One daughter, Mrs. Dewey Pilant, resides in Roswell, and their other daughter, Mrs. Harry Lyman, who resides in Clovis, came over to meet her parents, bringing the children. The week will be spent in the form of a family reunion than one of merely a relative visit. We predict that M. U. will have the time of his life, romping with the kids and reading the funny papers to them.

HIGH SCHOOL ACCREDITED

Prof. D. U. Groce received word this week from Albuquerque to the effect that the Carrizozo High School has been accepted for membership in the North Central Association of colleges and secondary schools. To be approved by an agency as far reaching as the North Central Association, is conferring quite an honor on Carrizozo and gives the faculty a high standing in educational circles. We, therefore, take great pleasure in congratulating Prof. Groce and his able staff of teachers who have been instrumental in bringing about such satisfactory conditions. The student body of the High School should be ever mindful of this fact and it should be a strong incentive to greater efforts in the future so as to show to the people of Carrizozo as well as to others, what it means to be a member of such an institution as the North Central Association. The school is now accredited and we are proud.

Fort Stanton Notes

The climax of the merriment was reached when the lowest scorer, frantically trying to conceal his embarrassment, refused to accept the booby prize.

Jack Young, the energetic new proprietor of the Fort Tailor Shop, is running his business with much success in spite of high pressure competition offered by Roswell tailors. Although he has slashed prices to meet this competition, his work is of a very high standard.

A Water Spaniel 'Sleuth Hound' named Pat, owned by Dr. Westhafer of Fort Stanton has for some time past, baffled the people of the Fort by his almost human intelligence.

When the whistle blows, Pat lets out a long-drawn howl in an effort to imitate the whistle. The weird and uncanny part of it is, that if the whistle should fail to blow, Pat will howl at exactly the hours of 6, 7, 11:30 a. m. and 12:30 and 4:45 p. m.

On Sundays, the whistle doesn't blow, but it meters little to Pat, who howls off the time as though the whistle was performing its usual week-day functions.

Now, the people of the Fort are setting their watches to Pat's howling instead of the whistle. At one time an intruder with a wooden leg was attacked by Pat, and it took the better part of the afternoon to pick the splinters out of his mouth.

Next week there will appear in the Fort notes an article of much interest and humor.

Melvin Franks of Corona was a Carrizozo visitor Monday of this week, attending the Board of Education meeting, of which body he is Vice-Chairman.

Make the Weather What You Want It

1.—With a raging blizzard, or a scorching sun raising havoc outdoors, the indoor weather in this room is cozy, comfortable and healthful. The air conditioner provides perfect air the year round, regardless of outdoor weather's eccentricities.

2.—No longer will the tired business man be tempted to run out on his office force and flee from the hot and sultry summer days. This air conditioner, installed in his office in place of the familiar radiator is the answer.

3.—Physicians, always alert to welcome any scientific or engineering achievement that will aid them in their work of relieving human suffering, hail air conditioning as a decidedly progressive step. No longer will patients be forced to undergo the added suffering brought on by hot and sultry weather, or by the injurious dry indoor air of the colder seasons. A air conditioner is shown here installed in a hospital room, so unobtrusive and compact it takes up little space even in the cramped quarters of the room.

4.—Turn on the heat, or turn on the cold! This air conditioning unit does both, and to complete its responsibility of supplying perfect indoor weather the year round, it keeps Old Man Humidity on the run in the hot and sultry seasons.

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

ONE of the famous remarks attributed to that great American humorist, Mark Twain, which is familiar to most of his fellow-countrymen was to the effect that "Everybody talks about the weather but nobody ever does anything about it." However true that statement may have been once, it's passe now. For modern science and modern engineering have "done something about it," and now mankind can literally "make his own weather"—that is, the kind of weather he wants to have in his own home or place of business.

Of course, way back in the early history of mankind he learned how to make his habitation warm when it was too cold outside for comfort. In recent years our movie palaces have pointed the way to making their interiors comfortably cool when it's too hot outside for comfort. But up to now the average householder couldn't afford to follow the lead of the movie houses and install a "cooling system" as well as a "heating system" in his home.

So it is one of the triumphs of modern science and modern engineering that now anyone who has electricity at his command also has at his command perfect indoor weather for all climates and localities. And this is something more than regulation of heat and cold, for the new activity of science, described in the two words "air conditioning," means the correction of air to a point most desirable for personal comfort, with just the right amount of warmth or coolness, correct moisture content or relative humidity, removal of dust particles and forced circulation without draft.

Since it does include all these things, another favorite expression "It's not the heat; it's the humidity" is due to go by the boards. For it was that very thing, humidity, which started research engineers on the track that has brought about the development of air conditioning equipment which embodies the functions of heating, cooling, drying, moistening, cleansing and circulating of air. And the beauty of it is that the air conditioner, smaller than the average heat radiator, is so compactly built that it may be installed in any room, apartment, office, hospital, or place of business.

More than that the conditioners are so simple in operation and require so little supervision that two small switches on the end of the cabinet may be compared to the mythical lever which the cartoonists show the weather man operating when he wants to supply cold, heat, sultriness, dryness, rain, wind or calm. As a matter of fact the conditioner goes the weather man one better.

The conditioner can't guess wrong. It pulls in the air of a room, corrects it as it should be to provide personal comfort regardless of outdoor weather conditions, then sends it into the room so quietly occupants are unaware of the conditioner's operation. To give to indoor air that delicate touch of perfection, air conditioners should operate in rooms where the windows are kept closed so the correction of the room atmosphere isn't dissipated into the outdoors.

This factor brings up an interesting revelation of the general public's regard for fresh air. Fresh air isn't what it's cracked up to be, according to our foremost scientists. In many cases it may be more harmful than the average indoor air.

Air conditioners provide an answer to one of the major demands and quests of mankind—comfort. In giving perfect indoor weather the year round, despite changing seasons and erratic activities of temperature and humidity they open the way for industrial and financial development of the tropics and the Orient, where white men sweeter in misery under the depressing humidity, and laborers collapse from the effect of hard, manual activity coupled with heat and sultriness.

The farmer who spends every daylight hour in the summer in the sun-baked fields will have respite, and his wife, accustomed to a hard working existence among the pots, pans and cooking range in the kitchen, will blossom out a changed woman.

Business men who should wear their coats and keep their ties tied will be able to work as energetically and as smartly appearing in the summer as in winter, and their clerks and stenographers will have the alertness and desire to please that helps so much in retaining the patronage of old customers, and building up good will with new.

The answer to the brighter existence held out by Perogologists to followers of almost every activity is based on the fact that despite the hottest temperatures and most depressing humidity of the working hours a man or woman can stand them day after day if they are able to sleep soundly in real comfort and repose, instead of fitfully and uncomfortably.

When air conditioning experts talk about homes and buildings with closed windows, a chorus of public thought sings out with these interjections: "What about carbon dioxide? How about headaches brought on by closed, stuffy rooms? How about that depressing feeling that overcomes us when we don't get enough fresh air? You forget what doctors say about fresh air."

The answer is on file in the public documents of the federal government in Washington. Privately many members of the medical profession have known for some years that factors other than a lack of so-called fresh air cause headaches and nausea in crowded places. But few have had the courage to be outspoken in the face of general belief and upset the belief imbedded in the public consciousness for so many years.

It is interesting to know how philosophers and scientists of centuries ago regarded air and how their findings stack up with modern scientific developments. Aristotle, founder of a school of thought that swayed the thinking of mankind for more than 1,000 years, regarded air as one of nature's four cardinal elements, the others being fire, earth and water.

Up until 1757 little was known about air. Then, Dr. Joseph Black, who was experimenting with chemicals, made the discovery of a gas he called "fixed air," now known as carbon dioxide. In 1775, Joseph Priestley isolated oxygen, calling it "dephlogisticated air," and thus, for the first time mankind began to have some exact knowledge of atmosphere.

Lavoisier, a leading student of his period, a few years later discovered carbon dioxide would extinguish flame. He concluded, therefore, that an excess amount of carbon dioxide formed by breathing would contaminate indoor air. His standing and reputation brought ready acceptance for this theory, and it was but a natural step to the premise that fresh air, without excessive carbon dioxide and with an abundance of oxygen, was necessary for human well being.

A small number of scientists refused to concur in Lavoisier's theory but most scientists, engineers and medical men held their tongues in the belief nothing was to be gained by the voicing of contrary opinions.

Among the first public reports of these early theories is that of Dr. R. R. Sayers, surgeon of the United States public health service, and chief surgeon of the Department of Commerce's bureau of mines, a division that knows as much if not more about pure and impure air than any research organization in the world.

In reprint No. 1150 of the public reports, Doctor Sayers states: "It was observed by many investigators that it was not until the oxygen content of the respiratory air fell below 10 per cent that animals began to breathe with difficulty. Friedlander and Hexter concluded from the results of their experiments that inhaling of 20 per cent carbon dioxide for several hours has no poisonous effect. Not until a mixture of gas containing 30 per cent or more of carbon dioxide was introduced did they find an appearance of depression. Leblanc pointed out that under conditions in which the carbon dioxide content of the air increases considerably, in lecture rooms, theaters, etc., the reduction of oxygen content is small and very seldom falls below 20 per cent, while the carbon dioxide content very seldom exceeds 1 per cent."

The same facts have been established by other investigators of standing since that time. W. Mehl, an engineer, in 1903 announced definitely the nonexistence of a "breath poison." He asserted the carbon dioxide content of a room is not a correct measure for the necessity of ventilation.

The scientific findings definitely established that it is the combination of heat and humidity that is so depressing and injurious to mental and physical alertness, and the consequent damage to business and industrial efficiency brought on by personal discomfort. With these facts, engineers working on conditioning of indoor air found that it is easy to be comfortable in a room in which the customary thermometer shows a temperature of 90 degrees, if the humidity is lowered.

Leading economists, engineers and builders have hailed air conditioning as the next big industry of the nation, an industry supplying a product that will take a place along with the telephone, automatic refrigeration and the automobile in general acceptance and necessity. They point out also that air conditioning is a new achievement that replaces practically nothing now in use, aside for itself a place in popular demand, and opens the way to increased manufacturing, sales and installation activity.

A CANDLE IN THE WILDERNESS

A Tale of the Beginning of New England by IRVING BACHELLER

So this meeting of lovers came to its end. Preceded by the dignified halberdier, Peggy walked with the governor to his house...

"Still Robert is a hated aristocrat. I hope to engage your sympathy. But I dare not go to court without the help you can give me."

Soon he read to Peggy the letter which he had addressed to the magistrates, deputies and assistants of the court of the colony of Massachusetts Bay.

"Cheer up, man," said Peggy. "They cannot hang him. I am going to defend him with good evidence."

"Thanks, Amos! I wouldn't have missed hearing that. I have come to tell you that I need your help. Go to Rev. Philander Porman, who lives in Church Lane."

She gave him a generous supply of funds and hurried to the house of the young governor, who was getting ready to go to court.

with the prisoner. The court was called to order. Robert Heathers was arraigned and asked to plead. He declared that he was not guilty.

"Gentlemen, not long ago we were all impressed by the eloquent words of our governor when he spoke of the peril of haste in seeking justice, when he told how our fathers had been wronged by hasty judgments inspired by bitter feeling and carried out with an imperfect knowledge of the truth."

She read the letter: "To the magistrates, assistants and deputies of the General court, Gentlemen: I had not thought that it would ever be necessary for me to address you as I now do."

Peggy sat down. Her plea for time was granted. There was a great stir in the crowd as the people began to leave their seats.

CHAPTER XIV

William Returns From the War and Is Praised for Heroic Conduct

The Pequot Indians had fallen on the English settlers in Connecticut and slain men and women as they worked in the fields. John Tilly had been ambushed and slain on the fresh water river.

The battles at their well-built fort on Mystic river, in the swamp and at the last stronghold of the tribe on a hilltop above the Pequot river, were a stern lesson to the wild men of the forest.

they came like the tumbling river in the west. Of the heroic conduct of William Heydon one may read in Mason's own account of the campaign, how he cut the bowstring of a savage aiming at his commander from a point so close that the arrow would no doubt have done serious damage.

The victorious company returned to Boston three days after Peggy Weld had changed the plans of the general court. In his report to the governor Captain Mason declared that his life had been saved by William Heydon who "from the beginning to the end of the campaign had behaved in the fashion of a hero."

It is only known that the young men spent an hour together in the room where Peggy had sat with Robert. Dusk was falling and the beacons were aglow when William came away and walked to his home.

The next morning the sun shone warm and bluebirds were streaking the air with color and with their dulcet phrases. It was the Sabbath day. At nine Margaret heard William stirring and began to get his soap and meat ready.

He came into the house and ate his soap and meat and drank a glass of wine. When he arose from the table

What She Said Is in the Records of the Court.

he said: "Margaret, make haste and put away the dishes. We will go to the church together."

She turned to him with a look of surprise, saying: "Oh, sir, I am only a poor, homely working woman who spends her time teasing wool by the fireside. You would put the sin of pride in me?"

"Margaret, I shall be proud to walk with you in the heavenly road and to kneel at your side before the people. And I would ever pray for the strength that is in you."

The church laic at that hour was crowded with rich and poor on their way to the house of God. Many seized the hand of the new-come hero and spoke words of praise unwelcome to his ear.

A certain well-known local hypochondriac has a new fear—that is get tired of hearing. His doctor assures him it isn't so, but he worries constantly about the possibility of becoming deaf.

His complex took the form of announcing to his office mates that he was going to buy some sort of an earphone, to see if that aided him. Consequently his colleagues were ready for him when he appeared with it next day, and whispered every word they addressed to him or to anyone in his presence.

Now he's telling his doctor that the good man doesn't know what he's talking about. Mean? Maybe—but have you ever lived with a hypo-chondriac?—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

(By Rev. P. R. FITZWATER, D. D., Member of Faculty, Moody Bible Institute of Chicago, (6, 1832, Western Newspaper Union.)

Lesson for April 10 HOW SIN BEGINS

LESSON TEXT—Genesis 2:15-17; 3:1-8. GOLDEN TEXT—Watch and pray, lest ye enter into temptation; the spirit indeed is willing, but the flesh is weak.

PRIMARY TOPIC—The Garden God Planted. JUNIOR TOPIC—How Sin Started. INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—How to Overcome Temptation. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Our Responsibility for Our Sins.

A look out upon the world proves that man is not what he should be. It is not reasonable to suppose that man is now what he was when he came from the hands of the Creator, much less an improvement. The only way of accounting for this is by the historic fall of man as given in the Bible.

1. Man's Probation (Gen. 2:15-17). The place (v. 15). It was in the beautiful Garden of Eden, Man's environment was suited to his nature.

2. The necessity (v. 16). This grew out of man's constitution. Adam was created with the possibility of character, but not with character. Alternative choice makes character possible. Freewill was what made Adam a real man.

3. The means (v. 17). It was most simple, just one prohibition. The tree of the knowledge of good and evil was forbidden. Alongside of this small restriction was placed a large privilege—the tree of life.

11. Man's Temptation (3:1-8). 1. The method (vv. 1-5). Satan, a personal, malicious being, appeared in the guise of a serpent. Notwithstanding the growing unpopularity of the doctrine, the fact remains that there is a personal devil. This is proven both by the Scriptures and experience. He did not appeal directly to the man. He chose to appeal to the woman through the serpent, and through the woman to the man.

a. He found the woman while alone. b. He insinuated doubt into Eve's mind as to God's word and love. This is his method today. He tries to get people to doubt God's Word and then to doubt his goodness. He persuaded Eve that God was withholding from her something that was good. He today induces men to say that God is cruel, harsh, and unjust. He gets young people to think that father and mother are too exacting. As soon as one doubts God's word, he begins to criticize it and to disobey it.

c. To get Eve to doubt the penalty of sin. There is much flippant jesting about eternal punishment. He is remembered, however, that this does not change its reality.

d. He appealed to innocent appetite. He argued that there would be no harm in eating, but great advantage.

e. Eve gazed upon that which God had forbidden and lusted after it. 2. The fall (vv. 6-8). The steps in the fall seem to have been rapid. From doubting God's love, Eve went to doubting his word. From gazing upon and lusting after that which God had prohibited, there was but a short step to indulgence. Eve not only disobeyed, but involved Adam in her sin.

111. Man's Judgment (vv. 9-24). God's holy nature is such that when men sin he at once manifests himself. God called Adam and Eve to account the same day.

1. A disturbed relationship with God (v. 9). The introduction of sin marred man's familiar intercourse with the Almighty. Adam and Eve not only hid from God's presence, but when summoned by him began to make excuse and Adam even laid the blame on God.

2. The degradation of the serpent (v. 14). He henceforth became the type of sin and Satan (Num. 21:9; John 3:14; Rev. 12:9).

3. The undying enmity between the seed of the woman and the seed of the serpent (v. 15). This bitter enmity has continued from that day to this.

4. The ultimate victory of the woman's seed (v. 15). Satan's seed has harassed the woman's seed through the centuries, but on the cross the final stroke was made which crushed his head (John 12:31; Heb. 2:14; I John 3:8). This is the first gleam of the glorious gospel of Christ.

5. The judgment upon the woman (v. 16). This relates primarily to her as a wife and mother.

6. Man's new relationship to the earth (vv. 17-19). The earth was cursed on his account.

7. Death (v. 19). This includes spiritual and physical death.

8. Expulsion from the garden (v. 24). When man's nature was changed by sin, out from the beautiful garden he must go.
