the original pressure.

Monarch Before His Birth

Sapor, king of Persia, probably holds the record for the earliest age at which a king has been crowned. He was crowned about two months before he was born. His father, the reigning king, died at that time, and an uncle, finding the throne vacant, organized a usurpation. The queen, anxious for the succession of her son, proclaimed a coronation ceremony and had her unborn child crowned in her own person. Such was the veneration of the people for the dynasty that the ceremony was effective in forestalling the uncle's usurpation. The child proved to be a boy and ruled as King Sapor.

Birthplace of Telephone

Among the many things for which Boston is famous is that it was the birthplace of the telephone. It was on the afternoon of June 2, 1876, that Prof. Alexander Graham Bell and his associate, Thomas A. Watson, were working in two garret rooms over the electrical shop of Charles Williams at 109 Court street, Boston, and there discovered the principle of the telephone. More than nine months later Professor Bell received from the United States on March 7, 1876, a patent No. 174,463, and thus established the existence of the Bell telephone. This has often been called the most valuable patent to mankind ever issued.

Under the Stone

"Passing through a village in western India," writes a lady missionary, "followed by a friendly crowd, we stopped at a small wayside altar, the god being represented by four flat stones decorated with red paint. We said, 'There is no god here. These are only stones.' 'Oh,' said a man, 'the god is underneath.' We promptly lifted one of the stones to discover beneath it three large, hibernating frogs, whereupon a great laugh went up from the crowd, in which we all joined."

Knew the Candy Man

A Baltimore policeman picked up a small girl crying lustily for "mamma." Other than that her name was "Marie" he could learn nothing about her. She was taken to police headquarters. Finally some one thought to ask her where she bought her candy when at home. She gave the name of a candy store owner without hesitation. The rest was easy. Her name was Marie Brier, aged four. She had strayed from her mother in a downtown store.—Capper's Weekly.

Consolation for Fat Folks

"Many people in middle age and beyond are the worst and most serious offenders in the fat of reducing. Nature intentionally, with most folks, adds weight with years. The layer of fat that becomes most noticeable over the stomach is furnished for additional warmth and protection to vital organs, and to compensate for the fact that with age the body generates less warmth. A little fat, at forty, is no sign of physical degeneration.—American Magazine.

Wife Did "Pretty Well" In his journal, James Boswell cites a conversation between a Mr. Markham and Doctor Johnson: Markham—"Had you a wife?" Johnson—"Yes, sir, I had that honor." Markham—"Was she a good wife?" Johnson—"Why, pretty well, as well as General Oglethorpe's." The general, who had been thirty years married, professed affection and was glorying in it.

Phonogram-Gramophone

The word "gramophone" is an invented one. When the new machine for recording and reproducing sound was invented, it was called a "phonogram," and later a phonograph. This machine had a round cylinder instead of the flat disc, and of course the inventor wanted to distinguish it from the phonogram or phonograph. "Hum!" he mused. "Now what can I call it? Then he had a bright idea; he remembered the backslang he had used when a boy, and twisted the word "phonogram" around until it was "gramophone."

St. Swithin's Wisdom

Among the achievements of St. Swithin was the creation of a kind of poor law to meet the needs of his time. This was an ordinance that every ten families should be responsible for keeping one poor person. There can be little doubt that each "union" of ten families saw to it that work was found as quickly as possible for their ward, and that he was taken off this eighth century dole at the earliest possible moment. Public opinion in every village in those days was less diluted with tenderness for the willfully idle than it is today.

"Christian" Still Progresses

In response to an urgent request from New Guinea, the Religious Tract Society published "Pilgrim's Progress" in Tubetube, one of the Papuan tongues. This is the one hundred and twenty-third language in which the society has printed Bunyan's classic.

Immortal Work of Art
"The Death of Socrates," painted in 1785 and exhibited in the Paris salon in 1787, is the work of Jacques-Louis David. It is one of the four paintings classed as the artist's masterpieces and shows the Greek philosopher about to drink poison in a well surrounded by his disciples. St. Joshua Reynolds, who saw the painting at Paris, described it as the greatest effort of art since the Sistine chapel and the Stanze of Raphael. In 1812 Napoleon tried to purchase it, but was not successful.

Extreme in Patience
Jatoham, a religion of India, so strongly stresses the doctrine of non-injury to all living things that a devout follower of the sect will not kill or even disturb the insects which he finds feeding on his body.

Historic English Mill
Yields to Father Time
The relentless hand of time, aided and abetted by the heavy gunfire of modern war, and strengthened by a little final push from the wind, has brought destruction upon one more landmark connected with the early history of the United States.
The old mill at Billericay in Essex, England, from near which the Pilgrims set sail for the new land, has collapsed. Its huge beams of solid oak, which stood the strain and stresses of time and work from the days of Pilgrims down to the outbreak of the World War, have at last found their burden too heavy, and as the foundations weakened, gave way during a storm.

Shakespeare's Zest in Life Shown in Writings
Shakespeare's enormous zest in life makes his earlier comedies a paradise of delight, writes Prof. Walter Raleigh, in My Magazine.

Electric Light Invention
It was a Northumbrian Englishman, Sir Joseph Wilson Swan, F. R. S., a native of Sunderland, who first invented electric light. More than 20 years before Thomas Alva Edison took out his patent, Swan had demonstrated in the presence of the great scientist, Michael Faraday, the possibility of illuminating the South Foreland lighthouse by electricity; and in 1852, lighting by carbon filaments was officially installed in the lighthouse at Dungeness. Swan left to his country and to the world three great bequests--electric lighting, artificial silk, and bromide printing.

Education
I consider a human soul without education like marble in the quarry, which shows: none of its inherent beauties until the skill of the polisher fetches out the colors, makes the surface shine and discovers every ornamental cloud, spot, and vein that runs through the body of it. Education, after the same manner, when it works upon a noble mind, draws out to view every latent virtue, and perfection, without which such helps are never able to make their appearance.--Addison.

Wash Hands to Get Cold
All workers in the factories where gold pins are made have their overalls washed on the premises, says Tit-Bits, the wash water being put in tanks to let the precious dust settle and be saved. The water in which the workers wash their hands is treated in a similar manner. At the end of the day the girls on the sifting and polishing machines have to comb and brush their hair for minute fragments of the metals.

Gayly Colored Moth
The tapestry moth is not so common in the United States as the case-making or the webbing clothes moth, and is larger than either of them, having a wing expanse of about three-fourths of an inch. It is more strikingly colored. The head and basal third of its forewings are black, while the outer two-thirds of the wings are creamy white, though more or less obscured on the middle with gray. The legs are uniformly pale gray.

Use for Rice Grass
A rice grass that appeared in Essex, England, about 60 years ago, is being used to reclaim land from the sea and also to guard sea walls. It is a rush-like growth that has the peculiar property of collecting mud; thus raising the shore level inch by inch and adding shore land that can be used for pasture or tillage. The grass is being exported to other countries where it will be employed for the same purposes.

SONG OF THE WEEK
I Apologize
If I told a lie, if I made you cry, when I said good-bye to you --
Reproduced by permission of the copyright owners.
STYLES in women's clothes are no more changeable than those in popular songs. One year it's the "Hoop-boop-pe-Boop" type and the next ballads.
Lately the slow melodious style of number, referred to by musicians as a "torch" song is all the rage. One of the biggest hits of this sort has been "I Surrender Dear" which I introduced some time ago.
"I Apologize" is along the same line of thought, and it was with the popularity of such songs as "I Surrender Dear" in mind that I have picked it as an outstanding number and one sure to be very successful. Written by Al Hoffman, Al Hoodhart, and Ed Nelson, it has a beautiful melody that is easy to remember and a lyric that is nicely written and intelligently handled.
Songs like this one are especially appealing in the fact that they bring a bit of freshness into the "boy and girl" situation, through the suggestion of a lover's quarrel. That coupled with the really outstanding melody of "I Apologize" tends me to pick it as my "Song of the Week."
Incidentally, when I sang it recently on one of my radio programs, I had more requests to repeat it than any number I have sung in some time.

La Salle, Magnificent Adventurer

La Salle

Building of the Griffin

La Salle at the Mouth of the Mississippi

Map of La Salle's Explorations

Count Frontenac

BY ELMO SCOTT WATSON

The time is February in the year 1682; the place is the Illinois river in what is now the state of that name; the actors in the epic drama which is now about to begin are some 18 Indians and 23 French soldiers and voyageurs. Not a very impressive company, it is true, but the leader of it is what makes it great. For this leader is Rene-Robert Cavalier, Sieur de La Salle, "magnificent adventurer" and one of the world's greatest explorers.

"La Salle . . . announced that they would take to their canoes. They lifted the light white birch barks from the sledges, and slipped them into the icy water. The baggage and rifles went aboard, piece by piece, then man after man, soldier and voyageur, and red hunter stepped gingerly to his place, sank to a kneeling position, and took up his long handled paddle. First one light canoe, then another, pushed off from shore and the black current bore them away.

"To right and left they saw dead banks frost-flecked and hard that rang under a blow, and leafless forests iron in their rigid desolation that rose despairingly toward an opaque gray sky. On the sixth of February, they emerged from the Illinois, and their feet slipped out upon the swelling current of the Mississippi. La Salle's dream came nearer. The mirage of that promised realization."

Thus began the historic voyage down the length of the "Father of Waters" which was to give to France control of the interior of North America, which was to open up the vista of the richness of a new empire before the greedy eyes of the white race, which was to enroll England and France in an almost unending war for the next three-quarters of a century and which was to result finally in the founding of a new nation greater than either. It is this voyage which has been characterized as "one of the greatest epics of all history."

To most Americans the name of La Salle is just another in a dimly-remembered list from their school book histories. But now, 250 years after the beginning and the end of his great achievement, his name is brought to their attention again through the publication of two biographies of him. One of them is "La Salle," written by I. V. Jacks and published by Charles Scribner's Sons (from which the foregoing quotation is taken) and the other is "The French Adventurer—The Life and Exploits of La Salle," written by M. Maurice Constantino-Weyer and published by the Macaulay company. Mr. Jacks is an American and M. Constantino-Weyer is a Frenchman. So it is interesting to read their two books together and get the two points of view on this great Frenchman whose name is written high in the annals of America.

Of the voyage down the river, Mr. Constantino-Weyer writes a vivid account—how "spring was breaking on every side. A sky of clouds rent by the wind was reflected in blue and white. The forest was powdered with tender green. Flowers were unfolding timid petals. The cries of migratory birds filled the immense valley. Mosquitoes swarmed. At night coyotes barked on the hillsides. In the mornings bison descended in friendly pairs to the giant drinking trough."

They passed the mouths of great rivers—the muddy Missouri, the quiet Ohio, ("La Belle Riviere") and the Arkansas. There were adventures with Indians, both pleasant and grim, for they met both friendly and hostile red men. There were innumerable new wonders of scenery which unfolded before their eyes and a variety of experiences such as few explorers had ever had. Just two months from the time they had floated out upon the broad bosom of the Mississippi, "all at once spray struck their faces. Tasting the water they found it already brackish. A great joy painfully welled up in their breasts; a thrill ran down their spines. And suddenly, sonorous under the shock of a thousand waves, immense and without a sail, there was the sea! April the seventh, 1682!"

Thus M. Constantino-Weyer. And now to turn to Mr. Jacks for the next scene: "The Frenchmen must have been glad to see the Gulf as Xenophon's hardy soldiers once were glad to see the blue of the Euxine. When at last, red as a great fire-ladged ruby, the sun had dropped to rest in the melancholy marshes and savannas to westward, and the night wind brought over the glitter of the phosphorescent sea the faint hunched vesper of breathing waters, the voyagers lay down beside their canoes, aware that they had won, in all probability, the greatest day of their tumultuous lives. It had been a long trail which he had followed since that far-off day when as a school-boy in Rouen, France, he had read of other explorers and adventurers and had thrilled to the tales of their exploits in the places which had previously been marked on the rude maps of the time "terra incognita." In those 23 years his life had been one of many hardships, of many high hopes, of many disappointments. But in his make-up was the tough fiber of steel which had carried him through all of this, the fiber that justified the title given him by an early American biographer—"The Undespaling Norman."

Educated for priesthood in the Jesuit order, La Salle soon found that the restrictions in his blood would never allow him to be happy in that role. The result was a journey in his early twenties to Canada where his brother was a priest in the Seminary of St. Sulpice. Through the influence of this brother, he received a grant of land near Montreal, a seignury which he named La Chine. This name was significant—already he was dreaming of finding the undiscovered northwest passage to China, the goal of many an explorer before him.

So when the Indians told him of a great southwestern river which flowed into the "Vermilion sea" his quick mind grasped this as the route of the long-sought passage to the Orient, and he determined to follow the river. So he sold his seignury to obtain funds for an expedition and in July, 1680, the first of his long wanderings through the interior of the North American continent began. That trip carried him up the St. Lawrence, along the south shore of Lake Ontario, among the villages of the Iroquois, on to Niagara, along the south shore of Lake Erie and then south through what is now the state of Ohio until he, in all probability, reached the Ohio river. But desertions among his followers forced La Salle to go back to Canada so his first expedition was something of a failure.

His resources were now exhausted but he found an unexpected friend in Count Frontenac, "The Iron Governor" of Canada, who gave him the exclusive trading privileges at Fort Frontenac (the modern Kingston) on the condition that he would rebuild the defenses and garrison the post. In the meantime Father Marquette and Louis Joliet had reached the Mississippi, "the Great Southwest river" and gone down it for a considerable distance, although they did not follow it to its mouth. So that honor still awaited La Salle.

However, he needed more capital, so in 1677 he made a trip to France with letters from Frontenac to the king and his ministers. In Paris La Salle found attentive listeners to his plans and when he returned to Canada in 1678 he brought with him a royal decree authorizing him to make discoveries and build forts in the interior of North America. He also brought back with him the man who was destined to be his chief lieutenant and greatest friend—Henri de Tont, an Italian, "the Man with the Iron Hand."

That winter La Salle and Tont were busy completing a fort at Niagara and building a ship. Before spring had come a vessel of about 45 tons, the largest yet built for service on the Great Lakes, was completed. On its prow was carved a griffin from the armorial bearings of La Salle's patron, Count Frontenac, and this ship won enduring fame under the name of the Griffin. (Incidentally, it was more "enduring" than La Salle could possibly have realized, for within the last year the timbers from a wrecked ship were found in Lake Huron and there is strong evidence to support the belief that these timbers were once a part of the Griffin—found after more than 250 years!)

La Salle sailed his vessel to Michilimackinac where he acquired a rich store of furs, then sailed on into Lake Michigan and finally dropped anchor in Green Bay where some more furs were obtained. Sending the Griffin back to Montreal, La Salle started south along the Wisconsin shore and reaching the mouth of the St. Joseph, he built Fort Miami. Then he struck across country to the upper Kankakee. From there he made his way down the Illinois to the present site of Peoria, Ill., where he built Fort Crevecoeur.

Leaving Tont in charge, La Salle started back to Canada. When he reached Niagara at Easter time in 1680 it was to find news of disaster. The Griffin with all of her rich cargo of furs had been lost. La Salle hurried on to Montreal and once more sought the aid of Frontenac. Again he was provided with the necessary equipment for carrying out his projects and within a few months he was again at Fort Frontenac and ready to join Tont at Crevecoeur. Just as he was ready to leave, however, there came the news that the garrison at the fort on the Illinois had mutinied and destroyed the post.

La Salle's one hope now was that the faithful Tont had held on and had saved something from the wreckage of his plans. But when he reached Crevecoeur, he found Tont gone to Green Bay and the place deserted. Undaunted by this climax to his misfortunes, the "Undespaling Norman" pushed on down the Illinois until he reached the Mississippi. But his party was too small to attempt an expedition down this great river. So La Salle once more retraced his weary steps northward. He spent the winter at Fort Miami, and in the spring he learned that Tont was at Michilimackinac and there he hastened to hear from his trusted lieutenant the long tale of disaster. Of this interview an eye-witness writes: "Anyone else would have thrown up his hands and abandoned the enterprise; but far from this, with a firmness and constancy that never had its equal, I saw him more resolved than ever to continue his work and push forward his discovery."

La Salle was now determined to continue with his plan for exploring the Mississippi. Returning once more to Fort Frontenac he replenished his supplies and in the autumn of 1681 he set out once more, with Tont, for the Illinois country. Then followed his journey down the Illinois river to the Mississippi and the beginning of the great journey which took place just 250 years ago.

Second Educational Series of Radio Lectures Started

Authorities on economics, psychology and other subjects have inaugurated the second series of "Listen and Learn" Lectures under the auspices of the National Advisory Council on Radio in Education, over coast-to-coast networks.

Dr. Robert M. Hutchins, president of the University of Chicago, started the spring series in January when he had representatives of the Council outlined the lecture courses to follow. The programs are heard every Saturday over NBC-WEAF facilities.

The series is scheduled for twenty weeks, closing with a valedictory program the last week in May.

Among the Speakers.
International trade, the tariff and industrial planning are economic subjects to be touched upon by speakers such as James Harvey Rogers of Yale, Ernest M. Patterson of Pennsylvania, F. W. Taussig of Harvard, George Henry Soule, Jr., editor of The New Republic, and Walton H. Hamilton of Yale.

Changes and growth in personalities, animal behavior and psychology in education are topics to be taken up by Fred A. Moss of George Washington University, Henry W. Nissen of Yale, Frank N. Freeman of Chicago, and others.

Public response to the initial ten lectures broadcast in the fall indicated, according to the Council, that they reached listening groups in the home, school, special neighborhood gatherings and even fishermen of Nova Scotia.

PATRIOTIC SONGS

The songs that thrill Americans, patriotic selections written by inspired composers, will be played in the February National 4-H club program of the National Farm and Home Hour by the United States Marine Band.

The concert will be another program in the series by the Marine Band on "Learning to Know America's Music."

Beginning with "The Star-Spangled Banner," the renditions will swing through "America," and the lively strains of "Dixie." These will be followed with "Yankee Doodle," "America the Beautiful," "Columbia, the Gem of the Ocean," "Hail Columbia," and a more recent song written when the United States Army was moving to the European battle front, "Over There."

The programs are designed to acquaint and familiarize the 500,000 4-H club members of the United States with the music which is typical of America.

Each month an additional concert will be provided by the Marine Band. On March 5 America's hymns and religious songs will be featured. The programs are broadcast over a coast-to-coast network.

The series, which promises to be one of the most entertaining features of the National Farm and Home Hour during the winter months, will contain much basic forestry information of interest to both town and country listeners.

Carveth Wells, adventurer, explorer and lecturer, who starts a new series of programs over an NBC network next month under the title "Conoco Adventurers," says that if all the hogs in Texas were rolled into one hog, they, or it, could root out a Panama Canal with ease and dispatch.

In presenting Organ Melodies, Irma Glen has the three-fold job of speaking the verse while she plays the organ with feet and hands, and watches the music, prose, and stop watch.

Harvey Hays, well known to radio listeners for his interpretations of outdoor roles, will play the part of the forest ranger. Wise in the ways of forest uses and protection through long experience in the fields, the character will often find himself in amusing situations with his sub assistant whose eagerness sometimes overwhelms his better judgment.

Alfred Corn, who plays the part of Samson in "The Goldbergs" NBC daily feature, is nearing his sixtieth birthday, and is a student in high standing at the Art Students' League.

A CANDLE IN THE WILDERNESS

A Tale of the Beginning of New England
by IRVING BACHELLER

At dusk they camped in a small thicket at the bottom of a deep dingle down near the lake level. Snow fell in the night sitting through the tree-tops. Amos, looking out in the morning, saw an inch or more of snow on the dingle sides.

"Hell's griddles!" he exclaimed. "We'll stay right here till that snow melts or wait till dark."

He had gathered leeks and dug some roots which he called wild potatoes. He filled a can with snow and held it between his legs while they ate. In that manner they were able to appease their thirst with the melted snow.

"Boy, you're lookin' more like yourself," said Amos. "You've been griddled sorrowful and you groan in your sleep. Hold up yer heart. The Lord is with us or we'd never 'a' got this far. I'm goin' to tell ye that story o' John Smith's fight with the Turk in the siege o' Regall. It'll do ye good."

He listened a moment, peering out of the bushes. Then, having bitten off a chunk of tobacco, he lay down at Robert's side and in a voice just above a whisper began:

"We enlisted for the war in Pannonia under Henry Volda, the earl o' Meldritch, who was fightin' the Turks. It was in the siege o' Regall that Smith had his first big adventure. That city was a hard nut to crack. We endured a terrible gallin'."

"One day we heard a distant trumpet and see a party sallyin' toward us under a flag o' truce. It bore a message sayin' that many believed we would make no assault but would soon show them our heels. Would we, their Lord Turplishaw hankered to know, oblige them with a sight afore we in?"

Many ladies was in and near the camp. They was crazy to see a fight. He begged that we choose one o' our captains to fight one o' theirs, each for the other's head. Our general agreed. Our captain was eager for the fight. They had suffered a month o' tauntin' from the enemy. They drew lots for the chance o' cuttin' off a Turk's head. The honor fell to my friend John Smith. So at the time set the troops are lined on three sides. The other side is a wall. All along the top o' it the Turkish officers and their ladies are sittin' like a row o' pigeons on a fence.

"The Turk come in first. In full armor, with long lance, on a beautiful white horse that leaped and caracoled to the sound of the hautboys. On the Turk's shoulders was a pair o' eagle's wings bordered with silver. There was shin ornaments on his corselet."

"The trumpets played. Smith entered in plain armor. They stood a second, lances poised, waitin' for the word. They charged at a swift gallop."

Amos paused. His quick ear had caught a disturbing sound. He arose and peered through the bushes. "The devil and his dogs!" he whispered. "We're ambushed."

The young man arose and drew his sword. "Put that away," Amos commanded. "They'd eat us up in a fight. Just take a look."

Robert peered over the shoulder of his friend. Around the top of the dingle a ring of savages surrounded them, each sitting on his heels like a greyhound, motionless and silent as the Sphinx of Egypt, looking toward them.

Amos took two small acorns from a pocket in his doublet. He handed one to his comrade and whispered: "Put that under yer tongue. It's loaded. If it comes to torture crack the shell in yer teeth. In less'n a minute ye'll be out o' hell and on er way to heaven. Don't resist, whatever they do, unless I say fight."

They put the acorns in their mouths. Amos stepped out of the bushes, took off his hat and bowed, saying: "Ho! hoo! hoo!"

The savages arose and ran toward them from all sides.

They were Algonquins who came around the white men chattering in low guttural tones. They were on the warpath in the enemy's country and their love of noise was therefore under restraint. There were thirty-three in the band, with shiny greased hair and bodies. Their faces were grotesquely painted. Some had a curious, hobgoblin look with bands of black and red paint crossing their cheeks and foreheads. Some were tattooed with crude designs of the snake and the eagle. A few had hair only on one side of their heads. All were beardless and low-browed with small, black, glistening eyes put to no nobler use than those of a rat—the finding of food and enemies.

They were naked save for skins hanging from a girdle above the hips and falling about half way to the knees. Bows and quivers filled with arrows hung on their backs. Each carried a long curving shield hewn out of cedar wood.

Amos knew many words of their language. He told them that Tesso-hat, their great, one-eyed chief, was his friend. A savage made them to understand that Tesso-hat was dead.

Amos told them as best he could, with the help of many gestures, of their journey through the wilderness and of a great band of Iroquois not ten leagues away in the south. Its numbers were indicated by broken sticks. He made it clear to them that the French and Dutch would give much wampum and many skins as a ransom for himself and comrade.

The chief of the band was a shapely young Indian, taller than the others. He touched his breast and pointed northward and said "Kebec." Amos nodded his approval and, turning to his friend said:

"They will take us to the French unless they dream that we ought to be killed. We'll give up our weapons and trust to luck."

Amos gave up his knife and gun and saw and hatchet, Robert his sword and pistol. The savages sat down around them with grunts and o's of delight as they examined these treasures. Suddenly a young redskin came running with a word that seemed to carry good news. Robert writes in his diary that it sounded like "Gendequano!"

The band got to its feet. Long lashes of strong hide were noosed around a log of each captive and tightly drawn and fastened just below the knee. They were led to the great lake, the surface of which was covered by a thick fog. Canoes were quickly and silently hauled out of a thicket of evergreens and pushed into the water. There were six of them, the largest about five fathoms long. Robert and Amos were shipped with the chief, between the paddlers, of whom there were four in each of the larger craft. The fleet left the shore, the paddlers resting on their knees, and the boats were soon lined, some twenty feet apart, in deep water.

It amazed the young Englishman to observe how silently and powerfully they sped through the still water. All that day and through the night that followed it, with never a pause for food or a word spoken, they kept their pace. At rare intervals a paddler would stop and pick up a wooden cup, fill it at the side, toss its contents into a wide mouth, lay it down, take up the paddle and continue his work. The next day they came out of the mist into narrow water.

By and by the great river of the north lay before them, a mighty, moving caravan of waters a full falcon-shot in width under a cloudy sky. It was one of the arteries of the pulsing heart of the wilderness somewhere in the remote and mysterious inland. Without a pause or a word spoken they sheered northeastward on the river plane roughened, here and there, by whirls and ripples. There was something admirable in the patient, Spartan-like devotion of these red men to their task. Here they began to chatter, and hearing the far shore, they greeted it with loud ho's of satisfaction.

Amos and Robert were so stiffened by the long sit that, for a little time, they endured great pain in their efforts to stand. The savages, broken to all hardship on land and water, were much amused by their discomfort and greeted it with loud laughter. They made a fire and took from one of the canoes a pot of greasy bear's tallow and set it to boil. As the heat began to stir this revolting mass, lead mold, small twigs, hairs and pine needles were playing about on the surface of the boiling fat.

Robert wrote in his diary: "This repast was a torment. As a punishment it was as successful as the journey. I found some relief in them. I have thought so much of my discomfort that I had no time to think of troubles. It shocked me a little to see the savages, after they had cooled the pot in water, paw around in it with their unwashed hands and long, clawlike, dirty finger nails. Why should I care for my own refined feeling in the matter? They ate like swine. So did I. One thing they did which I could not do. They wiped their greasy hands in their hair and on their naked skin. Amos tells me that they keep their hair and bodies greased for two reasons: it helps them to slip through the bushes, also fleas and mosquitoes and flea find their skin a less agreeable feeding place.

"I wonder how a pair of Puritans will make out with the French. My mother, who died when I was a lad of ten, was a French lady of the distinguished Brebeuf family. One of them—a priest—is said to be in Canada. Fortunately I have well-known friends in France and am able to speak the language, and neither Amos nor I fear quarrelsomeness. We must do our best to make a good impression at Kebec if they take us there."

They had not long to wait. They came next day to the range of lofty cliffs crowned with a fortification, ramparted with logs, above which a French flag was flying. Down by the shore there were a number of one-story warehouses, built of logs chinked with moss. Among the savages they took the zigzag path leading upward. An officer in a plumed hat stopped them. In good French Robert told him of their plight. Taking them, to be Frenchmen, unarmed and harmless, the officer said:

"I will go with you to Father Le-Joune."

They found the kindly Father in the chapel—a structure built of planks and mud and thatched with meadow grass. It stood on a low plateau in a palisaded inclosure. The savages waited outside the palisade while the white men entered with the officer. The chapel's altar was decorated with images of Loyola, Xavier and the dove. It was called Notre Dame des Anges. Robert knelt in prayer before the altar. Father Le-Joune, superior of the residence, entered. He wore a close black cassock. A rosary hung from his belt, a wide black hat, looped at the sides, was in his hand. Robert arose and bowed.

"Whence came you?" the Father asked.

"From Boston far in the south," Robert answered.

"What seek you here?"
"The mercy of God."
"Are you not English, and our enemies?"

"We are English but not your enemies. We know of your devotion to the will of our common Master. It has won our admiration. I am not worthy to kiss your feet, but I love you for the spirit of sacrifice that has brought you to the wilderness and which keeps you here. My mother was a French lady and a Catholic. Only the cruel folly of misguided rulers turned my father from the ancient church."

"The sword and the strong hand as a means of conversion will ever be a failure," the Father answered gravely as he shook his head. "Meanwhile I have a letter which, I think, relates to you. A Dutch trader brought it from the far south to the great river and sent it to me by an Algonquin chief. It came to my hand less than a week ago."

Exactness Carried to Extremes by Japanese

The Japanese people are great imitators. A certain Frenchman, visiting in Japan, had his dress suit ruined by a mishap on the part of a waiter at a diner. What was to be done? They advised the European to order another dress suit from a Japanese tailor, giving the suit that had been ruined as a model.

"Your suit will be exactly reproduced," they told him. "You will not even have to try it on."

At the end of some days the Japanese tailor brought the finished work.

"This grease stain has given me a great deal of trouble to reproduce," said he, "and that is why I must charge you a price higher than what I usually ask."

There the stain was on the new suit, exactly like the original stain on the ruined suit.—Pathfinder Magazine.

Indians Fear Lightning

No Navajo Indian will ever make a campfire of wood from a tree that has been struck by lightning or that he thinks may have been. If such a fire is made by the irreverent white man, the Indian will retire to a distance, where he can neither feel the heat nor smell the smoke, and will go to sleep in his blanket, fireless and supple, rather than eat of food prepared on that kind of tree. The Navajo believes that if he comes within the influence of the flame he will absorb some of the essence of the lightning which will sooner or later kill him. In the mountains of the Navajo country more than half the great pines are scarred by lightning, but no wood from them is used.

Witty Rajolader

The story is told of the then prince of Wales, afterward King William IV, that in bantering with the secretary of the admiralty the prince said: "When I am king, you shall not be the secretary of the admiralty!" "God save the king!" answered the secretary.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Lesson for January 31

JESUS FEEDS THE MULTITUDE

LESSON TEXT—John 6:1-14: 32-37; 48-51.

GOLDEN TEXT—And Jesus said unto them, I am the bread of life; he that cometh to me shall never hunger; and he that believeth on me shall never thirst.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus Feeds a Hungry Crowd.

JUNIOR TOPIC—What Jesus Did With a Boy's Lunch.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—The Sympathy of Jesus With Human Need.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Jesus the Bread of Life.

1. Jesus' Compassion on the Multitude (vv. 1-5a, cf. Matt. 14:14).

The sight of a crowd always excited the Lord's sympathy. He knew that they were as shepherdless sheep (Mark 6:34). Besides, they were so ignorant that they had no appreciation of him. Added to this was their physical hunger. This condition aroused the Saviour's pity. How true this is of the multitude today! The crowd surges about us as shepherdless sheep, having no one to care for them. Yet down deep in their hearts is a hunger for God and the truth.

11. Jesus' Conference With the Disciples Touching the People's Need (vv. 5b-9).

The inquiry of Philip was not for the Lord's benefit, for he knew what he would do (v. 6). His object was:

1. To teach them their sense of obligation to the multitude. We all need to be taught the wonderful truth that God has made man his partner in the salvation of the world. We are workers together with God (II Cor. 6:1). It is the very highest privilege as well as a most solemn obligation, to cooperate with God in saving the millions who are groping in darkness.

2. To teach them their helplessness in the face of such great need and responsibility. The loaves and fishes which the lad had provided for his lunch were as nothing in the presence of five thousand men besides women and children. Well might Andrew exclaim: "What are these among so many?" It is a good thing to realize our true need that we may be driven to Christ who is able to supply them.

3. To teach them that their sufficiency is from the Lord. Without him we can do nothing (John 15:5). Christians can no more carry on the Lord's work of themselves than the branch can bear fruit without the vine. The vine supplies the life and strength for the production of fruit. Philip's arithmetic was of no use in the face of such need. He had to fall back upon the Lord Jesus who has all power.

111. Jesus' Method of Feeding the Five Thousand (vv. 10-13).

He paused to give thanks for the scant supply, thus teaching us that we should always bring our abilities and gifts to him that he might bless them to his use.

1. The Lord's part was to bless and break the bread, even to create the needed supply (v. 11). The disciples could not perform this part. The same kind of bread was provided for all, rich and poor, young and old.

2. The disciples' part was to distribute that which he had blessed and consecrated (v. 11). This is true of the Christian worker today. We are not responsible for the supply but are responsible for its distribution to all those who are hungry and perishing for the bread of life.

3. The people's part was to sit down and eat (v. 10). They had no part in the provision, neither in its distribution, but only to take from the hands of the disciples and eat that which the Lord had provided. This is exactly our situation. The people are responsible for taking and eating of the bread of life; that is, faith and obedience are required of them.

4. The superabundance of God's grace (v. 13). When all had eaten to the full, much was left. This shows that the gospel is ample for the salvation of the world.

IV. The Effect of This Miracle (v. 14).

They recognized him at once as the prophet who should come. They believed him for his works' sake.

V. Jesus, the Bread of Life (vv. 32-37, 48-51).

1. Christ is to the soul what bread is to the body.

2. How to obtain this bread. It is by coming to Christ and believing on him.

3. The blessed issue of taking this bread:

a. The one who eats this bread shall never hunger or thirst.

b. He shall never die. The one who eats the bread of heaven, that is, the one who receives Jesus Christ, has eternal life.

The Girl and the Statue.—A beautiful statue stood in the market place of an Italian city. It represented a Grecian maiden of beautiful face, graceful form, and noble expression. One day a ragged, unkempt slovenly girl came face to face with the statue. She gazed at it in wonder and admiration. She seemed entranced by it. It stirred long dormant instincts within her. She said to herself, "I may be like that, something within tells me so."

Moved by this new impulse, she went home and washed her face and combed her hair. Next day she went and gazed at the statue again, and received another inspiration, and she went home and washed and mended her tattered clothing. And thereafter she went every day to the market place and gazed at the statue of the Grecian maiden.

Day by day she changed. She straightened up her shoulders, her spine lost its curve, her form grew more and more graceful, her face became refined and radiant, till by and by she did indeed become like the statue of the Grecian maiden.

Thus do our ideals transform our lives. And if we will take time every day to look upon the character of Jesus, we shall find ourselves imitating him, assimilating his character, becoming more and more like him. Even so it is written in the Book: "We all with unveiled face beholding as in a mirror the glory of the Lord are transformed into the same image from glory to glory."

Methodist Church

Sixty-five in Sunday School last Sunday. That's quite a decrease in attendance, but there was quite a drop in temperature also. The coldest weather we have had in Carrizozo in a long, long time. But watch us climb up again! Over a hundred attended the young people's service Sunday evening. And it was a treat in music, songs, tableaux and pageant, presented by Mrs. T. A. Spencer's Sunday School class. Lack of space here prevents giving the names of all who took part, but be assured that each one did his or her part well. And we can look forward for more special services from this class.

The Rev. S. E. Allison, Presiding Elder of the Albuquerque District, will preach in Capitan next Sunday morning, and in Carrizozo in the evening. He will hold the Second Quarterly Conference after the preaching service in the evening. Rev. Allison always has a timely message, let us give him a good audience.

The "Miracle Woman," at the Lyric Theatre Wednesday and Thursday nights, under the auspices of Carrizozo Lodge No. 30 I. O. O. F., attracted two good audiences. The picture was a splendid production. Notwithstanding the fact that other attractions over town kept many from seeing the picture, people were anxious to see it and they were not disappointed.

Delco Light

A new Delco Light Plant, which opens the way to electrical service for thousands of farms, was announced at a meeting of Delco Light men at El Paso yesterday, according to F. A. English, local dealer who attended the session.

Mr. English, whose headquarters are at Carrizozo, says that the new Delco Light is the most advanced step taken in rural electrification since the invention of the first individual power and light plant nearly 16 years ago.

The new equipment, which is manufactured by the Delco Appliance Corporation, subsidiary of General Motors, at Rochester, N. Y., in appearance is vastly different from any other plant in the field.

Mechanically, all the best features of former plants have been retained, with improvements made where tests showed them advisable, says C. C. Whistler, manager. Bearings are built extra heavy and the lubrication has been designed to keep a constant flow of oil to the moving parts.

Months of experiments in the Delco Light Appliance Laboratories in Rochester and in actual operation in the field have added many refinements to the new plant. In the laboratories, artificial weather, ranging from below zero to summer heat, has tried the performance of the new plant. Then, to be sure of satisfactory operation under the various climatic conditions, experimental plants were installed in New York, North Carolina, Louisiana, Colorado, Missouri, and Minnesota.

Nearly 375,000 Delco - Light plants have been put in service since the first one was installed nearly 16 years ago. They are in service from the frozen arctic to the seething tropics of central Africa.
